

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2011 with funding from University of Toronto

THE
A T H E N Æ U M

JOURNAL

OF

LITERATURE, SCIENCE, THE FINE ARTS, MUSIC, AND THE DRAMA.

JANUARY TO JUNE,

1909.

99317
3/11/09

LONDON:

PRINTED BY JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, ATHENÆUM PRESS, BREAM'S BUILDINGS, CHANCERY LANE.

PUBLISHED AT THE OFFICE, BREAM'S BUILDINGS, CHANCERY LANE, E.C.,

BY JOHN C. FRANCIS AND J. EDWARD FRANCIS.

SOLD BY ALL BOOKSELLERS AND NEWSMEN IN TOWN AND COUNTRY.

AGENTS FOR SCOTLAND, MESSRS. BELL AND BRADFUTE AND MR. JOHN MENZIES, EDINBURGH.

MDCCCXCIX.

INDEX OF CONTENTS.

JANUARY TO JUNE, 1909.

[Besides the usual author-entries, works of fiction are indexed under the first word of the title (A, An, and The excepted); other works, and Societies and Institutions, are entered under their principal subject; titles are sometimes abbreviated to economize space.]

- Abbey Theatre, Dublin: Molière's 'L'Avare,' 176; Mr. Norreys Connell director—'The Glittering Gate,' by Lord Dunsany, 570
 A'Beckett (Arthur W.), journalist, death, 105
 Abruzzi (Duke of the), Ruwenzori, 749
 Académie des Beaux-Arts: M. Waltner elected, 50; M. R. Collin elected, 298; M. Laloux elected, 594; award of Rossini Prize, 739
 Académie des Inscriptions: foreign correspondents and French members elected, 17; M. T. Reinach elected, 234; award of prizes, 562, 588, 648
 Académie Française: election of MM. Raymond Poincaré and Eugène Brioux, 378; of MM. Jean Aicard and René Doumic, 442; award of prizes, 562, 620, 731; election of M. Marcel Prévost, 675
 Active Service Pocket-Book, by Stewart, 128
 Actor's Story, by Bransby Williams, 569
 Actress's Husband, by Gertrude Warden, 341
 Adam (H. L.), Oriental Crime, 315
 Adamson (R.), Development of Greek Philosophy, 311
 Addison (Julia De Wolf), Arts and Crafts in Middle Ages, 21
 Adeney (W. F.), Greek and Eastern Churches, 343
 Adler (Elkan N.), Auto de Fé and Jew, 191
 Admirable Bashville, by G. B. Shaw, 143
 Admiral Guinea, by Henley and Stevenson, 710
 Adventure in Exile, by Richard Duffy, 436
 Adventures in Contentment, by D. Grayson, 616
 Adventures in London, by James Douglas, 672
 Adventures of Louis Blake, by L. Becke, 193
 Æschylus in English Verse, by Way, Part III., 9
 Afghanistan, Around, by Major de Lacoste, 700
 Aflalo (F. G.), Sunset Playgrounds, 495
 Africa: Game Animals of, by Lydekker, 47; S.P.C.K. linguistic publications, 407
 Africa, East: Native Life in, by Weule, 620; Eighteen Years in, by Bp. Tucker, 728
 Africa, South: Royal Dublin Fusiliers in South African War, by Romer and Mainwaring, 128; History of S. A. since 1795, by Theal, Vol. I., 195; cost of official History of War, 291
 Africa, West: We Two in, by Moore and Guggisberg, 614
 African Highways, by Caroline Kirkland, 405
 African Journey, by Winston S. Churchill, 99
 After the Pardon, by Matilde Serao, 221
 Agar (Thomas L.), Homerica: the Odyssey, 643
 Age, Growth, and Death, Problem of, by Minot, 169
 Ainus, Hairy, of Japan, 202
 Aitken (Robert), Beyond the Skyline, 223
 Alaska, Two Dianas in, by Agnes Herbert, 404
 Albanesi (E. Maria), Envious Eliza, 615
 Albeniz (Isaac), composer, death, 655
 Albert Hall Choral Society, Bach's Mass in B minor, 419
 Aldington (May), Meg of the Salt-Pans, 670
 Aldrich (T. Bailey), Life by Ferris Greenslet, 95
 Algebra, Elementary, by French and Osborn, 78
 Algésiras, Conférence d', by Mévil, 642
 Allan (Maud), dancing with music, 234
 Allcroft (A. Hadrian), Earthwork of England, 763
 Allegheny Observatory Publications, 21, 444, 561
 Allen (George) & Sons, removal, 759
 Allen (J. W.), Wheel Magic, 614
 Allen (P. S.), Selections from Erasmus, 10
 Allinson (A.), Anatole France's Well of St. Clare, 434
 Alpines and Bog-Plants, by R. Farrer, 532
 Alps: My Climbs in the A. and Caucasus, by Mummery, 225
 Alternative, The, by A. F. Slade, 461
 Amadeo, Pavian sculptor, works by, 654
 American, South, Sketches, by Hudson, 406
 American Farmer, Letters from, by Crèvecoeur, 316
 Amour guette, 38
 Ancient Tales and Folk-lore of Japan, by R. G. Smith, 698
 Angelus, by Dr. Naylor, at Covent Garden, 142
 Angier (A. Gorton), Far East Revisited, 39
 Anglais, Les, au Combat, by Zurlinden, 41
 Anglo-Italian Literary Society, 319
 Animals, Game, of Africa, by Lydekker, 47
 Annals of Archaeology and Anthropology, Vol. I., 735
 Anne (Queen) and her Court, by P. F. W. Ryan, 247
 Annual Register, 699
 Anson (A.) on eclipse of the sun, A.D. 364, 677
 Antarctic Expedition, 1901-4: Meteorology, Part I.—Album of Photographs, 500
 Anthropological Institute: Annual Meeting, Prof. Ridgeway on the Relation of Anthropology to Classical Studies, 203; Rev. J. W. Hayes on Dencholes, 232; Dr. Seligmann on the Veddas, 351; Mr. W. MacClintock on Blackfoot Indians, 533; Mr. A. L. Lewis on Stone Circles in Ireland, 590; Dr. Hildburgh on Tibetan and Burmese amulets, 651
 Anthropological Notes, 78, 135, 259, 350, 444, 533, 621, 676
 Anthropologic, articles in, 441
 Antiquaries, Society of: election of Fellows—Mr. Trice Martin on Excavations at Caerwent—Dr. P. Norman and Mr. E. A. Mann on Grey Friars' Water Supply, 136; Mr. E. N. Baynes on Barrows at Ty'n-y-pwll—Mr. C. F. Hardy on Music in Painted Glass, 172; Mr. Miller-Christy on a brazen knocker—Mr. Reginald Smith on Gallo-Roman redware, 260; elections—Mr. Carlyon-Britton on penny of St. Æthelberht, 380; Mr. C. R. Peers on Basing House, 412; Annual Meeting, 533; Mr. St. John Hope on Topography of Ludlow, 590; Mr. P. Norman on the London Steelyard, 650
 Antiquaries of Scotland, Society of, 326
 Antonello da Messina, date of birth and death, 266
 Apollonius of Tyana, by F. W. G. Campbell, 701
 Apostate, by B. A. Lloyd Maunsell, 436
 Appleton (G. Webb), novelist, death, 731
 Applin (Arthur), Children of the Gutter, 615
 Aquatints at Walker Gallery, 140
 Arabic autograph at Lincoln's Inn, 198
 Araminta, by J. C. Snaith, 312
 Archaeological Budget of Rome, 1908, 141, 324, 385
 Archaeological Notes, 593, 735
 Archaeology: Folk-Memory, by W. Johnson, 126
 Archaeology, Biblical, Society of: Mr. F. Legge on Carved Slates, 622; Prof. Sayce on Discoveries in Ethiopia, 705
 Archdeacon's Family, by Maud E. King, 284
 Arctic Ice, Conquering the, by Mikkelsen, 320
 Ardagh (Sir John), Life by his Wife, 693
 Aristophanes: Frogs, tr. Gilbert Murray, 10; at Oxford, 267
 Aristotelian Society: Dr. Goldsbrough on Implications of Recognition, 79; Symposium on Experts and Democracy, 203; Dr. Schiller on Rationalistic Conception of Truth, 293; Dr. Foston on Mutual Symbolism of Intelligence and Activity, 469; Mr. G. R. T. Ross on Satisfaction of Thinking, 591; Dr. A. Wolf on Natural Realism, 705
 Armstrong (R. B.), Musical Instruments, English and Irish, 23
 Arnold (Felix), Textbook of School and Class Management, 68
 Arnold-Forster (H. O.), Military Needs, 337; death, 349
 Aronson (V. R.), Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, 253
 Arretine Pottery, Loeb Collection, by Chase, 415
 Art: British, in Venice, 110; The Year's, by Carter, 140; Modern, by Meier-Graefe, 204
 Art Club, New English, exhibition, 652
 Arte, critical articles in, 384
 Arte, Rivista d', articles in, 681
 Arteaga y Pereira (F. de), Nine Spanish Poems, 226
 Artemision: Idylls and Songs, by Hewlett, 670
 Artful Miss Dearing, by Arthur Law, 475
 Arthur (Frederick), Rosemary, 671
 Arthur (King), Lost Land of, by Walters, 613
 Arthur (Lec), Eunice, 681
 Artistes Français, Salon des, prizes, 654
 Artist's Garden, by Anna L. Merritt, 231
 Artists: English, from Vandyck to Turner, by Davies and Hunt—Flemish and Dutch, by V. Reynolds, 382
 Artists, British, Royal Society of: elections, 354; exhibition, 417
 Artists, New Association of, exhibition, 173
 Artists, Women, Society of, 54th Exhibition, 173
 Art Prices Current, 1907-8, 652
 Art sales, 206, 234, 266, 298, 325, 354, 384, 418, 473, 536, 567, 594, 625, 654, 681, 709, 737, 765
 Arts and Crafts in Middle Ages, by J. Addison, 21
 Arts and Crafts Society of Ireland, lectures, 298
 Art Schools of London, exhibition, 323
 Arts Club, United, exhibitions, 109, 654
 Art Treasures of London: Painting, by Stokes, 322, 416
 Arundel Club Publications, 138
 Aschehoug (T. H.), Norwegian jurist, death, 134
 Ashbee (C. R.), Conradin, 286
 Asia Minor, Mithraic Statuette from, 736
 As It Happened, by Ashton Hilliers, 697
 Askew (Alice and Claude), Felix Stone, 461
 Asquith (Right Hon. H. H.), by Frank Elias, 437
 Assistant Masters in Secondary Schools: annual meeting, 74, 101; Cambridge meeting, 673
 Assommoir, M. Guity in, 767
 Assyria, Religion of, by Rogers, 402
 Astrographic Congress at Paris, 502
 Astronomical Notes, 21, 47, 79, 108, 137, 204, 232, 262, 294, 321, 351, 381, 413, 444, 470, 534, 564, 591, 622, 652, 678, 706, 734, 763
 Astronomical Society: 20, 107; Gold Medal awarded to Dr. Backlund, 172; 468, 650
 Astronomical Society of the Pacific, Bruce Gold Medal awarded, 470
 Astronomie, Société Belge d', Annuaire, 232
 Astronomique, Annuaire, 1909, 204
 Astronomische Nachrichten, 21, 47, 79, 204, 232, 352, 413, 444, 470, 734
 Astronomische Rundschau, cessation, 382
 Astronomy: Treatise on Spherical, by Sir R. Ball, 443; Judgment of Paris Astronomically Considered, by Plunket, 589
 Astrophysics, Chair of, founded at Cambridge, 294; first Professor, 734
 Athens: British School at, 173, 265, 445; latitude of Observatory, 763
 Atkinson (C. T.), Germany, 1715-1815, 35
 Atkinson (R. H. M. B.), Brougham and his Early Friends, Vol. III., 288
 At Large, by A. C. Benson, 99
 Atlay (J. B.), Lord Haliburton, 128
 Aurangzeb, bicentenary celebration, 106
 Austen (Jane), Emma—Northanger Abbey—Persuasion—Mansfield Park, 162
 Austin (Stanley), History of Engraving, 623
 Australia, Commonwealth of, by B. R. Wise, 614
 Authors, Britain's Great, by A. Waugh, 140
 Authors' and Printers' Dictionary, by Collins, 559
 Auto de Fé and Jew, by E. N. Adler, 194
 Auvergne (Edmund B. d'), Lola Montez, 672
 Axon (W. E. A.) on Boswell's 'Dorando,' 407
 Ayscough (John), Dromina, 555
 Babylonia, Religion of, by Rogers, 402
 Bach (J. S.), Mass in B minor, 419
 Bach Choir concert, 299
 Bache (F. Edward), composer, anecdote, 144
 Bachoué (A. de Lostalot de), writer on art, death, 326
 Baddeley (St. Clair): on Grove of Furrina, 385; on Roman walls of Gloucester, 737
 Baddeley's Guide to Scotland, Part I., 405, 499
 Bagot (Josceline), G. Canning and his Friends, 310
 Bagwell (R.), Ireland under the Stuarts, 457
 Bain (R. Nisbet), Slavonic scholar, death, 588
 Baker (James) on Stokeleigh Camp, 381
 Balduccio Alboneto (Giovanni di), new facts, 326
 Balkans, British Officer in, by Henderson, 161
 Ball (Oona H.), Their Oxford Year, 697
 Ball (Sir R.), Treatise on Spherical Astronomy, 443
 Ball (Wilfrid), exhibition, 233
 Ballard, dramatic, colloquialism in, 100
 Balthasar, by Anatole France, 434
 Baluchistan, Frontiers of, by Tate, 694
 Balzac, Le Médecin de Campagne, ed. Payen-Payne, 71
 Balze (Raymond), artist, death, 298
 Bancrofts: Recollections of Sixty Years, 655
 Banks (Eliz.), Mystery of Frances Farrington, 612
 Bapst (Germain), Le Maréchal Canrobert, 287
 Baptist Historical Society Transactions, Part I., 72; Part II., 615
 Barbary Sheep, by R. Hichens, 641
 Barbizon School, exhibitions, 707
 Baretti (Giuseppe), by Lacy Collison-Morley, 725
 Barfus (Eginhard von), author, death, 291
 Bargain, The, by T. Wilson Wilson, 641
 Baring (Maurice), Russian Essays and Stories, 315; Proserpine, 387
 Baring-Gould (S.), Cornish Characters, 701
 Barker (Ethel Ross), Buried Herculaneum, 108
 Barlow (James W.), Immortals' Great Quest, 372
 Barnes (W.), Select Poems in Dorset Dialect, 755
 Barnett (Canon and Mrs.), Towards Social Reform, 372
 Barnett (John), Geoffrey Cheriton, 461
 Baronet's Wife, by Florence Warden, 96
 Barr (Robert), Stranleigh's Millions, 250
 Barrie (J. M.), honorary degree, 229
 Barrington (Rutland), by himself, 84, 144
 Barth (Theodor), political writer, death, 703
 Bartholomew (J. G.), honorary degree from Edinburgh University, 229
 Bartholomew-the-Great, by G. Worley, 21
 Baschet (Ludovic), publisher, death, 759
 Bashford (H. H.), The Pilgrims' March, 313

Bashford (John L.), journalist, death, 17
 Bassinoire, La, by Gyp, 223
 Bastille, Russian, by Youvatshév, 672
 Bate (Frank), Declaration of Indulgence, 554, 588
 Batson (Mrs. Stephen), The Gay Paradises, 752
 Baudrillart (A.), Catholic Church, tr. Gibbs, 251
 Baxter prints at New Dudley Gallery, 140
 Beale (Sophia), Recollections of Spinster Aunt, 281
 Bean (W. J.), Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew, 230
 Beardsley (Aubrey), by R. Ross, 470
 Beaumont (Francis), Plays, Vol. VI., ed. Waller, 84
 Beauregard (Marquis Costa de), author, death, 229
 Beaux-Arts, École des, award of medals, 110
 Beaux-Arts, Société Nationale: Mr. Shannon and Mr. W. Crane elected, 709; prizes awarded, 738
 Becke (L.), The Adventures of Louis Blake, 193
 Becker (F.), Lexikon der bildenden Künstler, Vol. II., 652
 Beecham (T.), concerts, 266, 354, 506, 709
 Beeching (Canon), William Shakespeare, 143, 176
 Beethoven, play by René Fauchois, 476
 Belcher (G.), drawings, 383
 Belcher (John), elected R.A., 142
 Belcikowski (Adam), contributor to Athenæum, death, 106
 Belge, Société, d'Astronomie, Annuaire, 232
 Bell (J. J.), Oh! Christina, 528
 Bell (Warren), Jim Mortimer, 38
 Bellini (Giovanni), Madonna recovered, 537
 Bellini (Vincenzo): by W. A. C. Lloyd, 299; La Sonnambula, 682
 Belloc (Hilaire): The Eye-Witness, 225; A Change in the Cabinet, 751
 Bendall (Gerard), The Old Home, 581
 Benecke (Amy M.), Cannes and Surroundings, 613
 Benedict (Clare), A Resemblance, 727
 Bennett (Newton) on picture-making, 446
 Benians (A. E.), True Travels of Capt. J. Smith, 70
 Bennett (Arnold), What the Public Wants, 683
 Benson (Arthur C.): At Large, 99; Poems, 285
 Bergstrom (H.), The Head of the Firm, 327
 Berlin, Kaiser Friedrich Museum at, 473
 Berliner Astronomisches Jahrbuch, 1911, 706
 Bernard (St.), On Consideration, tr. Lewis, 343
 Bernstein (Henry), Samson, 207
 Berry (H. F.), Statutes of Parliament of Ireland, 374
 Bertaut (Jules), Littérature féminine d'aujourd'hui, 438
 Bertaux (Madame Léon), sculptor, death, 536
 Berthon, Tables synoptiques de l'ancien Français, 226
 Berton (Paul Émile), landscape painter, death, 266
 Besier (Rudolf), Olive Latimer's Husband, 111
 Besnus (Amédée), landscape painter, death, 82
 Betonung der lateinisch-romanischen Wörter im Neuenenglischen, by Metzger, 373
 Between the Twilights, by Cornelia Sorabji, 120
 Beveridge (W. H.), Unemployment, 224
 Beverley (J. E.), Gogo Hymn-Book, 407
 Bevis, by H. H. Davies, 447
 Beyond the Skyline, by Robert Aitken, 223
 Bible: Die Gotische Bibel, ed. Streitberg, 72; Notes on Vulgate Gospels, by Dom Chapman, 123, 227; Gospel in Old Testament, by Coping and Moule, 139; Practical Wisdom, by Strachey, 196; Commentary on, ed. Dummelow, 250; Johannine Writings, by Schmiedel—Gospel of St. John, ed. Westcott, 251; Hebrew Prophets for English Readers, Vol. I., 252; Dictionary of, ed. Hastings, 341; Spirit in the New Testament, by Winstanley—Targum to the Song of Songs, tr. Gollancz, 342; St. Mark's Gospel in Luganda, 407; A.V. 1611, ed. Aldis Wright, 437, 467; Verbum Sempiternum, 586; Introduction to Hebrew B., by Geden, 723; Exploration of Egypt and the Old Testament, by Duncan, 753; Prof. Kennett on Isaiah, 761
 Bibliography: Chaucer, by Hammond, 556; Tennyson, Vol. II.—Gypsy, by Black—Index to 'Book-Prices Current,' 1897–1906, by Jaggard, 557; Notes from Sotheby's, by Karslake, 580
 Bibliotheca Lindesiana, proclamations in, 441
 Bibliothèque Nationale, catalogue, 562
 Bicknell (A. S.) on Turner portrait, 81
 Bigg-Wither (R. F.), Materials for History of Wither Family, 223
 Binyon (Laurence), London Visions, 285
 Biography, Modern English, by Boase, Vol. IV., 315
 Bird Book, Sportsman's British, by Lydekker, 676, 706
 Bird-Hunting through Wild Europe, by Lodge, 167
 Birdland, Behind the Veil in, by O. G. Pike, 649
 Birds: of Tierra del Fuego, by Crawshaw, 201; World's B., by Finn, 201; of the Plains, by Dewar, 202; of British Islands, by Stonham, Parts IX. and X., 202; My Life among Wild B. in Spain, by Col. Verner, 467; of Great Britain and Ireland, by Butler, Vol. II., 532
 Birrell (Augustine), Selected Essays, 558
 Bishop (Henry), The Colour of Tangier, 593
 Bishop and the Bogie-Man, by J. C. Harris, 403

Bishop in the Rough, ed. Wallace Duthle, 728
 Blackwood (Algernon), Jimbo, 284
 Blackwood (John), Reminiscences, 169, 204
 Blakeney (E. H.) on amateur printing, 529
 Bleackley (Horace), Ladies Fair and Frail, 369
 Bleeding Heart, poem by R. A. Nicholson, 163
 Blennerhassett (Sir Rowland), death, 378
 Bliss (W. H.), death at Rome, 346
 Bloundelle-Burton (J.), Within Four Walls, 404
 Blow (Dr. John), date of birth, 386
 Blue Lagoon, by H. de Vere Stacpoole, 558
 Blyth (James), The Member for Easterby, 461
 Boase (F.), Modern English Biography, Vol. IV., 315
 Bodkin (M. McD.), Capture of Paul Beck, 127
 Body at Work, by Alex. Hill, 169
 Boer War. See Africa, South.
 Bog-Plants and Alpines, by R. Farrer, 532
 Bolland (W. C.) on Arabic autograph at Lincoln's Inn, 198
 Bond (Francis), Fonts and Font Covers, 352
 Book-Prices Current, Index 1897–1906, by Jaggard, 557
 Books: English Catalogue, 1908, 316; printed in 15th Century in British Museum, Catalogue, Part I., 400; "remaindering," 702; Care of, by J. W. Clark, 755
 Books, royal, and effect on publishing season, 43
 Book sales, 227, 258
 Book Sales of 1908, by J. H. Slater, 14, 41, 105
 Booksellers, Antiquarian, International Association, Annual Meeting, 200
 Booksellers, Associated, Mr. Heinemann on six-shilling novels, 759
 Booksellers' Provident Institution, 46, 166, 258; Annual Report, 349; 378, 531, 648
 Book-titles appropriated, 347, 407, 586
 Borrow (G.): Man and his Work, by Walling, 254
 Bosanquet (Mrs. H.), Poor Law Report, 286
 Boswell (James): Letters to Rev. W. J. Temple, 191; Dorando, 376, 407, 529
 Botany, Cryptogamic, Chair at Manchester University, 172
 Botany, Fossil, Studies in, by Scott, Vol. II., 760
 Bourgeois (Eugène), decorative artist, death, 709
 Bourne (H. R. Fox), journalist, death, 166, 197
 Bournon (Fernand), historian of Paris, death, 46
 Bovill (W. B. F.), Hungary and Hungarians, 584
 Box, Holly, and Yew, by Dallimore, 411
 Boze (Honoré), Marseilles artist, death, 82
 Brabant (F. G.), Rambles in Sussex, 696
 Brackenbury (Sir H.), Memories of my Spare Time, 644
 Braddon (M. E.), Our Adversary, 555
 Bradley (A. C.), Oxford Lectures on Poetry, 721
 Brahms, monument to, at Hamburg, 655
 Brassey (T. A.), Naval Annual, 615
 Brauns (R.), Mineral Kingdom, Part I., 533
 Bray (Olive), Elder or Poetic Edda, Part I., 434
 Breasted (Jas. Henry): History of Ancient Egyptians—Temples of Nubia—Monuments of Sudanese Nubia, 97
 Bredon (Juliet), Sir Robert Hart, 701
 Bretons at Home, by Frances M. Gostling, 755
 Brett (G. S.): Representative English Poems, 70; Philosophy of Gassendi, 344
 Brickdale (E. F.), Browning's Pippa Passes, 140
 Bridge (R. T.), Select Epigrams of Martial, 9
 Bridges (Robert), Memoir of R. W. Dixon, 670
 Brighton Musical Festival, 110
 Britain, Scandinavian, by Collingwood, 373
 Britain's Great Authors, by A. Waugh, 140
 British Academy: Milton Tercentenary papers, 18; Prof. Macdonell on Evolution of Indian Architecture, 171; Rev. R. B. Rackham on the Nave of Westminster, 380; Prof. Ridgeway on Minoan and the Minoan Culture of Cnossus, 677; Prof. Kennett on Isaiah, 761
 British art in Venice, 110
 British Bird Book, Sportsman's, by Lydekker, 676, 706
 British Islands, Birds of, by Stonham, Parts IX. and X., 202
 British Museum: admission to Reading-Room, 132, 197, 226, 256; Catalogue of Books printed in 15th Century, Part I., 400; Guide to Egyptian Galleries (Sculpture), 752
 British Officer in the Balkans, by Henderson, 161
 British School at Athens: Excavation at Sparta, 173; Mr. Wace on Excavations at Zerelia—Mr. Woodward on the God Lycurgus, 265; Messrs. Droop and Thompson on Temple of Artemis Orthia, 445
 British School at Rome: Mr. H. S. Jones on Miscellanea Capitolina, 264; Dr. Ashby on Villa of the Quintilii, 265; Dr. D. Mackenzie on Nuraghi in Sardinia, 383; Dr. Ashby on Pre-historic Antiquities of Malta, 503
 Broad Road, by Annie S. Swan, 436
 Broadwood Concerts, 111, 234, 473
 Brockwell (M. W.): on Janssen's portrait of Milton, 81; National Gallery, Parts I.–VI., 322; Vol. I., 652
 Brogan (J. C.), Memoirs of Comte de Rambuteau, 129

Broken Snare, by Ludwig Lewisohn, 371
 Brontë (Charlotte) in London, 132
 Brooke (Emma), Story of Hauksgarth Farm, 525
 Brooke (Henry), The Fool of Quality, 226
 Brookfield (Frances M.), A Friar Observant, 311
 Brothers All, by Maarten Maartens, 435
 Brougham and his Early Friends, Vol. III., 288
 Brown (Alice), The Story of Thyra, 581
 Brown (Arnesby), landscapes, 536
 Brown (J. T. T.) on Boswell's 'Dorando,' 376
 Brown (Vincent), Magnificat, 371
 Brown (W. Beattie), landscape artist, death, 446
 Brown (Wm. Haig) of Charterhouse, 66
 Browne's Religio Medici, Gui Patin on, 347
 Browning (R.): Pippa Passes, illus. Brickdale, 140; at Fortune Playhouse, 143; Men and Women, Vol. II., 226
 Brückner (A.), Literary History of Russia, 66
 Bruggencate (K. ten), Engelsch Woordenboek, 439
 Brunner (Charles), new Paris gallery, 654
 Brussels Quartet concert, 83
 Bruton (F. A.), Natural History of Selborne, 70
 Buchan (John), Some Eighteenth-Century Byways, 217
 Buckingham, Victoria History, Vol. II., 339
 Buckrose (J. E.), A Little Green World, 728
 Buddhist Essays, by P. Dahlke, 408
 Budge (E. A. Wallis): Book of the Kings of Egypt, 97; Guide to Egyptian Collections in British Museum—Account of Sarcophagus of Seti I., 98
 Builder, illustrations of cathedrals in, 22
 Bulletin des Musées de France revived, 738
 Bulloch (J. M.), The Gay Gordons, 526
 Bullock (A. E.), Sculptural Works of N. Stone, 382
 Bülow (Frieda, Baroness von), author, death, 378
 Bumpus (John S.), History of English Cathedral Music, 206
 Burdett's Hospitals and Charities, 645
 Burgin (G. B.), The Trickster, 555
 Burke (A. M.), Key to Ancient Parish Registers 131
 Burke's Peerage, 72
 Burlington Club, early English portraits at, 471
 Burlington Magazine, 22, 141, 266, 418, 536, 651, 765
 Burmester (Frances G.), Davina, 641
 Burnand (Sir F. C.), Catholic Who's Who, 131
 Burne-Jones, 'Love's Wayfaring' presented to Victoria and Albert Museum, 765
 Bury (J. B.), The Ancient Greek Historians, 430
 Busoni (Signor), recital, 568
 Bussy (Simon), pastel exhibition, 296
 Butler (Arthur G.), Birds of Great Britain, Vol. II., 532
 Butler (Arthur Gray), hero of "Butler's Leap," death, 105
 Butler (H. E.), Post-Augustan Poetry, 462
 Buxton (C. Roden), Turkey in Revolution, 436
 Byng-Hall (C.), Woman and the Car, 406
 Byron Crumbs: The Irish Avatar, 756
 Caesar on the Gallic War, tr. Rice Holmes, 643
 Caillavet (Arman de), Love Watches, 595
 Cain (Georges), Walks in Paris, 583
 Caldecott (W. Shaw), Second Temple in Jerusalem, 706
 Callwell (C. E.), Tactics of Home Defence, 128
 Calvé (Mlle. Emma), concert, 739
 Cambridge: Chair of Astrophysics founded, 291; loans to Fitzwilliam Museum, 594
 Cambridge County Geographies: Suffolk—Norfolk, by Dutt, 676
 Cambridge Modern History, Vol. XI., 367
 Cambridge Notes, 374, 757
 Cambridge Observations, 21
 Cambridge University Library Bulletins, 220
 Campbell (Arthur), The Combat, 221
 Campbell (F. W. Groves), Apollonius of Tyana, 701
 Campbell (Mrs. Vere), Render unto Caesar, 526
 Camp-Fires on Desert and Lava, by Hornaday, 585
 Canada: Sir J. A. Macdonald, 524; Historical Publications relating to, by Wrong and Langton, 528
 Cannan (Gilbert), Peter Homunculus, 612
 Cannes and its Surroundings, by Benecke, 613
 Canney (M. A.), Schmiedel's Johannine Writings, 251
 Canning (G.) and his Friends, ed. Bagot, 310
 Canrobert (Maréchal), by Germain Bapst, 287
 Canterbury and York Society, 531
 Canyon Voyage, by F. S. Dellenbaugh, 614
 Cape of Good Hope, Astronomer's Report, 351
 Capes (Bernard): The Voice, poem, 13; Love Story of St. Bel, 493
 Capt. Vanion's Business, by Walter Dalby, 281
 Capture of Paul Beck, by M. McD. Bodkin, 127
 Caran d'Ache (Enmanuel Poiré), caricaturist, death, 297
 Carlyle (T.), Love Letters to Jane Welsh, 553
 Carneri (B. von), philosopher, death, 652
 Carpenter (Edward), Sketches from Life, 129
 Carreño (Madame Teresa), pianoforte recital, 207
 Carrick (J. C.), Wycliffe and the Lollards, 315
 Carter (A. C. R.), The Year's Art, 140
 Carton (R. C.), Mr. Preedy and the Countess, 506

Castle of Dreams, by Netta Syrett, 433
 Catholic Church, by Baudrillard, tr. Gibbs, 251
 Catholic Who's Who, ed. Burnand, 131
 Catling (T.), The Press Album, 496
 Catullus, Carmina, ed. Stuttford, 462
 Caucasus, My Climbs in the Alps and, by Mummery, 225
 Cavalcaselle (G. B.), History of Painting in Italy, Vol. III., 262, 291
 Cavalleria Rusticana, by Monleone, 595
 Caverne, by Ray Nyst, 581
 Cayley (G. J.), Bridle Roads of Spain, 405
 Cell as Unit of Life, by Macfadyen, 170
 Ceramano (M.), painter, death, 536
 Ceylon, In Old, by Reginald Farrer, 491
 Chabrilan (Comtesse de), "la Mogador," death, 258
 Challaye (Félicien), Le Congo français, 754
 Challenger Society, 203, 564
 Chambers (R. W.), The Firing Line, 403
 Chancellor (E. Beresford): The Private Palaces of London, 494; Wanderings in Piccadilly, 495
 Change in the Cabinet, by Hilaire Belloc, 751
 Chapman (Dom J.), Notes on Early History of Vulgate Gospels, 123, 227
 Charles I., miniature by M. Snelling wanted, 679
 Charpentier (Alexandre), sculptor, death, 326
 Charpentier (Gustave), 'Louise' at Covent Garden, 766
 Chase (G. H.), Loeb Collection of Arretine Pottery, 415
 Chase (Pauline), Peter Pan's Postbag, 13
 Chatterton (G. G.), Fatality, 193
 Chaucer: and his England, by Coulton, 41; Clerkes Tale and Squieres Tale, ed. Winstanley, 70; Seddon portrait presented to Harvard College, 77; Romaunt of the Rose, illus. Henderson and Wilkinson, 139; Bibliographical Manual, by Hammond, 556
 Chauchard legacy to the Louvre, 708
 Chaytor (H. J.), Greatness and Decline of Rome, Vols. III.-IV., 33; Vol. V., 459
 Chemical Analysis, Technical Methods, Vol. I., 168
 Chemistry: Recent Advances in Organic C., by Stewart—General C. for Schools and Colleges, by Alex. Smith—Organic C., by Dunstan, 168
 Cheyne (T. K.), Decline and Fall of Judah, 343
 Chief of Staff, by Ronald Macdonald, 207
 Child-Pemberton (W. S.), Life of Lord Norton, 195
 Childers (Spencer), A Mariner of England, 339
 Childhood of Man, by Leo Frobenius, 697
 Children and Gardens, by Gertrude Jekyll, 18
 Children of the Gutter, by Arthur Applin, 615
 Children's Exhibition at Baillie Gallery, 110
 China: Ancient C. Simplified, by Parker, 39; Things seen in, by Chitty, 40; Comprehensive Geography of Chinese Empire, by Richard, 40; Mr. H. Liddell's pictures, 383; Yün-nan, by Major Davies, 639
 Chip, by F. E. Mills Young, 436
 Chitty (J. R.), Things seen in China, 40
 Chohneley (R. F.) on Teachers' Registration Council, 132
 Chopin, date of his birth, 327, 386, 506
 Chorus Lady, by James Forbes, 507
 Christian Commonwealth, its Editorial Board, 675
 Chronicle of Friendships, by W. H. Low, 125
 Church Book of St. Mary the Virgin, Tenby, by Laws and Edwards, 222
 Churches, Greek and Eastern, by Adeney, 313
 Churches, Old Devon, by John Stabb, 173, 206
 Churchill (Winston S.), My African Journey, 99
 Cicero, Social Life in Age of, by Fowler, 552
 Cicerone, Der, 206, 385, 418
 Ciel rouge, by Claude Ferval, 38
 Cinderella at the Adelphi, 23
 Cities, European, Government of, by Munro, 558
 City of Beautiful Nonsense, by E. T. Thurston, 493
 City of the Golden Gate, by E. Everett-Green, 284
 Clark (A. C.), appointed to Latin Readership at Oxford, 619
 Clark (J. W.), The Care of Books, 755
 Clarke (Roy N.), Diana of the Swamp, 284
 Classical Association, Proceedings, Vol. VI., 496
 Classical Scholarship, History of, by Sandys, Vols. II.-III., 282
 Clausen (G.), picture exhibition, 653
 Clayton (H.), St. Mark's Gospel in Luganda, 407
 Clegg (T. B.), Joan of the Hills, 641
 Clergy Directory, 131
 Clerical Directory, Crockford's, 407
 Cloister to Court, by F. M. Cotton-Walker, 642
 Clouston (J. Storer), A County Family, 96
 Cobbett (W.), Rural Rides, ed. Lobban, 70
 Cobham (Claude D.), Excerpta Cypria, 288
 Cochin (Henry), Dante's Vita Nova, 313
 Coerne (L. A.), Evolution of Modern Orchestration, 50
 Colchester, Ordnance Survey map, 589
 Colchester Pageant, 729
 Cold, Mechanical Production of, by Ewing, 350
 Coleby (Wilfred T.), The Truants, 235
 Coleridge (S. T.), lecture on Education, 316
 Coleridge-Taylor's Bon-Bon Suite, 111
 Colles (J. Mayne), Journal of John Mayne, 583

Collier (Price), England and the English from an American Point of View, 615
 Collingwood (W. G.), Scandinavian Britain, 373
 Colling (F. Howard), Authors' and Printers' Dictionary, 559
 Collison-Morley (Lacy), Giuseppe Baretti, 725
 Cologne: the Clarenaltar in the Cathedral, 174, 679; Madonna "mit der Wickenblüte," 708; Antiphony for the Clarenkloster, 709
 Colomb (M.), "Moloch," caricaturist, death, 591
 Col. Smith, by A. E. W. Mason, 538
 Colvin (Sir A.), Making of Modern Egypt, 558
 Combat, The, by Arthur Campbell, 221
 Comedy of Ambition, by A. G. Whyte, 581
 Compact, The, by Ridgwell Cullum, 460
 Compton (Theodore), Swedenborgian, death, 499
 Concerts Français, Société des, 299
 Conder (Charles), artist, death, 206
 Conder (Col. C. R.), City of Jerusalem, 706
 Congo, From Ruwenzori to, by Wollaston, 732
 Congo français, by Félicien Challaye, 754
 Connaissance des Temps for 1911, 591, 622
 Connell (F. Norreys), Fifth Queen Crowned, 386
 Connemara, Holiday in, by Gwynn, 671
 Conquest, The, by George Fleming, 538
 Conradin, by C. R. Ashbee, 286
 Conried (Heinrich), opera manager, death, 538
 Consideration, by St. Bernard, tr. Lewis, 343
 Constitutions, Modern, by W. F. Dodd, 314
 Consumption, Treatment of, by W. C. Wilkinson, 168
 Conversion of Con Cregan, by D. Conyers, 727
 Conyers (Dorothea), Conversion of Con Cregan, 727
 Cook (A. S.), Concordance to English Poems of Gray, 254
 Coolidge (W. A. B.) on "Insula ratorum," 291
 Copenhagen National Library, 132
 Copping (H.), Gospel in Old Testament, 139
 Coquelin aîné, love of pictures, 174; death, 175
 Coquelin cadet, death, 208; art bequests, 385
 Corkran (Alice), The National Gallery, 323
 Corner Gallery, its opening, 110
 Cornish Characters, by Baring-Gould, 701
 Cossel (L. von), Mantzius's History of Theatrical Art, Vol. V., 474
 Cotton-Walker (Frances M.), Cloister to Court, 642
 Coubertin (Baron P. de), Pages d'Histoire contemporaine, 644
 Coulton (G. G.), Chaucer and his England, 41
 Country Woman, Plain, Ideas of, 528
 County Family, by J. Storer Clouston, 96
 Couper (W. J.), Edinburgh Periodical Press, 753
 Courbet (Juliette), gift of brother's pictures, 266
 Courlander (A.), Henry in Search of a Wife, 696
 Courthope (W. J.) on Macaulay and Milton, 19
 Courtney (W. L.), Dramas and Diversions, 337
 Courtney (W. P.), Secrets of our National Literature, 158
 Covenant, Men of, by Alex. Smellie, 527
 Cox (E. M.) on Habington's Castara, 77
 Cox (J. C.) on churches of S.E. Devon, 445, 472, 504, 565
 Crawford (Earl of), Bibliotheca Lindesiana, 411
 Crawford (F. Marion): Soprano—The Prima Donna—The Diva's Ruby, 13; death, 465; The White Sister, 581
 Crawford (Oswald), author, death, 164
 Crawshaw (R.), Birds of Tierra del Fuego, 201
 Creighton (C.), Contributions to Physiological Theory of Tuberculosis, 170
 Crèvecoeur, Letters from an American Farmer, 316
 Crime, Oriental, by H. L. Adam, 315
 Crime of Sylvestre Bonnard, by Anatole France, 434
 Crockford's Clerical Directory, 407
 Croker (B. M.), Katherine the Arrogant, 460
 Crook (W. M.) on cormorants fishing, 706
 Cross (Margaret B.), A Question of Means, 555
 Crowe (J. A.), History of Painting in Italy, Vol. III., 262, 291
 Cruickshank (A. H.), Fair Copies, 10
 Cuckoo, Mr. Harold Russell on, 534
 Cullum (Ridgwell), The Compact, 460
 Culwick (James), musician, medallion to, 655
 Cummings (W. H.), presentation of portrait, 710
 Cunningham (Prof. D. J.), anatomist, death, 763
 Currey (W. E.), obituary by Prof. H. Jackson, 105
 Curtin (Jeremiah), Mongols in Russia, 750
 Curtis (Marguerite), Marcia, 751
 Cest (Mrs. Henry), Gentlemen Errant, 458
 Cuthbertson (E. H.), sale of pictures, 654
 Cymru, Songs of, by A. P. Graves, 529
 Cyprus: Excerpta Cypria, by C. D. Cobham, 288
 Dahlke (P.), Buddhist Essays, 406
 Dalby (Walter), Capt. Vanion's Business, 284
 Dallimore (W.), Holly, Yew, and Box, 411
 Dalton (Moray), Olive in Italy, 556
 Dalziel (Jam. s.), High Life in the Far East, 223
 Dalziel brothers, wood-engravings presented to Hampstead, 594
 Damascus to Palmyra, by Kelman, 492
 Damer (Anne Seymour), by P. Noble, 34
 Dancing Girl, by H. A. Jones, 235
 Dante: The Paradise, tr. F. I. Fraser—Vita Nova, tr. Cochin, 313

Daphne, by Mrs. Humphry Ward, 669
 Daphne in Fitzroy Street, by E. Nesbit, 340
 Darbishire (Miss H.), De Quincey's Literary Criticism, 615
 Dartmoor House that Jack Built, by Trevenna, 669
 Darwin and Modern Science, ed. Seward, 701
 Davidson (John), poet, supposed suicide, 499
 Davidson (John), Scottish Staple at Veere, 526
 Davidson (K. L.), Gardens Past and Present, 239
 Davies (Fanny), pianoforte recital, 266
 Davies (G. A.), Electra of Sophocles, 71
 Davies (Major H. R.), Yün-nan, 639
 Davies (Hubert Henry), Bevis, 447
 Davies (N. de G.), Rock Tombs of El Anarna, Part VI., 752
 Davies (Randall), Stories of English Artists, 382
 Davina, by Frances G. Burmester, 641
 Davis (Jessie A.), A Forsaken Garden, 436
 Davis (Theodore M.), Tomb of Siphiah, 752
 Dave (Carlton), The New Andromeda, 193
 Dawson (A. J.), Finn the Wolfhound, 72; The Message, 345
 Dawson (W. H.), Evolution of Modern Germany, 35
 Dawson (W. J. and C. J.), Great English Letter-Writers, 288
 Dawson-Scott (C. A.), Treasure Trove, 581
 Day (Sir John Charles), sale of pictures, &c., 625
 Daylight Saving Bill, objections to, 321, 501
 Dearmer (Mabel), Gervase, 581
 Death, Age, and Growth, Problem of, by Minot, 160
 Debrett: Peerage, 72; House of Commons and Judicial Bench, 253
 Debucourt (L. P.), 33,000fr. for two prints, 594
 Debussy (Claude), works performed, 298, 299; production of 'Pelléas et Mélisande,' 654
 Declaration of Indulgence, 1672, by Bate, 554, 588
 Deeping (Warwick), The Red Saint, 693
 Defence, Home, Tactics of, by Callwell, 128
 Defoe (D.), Memoirs of a Cavalier, ed. O'Neill, 70
 Degener (H. A. L.), Who's Who in Germany, 72
 Deirdre, by W. B. Yeats, 767
 Delius (F.), The Mass of Life, 709
 Dellenbaugh (F. S.), A Canyon Voyage, 614
 Democracy and Character, by R. Stephen, 288
 De Quincey's Literary Criticism, 645
 Devereux (William), Henry of Navarre, 84
 Devil, The, by Henry Hamilton, 507
 Devon: its Moorlands, by Lady R. Northcote, 130
 Devon, South-East, Churches of, 445, 472, 504, 565
 Devon Churches, Old, by John Stabb, 173, 206
 Devorgilla, by Lady Gregory, 712
 Dewar (Douglas), Birds of the Plains, 202
 Diana of the Swamp, by Roy N. Clarke, 284
 Dickens: The Apostle of the People, by E. Pugh, 159; Dictionary, by Philip, 458
 Dickensian, 1908, 129
 Dickinson (G. Lowes), Justice and Liberty, 93
 Dickinson (H. N.), Sir Guy and Lady Rannard, 669
 Dickinson (Lowes), portrait painter, death, 22
 Dick Whittington at Drury Lane, 23
 Dicotyledons, Systematic Anatomy of, by Solereder, Vol. II., 412
 Dictionary, New English: Premisal—Propheiser, 218
 Differential Calculus for Beginners, by Lodge, 78
 Dillon (Frank), antiquary, death, 567
 Dillon (Henri P.), lithographer, death, 625
 Dimnet (Abbé), Figures de Moines, 463
 Dino (Duchesse de), Chronique, by Princess Radziwill, 583
 Diplock (A. H.), Kalendar of Shepherds, 223
 Dissent, Organized by Bate, 554, 588
 Diver (Maud), The Englishwoman in India, 672
 Dixon (R. W.), Poems, 670
 Dixon (W. Willmott), The Rogue of Rye, 221
 Dodd (Walter F.), Modern Constitutions, 314
 Dod's Parliamentary Companion, 224
 Dods (Dr. Marcus), theologian, death, 531
 Dollman (Ruth), Water-colours, 536
 Dominions, Responsible Government in, by Keith, 224
 Donizetti, Lucia di Lammermoor, 568
 Donner (L.), Runeberg's Ensign Stal's Songs, 162
 Dorando, by James Boswell, 376, 407, 529
 Dorchester: history of its seal, 14, 101, 164; Municipal Records of, ed. Mayo, 667
 Dorset Dialect, Barnes's Select Poems in, 755
 Doudement (Gustave Émile), artist, death, 22
 Doughty (E. P.), New Latin Delectus, Book I., 162
 Douglas (J.): on A. C. Swinburne, 463; Adventures in London, 672
 Douglas (Langton), Crowe and Cavalcaselle's Painting in Italy, Vol. III., 262, 294
 Douglas Cause, ed. A. F. Stewart, 526
 Doumic (René), lectures on George Sand, 648
 Doves Press: Men and Women, Vol. II., 226
 Dowden (E.) on Milton, 1701-50, 18
 Doyle (Sir A. Conan), The Fires of Fate, 739
 Drama, English Pastoral, by Jeannette Marks, 23
 Dramas and Diversions, by W. L. Courtney, 387
 Drawings at Paterson's Gallery, 707
 Dream—and the Woman, by Tom Gallon, 433
 Dresden Quartet Concerts, 568
 Dromina, by John Ayscough, 555
 Drury (Bp. T. W.), Elevation in the Eucharist, 252

- Drysdale (Learmont), composer, death, 767
 Dublin: Metropolitan School of Art, 50; first woman on staff of Trinity College, 442; picture exhibitions, 536, 654; Ulster Heraldic Museum opened, 568
 Dublin College of Science, its progress, 172
 Dublin Fusiliers in South African War, by Romer and Mainwaring, 128
 Dublin Gallery of Modern Art, lack of funds, 354
 Dublin Parish Register Society, 166
 Dublin University: teaching of Irish at, 17; Ladies' Concert, 739
 Dubufe (Guillaume), artist, death, 681
 Dudeney (Mrs. Henry E.), Rachel Lorian, 127
 Duffy (Richard), An Adventure in Exile, 436
 Dukedom of Portsea, by Alice M. Meadows, 433
 Du Maurier (Major Guy), Englishman's Home, 175
 Dummelow (J. R.), Commentary on the Bible, 250
 Duncan (J. Garrow), Exploration of Egypt and the Old Testament, 753
 Duncan (James), A Gallant of Galway, 300
 Duns (J.), Professor of Natural Science, death, 172
 Dunsany (Lord), The Glittering Gate, 570
 Dunstan (A. E.), An Organic Chemistry, 168
 Dunster, History of, by Maxwell Lyte, 609
 Dupray (Louis H.), military painter, death, 536
 Dutch and Flemish Artists, by V. Reynolds, 382
 Dutch paintings: at the French Gallery—of the nineteenth century, 707
 Duthie (D. Wallace), A Bishop in the Rough, 728
 Dutt (W. A.), Suffolk, 676
 Earle (Walter), Thoughts by the Way, 286
 Earth, The, by J. Bernard Fagan, 507
 Earth, Face of, by Suess, Vol. III., 106
 Earthquakes and auroral displays, 79
 Earthwork of England, by A. H. Allcroft, 763
 Earthworks, Ancient, by J. C. Wall, 763
 East: Far East Revisited, by A. G. Angier, 39
 East, Middle, Problems of, by Hamilton, 527
 Ebbinghaus (Dr. Hermann), philosopher, 291
 Echallaz (Lieut.-Col.), Waterloo Museum, Liverpool: History of Echallaz Collection, 411
 Echegaray (J.), El Gran Galeoto, 739
 Eclipse of the sun, A.D. 364, 677, 733
 Edda, Elder or Poetic, Part I., tr. O. Bray, 434
 Edgecombe (Sir R.) on seal of Dorchester, 14, 164
 Edge (K. M.), The Shuttles of the Loom, 696
 Edinburgh: Book of the Old E. Club, 753
 Edinburgh Periodical Press, by W. J. Couper, 753
 Edmunds (E. W.), Readings in English Literature, 1780-1880—Story of English Literature, 70
 Education: Textbook of School and Class Management, by Arnold, 68; English Grammar Schools to 1660, by Watson, 69; Tudor Schoolboy Life, by Vives, 69, 101; Studies in French Education, 70; Assistant Masters in Secondary Schools, annual meeting, 74, 101; Head Masters' Conference, 74; Association of Head Masters, annual meeting, 102; Modern Language Association, 103; Teachers' Registration Council, 132; Coleridge's 7th Lecture, 316
 Edwardes (G.), One of the Best, 569
 Edwards (C. E. H.), An Oxford Tutor: T. Short, 369
 Edwards (Emily H.), Church Book of St. Mary, Tenby, 222
 Egger (Victor), psychologist, death, 258
 Egypt: and the English, by D. Sladen, 12, 163; and its Monuments, by R. Hichens, 12; Ancient E. the Light of the World, by Massey, 72; Book of the Kings of E., by Wallis Budge, 97; New Light on Ancient E., by Maspero—Account of Sarcophagus of Seti I., by Wallis Budge, 98; La Mort de Philæ, by Pierre Loti, 161; excavations in E., 263; Making of Modern E., by Sir A. Colvin, 558; Exploration of E. and Old Testament, by Duncan, 753
 Egyptian Collections in British Museum: Guide to, by Wallis Budge, 98; Sculpture, 752
 Egyptian Papyri, Light on Jewish History from, by Wright, 130
 Egyptians, History of Ancient by Breasted, 97
 Eighteenth-Century Byways, by Buchan, 217
 Eighteenth-Century Prints at Goupil Galleries, 735
 Eighteen Years in Uganda, by Bp. Tucker, 728
 El Amarna, Rock Tombs of, by N. de G. Davies, Part VI., 752
 Elasticity, Experimental, by Searle, 292
 Eldridge (G. D.), In the Potter's House, 494
 Electrical Engineering, Outlines of, by Simmons, 676
 Electro-Metallurgy, by J. B. C. Kershaw, 135
 Elgar (Sir E.), Symphony in A, at Queen's Hall, 83, 111, 175, 626; at Brighton, 110
 Elias (Frank), The Right Hon. H. H. Asquith, 437
 Ellis (W. Ashton), Richard to Minna Wagner, 446
 Elsmie (G. R.), Thirty-Five Years in the Punjab, 162; death, 675
 Empire Concert, 655
 Enchanters of Men, by Ethel C. Mayne, 583
 Enemy of the People, by Ibsen, 569
 Engdahl (T.), Sick's Priest of the High Fields, 371
 Engelmann (Wilhelm), physiologist, death, 652
 Engelsch Woordenboek, by Bruggencate, 439
 Engineering, Electrical, Outlines of, by Simmons, 676
 Engineers, Civil, Institution of, 20, 108, 203, 261, 321, 351, 413, 469, 533
 Engineers, Society of, awards, 172; 293, 444, 564, 705
 England: Chaucer and his E., by Coulton, 40; Sex-Totems in, 496; from an American Point of View, by Collier, 615; Political History of, Vol. IX., 668
 English, The, and Egypt, by D. Sladen, 12
 English, Passing, of Victorian Era, by Ware, 584
 English and French literary society, 702
 English Artists from Vandyck, by Davies and Hunt, 382
 English Biography, Modern, by Boase, Vol. IV., 315
 English Catalogue of Books, 1908, 316
 English Church Pageant, 729
 English Classics, Select, 70
 English Goethe Society, 562
 English Grammar Schools to 1660, by Foster Watson, 69
 English Holiday with Car and Camera, by Hissey, 406
 English Houses and Gardens, by Macartney, 470
 Englishman's Home, by Major Du Maurier, 175
 English Pastoral Drama, by Jeannette Marks, 23
 English Stage, Short History, by R. F. Sharp, 474
 English String Quartet, concert, 739
 Englishwoman, first number, 105, 131
 Englishwoman in India, by Maud Diver, 672
 Englishwoman's Year-Book, ed. Mitton, 163
 Engraving: Short History of, by Hind, 623, 654, 681; History of, by Stanley Austin, 623; Turner's Engraved Work, by Rawlinson, Vol. I., 624
 Ensign Stal's Songs, by Runeberg, tr. Donner, 162
 Entomological Society: Annual Meeting, Mr. C. O. Waterhouse on Claws of Insects, 137; 231, 321, 413, 533, 622, 733
 Envious Eliza, by E. Maria Albanesi, 615
 Enzymes, Intracellular, by Vernon, 170
 Erasmus, Selections from, by P. S. Allen, 10
 Erdlinger (C. F.), The World and his Wife, 739
 Essays, Historical and Political, by Lecky, 98
 Essex (J. Ridgewell), The Silent Ones, 250
 Essex, Memorials of Old, by Kelway, 314, 349
 Etching, Short History of, by Hind, 623, 654, 681
 Etchings by living artists, 205
 Etymologisk Ordbog over det norrøne Sprog paa Shetland, by Jakobsen, Part I., 435
 Eucharist, Elevation in, by Bishop Drury, 252
 Eunice, by Lee Arthur and F. Halsey, 684
 Europe: Remaking of Modern, by Marriott, 70; Bird-Hunting through Wild, by Lodge, 167; Nobilities of, by Marquis de Ruigny, 437
 European Cities, Government of, by Munro, 558
 European Tour, Impressions, by B. C. Mahtab, 71
 Evans (F. H.) on Meredith's photograph, 646
 Evelyn (John), Sylva, memoir by Nisbet, 411
 Everard (H. C. S.), writer on golf, death, 620
 Everett-Green (E.): The City of the Golden Gate, 284; A Queen of Hearts, 641
 Everyman's Library, additions, 373
 Ewing (J. E.), Mechanical Production of Cold, 350
 Experiences, by Katharine Tynan, 285
 Eye-Witness, The, by Hilaire Belloc, 225
 Faber (Beryl), A Sense of Humour, 641
 Faber (Leslie), The Head of the Firm, 327
 Fagan (James Bernard): The Earth, 507; A Merry Devil, 711
 Fair Copies, by A. H. Cruickshank, 10
 Fairfax (J. Griffyth), Poems, 285
 Fair Refuge, by Morice Gerard, 526
 Faith, by R. B. Cunningham Graham, 406
 Faith of his Fathers, by A. E. Jacob, 193
 Faraday Society, 20, 47, 232, 351, 469, 564, 763
 Farmer (J. S.) on Gentylnes and Noblyte, 306
 Farmer, American, Letters from, by Crèvecoeur, 316
 Farrer (Reginald): In Old Ceylon, 491; Alpines and Bog-Plants, 532
 Fatality, by G. G. Chatterton, 193
 Fault, The, by C. T. Podmore, 341
 Feis Ceoil in Dublin, 627
 Feldmann (C.), Revolt of the Potemkin, 196
 Feldwicke & Sons, sale of engravings, 765
 Felix Stone, by A. and C. Askew, 461
 Ferns, Wayside and Woodland, by Step, 532
 Ferrero (G.), Greatness and Decline of Rome, Vols. III.-IV., 33; Vol. V., 459
 Ferval (Claude), Ciel rouge, 38
 Fétis (Édouard), musical critic, death, 175
 Fetish of Truth, by Eileen Fitzgerald, 556
 Fifth Queen Crowned, by Hueffer and Connell, 386
 Figgis (J. N.), Gospel and Human Needs, 521
 Figures de Moines, by Abbé Dinnet, 463
 Fijians, by Basil Thomson, 410
 Filippi (Filippo de), Ruwenzori, 749
 Finn (Frank), The World's Birds, 201
 Finn the Wolfhound, by A. J. Dawson, 72
 Fires of Fate, by Sir A. Conan Doyle, 739
 Firing Line, by R. W. Chambers, 403
 First Stone, by Mary Stuart Boyd, 461
 Firth (J. B.), The Minstrelsy of Isis, 249
 Fitch (Clyde), The Woman in the Case, 711
 FitzGerald (Edward) Centenary and Omar, 440
 Fitzgerald (Eileen), A Fetish of Truth, 556
 Fitzmaurice-Kelly (J.), Chapters on Spanish Literature, 338; appointed Gilmour Professor of Spanish, 409
 Fitzwilliam Museum, loans to, 594
 Flammarion, Annuaire astronomique, 204
 Fleay (F. G.), Shakespearean scholar, death, 375
 Fleming (George), The Conquest, 538
 Flemish and Dutch Artists, by V. Reynolds, 382
 Flers (Robert de), Love Watches, 595
 Fletcher (Hanslip), London Passed and Passing, 495
 Fletcher (J. S.), The Mantle of Ishmael, 555
 Fletcher (John), Plays, Vol. VI., ed. Waller, 84
 Florence, Country Walks about, by Hutton, 404
 Flowerdew (Herbert), The Ways of Men, 97
 Flower of the Heart, by H. B. M. Watson, 127
 Flower Paintings at the Baillie Gallery, 383
 Fluids of the Body, by E. H. Starling, 649
 Flying Months, by Frances M. Peard, 581
 Folk-lore: Nandi, by Hollis, 697; of Japan, by Gordon Smith, 698; in Lowland Scotland, 699
 Folk-lore Society: Mr. T. C. Hodson on Head-hunting Tribes of Assam, 261; Mr. A. R. Brown on Andaman Islanders, 381; Miss Eckenstein on Personal Amulets, 564; Miss Werner on Bantu Elements in Swahili, 651
 Folk-Memory, by Walter Johnson, 126
 Fonts and Font Covers, by F. Bond, 352
 Fool of Quality, by Henry Brooke, 226
 Forbes (Ethel M.), Love Tale of a Misanthrope, 615
 Forbes (James), The Chorus Lady, 507
 Ford (Henry J.), drawings, 503
 Ford (Worthington C.) on 'Paradise Lost,' 617
 Forman (H. Buxton): on Leigh Hunt and Shelley, 440; More Shelley Crumbs, 674; Some Byron Crumbs, 756
 Forman (Justus M.), The Quest, 641
 Forsaken Garden, by Jessie A. Davis, 436
 Fossil-Hunter, Life of, by C. H. Sternberg, 732
 Foster (John), A Shakespeare Word-Book, 387
 Fowler (W. Warde), Social Life at Rome, 552
 Français, ancien, Tables synoptiques, by Berthon and Starkey, 226
 France: Motor-Flight through, by Edith Wharton, 160; Maid of, by Andrew Lang, 248; Summer in Touraine, by Lees, 582. See Paris.
 France (Anatole), Well of St. Clare—Crime of Sylvestre Bonnard—Balthazar, 434; Les Sept Femmes de la Barbe-Bleue, 727
 Francfort, De la Paix de, à la Conférence d'Algésiras, by Mévil, 642
 Francis (John Collins), Notes by the Way, 754
 Francis (M. E.), Noblesse Oblige, 433; Galatea of the Wheatfield, 726
 Fraprie (F. R.), Castles and Keeps of Scotland, 405
 Fraser (David), Short Cut to India, 405
 Fraser (Miss F. I.), Dante's Paradise, 313
 Fraternity, by J. Galsworthy, 312
 Frazer (J. G.), Psyche's Task, 443
 Frease-Green (Mrs.) as Sieglinde, 111
 French (C. H.), Elementary Algebra, 78
 French and English literary society, 702
 French Education, Studies in, by G. Hodgson, 70
 French pictures: at the French Gallery—at Messrs. Obach's, 707
 French Republic, The Third, by Lawton, 582
 Fresh Leaves and Green Pastures, 551
 Friar Observant, by Frances M. Brookfield, 341
 Friedländer (L.), Roman Life and Manners under the Early Empire, 616
 Frobenius (Leo), The Childhood of Man, 697
 Frothingham (A. L.), Monuments of Christian Rome, 591
 Fry (Roger E.), paintings and drawings, 536
 Fryers (Austin), Purple and Homespun, 461
 Fulleylove (John), water-colours, 503
 Furness (H. H.), jun., Richard III., 683, 712
 Furst (Herbert E. A.), Songs of London, 286
 Galatea of the Wheatfield, by M. E. Francis, 726
 Gallant of Galway, by James Duncan, 300
 Gallon (T.), The Dream—and the Woman, 433
 Galsworthy (John): Fraternity, 312; Strife, 327
 Gambetta par Gambetta, ed. Gheusi, 522
 Gamgee (Arthur), physiologist, death, 444
 Gardens: Children and G., by Gertrude Jekyll, 18; Past and Present, by K. L. Davidson, 230; An Artist's Garden, by Anna L. Merritt—A Book of Simples, 231; Scottish G., by Sir Herbert Maxwell, 412; English Houses and G., by Macartney, 470
 Gardiner (Margaret) resigns St. Felix School, 134
 Garnett (Constance), Revolt of the Potemkin, 196
 Garvice (Charles), Queen Kate, 581
 Gassendi, Philosophy of, by Brett, 344
 Gaudry (Albert), anthropologist, death, 444
 Gaunt (Mary), The Silent Ones, 250
 Gayford (S. C.) on appropriating book-titles, 407
 Gayley (C. Mills), Plays of our Forefathers, 448
 Gay Paradises, by Mrs. S. Batson, 752
 Geden (A. S.), Introduction to Hebrew Bible, 723

Geneva, by Gribble and Lewis, 374
 Gentlemen Errant, by Mrs. H. Cust, 458
 Geoffrey Cheriton, by John Barnett, 461
 Geoffroy (C. Louis), picture exhibition, 653
 Geography, Comprehensive, of Chinese Empire, by Richard, 40
 Geological Society: 20, 137, 203; declines to admit women—Annual Meeting, 260; 321, 380, 444, 533, 590, 650, 705
 Geometry, Modern, by Godfrey and Siddons, 78, 134
 George (E. A.), Seventeenth Century Men of Latitude, 372
 Georgian Pageant, by F. Frankfort Moore, 489
 Gerard (Dorothea), Pomp and Circumstance, 494
 Gerard (Morice), A Fair Refugee, 526
 Gerhardt (Fräulein Elena), vocal recital, 738
 German Reader and Theme-Book, by Thomas and Hervey, 71
 German Universities: number of students, 77; foreign students at, 134
 Germany: History, 1715–1815, by Atkinson—Evolution of Modern, by Dawson, 35; Who's Who in, 72; in the Later Middle Ages, by Stubbs, 157
 Gervase, by Mabel Dearmer, 581
 Gevaert (François A.), composer, death, 23
 Gheusi (P. B.), Gambetta par Gambetta, 522
 Gibbs (Mrs. P.), Baudrillard's Catholic Church, 251
 Gibbs (Wolcott), Professor of Chemistry, death, 79
 Gibson (C. R.), Scientific Ideas of To-day, 350
 Gifted Family, by Barry Pain, 250
 Gilchrist (R. Murray), The Two Goodwins, 193
 Gilds and Companies of London, by Unwin, 125
 Girl from Gatford, by Olivia Ramsey, 127
 Glasgow, Dr. Neilson on earliest author, 319
 Glasgow University, gift of Macbain's Celtic books, 134
 Glastonbury and Wells, by T. S. Holmes, 221
 Glimpses of the Twenties, by W. Toynbee, 528
 Glittering Gate, by Lord Dunsany, 570
 Gloucester, Roman walls of, 737
 Gluck, Armide, 625
 Glyn (Margaret H.), Analysis of Evolution of Musical Form, 537
 Godfrey (C.), Modern Geometry, 78, 134
 Godley (A. D.), Oxford in Eighteenth Century, 65
 Godman (F. Du Cane), Monograph of the Petrels, Parts I.–II., 532
 Godowski, Chopin recital, 266
 Goeje (M. J. de), Arabist, death, 648, 672
 Goethe Society, English, its work, 562
 Gogo Hymn-Book, by Beverley, 407
 Gold, The World's, by Launay, 292
 Goldsmith (O.), She Stoops to Conquer, 267
 Goldziher (I.) on Dr. Parr and Dr. Uri, 317
 Gollancz (H.), Targum to Song of Songs, 342
 Gomeril, The, by Rutherford Mayne, 570
 Goodman (Gwelo), exhibition, 173
 Goodrick (A. T. S.), Relation of Sydnam Poyntz, 131
 Gordons, Gay, by J. M. Bulloch, 526
 Gospel and Human Needs, by J. N. Figgis, 521
 Gostling (Frances M.), Bretons at Home, 755
 Gotische Bibel, ed. W. Streitberg, 72
 Gottschall (Rudolf von), author, death, 378
 Gould (Geo. M.), Concerning Lafcadio Hearn, 195
 Gounod: jubilee performance of 'Faust' at Paris Opéra, 419; 'Faust' at Covent Garden, 537, 682
 Goupil Galleries, Summer Exhibition, 735
 Government, Responsible, in the Dominions, by Keith, 224
 Government publications. See Parliamentary.
 Gow (Jas.) on Teachers' Registration Council, 101
 Grafton Galleries, chosen pictures at, 734
 Graham (R. B. Cunninghame), Faith, 406
 Grammar Schools, English, to 1660, by Foster Watson, 69
 Grammatik, Historische Neuenglische, by Horn, Part I., 617
 Graven Image, by Mrs. Coulson Kernahan, 221
 Graves (Alfred Perceval), Songs of Cymru, 529
 Gray (Alex.), Scottish Staple at Veere, 526
 Gray (Mrs. E. K.) on Philanthropy and State, 134
 Gray (T.), Concordance to English Poems, by Cook, 254
 Grayson (D.), Adventures in Contentment, 616
 Great Britain, Birds of, by Butler, Vol. II., 532
 Great Britain's Treasure, by Sir N. Halse, 497
 Greater Love, by Anna McClure Sholl, 250
 Greco, II, museum at Toledo, 738
 Greek and Eastern Churches, by Adeney, 343
 Greek Historians, Ancient, by Bury, 430
 Greek History, Sources for, by G. F. Hill, 10
 Greek Philosophy, Development of, by Adamson, 311
 Green (W. C.), Translations from Icelandic, 435
 Green Curve, The, by Ole Luk-Oie, 727
 Green Ginger, by Arthur Morrison, 435
 Green-Room Book, edited by Parker, 569
 Greenslet (Ferris), Life of T. Bailey Aldrich, 95
 Greenwich Observatory, annual visitation, 704
 Greg (W. W.) on Shakespeare Quartos, 100, 132
 Gregory (E. J.), R.A., death, 765

Gregory (Lady), Devorzilla, 712; Hyacinth Halvey, 740; The Workhouse Ward, 767
 Grenfell (B. P.), Oxyrhynchus Papyri, Part VI., 368
 Gribble (Francis), Geneva, 374
 Grier (Sydney C.), A Young Man Married, 493
 Grierson (G. A.), Linguistic Survey of India, 523
 Grip of Fear, by Maurice Level, 371
 Gross (C.), Select Cases concerning Law Merchant, Vol. I., 191
 Grousset (Paschal), journalist, death, 499
 Guerber (H. A.), Myths of the Norsemen, 344
 Guggisberg (F. G.), We Two in West Africa, 614
 Guity (L.) in 'L'Assommoir,' 767
 Gwynn (Stephen), Holiday in Connemara, 671
 Gyp, La Bassinoire, 223
 Gypsy Bibliography, by G. F. Black, 557
 Habicht (Ludwig), novelist, death, 77
 Habington's Castara, collation, 77
 Haggard (H. Rider), The Yellow God, 404
 Hale (Dr. Edward Everett), author, death, 759
 Half Moon, by Ford Madox Hueffer, 525
 Haliburton (Lord), by J. B. Atlay, 128
 Hall (H. Fielding), One Immortality, 220
 Halse (Sir N.), Great Britain's Treasure, 497
 Halsey (Forrest), Eunice, 684
 Hamelin (Madame), une Merveilleuse, by Marquiset, 431
 Hamilton (Angus), Problems of Middle East, 527
 Hamilton (Cosmo), A Sense of Humour, 641
 Hamilton (Henry), The Devil, 507
 Hamilton (Prof. James), death, 261
 Hammond (Eleanor P.), Chaucer, 556
 Hancock (Albert Elmer), John Keats, 8
 Handasyde, Other Things than Love, 581
 Handel and his Orbit, by P. Robinson, 82
 Handicapped, by Emery Pottle, 38
 Hankin (St. John Emile), dramatist, death, 708
 Happy Half-Century, by Agnes Repplier, 311
 Hardie (Martin), John Pettie, R.A., 439
 Hardie (R. P.), Adamson's Greek Philosophy, 311
 Hardie (W. R.), Latin Prose Composition, 10
 Hareux (Ernest Victor), painter, death, 234
 Harland (Henry), The Royal End, 312
 Harper (C. G.), The Somerset Coast, 612
 Harp of Life, by Alan St. Aubyn, 341
 Harpsichord and Organ Music, by Scarlatti, ed. Shedlock, Part I., 51; Parts II. and III., 142
 Harris (J. Henry), Penelope Ann, 727
 Harris (Joel C.), Bishop and the Bogie-Man, 403
 Harrison (A. H.), In Search of a Polar Continent, 439
 Harrison (Mrs. Burton), Transplanted Daughters, 340
 Hart (Sir Robert), by Juliet Bredon, 701
 Hassall (A.), Stubbs's Germany in Later Middle Ages, 157
 Hastings (J.), Dictionary of the Bible, 341
 Hauser (Aloys), picture restorer, death, 418
 Hautier (Eugénie), artist, death, 473
 Havelock (H.), Brückner's Literary History of Russia, 66
 Haydn (J.), violin concertos discovered, 267, 474
 Hazell's Annual, 72
 Hazlitt (W.), Characters of Shakespeare's Plays, ed. Lobban, 70
 Headlam (Cecil), Venetia and N. Italy, 404
 Head Masters, Incorporated Association, annual meeting, 102
 Head Masters' Conference, 74
 Head of the Firm, by Leslie Faber, 327
 Health, Public, Agitation, by Hutchins, 314
 Hearn (Lafcadio): Concerning L. H., by G. M. Gould, 195; Anatole France's Crime of Sylvestre Bonnard, 434
 Heartbreak Hill, by H. K. Vielé, 752
 Heart of a Gypsy, by Rosamond Napier, 371
 Heavens and their Story, by Maunder, 444
 Heavens at a Glance, by A. Mee, 47
 Hebrew Bible, Introduction to, by Geden, 723
 Hebrew Prophets for English Readers, Vol. I., 252
 Hellenic Society: Mr. P. Ure on Excavations at Rhitsona—Mr. W. C. F. Anderson on Amphipolis, 261; Dr. Farnell on Megala Dionysia, 622
 Henderson (Keith), Romaunt of the Rose, 139
 Henderson (P. E.), British Officer in the Balkans, 161
 Henley (W. E.), Admiral Guinea, 710
 Henry in Search of a Wife, by Courlander, 696
 Henry of Navarre: by W. Devereux, 84; by May Wynne, 221
 Henschel (G.), vocal recital, 266
 Heraldic Museum opened at Dublin, 568
 Herbert (Agnes), Two Dianas in Alaska, 404
 Herculaneum: Past, Present, and Future, by Waldstein and Shoobridge—Buried II., by Ethel R. Barker, 108
 Hereford: Registrum Ade de Orleton, 437
 Hernant (Abel), Trains de Luxe, 38
 Herodoti Historiae, ed. C. Hude, 643
 Herring (G.), People of the Polar North, 18
 Hervey (W. Addison), German Reader and Theme-Book, 71
 Hesiod, Poems and Fragments, ed. Mair, 461
 Hewlett (Maurice), Artemision, 670

Hewlett (R. T.), Macfadyen's Cell as Unit of Life, 170
 Hey (Julius), Professor of Singing, death, 568
 Heyer (G.) on Villon and Job, 317
 Heywood (J.), Four PP, 144
 Hibernian Academy, picture exhibition, 325
 Iichens (R.): Egypt and its Monuments, 12; The Real Woman, 299; Barbary Sheep, 641
 Hick (John), picture sale, 765
 Hicks (Seymour), One of the Best, 569
 High Bid, comedy by Henry James, 267
 High Life in the Far East, by Dalziel, 223
 Highways and Byways in Surrey, by Parker, 158
 Hill (Alex.), The Body at Work, 169
 Hill (Ethel), The Unloved, 284
 Hill (G. F.), Sources for Greek History, 10
 Hill (Headon), Links in the Chain, 284
 Hilliers (Ashton), As It Happened, 697
 Hind (A. M.), Short History of Engraving, 623, 654, 681
 Hissey (J. J.), English Holiday, 406
 Histoire contemporaine, Pages d', by Coubertin, 644
 Historians, Ancient Greek, by Bury, 430
 Historical Publications relating to Canada, by Wrong and Langton, 528
 Historical Society: 47; Transactions, 1908, 131; 172; Annual Meeting, 261; Mr. Temperley on War of Jenkins's Ear, 381; Miss de Alberti and Miss Chapman on the Inquisition in the Canaries, 534; 651; Miss Neild on the Unfree Classes in England, 762
 Hockliffe (E.), Diary of Rev. Ralph Josselin, 132
 Hoddesdon, History of, by J. A. Tregelles, 616
 Hodgson (Geraldine), Studies in French Education, 70
 Holbein, 'Christina, Duchess of Milan,' purchased for 72,000l., 707
 Holden (Canon Henry), death, 442
 Holdsworth (Annie E.), Lady Letty Brandon, 127
 Holiday, English, with Car and Camera, by Hissey, 406
 Holiday in Connemara, by S. Gwynn, 671
 Hollis (A. C.), The Nandi, 697
 Holly, Yew, and Box, by Dallimore, 411
 Holmes (Prof. C. J.), pictures, 81; Science of Picture-Making, 414, 446
 Holmes (O. W.), centenary celebration, 499
 Holmes (T.), Known to the Police, 372
 Holmes (T. Rice), Caesar on the Gallic War, 613
 Holmes (T. S.), Wells and Glastonbury, 221
 Holroyd (Sir C.), etchings, 417
 Holy Land, Out-of-Doors in, by Van Dyke, 100
 Homerica: the Odyssey, by T. L. Agar, 613
 Hope (Anthony), A Servant of the Public, 628
 Hoppner Exhibition, 624
 Horn (Wilhelm), Historische Neuenglische Grammatik, Part I., 617
 Hornaday (W. T.), Camp-Fires on Desert and Lava, 585
 Horner (D. W.), Observing the Weather, 564
 Horniman (Miss), Repertory Company in Sudermann's 'Vale of Content,' 711
 Horsburgh (E. L. S.), Lorenzo the Magnificent, 344
 Horse, Irish, its early history, 351
 Horse Guards Parade, 324, 354, 446
 Horsley (Reginald), New Zealand, 11
 Hough (Prof. G. W.), astronomer, death, 137
 House called Hurrish, by Rita, 340
 House of Bondage, by Seymour Obermer, 355
 House of Commons, Unreformed, by Porritt, 495
 House of Intrigue, by Percy White, 751
 Houses and Gardens, English, by Macartney, 470
 Hoyer (Maria A.), By the Roman Wall, 21
 Hude (C.), Herodoti Historiae, 643
 Hudleston (Wilfrid H.), geologist, death, 172, 260
 Hudson (Gilbert), Vanderdecken, 670, 703
 Hudson (W. H.), South American Sketches, 406
 Hueffer (F. M.): Fifth Queen Crowned, 386; The Half Moon, 525
 Hugo (Georges), sale of his library, 77
 Hulme (Frederick E.), botanical writer, death, 470
 Hume (Martin), Two English Queens and Philip, 194
 Hungary and the Hungarians, by Bovill, 584
 Hunt (A. S.), Oxyrhynchus Papyri, Part VI., 368
 Hunt (Cecil), Stories of English Artists, 382
 Hunt (Leigh) and Shelley's letters, 439
 Hurst & Blackett's sevenpenny novels, 672
 Hus (John), Life and Times, by Lützow, 666
 Hutchins (B. L.), Public Health Agitation, 314
 Hutchinson (T.), Works of C. and M. Lamb, 71, 289
 Huth (A. H.) on Shakespeare Quartos, 101
 Hutten (Baroness von), Kingsmead, 526
 Hutton (E.), Country Walks about Florence, 404
 Hutton (W. H.): on Nonjuring documents, 559; on Shakespeare Festival, 596
 Hyacinth Halvey, by Lady Gregory, 740
 Hygiène industrielle, by Leclerc de Pulligny, 47
 Ibsen (H.): The Master-Builder, 420; An Enemy of the People, 569
 Icelandic, Translations from, by W. C. Green, 435
 Iddesleigh (Earl of), Ione Chaloner, 433
 Ideas of a Plain Country Woman, 528
 Idolatry, by Alice Perrin, 250

- Iliad of the East, by Frederika Macdonald, 344
 Illuminating Engineering Society formed, 204, 734
 Immortals' Great Quest, by Barlow, 372
 Impressions, Diary of a European Tour, by B. C. Mahtab, 71
 Inchbold (A. C.), Road of No Return, 525
 India: Survey Report, 1906-7, 107; Short Cut to, by Fraser, 405; Sanitary Report, 1907, 412; Linguistic Survey, Vol. IX. Part II., 523; The Englishwoman in, by Maud Diver, 672
 Indian Dust, by Otto Rothfeld, 645
 Indy (Vincent d'), Jour d'Été à la Montagne, 354; Wallenstein Trilogy, 419
 Inez the King's Page, by Arthur Maltby, 556
 Infantry, Review of History of, by E. M. Lloyd, 128
 International Society, Fair Women Exhibition, 263
 Interrupted Kiss, by Richard Marsh, 220
 In the Potter's House, by Eldridge, 494
 Ione Chaloner, by Earl of Iddesleigh, 433
 Ireland: Water-Colour Society, 266; Arts and Crafts Society, 298; Statutes of Parliament, John to Henry V., 374; under the Stuarts, by Bagwell, 457; Birds of, by Butler, Vol. II., 532
 Ireland (E. C.), clerk to Society of Antiquaries, death, 380
 Irish Academy, Royal, leather shield, 82
 Irish Academy of Music, annual meeting, 23
 Irish Artists' Society, Young, exhibition, 536
 Irish horse, its early history, 351
 Irish language and Dublin University, 17
 Irish music, ancient, Sir R. Stewart on, 83
 Irish National Theatre Society at the Court, 712, 740, 767
 Irish R.M., Further Experiences, by Somerville and Ross, 254
 Italian Poets before Dante, tr. Rossetti, 313
 Italy: Painting in, by Crowe and Cavalcaselle, Vol. III., 262, 294; Venetia and Northern I., by Headlam—Country Walks about Florence, by Hutton, 404. See Rome.
 Itinerary, by Leland, ed. Toulmin Smith, Parts VII.-VIII., 254, 291, 319
 Jack (Adolphus A.), Mathilde, 51
 Jackson (G. A.), Brougham and his Early Friends, Vol. III., 288
 Jackson (John), Virgil, 9
 Jacomb (A. E.), The Faith of his Fathers, 193
 Jaggard (W.), Index to Book-Prices Current, 1897-1906, 557
 Jahnke (Hermann), novelist, death, 46
 Jakobsen (J.), Etymologisk Ordbog over det norrøne Sprog, Part I., 435
 James (Francis), flower pieces, 653
 James (Henry), The High Bid, 207
 James (Lionel), Side-Tracks and Bridle-Paths, 616
 James (William), A Pluralistic Universe, 577
 Janssen (Cornelius), portrait of Milton, 81
 Japan: Hairy Ainus, 202; Ancient Tales and Folk-lore, by Gordon Smith, 698
 Japanese prints: at Messrs. Goupil's, 417; at Fine-Art Society's, 679
 Japanese War. See Russo-Japanese War.
 Jeanne d'Arc. See Joan of Arc.
 Jebb (Sir R. C.) on Samson Agonistes, 18
 Jefferies (Richard), Life and Work, by Thomas, 368
 Jekyll (Gertrude), Children and Gardens, 18
 Jepson (Edgar), Mystery of the Myrtles, 436
 Jerusalem: Second Temple in, by Shaw Caldecott—City of, by Conder—Ancient, by Merrill, 706
 Jesse cope at Salzburg, 709
 Jessup (A. E.), Sir Christopher, 286
 Jesus: Seven Questions, by Warschauer, 252
 Jevons (F. B.), Introduction to Study of Comparative Religion, 248
 Jew and Auto de Fé, by E. N. Adler, 104
 Jewish History, Light from Egyptian Papyri, by Wright, 130
 Jimbo, by Algernon Blackwood, 284
 Jim Mortimer, by Warren Bell, 38
 Joan of Arc: Maid of France, by Lang, 248; in English Chronicles, 673
 Joan of the Hills, by T. B. Clegg, 641
 Job and Villon, parallel, 317, 347
 John (Goscombe) elected R.A., 142
 John Broome's Wife, by E. B. Moffat, 284
 Johnson (R. B.), Poetical Works of Poe, 438
 Johnson (Samuel), letter to Congreve, 559, 586
 Johnson (Walter), Folk-Memory, 126
 John the Baptist, by H. Sudermann, 52
 Jones (Constance E.), Woman's Looking-Glass, 436
 Jones (Henry Arthur), The Dancing Girl, 235
 Joseph and his Brethren, by C. Wells, 189
 Josselin (Rev. Ralph), Diary, ed. Hockliffe, 132
 Journalism, English, to Foundation of the Gazette, by Williams, 219, 255
 Journalists: Conference in London, 163
 Judah, Kingdom of, Decline and Fall, by Cheyne, 343
 Judgment of Paris Astronomically Considered, by Emmeline M. Plunket, 589
 Julian Revelstone, by Justin McCarthy, 250
 June Princess, by Constance Smedley, 669
 Junius Letters, attributed to T. Pownall, 283
 Justice and Liberty, by G. Lowes Dickinson, 93
 Kalendar of Shepherds, ed. Diplock, 226
 Karasin (N.), novelist and illustrator, death, 77
 Karslake (Frank), Notes from Sotheby's, 579, 617
 Katherine, by Tinel, produced at Brussels, 327
 Katherine the Arrogant, by B. M. Croker, 460
 Kathleen Ni Houlihan, by Yeats, 740
 Kaye-Smith (Sheila), Starbrace, 726
 Keane (A. H.), The World's Peoples, 676
 Keane (C. A.), Technical Methods of Chemical Analysis, Vol. I., 168
 Keats (J.), by A. E. Hancock, 8
 Keith (A.), Responsible Government in the Dominions, 224
 Keith (W. Grant) on Island of Bureho, 319
 Kelle (Johann von), philologist, death, 200
 Kelly's Titled, Landed, and Official Classes, 130
 Kelman (J.), From Damascus to Palmyra, 492
 Keltie (Scott), Statesman's Year-Book, 699
 Kelway (A. C.), Memorials of Old Essex, 314
 Kenealy (Arabella), The Whips of Time, 97
 Kennedy (J. M.), Sera's On the Tracks of Life, 401
 Kernahan (Coulson), books in Esperanto and Braille, 731
 Kernahan (Mrs. Coulson), The Graven Image, 221
 Kerr (H. W.), Dean Ramsay's Reminiscences, 226
 Kerr (S. P.), George Selwyn and the Wits, 429, 465
 Kershaw (J. B. C.), Electro-Metallurgy, 135
 Kew Royal Botanic Gardens, by Bean, 230
 Kimball (David), A Servant of the Public, 628
 King (Sir George), Oriental botanist, death, 232
 King (Maud E.), The Archdeacon's Family, 284
 King (Wm. F. H.), 'Classical and Foreign Quotations,' death, 561
 King Alfred's Jewel, its author, 759
 Kingsford (C. L.) on London Marching Watch, 586
 Kingsmead, by Baroness von Hutten, 526
 King's Musick, ed. H. Cart de Lafontaine, 682
 King's Treachery, by Albert Lee, 436
 Kingsway Theatre, music at, 111
 Kinnear (Samuel), printer's reader, death, 105
 Kinross (Albert), The Love-Brokers, 726
 Kirkland (Caroline), Some African Highways, 405
 Kiss, The, by Anton Tchekhoff, 224
 Kleeberg (Clotilde), pianist, death, 207
 Known to the Police, by T. Holmes, 372
 Kodaikanal Observatory: Report, 534; Bulletins, 652
 Konody (P. G.), National Gallery, Parts I.-VI., 322; Vol. I., 652
 Kotze (Stephen von), author, death, 499
 Kreisler (Herr), violin recital, 326
 Kronberg (Louis), exhibition, 536
 Kruse (Georg), dramatist, death, 52
 Kubelik, violin recital, 738
 Künstler, Allgemeines Lexikon der bildenden, by Thieme and Becker, Vol. II., 652
 Kuropatkin, Russian Army and Japanese War, 527
 Kurz (Selma), concert, 355
 Kursewitzky (Sergei), orchestral concerts, 595, 655
 Lacoste (Major de B. de), Around Afghanistan, 700
 Ladies Fair and Frail, by Horace Bleackley, 369
 Lady Letty Brandon, by Annie E. Holdsworth, 127
 Lafontaine (H. Cart de), The King's Musick, 682
 Lake (E. D. C.), Select Epigrams of Martial, 9
 Lamb (C. and M.), Works in Prose and Verse, ed. Hutchinson, 71, 289
 Lanciani (R.) on Archæological Budget of Rome, 141, 324
 Land of Mosques and Minarets, by Miltoun, 613
 Landscapes at Society of Painters in Water Colours, 49
 Lane (Elinor Macartney), novelist, death, 442
 Lane (Mrs. John), Anatole France's Balthazar, 434
 Lang (Andrew): The Maid of France, 248; on sex-totems in England, 494; on Jeanne d'Arc in English Chronicles, 673; Sir G. Mackenzie, 695
 Lang (E. M.), Lepelletier's Paul Verlaine, 558
 Lang (John Marshall), Chancellor of Aberdeen University, death, 562
 Lang (Matheson) as Hamlet, 355
 Lang (Wm. H.), The Thunder of the Hoofs, 193
 Langen (Albert), founder of Simplicissimus, death, 562
 Langton (H. H.), Historical Publications relating to Canada, 528
 Language, Introduction to Natural History of, by Tucker, 192
 Last Persecution, by S. N. Sedgwick, 433
 Latin Delectus, by Thomas and Doughty, Book I., 162
 Latin Prose Composition, by W. R. Hardie, 10
 Latins in the Levant, by Wm. Miller, 94
 La Touche (Maria), Letters of a Noble Woman, ed. Marg. F. Young, 6
 Launay (L. de), World's Gold, tr. Williams, 202
 Launspach (C. W. L.), State and Family in Early Rome, 193
 Laurens (Jean Paul) elected R.A., 142
 Laurie (Prof. Simon S.), educationist, death, 201
 Lauristoun (P.), The Painted Mountain, 435
 Lauzun, Courtier and Adventurer, by Sanders, 578
 Law (Arthur), Artful Miss Dearing, 475
 Law Merchant, Select Cases concerning, by Gross, Vol. I., 194
 Lawrence (C. E.), Much Ado about Something, 612
 Laws (E.), Church Book of St. Mary, Tenby, 222
 Lawton (F.), The Third French Republic, 582
 Layard (G. Somes), Wax, 493
 Leach (A. F.) on Milton as schoolmaster, 19
 Leadam (I. S.), Political History of England, Vol. IX., 668
 Leathes (S.), Cambridge Modern History, Vol. XI., 367
 Le Blond (Mrs. Aubrey), Mountaineering in the Land of the Midnight Sun, 700
 Lecky (W. E. H.), Historical Essays, 98
 Le Couteux (Lionel), etcher, death, 505
 Lee (Albert), A King's Treachery, 436
 Lee (Elizabeth): School History of English Literature, 70; Maspero's New Light on Ancient Egypt, 98
 Lee (Sidney): on Shakespeare Quartos, 14, 73; on Charlotte Brontë in London, 134; Shakespeare and Modern Stage in German, 300
 Lee (Vernon), Limbo and other Essays, 129, 229
 Lees (F.), A Summer in Touraine, 582
 Leftwich (Ralph) on Shakespeare Memorial, 409
 Lehmann (R. C.), Light and Shade, 671
 Leighton (Frederic, Lord), 'Death of Brunelleschi' purchased, 765
 Leighton (Marie Connor), Money, 436
 Leinster School of Music, annual concert, 23
 Leland (J.), Itinerary, ed. Toulmin Smith, Parts VII.-VIII., 254, 291, 319
 Lemaître (J.), Jean Jacques Rousseau, 160
 Leonevallo: Pagliacci—production of 'Zaza,' 568
 Lepeke (Prof. Ferdinand), sculptor, death, 385
 Lepelletier (E.), Paul Verlaine, tr. E. M. Lang, 558
 Lettering: and Writing, by P. I. Smith, 21; Grammar of, by A. W. Lyons, 21
 Letters of a Noble Woman (Mrs. La Touche), ed. Marg. F. Young, 6
 Letter-Writers, Great English, by Dawson, 288
 Levant, Latins in, by Wm. Miller, 94
 Level (Maurice), The Grip of Fear, 371
 Leveller, The, by Alexander McArthur, 556
 Lewis (David), Temperance writer, death, 499
 Lewis (G.), St. Bernard on Consideration, 343
 Lewis (J. and M. Hardwicke), Geneva, 374
 Liber Exemplorum, ed. A. G. Little, 130
 Libraries: Copenhagen, 132; Welsh National, 163
 Library, January, 196; April, 558
 Liddell (Hodgson), pictures of China, 383
 Light and Shade, by R. C. Lehmann, 671
 Light o' Love, by Valentine Williams, 627
 Limbo and other Essays, by Vernon Lee, 129, 229
 Limerick Technical Education School, 20
 Lincoln's Inn, Arabic autograph at, 198
 Lindsay (A. B.), Kuropatkin's Russian Army, 527
 Linguistic Survey of India: Rajasthani and Gujarati, 523
 Links in the Chain, by Headon Hill, 284
 Linnean Society: 20, 172, 231, 293, 351; Miss S. Longman on "Dry-Rot" of Potatoes, 381; Dr. Marie Stopes on Plant Petrifications from Japan, 469; 621; Annual Meeting, 705; 733, 762
 Lippmann (F. W.), National Gallery, Parts I.-VI., 322; Vol. I., 652
 Literary Year-Book, 131
 Literature: Readings in English L., 1780-1880, and Story of English L., ed. Edmunds and Spooner—School History of English L., by Eliz. Lee, 70; Secrets of our National L., by W. P. Courtney, 158; Spanish L., by Fitzmaurice-Kelly, 338
 Littérature féminine d'aujourd'hui, by Bertaut, 438
 Little (A. G.), Liber Exemplorum, 130
 Little (Miss L. M.), poet, death, 588
 Little Devil Doubt, by Oliver Onions, 493
 Little Green World, by J. E. Buckrose, 726
 Little People, by Richard Whiteing, 100
 Little Red Riding Hood at Lyceum, 23
 Liver, Common Affections of, by Hale White, 46
 Livermore (Edith), Neumann's Recollections of Wagner, 710
 Lloyd (E. M.), Review of History of Infantry, 128
 Lloyd (W. A. C.), Vincenzo Bellini, 299
 Lobban (J. H.), Hazlitt's Characters of Shakespeare's Plays, and Cobbett's Rural Rides, 70
 Loch (James), Brougham's Letters to, 288
 Locke (William J.), Septimus, 193
 Lodge (A.), Differential Calculus for Beginners, 78
 Lodge (R. B.), Bird-Hunting through Wild Europe, 167
 Lodge's Peerage, 72
 Loeb Collection of Arretine Pottery, by Chase, 415
 Logan (Olive), novelist, death, 588
 Lohmeyer (Karl), historian, death, 675
 Lollards and Wycliffe, by Carrick, 315
 London: Gilds and Companies of, by Unwin, 125; Songs of, by Furst, 286; Private Palaces of, by Chancellor, 494; Passed and Passing, by Fletcher—Wanderings in Piccadilly, by Chancellor, 495; Adventures in, by Douglas, 672
 London Chamber Concert Association, 235, 355
 London Choral Society, 175, 385
 London Directory, Post Office, 72
 London Library, copy of 'The Wartburg,' 409

- London Marching Watch, Mountgomerye on, 586, 673
 London Shakespeare Commemoration League, 561
 London Symphony Concerts, 231, 326, 385, 473
 London Visions, by Laurence Binyon, 285
 Long (R. E. C.), Tchekhoff's Kiss, 224
 Long Arm, by E. Phillips Oppenheim, 127
 Longitudes, Bureau des, Annuaire, 1909, 108
 Lordlings and atheists, Vaughan's repartee, 104
 Lorenzo the Magnificent, by Horsburgh, 344
 Lorient le Fort (Percival de), geologist, death, 232
 Lost Land of King Arthur, by Walters, 613
 Loti (Pierre), La Mort de Philæ, 161
 Louis XIV., Mémoires sur la Cour de, by Visconti, 162
 Louise, by Charpentier, at Covent Garden, 766
 Louvre, acquisitions, 567; Chauchard legacy, 708
 Lovat (Simon Fraser, Lord), by Mackenzie, 282
 Love and Battles, by Frank Sidgwick, 556
 Love-Brokers, The, by Albert Kinross, 726
 Love Letters of Carlyle and Jane Welsh, 553
 Love Story of St. Bel, by Bernard Capes, 493
 Love Tale of a Misanthrope, by E. M. Forbes, 615
 Love Watches, by Gladys Unger, 595
 Low (Will H.), A Chronicle of Friendships, 125
 Lowndes (Mrs. Belloc), Studies in Wives, 727
 Luckock (Dean H. M.), death, 377
 Lucy (H. W.), Sixty Years in Wilderness, 462, 588
 Luganda, St. Mark's Gospel in, tr. Clayton, 407
 Luk-Oie (Ole), The Green Curve, 727
 Lumasaba Grammar, Manual of, by Purvis, 407
 Lunge (G.), Technical Methods of Chemical Analysis, Vol. I., 168
 Lure of Eve, by Edith M. Moore, 371
 Lure of the Mask, by H. MacGrath, 556
 Luttrell Family and Dunster, by Maxwell Lyte, 609
 Lützow (Count), Life and Times of John Hus, 666
 Lydekker (R.): Game Animals of Africa, 47; Sportsman's British Bird Book, 676, 706
 Lyly (J.), Maydes Metamorphosis, 144
 Lynn (W. T.): on Villon and Job, 347; on Day-light-Saving Bill, 501; on eclipse of the sun in 364, 733
 Lyons (A. W.), Grammar of Lettering, 21
 Lyrics, A Few, by Miss L. Alma Tadema, 671
 Lyte (Sir H. C. Maxwell), History of Dunster, 609
 Lytton (Hon. Neville), picture exhibition, 653
 Maartens (Maarten), Brothers All, 435
 McArthur (Alexander), The Leveller, 556
 Macartney (Mervyn), English Houses and Gardens, 470
 Macaulay (R.), The Secret River, 404
 McCarthy (Justin), Julian Revelstone, 250
 McClintock (Sir Leopold), Life by Markham, 410
 MacColl (H.), Man's Origin, Destiny, and Duty, 755
 McCord (George Herbert), artist, death, 505
 MacDonald (Frederika), Humane Philosophy of Rousseau, 160; Iliad of the East, 344
 MacDonald (George), The Portent, 223
 MacDonald (Sir John A.), by Parkin, 524
 MacDonald (Ronald), The Chief of Staff, 207
 Macfadyen (Allan), Cell as Unit of Life, 170
 MacGrath (Harold), The Lure of the Mask, 556
 Mackall (J. W.): Æneid of Virgil, 462; Springs of Helicon, 640
 Mackennal (B.) elected A.R.A., 142
 Mackenzie (Sir George), King's Advocate, by Lang, 695
 Mackenzie (W. C.), Simon Fraser, Lord Lovat, 282
 McKie (Thomas), friend of Carlyle, death, 17
 Maclaren (Ian), Life by Robertson Nicoll, 220
 MacLaughlan (D. S.), etchings, 140
 Maclean (A. M.), performance of 'Annunciation,' 234
 McLean's Galleries, exhibition of pictures, 324
 McManus (Blanche), In the Land of Mosques, 613
 Macmillan's Sevenpenny Library, 615
 Macmillan (Francis), violin recital, 474
 Macnamara (N. C.), Human Speech, 78
 Macnamara (Rachel S.), The Sibyl of Venice, 96
 McNeill (Peter), Tranent historian, gift to, 349
 Madras Observatory, Report, 534
 Magic, Semitic, by R. Campbell Thompson, 638
 Magnificat, by Vincent Brown, 371
 Magnus (Leonard A.), Friedländer's Roman Life and Manners, 616
 Mahan (Capt. A. T.), Naval Administration and Warfare, 11
 Mahrenholtz (Richard), historian, death, 378
 Mahlab (B. C.), Impressions of European Tour, 71
 Mainwaring (A. E.), Royal Dublin Fusiliers in South African War, 128
 Mair (A. W.), Hesiod, Poems and Fragments, 461
 Mairet (Jeanne), Lemaître's J. J. Rousseau, 160
 Makower (Stanley V.), Richard Savage, 637
 Malmesbury (Susan, Countess of), Life of Sir J. Ardagh, 693
 Malta, Prehistoric Antiquities of, 503
 Maltby (Arthur), Inez the King's Page, 556
 Man, Childhood of, by Frobenius, 697
 Manchester Art Gallery, Spring Exhibition, 473
 Mangan (J. Clarence), bust in Dublin, 531, 618
 Mann (Alexander), memorial exhibition, 624
 Manns (August) and the Saturday Concerts, by Saxe Wyndham, 386
 Man's Origin, Destiny, and Duty, by MacColl, 755
 Mantle of Ishmael, by J. S. Fletcher, 555
 Mantzius (K.), History of Theatrical Art, Vol. V., 474
 Marcia, by Marguerite Curtis, 751
 Marett (R. R.), The Threshold of Religion, 259
 Margery Pigeon, by Jane Wardle, 436
 Mariner of England, ed. Spencer Childers, 339
 Markham (Sir Clements): Life of Lazarillo de Tormes, 6; Life of Sir L. McClintock, 410
 Marks (Alfred), Tyburn Tree: its History, 494
 Marks (Jeannette), English Pastoral Drama, 23
 Marni (J.), L'une et l'autre, 434
 Marquiset (A.), Une Merveilleuse, 431
 Marriott (C.): A Spanish Holiday, 405; When a Woman Woos, 525
 Marriott (J. A. R.), Remaking of Modern Europe, 70
 Marsh (Richard), The Interrupted Kiss, 220
 Martial: Select Epigrams, ed. Bridge and Lake, 9; Selected Epigrams, ed. Post, 71
 Martucci (Giuseppe), composer, death, 767
 Mason (A. E. W.), Col. Smith, 538
 Mason (Arthur J.), Memoir of Bp. Wilkinson, 580
 Maspero (G.), New Light on Ancient Egypt, 98
 Massenot (J. E. F.), Jongleur de Notre-Dame, 23
 Massey (Gerald), Ancient Egypt the Light of the World, 72
 Massingham (H. W.) on Duty of the Press, 134
 Master-Builder, by Ibsen, 426
 Masters, Six, in Disillusion, by Thorold, 431
 Mater (A.), Le Socialisme conservateur, 528
 Mathematical Society, 108, 232, 351, 534, 622, 734
 Matheson (Annie), Songs of Love and Praise, 373
 Mathilde, by Adolphus A. Jack, 51
 Matkowsky (Adalbert), actor, death, 388
 Matteo da Campione, new facts, 326
 Mau (August), archaeologist, death, 354
 Maugham (W. Somerset), Penelope, 83; The Noble Spaniard, 386
 Maunder (A. S. D. and E. W.), Heavens and their Story, 444
 Maunsell (B. A. Lloyd), The Apostate, 436
 Maxwell (Sir Herbert), Scottish Gardens, 412
 Mayne (Ethel C.), Enchanters of Men, 583
 Mayne (John), Journal of, ed. Colles, 583
 Mayne (Rutherford), The Gomeril, 570
 Mayo (C. H.): on seal of Dorchester, 101; Municipal Records of Dorchester, 667
 Meadows (Alice M.), The Dukedom of Portsea, 433
 Medici Popes, by H. M. Vaughan, 225
 Medici Society publications, 594, 709
 Mee (Arthur): Heavens at a Glance, 47; Story of the Telescope, 204
 Meg of the Salt-Pans, by May Aldington, 5670
 Meier-Graefe (Julius), Modern Art, 204
 Meinertzhagen (G.), From Ploughshare to Parliament, 98
 Melbourne Observatory, Forty-First Report, 352
 Mellors (R.), In and about Nottinghamshire, 615
 Member for Easterby, by J. Blyth, 461
 Memorials of Old Essex, ed. Kelway, 314, 349
 Memories, Old and Odd, by L. A. Tollemache, 5
 Memories of my Spare Time, by Sir H. Brackenbury, 644
 Mendelssohn: Centenary Concerts, 51, 174; 'Elijah' and 'The Tempest,' 175; correspondence with Klingemann, 419; Festival at Crystal Palace, 766
 Mendès (Catulle), poet, death, 197
 Men of Latitude, 17th Century, by George, 372
 Mérat (Albert), poet and librarian, death, 106
 Mercer (W.) on F. Marion Crawford, 465
 Mercers' Company Lectures on Fluids of the Body, by Starling, 649
 Meredith (George): death, 617, 645; on reviews, 619; on being photographed, 646; copyright in his letters, 730
 Méricée (Prosper), portrait presented to Musée Carnavalet, 174
 Merrick (G. B.), Old Times on Upper Mississippi, 495
 Merrill (Selah), Ancient Jerusalem, 706
 Merritt (Anna L.), An Artist's Garden, 231
 Merry Devil, by J. B. Fagan, 711
 Merry Heart, by F. A. Swinnerton, 340
 Merveilleuse, Une: Madame Hamelin, by Marquiset, 431
 Mesdag (Madame Sientje), painter, death, 385
 Message, by A. J. Dawson, 345
 Messel (Alfred), architect, death, 418
 Meteorological Society: Annual Meeting, 137; Mr. E. Mawley on Phenological Observations for 1908, 260; Dr. V. Cornish on Wind Waves in Water, Sand, and Snow, 381; Mr. B. Latham on Percolation and Evaporation, 533; 651, 762
 Meteorology in Antarctic Expedition, 500
 Metzger (E.), Zur Betonung der lateinisch-romanischen Wörter im Neuenenglischen, 373
 Mévil (A.), De la Paix de Francfort à la Conférence d'Algésiras, 642
 Meyerbeer's Huguenots, 767
 Michel (François Émile), art-writer, death, 654
 Michelangelo, Vie de, by E. Rolland, 21
 Microscopical Society: admission of women, 107; Annual Meeting, 203; 321, 413, 563 678
 Middle Ages, Arts and Crafts in, by Addison, 21
 Midnight Sun, Mountaineering in Land of, by Le Blond, 700
 Mikkelsen (E.), Conquering the Arctic Ice, 320
 Milburn (Sir John D.), picture sale, 737
 Military Needs and Military Policy, by Arnold-Forster, 337
 Miller (Wm.), Latins in the Levant, 94
 Milman (Lena), Sir Christopher Wren, 415
 Milton (J.): portrait by C. Janssen, 81; first edition of 'Paradise Lost,' 617
 Milton Tercentenary: papers at British Academy, 18; exhibition in New York, 77
 Miltoun (Francis), In the Land of Mosques, 613
 Mind and its Disorders, by Stoddart, 169
 Mineral Kingdom, by Brauns, Part I., 533
 Mines and Minerals of British Empire, by Stokes, 135
 Miniature of Charles I. missing, 679
 Miniatures of 16th, 17th, and 18th centuries, 735
 Mims (E. H.), Brückner's Literary History of Russia, 66
 Minot (C. S.), Problem of Age, Growth, and Death, 169
 Minstrelsy of Isis, selected by Firth, 249
 Minstrelsy of Scottish Border, ed. Noyes, 41
 Minto (John) on Boswell's 'Dorando,' 529
 Miracle, The, by Antrim Oriel, 38
 Mississippi, Upper, Old Times on, by Merrick, 495
 Miss Pilsbury's Fortune, by C. R. Shand, 727
 Mr. Opp, by Alice H. Rice, 612
 Mr. Preedy and the Countess, by Carton, 506
 Mistral, monument at Arles, 675
 Mitchell (Donald G.), "Ik Marvel," death, 46
 Mitchell's Newspaper Press Directory, 289
 Mithraic statuette from Asia Minor, 736
 Mitton (Fernand), Tortures et Supplices, 289
 Mitton (G. E.), Englishwoman's Year-Book, 163
 Modernism and Romance, by Scott-James, 129
 Modern Language Association, annual meeting, 103
 Moffat (E. B.), John Broome's Wife, 284
 Mogador, la (Comtesse de Chabrilan), death, 258
 Mohun Family and Dunster, by Maxwell Lyte, 609
 Molesworth (Major P. B.), astronomer, death, 47
 Molière's 'Œuvres,' 1773, high price for, 531
 Molloy (James L.), song composer, death, 207
 Molnár (Francis), The Devil, 507
 Money, by Marie Connor Leighton, 436
 Mongols in Russia, by Curtin, 750
 Monleone (D.), Cavalleria Rusticana, 595
 Monna Vanna, by Février, at Paris Opéra, 83
 Monroe (W. S.), In Viking Land, 614
 Montaigne, Essayes of, ed. Seecombe, 226
 Montez (Lola), by E. B. d'Auvergne, 672
 Moody (C. H.), Selby Abbey, 222
 Moore (Decima), We Two in West Africa, 614
 Moore (Edith Mary), The Lure of Eve, 371
 Moore (F. Frankfort): Georgian Pageant, 489; Priscilla and Charybdis, 555
 Moorhouse (E. Hallam), Samuel Pepys, 610
 Moral Ideas, Origin and Development, by Westermarck, Vol. II., 399
 More (Paul E.), Shelburne Essays, 67
 More Bunkum, by Frank Richardson, 727
 Morocco: In M. with General d'Amade, by Rankin, 12
 Morrison (Arthur), Green Ginger, 435
 Mort de Philæ, by Pierre Loti, 161
 Mosques and Minarets, In Land of, by Miltoun, 613
 Motor-Car, Woman and, by Dorothy Levitt, 406
 Motor-Flight through France, by Edith Wharton, 160
 Motor Tours in Yorkshire, by Mrs. Stawell, 612
 Motteroz (Claude), printer, death, 731
 Moul (Alfred), Psyche, ballet, 447
 Moule (H. C. G.), Gospel in Old Testament, 139
 Mountaineering in the Land of the Midnight Sun, by Mrs. A. Le Blond, 700
 Mountgomerye (J.) and London Marching Watch, 586, 673
 Mozart: early harpsichord concertos, 327; Commemoration in Hickford's Great Room, 595; 'Magic Flute' at the Opéra Comique, 710
 Mozley (L. B.) on George Stanley, 385
 M. S. Journal, Indian medical monthly, 204
 Much Ado about Something, by Lawrence, 612
 Mummery (A. F.), My Climbs in the Alps and Caucasus, 225
 Munro (W. B.), Government of European Cities, 558
 Murat (Joachim): Lettres et Documents, Vol. II., 129; by Weil, Vol. II., 642
 Murray (David), Rhind Lectures, 419
 Murray (Gilbert), Frogs of Aristophanes, 10
 Murray (Sir J. A. H.), New Eng. Dict.: Premises—Prophesies, 218
 Murray's Handbook of Travel-Talk, 755
 Mury (Auguste), artist, death, 82
 Music: ancient Irish, 83; History of English Cathedral, by Bumpus, 206; King's Musick, by Cart de Lafontaine, 682
 Musical Form, Analysis of Evolution of, by Margaret H. Glyn, 537
 Musical Instruments, English and Irish, by Armstrong, 23

- Musicians, Incorporated Society of, Conference in London, 51
- Music Loan Exhibition at Fishmongers' Hall, Illustrated Catalogue, 682
- My Lady of Shadows, by John Oxenham, 403
- My Restless Life, by H. de Windt, 406
- Mystery of Frances Farrington, by Banks, 612
- Mystery of the Myrtles, by Edgar Jepson, 436
- Myths of the Norsemen, by Guerber, 344
- Nandi, Language and Folk-lore, by Hollis, 697
- Napier (Rosamond), Heart of a Gypsy, 371
- Napoleon: and his Fellow Travellers, by Shorter, 40; Joachim Murat, by Weil, Vol. II., 612
- Narkissos, by W., 670
- National Gallery: additions, 22, 174, 418, 765; Van Dyck at, 265; Antonello da Messina at, 266; Holbein's 'Christina, Duchess of Milan'—Annual Report, 707
- National Gallery, ed. Konody, Broekwell, and Lippmann, Parts I.-VI., 322; Vol. I., 652; by Alice Corkran, 323
- National Gallery of British Art, acquisitions, 324. See Tate Gallery.
- National Gallery of Ireland, additions, 536
- Native Life in East Africa, by Weule, 620
- Nautical Almanac for 1912, 734
- Naval Administration and Warfare, by Mahan, 11
- Naval Annual, ed. T. A. Brasse, 615
- Navy, Inner Life of, by L. Yexley, 750
- Naylor (Dr. E. W.), The Angelus, first performance, 142
- Nehring (Wladyslaw), Polish scholar, death, 166
- Nesbit (E.): Daphne in Fitzroy Street, 340; These Little Ones, 585
- Neumann (Angelo), Personal Recollections of Wagner, 710
- Newmayer (Georg von), meteorologist, death, 706
- New (Edmund Hort), Towers of Oxford, 173
- Newall (H. E.) appointed Professor of Astrophysics at Cambridge, 734
- New Andromeda, by Carlton Dawe, 193
- Newbolt (Henry), The New June, 403
- New English Dictionary: Premisal—Prophesier, 218
- New Gallery, Spring Exhibition, 502
- New June, by Henry Newbolt, 403
- Newspaper Gazetteer, by Vickers, 255
- Newspaper Press Directory, 289
- New Symphony Orchestra, 385, 474, 710
- Newte (Horace W. C.), Sparrows, 341
- New Testament. See Bible.
- New Zealand, by Reginald Horsley, 11
- Nicholson (R. A.), The Bleeding Heart, poem, 163
- Nicoll (W. Robertson), Life of Ian Maclaren, 220
- Niecks (Prof.) on Musical Terminology, 51
- Nineteenth century French and Dutch pictures, 707
- Nineteenth Century Teachers, by Wedgwood, 723
- Nisbet (John), Evelyn's Sylva, 411
- Noailles (Marquis de), author, death, 229
- Nobilities of Europe, by Marquis de Ruigny, 437
- Noble (Percy), Anne Seymour Damer, 31
- Noble Spaniard, by W. Somerset Maugham, 386
- Noblesse Oblige, by M. E. Francis, 433
- Nonjurors, documents concerning, 559
- Norcross (Emily D.), art-teacher, death, 473
- Nordica (Madame), recital, 682
- Norfolk, by W. A. Dutt, 676
- Normand (Alfred), architect, death, 326
- Norris (W. E.), The Perjurer, 669
- Norsemen, Myths of, by Guerber, 344
- North (Laurence), Syrinx, 433
- Northcote (Lady Rosalind), Devon, 130
- North Staffordshire District Choral Society in Delius's 'Mass of Life,' 710
- Norton (Lord), Life of, by Childe-Pemberton, 195
- Norton (Prof.) gives Chaucer portrait to Harvard, 77
- Notes by the Way, by John Collins Francis, 754
- Nottinghamshire, In and about, by Mellors, 615
- Nouvelles, Les, new daily, 17
- Novels: The Author on sevenpenny, 442; republished without intimation, 703; Mr. Heinemann on six-shilling, 759
- Noyes (A.), Scott's Minstrelsy of Scottish Border, 41
- Nubia: Temples of N.—Monuments of Sudanese N., by Breasted, 97
- Numismatic Society, British: Miss Helen Farquhar on Portraiture of Stuart Monarchs, 137; Mr. W. J. Andrew on the Reign of Stephen, 293; Mr. J. B. Caldecott on Stock Exchange Medals, 413; Mr. Shirley Fox on Mediæval Numismatics, 564; Mr. L. A. Lawrence on Alphabets used on English Coins, 705
- Numismatic Society, Royal: Mr. J. G. Milne on Lead Tokens of Roman Times, 20; Mr. W. J. Hocking on Simon's Dies, 136, 260; Mr. F. A. Walters on Edward IV.'s Coinage, 330, 502; Rev. A. W. Hands on Phœnician Drachm with Name of Iahve, 651; Annual Meeting, 762
- Nutt (Alfred) on Whitley Stokes, 529
- Nydegger (Hans), Swiss novelist, death, 620
- Nyst (Ray), La Caverne, 581
- Obermer (Seymour), House of Bondage, 355
- Observatory, Companion to, 21
- Odds and Ends, by R. Montagu Tabor, 671
- Oh! Christina, by J. J. Bell, 528
- O'Kelly (Seumas), The Shuiler's Child, 570
- Old Home, by Gerard Benall, 581
- Old Man in the Corner, by Baroness Orczy, 585
- Oldmeadow (Ernest), Apollonius of Tyana, 701
- Old Testament. See Bible.
- Olive in Italy, by Moray Dalton, 556
- Olive Latimer's Husband, by Rudolf Besler, 111
- Omar and the FitzGerald Centenary, 440
- Omnia Somnia, poem by R. M. Watson, 439
- O'Neill (Mrs.), Defoe's Memoirs of a Cavalier, 70
- One Immortality, by H. Fielding Hall, 220
- One Never Knows, by F. C. Philips, 612, 703
- One of the Best, by Hicks and Edwardes, 569
- Onions (Oliver), Little Devil Doubt, 493
- Opera: 'The Ring' in English, 111, 142; Die Meistersinger—Dr. Naylor's 'Angelus,' 142. Summer Season: Samson et Dalila, 537, 625; Faust, 537, 682; Madama Butterfly, 537; Die Walküre—Pagliacci — Traviata — Lucia — Leonecavallo's 'Zaza,' 568; Monleone's 'Cavalleria Rusticana,' 595; Armide—Rigoletto, 625; Pelléas et Mélisande—La Tosca, 654; La Sonnambula—Il Barbiere—Otello, 682; Charpentier's 'Louise,' 766; Huguenots, 767
- Oppenheim (E. Phillips), The Long Arm, 127
- Orchestration, Modern, Evolution of, by Coerne, 50
- Orczy (Baroness), Old Man in the Corner, 585
- Ordnance Survey maps: Colchester, 589
- Oriel (Antrim), The Miracle, 38
- Oriental Crime, by H. L. Adam, 315
- Orieton (Ade de), Registrum, 1317-27, 437
- Osborn (G.), Elementary Algebra, 78
- Osler (W.) on Gui Patin and 'Religio Medici,' 347
- Ospovat (Henry), works by, 205
- Osthoff (Hermann), philologist, death, 620
- Other Things than Love, by Handasyde, 581
- Our Adversary, by M. E. Braddon, 555
- Oxenham (John), My Lady of Shadows, 403
- Oxford: in the Eighteenth Century, by Godley, 65; letter-book c. 1380, 105; Minstrelsy of Isis, by Firth, 249; number of students, 258; performance of 'The Frogs,' 267; Pre-Tractarian, by Tuckwell, 309, 347
- Oxford Congress of Religions, Transactions, 665, 703
- Oxford Lectures on Poetry, by Bradley, 721
- Oxford Notes, 345, 755
- Oxford Towers, by E. H. New, 173
- Oxford Tutor (Thomas Short), by Edwards, 369
- Oxford University Observatory, papers by, 204
- Oxyrhynchus Papyri, Part VI., 368
- Paderewski, concert, 655
- Pæstum, by Alex. Blair Thaw, 671
- Page (Gertrude), The Silent Rancher, 751
- Page (Wm.), Victoria History of Shropshire, Vol. I., 190
- Pageants: English Church—Colchester, 729
- Pain (Barry), The Gifted Family, 250
- Painted Mountain, by P. Lauristoun, 435
- Painter-Etchers and Engravers, Royal Society of: elections, 110, 206; exhibition, 295
- Painters: reprint of Smith's 'Catalogue Raisonné,' 296
- Painters, Roman, Quartette of, 110
- Painters in Water Colours, Society of, Landscape Exhibition, 49
- Painting: Art Treasures of London, by Stokes, 322, 416
- Painting in Italy, History, by Crowe and Cavalcaselle, Vol. III., 262, 294
- Palaces, Private, of London, by Chancellor, 494
- Palestine: Out-of-Doors in Holy Land, by Van Dyke, 100
- Palmer (W.), Hazell's Annual, 72
- Palmyra, From Damascus to, by Kelman, 492
- Pantomimes, 23
- Panton (J. E.) on appropriating book-titles, 586
- Paris: Notes, 255; Walks in, by Georges Cain, 583; municipal art purchases, 765
- Parish Registers, Ancient, Key to, by Burke, 131
- Parish Register Society of Dublin, 166
- Parker (E. H.), Ancient China Simplified, 39
- Parker (Eric), Highways and Byways in Surrey, 158
- Parker (John), The Green-Room Book, 569
- Parkin (G. R.), Sir John A. Macdonald, 524
- Parliamentary Papers, 17, 46, 77, 106, 134, 204, 229, 258, 261, 291, 349, 378, 409, 442, 444, 467, 499, 502, 531, 562, 620, 622, 648, 675, 703, 706, 731, 734, 759
- Parr (Dr. S.) and Dr. Uri, 317
- Passage (Comte du), sculptor, death, 298
- Pastel Society exhibition, 765
- Paston (George), 'Tilda's New Hat, 143
- Paterson (Miss Emily), water-colours, 324
- Patin (Gui) on 'Religio Medici,' 347
- Paul (Sir J. Balfour), Scots Peerage, Vol. VI., 754
- Payen-Payne (De V.), Balzac's Médecin de Campagne, 71
- Peard (Frances M.), The Flying Months, 581
- Peddle (R. A.) on old novels republished, 703
- Peerages: Burke—Lodge—Debrett, 72
- Pemberton (Max), The Show Girl, 526
- Pencil Society, exhibition, 565
- Pendered (Vaughan), Railway Locomotive, 589
- Penelope, by W. Somerset Maugham, 83
- Penelope Ann, by J. Henry Harris, 727
- Pennell (E. R. and J.), Life of J. McNeill Whistler, 205
- Peoples, World's, by A. H. Keane, 676
- Pepys (S.), by E. Hallam Moorhouse, 610
- Perjurer, The, by W. E. Norris, 669
- Perrachon (André), flower painter, death, 82
- Perrin (Alice), Idolatry, 250
- Pescl (Ugo), Italian journalist, death, 17
- Peter Homunculus, by Gilbert Cannan, 612
- Peter Pan's Postbag, by Pauline Chase, 13
- Peter Vandy, by Edwin Pugh, 580
- Petrels, Monograph of, by Godman, Parts I.-II., 532
- Pettie (John), R.A., by Martin Hardie, 130
- Philharmonic Society: Mendelssohn Concert, 174; Concerts, 299, 626
- Philip (Alex. J.), Dickens Dictionary, 458
- Philip and Two English Queens, by M. Hume, 194
- Philips (F. C.), One Never Knows, 612, 703
- Phillpotts (Eden): The Three Brothers, 490; sonnet on Swinburne, 496
- Philological Society: Prof. Weekley on Anglo-Romance Etymologies—Prof. Skeat on Kersey and Linsey, 107; Mr. J. Hodgkin on Phrases in 'Book of St. Albans,' 232; Mr. L. C. Wharton on Lithuanian Lord's Prayer, 321; Dr. Bradley on S Words, 469; Sir James Murray on P Words, 651; Prof. Weekley on Anglo-French Etymologies, 733
- Philosophy: Development of Greek, by Adamson, 311; of Gassendi, by Brett, 344
- Photographic Society of Great Britain, 326
- Physical Society: Annual Meeting, 261; 321, 381, 469, 564, 678, 763
- Piccadilly, Mayfair, and Pall Mall, Wanderings in, by E. Beresford Chancellor, 495
- Picture Gallery, new, at the Vatican, 49, 297
- Picture-Making, Notes on Science of, by Holmes, 414, 446
- Pigou (A. C.), The Problem of Theism, 251
- Pike (Oliver G.), Behind the Veil in Birdland, 649
- Pilgrims' March, by H. H. Bashford, 313
- Pinner (Adolf), chemist, death, 678
- Piozzi (Mrs.), tablet to, 531
- Pipe (Hannah E.), Life, by Stoddart, 68
- Pippa Passes, illus. Brickdale, 140; at Fortune Playhouse, 143
- Pischel (Richard), Sanskrit scholar, death, 46
- Playboy of the Western World, by Synge, 712
- Plays of our Forefathers, by C. Mills Gayley, 448
- Ploughshare to Parliament: Potters of Tadcaster, by G. Meinertzhagen, 98
- Plunket (Emmeline M.), Judgment of Paris Astronomically Considered, 589
- Pluralistic Universe, by Wm. James, 577
- Podmore (C. T.), The Fault, 341
- Poe (E. A.), Poetical Works, ed. Johnson, 438
- Poems: Selected, by Francis Thompson, 37; Representative English, ed. Brett, 70; Nine Spanish, ed. Arteaga, 226; by A. C. Benson—by J. Griffyth Fairfax, 285; by Dr. R. W. Dixon, 670; in Dorset Dialect, by Barnes, 755
- Poetry: Post-Augustan, by H. E. Butler, 462; English P. from Chaucer to Milton, by Mackail, 640; Oxford Lectures on, by Bradley, 721
- Poets, Italian, before Dante, tr. Rossetti, 313
- Poiré (E.), Caran d'Ache, caricaturist, death, 297
- Polar Continent, In Search of, by Harrison, 439
- Polar North, People of, by Rasmussen, 18
- Political History of England: Vol. IX., by Leadam, 668
- Pollard (A. W.) on Shakespeare Quartos, 43
- Pomp and Circumstance, by D. Gerard, 494
- Pond (C.), Trois Monologues, 617
- Pontifical Services, ed. Riley, Vol. IV., 344
- Pools of Silence, by H. de V. Stacpoole, 751
- Poor Law Report, by Mrs. Bosanquet—Break-up of Poor Law, by Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Webb, 286
- Popes, Medici, by H. M. Vaughan, 225
- Porritt (Edward and Annie G.), The Unreformed House of Commons, 495
- Portent, The, by George MacDonald, 223
- Portrait Painters, Modern Society of, 233
- Portraits: Caxton Head Catalogue, by Tregaskis, 21; Early English P. at the Burlington Club, 471
- Portuguese, Readership in, Manchester University, 166
- Post (Edwin), Selected Epigrams of Martial, 71
- Post Office London Directory, 72
- Potemkin, Revolt of, by Feldmann, 196
- Potters of Tadcaster, Memoir by G. Meinertzhagen, 98
- Pottery, Arretine, Loeb Collection, by Chase, 415
- Pottle (Emery), Handicapped, 38
- Powell (F. E.), Hebrew Prophets for English Readers, Vol. I., 252
- Powell (F. York), Scandinavian Britain, 373
- Powell (W.) on the Variorum Shakespeare, 712
- Pownall (C. A. W.), Thomas Pownall, M.P., 283
- Pownall (T.) of Massachusetts, by C. A. W. Pownall, 283
- Poyntz (Sydnam), Relation, ed. Goodrick, 131

Pranishnikoff (Ivan), painter, death, 709
 Prayer Book, tr. into Saa, Ulawa, and Lengua, 407
 Press: H. W. Massingham on its duty, 132;
 Edinburgh Periodical, by Couper, 753
 Press Album, edited by T. Catling, 496
 Prevention of Cruelty to Children, National Society for, concert, 655
 Price (F. G. Hilton), antiquary, death, 354, 380, 412
 Priestley (Lady), Story of a Lifetime, 95
 Priest of the High Fields, by I. M. Slek, 371
 Prime Ministers, literary, 258
 Prince of Dreamers, by Flora Annie Steel, 127
 Printers' Dictionary, by F. Howard Collins, 539
 Printers' Pension Corporation, annual dinner, 648
 Printers' Pic, 586
 Printing, amateur, E. H. Blakeney on, 529
 Prints: at Messrs. Obach's, 444; Japanese, 679;
 Eighteenth-Century, 735
 Priscilla and Charybdis, by Frankfort Moore, 555
 Priscilla of the Good Intent, by Sutcliffe, 612
 Problems of Middle East, by Angus Hamilton, 527
 Proclamations, catalogue by Steele, 441
 Proelss (R.), Shakespearean commentaries, 740
 Proserpine, by Maurice Baring, 387
 Prothero (G. W.), Cambridge Modern History,
 Vol. XI., 367
 Prussian Universities, women students at, 77
 Psyche's Task, by J. G. Frazer, 443
 Publishing season, effect of royal books on, 43
 Puccini: Madama Butterfly, 537; La Tosca, 655
 Pugh (Edwin): Charles Dickens, Apostle of the People, 159; Peter Vandy, 580
 Pugno (Raoul), pianoforte recital, 595
 Pulligny (Leclerc de), Hygiène industrielle, 47
 'Punch' Exhibition, 109
 Punjab, Thirty-Five Years in, by Elsmie, 162
 Purple and Homespun, by Austin Fryers, 461
 Purvis (J. B.), Manual of Lamasaba Grammar, 407
 Pyne (Dr. J. K.), organist of Manchester Cathedral, retirement, 51
 Queen Kate, by C. Garvice, 581
 Queen of Hearts, by Evelyn Everett-Green, 641
 Queens, Two English, and Philip, by M. Hume, 194
 Queen's Hall Choral Society, first concert, 419
 Quest, The, by Justus M. Forman, 641
 Question of Means, by Margaret B. Cross, 555
 Rabbinic Theology, Some Aspects of, by Schechter, 252
 Rachel Loran, by Mrs. H. E. Dudeney, 127
 Radium, Interpretation of, by Soddy, 562
 Radziwill (Princess), Duchesse de Dino, Chronique, 583
 Railway Locomotive, by Vaughan Pendered, 589
 Raine (Allen), Where Billows Roll, 697
 Raleigh (W.), Shakespeare, 438
 Rambles in Sussex, by Brabant, 696
 Rambuteau (Comte de), Memoirs, tr. Brogan, 129
 Ramsay (Alex.), editor Banffshire Journal, death, 442
 Ramsay (Dean), Reminiscences, illus. Kerr, 226
 Ramsay (R.), The Straw, 284
 Ramsay (Sir W. M.) on Mithraic statuette from Asia Minor, 737
 Ramsey (Olivia), The Girl from Gatford, 127
 Ranke (Heinrich von), physician, death, 622
 Rankin (Reginald), In Morocco with General d'Amade, 12
 Raphael's early training, documents on, 174
 Rappoport (Dr.), Youvatshev's Russian Bastille, 672
 Rasmussen (Knud), People of Polar North, 18
 Rasplata, by Capt. Semenoff, 754
 Raub (Prof. Frédéric), philosopher, death, 258
 Ravenstein (E. G.), degree conferred on, 734
 Rawlinson (W. G.), Engraved Work of Turner,
 Vol. I., 624
 Rawson (Maud Stepney), Stairway of Honour, 727
 Reade (Alec L.) on letter of Johnson, 586
 Reade (T. Mellard), geologist, death, 678
 Readers' Dinner, 378
 Real Woman, by R. Hichens, 299
 Reckoning, The, by Capt. Semenoff, 754
 Reenick (Ferdinand von), artist, death, 654
 Red Saint, by Warwick Deeping, 696
 Reger (Max), concerts, 626
 Regnier (Antony), French artist, death, 82
 Reifferscheid (Prof.), theologian, death, 229
 Reinhardtstötner (K. von), Romance scholar,
 death, 499
 Religion: Introduction to Study of Comparative, by Jevons, 248; Threshold of, by Marett, 259;
 of Babylon and Assyria, by Rogers, 402
 Religions, Oxford Congress of, Transactions, 605,
 703
 Remaindering, J. H. Round on, 702
 Rembrandt: new example, 445; high price for engraving, 682
 Reminiscences, Personal, &c., by John Blackwood,
 169, 204
 Render unto Caesar, by Mrs. Vere Campbell, 526
 Renwick (I. P. A.), Statesman's Year-Book, 699
 Repplier (Agnes), A Happy Half-Century, 311
 Research Notes, 170, 292, 379, 500, 649, 760
 Resemblance, A, by Clare Benedict, 727
 Rethwisch (Karl), Plattdeutsch poet, death, 134

Revue Germanique, 378
 Rew (J.), Sick's Priest of the High Fields, 371
 Reyer or Rey (L. E. E.), composer, death, 111
 Rice (Alice H.), Mr. Opp, 612
 Richard (L.), Comprehensive Geography of Chinese Empire, tr. Kennelly, 40
 Richardson (Frank), More Bunkum, 727
 Richardson (John), Modern Steam Engine, 78
 Richardson (W.), A Mariner of England, ed.
 Childers, 339
 Ricketts (T. F.), Diagnosis of Smallpox, 169
 Riders to the Sea, by J. M. Synge, 740
 Ridgeway (W.), Stokes Memorial Lectures, 419
 Ridley Art Club, exhibition, 418
 Riley (Athelstan), Pontifical Services, Vol. IV., 344
 Rimington (Wallace), water-colour exhibition, 109
 Rita, The House called Hurrlsh, 310
 River Music, by W. R. Titterton, 670
 Road of No Return, by A. C. Inchbold, 525
 Robaut (Alfred), lithographer, death, 505
 Robbins (A. F.) on G. Selwyn's taste for executions, 465
 Roberts (W.): on Tennyson's 'Poems by Two Brothers,' 44; on Smith's 'Catalogue Raisonné,' 297
 Robertson (J. G.) on Milton on the Continent, 19
 Robertson (J. Logie), Complete Poetical Works of James Thomson, 253
 Robinson (P.), Handel and his Orbit, 82
 Rodgers (Joseph), Sherwood Forest, 221
 Rogers (R. W.), Religion of Babylonia, 402
 Rogue of Rye, by W. Willmott Dixon, 221
 Rolland (E.), Vie de Michel Augé, 21
 Roman Life and Manners, by Friedländer, 610
 Roman Painters, Quartette of, 110
 Roman Wall, By the, by Maria A. Hoyer, 21
 Romaunt of the Rose, illus. by Henderson and Wilkinson, 139
 Rome: Greatness and Decline, by Ferrero,
 Vols. III.-IV., 33; Vol. V., 459; Archaeological Budget for 1908, 141, 324, 385; State and Family in Early R., by Launspach, 193;
 British School at, 264, 383, 503; Social Life at, by Fowler, 552; Monuments of Christian
 R., by Frothingham, 591
 Romer (C. F.), Royal Dublin Fusiliers in South
 African War, 128
 Ronner (Henriette), painter, death, 298
 Roques (Jules), art-journalist, death, 354
 Rosemary, by Frederick Arthur, 671
 Rosenthal (Moriz), pianoforte recital, 354
 Ross (D. M.) on Innerpeffray Library, 499
 Ross (Estelle), Wallace Collection and Tate
 Gallery, 323
 Ross (Martin), Further Experiences of an Irish
 R.M., 254
 Ross (Robert), Aubrey Beardsley, 470
 Rossetti (D. G.), Italian Poets before Dante, 313
 Rossetti (W. M.) on British art in Venice, 110
 Rossini, Il Barbiere, 682
 Rothenburg on the Tauber, by Uhde-Bernays, 374
 Rothfeld (Otto), Indian Dust, 645
 Round (J. H.) on remaindering, 702
 Rousseau: Jean Jacques, by Lemaître—Humane
 Philosophy of, by Macdonald, 160
 Roussel (Theodore), picture exhibition, 625
 Rowlandson, drawings by, 140
 Royal Academy: Winter Exhibition, 47; Summer
 Exhibition, 534, 564, 592; Sculpture, 764
 Royal End, by H. Harland, 312
 Royal Institution: gift of 10,000l., 172; 293, 469;
 Annual Meeting, 563
 Royal Society Conversazione, 589
 Runeberg's Ensign Stal's Songs, tr. Donner, 162
 Russell (G. W. E.): The Varying Year, 12; on
 Dr. Vaughan's repartees, 73
 Russell of Killowen, Life of, 558
 Russia: Literary History, by Brückner, 66;
 Mongols in, by Curtin, 750
 Russian Bastille, by Youvatshev, 672
 Russian Essays and Stories, by M. Baring, 315
 Russo-Japanese War: cost of English official history, 291; Russian Army and Japanese War, by Kuropatkin, 527; Semenoff's The Reckoning, 754
 Rutley (William), art-auctioneer, death, 326
 Ruvigny (Marquis de), Nobilities of Europe, 437
 Ruwenzori: From R. to the Congo, by Wollaston,
 732; Duke of the Abruzzi's Expedition, 749
 Ryan (P. F. W.), Queen Anne and her Court, 247
 Saint. See the proper name.
 St. Aubyn (Alan), The Heart of Life, 341
 St. George's Gallery, opening exhibition, 505
 Saint-Saëns, 'Samson et Dalila' at Covent
 Garden, 537
 Saint Yves (Marquis de), author, death, 229
 Sala (Jean), exhibition, 594
 Salisbury (Frank O.), pictures, 503
 Saltzmann-Stevens (Mrs.) as Brunnhilde, 111, 142
 Samson, by Henry Bernstein, 207
 Samson Unshorn, by Reginald Turner, 726
 Sand (George), René Doumic on, 648
 Sanders (Mary F.), Lauzun, Courtier and Adventurer, 578
 Sandeman (G.), Uncle Gregory, 371

Sandys (J. E.), History of Classical Scholarship,
 Vols. II.-III., 282
 Sanitary Report for India, 1907, 412
 Santley (Sir C.), Reminiscences of my Life, 419
 Sauer (Emil), pianoforte recital, 326
 Savage (Richard), by Stanley V. Makower, 637
 Scandinavian Britain, by Collingwood, 373
 Scarlatti (A.), Harpsichord and Organ Music,
 ed. Shedlock, Part I., 51; Parts II. and III., 142
 Schäfer (Prof. Wilhelm), political economist,
 death, 17
 Schechter (S.), Aspects of Rabbinic Theology, 252
 Scherren (Henry) on Book Sales of 1908, 105
 Schmeltz (J. D. E.), ethnographer, death, 676
 Schmiedel (P. W.), Johannine Writings, tr.
 Canney, 251
 Schneider (Gustav Heinrich), poet, death, 100
 Schnitzler (A.), Light o' Love, 627
 Schomberg (J.) on letter of Johnson, 559, 586
 School and Class Management, Textbook of, by
 F. Arnold, 68
 Schoolboy Life, Tudor, by J. L. Vives, 69
 School for Scandal at His Majesty's, 474
 Schultz (Alwin), art-historian, death, 354
 Schütz (Friedrich), political journalist, death, 46
 Schütz (Heinrich), Christmas Oratorio found, 83
 Science, College of, Dublin, its progress, 172
 Science, Modern, and Darwin, ed. Seward, 704
 Science Progress, 381
 Science Year-Book, 78
 Scientific Ideas of To-day, by Gibson, 350
 Scotland: Castles and Keeps, by Fraprie—
 Baddeley's Thorough Guide, Part I., 405, 499;
 Folk-lore in Lowland S., by Simpson, 699
 Scots Peerage, ed. Sir J. B. Paul, Vol. VI., 754
 Scott (D. H.): Solender's Systematic Anatomy of Dicotyledons, Vol. II., 412; Studies in Fossil
 Botany, Vol. II., 760
 Scott (Hew), revision of 'Fasti Ecclesiæ Scoticane,' 675
 Scott (Sir W.), Minstrelsy of Scottish Border,
 ed. Noyes, 41
 Scottish Academy, Royal, elections, 384
 Scottish Gardens, by Sir Herbert Maxwell, 412
 Scottish Historical Review, April, 409
 Scottish National Gallery, additions, 418
 Scottish National Portrait Gallery, additions, 22
 Scottish Record Society's annual meeting, 349
 Scottish Staple at Veere, by Davidson and Gray, 526
 Scott-James (R. A.), Modernism and Romance, 129
 Sculptors, Painters, and Gravers, International Society, Exhibition, 80
 Sculpture: Egyptian Galleries, British Museum,
 752; at Royal Academy, 764
 Searle (G. F. C.), Experimental Elasticity, 292
 Seecombe (T.), Essayes of Montaigne, 226
 Secret River, by R. Macaulay, 404
 Sedgwick (S. N.), The Last Persecution, 433
 Seeley (Prof. Harry Govier), geologist, death,
 79, 137
 Selby Abbey, 1069-1908, by C. H. Moody, 222
 Selwyn (G.) and the Wits, by S. P. Kerr, 429, 465
 Semenoff (Capt.), Rasplata, 754
 Semitic Magic, by R. Campbell Thompson, 638
 Sense of Humour, by Beryl Faber, 641
 Sept Femmes de la Barbe-Bleue, by Anatole
 France, 727
 Septimus, by Wm. J. Locke, 193
 Sera (Leo G.), On the Tracks of Life, 401
 Serao (Matilde), After the Pardon, 221
 Servant of the Public, by D. Kimball, 628
 Seti I., King of Egypt, Account of Sarcophagus, by Wallis Budge, 98
 Seton (E. Thompson), Biography of a Silver-Fox, 649
 Seventeenth-Century Men of Latitude, by George, 372
 Seward (A. C.), Darwin and Modern Science, 704
 Sex-totems in England, A. Lang on, 496
 Shadow of the Glen, by J. M. Synge, 740
 Shahbaz (Prof.), Syed Mahomed Abdul Ghafur,
 death, 17
 Shakespeare: authenticity of Quartos, 14, 43,
 73, 100, 132; Characters of S.'s Plays, by Hazlitt, 70; Mr. Shaxspere, one book, 104;
 Player, Playmaker, and Poet, by Beeching,
 143, 176; Sources of 'Midsummer Night's Dream,' by Sidgwick, 236; Three Plays, by Swinburne, 254; Mr. Matheson Lang as Hamlet, 355; Word-Book, by J. Foster, 387;
 National Theatre, 388; Memorial in Southwark
 Cathedral, 409; Prof. Raleigh on, 438; 'As You Like It' at the Court, 475; Festival at Stratford-on-Avon, 508, 539, 569, 596;
 London Commemoration League, 561; 'Henry
 IV. Part I.,' Mr. Waller's revival, 595; 'Richard
 III.,' ed. Furniss, 683, 710; 'King Lear,' ed.
 Proelss, 740; Mr. Tree's Festival, 767. See Shaxspere (Mrs.).
 Shand (Christine R.), Miss Pilsbury's Fortune, 727
 Sharp (R. F.), Short History of English Stage, 474
 Shaw (G. B.), The Admirable Bashville, 143
 Shaw (P. J.), An Old York Church: All Hallows, 470

- Shaxspere (Mrs.) in the law courts, c. 1597, 199
 Shellock (J. S.), Scarlatti's Harpsichord and Organ Music, Part I., 51; Parts II. and III., 142
 Sheepshanks (Bishop), by D. Wallace Duthie, 728
 Sheffield Plate, by H. N. Veitch, 140
 Shelburne Essays, by P. E. More, 67
 Shelley (P. B.): song in 'St. Irvyne,' 409; Leigh Hunt's treatment of his letters, 439; Francis Thompson on, 490; More Crumbs, 674
 Shepherd Brothers' Spring Picture Exhibition, 382
 Shepherds, Kalendar of, ed. Diplock, 226
 Sheridan (R. B.), School for Scandal, revival, 474
 Sherwood Forest, by Joseph Rodgers, 221
 Shetland: Etymologisk Ordbog, by Jakobsen, Part I., 435
 Shield (Alice), Henry Stuart, Cardinal of York, 611
 Sholl (Anna McClure), The Greater Love, 250
 Shoobridge (Leonard), Herculaneum, 108
 Shoosmith (T. L.), drawings, 765
 Short (Frank), mezzotints, 503
 Short (T.), an Oxford Tutor, by Edwards, 369
 Shorter (Clement), Napoleon and his Fellow Travellers, 40
 Show Girl, by Max Pemberton, 526
 Shropshire, Victoria History, Vol. I., 190
 Shuiler's Child, The, by Seumas O'Kelly, 570
 Shuttles of the Loom, by K. M. Edge, 696
 Siam Historical Research Society: Phra-Rāja-vicāraṇa, 226
 Sibelius (Jean), tone-poems, 234
 Sibyl of Venice, by Rachel S. Macnamara, 96
 Sick (I. M.), The Priest of the High Fields, 371
 Siddons (A. W.), Modern Geometry, 78, 134
 Side-Tracks and Bridle-Paths, by L. James, 616
 Sidgwick (F.): Sources of 'Midsummer Night's Dream,' 236; Love and Battles, 553
 Silācāra (Bhikkhu), Dahlke's Bhuddist Essays, 406
 Silent Ones, by Gaunt and Essex, 250
 Silent Rancher, by Gertrude Page, 751
 Silver-Fox, Biography of, by Thompson Seton, 649
 Simmons (H. H.), Outlines of Electrical Engineering, 676
 Simples, A Book of, 231
 Simpson (Eve B.), Folk-lore in Lowland Scotland, 699
 Sin of the Duchess, by Houghton Townley, 371
 Sir Christopher, by A. E. Jessup, 286
 Sir Guy and Lady Rannard, by Dickinson, 669
 Sixty Years in the Wilderness, by H. W. Lucy, 462, 588
 Sketches from Life, by E. Carpenter, 129
 Slade (A. F.), The Alternative, 461
 Sladen (Douglas), Egypt and the English, 12, 163
 Slate (Alfred), of the Athenæum Press, death, 442
 Slater (D. A.), The Silvæ of Statius, 644
 Slater (J. H.), Book Sales of 1908, 14, 43
 Smallpox, Diagnosis of, by T. F. Ricketts, 169
 Smedley (Constance), The June Princess, 669
 Smellie (Alex.), Men of the Covenant, 527
 Smith (Alex.), General Chemistry for Schools, 168
 Smith (Capt. John), True Travels, ed. Benians, 70
 Smith (John), Catalogue Raisonné, reprint, 296, 385
 Smith (Lucy Toulmin), Leland's Itinerary, Parts VII.-VIII., 254, 291, 319
 Smith (Percy I.), Lettering and Writing, 21
 Smith (Richard Gordon), Ancient Tales and Folk-lore of Japan, 698
 Smyth (Ethel), excerpts from 'The Wreckers,' 506; 'The Wreckers' at His Majesty's, 766
 Snaith (J. C.), Araminta, 312
 Socialisme conservateur ou municipal, by Mater, 528
 Social Reform, Towards, by Canon and Mrs. Barnett, 372
 Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, linguistic publications, 407
 Soddy (F.), The Interpretation of Radium, 532
 Solereder (H.), Systematic Anatomy of Dicotyledons, Vol. II., 412
 Sollas (H. B. C. and W. J.), Suess's Face of the Earth, Vol. III., 106
 Somerset Coast, by C. G. Harper, 612
 Somerville (E. G.), Further Experiences of an Irish R.M., 254
 Songs: of London, by Herbert E. A. Furst, 286; of Love and Praise, by Annie Matheson, 373; War, ed. Christopher Stone, 585
 Son of the Emperor, by N. V. Stewart, 284
 Sophocles: Electra, ed. G. A. Davies, 71
 Sorabji (Cornelia), Between the Twilights, 129
 Sorley (W. R.), Adamson's Greek Philosophy, 311
 Sotheby's, Notes from, by Karslake, 579, 617
 Sowerby (John), Cottages and their Gardens, 503
 Spain: Bridle Roads of, by Cayley, 405; Life among the Wild Birds in, by Col. Verner, 467
 Spanish Holiday, by C. Marriott, 405
 Spanish Literature, by Fitzmaurice-Kelly, 338
 Spanish Poems, Nine, collected by Arteaga, 226
 Sparrows, by H. W. C. Newte, 341
 Speaight (J. W.), plan for Horse Guards Parade, 324, 354, 446
 Speech, Human, by N. C. Macnamara, 78
 Speed (J. Gilmer), American journalist, death, 166
 Spencer (L. J.), Brauns's Mineral Kingdom, Part I., 533
 Spettroscopisti Italiani, Memorie della Società, 21, 108, 322, 413, 470, 623, 734
 Spinster Aunt, Recollections of, ed. Sophia Beale, 281
 Spirit in New Testament, by Winstanley, 342
 Spooner (F.): Readings in English Literature, 1780-1880, 70; Story of English Literature, 70
 Sportsman, Old, Reminiscences of, by Woodgate, 195
 Sportsman's British Bird Book, by Lydekker, 676, 706
 Springs of Helicon, by J. W. Mackail, 640
 Stabb (John), Some Old Devon Churches, 173, 206
 Staepoole (H. de Vere): Blue Lagoon, 558; Pools of Silence, 751
 Stage, English, Short History, by R. F. Sharp, 474
 Stairway of Honour, by M. S. Rawson, 727
 Stalks Abroad, by H. F. Wallace, 196
 Stanford (Sir C. V.): Ave atque Vale, 299; Ode to Discord, 709
 Stanhope (R. Spencer), exhibition, 353
 Stanley (G.), editor of Bryan's 'Dictionary,' 385
 Starbrace, by Sheila Kaye-Smith, 726
 Starkey (V. G.), Tables synoptiques de l'ancien Français, 226
 Starling (E. H.), Mercers' Company Lectures on Fluids of the Body, 649
 Starr (W. E.) on Chopin's baptism, 506
 Statesman's Year-Book, 699
 Statius, Silvæ, tr. D. A. Slater, 644
 Statutes of Parliament of Ireland: John to Henry V., 374
 Stawell (Mrs. R.), Motor Tours in Yorkshire, 612
 Steam Engine, Modern, by John Richardson, 78
 Steel (Flora Annie), A Prince of Dreamers, 127
 Steele (R.), catalogue of proclamations, 441
 Steen (Jan), exhibition, 624
 Steer (P. Wilson), exhibition, 535
 Step (E.), Wayside and Woodland Ferns, 532
 Stephen (Sir Leslie), Hours in a Library, 254
 Stephen (Reginald), Democracy and Character, 288
 Sternberg (C. H.), Life of a Fossil-Hunter, 732
 Steuart (A. Francis), The Douglas Cause, 526
 Stevenson (R. A. M.), Low's Chronicle, 125
 Stevenson (Mrs. R. A. M.), death, 409
 Stevenson (R. L.): Low's Chronicle, 125; Admiral Guinea, 710
 Stewart (A. A. Grainger), editor of Scots Law Times, death, 588
 Stewart (A. W.), Recent Advances in Organic Chemistry, 168
 Stewart (Bertrand), Active Service Pocket-Book, 128
 Stewart (N. V.), A Son of the Emperor, 284
 Stewart (Sir Robert) on ancient Irish music, 83
 Stirling (James Hutchison), philosopher, death, 378
 Stoddard (C. Warren), author, death, 531
 Stoddart (Anna M.), Life of Hannah E. Pipe, 68
 Stoddart (W. H. B.), Mind and its Disorders, 169
 Stokeleigh Camp, Leigh Woods, Clifton, 351, 381
 Stokes (H.), Art Treasures of London: Painting, 322, 416
 Stokes (R. S. G.), Mines and Minerals of British Empire, 135
 Stokes (Dr. Whitley), death, 467, 496, 529
 Stone (Christopher), War Songs, 585
 Stone (Mulready), etchings, 140
 Stone (Nicholas), Sculptural Works of, by Bullock, 382
 Stonemason, Reminiscences of a, 99
 Stonham (C.), Birds of British Islands, Parts IX. and X., 202
 Stonhurst College Meteorological Observations, 564
 Stopes (Charlotte C.): on Mr. Shaxspere, one book, 104; Mrs. Shaxspere in the law courts, 199; City Marching Watch, 673
 Stopes (Marie C.) on Hairy Ainus of Japan, 202
 Story of a Lifetime, by Lady Priestley, 95
 Story of Hawksgarth Farm, by Emma Brooke, 525
 Story of Thyrsa, by Alice Brown, 581
 Story of Virginia Perfect, by Peggy Webling, 220
 Strachey (J. St. Loe), Practical Wisdom of the Bible, 196
 Stranleigh's Millions, by R. Barr, 250
 Stratford-on-Avon, Shakespeare Festival, 508, 539, 569, 596
 Strauss (Richard): production of 'Elektra,' 142; impressions of 'Elektra,' 625
 Straw, The, by R. Ramsay, 284
 Streeton (Arthur), paintings, 417
 Streitberg (W.), Die Gotische Bibel, 72
 Strife, by J. Galsworthy, 327
 Strutt (Hon. Frederick), death, 466
 Stuart (G. B.) on international journalists in London, 163
 Stuart (Henry), Cardinal of York, by Shield, 611
 Stubbs (Bp.), Germany in Later Middle Ages, ed. Hassall, 157
 Studies, Ten Personal, by Wilfrid Ward, 671
 Studies in Wives, by Mrs. Belloc Lowndes, 727
 Sturgis (Russell), architect, death, 298
 Stuttaford (C.), Catulli Carmina, 462
 Sudermann (H.): John the Baptist, tr. B. Marshall, 52; The Vale of Content, 711
 Suess (E.), The Face of the Earth, Vol. III., 106
 Suffolk, by W. A. Dutt, 676
 Summer in Touraine, by Lees, 582
 Sun, total eclipse in 364 A.D., 677, 733
 Sunderland (Grace), Old Chamber Music, 595, 738
 Sunset Playgrounds, by F. G. Aflalo, 495
 Surrey, Highways and Byways in, by Parker, 158
 Sussex, Rambles in, by Brabant, 696
 Sutcliffe (Halliwell): Priscilla of the Good Intent, 612; Willowdene Will, 645
 Swadesh, Calcutta bilingual weekly, founded, 229
 Swain (Joseph), engraver, death, 298
 Swan (Annie S.), The Broad Road, 436
 Swinburne (A. C.): Three Plays of Shakespeare, 254; death, 463; sonnet by Eden Phillpotts, 496
 Swinnerton (Frank A.), The Merry Heart, 340
 Sylva, by Evelyn, memoir by Nisbet, 411
 Symphony Concerts, 111, 175, 234, 299, 326, 354, 419
 Sygne (J. M.), Irish dramatist: death, 388; Playboy of the Western World, 712; Riders to the Sea—Shadow of the Glen—Well of the Saints, 740
 Syrett (Netta), A Castle of Dreams, 433
 Syrinx, by Laurence North, 433
 Tabor (R. Montagu), Odds and Ends, 671
 Tactics of Home Defence, by Callwell, 128
 Tadmira (L. Alma), A Few Lyrics, 671
 Taine, unpublished novel by, 349
 Tait (Andrew F.), bookseller, death, 703
 Talmage (Algernon), London nocturnes, 233
 Tamini (Signor), orchestral concert, 142
 Tangier, Colour of, by Henry Bishop, 593
 Tardieu (Charles), journalist, death, 106
 Targum to the Song of Songs, tr. Gollancz, 342
 Tate (G. P.), Frontiers of Baluchistan, 694
 Tate Gallery, by Estelle Ross, 323. See National Gallery of British Art.
 Taylor (John), Verbum Sempiternum, 586
 Tekehoff (Anton), The Kiss, tr. Long, 224
 Teachers' Registration Council, 101, 132
 Teggart (Moses), Irish poet, death, 347
 Telescope, Story of, by Arthur Mee, 204
 Temple (W. J.), Letters of Boswell to, 191
 Temple, Second, in Jerusalem, by Caldecott, 706
 Tenby, Church Book of St. Mary the Virgin, by Laws and Edwards, 222
 Tennyson: Poems by Two Brothers, unique copy, 44; Bibliography, Vol. II., 557
 Teresa, by Edith Ayrton Zangwill, 461
 Tetrizzini (Madame) in 'Traviata' and 'Lucia,' 568
 Thackwell (Sir Joseph), Military Memoirs, by Col. Wylly, 224
 Thaw (Alex. Blair), Pæstum, 671
 Theal (G. McCall), History of South Africa since 1795, Vol. I., 195
 Theatre of Ireland Society, two new plays, 570
 Theatrical Art, History of, by Mantzius, Vol. V., 474
 Their Oxford Year, by Oona H. Ball, 697
 Theism, The Problem of, by A. C. Pigou, 251
 These Little Ones, by E. Nesbit, 585
 Thieme (U.), Lexikon der bildenden Künstler, Vol. II., 652
 Thiersch (Ludwig), historical painter, death, 625
 Thistleton (Frank), Old Chamber Music, 595, 738
 Thomas (Calvin), German Reader and Phrase-Book, 71
 Thomas (E.), Richard Jefferies, 368
 Thomas (Margaret), Damascus to Palmyra, 492
 Thomas (W. J.), New Latin Delectus, Book I., 162
 Thompson (Sir E. Maunde) on B.M. Reading-Room, 256
 Thompson (Francis), Selected Poems, 37; Shelley, 490
 Thompson (George), water-colours, 80
 Thompson (R. Campbell), Semitic Magic, 638
 Thomson (Prof. Julius), chemist, death, 232, 293
 Thomson (Basil), The Fijians, 410
 Thomson (James), Complete Poetical Works, by Robertson, 253
 Thoreau's 'Walden,' original manuscript, 349
 Thorold (Algar), Six Masters in Disillusion, 431
 Thoughts by the Way, by Walter Earle, 286
 Thoughts of Lucia Halliday, 728
 Three Brothers, by Eden Phillpotts, 460
 Threshold, The, by W. Trafford-Taunton, 493
 Thunder of the Hoofs, by W. H. Lang, 193
 Thurston (E. Temple), The City of Beautiful Nonsense, 493
 Tierra del Fuego, Birds of, by Crawshaw, 201
 'Tilda's New Hat, by George Paston, 143
 Tinayre (Madame Marcelle), her books claimed by Italian lady, 648
 Tinel (Edgar): appointed Director of Brussels Conservatoire, 83; Katherina, 327
 Titles, book, appropriated, 347, 407, 586
 Titterton (W. R.), River Music, 670
 Tooteberg (Augustus), bibliophile, death, 442
 Tollemache (Lionel A.), Old and Odd Memories, 5, 73, 104

- Tomb of Siphtah, by T. M. Davis, 752
 Tono-Bungay, by H. G. Wells, 312
 Tornes (Lazarillo de), Life of, trans. Markham, 6
 Tortures et Supplices à travers les Ages, by F. Mitton, 289
 Touraine, Summer in, by Lees, 582
 Towers of Oxford, by E. H. New, 173
 Townley (Houghton), Sin of the Duchess, 371
 Toynbee (Paget) honoured by Reale Istituto Lombardo, 319
 Toynbee (W.), Glimpses of the Twenties, 528
 Tracks of Life, by Leo G. Sera, 401
 Trafford-Taunton (Winefride), The Threshold, 493
 Trains de Luxe, by Abel Herinant, 38
 Transplanted Daughters, by Mrs. B. Harrison, 340
 Travel-Talk, Murray's Handbook, 755
 Treasure Trove, by C. A. Dawson-Scott, 581
 Tregaskis (J.), Caxton Head Catalogue of Portraits, 21
 Tregelles (J. A.), History of Hoddesdon, 616
 Trevena (J.), Dartmoor House that Jack Built, 669
 Trickster, The, by G. B. Burgin, 555
 Trobridge (George), Swedenborgian, death, 499
 Trois Monologues, by C. Pond, 617
 Truants, by Wilfred T. Colby, 235
 Trumpeters, Serjeant, their history, 23
 Tuberculosis, Physiological Theory of, by Creighton, 170
 Tucker (Bp. A. R.), Eighteen Years in Uganda, 728
 Tucker (T. G.), Introduction to Natural History of Language, 192
 Tuckwell (W.), Pre-Tractarian Oxford, 309, 347
 Tudor Facsimile Texts: Heywood's Four PP—Wager's Marie Magdalene—Historic of Jacob and Esau, 144; Gentylnes and Noblyte, 300
 Tudor Reprinted and Parallel Texts: Lyly's Maydes Metamorphosis, 144
 Tudor Schoolboy Life, by J. L. Vives, 69, 101
 Turkey in Revolution, by C. Roden Buxton, 436
 Turner (J. M. W.): portrait by Landseer and D'Orsay, 81; Engraved Work, by Rawlinson, Vol. I., 624
 Turner (Reginald), Samson Unshorn, 726
 Twelve, Society of, exhibition, 232
 Two Dianias in Alaska, by Agnes Herbert, 404
 Two Goodwins, by R. Murray Gilchrist, 193
 Tyburn Tree: its History, by A. Marks, 494
 Tynan (Katharine), Experiences, 285
 Uganda, Eighteen Years in, by Bp. Tucker, 728
 Uhde-Bernays (H.), Rothenburg on Tauber, 374
 Uncle Gregory, by G. Sandeman, 371
 Une (L') et l'autre, by J. Marni, 434
 Unemployment, by Beveridge, 224
 Unger (Gladys), Love Watches, 595
 United States Naval Observatory Report, 262
 Unloved, The, by Ethel Hill, 284
 Unwin (G.), Gilds and Companies of London, 125
 Unwin (T. Fisher) on appropriating book-titles, 407
 Upper Norwood Athenæum Report, 289
 Uri (Dr. J.) and Dr. S. Parr, 317
 Vale of Content, by Sudermann, 711
 Vanderdecken, by Gilbert Hudson, 670, 703
 Van Dycks at the National Gallery, 265
 Van Dyke (H.), Out-of-Doors in the Holy Land, 100
 Vatican, new Picture Gallery, 49, 297
 Vaughan (C. J.), two stories about, 73, 104
 Vaughan (Herbert M.), The Medici Popes, 225
 Vaughan (Canon John S.) on appropriating titles, 347
 Veere, Scottish Staple at, by Davidson and Gray, 526
 Veitch (H. N.), Sheffield Plate, 140
 Venetia and Northern Italy, by Headlam, 404
 Venice, British art in, 110
 Verbum Sempiternum, by John Taylor, 586
 Verdi: La Traviata, 568; Rigoletto, 625; Otello, 682
 Verlaine (P.), his Life, by Lepelletier, 558
 Verner (Col. W.), Life among the Wild Birds in Spain, 467
 Vernon (H. M.), Intracellular Enzymes, 170
 Vickers's Newspaper Gazetteer, 255
 Victoria and Albert Museum, Report, 206
 Victoria Histories: Shropshire, Vol. I., 190; Buckingham, Vol. II., 339
 Vielé (H. K.), Heartbreak Hill, 752
 Vignon (Victor), landscape painter, death, 419
 Viking Land, by W. S. Monroe, 614
 Villon and Job, parallel, 317, 347
 Virgil: trans. by J. Jackson, 9; Æneid, tr. Mackail, 462
 Visconti (Primi), Mémoires sur la Cour de Louis XIV., 162
 Vives (J. L.), Tudor Schoolboy Life, tr. Watson, 69, 101
 Voice, The, poem by Bernard Capes, 13
 Vollers (Karl), Orientalist, death, 106
 Voules (Horace St. George), journalist, death, 562
 Vulgate Gospels, Notes on Early History, by Dom Chapman, 123, 227
 Wager (L.), Marie Magdalene, 144
 Wagner (Dr. Albrecht), philologist, death, 258
 Wagner (R.): 'The Ring' in English, 111, 142; Die Meistersinger, 142; Letters to Minna, 446; Die Walküre, 568; Letters to Dresden Friends, 595; Personal Recollections of, by Neumann, 710
 Walcott (W.), exhibition, 234
 Waldstein (C.), Herculeum, 108
 Wall (J. C.), Ancient Earthworks, 763
 Wallace (Harold F.), Stalks Abroad, 196
 Wallace Collection, by Estelle Ross, 323
 Waller (A. R.), Beaumont and Fletcher, Vol. VI., 84
 Waller (Lewis) as Hotspur, 595
 Walling (R. A. J.), George Borrow, 254
 Walpole (Hugh), The Wooden Horse, 697
 Walters (J. Cuming), Lost Land of King Arthur, 613
 Walters & Co. on Meredith's letters, 730
 Walton (Izaak): official copy of his will, 73; first ed. of 'Compleat Angler' sold for 3,900 dollars, 319
 Wander Years, by J. H. Yoxall, 613
 Ward (A. W.): Cambridge Modern History, Vol. XI., 367; on F. G. Fleay, 376
 Ward (Mrs. Humphry), Daphne, 669
 Ward (Wilfrid), Ten Personal Studies, 671
 Warden (Florence), The Baronet's Wife, 96
 Warden (Gertrude), An Actress's Husband, 341
 Wardle (Jane), Margery Pigeon, 436
 Ware (J. R.), Passing English of Victorian Era, 584
 Warner (Charles), suicide in New York, 236
 Warner (P. H. Lee) as publisher, 442
 Warschauer (J.), Jesus: Seven Questions, 252
 War Songs, ed. Christopher Stone, 585
 Water-Colour, Pastel, and Drawing Salon, 353
 Water-Colour Painters, New Society of, 233
 Water-Colour Society of Ireland, exhibition, 266
 Waterloo Museum, Liverpool: Echaz Collection, 411
 Watson (Foster): English Grammar Schools to 1660, 69; Tudor Schoolboy Life, 69, 101
 Watson (H. B. Marriott), Flower of the Heart, 127
 Watson (John), Ian Maclaren, Life by Nicoll, 220
 Watson (Rosamund Marriott): Omnia Somnia, poem, 439; The Willow-Wren, poem, 672
 Watts-Dunton (T.) on colloquialism in the dramatic ballad, 100
 Wax, by G. Somes Layard, 493
 Way (A. S.), Æschylus in English Verse, Pt. III., 9
 Ways of Men, by Herbert Flowerdew, 97
 Weather: characteristics in 1908, 79; Observing and Forecasting, by Horner, 564
 Webb (Mr. and Mrs. Sidney), Break-up of the Poor Law—Public Organization of Labour Market, 286
 Webling (Peggy), The Story of Virginia Perfect, 220
 Webster (H. K.), The Whispering Man, 127
 Wedgwood (Julia), Nineteenth Century Teachers, 723
 Weerth (Ernst aus'm), archæologist, death, 473
 Weil (Commandant), Joachim Murat, Vol. II., 642
 Weir (G. R.), actor, death, 300
 Welch (James) in 'When Knights were Bold,' 508
 Welie (Antoon van), portraits, 593
 Well of St. Clare, by Anatole France, 434
 Well of the Saints, by J. M. Synge, 740
 Wells (C.), Joseph and his Brethren, 189
 Wells (H. G.), Tono-Bungay, 312
 Wells and Glastonbury, by T. S. Holmes, 221
 Welsh (Jane), Love Letters to Carlyle, 553
 Welsh National Library, 163
 Wer ist's? 72
 Werner (Alice), Weule's Native Life in E. Africa, 620
 Werner (Vice-Admiral R. von), death, 291
 Westcott (Bp.), Gospel according to St. John, 251
 Westermarck (E.), Origin and Development of Moral Ideas, Vol. II., 399
 We Two in West Africa, by Moore and Guggisberg, 614
 Weule (K.), Native Life in East Africa, 620
 Wharton (Edith), Motor-Flight through France, 160
 What the Public Wants, by Arnold Bennett, 683
 Wheel Magic, by J. W. Allen, 614
 When a Woman Woos, by C. Marriott, 525
 When Knights were Bold, 508
 Where Billows Roll, by Allen Raine, 697
 Whips of Time, by Arabella Kenealy, 97
 Whispering Man, by H. K. Webster, 127
 Whistler (J. McNeill), Life, by E. R. and J. Pennell, 205
 Whitaker's Almanack and Peerage, 13
 White (Gilbert), Selections from Natural History of Selborne, ed. Bruton, 70
 White (Percy), House of Intrigue, 751
 White (W. Hale), Common Affections of Liver, 46
 Whiteing (Richard), Little People, 100
 White Sister, by F. Marion Crawford, 581
 Whittingham (Charles John), printer, death, 409
 Who's Who, Catholic, ed. Burnand, 131
 Who's Who in Germany, ed. Degener, 72
 Whyte (Adam Gowans), Comedy of Ambition, 581
 Wickhoff (Franz), writer on art, death, 505, 625
 Widgery (F. J.), Devon, 130
 Widor (C. M.), orchestral concert, 568
 Wilamowitz-Moellendorff (Prof. von), international tribute to, 13
 Wildenbruch (Ernst von), dramatist, death, 112
 Wilkinson (Bp. G. H.), Memoir by A. J. Mason, 580
 Wilkinson (Norman), Romaunt of the Rose, 139
 Wilkinson (W. Camac), Treatment of Consumption, 168
 Williams (Bransby), An Actor's Story, 569
 Williams (G. Valentine), Light o' Love, 627
 Williams (J. B.), History of English Journalism, 219, 255
 Williams (O. C.), Launay's World's Gold, 292
 Williams (Stanley), Zenographical Fragments, 589
 Williams (Vaughan), In the Fen Country, 266
 Williamson (G. C.) on miniature of Charles I., 679
 Willowdene Will, by Halliwell Sutcliffe, 645
 Willow-Wren, poem by Mrs. R. M. Watson, 672
 Wilson (Augusta J. Evans), novelist, death, 588
 Wilson (T. Wilson), The Bargain, 641
 Windt (Harry de), My Restless Life, 406
 Winstanley (E. W.), Spirit in New Testament, 342
 Winstanley (Lilian), Clerkes Tale and Squieres Tale, 70
 Wise (B. R.), Commonwealth of Australia, 614
 Wither Family, Materials for a History, by Bigg-Wither, 223
 Within Four Walls, by Bloundelle-Burton, 404
 Wollaston (A. F. R.), From Ruwenzori to the Congo, 732
 Woman, first, on staff of Trinity College, Dublin, 442
 Woman and the Car, by Dorothy Levitt, 406
 Woman in the Case, by Clyde Fitch, 711
 Woman's Looking-Glass, by Constance E. Jones, 436
 Women: students at German Universities, 77; and enfranchisement, 105; and Microscopical Society, 107; and Geological Society, 260; what Shakespeare thought of them, 561
 Women, Fair, exhibition, 263
 Women Artists, Society of, 54th Exhibition, 173
 Women's International Art Club, 324
 Wood (C. H. Thursfield), of Sherborne School, death, 620
 Wooden Horse, by Hugh Walpole, 697
 Woodgate (W. B.), Reminiscences of an Old Sportsman, 195
 Woodhouse (E.) & Co., new publishing firm, 409
 Woods (F. H.), Hebrew Prophets for English Readers, Vol. I., 252
 Workhouse Ward, by Lady Gregory, 767
 Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, by Aronson, 253
 World and his Wife, by Erdlinger, 739
 World's Peoples, by A. H. Keane, 676
 Worley (G.), St. Bartholomew-the-Great, Smithfield, 21
 Wreckers, by Miss Ethel Smyth, 506, 766
 Wren (Sir Christopher), by Lena Milman, 415
 Wright (Carroll Davidson), statistician, death, 258
 Wright (Dr. C. H. H.): Light from Egyptian Papyri on Jewish History, 130; death, 377
 Wright (Harold), caricaturist, death, 22
 Wright (W. Aldis), Authorized Version, 1611, 437, 467
 Wrong (G. M.), Historical Publications relating to Canada, 528
 Wycliffe and the Lollards, by Carrick, 315
 Wyly (Col. H. C.), Military Memoirs of Sir J. Thackwell, 224
 Wyndham (G.) on Francis Thompson, 490
 Wyndham (H. Saxe), August Manns and the Saturday Concerts, 386
 Wynne (May), Henry of Navarre, 221
 Yalunka Reading-Book, by Bowers, Marsh, and Showers, 407
 Year, Varying, by G. W. E. Russell, 12
 Yeats (Jack), picture exhibition, 654
 Yeats (W. B.): Kathleen Ni Houlihan, 740; Deirdre, 767
 Yellow God, by Rider Haggard, 404
 Yew, Holly, and Box, by Dallimore, 411
 Yexley (Lionel), Inner Life of the Navy, 750
 York (Henry Stuart, Cardinal of), by Shield, 611
 York Church, Old: All Hallows, ed. Shaw, 470
 Yorkshire, Motor Tours in, by Mrs. Stawell, 612
 Young (F. E. Mills), Chip, 436
 Young (Marg. F.), Letters of a Noble Woman, 6
 Young Man Married, by S. C. Grier, 493
 Youvatshev (I. P.), The Russian Bastille, 672
 Yoxall (J. H.), The Wander Years, 613
 Ysaye (Eugène), violin recital, 595
 Yün-nan, by Major H. R. Davies, 639
 Zangwill (Edith Ayrton), Teresa, 461
 Zaza, by Leonecavallo, production at the Coronet, 568
 Zenographical Fragments, by Stanley Williams, 589
 Zi-ka Wei Observatory, Calendrier, 502
 Zoological Society, 20, 136, 231, 260, 351, 381, 469, 563, 651, 678
 Zuber (Jean Henri), painter, 473
 Zurlinden (General), Les Anglais au Combat, 41

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 4236.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 2, 1909.

PRICE
THREEPENCE.
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER.

THE LATE MR. J. McNEILL WHISTLER'S LETTERS. WARNING to PUBLISHERS and OTHERS.

It has come to the knowledge of the late Mr. Whistler's Executrix that certain persons have recently published LETTERS written by the late J. McNEILL WHISTLER.

Notice is hereby given that the publication of any such Letters without the consent of Mr. Whistler's Executrix is unlawful, and that legal proceedings will be taken against all persons publishing, or offering for sale, copies of any such Letters.

WATKIN-WILLIAMS, STEEL & HART,
Solicitors for the said Executrix.

54, New Broad Street, London, E.C., December 30, 1908.

THE GERALD MASSEY FUND.

As this Fund is now about to be CLOSED, intending Subscribers will oblige by kindly sending in their Subscriptions.

The object of the Fund is to provide, if possible, a small income to the aged Widow and the Four Daughters, two of whom are invalids.

Subscriptions will be received by JAMES ROBERTSON, Esq., 5, Granby Terrace, Hillhead, Glasgow, Scotland, who will render an account to all senders.

Cheques should be made payable to the Royal Bank of Scotland, Hope Street Branch, Glasgow, Scotland.

Societies.

THE HARLEIAN SOCIETY.

Founded 1889. Incorporated 1902.

Established for the purpose of Transcribing, Printing, and Publishing the Heraldic Visitations of Counties, Parish Registers, or any Manuscripts relating to Genealogy, Family History, and Heraldry, or such other kindred or partly kindred subjects as may from time to time be determined upon by the Council of the Society.

In the Ordinary Section 56 Volumes have been issued. In the Register Section 35 Volumes have been issued. Entrance Fee, 10s. 6d. Annual Subscription: Ordinary Section, 1l. 1s.; Register Section, 1l. 1s. Chairman of Council—Sir GEORGE J. ARMYTAGE, Bart., F.S.A.—For all particulars apply to the Secretary and Treasurer, W. BRUCE BANNERMAN, F.S.A., The Lindens, Sydenham Road, Croydon.

Lectures.

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON.

CREIGHTON MEMORIAL LECTURESHIP, founded in Memory of the late Dr. Mandell Creighton, Bishop of London.

The CREIGHTON MEMORIAL LECTURE for the year 1908-9 will be delivered at KING'S COLLEGE, STRAND, W.C., on TUESDAY, January 19, 1909, at 5 p.m., by G. W. PROTHERO, Esq., Litt.D., LL.D. M.A. F.B.A., Hon. Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. Subject, 'The Arrival of Napoleon III.' Admission free.

Provident Institutions.

NEWSVENDORS' BENEVOLENT AND PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Founded 1839.

Funds exceed 27,000l.

Office: 15 and 16, Farringdon Street, London, E.C.

Patron:
The Right Hon. THE EARL OF ROSEBERY, K.G. K.T.

President:
The LORD GLENESK.

Treasurer:

THE LONDON AND WESTMINSTER BANK, LIMITED.

OBJECTS.—This Institution was established in 1839 in the City of London, under the Presidency of the late Alderman Harmer, for granting Pensions and Temporary Assistance to principals and assistants engaged as vendors of Newspapers.

MEMBERSHIP.—Every Man or Woman throughout the United Kingdom, whether Publisher, Wholesaler, Retailer, Employer, or Employed, is entitled to become a Member of this Institution, and enjoy its benefits upon payment of five shillings annually, or Three Guineas for life, provided that he or she is engaged in the sale of Newspapers, and such Members who thus contribute secure priority of consideration in the event of their needing aid from the Institution.

PENSIONS.—The Annuitants now number Thirty-six, the Men receiving 25l. and the Women 20l. per annum each.

The "Royal Victoria Pension Fund," commemorating the great advantages the News Trade enjoyed under the rule of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, provides 20l. a year each for Six Widows of News-vendors.

The "Francis Fund" provides Pensions for One Man, 25l., and One Woman 20l., and was specially subscribed in memory of the late John Francis, who died on April 6, 1882, and was for more than fifty years Publisher of the Athenæum. He took an active and leading part throughout the whole period of the agitation for the repeal of the various then existing "Taxes on Knowledge," and was for very many years a staunch supporter of this Institution.

The "Horace Marshall Pension Fund" is the gift of the late Mr. Horace Brooks Marshall. The employees of that firm have primary right of election to its benefits.

The "Herbert Lloyd Pension Fund" provides 25l. per annum for one man, in perpetual and grateful memory of Mr. Herbert Lloyd, who died May 12, 1899.

The principal features of the Rules governing election to all Pensions are, that each Candidate shall have been (1) a Member of the Institution for not less than ten years preceding application; (2) not less than fifty-five years of age; (3) engaged in the sale of Newspapers for at least ten years.

RELIEF.—Temporary relief is given in cases of distress, not only to Members of the Institution, but to News-vendors or their servants who may be recommended for assistance by Members of the Institution. Inquiry is made in such cases by Visiting Committees, and relief is awarded in accordance with the merits and requirements of each case.

W. WILKIE JONES Secretary.

THE BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Founded 1837.

Patron—HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

Invested Capital, 30,000l.

A UNIQUE INVESTMENT

Offered to London Booksellers and their Assistants.

A young man or woman of twenty-five can invest the sum of Twenty Guineas (or its equivalent by instalments), and obtain the right to participate in the following advantages:—

FIRST. Freedom from want in time of Adversity as long as need exists.

SECOND. Permanent Relief in Old Age.

THIRD. Medical Advice by eminent Physicians and Surgeons.

FOURTH. A Cottage in the Country (Abbots Langley, Hertfordshire) for aged Members, with garden produce, coal, and medical attendance free, in addition to an annuity.

FIFTH. A furnished house in the same Retreat at Abbots Langley for the use of Members and their families for holidays or during convalescence.

SIXTH. A contribution towards Funeral expenses when it is needed.

SEVENTH. All these are available not for Members only, but also for their wives or widows and young children.

EIGHTH. The payment of the subscriptions confers an absolute right to these benefits in all cases of need.

For further information apply to the Secretary Mr. GEORGE LARNER, 28, Paternoster Row E.C.

Exhibitions.

EARLY BRITISH SCHOOL.—SHEPHERD'S

WINTER EXHIBITION OF PORTRAITS and LANDSCAPES

by EARLY BRITISH MASTERS is NOW OPEN.

SHEPHERD'S GALLERY, 27, King Street, St. James's.

Educational.

THE LAW SOCIETY.

The COUNCIL offers for award in JULY NEXT FIVE STUDENT-SHIPS, of the annual value of 50l. to 40l. each, tenable on condition of pursuing under proper supervision Courses of Legal Studies approved by the Council.

For copies of the Regulations apply to THE LAW SOCIETY, 103, Chancery Lane, W.C.

KING'S COLLEGE, LONDON.

(UNIVERSITY OF LONDON.)

DEPARTMENT FOR TRAINING TEACHERS FOR SECONDARY SCHOOLS.

Theory, Practice, and History of Education—J. W. ADAMSON, B.A., Professor of Education (Head of the Department).

Ethics—Rev. A. CALDECOTT, D.Litt. D.D., Professor of Mental and Moral Philosophy.

Psychology—C. S. MYERS, M.A. M.D., Professor. W. BROWN, M.A., Lecturer.

The Course, which includes Practical Work in Secondary Schools, extends over one academical year, beginning in October or January. It is suitable for those who are preparing to take the Teachers' Diploma, University of London, or the Certificate of the Teachers' Training Syndicate, University of Cambridge.

The Fee is 20l. for the year if paid in advance, or Eight Guineas per Term (Three Terms in the Year).—Application should be made to Prof. ADAMSON, King's College, Strand, W.C.

KING'S COLLEGE, LONDON.

(UNIVERSITY OF LONDON.)

EVENING CLASS DEPARTMENT.

Courses are arranged for the Intermediate and Final Examinations for the B.A. and B.Sc. Degrees of the University of London. Students taking the full Course pay Composition Fees, and rank as Internal Students of the University.

EVENING CLASSES are also held for Mechanical and Electrical Engineering, Architecture and Building Construction, Drawing, Mathematics, Physics, and all Science Subjects.

For full information and Prospectus apply to the Dean (Mr. R. W. K. EDWARDS) or to THE SECRETARY, King's College, Strand, London, W.C.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE,

CIRENCESTER. (Founded 1845. Reorganized 1908.)

Patron—H.M. KING EDWARD VII.

Chairman—LORD MORETON.

For Landowners, Land Agents, Surveyors, Agriculturists,

Intending Colonists, &c.

FARMING AND COLONIAL BRANCH.

ESTATE MANAGEMENT AND FORESTRY BRANCH.

For Prospectus of Curriculum, Fees, Entrance Exhibitions, Scholarships, Diplomas, &c., apply to THE PRINCIPAL.

CRYSTAL PALACE COMPANY'S SCHOOL

OF PRACTICAL ENGINEERING.—Principal, J. W. WILSON, M.I.C.E., M.I.M.E. The FIRST TERM of the THIRTY-SEVENTH YEAR will OPEN on WEDNESDAY, January 6. New Students should attend at the School on TUESDAY, January 5, for Examination, between 10 A.M. and 1 P.M.—Prospectus forwarded on application to THE REGISTRAR, School of Engineering, Crystal Palace, S.E.

EPSOM COLLEGE.—Preparation for Universities, Civil Service, Army, Medical, and other Careers. Classical and Modern Studies; separate Lower School. Open Scholarships annually in March. Valuable leaving Scholarships to Universities and Hospitals.—For Prospectus, List of Honours, &c., apply BURSAR, Epsom College.

EDUCATION.

Parents or Guardians desiring accurate information relative to the CHOICE of SCHOOLS for BOYS or GIRLS or TUTOR in England or Abroad are invited to call upon or send fully detailed particulars to

MESSRS. GABBISAS, THRING & CO.,

who for more than thirty years have been closely in touch with the leading Educational Establishments.

Advice, free of charge, is given by Mr. THRING, Nephew of the late Head Master of Uppingham, 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

Yearly Subscription, free by post, Inland, 15s. 3d.; Foreign, 18s. Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class matter.

THE ATHENÆUM is published on FRIDAY AFTERNOON at 2 o'clock.

THE DOWNS SCHOOL, SEAFORD, SUSSEX.

Head Mistress—Miss LUCY ROBINSON, M.A. (late Second Mistress, St. Felix School, Southwold). References: The Principal of Bedford College, London; The Master of Peterhouse, Cambridge.

MARIA GREY TRAINING COLLEGE for WOMEN TEACHERS. Students are prepared for the London and Cambridge Teachers' Diplomas and the Higher Certificate of the National Froebel Union. Scholarships of from 15l. to 25l. offered to Graduates in JANUARY, 1909.—For further particulars as to Middlesex Scholarships, Hall of Residence, &c., apply to the Principal, Miss ALICE WOODS, at the College, Salisbury Road, Brondesbury, London, N.W.

LYCEUM ALPINUM IN ZUOZ,

UPPER ENGADINE, SWITZERLAND. 5,700 ft. above sea level. First-class BOARDING-SCHOOL for Forty-five Boys. Age of entry, 11-16. Excellent, bracing, health resort. Classical and Modern Section. Workshop, Gymnasium, Laboratory. Preparation for the Zürich Polytechnic and for Matriculation. Staff of Thirteen Masters, including Eight Graduates.

Four Diligence Services Daily to and from St. Moritz and Bevers (nearest Railway Station).

WINTER TERM BEGINS ON JANUARY 4.

French or German Prospectus and Curriculum post free on application to THE SECRETARY.

Situations Vacant.

COUNTY COUNCIL OF THE WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE.

EDUCATION DEPARTMENT.

The EDUCATION COMMITTEE will require the services of FOUR EXAMINERS—Two Men and Two Women—in connexion with the award of their County Minor Scholarships and Intending Pupil-Teacherships, 1909. The Examiners appointed will be required to conduct both the Written and the Oral Portions of the Examination, and will be occupied from about MARCH 15, 1909, until about JUNE 15, 1909. Remuneration 60l., together with out-of-pocket expenses.—Further particulars and Forms of Application may be obtained from the Education Department (Secondary Branch), County Hall, Wakefield. Applications must be returned by WEDNESDAY, January 20, 1909.

NATIONAL FROEBEL UNION,

NORWICH HOUSE, SOUTHAMPTON STREET,

BLOOMSBURY, LONDON, W.C.

APPOINTMENT OF EXAMINERS.

The GOVERNORS of the NATIONAL FROEBEL UNION are prepared to receive applications for EXAMINERSHIPS in the following Subjects:—

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION.—Arithmetic, English Language, Geography, History, English Literature, French, German, Elementary Mathematics, Physiology and Laws of Health, Botany and Zoology.

ELEMENTARY CERTIFICATE.—Life of Froebel, his Principles and Methods; Knowledge of Child Nature.

HIGHER CERTIFICATE.—Literature, Geography, History of Education, Theory of Education, Froebel's Principles, Practice of Education, Physiology and Hygiene, and Physical Exercises.

ELEMENTARY AND HIGHER CERTIFICATES.—Singing, Blackboard Drawing, Geometry, Educational Handwork, Class Teaching, and Nature Knowledge.

Forms of Application, and particulars may be obtained from the Secretary, to whom applications should be forwarded not later than JANUARY 21, 1909.

E. H. MACLEAN, Secretary, National Froebel Union.

MONTGOMERYSHIRE INTERMEDIATE

EDUCATION SCHEME.

NEWTOWN COUNTY SCHOOL FOR BOYS.

Applications are invited for the post of HEAD MASTER of the above School, which will become vacant at CHRISTMAS. Salary 160l. per annum, with a Capitation Fee of 2l. for each Boy in the School.

The School was opened in 1894, and there are now 72 Boys.

The Head Master must have taken a Degree in the United Kingdom or in the British Possessions.

Thirty printed copies of the Letter of Application (which must state age and qualifications), and of the Testimonials, to be sent to me not later than JANUARY 8 NEXT.

Copies of the Scheme can be obtained from me, price 7d. post free. Candidates are required to mention which of the Subjects of the Curriculum they can themselves teach.

Candidates canvassing, directly or indirectly, will be disqualified.

GEO. D. HARRISON,

Clerk to the Higher Education Committee.

Welshpool, December 18, 1908.

LONGTON HIGH SCHOOL,

STOKE-UPON-TRENT.

Head Master—Dr. W. HARRIS, M.A. Camb.,

With Staff of University Graduates.

WANTED, to start on JANUARY 18, an ASSISTANT MASTER, qualified to take Latin to the standard of the Oxford Senior Locals; with Elementary Mathematics and English as Subsidiary Subjects. Salary 150l. per annum.

The Longton High School is a mixed Secondary School under the Board of Education. The Master appointed will also be required to give instruction on certain Evenings each Week in the Technical School.

Ability to take a share in the supervision of School Games a qualification.

Apply, stating age, qualifications, and enclosing copies of not more than three recent Testimonials, before JANUARY 11, 1909, to

W. T. COPE, Secretary, Education Committee.

Longton, Stoke-upon-Trent.

NORTH RIDING OF YORKSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL. EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

NORTHALLERTON GRAMMAR SCHOOL (BOYS AND GIRLS).

Applications are invited for the post of HEAD MASTER of this SCHOOL. The New Buildings will be completed and ready for occupation by September, 1909, and the Head Master will be expected to enter on his duties at that time, the appointment to date from August 1, 1909. Accommodation 150. Salary 350l. Applicants must hold a Degree of a University in the United Kingdom.

Further particulars, conditions of appointment, and Forms of Application may be obtained from the undersigned upon receipt of a stamped, addressed envelope.

Applications, accompanied by copies of not more than three recent Testimonials, will be received up to FEBRUARY 27, 1909.

W. FOWLE, Clerk to the Governors.

Northallerton, December 16, 1908.

CAMBRIDGE.

PERSE HIGH SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

APPOINTMENT OF HEAD MISTRESS.

The MANAGERS invite applications for the post of HEAD MISTRESS, which will be vacant in JULY, 1909.—Candidates should send ten copies of their Application and Testimonials, together with any references, on or before SATURDAY, February 6, to the Secretary to the Managers, Miss JEX-BLAKE, Girton College, Cambridge, from whom particulars of the appointment may be obtained.

December, 1908.

CORNWALL EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

HIGHER EDUCATION.

COUNTY SCHOOL FOR GIRLS, TRURO.

A HEAD MISTRESS is REQUIRED, to commence duty NEXT TERM. The School comprises about 100 Girls. Commencing Salary 170l. per annum.—Form of Application, and further particulars, may be obtained from the undersigned, to whom all applications must be sent on or before JANUARY 6, 1909.

F. R. PASCOE, Secretary.

Education Office, Truro, December 21, 1908.

COUNTY BOROUGH OF SUNDERLAND.

DAY TRAINING COLLEGE.

ASSISTANT MISTRESS REQUIRED, to enter upon duties in FEBRUARY. Must be a Graduate of a British University, specially qualified in English, and able to assist in the Teaching of Method. Salary at the rate of 130l. per annum.

Applications will be received by the undersigned up to JANUARY 18.

T. W. BRYERS, Secretary.

Education Offices, 15, John Street, Sunderland.
December 23, 1908.

RIPON SECONDARY SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

WANTED, in JANUARY, TWO ASSISTANT MISTRESSES:—

(1) To teach Science chiefly. Special Subject, Botany.
(2) To teach French chiefly, by the direct method. Games desirable. Please state Subsidiary Subjects.

Salary 100l. to 120l., according to qualifications and experience.

Forms of Application to be obtained from THE TOWN CLERK, to whom they must be returned not later than JANUARY 9.

Town Hall, Ripon, December 23, 1908.

MUNICIPAL SECONDARY SCHOOL AND PUPIL-TEACHER CENTRE, ACCRINGTON.

WANTED, an ASSISTANT MISTRESS, with good qualifications for the Teaching of English, Geography, and History. Applicants must be Graduates, and experienced Teachers.

Salary 100l., rising by 10l. a year to 170l., and by possible further increments to 200l.

The Scale provides for an allowance in recognition of previous teaching experience in a Secondary School.—Forms of Application (to be returned not later than JANUARY 13, 1909) obtainable from

JNO. RHODES, Secretary.

BEDFORD COLLEGE FOR WOMEN (UNIVERSITY OF LONDON).

YORK PLACE, BAKER STREET, W.

The COUNCIL are about to appoint a SECRETARY to the PRINCIPAL.

University Training and knowledge of Secretarial Work essential. Applications, from Women only, must be sent, not later than JANUARY 16, to THE PRINCIPAL, from whom further particulars may be obtained.

ETHEL T. McKNIGHT, Secretary of Council.

ASSISTANT WANTED TO TAKE CHARGE of CONTINENTAL EXPORT BOOK-DEPARTMENT. Experience necessary, and must be able to correspond in French and German.—Apply by letter, giving full particulars, and stating Salary required, to A. E., Box 1454, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

Situations Wanted.

THE BOROUGH LIBRARIAN of ST.

PANCRAE, Mr. Henry Bond (who, owing to the decision of the Borough Council not to proceed for some time with the erection of other Libraries, will shortly be engaged only as a half-time officer) desires an additional appointment in or near London as LIBRARIAN. PRIVATE SECRETARY (preferably with Literary Work or Owner of large Library), or with Publisher or large Bookseller. He is experienced in Cataloguing, Classifying, Book-Purchasing, and all other Departments of Library Work, as well as in Editorial and Secretarial Work. Having Organized the Public Libraries of St. Pancras, Plumstead, Woolwich, Lincoln, and Kendal, Mr. Bond is also prepared to advise Library Authorities in the establishment of New Libraries.—Address 98, Cranley Gardens, Muswell Hill, N.

LADY SECRETARY desires TEMPORARY

ENGAGEMENT till re-opening Parliament. Shorthand, Typing, Literary Work. Would take Travelling Companionship. Fluent French and German, some Italian and Arabic.—Box 1455, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

SHORTHAND TYPIST is OPEN to take an

ENGAGEMENT after lengthy and satisfactory employment in well-known Office of Literary Paper. Used to long hours and continuous work. Personal reference will be given by present Employer. Salary 25s. to commence.—Apply Box 1444, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

ADVERTISER, with ripe experience in all details of Publishing, Literary as well as Commercial, desires ENGAGEMENT in any Department. Excellent References.—Box 1336, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

UNIVERSITY GRADUATE (distinguished Honours in Classics) seeks APPOINTMENT IMMEDIATELY as READER and REVIEWER for PUBLISHING HOUSE. Latin, Greek, German (two years abroad), French, Philosophy, Theology, and some Hebrew. Interview desired.—U. G., care of Anderson's Advertising Agency, 14, King William Street, Strand, W.C.

Miscellaneous.

PUBLIC-HOUSE REFORM.—The People's Re-

freshment House Association, Ltd., founded by the Bishop of Chester, manages 68 Licensed Inns. Ask for List and Report. APPLY FOR 1l. SHARES. 5 per cent paid since 1899.

P.R.H.A., Broadway Chambers, Westminster.

TO SECURE FRIENDS and FRIENDSHIPS

join the CORRESPONDENCE CLUB, 10s. 6d.; or the ENGLISH-SPEAKERS' LINK, 2s. 6d., of 350, Mansion House Chambers, E.C.

YOUNG FOREIGN LADY, of noble family,

Student at the Sorbonne of Paris, excellent Musician, desires to ENTER A FAMILY of good social position AU PAIR. Perfect French Conversation and Literature.—Box 1453, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

A LADY, experienced, Certificated, will give

THREE HOURS' DAILY TEACHING in return for HOME in a good Family. English, French (acquired Abroad), German, Piano, Harmony, Drawing, Elementary Latin and Mathematics.—F. H., 23, Leinster Square, London, W.

LITERARY RESEARCH undertaken at the British Museum and elsewhere on moderate terms. Excellent Testimonials.—A. B., Box 1062, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

UNIQUE OPPORTUNITY.—FOR SALE, a splendid old COLLECTION of 1,152 IMPRESSIONS of ENGRAVED GEMS from the Chief European Cabinets, in 12 vols. A priceless ARTISTIC TREASURE of particular interest to ENGLISH Collectors of Antiquities.—Descriptive Catalogue from JAMES IRVINE, 12, Mimosa Street, Fulham, London S.W.

FOR SALE, BOUND VOLUMES of the TIMES

Newspaper and LIVERPOOL MERCURY. Times from 1858, Mercury from 1867 to 1904. Offers invited.—Apply T. WALLING, Lyceum, Liverpool.

Type-Writers, &c.

TYPE-WRITING.—The WEST KENSINGTON

OFFICES. Authors' MSS., Translations, &c. Legal and General Copying. Private Dictation Room. Circulars, &c., Duplicated. Usual Terms. References. Established fifteen years.—SIKES & SIKES, 223A, Hammersmith Road, London, W.

TYPE-WRITING.—AUTHORS' MSS.,

3d. 1,000 words. Carbon Copies, 3d. Paragraphs, Essays, 600 words, or less, 5d. Remington. Excellent Testimonials. Mention Athenæum.—C. A. GIRTON, 2, Grove Lane, Camberwell.

TYPE-WRITER.—PLAYS and MSS. of every description. Carbon and other Duplicate or Manifold Copies.—Miss E. M. TIGAR, 64, Maitland Park Road, Haverstock Hill, N.W. Established 1884.

TYPE-WRITING of every description carefully

and promptly executed at home (Remington, Brief), 7d. per 1000. Cambridge Local.—Miss N. McFARLANE, 11, Palmeira Avenue, Westcliff, Essex.

AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS, STORIES, PLAYS,

ESSAYS TYPE-WRITTEN with complete accuracy, 9d. per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies guaranteed. References to well-known Writers.—M. STUART, Allendale, Kymberley Road, Harrow.

TYPE-WRITING, 9d. per 1,000 words. All kinds of MSS. accurately typed. Clear Carbon Copies, 3d. per 1,000. References to well-known Authors. Oxford Higher Local. Tel. 1272 Richmond P.O.—M. KING, 24, Forest Road, Kew Gardens, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING undertaken by highly educated

Women (Classical Tripos; Cambridge Higher Local; Modern Languages). Research, Revision, Translation, Shorthand. Dictation Room.—THE CAMBRIDGE TYPE-WRITING AGENCY, 10, Duke Street, Adelphi, W.C.

Catalogues.

ANCIENT and MODERN COINS.—Collectors

and Antiquarians are invited to apply to SPINK & SON Limited, for Specimen Copy (gratis) of their NUMISMATIC CIRCULAR. The finest Greek, Roman, and English Coins on View and for Sale at Moderate Prices.—SPINK & SON, Limited, Experts, Valuers, and Cataloguers, 16, 17, and 18, Piccadilly, London, W. Established upwards of a Century.

P. M. BARNARD, M. A.

(Late Classical Scholar of Christ's College, Cambridge.)

10, DUDLEY ROAD, TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

CATALOGUE 26. ALDINE PRESS, Classical

Authors and Antiquities, Works by Humanists and Scholars, &c.

RECENTLY ISSUED.

CATALOGUE 25, BRITISH ANTIQUITIES,

Genealogy, Heraldry, Books, Tracts, and Deeds of Topographical and Local Interest, including an important Collection of Books by or on the Sidneys of Penshurst.

IN PREPARATION.

CATALOGUE 27, MSS. and INCUNABULA,

Illustrated with Facsimiles.

P. M. BARNARD begs to announce that EARLY

IN JANUARY he will open a BRANCH at 85, BRIDGE STREET (near the John Rylands Library), MANCHESTER.

FIRST EDITIONS of MODERN AUTHORS, including Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, Ainsworth; Books illustrated by G. and R. Cruikshank, Phiz, Rowlandson, Leech, &c. The largest and choicest Collection offered for Sale in the World. CATALOGUES issued and sent post free on application. Books Bought.—WALTER T. SPENCER, 27, New Oxford Street, London, W.C.

BOOKS.—ALL OUT-OF-PRINT and RARE

BOOKS on any subject SUPPLIED. The most expert Bookfinder extant. Please state wants and ask for CATALOGUE. I make a special feature of exchanging any Saleable Books for others selected from my various Lists. Special List of 2,000 Books I particularly want post free.—EDW. BAKER'S Great Bookshop, 14-16, John Bright Street, Birmingham. Rhead's Staffordshire Pots and Potters, numerous Illus., 21s. net, for 10s. 6d.; Burke's Peerage, 1907, 24s.; Who's Who, 5s.

CATALOGUES.—CLEARANCE CATALOGUE

of SECOND-HAND BOOKS post free on application. Books in all Branches of Literature, many scarce Items and First Editions. No fancy prices. Parcels sent on approval if desired. CATALOGUES issued Monthly.—Address J. BALDWIN, 14, Osborne Road, Leyton, Essex.

CATALOGUE No. 50.—Drawings by Turner,

Prout, Ruskin, &c.—Turner's Liber Studiorum and other Engravings.—Proofs touched by Turner—Constable's English Landscape—Etchings by Whistler—Japanese Colour-Prints—Illustrated Books. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church Terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

Authors' Agents.

THE AUTHOR'S AGENCY.—Established 1879.

The interests of Authors capably represented. Agreements for Publishing arranged. MSS. placed with Publishers.—Terms and Testimonials on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHESE, 74, Paternoster Row.

MR. GEORGE LARNER, Accountant and

Licensed Valuer to the Bookselling, Publishing, Newspaper, Printing, and Stationery Trades. Partnerships Arranged. Balance Sheets and Trading Accounts Prepared and Audited. All Business carried out under Mr. Lerner's personal supervision.—23, 29, and 30, Paternoster Row, E.C., Secretary to the Booksellers' Provident Institution.

Printers.

ATHENÆUM PRESS.—JOHN EDWARD

FRANCIS, Printer of the Athenæum, Notes and Queries, &c., is prepared to SUBMIT ESTIMATES for all kinds of BOOK, NEWS, and PERIODICAL PRINTING.—13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Sales by Auction.

Valuable Miscellaneous Books.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by

AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on TUESDAY, January 5, and Two Following Days, VALUABLE MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, comprising Folio Fine-Art Books and Old Books of Engravings—Black Letter Acts and Year Books—Seventeenth-Century Literature, some with curious woodcuts—Walton, Cotton, and Venables, Complete Angler, 1661-76—The First Edition of White's Selborne—Maps to Vancouver's Voyage—Forbes' Oriental Memoirs, 4 vols.—Picturesque Tour in Switzerland by Raoul-Rochette, and other Books with Coloured Plates—Coloured Panorama of Dacca, India—The Choiseul Cabinet, engraved by Basan, in old French morocco, with arms of the Duchesse de Choiseul on sides—Smith's Catalogue Raisonné, 9 vols.—The Vale Shakespeare, 39 vols.—a unique Set of the Bibliothèque de Carabas, Large Paper, 10 vols., with suppressed Poem by R. L. Stevenson—William Morris's Works, Kelmscott Golden Type Edition, 8 vols.—Library Editions of Peeps, Fielding, Thackeray, Gautier, the Arabian Nights, &c., and other Standard Works in General Literature—a Selection of Recent Publications from a Reviewer's Library—The Century Dictionary, 8 vols.—The English Dialect Dictionary, 6 vols.—The Classical Review from 1887 to 1908—Journal of Hellenic Studies, 1880-1900, &c.; also a few of the Arundel Society's Chromolithographs, in handsome Oak Frames.

To be viewed and Catalogues had.

Miscellaneous Books.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by

AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, January 13, and Two Following Days, MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, including Topographical and Antiquarian Works—a Set of Curtis's Botanical Magazine, from the commencement to 1890—Oeder's Floræ Danicæ Icones, 6 vols., and other Botanical and Natural History Books—The Sportsman and Veterinary Recorder, 16 vols.—Racinet, Le Costume Historique, 6 vols.—the Writings of Walpole, Madame d'Arbly, Strickland, and other Esteemed Authors—the Édition de Luxe of Lytton, 32 vols.—Encyclopædia Britannica 36 vols. in Oak Bookcase, &c.

Catalogues on application.

Curiosities.

TUESDAY NEXT, January 5, at half-past 12 o'clock.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will OFFER, at his Rooms, 38, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C., an important COLLECTION of SWORDS, DAGGERS, SPEARS, and WEAPONS from the MALAY PENINSULA—a rare Skull Cup from Tibet—Prehistoric Head found at Pichalo Point, Pisagua, South America—Chinese and Japanese Bronzes, Porcelain, &c.—Pictures—Prints—Antique Silver—and Curios of every description.

On view day prior to 4 and morning of Sale. Catalogues on application.

Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL

by AUCTION, at their Galleries, 47, Leicester Square, W.C., on THURSDAY, January 7, and Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of the late WADHAM LUKE SUTTON, Esq., of Northchurch, Berkhamsted; the LIBRARY of the late THOMAS McLEAN, and other Properties, comprising valuable Works on the Fine Arts, Natural History, Sport, the Drama, &c.—Library Sets of Standard Authors, valuable First Editions, Books with Coloured Plates, including Smith's Catalogue Raisonné. Original Issue—British Mezzotint Portraits—Royal Academy Catalogues from the Commencement—Graves and Cronin's Sir Joshua Reynolds—Leslie's Life of Constable—Gerning's Rhine in the Original Numbers—Cox's Landscape Drawing in the Original 12 Parts—Parkinson's Paradisi in Sole, First Edition—Jerdan's Birds of India—Bewick's Birds, Large Paper—Life in Paris in the Original Parts—Egan's Life of an Actor—Apperley's Life of Mytton, First Edition—Goldsmith's Good Natur'd Man, First Edition—Archæologia Cantiana—Dickens's Sunday under Three Heads, and other Works, First Editions—Lamb's Adventures of Ulysses, First Edition—Autograph Letters, including one of Nelson—Engravings, including Blake's Canterbury Pilgrims, Coloured by the Artist—Sporting Prints, Book Plates, and other interesting and rare items.

Catalogues may be had.

Magazines, &c.B L A C K W O O D

For JANUARY contains:—

THE STORY OF THE YOUNG TURKS.

OLD IRISH LIFE: DUELS.

SOME MEMORIES OF MY SPARE TIME, 1856-1885.—III.

The Franco-German War—Aid for the Wounded—After Sedan—In Metz—Under Fire.

By General the Right Hon.

Sir HENRY BRACKENBURY, G.C.B.

CUVÉE RÉSERVÉE; OR, THE WIDOW'S CRUSE.

By "OLE LUK-OIE."

THE MOUNTAINS OF THE MOON.

TIFLIS TO CONSTANTINOPLE via THE BLACK SEA PORTS.

CRABBE. By OLIVER ELTON.

THE NEW JUNE.—XLVII.—LII.

By HENRY NEWBOLT.

THE TWO PAINTERS. By ALFRED NOYES.

SEA-WOLVES.

THE CHURCH AND SOCIAL PROBLEMS.

MUSINGS WITHOUT METHOD:—

Oxford and the Working Class—The Failure of University Extension—The New Plan—Sir Henry Maine's 'Popular Government'—The True Meaning of Democracy.

OUR MANACLED FLEET. By an Admiral with Fifty-one Years' Service.

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS,

Edinburgh and London.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY AND AFTER for JANUARY commences a New Volume, and contains contributions byMajor-General FRANK S. RUSSELL, C.M.G. Is Invasion Possible?
Colonel the EARL OF ERROLL, K.T. Our Military Weakness.
NOEL BUXTON (Chairman of the Balkan Committee). The Young Turks.

The Right Hon. LORD RIBBLESDALE. The Lords and the Licensing Bill.

J. A. R. MARRIOTT. Reform of the House of Lords.

JANET E. LANE-CLAYTON, D.Sc. The Waste of Infant Life.

HERBERT PAUL, M.P. Milton.

W. C. D. WHETHAM, F.R.S. Inheritance and Sociology.

LADY PAGET. Court and Society at Berlin in the Fifties: a Reminiscence.

The Right Hon. LORD STANLEY OF ALDERLEY. The Educational Problem.

The COMTESSE DE FRANQUEVILLE. Peace or a Sword? Some Reflections of an Extremist.

Prof. SIMON NEWCOMB. Modern Occultism.

LEWIS MELVILLE. The Centenary of Edgar Allan Poe.

T. GOOD. Unemployment from the "Unemployed" Point of View.

C. E. D. BLACK (late in charge of the Geographical Department, India Office). A Railway to India (with a Map).

S. M. MITRA. Indian Reforms: a Hindu View.

London: SPOTTISWOODE & CO. LTD., 5, New Street Square.

THE BUILDER (founded 1842), 4, Catherine Street, London, W.C., January 2, contains:—

A PRIORY IN ROUSSILLON (with Sketches).

SOME AUSTRALIAN AND NEW ZEALAND TIMBERS.—I.

COMPETITION FOR PUBLIC LIBRARY, MIDDLESBROUGH.

THE CORSI COLLECTION OF MARBLES.

COWDRAY HOUSE (with Sketch).

GRESHAM COLLEGE AND THE NEW SCHEME.

ALMSHOUSES AT CHIPPING CAMPDEN (with Sketch).

ILLUSTRATIONS:—

THE ROMAN FORUM IN THE NINETEENTH CENTURY;

INTERIOR, AMIENS CATHEDRAL;

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL;

PLAN OF ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL;

PRIZE DESIGN FOR A FACADE IN FERRO-CONCRETE;

VICTORIA AND ALBERT MUSEUM, CENTRAL PORTION;

THE ARMENIAN CHURCH, PARIS;

ENTRANCE TO THE CHOIR, MILAN CATHEDRAL;

RECORDS OF OLD LONDON (from the Crace Collection).

From Offices as above (4d., by post 4½d), at Railway Bookstalls, Bookshops, and of all Newsagents.

EBENEZER PROUT'S WORKS. Bound, each net, 5s.

HARMONY: its Theory and Practice. Twenty-second Impression.

Revised and largely Re-written.

ANALYTICAL KEY TO THE EXERCISES in the Same. Net 3s.

COUNTERPOINT: Strict and Free. Ninth Impression.

DOUBLE COUNTERPOINT AND CANON. Fourth Impression.

FUGUE. Fifth Impression.

FUGAL ANALYSIS. Third Impression.

MUSICAL FORM. Sixth Impression.

APPLIED FORMS. Fifth Impression.

THE ORCHESTRA. 2 vols. Fourth Impression.

AUGENER, LTD., 6 New Burlington Street, and 22, Newgate Street.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.Ten Personal Studies. By Wilfrid Ward. With

10 Portraits. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

Contents.—A. J. Balfour—Three Notable Editors: Delane, Hutton, Knowles—Henry Sidgwick—Robert, Earl of Lytton—Father I. Ryder—Sir M. E. Grant Duff—Leo XIII.—Cardinal Wiseman—John Henry Newman—Newman and Manning.Of the first of these studies the Times says:—"Whenever the story of the fiscal struggle comes to be told no document will be more useful to the historian than this brilliant study, at once so sympathetic and so critical, so full of the intimacy which is only possible to friendship, so full of the detachment which is only possible to those who themselves stand outside the activities of their subject, so subtle, so suggestive, so evidently derived from the best and most central sources of information.... The whole is certainly the best defence of Mr. Balfour that has been written, and the concluding study of his temperament and character is a piece of very penetrating analysis."The Maid of France: being the Story of the

Life and Death of Jeanne d'Arc. By ANDREW LANG. With Illustrations. 8vo, 12s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 5d.)

"The book is a fine book, written in a fine spirit, and has not a dull page.... Mr. Lang has, indeed, succeeded in his purpose to fill this empty place in our book-shelves, and to depict this glory of her sex 'a star of ancient France.'"

MRS. CREIGHTON in the Church Family Newspaper.The Russian Conquest of the Caucasus. By J. F.

BADDELEY. With 7 Maps and Plans and 15 other Illustrations. Royal 8vo, 21s. net. (Inland postage 6d.)

"To those who delight to read of wild forays, of blood feuds, of patriotic struggles, surpassing those of the Highlands immortalized by Scott, we can cordially recommend it; also to those soldiers who would derive useful lessons as well as amusement from history; also to those politicians and statesmen who would learn not only how to carry through a war involving the subjugation of patriotic races, but also how not to do it."—Saturday Review.The Journal of Elizabeth Lady Holland (1791-

1811). Edited by the EARL OF ILCHESTER. With 6 Portraits. 2 vols. 8vo, 21s. net. (Inland postage 6d.)

"However the world may move, it will never come to a point from which it can fail to appreciate the witty, frank, characteristic, and thoroughly likeable journal so admirably presented to us in these volumes—which, by the way, contain some very fine portraits and a good index."—Glasgow Herald.Thomas George, Earl of Northbrook. A Memoir.

By BERNARD MALLET. With 8 Illustrations. 8vo, 15s. net. (Inland postage 5d.)

"Mr. Bernard Mallet, the author of this extremely pleasant biography, is to be congratulated on several things. The book is well proportioned—a rare quality in modern biographies. It is written with unerring taste, it is graceful, and above all, it succeeds in giving a clear picture of its subject."—Spectator.The Bernstorff Papers: the Life of Count Albrecht von Bernstorff. By Dr. KARL RINGHOFFER. Translated by Mrs. C. E. BARRETT-LENNARD and M. W. HOPER. 2 vols. 8vo, 21s. net. (Inland postage 6d.)

"The Bernstorff Papers,' to which Sir Rowland Blennerhassett contributes a brief but admirable introduction, are a veritable aid to the interpretation of international politics at one of the most dramatic periods in the annals of modern Europe."—Outlook.Stalks Abroad: being some Record of the Sport

obtained during a Two Years' Tour round the World. By HAROLD FRANK WALLACE, F.Z.S. With numerous Illustrations by the Author and from Photographs. 8vo, 12s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 5d.)

"This is one of the most pleasant books of sport published during recent years, full of the joy of the outdoor life, yet with many shrewd observations and criticisms of lasting value."—Country Life.Sisyphus: an Operatic Fable. By R. C. Trevelyan,

Author of 'The Birth of Parsival,' 'Cecilia Gonzaga,' &c. Fcap. 4to, 5s. net. (Inland postage 3d.)

"The work is written with an uncommon and clever blending of classical learning and comic vigour, and should give good entertainment to readers who like the humanities best when they are not taken too seriously."—Scotsman.Buddhism, Primitive and Present in Magadha

and in Ceylon. By REGINALD STEPHEN COPLESTON, D.D., Bishop of Calcutta. SECOND EDITION. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

Thesaurus of English Words and Phrases.

Classified and Arranged so as to facilitate the Expression of Ideas and assist in Literary Composition. By PETER MARK ROGET, M.D. F.R.S. Recomposed throughout, Enlarged and Improved partly from the Author's Notes, and with a full Index, by the Author's Son, JOHN LEWIS ROGET. Crown 8vo, 9s. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

Human Personality and its Survival of Bodily

Death. By FREDERIC W. H. MYERS.

ORIGINAL EDITION, 2 vols. 8vo, 42s. net. (Inland postage 5d.)

ABRIDGED EDITION, in 1 vol. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. 39, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

[Magazines, &c., continued on p. 26.]

MACMILLAN'S NEW BOOKS.

The Situation in Egypt.

Address delivered to the Eighty Club on December 15, 1908. By the EARL OF CROMER. 8vo, limp cloth, 1s. net.

Highways and Byways in Surrey.

By ERIC PARKER. With over 140 Illustrations by HUGH THOMSON. Extra crown 8vo, 6s.

William Morris.

By ALFRED NOYES. Crown 8vo, 2s. net.

[English Men of Letters.

World.—"Mr. Noyes's admirably balanced appreciation deserves unstinted praise. It is marked by keen critical insight, as well as by a distinction of literary style all too rare in these latter days."

William Haig Brown of Charterhouse.

A Short Biographical Memoir. Written by some of his Pupils and Edited by his Son, HAROLD E. HAIG BROWN. With Portrait. 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

Notes of a Botanist on the Amazon and Andes.

Being Records of Travel during the Years 1849-1864. By RICHARD SPRUCE, Ph.D. Edited and Condensed by ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE, O.M. F.R.S. With Portrait of the Author and other Illustrations and Maps. 2 vols. 8vo, 21s. net.

French Prints of the Eighteenth Century.

By RALPH NEVILL. With 50 Full-Page Plates. 8vo, 15s. net.

The Origin and Development of the Moral Ideas.

By EDWARD WESTERMARCK, Ph.D., Martin White Professor of Sociology in the University of London. In 2 vols. 8vo. Vol. II. 14s. net.

Previously published: Vol. I. 14s. net.

Earthwork of England.

Prehistoric, Roman, Saxon, Danish, Norman, and Mediaeval. By A. HADRIAN ALLCROFT, M.A. Illustrated with Plans, Sections, &c. 8vo, 18s. net.

Morning Post.—"Mr. Allcroft's thorough and complete monograph upon the old earthworks which remain to us in such great numbers is the last, as it is among the very best, of a great series of studies which Englishmen have devoted to such survivals."

Caesar's Commentaries on the Gallic War.

Translated into English by T. RICE HOLMES, Hon. Litt.D., Dublin. With Map. Crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net.

India: Its Life and Thought.

By JOHN P. JONES, D.D. Illustrated. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

A Canadian Manor and its Seigneurs.

The Story of a Hundred Years, 1761-1861. By Professor GEORGE M. WRONG, M.A. With Illustrations. Medium 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE.

Illustrated, price 1s. 4d. Annual Subscription, 16s.

QUEEN VICTORIA AS SEEN BY AN AMERICAN. Being Letters of the Wife of the American Minister in London, 1836-41. By SALLIE COLES STEVENSON. Arranged by WILLIAM L. ROYALL.

POTSDAM—THE PLAYGROUND OF THE HOHEN-ZOLLERNS. Romantic Germany—III. By ROBERT H. SCHAUFFLER.

DOMINO REYNARD OF GOLDUR TOWN: The History of a Silver Fox—II. By ERNEST THOMPSON SETON. Author of 'Biography of a Grizzly.'

And numerous other Stories and Articles of general interest.

MACMILLAN & CO., LTD., London.

ENGLISH REVIEW

NO. II. READY DECEMBER 30.

Price Half-a-Crown.

Vol. I. JANUARY, 1909.

1. D. G. ROSSETTI.—Jan Van Hunks.
2. ANATOLE FRANCE.—Les Etrennes de Mlle. de Doucine.
3. R. B. CUNNINGHAME GRAHAM.—Andorra.
4. JOSEPH CONRAD.—Some Reminiscences. II.
5. VERNON LEE.—The Virgin of the Seven Daggers. I.
6. TOLSTOI.—The Raid (conclusion).
7. H. G. WELLS.—Tono-Bungay. II.
8. THE MONTH.

EDITORIAL.—The Functions of the Arts in the Republic. II. Drama. Ruth St. Denis: THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON, Notes on 'Jan van Hunks'; GEORGE MEREDITH, Note on 'Cheyne Walk.'

POLITICAL AND DIPLOMATIC.—Prospects of Parliaments. I. At Home. II. Russia, by D. S. III. La Perse, par EUSTACHE DE LOREY, late of the French Legation to Téhéran. The House of Orange, with a Table, by E. ROTERODAMUS. The Case of John Doe (continued).

REVIEWS, COMMUNICATIONS.—'The Marketing of Small Produce' by A. G. STEPHEN REYNOLDS, &c.

AND TWO SUPPLEMENTS.

A Subscription to the ENGLISH REVIEW would form a most acceptable Christmas or New Year's Present. To facilitate the dispatch the Publishers will forward the Review Month by Month to the person to whom the Subscriber desires it should be sent, on receipt of the following order, which may be sent through a Bookseller or by post. Four numbers, each of which will contain one quarter of a complete novel, constitute one volume. There will thus be three volumes per annum. In the first volume Mr. Wells's novel, 'TONO BUNGAY,' will be completed.

To Messrs. DUCKWORTH,

Please send 1, 2, or 3 volumes of the ENGLISH REVIEW (1) to me, or (2) to :—

Address.....*

* Name and Address of Person to whom the REVIEW is to be sent.

You to inscribe in each number "The Gift of

....."†

† Name of Donor.

Signed.....

Address

DUCKWORTH & CO.
HENRIETTA STREET, W.C.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODERN GERMANY.

By W. HARBUTT DAWSON. 21s. net.

Times.—"Few publications in England have recently appeared containing in an equally condensed form so much information of value to all persons who take an interest in or are responsible for affairs of State."

Review of Reviews.—"It will be the standard book on Germany for English readers for many years to come."

Nation.—"It is, by a long way, the most impartial and exhaustive analysis of the economic and political situation in Germany which has appeared in England for several years past."

MYSTERIOUS PSYCHIC FORCES.

An Account of the Author's Investigations in Psychical Research, together with those of other European Savants. By CAMILLE FLAMMARION. With 21 Illustrations. 8s. 6d. net.

TOWARDS SOCIAL REFORM.

By Canon and Mrs. BARNETT. 5s. net.

PARIS IN ITS SPLENDOUR.

By E. A. REYNOLDS BALL, B.A. With 34 Illustrations. 2 vols. 5s. net each.

GENOA: the City of Columbus.

By V. W. JOHNSON. With 17 Illustrations 5s. net.

THE INDUSTRIAL AND COM- MERCIAL INFLUENCE OF THE ENGLISH PATENT SYSTEM.

By A. F. RAVENSHEAR, B.Sc. Whit School. 5s. net.

THE RIGHT HONOURABLE SPENCER PERCEVAL.

A Biography. By PHILIP TREHERNE. With a Portrait. 5s. net.

THE INTERNATIONAL.

A Review of the World's Progress.

The January issue is now on sale. 1s. net. Contributions by Abbé PAUL NAUDET (Paris), W. T. STEAD (London), Dr. JOSEPH LETTER (Vienna), &c.

THE STORY OF THE NATIONS.

(The Greatest Historical Library in the World. New Editions, attractively bound in a handsome red cloth cover. Price 5s. each.

CANADA.

By Sir JOHN BOWINDT, C.M.G. With a New Map and Revisions, and a Supplementary Chapter by EDWARD PORRITT.

TURKEY.

With a New Chapter on Recent Events. By STANLEY LANE-POOLE, M.A.

THE BALKANS.

With a New Chapter containing their History from 1896 to 1908. By WILLIAM MILLER, M.A. Each Volume profusely Illustrated and with Maps.

NEW 6/- NOVELS.

THE BARONET'S WIFE.

By FLORENCE WARDEN, Author of 'The Dazzling Miss Davison.' 6s.

THE WAYS OF MEN.

By HERBERT FLOWERDEW, Author of 'The Third Kiss.' 6s.

THE CAPTURE OF PAUL BECK.

By M. McDONNELL BODKIN, K.C., Author of 'The Quests of Paul Beck.' 6s.

Please write for a copy of Mr. Fisher Unwin's New Announcement List. Sent free on application.

T. FISHER UNWIN, 1, Adelphi Terrace, London.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 2, 1909.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
MR. LIONEL TOLLEMACHE'S MEMORIES	5
THE LETTERS OF A NOBLE WOMAN	6
THE LIFE OF LAZARILLO DE TORMES	6
AN AMERICAN CRITIC OF KEATS	8
CLASSICAL BOOKS	9
OUR LIBRARY TABLE (Naval Administration and Warfare; New Zealand; Egypt and the English; Egypt and its Monuments; In Morocco with General d'Amade; The Varying Year; Peter Pan's Postbag; The Soprano Trilogy; Whitaker's Almanack and Peerage)	11-13
THE VOICE, BY BERNARD CAPES; INTERNATIONAL TRIBUTE TO PROF. VON WILAMOWITZ-MOELLENDORFF; THE SHAKESPEARE QUARTOS; THE SEAL OF DORCHESTER; THE BOOK SALES OF 1908	13-14
LIST OF NEW BOOKS	16
LITERARY GOSSIP	16
SCIENCE—THE PEOPLE OF THE POLAR NORTH; CHILDREN AND GARDENS; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS NEXT WEEK; GOSSIP	18-21
FINE ARTS—VIE DE MICHEL ANGE; ARTS AND CRAFTS IN THE MIDDLE AGES; BY THE ROMAN WALL; ST. BARTHOLOMEW THE GREAT; LETTERING AND WRITING; GRAMMAR OF LETTERING; CAXTON HEAD CATALOGUE OF PORTRAITS; MR. LOWES DICKINSON; GOSSIP; EXHIBITIONS	21-22
MUSIC—ENGLISH AND IRISH MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	23
DRAMA—ENGLISH PASTORAL DRAMA; THE Pantomimes; GOSSIP	23-24
INDEX TO ADVERTISERS	24

LITERATURE

Old and Odd Memories. By the Hon Lionel A. Tollemache. (Arnold.)

WITH a good memory, wide reading, and a lifelong habit of "casting about," as he calls it, for old-world stories, Mr. Tollemache has filled his three hundred pages with more than twice as many anecdotes, epigrams, quotations and similitudes. In so vast an accumulation of witticisms, some must be better than others; the treasure house contains things old as well as new; not all its epigrams are pointed or quotations apt. Digressions are sometimes bewildering, and disquisitions tedious; nor are the analogies always heedful of a great expert's warning against confusing similes with exemplifications, comparison with identity. But very many of the incidents and sayings chronicled are delightful, the classical quotations titillating, the records of notable men distinctive; and the general reader—less critical than was Bassanio over Gratiano's chitchat, and, like the complaisant guests at Mr. Wardle's Christmas party, free from a diseased appetite for novelty—will be heartily grateful to Mr. Tollemache for the olio of oddities served up.

Mr. Tollemache devotes two chapters to a sketch of his remarkable father, who is still remembered, and of whom it used to be popularly said that at eighty years of age he was wont to drive four thoroughbreds, never wearing a greatcoat—that his eldest son was a grandfather, his youngest a boy at Eton. His son paints him as three parts Sir Roger de Coverley, one part Cardinal Richelieu. In politics he was a hard-bitten Tory, in religion a rigid Calvinist. Like his not dissimilar contemporary Sir Thomas Acland, he "took his stand upon the six days," sternly warning off all Biblical critics and profane sons of evolution. But to the famous pasture land allotments on his Cheshire estate, the historic three acres and a cow of Mr. Impey's leaflet, which enriched nearly one hundred farm labourers with spacious cottage, brick cowshed, pigsty, two and a half acres of grass, and half an acre of arable land at 10*l.* a year, Mr. Tollemache only just alludes. The old lord's eccentricities are forgotten, but his Peckforton "small holdings" remain a permanent factor in solution of the agricultural problem.

From his father Mr. Tollemache passes to his aunt, Lady Mount Temple, the "Evangelical Beauty" of Sydney Smith, in order to gaze on whom adoringly young Ruskin overcame his reluctance to attend the services at St. Peter's, where she "stood eminent in her grace above a stunted group of Italians." Her husband, better known as Mr. Cowper-Temple, immortalized by a clause in the 1870 Education Bill, at once a mouthpiece of Nonconformists, an ardent Churchman, and a staunch supporter of F. D. Maurice—"a threefold bark confounded all in one"—is pleasantly and effectively drawn. From his ancestral home the author takes us to Harrow, giving several pages to a portraiture of Vaughan. We gather that, according to his pupil's recollection, the great head master's æterna mansuetudo was found oppressive, that on his moral side he was Arnold writ small, that his knowledge was limited to Greek and Latin, and that his classical teaching ran only in a few grooves, justifying Matthew Arnold's epitaph on his friend—"a good creature, but brutally ignorant."

An old Balliol man, Mr. Tollemache has much to say about Oxford in the early sixties. His sketch of the Logic Professor, Henry Wall, is felicitous and fair; his memories of Wall's rival, the witty Hamiltonian Mansel, are somewhat meagre. He does full justice to Henry Smith; to his condensed, brilliant, witty talk; to the immense mathematical knowledge which in a Cambridge epigram ranked him with Sylvester and Cayley. We have anecdotes of Charles Bowen, Stanley, Conington, Temple, and W. E. Jelf, the storm-centre of an undergraduate riot in the Theatre which once broke up the Encænian. Jowett and Pattison the author had pretty well exhausted in earlier publications, but a few gleanings still remain. Outside Oxford he finds places in his gallery for Huxley and Spencer, Fitzjames Stephen, Whewell, Freeman, Anna Swanwick, and Westcott, who appears to have accepted spiritualism lest his disbelief in table-turning should compel incredulity as to Bible miracles. Our author preserves an audaciously pungent utterance by Carlyle, better perhaps omitted; and he devotes an interesting chapter (guaranteed by his own long experience) to life at Continental tables d'hôte, its pleasures, drawbacks, and, in recent years, its decadence.

Obiter dicta, not always appropriate, but always amusing, are scattered through the pages: as that Gladstone would talk about a piece of old china as if he were standing before the Judgment Seat; that woman was created after man, and has been after him ever since; that we know what becomes of the sheep and goats, but how about the alpacas? Keate rebukes the Eton choristers for unpunctuality: "Your conduct is an insult to Almighty God, and keeps the Fellows waiting." That scholars and thinkers, enjoying the work of research, shrink from the labour of publishing results, is explained by the aphorism "Generare jucundum est, parturire molestum." Heaven and hell are compared with two popular watering-places: one has a finer climate, the other better society. One more, perhaps the best of all: the Conscript Fathers of Boston were considering what could be done to mitigate the cruel east wind at a certain corner of the city; Tom Appleton suggested that a shorn lamb should be tethered there.

Of occasional slips in chronology and narrative Mr. Tollemache may like to be informed. The self-immolating Curtius of the Forum was Marcus, not Quintus. The first line of Bartlett's skit (p. 175) should run "Why was his term, already short," the incident having occurred in what Oxford calls the Short Term. It was not Sydney Smith who called Monckton Milnes "the cool of the evening." Under that impression Milnes wrote an angry letter, and he used to show to his guests at Friswell Sydney's dignified but kind answer of reproof. The extraordinarily apt quotation "duc nigras pecudes," here ascribed to Mansel, was given in our columns some years ago to its rightful author, Lipscomb, afterwards Bishop of Jamaica. It is quoted in 'Black Gowns and Red Coats' (1834), long before Mansel's time. So also Goulburn's "chaff, chaff, chaff," with a yet more grotesque addition, amused Exeter undergraduates in a college tutor's sermon before Goulburn went to Rugby. The "have mercy [not "pity"] on my son" is due to a certain absentminded Kentish vicar, on the first appearance of his son as curate in his church; and the "false-hood" pun, without the evidently spurious "contra-band," belongs to Bishop Fraser of Manchester. Otium, in Horace's noble ode, means freedom from anxiety, not idleness. It was his warts, not wrinkles, which Cromwell wished to be shown in his portrait. Etonians were classified in the ancient proverb as boatmen, not as swells—a word of later date. The "lordlings and atheists" used to be better told by the pleasant raconteur from whom Mr. Tollemache borrows. He had enjoyed a Sunday dinner at the Deanery, and spent the next evening with Vaughan, who said to him, "So you were with Arthur last night, meeting, no doubt, not a few elderly unbelievers, of title."

"History," says Johnson,

"may be formed from permanent monuments and records; but Lives can only be written from personal knowledge, which is growing every day less, and will in a short time be lost for ever. What is known can seldom be immediately told; and, when it might be told, it is no longer known."

Let us balance this sententious truth against Horace's disparaging line; let us welcome the percontator, and own his garrulity valuable, as embalming trifles which History disdains. In proportion as he is careful to say nothing that is false and all that is true, he ministers to the biographer's craft, and sheds light on the manners of an age. This task Mr. Tollemache's 'Memories' have discharged; for the labour lavished on their compilation he deserves the thanks of all who value an amusing and instructive book.

The Letters of a Noble Woman (Mrs. La Touche of Harristown). Edited by Margaret Ferrier Young. (Allen & Sons.)

THE name of Maria La Touche is familiar in the world of letters both from Ruskin's work and life—in 'Præterita' he describes his first visit to the house of the La Touches in Norfolk Street—and from Hare's 'Two Noble Lives.' This volume of letters, edited by Miss Young, is a worthy memorial of an accomplished woman. Her letters given here have such a quality of distinction that they fill us with a genuine regret for the destruction of her long correspondence with Mrs. Bishop.

One of the earliest recollections of Maria Price was of a children's ball given in the Chinese Pavilion at Brighton by King William IV. and Queen Adelaide. It has already been widely quoted. Marriage emancipated her from the régime of her mother, Lady Desart, who had brought her up upon those strict lines of discipline and restriction which resulted, perhaps, in the reaction of a subsequent generation of parents. Mrs. La Touche was now able to indulge to a great extent her love for country life in Ireland.

From the first she was inspired by an ardent love for the country and the things of the country, which Ruskin knew how to encourage and to use, and of which he wrote in a characteristic letter:—

"In truth there is no one who can help me as you can, for you see with my eyes and more—and feel as I feel—perhaps in some directions only the least bit less—and speak more clearly than any living animal can speak or sing, except an Irishwoman. And you're to write whenever you can, only for goodness' sake not on that gritty paper, which makes me shiver and shudder like a knife on a rough plate. How ever you can, passes all my wits to think."

This love of the open air and of flowers rendered the atmosphere of social life in London oppressive to her—as stifling as the dirty air she loathed. Her contempt for the hard, bustling life of the Society woman finds expression in many a passage, uttered with that distinction of phrase and liveliness of image natural to her. Of such an uncongenial spirit, devoted to the fashionable world, she wrote to Lady Waterford:—

"I feel as if I were a black-beetle, and she a great blue dragon-fly. She buzzes past me with a flash of colour and loud metallic hum, and I clap my two great wing-cases to my sides, and crouch in the shadow."

Her conversation had a peculiar charm; she spoke always with wit and point, never forced and never foolish. These qualities are reflected in the letters preserved here—letters written chiefly from Harristown, her Irish home, to intimate friends, like Mrs. Arthur Severn, Ruskin's niece, upon ordinary everyday topics, her garden, the weather, the novels or the politics of the moment—letters all made luminous and lasting by the witty phrase or the wise reflection born of a noble and a cultured mind.

There are many delightful flashes of humour in these letters, and some very straight and true criticisms of her own people, which might help an English statesman to understand the Irish better than many political treatises. Leaving politics alone, we cannot refrain from quoting this delightful passage:—

"I do hate sums. There is no greater mistake than to call arithmetic an exact science. There are Permutations and Aberrations discernible to minds entirely noble like mine; subtle variations which ordinary accountants fail to discover; hidden laws of Number which it requires a mind like mine to perceive. For instance, if you add a sum from the bottom up, and then again from the top down, the result is always different."

The correspondence between Mrs. La Touche and "St. Chrysostom"—the name given to Ruskin, to whom she was introduced by Louisa, Lady Waterford, in 1858—began by her writing to the Professor for his advice upon the education of her children. Miss Young says all that need be said of the consequent devotion of the master for the pupil, the beautiful and clever Rose La Touche. Ruskin's lovely drawing of the girl is here beautifully reproduced. The letter to Ruskin in which Mrs. La Touche describes the west coast of co. Clare is real literature—fine appreciation, born of knowledge, and beautifully expressed in the Ruskinian manner, and with much of the Ruskinian magic of words. In such letters the author proves herself poet as well as naturalist, capable of seeing the beauty of common things, the mystery of the dawn and the wonder of the natural world.

Miss Young has performed her part as editor conscientiously and with good taste. We do not, indeed, greatly care for the title she has chosen for her book, though we should be the last to grudge the epithet "noble" to the woman who, widowed at eighty, and bereft of her home of sixty-two years, could write:—

"My experiences of the last twelve months have developed my fortitude and conquered my 'nerves' and other weaknesses to a great extent. The river and the elm trees caught me by their steady sameness, as the stars do, when I see them from my bed. They say nothing, from themselves, but they transmit endless and consoling messages from the Unseen.... I am supposed to have come down in the world. In reality

I have gone up to a truer and simpler life, and better aims, and a clearer vision, in the Light that comes with Eventide."

That is indeed a noble message of sorrow borne with courage, and of years which brought no withering, no blunting selfishness, to a spirit well worthy of being enshrined in this volume.

The Life of Lazarillo de Tormes. Translated by Sir Clements Markham. (A. & C. Black.)

"THE name of Diego Hurtado de Mendoza," says a note by the publishers accompanying specimen pages of this book,

"is known to most people, whether they have studied Spanish literature or not. His brilliant story, 'Lazarillo de Tormes,' which takes rank with 'Don Quixote' as one of the world's classics, is now for the first time adequately presented to the English public."

That "the first picaresque novel," as Mr. Fitzmaurice-Kelly terms it, needed adequate presentation to the English-reading public, is unquestionably true; but how far that need has been met by the latest translator in the person of Sir Clements Markham is open to question. That "most people" are acquainted with the name of Diego Hurtado de Mendoza we take leave to doubt; and whether he wrote 'Lazarillo de Tormes' is a matter on which there is great difference of opinion. Sir Clements Markham has not scrupled on the title-page to ascribe the authorship to Don Diego; and in his introductory matter he takes it for granted, dismissing in a foot-note, somewhat contemptuously, the opposite view, with the words "Doubt has been thrown on the authorship, but without sufficient reason." Apparently Sir Clements has not read the essay by that eminent scholar M. Alfred Morel-Fatio in the first series of his 'Études sur l'Espagne,' in which he seeks to refute the claim (first brought forward in 1607 by a Belgian bibliographer) of Diego Hurtado de Mendoza to be the writer of 'Lazarillo de Tormes.' Of this essay Mr. Fitzmaurice-Kelly says, in his 'History of Spanish Literature,' that it is "exceedingly ingenious, but, like all negative criticism, it is somewhat unconvincing"—an opinion with which we entirely agree. However, one cannot help wondering how this inimitable satire disguised as an autobiography could have been written by Don Diego when he was a student at Salamanca—how he, a mere youth, who had been brought up in luxury, could, without personal experience, have drawn such an accurate picture of "low life" in Spain. Why, also, was the book not published until 1554, when Don Diego, at the age of fifty, returned from his long sojourn in Italy? The question of the authorship of a book that, as Mr. Fitzmaurice-Kelly says, "condenses into nine chapters the cynicism, the wit, and the resource of an observer of genius," may remain a mystery, or may suddenly be resolved by the discovery of some hitherto unknown record.

To his translation Sir Clements Markham has prefixed an account of the family of Mendoza; a sketch of the life of Don Diego; a notice of the book, a few of the numerous editions, and some of the English translations; and a note on the author's conception of the character of Lazaro. In the last Sir Clements attempts, not very convincingly, to show that Don Diego made his hero "a boy of his own age." To do this he makes assumptions which may be justified, but for which he has no proof, and he contradicts himself in regard to the age of Lazarillo in 1510 (compare the foot-notes on p. xxxi and p. 5). The bibliographical note is both incomplete and inexact. For instance, the reader is led to suppose that this bold and scathing satire did not fall under the ban of the Romish Church until 1573, the fact being that it was totally prohibited as early as 1559, the former date being that when an expurgated edition was published at Madrid. This embargo on the book remained in force in Spain until last century, but, as M. Morel-Fatio points out, was rendered nugatory by the ease with which the uncastrated editions printed at Antwerp could be smuggled into the Peninsula. Sir Clements mentions the first edition, printed at Burgos in 1554, of which a copy (not unique, apparently, since a second is referred to by M. Morel-Fatio) is in the library of the Duke of Devonshire; an exact transcript of its text was printed by Mr. Butler Clarke at Oxford in 1897. Sir Clements also speaks of an Antwerp edition of 1555 in the Grenville Library. This is an error: what the Grenville Library actually contains is the reprint of the genuine work published by Martin Nuyts at Antwerp in 1554, and the first edition of the so-called "second part," by an unknown writer, issued by the same publisher in 1555. Of the self-styled "second impression," "reprinted, corrected, and enlarged" (as the title-page says), issued at Alcalá in 1554, a copy of which is in the British Museum Library, Sir Clements says nothing. Nor does he mention the admirable "restitution of the editio princeps," published at Barcelona and Madrid in 1900 by the Catalonian scholar Señor R. Fouché-Delbosc, who, being of opinion that all the three editions of 1554 are founded on an unknown earlier source, has, with excellent judgment, and at the cost of much labour, compiled from those three versions a text as near to complete accuracy as possible, altering nothing, but giving in foot-notes every various reading of each edition, and some suggested emendations where all three appear to be in error. In an appendix are printed some half-dozen additions, two of them rather lengthy, which are found in the Alcalá edition, and which M. Morel-Fatio rightly pronounces spurious. A commentary on the work, promised by Señor Fouché-Delbosc, appears not to have seen the light yet. This "restored text" was reprinted in Gothic characters at Barcelona in 1906, with a preface by Señor Eudaldo Canibell, who has, however (unwisely, we think), incorporated the additions of the Alcalá version, and reprinted the "second part" by Juan de Luna. The two "second parts" are justly characterized by Sir Clements as "miserable rubbish"; but, as M. Morel-Fatio has pointed out, while we cannot thank Juan de Luna for the spurious continuation that he published in Paris in 1620, we are indebted to him in some measure for his revision of the genuine work, in that we learn therefrom what Spanish words and expressions had at that date become obsolete, and his corrections are often judicious. "In short," as M. Morel-Fatio says, "this 'Lazarillo' rejuvenated serves in some sort as a commentary to the old one, and often makes it easier to understand."

Of the first English translation, that by David Rowland (not Rowlands) of Anglesea, first published in 1586, Sir Clements gives a short description, quoting the title incorrectly, and laconically remarks, "This is the best translation." What "best" here means we do not know: Rowland's version is delightfully quaint, but it is also decidedly free, as a comparison with the original proves. Rowland asserts on his title-page that his translation was "drawn out of Spanish." We wonder if this assertion is true, and, if so, what was the edition that he used. The reason why we express doubt on this subject is that to the end of his translation of the genuine work Rowland has tacked on a short chapter in which Lazaro describes his friendship with certain German boon companions at Toledo, and records the fact of his wife's giving birth to a daughter, of whose paternity he seemed to have doubts. Now, as M. Morel-Fatio has pointed out, this addition is taken from the beginning of the "second part" of 1555, and is only found in the position referred to in those editions printed outside Spain that contain merely the first part, the earliest being the French translation published in Paris in 1561. We cannot find that there was any Spanish edition with this peculiar feature from which Rowland could have derived his rendering. This, however, by the way. Of later English translations we need only say that they are all more or less unsatisfactory, abounding in omissions and interpolations as well as erroneous or paraphrastic renderings.

We turn now to Sir Clements Markham's translation. Even in the Prologue we find a misinterpretation of the original. Addressing his unnamed patron, Lazaro says:—

"And since your honour writes [desiring] that the story be written at full length, it seemed to me [advisable] not to take it up in the middle, but from the beginning," &c.

For this Sir Clements has:—

"Well, your Honour! This author writes what he writes, and relates his story very fully."

Then in a new paragraph:—

"It seemed to him that he should not begin in the middle, but quite at the beginning," &c.

Again, in the account of his birth in the mill over the river Tormes, whence he derived his surname, Lazaro is made to say: "My mother being one night taken with me in the mill, she gave birth to me there," which is a mistranslation, also odd English. Sir Clements is guilty, further, of omissions and mutilations, without apparent reason. After telling us of his mother's presenting him with "a very pretty little blacky" as a brother, Lazaro says:—

"And I remember that when my black stepfather was playing with the laddie, when the child saw that my mother and I were white, and he not, it ran away from him in fear to my mother, and pointing with its finger said: 'Mother, bogey-man!' He replied, laughing: 'Whoreson!'"

The Spanish word for "bogey" is coco, from which the popular cocoa-nut is supposed to derive its name, owing to the monkey-face on the shell. Sir Clements omits "black" before "stepfather," renders coco by "he is ugly," and suppresses the epithet employed by Zayde, which, though often used jocularly, was here doubtless intended as an insult to Antona.

There are even worse examples in the story of the blind man (one of the best in the book). The rendering "illnesses of mothers" for males de madre might have been passably correct in an English work of the early eighteenth century, but conveys a wrong impression in a modern book. At the bottom of the same page (16), Lazaro, speaking of his blind master's stinginess, and his consequent sufferings from want of food, is made to say: "With all his knowledge and experience, I managed so well that, oftener than not, I got the best of it." Here the word translated "I managed" is in the original contaminava, an evident error, as Señor Fouché-Delbosc notes, for contraminava; and there is a le prefixed, which the translator has ignored. Thus the literal meaning is "I countermined him in such sort." The employment of this military term by the writer might be considered an argument (a poor one, certainly) in favour of the authorship of Don Diego. Describing the manner in which he sought to be revenged on his blind master for his cruel treatment of him, Lazaro says:—

"And hereupon I always took him by the worst roads, and designedly, to cause him harm and hurt, if there were stones, by them; if mud, by the deepest, because, although I did not get through it any the more dryshod, I should have been delighted to put out one of my eyes in order to put out the two that he had not got. On this he always struck me with the upper end of his stick on the back of the head, which I always bore full of bruises and hairless at his hands."

This Sir Clements abbreviates into—

"So I led him by the worst ways, seeking to do him harm, taking him over stony places and into mud. He always beat me on the back of my head, so that it was covered with bruises."

The expression "To put out one eye," &c., is the Spanish equivalent of "To cut off one's nose to spite one's face."

The amusing incident of the purloined sausage loses much of its picturesqueness and pungency at the hands of Sir Clements, who describes wrongly the colewort and its position; turns the spit on which it was roasted into a "pan" (although Rowland's version has a marginal note on the use of spits in Spain at that period); omits Lazaro's punning lament beginning "Lazerado de mi" ("Wretched I!"); spoils the part describing the insertion of the blind man's long nose into Lazaro's mouth, and the dire result; and makes the blind man lose his little remaining hair and have his face and throat scratched at the boy's hands, instead of the other way about. Sir Clements makes Lazarillo say: "Remembering my troubles there came a weakness upon me. But my stomach recovered." The original, however, has nothing about Lazarillo's stomach recovering; and the "weakness" referred to was the thought of his cowardice in not biting off the long nose when it was between his teeth, and thus giving tit for tat. Why Sir Clements omits this passage we cannot imagine. At the end of the story, when Lazaro gets the blind man to jump across a non-existent stream and strike his head against a stone pillar, he taunts him by crying: "What! you smelt the sausage and not the post? Smell! smell!" For these last words Sir Clements unreasonably substitutes "Oh! Oh!"

The story of the miserly cleric contains similar examples of garbled passages; and in that of the poverty-stricken esquire are several. In the famous incident of the neat's foot Lazaro tells his supposititious patron that as the hungry esquire gnawed

"each little bone better than a greyhound of his would have done, 'It has cheese-and-garlic-sauce [almodrote], this excellent food,' said he. 'With a better sauce dost thou eat it,' replied I, softly. 'Pardie, how I have relished it as if I had not eaten a mouthful to-day.' 'As that is [true], so may the good years come to me,' said I to myself."

Sir Clements renders the above thus:—

"'This wonderful food is like a hotch-potch,' he said: 'You eat with the best kind of sauce,' I replied. 'Before God,' said he, 'if I had known I would not have eaten a mouthful all day.' 'Thus the good years avenge me,' I said to myself."

The translation of vengan by "avenge" is a "howler" worthy of a schoolboy.

On the very next page we read:—

"The avaricious blind man and the ill-conditioned clergyman, may God reward them both! nearly killed me with hunger, the one with a kiss on the hand, the other with a deceitful tongue."

What Lazarillo actually said to himself was:—

"The avaricious blind man and the close-fisted niggardly cleric, who, although God had given it [i.e., food] to both, to the one by means of a 'Kiss-your-hand,' to the other by means of a glib tongue, killed me with hunger," &c.

The unusual expression de mano besada seems to be a sort of parody of de mano armada, "by force of arms," which to the author, if he were a soldier, would naturally be familiar.

A couple of pages further on we are told that Lazarillo used to see the poor esquire coming up the street

"thinner than a greyhound of good breed, and with regard to what touched the nonsense he called honour, he brought a straw, of which we had not enough in the house. Coming to the door, he would grind his teeth with nothing between them," &c.

This about the straw is absolutely unintelligible. What the original says is that the esquire was "longer than a greyhound of good breed, and because it touched that sorry thing of his that they call honour, he took a straw, from those of which there were not even enough in the house, and went out to the doorway, picking his teeth that had nothing between them."

On the same page we are told how the poor esquire, having somehow become possessed of a real, gave it to Lazaro, and said to him: "Go to the market for bread, meat, and wine, for we will break the Devil's eye." Now we submit that the English reader unacquainted with Spanish might easily misunderstand the meaning of the last four words. In the first place, we do not in English speak of "breaking," but of "putting out" an eye; and in the second place, the Spanish phrase "quebrár el ojo al diáblo" means "to make merry" (the nearest English equivalent to the Spanish being, perhaps, "to drive dull Care away"). The examples given, are, we think, sufficient to prove that Sir Clements Markham has missed a rare chance.

But though this translation leaves so much to be desired, the introductory matter of which we have spoken is useful, and the foot-notes that Sir Clements has appended to the text here and there are helpful in elucidating historical and other references. The same may be said of the indexes, and the sketch-map of the route taken by Lazarillo from Salamanca to Toledo.

The book is nicely got-up, and we have noticed only one misprint—on p. 95, where "timbrels" is printed "tumbrels." There are about a dozen illustrations, by Mr. Stephen Baghot de la Bere, in keeping with the character of the book. But why is the priest at p. 9 given a veritable gamp? And the notice on the inn at p. 93, "Vinos da pasto," is enough to make a Spaniard shudder.

John Keats: a Literary Biography. By Albert Elmer Hancock. (Constable & Co.)

MR. HANCOCK wishes to be described as a romantic critic—that, at least, is what may be inferred from his Preface. It is a position which a few only can occupy with advantage to letters. The license claimed by such practitioners has led to some egregious follies, while it has given us discoveries beyond the reach of the pedant and the one-sided specialist. The essential quality of romantic criticism is intuition—a mysterious gift for discovering beauty and a magic touch for its elucidation. Men of genius, such as Mr. Swinburne, or Keats, who wrote

Spenserian vowels that elope with ease,
And float along like birds o'er summer seas, become romantic, in this sense, so soon as they begin to write or speak about poetry; that which made them great poets makes them critics at once fanciful and profound. Neither the intuition nor the imagination of genius has been bestowed on Mr. Hancock; therefore, when he wrote,

"In this book I have endeavoured to conceive of Keats as the protagonist of a domestic drama, coming upon a stage of shifting scenes, as in the old chronicle-histories,—coming, playing his part, and passing tragically under the blight," he should have paused to consider whether his talents were suited to writing romantic criticism, or, to be more exact, critical and romantic biography.

In so far as his book is biographical it may be dismissed in a few words. The writer who would interest us in the retold tale of Keats must do so by the peculiar distinction of his own mind and the charm of his prose.

There is nothing uncommon that we can discover about Mr. Hancock's mind, and he writes in short, choppy, ill-connected sentences—a style without grace or vigour. Unless it be a dash or two of gossip, he has added little to Mr. Colvin's delicate sketch, and in his attempt "to attain the dramatic vitality of fiction" he is generally unimpressive:—

"In a storm of anger he leaves Hunt's house. Keats is no longer himself. The riotous imagination, now wholly beyond control, is straining to loosen his moorings to a human world and to drag him, perforce, toward the boundaries of Mater Tenebrarum."

Mr. Hancock's criticism is of two kinds. The quiet, unromantic student of Keats pronounces just and conventional judgments; from the ordinary premises he draws the ordinary conclusions, and, in spite of an unfortunate style, presents them with a good deal of sense and point. To distinguish "receptivity to all good things," "the rejection of the abnormal," "the love of fine excess," and "a distaste for logic," as significant traits in the character of Keats; to admire his invention and the felicity of his style, and to deplore his occasional over-emphasis and perversity, is unimpeachable criticism, but trite. "The lustre of imagination shed over reality the glamour of beauty" is an unattractive sentence, but a just observation; and when Mr. Hancock prefers to think of Keats as "a belated poet of the Renaissance" rather than a Greek, he is more than just—he is judicious. For years it was a commonplace of ill-informed criticism to describe the art of Keats as "Greek," presumably because he sometimes made use of classical mythology to express a joyous paganism as lovely almost as the Hellenism of which it was reminiscent; in the same way critics still speak of the stately and classical Chénier as "the first of the romantics," for no better reason than that he permitted himself a rare enjambement. Great art less Greek than the art of Keats is to be found only among the frankly Gothic writers; the poetry of Keats excels in qualities which the Greeks did not cultivate, while a diligent study of the Athenian dramatists could, perhaps, alone have cured him of his characteristic faults.

Mr. Hancock is to be congratulated, then, on his discrimination, on having distinguished between good authorities and bad. Unfortunately, the sound though uninspired conservative, surely the natural Mr. Hancock, is dominated by the romantic innovator. Evidently, critics in the New World are expected to be original, and so conscious is Mr. Hancock of this demand that sometimes he delivers himself of the plainest truths as though they had just been revealed to him by the "oneirocritical masters," at other times likens Keats to King Lear. Mr. Hancock, discoverer and iconoclast, is not very interesting, though his strenuous love of liberty and fine contempt for aristocracies and academies give the book a much-needed note of humour. It is he who tells us that "the genius of Keats was first awakened by the moon":—

"The moon moved his childish heart potently. It was the consoling mother for his tears. It was the mystic presence that shared his joys, the comrade of his solitude, the substitute for mountains, books, friends, feminine charms."

The moon inspired Keats to write 'Endymion,' which turns out to be neither more nor less than "the philosophy of soul-making," a puzzle to which the key is "the meaning of the word 'spiritualize.'" Passing on to 'The Eve of St. Agnes' the critic first surprises us by showing that Porphyro is an Italian Guelph and his lady's family German and Ghibelline, that their castle lies among the foothills of the Alps, and that old Angela is a prisoner from the south; then astounds us by contradicting Rossetti, and declaring that Keats had a great gift for narrative—an assertion which he makes good by retelling the story of the poem in his own words, which, one must suppose, are designed to bring out the subtlety and strength of the tale more persuasively than those of the poet.

Of 'Hyperion' he says:—

"There is in 'Hyperion' a rousing masculinity. It vibrates with mass power in action. Keats' principle of beauty in repose has been liberated into the beauty of dynamic energies."

This instructive criticism makes further comment on his style unnecessary.

This is a book neither for students of Keats nor for the fastidious in literature; but those who care to fill in with a dab of colour, be it never so crude, the outline traced by Mr. Colvin, may read it with pleasure, especially as such readers are apt "to skip the theorizing." The illustrations add nothing to the book.

CLASSICAL BOOKS & TRANSLATIONS.

Virgil. Translated by John Jackson. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)—The Oxford series of classical translations was no doubt bound to comprise a Virgil, and Mr. John Jackson has essayed the task of making a version to satisfy modern demands. We have tested his work carefully, and do not hesitate to pronounce it on the whole satisfactory. It is essentially a close translation, often showing delicacy of touch. There is in the diction enough of archaism, though far less than Prof. Mackail allowed himself. Every now and again we note little felicities of wording or commutation of parts of speech which show that the translator has worked con amore. He tends, however, occasionally to force a little too much out of the words which Virgil—no doubt deliberately—allowed himself to use: this is a fault, though perhaps on the better side. Mr. Jackson expresses his obligation to distinguished Oxford scholars who "read the proofs and made many valuable suggestions and corrections"; but neither the Vice-Chancellor, Mr. Clark of Queen's, nor Mr. Godley of Magdalen seems to have detected the fact that in eight lines at the beginning of Georgics iii. two words are left untranslated—de marmore (l. 13), which should be taken with ponam, "I will build of marble," and cursibus (l. 20), "(strive) in races (and with raw gauntlet)." We have found other omissions in Georgics iii., and this seems to show the probability that there are many in the volume: e.g., l. 125, dixere, and three whole lines 135–7. Is this due to sheer prudery? Yet the Oxford Latin text does not omit them, and the translator does not omit l. 251. In the opening passage "published abroad" is too mild for vulgata (l. 4), which the context shows to mean "staled by usage, trite." In l. 23 iuvat is not satisfactorily rendered "I long (to escort)": the idea is different—"Even now I feel the thrill of escorting." Virgil, warming to his subject, grows proleptic, and imagines himself already officiating at this triumph to be. Enim (l. 70) cannot be translated "so," in spite of Pierius: Mr. Page's explanation of the passage is more satisfactory. In l. 75 continuo should be taken closely with in arvis, as in many such cases in Virgil. In l. 85 premens can hardly be rendered "snorting": rather "he restrains and rolls beneath his nostrils the gathered fire." Without going into the discussion of the meaning of the much-disputed word vescus, we think Mr. Jackson is justified in translating vescum papaver (G.; v. 131) as "fine-grained poppies." It seems evident that the word denotes daintiness somewhere in the thing it describes: possibly it is the flower, or even the stalk, as understood by a French translator, M. L. Laroombière, who turns "les pavots au pied grêle." At any rate, Conington is not happy in his suggestion that the word refers to the "smallness of poppy seeds"! In l. 146 "the wine-bibber" is not happy for potantibus. Usage has given to "wine-bibber" a flavour of moral obliquity: nothing of the sort is intended here, but something like "to his cronies over their wine." In 'Æn.' i. 198, neque enim ignari sumus ante malorum is not well represented by "for 'tis long since we made acquaintance with grief," but rather by "in days gone by we have felt the pinch of trouble."

Such things as these may seem comparatively trivial, but nowadays, when translations are many, one is differentiated from another mainly by small points.

We have no doubt that the large majority of those who will use Mr. Jackson's translation will find themselves repaid by a study of his version, in spite of its omissions.

Select Epigrams of Martial: Spectaculorum Liber and Books I.–VI. Edited by R. T. Bridge and E. D. C. Lake. (Same publishers.)—Since the publication of Prof. Lindsay's Oxford text of Martial some five years ago the amount of attention paid to the Roman epigrammatist has been steadily increasing. The abridged edition of this for schools was a happy thought, and last year we noticed favourably a metrical rendering of some of the epigrams by Mr. A. E. Street. Sixth-form boys are often attracted by Martial, and read him not under supervision in class, but "off their own bats." Such volumes as Mr. Street's and the edition before us are valuable because they help to keep youthful enthusiasm within proper limits, and to reveal the poet as the "kind, wise, and self-respecting gentleman" rather than as the "unseemly jester." The time that can be devoted at school to Martial is probably not much more than an hour a week for one term, and he will probably be read rapidly. This being so, the edition now put out by Messrs. Bridge and Lake, of Charterhouse School, is admirably adapted to school needs. They have been at pains "to make clear the thought and point of each epigram," and to keep their notes concise. The Introduction gives in a connected form all that need be known of certain features of Roman life constantly referred to in the text. For the convenience of those who are already in possession of Lindsay's 'Epigrammata Selecta,' the Introduction and notes may be had separately. The editors have produced a scholarly and well-planned book which sixth-form boys will not be slow to appreciate.

Æschylus in English Verse. Part III. By Arthur S. Way. (Macmillan & Co.)—Part III. of Mr. Way's English verse translation of Æschylus includes the 'Agamemnon,' 'Choëphoræ,' and 'Eumenides.' His readers by now well know what to expect of Mr. Way—dramatic life, scholarship, and metrical accomplishment. All these qualities are well exemplified in the volume before us. The present reviewer has thoroughly tested much of Mr. Way's work by reading whole plays in class, and thinks the translator's success is confined largely to the iambic portions of his work. On the other hand, the more elaborate metres of the choruses—perhaps almost inevitably so—fail to satisfy. An instance before us is the chorus of the 'Agamemnon' beginning at line 40. The metre refuses to flow: now awkward medial pauses check the rhythm, and now the reader loses his stride and has to return to the beginning of the line to get a fresh start. Mr. Way sometimes attempts too much, and we not seldom get unpleasing specimens like this ('Agamemnon,' 222 sq.):

Oh hideous wellspring of woes, the uncaring
Frenzy that trampleth on honour, the burning
Passion that steels hearts! Thus the severance
Of the fetter that trammelled the fleet, the deliverance
Of a wanton was he by his child's blood earning!

One may read this twice or thrice and not feel sure of the sense; pleasure in rhyme or rhythm there can be little. In this and many a chorus a good prose version to us at least gives far more pleasure. We feel that all Mr. Way's ingenuity of compound words, such as "down-streaming," "pity-gleaming," "squadron-leader," "tempest-speeder," and so on, does not avail to produce easily read, easily intelligible verse. Much of the chorus work appears to us an unsuccessful tour de force. Is it worth the pains? We note that here and there he does adopt more manageable metres, but there is a distinct relief when one reaches the iambic passages again. So Clytemnestra's account of the beacon's journey from Ida to Argos is rendered in firm, vigorous verse. We may quote a favourable specimen of Mr. Way's technique from the 'Agamemnon,' 600 sq. :—

Haste will I now, with honour to receive
My lord revered at his home-coming. What Can dawn with sweeter light to wife than this
The day she flings wide doors to her lord brought safe
By God from war? Thou tell mine husband this,
To come with all speed, come, the land's desire —
To come and find a leal wife in his halls,
Even as he left her, as a watch-dog staunch
To guard his home, a foe unto his foes,
And in all else the same, who of his seals
Have broken not one all this weary while.
Pleasure with man beside, or rumoured shame
No more I know than—how to dye a sword.

Here the translator makes the most of the Greek and the dramatic situation. We are glad to find that Mr. Way gives Clytemnestra an effective exit, by following the suggestion of the Medicean MS., and assigning the next two lines to the Herald, whereas Mr. Sidgwick's Oxford text follows Hermann in assigning to Clytemnestra a frigid remark with which to strut off the stage.

The Frogs of Aristophanes. Translated by Gilbert Murray. (Allen & Sons.)—To read Prof. Gilbert Murray's spirited verse translation of 'The Frogs' of Aristophanes is a real pleasure. The amount of imaginative help such a version gives the student of Greek is great, and the Greekless public is put in a position to realize the humour of Aristophanes. The croaking chorus goes with a remarkable lilt, because Mr. Murray has—to use some words of his translation—"the grit that gives him heart to risk Bold things." He boldly adopts the Limerick metre, and we are led by facile, yet accomplished workmanship sometimes to doubt whether we are reading Gilbert or Gilbert Murray. We quote the opening of the chorus :

Frogs. O brood of the mere and the spring,
Gather together and sing
From the depths of your throat
By the side of the boat,
Co-ax, as we move in a ring ;

As in Limnæ we sang the divine
Nyseian Giver of Wine,
When the people in lots
With their sanctified Pots
Came reeling around my shrine,
Co-ax, co-ax, co-ax,
Brekekekex co-ax.

Dionysus. Don't sing any more :
I begin to be sore !

Frogs. Brekekekex co-ax,
Co-ax, co-ax, co-ax !
Brekekekex co-ax !

Dionysus. Is it nothing to you
If I'm black and I'm blue ?

Frogs. Brekekekex co-ax !

It is in the really difficult parts of the work, of course, that the translator shows his quality, e.g., in the choric song which parodies the metre and style of Æschylus (p. 62), or the take-off of the choric song of Euripides, which is cleverly rendered (p. 93). By his rendering of Aristophanes's 'Frogs' no less than of Euripides Mr. Murray undoubtedly qualifies for Free entertainment at the Central Hearth,

And also a special throne in Pluto's row.

Some helpful pages of commentary are given at the end, in which some attempt is made to strike a just balance between the merits of Æschylus and those of Euripides.

Sources for Greek History, collected and arranged by G. F. Hill (Oxford, Clarendon Press), is not a new book, nor indeed a new edition, but merely a new issue, with an appendix containing corrections and some fresh material, which naturally—but unfortunately—is not indexed. In its ten years of existence this book has proved its worth so indisputably that we are glad to see it again in any form ; but for the student there are obvious inconveniences in the present issue which nothing but a fresh edition will remove. It should not be long delayed ; and, if Mr. Hill has in preparation a similar treatment of the sources for the fourth century, teachers and students of Greek history will be well pleased.

Fair Copies. By A. H. Cruickshank. (Oxford, B. H. Blackwell.)—Mr. Cruickshank, one of the masters of Winchester College, has collected in a neat little volume thirty-three Latin versions of various lengths in elegiacs and hexameters. They may be safely recommended to students of Latin versification as good work, always careful and scholarly, and sometimes very clever. The originals range from Spenser and Milton to R. L. Stevenson and Mr. Belloc. Mr. Cruickshank is equally at home in either mode. In his version of Warton's 'Ode on a Hampshire Village' we are glad to note a delicate feeling for descriptive rhythms :—

Quis denique culmen
Despiciet tuguri admirans, ulmisque latentes
Villas, et silice e dura quæ tecta columbæ
Stipant, dum procul accipiter secat irritus auras ?
Quis lustrat prissas umbrosa cacumina pinus
Unde cadunt umbræ deserta per atria dudum ?

Here we have the right Virgilian touch, especially in the line

Stipant, dum procul accipiter secat irritus auras, where the spondaic doves give way to the dactylic kite. The first line of the same piece is also successful :—

Luge secessus luge dilecte : relinquit
Te sapiens.

Among many charming sets of elegiacs not the least pleasing is the version of F. A. Fahy's "Oh, 'tis little Mary Cassidy's the cause of all my misery." We quote six lines out of the heart of it :—

Tecum habitare casam satius sit, parva Neera,
Quam sine te Cresi condicione frui.
Hanc primum video Damone regente choreas ;
Ad lacrimas inoveor : carmina prisca canit.
Nocte dieque animum non cara relinquit imago,
Mane vigil noctu me vigilasse queror.

Selections from Erasmus. By P. S. Allen. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)—The learned and laborious editor of Erasmus's 'Epistulæ' has prepared for school use some selections from this author, principally from his letters, chosen with the special view of illustrating English life. Following on Mr. G. M. Edwards's two selections from the 'Colloquies,' this book is a further sign that a rigid adherence to classical writers, which was unknown in the earliest periods of modern education, is no longer held to be imperative in the teaching of Latin.

Mr. Allen has given an interesting selection, with notes that are concise and to the point. The Renaissance spelling has been modified, but some monstrosities remain. In a few cases we have marked in the notes what appear to be positive errors or oversights.

In 'Ep.' vi. l. 11, cuius has been treated as referring to Horatius. The context shows that its antecedent is vulgus.

'Ep.' xix. 122, "Iupiter nescio quis aut malus genius, non dimidium mentis, ut ait Hesiodus, sed totam mentem ademit." Hor., 'Od.' i. 3, 8, and Callimachus, 'Ep.' 43, are not parallel to this ; it is voûs, not ψυχῇ of which Erasmus speaks. 'Ep.' xx. 34, "ni me Christianus pudor, ceu Pallas quæpiam Homerica, iam capulo manum admoventem capillos vellicans revocaret." Mr. Allen refers to 'Iliad,' xv. 125 seq. The reference is surely to 'Il.' i. 194 seq. 'Ep.' xxiv. 316, codicibus is explained as manuscripts or printed copies of the 'Epistles.' Is it not rather paper-books for note-taking ?

'Ep.' xxvi. 30, "vereor ne ipse Fulvii Rutubæque similior sim quam Apellis." Mr. Allen's note on "Fulvii Rutubæque" is "the names of gladiators (cf. Hor., 'Sat.' ii. 7, 96) ; who are here taken as types of the unskilled." Did not Erasmus misunderstand the passage in Horace, and take Fulvius and Rutuba to be indifferent painters ?

In the note on xxvii. 10, Erasmus is said to have been frequently claimed by the Germans of his own day as one of themselves.

He has also, it might be added, been claimed by Germans of our day. Erasmus fills twenty pages in the 'Allgemeine Deutsche Biographie,' where the writer of his life remarks that Germany may count him among her most distinguished sons.

While pointing out many of Erasmus's allusions to passages in classical writers, Mr. Allen fails occasionally to indicate the source of a reference. In xxiv. 55, "ut nemo melius teneret unguis digitosque suos," cf. Juv., vii. 231 seq. In xxvi. 66, "Quæ sola viris esse curanda docet Ovidius" the passage referred to is 'A. A.' i. 513 seqq. The reference in xxvi. 155, "Pythagoricum illum philosophum," is to Diog. Laert., viii. 1, 6. It should have been mentioned on xxiv. 635 that the sentiment in Colet's sermon, "Pacem iniquam præferendam bello æquisimo," is taken from Cic., 'Ep. ad Fam.' vi. 6, 5.

The present volume is apparently designed for beginners. May we hope that as Mr. Allen is devoting himself to the study of Erasmus he may see his way to edit a wider selection suitable for a sixth form or undergraduate students ?

Latin Prose Composition. By W. R. Hardie. (Arnold.)—How little finality there is in classical studies is well exemplified by the case of Latin prose composition. There are, indeed, enough fixed principles to go upon in teaching students even up to the stage of undergraduates ; but a teacher may spend fifteen, twenty, or thirty years in lecturing on this subject, yet every week, without much special investigation, add points to his knowledge. Every teacher of Latin prose must be conscious that in almost every lecture he has to make statements on the ground of general impression received in the course of reading Latin authors rather than on the ground of definite statistics. As Prof. Hardie says in his Preface, "It is a hazardous thing to make a large number of statements about the usages of an ancient language." To the teacher one of the main interests of a new book on Latin prose is the possibility that he may find some of his more or less hazy surmises confirmed or definitely proved erroneous by the investigations of another. And it is not so much in the method as in the matter of the subject that further knowledge is needed. Nägelsbach's studies on rhythm go to prove that even this limited ground has received not much more than its first ploughing. In spite of the work of Nettleship, and Prof. Hardie in this book, there is room for more exhaustive study of the range of metaphorical expression in Latin, and the boundaries between poetical and prose diction. No teacher can have failed to be puzzled by many problems in the order of words in such writers as Livy and Tacitus.

Enough has been said to show that Latin prose is a subject which is very much alive, and that new books dealing with it may be full of freshness, even when they treat of the more elementary parts of the subject. We welcome Mr. Hardie's book because it has a large share of this freshness. Of the two parts (which it is a convenience to be able to buy separately), the first contains notes on grammar, a section on questions of style, and a "Brief Survey on the Resources of Expression in Latin." Under each heading we have learnt something worth knowing, because the writer has obviously had the courage to examine Latin texts for himself and draw his own conclusions, and the patience to make discriminating notes of the blunders of thoughtful pupils. A case of the latter sort is the too frequent use of cum with the subjunctive. Mr. Hardie's faculty of seeing his way through difficulties and clearing the path for others is well shown in his section on conditional sentences in oratio obliqua and after haud dubium est quin, and in that which deals with the legitimate uses of abstract nouns.

The resources of expression in Latin are treated under the heads of Religion and Theology—Mind and Character, Psychology and Morals—Political and Constitutional—Nature—Literature and Art. This chapter is naturally discursive, and, as the writer himself sees, liable on a hasty view to the charge of inculcating set phrases for such words as "revolution," "presence of mind," "fanaticism." Teachers however, will admit that the phrases suggested are reached in the best possible way by working up logically from the underlying idea. It is with phrases as with idioms. Certain general principles being continually kept in sight, the pupil must gradually be saturated with them: sometimes it will be the principle that suggests the phrase or idiom, and sometimes vice versa. Any boy from the fifth form upwards would get great good from a careful study of this section (pp. 93–124), which is one of the distinctive merits of the book. The passages for translation are many, and chosen from a great variety of writers, and we are glad to see that no stale pieces are included. A good selection arranged under the headings of Historical, Oratorical, Epistolary, Moral, Literary, &c., will be welcome, though reference to Mr. J. E. Nixon's book will still be necessary for distinctions of style to be observed in these various departments, as Mr. Hardie fails to tackle this subject. We conjecture that the book has been written mainly with a view to the needs of Mr. Hardie's pupils at Edinburgh University; but it seems to us to be the kind of manual that might be put into the hands of fifth-form boys and students above that standard.

There is one section that it would have been better to omit—that on the structure of sentences in verse (pp. 84–92). It was probably written for Scotch students, who do not usually write Latin verses; but even for them the pages will be virtually useless. It does not materially "help to an understanding of the prose sentence"; and the plea that "the writer of Latin should be able to render metrically a verse quotation" seems to show that Mr. Hardie, as well as Homer, is capable of nodding. Having a particular interest in Latin versification, the present reviewer read the section carefully, wondering whither it tended, and found it led nowhere. It contains the startling remark: "The composer of a Hexameter must therefore start with a clause which makes 2½ feet (like cesserat imperio) or 3½ feet." Does the writer mean "phrase" instead of "clause"? But even this is not true; e.g., æternam moriens famam. "Combination of feet" is probably meant. However, this is a small matter.

We add one last word on the custom of publishers of not submitting to criticism the Latin versions of English passages. Obviously the merit and selling power of a book like this are largely dependent upon the value of the versions. Teachers in most cases use the renderings of acknowledged scholars. We can say nothing of Mr. Hardie's Latin prose versions because they have not been submitted to us. We have heard it said that publishers do not wish it to be generally known that versions are issued; but it is well known among both teachers and pupils that they do exist. Review copies of such books will in the majority of cases find their way into the hands of experts, i.e., practical teachers who know how to use keys.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

CAPT. A. T. MAHAN's new book Naval Administration and Warfare (Sampson Low & Co.) is a reprint, with slight alteration, but with some notes and an important Preface, of his recent articles and one earlier essay. The general reader will not care for the first chapters, dealing with our Board of Admiralty and the United States Navy Department. The third essay must be read in connexion with the Preface, where the same incidents of the Russo-Japanese War are treated upon more accurate data. Capt. Mahan admits that he no more knew than did the admirals and generals in the field the whole circumstances when he wrote; but he is able to leave the article almost untouched, inasmuch as the general principles are of eternal applicability. He adds with much truth that, critics and generals being in the same position at the moment, later comment, as, for instance, by the Prussian General Staff, must—in order to be fair—give weight to this consideration. The controversy as to the partial failure of the Duke of Wellington's plans in the Waterloo campaign is a case in point.

The main subject of argument in the middle pages of this volume is the entrenched camp, although the phrase is hardly used. Were we right in holding on to Ladysmith? or were we helped by fate when unable to help ourselves? Were the Russians wise in remaining at Port Arthur? Could the Japanese have acted otherwise than they did in hammering Port Arthur at the loss of 60,000 men? Capt. Mahan might be sharply criticized upon his main contention that the Russians were wise in the course adopted, but this would be impertinent in face of the fact that he thoroughly understands the weak point, and admits it in at least two passages. When the boasts of the magnificent scale of the establishments at Port Arthur, and of the commercial magnificence of Dalny, were crowned by the creation of a Viceroyalty and nomination of a Court favourite as Viceroy, the Russians entered upon a policy of inflation of their position, which did not correspond to the military facts. The railway and the two capitals—military and commercial—in the peninsula rested on prestige, not strength. But the Russians "took in" Russia—not Japan, and not (we may add) even the British War Office—probably not the German. Given the fact that they were there, and had divided their fleet so as to make it extraordinarily difficult to use against Japan in a war—evidently one of sea power, Capt. Mahan proves that the Russians could not evacuate Port Arthur. The Treaty of Portsmouth would have been signed at the beginning of the war instead of at the end: the revolution would have broken out two years sooner. Or else, like clever swordsmen, the armies might have looked at one another until it was time for others to interfere. But Capt. Mahan makes no defence of the policy (given the retention of Port Arthur) of shutting up the fleet in harbour. He deplures, as all sailors must, the picture presented by the Russian admirals. They could have come out at any time; and it was obviously their duty to do so and wear down Togo, even at the price of uniform defeat. But then, if so, why were they there at all, or why were all of them there, i.e., nearly the whole of the Pacific fleet? This problem Capt. Mahan is as competent as any living man to face; but he does not discuss it. Before the war broke out the private opinion of the most competent strategists, as was stated in this journal among others, was everywhere that the Russians must be as well aware as the other nations that there was at least a risk of war, that such a war would turn upon the possibility of invasion across the sea, and that, with a great superiority of ships, Russia, in order to win, must display naval energy. The weakness of the Russian officers being known, it was fully expected that the Japanese would confine themselves—risking the naval adventure, as they did—to cutting the railway at the neck of the peninsula. Whether Japan would not have obtained a more favourable peace than that of Portsmouth had she worn out the Russians at a greater distance from their base, instead of following them to the north, is no doubt an arguable matter. Japan would have supported her blockade of Port Arthur on the land side by expeditions to Saghalien and to the Amur. No one has ever given a sufficient explanation or made a clear defence of the military policy which Japan adopted; and no one knows by whom, soldier or politician, that plan of campaign was designed. For Capt. Mahan, a sailor, to prove only, as engineers and artillerymen are fond of doing, "the value" of the entrenched camp—Ladysmith or Port Arthur—in detaining a great army which might have been more formidable elsewhere, begs the question; and whether "Port Arthur fulfilled the function," or did not, the question we have asked above remains. No doubt "abandonment of the place by Russia meant destruction to the fleet within," but we are no nearer an answer to our doubt—whether nearly the whole Eastern fleet of Russia should have been there. We are also inclined to dispute Capt. Mahan's view of "the evidence of the value of commerce-destroying given by the Vladivostok squadron." It was not, we think, "most important," and, if it had been, would only prove our case in favour of greater dispersion of the Russian naval resources at the beginning of the war.

In Capt. Mahan's criticisms of the conduct of operations by the Russians, and proof of the superiority of Kuropatkin over all other Russian commanders by land and sea, all now agree. When Capt. Mahan treats as "the most instructive feature of this Russian mistake" (the disposition of her fleets) the fact that it was based on a peace policy, excluding war conditions, and "inexcusable in a Government not brow-beaten by political turmoil," he suggests that a Parliament or a democracy is less competent than a despotism to conduct war. Whatever may have been the follies of the Duke of Newcastle or of Panmure, it is difficult to read Russian records without forming the conviction that, of all unsound directors of war, despots, except in the rarest cases, are the very worst. The Russians never carried on by land or sea a campaign even partly successful except under Paul and Suvarow. But we now know what has been long concealed, namely, that all the failures, at Zurich for example, and the ultimate collapse of the Russian campaign in Switzerland and Italy, were due to exactly the same cause as paralyzed the Russian fleets and armies on the Danube in 1853 and 1878, and in the war against Japan. The British officers by whom Suvarow was surrounded, reporting to the Cabinet at home, drew a frightful picture—evidently true—of the features of a campaign conducted at a great distance from Russia by an autocratic Government, free from the beneficent influence of publicity.

New Zealand. By Reginald Horsley. (T. C. & E. C. Jack.)—The latest addition to the "Romance of Empire" series is more fortunate in its author than its illustrator, although the work of the latter is excellent as a "modest remembrancer" of the text. Mr. M'Cormick's faults are that he is too conventional in his representation of dramatic scenes, and that in the native pictures he is not always careful to preserve the Maori type. Mr. Horsley's summary of the history of New Zealand, if it contains little that is new to the specialist, is graphic and vivid in its descriptions of the main events with which it deals. The author is a eulogist of the admirable Maori, even, possibly, to the verge of a tendency to indiscriminate "whitewashing"; and while one reads with admiration that on one occasion the chivalrous natives were to be heard warning their foes to "lie down" before they were fired at, it is difficult to accept his persistent acquittals of all charges of treachery. Mr. Horsley tells picturesquely the tale of the contest between the Waikato and the Arawa natives, of the assassination of Capt. du Fresne, and the wars of Hongi Ika, and when he comes to the thrilling escalade of Lieut. Phillpotts at Oheawai, he rises to the occasion.

Mr. Horsley is often prodigal of instructive detail about the life of the Maoris, as when he describes the manner in which they removed the hair from their face by using cockle-shells as tweezers, or his reference to the introduction of the horse by the pakeha. This quadruped, he says, was described as the "kuri nui," or large dog.

"Can he talk?" said one. "Does he like boiled potatoes?" said another. And a third: "Mustn't he have a blanket to lie down on at night?"

The author sometimes shows a lack of proportion in his estimates. But such dramatic writing as that describing the fate of the bugler of Boulcott's Farm, or the account of the earthquake of 1848 and the Tarawera eruption, more than compensates for any want of critical balance. Mr. Horsley's book forms an historical complement to the multitude of topographical works on New Zealand, and, if popular in method, is always careful and generally trustworthy.

Egypt and the English. By Douglas Sladen. (Hurst & Blackett.)—"To make the intelligent British reader familiar with British public opinion in Egypt upon the Egyptian question," is Mr. Sladen's main object in this work, as announced in the Preface. But the opinion of the majority of such residents upon problems of the country is not worth much, being formed with little knowledge and no understanding, entirely in the direction of their own interests. Its key-note is contempt for the native Egyptians and disregard of their feelings; and it has always ranked among the obstacles to good administration of the country. Mr. Sladen, in the few chapters devoted to Egyptian politics, has adopted this narrow and prejudiced standpoint; and while we agree with his conclusion that the Egyptian is ill-adapted for self-government, we strongly object to the terms of its expression. On p. 116 we read:—

"The Egyptian Nationalists and other enemies of England shout in chorus that it is an outrage that so civilized and advanced a country as Egypt should not have a Parliament of its own. Is it so civilized? Is it so advanced? Would it be even possible for it to elect a Parliament at all in a way that would commend itself to any sane white man? I say white man, because it must be remembered that an Egyptian is not a white man, but a mixture of black and yellow. The fellah, who forms the backbone of Egypt, whether the skin of the individual is darker or paler, is only a black man in his degree of civilization; the Egyptian, whether he is a youth and wears comie-opera clothes and boots, or is one of the fat men who make cafés odious, is in his ideas of women, morality and truth, yellow inside at any rate."

Again on p. 119 Mr. Sladen refers to "the hoggish, but really dangerous conspirators of the cafés."

We fail to see what good all this can do, particularly as the persons inveighed against are mild and amiable. They are no more "hoggish" than the average Englishman, either in diet or behaviour. They have only the misfortune to be fat, and unknown to Mr. Sladen. They are at any rate courteous to political opponents.

Of the late Mustafa Pasha Kâmel the author writes that he was "a leader of exceptional success, but no morals"—again giving a false impression, since "the Mourned of El Islâm" was not exceptionally dissipated, nor, we believe, deceitful. He was merely a childish enthusiast, to whom popularity was as the breath of life.

Apart from these rash judgments, the whole work suffers greatly from the fact that all the author's information is at second hand. Had he been conversant with Arabic, he could have picked out for himself from any paper passages infinitely more diverting and illuminating than those included in his chapter on the Press in Egypt, which is none the less the soundest in the book; he would also have avoided such blunders as "the Al Minbar," &c., and "Al Akbar" (meaning "God") for Al Akhbâr (meaning "news"). The characters given of the Sheykh Ali Yûsuf and Hâfiz Awwad in this connexion ought to have been inverted. The account of recent progress in the Sudan, also, is impaired by Mr. Sladen's blind dependence upon the information he has procured. For the rest, the work seems to be a loose compilation where it is not an advertising guide-book. The chapters on Egyptian politics alone call for serious treatment. Their tone—the tone of the average unofficial Englishman—will show "the intelligent British reader" some real ground for that discontent in Egypt which has always been social in its origin rather than political.

THE same country is considered in Egypt and its Monuments, by Robert Hichens (Hodder & Stoughton), which is a handsome book, and contains Mr. Hichens's impressions of different sites in Egypt. They were, we believe, originally contributed to an American journal, and some allowance must be made for the medium; but even when this is done, we hardly see the justification for the flamboyant style in which they are recorded. We are not in the least interested in reading that "scarcely had I set foot once more in Egypt before Thoth lifted me into the Boat of the Sun and soothed my fears to sleep," or afterwards that "Egypt took me like a child by the hand and reassured me." The author's description of the scenes at Sakkarah at the "little Christmas" of the Egyptians does, indeed, help to bring them more forcibly before us; but when he comes to Abydos, he relapses into mere bathos, and wastes pages in telling us how he ordered his dragoman to leave him alone within Seti's temple, and how "a girl-child swathed in purple," with eyes "full of cloud and fire...leaned from a roof, sinuously as a young snake, to watch me." Nearly the same thing occurred at the Ramesseum, although there was here no "girl-child"; and we can only suggest that Mr. Hichens's habit of requiring solitude in which to wrestle with his emotions must have caused great trouble to the ghafirs in charge of the temples in question, and must have given rise to the, we are sure, unfounded suspicion that he intended to carve his name on their walls. Mr. Hichens also remembers "when I was on my first visit to Egypt lunching at Thebes with Monsieur Naville and Mr. Hogarth," and afterwards "seeing a white temple wall come up into the light with all the painted figures surely dancing with joy upon it"; while one of his most human passages chronicles that the ancient Egyptians swore solemnly "by him who sleeps in Philæ. Now they sometimes swear angrily at him who wakes in, or at least by, Philæ, and keeps them steadily going at their appointed tasks." Those who like this sort of writing will find plenty of it here, and the book has the advantage of being illustrated with some excellent photographs by different hands, and nearly a score of paintings by M. Jules Guérin, reproduced in three tones. The last are, like the text, impressionist, and rather "voyant," but have a real merit of their own.

In Morocco with General d'Amade. By Reginald Rankin. (Longmans & Co.)—Major Rankin's account of the recent fighting in Morocco should receive a warm welcome in England. It is a sufficiently good book to make one resent its not being much better, so far as craftsmanship goes. One is justified in looking for some workmanlike method, for system, and lucid arrangement. But these qualities are lacking, and their absence reduces materially our satisfaction with the book. Its value is considerable; but its right appreciation makes too great a demand upon the reader's patience. Major Rankin acted as correspondent for The Times during the French operations in Morocco. No doubt readers of that paper were glad to have brief descriptions of Moorish life, scenery, customs, tradition, &c., when news of military operations happened to be scarce. But a book should arrange these things in distinct sections, to avoid confusion.

For the military student who will do a little sifting for himself, there is valuable first-hand information. The author has nothing but praise for the French soldier in action. Campaigning in a wild country like Morocco provides temptations for the soldier, and especially, one may suppose, for the Latin soldier of excitable temperament. Major Rankin, writing from close observation, gives the lie direct to those hostile critics who have made accusations of cruelty or barbarity against the French troops. If they erred at all, says this observer, it was on the side of humanity—a remarkable tribute to the Algerian Legionary. The book has many good illustrations, maps, and plans, and should prove worthy of another edition presently—in which event we recommend a rearrangement of its contents.

The Varying Year. By the Right Hon. G. W. E. Russell. (Allen & Sons.)—Here is a good, though hardly an original idea, most agreeably executed. Mr. George Russell takes the twelve months, and discourses at large on each, from the standpoint of a Londoner who makes occasional expeditions into the country, but who, his autumn holiday over, returns with zest to town. The net of his sympathies is widely cast, though the theatre seems to escape it altogether, except when viewed through a schoolboy's eyes. To some of us, too, the landmark in the year's art is not, as with Mr. Russell, the exhibition of the Royal Academy, but of the Old Masters. Still, these are delightful musings, with just the right touch of sentiment and no undue amount of discursiveness. We wish that Mr. Russell would earmark his quotations more often than he does, since he might thereby send his readers back to the originals.

Peter Pan's Postbag (Heinemann) is a collection of letters written to Miss Pauline Chase by a number of juvenile admirers. It includes an introduction by Miss Chase, and a portrait of her in her part of Peter Pan. There are also many illustrations by Mr. Albert Rothenstein. The volume is nicely printed and produced, but we cannot perceive any adequate reason for its publication.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN send us in a neat box Mr. Marion Crawford's "Singer's Trilogy" of novels—Soprano, The Prima Donna, and The Diva's Ruby. It is good reading in a most attractive guise, for the volumes are handy in form, beautifully printed, and bound in comely red leather.

WE have received Whitaker's Almanack and Whitaker's Peerage from the office, 12, Warwick Lane. The former, now in its forty-first issue, has been rearranged and augmented, and is an invaluable book of reference, since it is provided with an excellent Index. The 'Peerage' has fairly won its way to favour as a brief guide to the subject, distinguished by its list of seats.

THE VOICE.

"COME out from the house of brooding,
Where Life sits dumb and drear;
Come out from the shadow's menace,
From the sweating and the fear!
Come out from your fruitless waiting
The end of the world's despite!
There is a gleam across the heath
Which beckons through the night."
"Little one, what of the dark,
The quaking bog and the clutching stream!
Little one, what of the bones so stark
That hang from the gallows beam!"

"Christ welcomed a thief in heaven,
Though the crows might eat his flesh;
The dead swings free on his windy tree
While you writhe here in the mesh.
Better to dare the darkness,
Better the clutching stream,
Than never to know through wail and woe
The secret of the gleam."
"Little one, what of the mist!
Darkling and drear, still home is home.
Nay, go not, little one! Little one, hie!
I'll come! Wait while I come!"

The small voice sang through the darkness,
And a child gleamed white at the door;
He knew not whose—nor what drew him
As he followed it out to the moor.
And there was a sound of groaning,
Of water and earth at strife,
Yet never and never and never before
Had he felt such lust of life.
"Little one, is it far?"
He looked for the child, and he was gone;
Only a moving spark like a star
Beckoned him on and on.

Heedless of swamp and shadow,
Heedless of rock and thorn,
He followed the gleam through the clutching stream,
Weary and wild and torn.
The dead laughed out on his gallows—
And, lo! the ridge of a down,
And the spark he had traced by wind and waste
Was a star swung over a town.
Over a sleeping town
It swung in a silvery mist of light,
And straight, in a mood he never had known,
His tears fell fast at the sight.

For now he could read the secret
Hung up there in the skies—
'Twas the little window through which Death looks,
The wonder that never dies.
O! what, could we gauge the meaning?
O! what, could we comprehend?
So the gleam, the gleam were no longer a dream,
But dust and death and the end!
Little one, hail to the dark,
The quaking bog and the clutching stream!
Little one, hail to the bones so stark
That hang from the gallows beam!

"O, the spirit of all flies on,
And no end is ever found.
No ring on a weary ring are we,
Travelling round and round;

But ever by death and darkness
We pass to the newer light—"
He kissed his hand to the merry star,
And he turned him home through the night.
His hand to the star he kissed,
And he went through the night and the rain;
And, lo! his own window through the mist,
And there was the gleam on the pane!
BERNARD CAPES.

INTERNATIONAL TRIBUTE TO PROF. VON WILAMOWITZ-MOELLENDORFF.

ON December 22nd at noon three deputations met in front of the house of the great Greek scholar Prof. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorff, and entered together by appointment. Prof. E. Norden of Berlin, as spokesman of the first deputation, referred to the well-known fact that the Professor disapproves of birthday ceremonies—a fact to which he gives expression in the preface to his translation of the 'Hippolytus' of Euripides—but excused himself by saying that the deputation brought him on his sixtieth birthday only a few sheets of paper, inscribed with the names of scholars belonging to almost every country—in fact, to every educated country. These scholars wished to put at his disposal the means of undertaking some special work of research; and, though the result of their wish did not vie in magnitude with the Zeppelin Fund, they now had deposited to his order in a bank in Berlin the sum of nearly one thousand pounds, on the sole condition that he devoted it, in such way and time as he pleased, to the completion of some important undertaking which should commemorate this occasion. Prof. Norden's speech, which contained many delicate touches of humour and feeling, was a complete surprise to the recipient; the secret had been well kept from him; and as the speaker mentioned, even his own daughter had been in league with the rest to keep him ignorant of the conspiracy against him. In his reply, along with many characteristic expressions, which would have delighted those who find pleasure in the candid, strong, yet graceful personal quality of his work, Wilamowitz mentioned that scholarship had always to struggle against the difficulty of finding the means to perform the tasks that lie before it—partly to find the suitable men, still more to find the money. He said with strong emphasis that everywhere there existed ignorance of the way in which great works of literary or linguistic or historical research must rest on a basis of financial expenditure.

In Britain we are familiar with both these difficulties, especially with the second. Money can be found for buildings, for payment of teachers, for all parts of education; but there exists only the scantiest recognition of the fact that, when once you have at last found the scholar, the means of paying the expenses of research must also be found. We had thought that in Germany this need was better known and met; but we gather that recently a great change is perceptible in this respect. Our impression is that, partly, Government resources are so strained for purposes of armament and war as to starve the departments of mere intellectual expenditure; partly, perhaps, the increasing popular influence in the government of the country means increasing jealousy with regard to the allotment of public money for purposes of intellectual work. These intellectual purposes must be carried out by individuals, and the populace is naturally always jealous about trusting sums of public money to be used by single individuals at their discretion; yet there is no way of performing such works of research except by giving some scholar of recognized ability a free hand to do the work.

The second deputation consisted solely of Prof. Sir W. M. Ramsay, who in a Latin address expressed the desire felt by British scholars to be present to salute Prof. von Wilamowitz on this day, if conditions of space and time and public duty had permitted; and stated that he, however unworthy an agent, had been entrusted by various groups and associations of scholars with the honourable duty of presenting their congratulations. He would not spend time in reading all the addresses with which he was charged, but reciting the two shortest, would only mention the others. He read first a resolution of the Council of the British Academy directing him to convey the good wishes of the Academy to the Professor as an Honorary Fellow; and after briefly mentioning and delivering the messages of congratulation, accompanied by Greek epigrams, sent by the Society for the Promotion of Hellenic Studies and by the Classical Professors, Lecturers, and Head Masters in Edinburgh University and City, and stating that some other addresses had failed to arrive up to that moment, owing to difficulties caused by postal and custom-house regulations (as parcel post has to pass the customs), he read the short address from the Classical Professors and Lecturers of Aberdeen University, charging him to convey by word of mouth the feelings of them all. He asked permission to express in modern homely tongue the deep sentiment which they entertained. As a reason why, amid all the great German scholars to whom every day they came for instruction and guidance, they made an outstanding exception in this case, he recited the note from Wilamowitz's commentary on the Messenger's speech in the 'Hippolytus,' 1173 ff. The commentator in that, the most delightful note (as some of his intimate friends in Britain thought) ever written on a Greek poet, described how he, as a grenadier, was quartered in Beauvais in 1870 in the house of an ancien directeur de collège; and at dinner the young grenadier and the old schoolmaster had disputed about the respective merits of Euripides and Racine, and the recitation of his French host had made him for the first time understand the character of the French alexandrine metre; and he could never read that scene of Euripides without recalling the picture, as the young soldier and the old teacher recited the French and the Greek in emulation. The speaker recalled this fragment from a commentary as an example of the spirit in which Wilamowitz lived, and made his readers live, the life of the Greek world as an element in their modern life, raising them high above the sordid splendours and brutalities of the modern European world into the clear ether of the beauty, truth, and eternity of literature.

That foot-note in a commentary was perfect in itself and for itself, and contained all the elements of literary genius, one of which was the touch of humour in the concluding words, which told how the Weltkind, the soldier quartered along with him, sat and ate the ragout while the two enthusiasts disputed. The speaker suggested that the Weltkind had finished the ragout, while the others were away high in the world of art; but the Professor interjected that he had not sacrificed his appetite entirely to literature. Sir W. M. Ramsay related how he had first learnt to know Prof. von Wilamowitz many years ago from reading his book on Isyllus, and especially the chapter on Iamou Gonai, the circumstances attending the birth of Iamus. The creative and poetic imagination which illumined that book had been a revelation to him of the possibilities of Greek research. He could express his feelings in reading it best in the words of Keats, when he first read Chapman's translation of Homer:—

Then felt I as some watcher of the skies
When a new planet swims into his ken.

But he found in another English poet the best expression of what he felt with regard to this great interpreter of the Greek thought. The poem which he had in mind purported to be a soliloquy of the old German Vogler, the Abbot of Würzburg. The master of early music is represented as saying that it is only the musician of whom it is true that, if you give him three sounds, he makes of them "not a fourth sound, but a star." There was one man to whom he could apply the same metaphor, who could take three facts and make of them an idyll of Greek life; and that was the man to whom his colleagues and friends in Aberdeen had instructed him to address this expression of their feelings. He believed that in conveying this message he was expressing the feelings of classical scholars in Britain generally.

Prof. von Wilamowitz replied in a Latin speech, delivered with remarkable ease and fluency, taking up every topic that the Scottish Professor had touched, and handling all with charming grace and simplicity, and with deep feeling. Nothing in the whole proceedings was so impressive as this speech delivered on the spur of the moment without preparation. The scene inter Bellovacos was not one that was likely to be brought up on such an occasion; and he recalled it in happily chosen terms as a pleasant memory, and with pleasure that it was appreciated by others in the way that he himself felt it.

The third deputation was from the students of the German Universities, one of whom was a lady. The speaker expressed the desire felt by students who had profited by his teaching (on the brilliancy and impressiveness of which he laid great stress) to present some memento of their own apart from the international gift; and asked the Professor to accept a bust of Euripides, which was not yet perfect, but of which he brought a photograph.

An American scholar who had given notice of his intention to present addresses from various institutions in the United States was prevented from visiting Berlin. When the Professor had suitably acknowledged the presentation by the students, the business part of the ceremony ended, and the members of the various deputations took their leave one by one, after some general conversation. The meeting left an abiding impression of the vivacity, ability, and youthfulness which characterize the great scholar.

THE SHAKESPEARE QUARTOS.

December 24, 1908.

In the number of The Library for April last Mr. Greg claimed to prove that certain Shakespeare Quartos which bore on their title-pages the dates 1600 and 1608 were actually printed in 1619. An unsigned article in your columns on May 2nd last adopted Mr. Greg's conclusions without much qualification. Subsequently it was pointed out by others besides myself that the evidence which Mr. Greg adduced was incapable of the positive interpretation which he placed upon it.

These circumstances render it desirable that mention should be made here of the fact that in the current number of The Library, which I have only lately seen, Mr. Greg admits that a substantial portion of his testimony proves on further inquiry to be unsafe or untenable. Mr. Greg now bases his case exclusively on a complicated argument from watermarks. On the validity of this argument, only one who combines indefinite leisure and opportunity of research with microscopic powers of vision can express any opinion. I understand that Mr. Alfred Huth, who has exceptional facilities for pursuing this side of the inquiry, differs from Mr. Greg on the main point at issue. But in view of the inaccuracy which Mr. Greg now admits in the original presentation of his case, it would be manifestly rash for Shakespeare bibliographers to accept Mr. Greg's guidance in the matter, without ampler and clearer corroboration than is at present forthcoming. SIDNEY LEE.

THE SEAL OF DORCHESTER.

I HAVE read the reply of Canon Mayo in your issue of December 19th to my letter of October 17th last, concerning the arms of France "ancient" on the seal of the borough of Dorchester, and I will answer him. What are the points in issue?

I stated firstly that the borough seal with the arms of France "ancient" was confirmed to the use of the town by Clarendieux King of Arms in 1565, and Canon Mayo does not deny this. I stated secondly that Canon Mayo, in his bulky volume on 'The Municipal Records of the Borough of Dorchester,' has failed to describe these arms as France "ancient"—a very serious omission—and Canon Mayo does not deny this. I stated thirdly that the question as to whether the borough was entitled to bear on its seal the arms of France "ancient" was wisely entrusted by the Town Council to Mr. Everard Green, Rouge Dragon, and he advised them that due record of this right existed, and that the borough was fully entitled to the use of this most interesting seal; and, moreover, that the seal of the borough carrying the arms of France "ancient" was executed under his advice and personal supervision. Canon Mayo again does not deny this.

Much of the long letter Canon Mayo sends you is historically interesting, though much of it is open to criticism; but I will not fill up your valuable space in discussing side issues of little real importance. My complaint is that no one would discover from Canon Mayo's portly volume that the borough of Dorchester was entitled to carry on its seal the arms of France "ancient," yet this is a matter of first-rate importance, for it carries the municipal history of the town back more than five centuries, prior to A.D. 1399 at least. Nor would any one discover from his volume of 'The Municipal Records of Dorchester' that this seal is now actually in use. On the contrary, any one would be led to believe from the erroneous description given in that volume of the confirmation of this seal in 1565 by Clarendieux King of Arms, and from the three illustrations in that volume, that the seal of Dorchester carried the arms of France "modern"—a seal that might have had its origin at any time down to as late a period as A.D. 1800. This is a grievous error, and all I was concerned to do was to draw public attention to it; for if not duly noted, it might lead to much confusion in the future, to the detriment of the borough—a borough which is naturally proud of displaying upon its municipal seal (a seal of such striking interest) arms which, at a glance, prove what a very long municipal history the town possesses.

ROBERT EDGCUMBE.

THE BOOK SALES OF 1908.

I.

THE sale of the first part (A to Holinshed) of the extremely important library of Lord Amherst of Hackney stands out in bold relief among all the other sales held during the year which has just drawn to its close. Though shorn of much of its interest by the private disposal of all the Caxtons, said to have been bought en bloc by a well-known American collector, the sale comprised a sufficient number of books of the greatest rarity to invest it with more than ordinary importance. Three printed volumes realized 1,000*l.* each and upwards—the so-called Mazarin Bible, from Genesis to the Psalms inclusive, 2,050*l.*; King Charles I.'s own copy of the Cambridge Bible of 1638, 1,000*l.*; and the 'Apocalypsis S. Joannis,' a block-book on 48 leaves, probably printed in Holland in 1455, 2,000*l.*—the same book sold at the Earl of Crawford's sale in 1887 for 500*l.* In addition, other books but little less noteworthy ran into hundreds of pounds, chief among them being a copy of the second edition of Dame Juliana Berners's 'Treatise per teynynge to Hawkyng,' printed by Wynkyn de Worde in 1496, which was sold for 600*l.*, and the editio princeps of the first classic ever printed—Cicero's 'De Officiis,' 1465—700*l.* The Amherst Sale, having taken place so recently as December last, will be well in remembrance; and as it is to be concluded in March next, little would be gained by recapitulating its many unusual features at this stage.

Apart from Lord Amherst's fine collection, that of the late Dr. Gott, Bishop of Truro, sold by Messrs. Sotheby on March 20th and 21st, claims the most attention, notwithstanding the fact that in this instance also many important and valuable books had been sold previously by private contract, and consequently did not find their way into the catalogue. Such books as remained, though described within the compass of 324 lots, realized nearly 13,000*l.*, this high average eloquently testifying to the immense interest taken in them. The second sale in order of importance was of a miscellaneous character, held on June 2nd and following days, when 9,500*l.* was obtained for 820 lots. This was followed by the late Mr. E. J. Stanley's library, sold in three divisions on May 26th, June 22nd, and July 16th, the total of 3,744 lots realizing 8,088*l.*; the library of Mr. H. C. Hoskier of South Orange, New Jersey, sold in 891 lots on June 29th and three following days for 4,626*l.*; the miscellaneous sale of December 17th and 18th, 4,128*l.* for 343 lots; a selection from the library of Lord Willoughby de Broke, and other properties, July 13th, 3,776*l.* for 150 lots; the miscellaneous sale of November 23rd and two following days, 2,380*l.* for 949 lots; and the miscellaneous sale of May 11th, 2,169*l.* for 848 lots. These, the chief sales, all of which were held at Sotheby's, were supplemented by some fifty others, each bringing sums varying from about 800*l.* to nearly 2,000*l.* Some of these were of considerable importance; others would have been of little, had they not contained a few books of exceptional interest, though all are worthy of notice.

When one looks over the great mass of books brought into the light of day by the agency of the sales of which mention has been made, the first thing to arrest attention is the falling-off, in numbers as well as in quality, of manuscripts generally and those early editions of printed books which are placed in the category of "English Classics." One manuscript entirely in the handwriting of Mrs. Piozzi, comprising about 1,630 pages in 6 vols, 4to, certainly fetched 2,050*l.*, and another in the same hand on 200 folio pages, afterwards published as 'Anecdotes of the late Samuel Johnson,' 154*l.*; but the comparatively few MSS. sold during the year were usually service books, more artistic than literary in their scope. The marriage covenant between Edward Phillips and Anne Milton, the sister of the poet, by whom, with others, it was signed, is interesting, and the price paid for it (322*l.*) was perhaps little enough; but this is a legal document rather than a "book"—a remark which applies equally to the three marriage contracts affecting notables of the Courts of Louis XIV., XV., and XVI., which sold at the Hoskier Sale in June for the aggregate sum of 230*l.* The MS. of part of Capt. Cook's second voyage, with a number of relics accompanying it (214*l.*), comes, perhaps, within our scope; and 'A Treatise made by Sr Phillip Sydney, Knyght, of Certeyn Accidents in Arcadia, made in the year 1580,' certainly does. This valuable MS. in its original vellum cover realized 119*l.* at the latest of the Phillipps Sales, held at Sotheby's in June, and, with the other MSS. mentioned, almost completes the list, service books and collections of autograph letters excepted.

If we turn to the early English classics, the same scarcity is observable. Dr. Gott's four Shakespearean folios were bought in at 3,850*l.*; and Earl Howe's collection of Shakespeariana does not come within our survey, as it was sold just ten days before the beginning of the year. Very little appears in this division, while the plays of the Elizabethan and Jacobean dramatists are almost entirely absent. Messrs. Hodgson sold for 49*l.* the comedy of 'Acolastus,' by Fullonius, printed by Berthelet in 1540, about a month ago; and then we have Sir William Barclay's 'The Lost Lady,' referred to later, and the actual volume of old plays (1633-42) with which King Charles I. solaced the weary hours at Carisbrooke. This fetched 510*l.* in June last; it was not, however, the plays, but the personality of the King and what he had written upon their fly-leaves, which invested the book with its importance. Many other old plays were sold during the year, but they were not of any special interest as a rule; and, briefly, it may be said that (Lord Amherst's library excepted) early editions of the English classics, important manuscripts, especially those of a literary character, specimens of early typography, books containing inscriptions, and Americana—just the kind of books, in fact, for which there is the greatest demand—were the least in evidence.

During 1907 these circumstances were reversed, and an extraordinary number of highly desirable books of the sort were then sold at prices which it was thought would encourage other owners to enrich the public libraries of this country and abroad, without much pecuniary sacrifice to themselves. The expected has not happened, however. The exceptionally high average of 4*l.* 4*s.* obtained in 1907 fell during 1908 to about 2*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.*, which shows conclusively that a large number of scarce and valuable manuscripts and printed books must have been kept back, assuming, indeed, that they exist and were available, during the year which has just terminated. Books of an ordinary character, good of their kind, but not exceptionally valuable as money goes, have, as usual, been very numerous, though they do not appear to excite the amount of interest which they once did. They can as a rule be got for less than formerly—a fact which is patent enough, and has invited a considerable amount of explanation.

All kinds of reasons have, indeed, been advanced to account for the circumstance that the market value of books for which there is not a strenuous demand is falling. Badness of trade, scarcity of money, political scares, and even motor-cars, have in turn been saddled with the responsibility of depressing the pecuniary value of books, to the great loss of those who own them.

The probability is that none of these influences, however powerful they may be when exerted in some directions, has much to do with the point under discussion. It is impossible to read the old treatises about books without awakening to the fact that times have completely changed since they were written. A book, though not particularly scarce in itself, might become so when wanted, for the means of obtaining it were limited when compared with the facilities which exist now. It might be searched for vainly for years when the search was personal, one book-hunter pitted against another, each working in person to attain his end, or, perhaps, employing one or two booksellers at the most to pursue the quest in the same old-fashioned way. This invested books of an ordinary degree of interest with an importance which modern facilities of acquisition frequently rob them of. They can be got at any time, or at least we are apt to think so, and this is too often a way of saying that it is not absolutely necessary to have them at all, and so competition slackens and their value falls. This position is distinctly favourable to those who wish to buy books, but are at the same time content to leave the acquisition of rarities to those who are willing to pay for them; and as these discriminating, or rather let us say cautious, buyers are in the majority for reasons which it is not necessary to enlarge upon, we are justified in concluding that the comparative cheapness of very many books is not without its compensating advantages.

As is usually the case, the earlier sales of the year were not particularly noticeable. Messrs. Puttick & Simpson held the first of any interest on January 15th and 16th, when a copy of the 'Eikon Basiliké,' 1648, presented by Charles II. to the Comte de la Garde, and having a suitable inscription in French, sold for 58*l.* It was one of the copies specially printed for presents to the King's friends, and was bound in black morocco, with the royal monogram and crown over a Death's head. Young's 'Night Thoughts,' 1797, with the marginal designs coloured by Blake himself, realized 52*l.* (original boards); the complete series of the 48 Kit-Kat Club Portraits by Faber, with title and dedication, 1735, 30*l.* (original binding); the first edition of More's 'Utopia,' 1551, 8vo, 50*l.* (morocco extra), specially noticeable as having the printer's device on a leaf facing the title; the Second Folio Shakespeare, 1632, "Tho. Cotes for Robert Allot," 100*l.* (morocco extra, leaf of verses repaired, and one line in facsimile); Turner's 'Liber Studiorum,' 66 plates in sepia, many in first and second states, 1812-19, 60*l.* (old calf); and the two volumes of Westmacott's 'The English Spy,' 1825-6, with a number (? the only one published) of The St. James's Royal Magazine bound up at the end, 41*l.* (half-morocco, uncut). Two pieces by Lamb were sold on this occasion—'Mrs. Leicester's School,' first edition, 1809, for 15*l.* (morocco); and 'A Tale of Rosamund Gray,' first edition, 1798, for 26*l.* (morocco), the former belonging to the earliest issue with the list of contents giving the headings to the chapters, and not the double titles, as in later issues.

Two sales held by Messrs. Hodgson, on January 22nd and 30th respectively, were good, the former especially, as it comprised a large number of works on natural history, some of them of considerable interest, e.g., Curtis's Botanical Magazine, vols. i. to lxxii., with the general index to vols. i. to xlii., 30*l.* (half-morocco); a complete set of Sydenham Edwards's Botanical Register, including the scarce appendix, 'A Sketch of the Vegetation of the Swan River Colony,' 34 vols., 1815-47, 28*l.* (calf); Gould's 'The Trochilidæ,' 5 vols., 1850-61, 25*l.* (half-morocco); and Meyer's 'Illustrations of British Birds and their Eggs,' 4 vols. (1835-41), folio, 17*l.* 5*s.* (half-morocco). At the second sale 'Waverley,' 3 vols., 1814, fetched 52*l.* (half-calf, top and fore edges uncut); 32 volumes of 'The Victoria History of the Counties of England,' 1903-7, 17*l.* 5*s.* (cloth); and 'The Vicar of Wakefield,' 1817, 8vo, with 24 coloured plates by Rowlandson, a book much sought after of late, 12*l.* (old morocco).

On February 3rd a copy of the first edition of Holinshed's 'Chronicles,' 2 vols., 1577, brought 75*l.* at Sotheby's (old stamped binding, vol. ii. not in very good condition); the first edition of Killigrew's 'Comedies and Tragedies,' 1664, containing a portrait of the author with his dog, 25*l.* 10*s.* (old calf); and Purchas's 'Hakluytus Posthumus,' 5 vols., 1625-6, 50*l.* (old calf, some leaves defective). Later the same firm sold Sharpe's 'Catalogue of the Birds in the British Museum,' 27 vols., 1874-95, for 39*l.* (original cloth); Dresser's 'Birds of Europe' (without the Supplement), 8 vols., 1871-81, 38*l.* (half-morocco); Gould's 'Birds of Asia,' 7 vols., 1850-83, 38*l.* 10*s.* (half-morocco); the 'De Historia Stirpium' of Leonardus Fuchs, first edition, printed at Basle in 1542, folio, 16*l.* 10*s.* (contemporary boards, the woodcuts coloured); Lord Lilford's 'Birds of the British Islands,' 7 vols., 8vo, 1885-97, 51*l.* (half-morocco); twelve plays by Massinger, most of them first editions, in one volume, 35*l.* (original calf); Piranesi's 'Vedute di Roma,' 2 vols., and the 'Vasi e Candelabri,' together 3 vols., folio, with the Roman proof impressions of the 183 plates, 37*l.* (uncut); Transactions of the Zoological Society, vols. i. to xvii., 1835-1906, 38*l.* (half-russia and in parts); 'Il Decamerone,' 5 vols., 8vo, Londra (Parigi), 1757, 20*l.* (old French morocco); a complete set of Thomas Hearne's 'Works,' 68 vols., and others relating to him, together 86 vols., many on large paper, 30*l.* (morocco extra); and La Borde's 'Choix de Chansons,' 4 vols., 8vo, 1773, 61*l.* (old French calf).

The sales held during February were noticeable chiefly for important books appearing at intervals, as though obtained from a variety of sources, such as, in addition to those already mentioned, Reyard and Lodowick's 'Journal of the late Actions of the French in Canada,' 1693, 4to, 70*l.* (unbound); Keats's 'Endymion,' the earliest issue of the first edition, with the page of errata and the five-line slip, 1818, 54*l.* (original boards, autograph of Wordsworth); 'Lamia,' 1820, 34*l.* (boards with label); the original MS. catalogue of the library at Rydal Mount, containing a great number of entries in the handwriting of Wordsworth and a few in that of Southey, 17*l.* 15*s.*—an exceedingly interesting manuscript, which, to judge from the price paid for it, does not appear to have been so fully appreciated as it deserved; the Fourth Folio Shakespeare, 1685, 40*l.* (morocco, portrait cut round, leaf defective); Spenser's 'Faerie Queene,' second edition, 1596, and the second part, first edition, 1596, the 2 vols. in old calf, 63*l.*; and the series of plates to Cook's 'Second Voyage,' printed on large-size folio paper, proofs before the engraver's numbers or lettering, for the use of the Admiralty officials, 38*l.* (half-russia). The last belonged to Dr. Gott's modern library, sold by Messrs. Sotheby on February 26th.

The library of the late Mr. T. H. Ismay and other properties, sold by Messrs. Christie on March 11th, contained 'La Divina Commedia' with the commentary of Benvenuto da Imola, printed at Venice in 1477. This copy had the fifteen preliminary leaves containing Boccaccio's life of the poet, and was bound in oak boards covered with gold-embossed leather, protected by four silver masks as bosses, silver corners and clasp. It was enclosed in a massive casquet decorated to match the book. The price realized for this glorified example was 53*l.*; while the Second Prayer Book of Edward VI., printed by Whitechurch in 1552, sold for 64*l.* (old calf); Watteau's 'Figures de Différents Caractères,' four of the plates missing, a few inlaid, and some 82 others mounted or inlaid, inserted, c. 1740, 120*l.* (half-morocco); Pluvinel's 'Manciege Royal,' title repaired, 1623, 30*l.* (old russia, arms of Louis XIII.); and the 'Opera' of Horace, printed at Paris in 1733, 8vo, 25*l.* (contemporary morocco extra). An inscription on the fly-leaf of the last-named book signed by M. Pigault-Maubailtarcq recorded that it formed part of the private library of Louis XVI. at Versailles, and that it was the King's habit to take it with him in his pocket when walking in the grounds.

On March 17th Messrs. Puttick & Simpson sold a copy of Matthew Arnold's prize poem 'Alaric at Rome,' printed at Rugby in 1840. It was in its original printed wrappers, and brought the substantial sum of 48*l.*—very much more than its "weight in gold," which was, I believe, at one time accepted as the estimate of its extrinsic value.

J. HERBERT SLATER.

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Beissel (S.), The Lord's Prayer and the Hail Mary, 3/6 net. Church Congress held at Manchester on October 6th to 9th, 1908, Official Report, 10/6 net.
Gueranger (Dom Prosper), Religious and Monastic Life Explained, 2/6 net. Translated from the French by J. Veth.
Harnack (A.), New Testament Studies: III. The Acts of the Apostles, 6*l.* In the Crown Theological Library.
Nugent (S. M.), Life Radiant: some Memorials of the Rev. Francis Paynter, 3/6 net.
Rogers (R. W.), The Religion of Babylonia and Assyria, especially in its Relations to Israel, 9/ net. Five lectures delivered at Harvard University.
Sayani (Husain R.), Saints of Islam, 2/6 net. Intended to give some of the main features of the religious philosophy of Islam, with a brief account of interesting events in the lives of three of its saints.

Law.

- Fletcher (J. Devonald), The Weights and Measures Acts 1878 to 1904, 5/ net.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Architectural and Topographical Record, September.
Benham (Canon), Old London Churches, 42/ net. Illustrated by Arthur Garrett, Introduction by the Bishop of London.
British Numismatic Journal and Proceedings of the British Numismatic Society, 1907, Vol. IV. Edited by W. J. Andrew, P. W. P. Carlyon-Britton, and L. A. Lawrence.
Hall (E. H.), The Decorative Art of Crete in the Bronze Age. A dissertation presented to the Faculty of Bryn Mawr College for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.
Marius (G. Hermine), Dutch Painting in the Nineteenth Century, 15/ net. Translated by A. Teixeira de Mattos. Illustrated.
Milbourne (J. S.), Heraldry for Amateurs, 3/6 net. An illustrated handbook for beginners.
Penrose's Pictorial Annual, Vol. XIV. A review of the graphic arts, edited by William Gamble.
Records of Buckinghamshire, Vol. LX., No. 5.

Poetry and the Drama.

- Ashbee (C. R.), Conradin, 21/ net. A philosophical ballad, with illustrations.
Farjeon (E.), Pan Worship, and other Poems, 2/6 net.
Furst (H. E. A.), Songs of London, 2/6 net. A medley of grave and gay.
Koopman (H. L.), The Librarian of the Desert, and other Poems.
Mitchell (S. L.), The Living Chalice, and other Poems, 1/ net. No. VI. of the Tower Press Booklets.
Robertson (W. Graham), Pinkie and the Fairies, 1/ net. The fairy play now being performed at His Majesty's.

Music.

- Booth (Josiah), A Selection of One Hundred Tunes, with Appropriate Hymns, 2/6 net.

Bibliography.

- Aberdeen Public Library, Twenty-Fourth Annual Report.

History and Biography.

- Calendar of State Papers, Domestic Series, of the Reign of William III. July 1—Dec. 31, 1695, and Addenda, 1689-95, 15*l.* Edited by William J. Hardy.
Catholic Who's Who and Year Book, 1909, 3/6 net. Edited by Sir F. C. Burnand.
Pearl-Strings: a History of the Resuliyi Dynasty of Yemen, by 'Aliyyu' bnu' I-Hasan 'El-Khazrejiyy, Vol. III. Translated by the late Sir J. W. Redhouse, edited by E. G. Browne, R. A. Nicholson, and A. Rogers.
Sandeman (G. A. C.), Calais under English Rule, 2/6 net.
Tregelles (J. A.), A History of Hoddesdon in the County of Hertfordshire. A survey of the hamlet from the earliest times, with an account of its ancient manors and its inhabitants, from manuscripts prepared and collected by the late Alexander McKenzie, supplemented by extracts from the deeds and court rolls at Hatfield House.

- Willis (W.), Recollections of Sir John Charles Frederick Day, 1/ net. Deals with some incidents during his life as Judge of the High Court.

Geography and Travel.

- Mahtab (B. C.), Impressions: the Diary of a European Tour, 6/ net. A narrative of travel, and the expression of thoughts and views formed in lands in many respects different from the East, by an Indian Maharajah.
Streatfield (Henrietta S.), Glimpses of Indian Life, 3/6

Sports and Pastimes.

- Motorist's Diary and Year-Book, 1909, with an A B C Guide to Motor Law, contributed by C. C. Macklin, 2/ net.
Ruff's Guide to the Turf, Winter Edition, 1908, 7/6

Education.

- Johns Hopkins University, Preliminary Register, 1908-9.

School-Books.

- Balzac (H. de), Le Médecin de Campagne, 3*l.* Edited, with notes and introduction, by De V. Payen-Payne.
Terry (F. J.), Elementary Latin, 3/6 net. A first year's course, supplementary to text and exercises in the pupil's edition.
Workman (W. P.) and Cracknell (A. G.), Geometry, Theoretical and Practical, Part III, 1/6. — Intermediate Geometry: being Sections V. and VI. of Geometry, Theoretical and Practical, 2/6. In the University Tutorial Series.

Science.

- Bright (C.), The Life Story of Sir Charles Tilston Bright, Civil Engineer, 12/6 net. Also contains the story of the Atlantic cable, and the first telegraph to India and the Colonies, with 68 illustrations. New Edition.
Duncan (W. Galloway), The Electrical Equipment of Collieries, 10/6 net.
Marsden (R. W.), A Practical Text-Book on Infectious Diseases, 5/ net.
Royal Astronomical Society, Monthly Notices, November, 2/6
Science Year-Book, 1909, 5/ net.
Watkins (R. L.), Catechism of Hæmatology, 2/6 net.
White (C. Powell), Lectures on the Pathology of Cancer, 3/6 net.
Woburn Experimental Fruit Farm, Ninth Report, by the Duke of Bedford and S. U. Pickering, 2/6

General Literature.

- British Chamber of Commerce of Turkey, Quarterly Trade Journal.
Catholic Directory, Ecclesiastical Register, and Almanac, for 1909, 1/6 net.
Encyclopædia of Islam: No. III. Adana-Ahmed al-Badawi. A dictionary of the geography, ethnography, and biography of the Mohammedan peoples, under the supervision of Dr. M. T. Houtsma and Dr. M. Seligson.
Fieldhouse (Arthur), Key to the Student's Commercial Book-Keeping, Accountancy, and Banking, 16/ net.
Florio (John), The Essays of Michael, Lord of Montaigne, Vols. II. and III. 3 vols., 31/6 net. With an introduction by Thomas Seccombe. In the Elizabethan Classics.
Highest and Lowest Prices, and Dividends and Crashings, of Shares of Mining and Kindred Companies for Past Six Years, 1*l.* A supplement to 'Mining Handbook.'
Mathiesons' Handbook for Investors for 1909, 2/6 net. A pocket record of Stock Exchange prices and dividends for past ten years.
Pocket Emerson, 2/6 net. Edited by W. T. S. Sonnenschein. One of the Wayfaring Books.
Royal Blue Book: Court and Parliamentary Guide, January, 5/ net.
Simplex Parcels Post Register, 2/6
Voices of Nature, 2/6 net. A sequel to the collection in praise of a simple life, edited by Ernest A. Baker.
Yeats (W. B.), Works, Vols. VII. and VIII. Comprises 'The Secret Rose,' 'Rosa Alchemica,' 'The Tables of the Law,' 'The Adoration of the Magi,' 'John Sherman,' and 'Dhoya.'

Pamphlets.

- Dublin Science and Art Museum, General Guide to the Art Collections, Part I., by C. Gutch, 1*l.* Contains Greek and Roman Sculpture, &c.

FOREIGN.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Amelung (W.), Die Sculpturen des Vaticanischen Museums, Vol. II., Text, with separate volume of 83 plates, 30*l.*
Hirth's Formenschatz, Parts 5-12, 1*l.* each.
Michel-André: l'Œuvre du Maître—Peinture, Sculpture, Architecture, 10*l.* With 169 illustrations. In the Nouvelle Collection des Classiques de l'Art.
Rosenthal (L.), La Gravure, 12*l.* One of the Manuals d'Histoire de l'Art.

History and Biography.

- Bucquoy (Lieut.), Les Gardes d'Honneur du Premier Empire, 20*l.*
Kleinclausz (A.), Histoire de Bourgogne, 10*l.*

Geography and Travel.

- Play (A. E. Le), Notes et Croquis d'Orient et d'Extrême-Orient, 15*l.*

Fiction.

- Calandra (Eduardo), Juliette, 3 lire. A story of Turin in the time of Napoleon.

General Literature.

- Revue slavistique, Vol. I., 7*m*. The articles are in Polish.

Pamphlets.

- Hymans (H.), Henri van Paesschen et l'ancienne Bourse de Londres. A lecture before the Académie royale d'Archéologie de Belgique.

* * All Books received at the Office up to Wednesday Morning will be included in this List unless previously noted. Publishers are requested to state prices when sending Books.

Literary Gossip.

THE January Blackwood opens with 'The Story of the Young Turks,' written at Salonika, their head-quarters, by a contributor who is in touch with the leaders of the movement. Sir Henry Brackenbury continues his memories, and tells of his work during the Franco-German War in aiding the sick and wounded. 'Sea Wolves' is an account of the corsairs of France, and 'Old Irish Life: Duels,' is entertaining. In 'Musings without Method' the proposals for educating working-men at Oxford are severely handled. A poem by Mr. Alfred Noyes is entitled 'The Two Painters: a Tale of Old Japan.' Other articles in the number are 'Tiflis to Constantinople via the Black Sea Ports,' and 'Crabbe,' by Prof. Elton.

AMONG the articles in the January International will be the following: 'Austria without Francis Joseph,' by Mr. W. T. Stead; 'Women in the British Labour Party,' by Mrs. Ramsay MacDonald; 'The Aims of Christian Socialism,' by the Abbé Paul Naudet; 'Insanity and Crime,' by Dr. Toulouse of Paris; 'The Social Transformation of Japan,' by Mr. Ingram J. Bryan of Nagasaki; and an editorial on 'The Future of the Race,' by Dr. Rodolphe Broda.

MR. MACKENZIE BELL is publishing immediately from the Kingsgate Press, 4, Southampton Row, an extended selection from his works. It will be entitled 'Poems,' and will contain much that he has written since his last volume, while the old matter is rearranged.

MR. JOHN PAYNE has completed a new volume of lyrical poems, which will form the forthcoming issue of the Villon Society, under the title of 'Flower o' the Thorn: a Book of Wayside Verse.' Particulars can now be obtained from the Hon. Secretary, Mr. Alfred Forman, 49, Comeragh Road, West Kensington.

IN 'Canadian Types of the Old Régime' Prof. C. W. Colby, who occupies the Chair of History in McGill University, Montreal, has brought the writings of French authors to bear on the English, and vice versa, as no other writer on the subject has attempted to do. Messrs. Bell will publish the book early this month.

THE same firm announce for inclusion in their "Queen's Treasures Series" Mrs. Ewing's 'Jan of the Windmill.' It will contain eight coloured illustrations by Miss Wheelhouse, who has been successful with 'Six to Sixteen' and 'A Flat Iron for a Farthing.' Miss Wheelhouse will also contribute a special title-page, covers, and end-papers. This volume will be ready early in February.

THE forthcoming number (Vol. III. No. 1) of The Classical Quarterly will contain, inter alia, the following articles; 'An Uncollated MS. of Juvenal,' by Mr. C. E. Stuart; 'Platonica,' by Mr. H. Richards; 'Could Ancient Ships work to Windward?' by Dr. T. Rice Holmes; 'The Legions of the Euphrates Frontier,' by Mr. R. K. M'Elderry; and 'Manilian Varieties,' by Mr. H. W. Garrod.

MR. LEWIS MELVILLE writes:—

"I am engaged upon a biography of the author of 'Vathek,' William Beckford of Fonthill, and I have obtained permission to examine those letters and papers of his that are in the possession of his descendants. There must, however, be in existence many other letters written by him, and I shall be grateful if the owners would allow me to see them. They should be sent to me, care of Messrs. Curtis Brown & Massie, 5, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden. The greatest care will be taken of the correspondence, and it will be returned so soon as it is copied."

THE death of Mr. John L. Bashford on Tuesday last week at Bridport from heart failure removes a journalist of exceptional influence. Mr. Bashford had been for some time correspondent for The Westminster Gazette in Berlin, where he made his name in a similar position for The Daily Telegraph. He began as a private tutor at Cambridge, and was a lecturer at the University of Berlin from 1882 to 1890.

MESSRS. CONSTABLE are about to publish in England 'A Concordance to the English Poems of Thomas Gray,' according to Mr. Gosse's edition. The work appears under the auspices of the Concordance Society, organized at Yale University in 1906.

MR. T. E. KEBBEL writes:—

"I see that in your review of the new edition of the 'Dictionary of National Biography,' on December 12th, you speak of myself as 'The late Mr. Kebbel,' in distinction from others who, you say, are 'still happily with us.' Permit me to assure you that I am one of those who are still with you, whether happily or not is a question for others."

We owe our sincere apologies to the veteran writer for a suggestion which, we hope, will be premature for many years yet.

It is said that Messrs. Methuen are likely some time this year to begin the publication of a magazine chiefly devoted to fiction and the lighter forms of literature.

THE death in Edinburgh of Mr. Thomas McKie, LL.D., in his seventy-eighth year, occurred on December 22nd. A native of Dumfries and a friend of Carlyle, Mr. McKie became much interested in University reform, and was elected a member of the Court of the University of Edinburgh. He published several books, of which the best-known are 'Lyrics and Sonnets' and 'Summer Rambles,' the latter showing a rare appreciation of the scenery of his own country.

AT the last meeting of the New Spalding Club the Council promised to members during 1909 the third volume of 'Musa Latina Aberdonensis,' edited by W. K. Leask, together with either 'Records of Old Aberdeen,' edited by Mr. A. M. Munro, or 'Records of the Scots Colleges,' Vol. II., edited by the Rev. W. Forbes Leith.

THE following work in progress had also the approval of the Council: 'The House of Gordon,' edited by Mr. J. M. Bulloch, with contributions by Mrs. Skelton, Mr. A. Churchill Gordon, and the editor; 'Selections from the Records of the County of Banff,' edited by Mr. James Grant; 'Folk-Music of the North-East of Scotland,' edited by Mr. Gavin Greig and the Rev. J. B. Duncan; 'Records of Inverness,' edited by Mr. William Mackay; 'The Rise of Natural Science in the North of Scotland,' from the MS. collections of David Skene, edited by Prof. J. W. H. Trail; 'The House of Forbes,' edited by Col. Allardyce; 'Bibliography of the Shires of Aberdeen, Banff, and Kincardine,' compiled by Mr. J. F. K. Johnstone and others; and 'Records of the Red, White, Black, and Grey Friars of Aberdeen' (1211-1560). It has also been decided to compile a record of the Society of Advocates, Aberdeen.

MESSRS. WARD, LOCK & Co. are publishing this month the following novels: 'The Long Arm,' by Mr. E. P. Oppenheim; 'A Crime on Canvas,' by Florence Warden; and 'Sir Morecambe's Marriage,' by Mr. James Blyth.

THE installation of Lord Iveagh as Chancellor of the University of Dublin was made the occasion of a brilliant ceremonial. Amongst the recipients of degrees conferred honoris causa were the Dean of Westminster, Sir Robert Hart, and Mr. Justice Madden. The College Choral Society sang some choruses from Sir Robert Stewart's Tercentenary Ode.

A HEATED controversy is at present being carried on in the Irish press on the question of the teaching of Irish in the new University. A strong agitation is on foot to make Irish a compulsory subject for matriculation and during the Arts course until specialization begins. This is opposed, on the ground that, in spite of the efforts of the Gaelic League, and the subsidies in the form of "result fees" which Irish at present receives in the Secondary schools, this subject is only studied by a very small percentage of pupils.

DR. G. A. GRIERSON has just been elected an honorary member of the Société Finno-ougrienne of Helsingfors.

MR. ALEXANDER PHILIP of the Gravesend Public Library proposes to edit 'A Library Encyclopædia,' which is to be issued by subscription. "Only the foremost authorities," it is announced, will be engaged to write on the various aspects of the subject; and the work will not be published unless the number of subscribers is large enough to warrant it. If the applications are satisfactory, the book will be issued at the end of this year.

'BUILDERS OF UNITED ITALY,' by Mr. R. S. Holland, which Messrs. Bell will shortly publish, is an attempt to provide a popular introduction to one of the stirring periods of modern European history, in a study of some of the greatest figures in the struggle for Italian independence.

MR. ELLIOT STOCK is issuing a new collection of 'Hymns, chiefly for Children,' by Canon T. A. Stowell, in which care has been taken to secure simplicity of language and avoid exaggerated sentiment.

AT the last meeting of the French Académie des Inscriptions seven foreign correspondents were elected—Messrs. Lanman, Professor of Sanskrit at the University of Cambridge (United States); Huelsen, Secretary of the Archæological Institute, Rome; De Groot, Professor of Chinese at Leyden; Charles Michel, Professor of Greek and Sanskrit at Liège; Jagic, Professor of Slavonic Languages at Vienna, Hinojosa, of the Royal Academy of Madrid; and Rayana, Professor of Roman Philology at Florence. Two French members were also elected—M. Demaisons, Archivist at Reims, and M. Roman, "correspondant du Ministère de l'Instruction publique" at Embrun.

MR. G. S. LAYARD writes:—

"Allow me to correct the ascription of the 'Poem by a Perfectly Furious Academician' in your issue of last Saturday (p. 816). Shirley Brooks was the author, not Tom Taylor."

A NEW French daily, Les Nouvelles, appeared in Paris on Monday last, and the initial number is above the average, both in general get-up and the quality of the paper. The artistic and foreign news is well done.

THE death at Calcutta of Syed Mahomed Abdul Ghafur, better known as Prof. Shahbaz, removes an enlightened supporter of education. He was the editor of the first Urdu journal, Darul-Sultanat, and the author of several works which proved him to be a sound scholar. He had been busy for many years past with a monumental biography of Amir Khusro, the poet-philosopher of Delhi, but it is feared that the work is too incomplete for publication. At one time the Professor held the post of Director of Public Instruction in Bhopal.

THE journalist Ugo Pesci, whose death is reported from Bologna, played an important part in the politics of the seventies. He was the author of several interesting works, among them 'Firenze Capitale' and 'Roma Capitale.'

THE death in his seventy-fifth year is announced from Hanover of Prof. Wilhelm Schäfer, formerly Lecturer on Political Economy at the Technische Hochschule of that town, and author of 'Der Handel in der Volkswirtschaft' and other works.

WE note the publication of the following Parliamentary Papers: Statistical Abstract for Foreign Countries (1s. 7d.); and Educational Endowment, England, New Rule (1d.).

SCIENCE

The People of the Polar North: a Record.

By Knud Rasmussen. Compiled from the Danish Originals and edited by G. Herring. With Illustrations by Count Harald Moltke. (Kegan Paul & Co.)

THIS handsome and finely illustrated volume is not primarily a narrative of Arctic travel, though based throughout on personal experience; it is rather a study of the folk-lore of a primitive tribe by one who is perfectly familiar with their language. The usual order of visitors to a new people is said to be—explorer, missionary, trader; and it is not till these have sophisticated and exploited the natives that the man of folk-lore makes his appearance—generally too late. Before he has mastered their language and gained their confidence, their primitive simplicity, and even the memory of many of their legends, have vanished.

The author of this book was one of four members of the Danish Literary Expedition which left Copenhagen in June, 1902, and spent two years in studying the Eskimo (who, by the way, are not the only "people of the Polar North"). Of this time, ten months were passed with the isolated tribe—the most northerly in the world—inhabiting the shore of Smith Sound. The leader was Mr. Mylius Erichsen, who afterwards conducted another expedition to explore the unknown part of the Greenland coast, and achieved his object, though at the cost of his life.

The first section of the volume, which deals with the Polar Eskimo, is called 'The New People'—the title of one of the Danish works from which Mr. Herring has made his extracts. He explains that the tribe are only "new" in the sense that their inner life and beliefs have never previously been described by a competent hand. They were discovered by Dr. Kane over fifty years ago; and more recently their presiding genius, Commander Peary, who calls them his "children," has given an exhaustive account of their customs and taken two censuses of their numbers. It is plain, however, from a comparison of his phonetic list of names with those in this book, that he has no literary command of the language; and much scope was left for an interpreter who was well acquainted with the kindred dialect of Southern Greenland. In styling Mr. Rasmussen "the first competent seeker" after Eskimo folk-lore, Mr. Herring may be correct as regards the Polar Eskimo; but he is certainly wrong in saying that Dr. Rink, the author of previous works on the Greenlanders, "had not the advantage of knowing the Greenlandic language," and was entirely dependent on interpreters. Dr. Rink translated into Danish the memoirs of Hans Hendrik—the faithful hunter to four Polar expeditions—who married a woman of the northern tribe; and he expressly states that he had no assistance in that translation. Mr. Herring is also mistaken in supposing that there had never been any recorded association between the Polar Eskimo and their southern kinsmen. The former told Hendrik that their ancestors used to visit Upernivik, and even at that period—fifty years ago—they spoke of their neighbours as "Southlanders."

While pointing out these slight errors, we gladly acknowledge that Mr. Herring has capably discharged a difficult editorial task. He has had to choose his material, without help from the author, from two separate books—a collection of the northern folk-lore and a narrative of travel; and we wish that he could have kept these two subjects more completely apart. The whole work is valuable, though many of the stories are puerile, and some are naturally "unrefined." But the author's style is so graphic, and his description of individuals so full of sympathy, that we fancy most people will prefer the section on the West Greenlanders, in which the personal note is more frequent. The book is an exact record of facts and impressions; there is no theory as to the origin or ethnographic position of the race. But while Commander Peary states that the Polar Eskimo do not know whence they migrated, Mr. Rasmussen extracted from them their belief that they came from the west. This is, of course, in keeping with their plainly Mongolian features, and, so far as it goes, corroborates Sir Clements Markham's suggestion that the Eskimo generally are the tribe called Onkilon, which disappeared from North-Eastern Asia at some unfixed, but not distant epoch. A comparison of some special characteristics of their folk-lore—as, e.g., in the story of the Moon (brother) and the Sun (sister)—with those of the tribes of Arctic Asia, might throw further light on this question. There seems to be no tradition indicating the identity of the "Skrelligs"—the destroyers of the old Norse colony—with the Eskimo. Mr. Rasmussen does not attempt any co-ordination of the legends of the Christian and the uncivilized Eskimo; but three or four stories told him by both branches show a strong family likeness. The belief of the latter in the existence of a strange tribe inhabiting the high central plateau (inland-dwellers) finds its counterpart in the stories of the former about "possessed" men (Qivitoqs), who take to the hills and shun the society of their kind. We fancy, however, that a belief in the inland-dwellers still exists in places even among the Christian Eskimo. Mr. Rasmussen is at present engaged in a six years' journey among the far-scattered tribes of the North American coast; and we hope that his general conclusions may be formulated when he has completed that tour.

The present volume, however, will always possess a permanent value from the number and excellence of Count Moltke's illustrations. Of these there are over a hundred—twelve of them in colour; and while the landscapes are admirable, the portraits and pen-and-ink sketches are masterly. Count Moltke suffered from serious illness during his Northern trip; but neither this drawback nor the piercing Arctic cold has had any effect upon his artistic skill. It is a pity that so large a volume is not furnished with an Index, as the table of contents is far from complete.

Children and Gardens (Country Life Office), the latest volume from Miss Gertrude Jekyll's practised hand, will be a welcome gift to children who are fortunate enough to have gardens of their own, while even to those who have not it should present many points of interest. It is simply and succinctly written, covering a wide range of subjects, and providing all manner of pleasant lore and reminiscences from the author's fullness of experience. The twelve chapters that go to make up the book give much advice and useful information regarding children's gardens and the flowers they should grow, and of the play-house that every child must covet for its own, together with various dissertations as to weeds and seeds, and botany. The chapter called 'Cowslip-Time,' with its instructions on the making of cowslip balls, is especially attractive; and the conversion of a snapdragon pod into the semblance of an old woman is nothing less than the solution of a puzzling problem. We should like to know whether Miss Jekyll is acquainted with the other method of making daisy-chains, which is prettier than the one she mentions. There is a profusion of delightful illustrations, besides interesting drawings and diagrams, all by the author.

SOCIETIES.

BRITISH ACADEMY.—Dec. 10.—Dr. A. W. Ward in the chair.—The following papers were read in connexion with the Milton Tercentenary.

1. 'Samson Agonistes and the Hellenic Drama,' by the late Sir R. C. Jebb, fellow of the Academy, read by Mr. S. H. Butcher, M.P.—The following is a summary of its main points. 'Samson Agonistes' may fairly be called classical both in language and in structure. Milton here has freed himself from the restraint of strophe and antistrophe, and the measures of his Chorus are entirely arbitrary. This very irregularity has, it is true, a certain grandeur, but is not the grandeur proper to a tragedy on the Greek model; it is rather the sublimity of the Hebrew prophets. Another criticism, upon the structure of the drama, is offered by Dr. Johnson—that the action of the piece makes no continuous progress from the beginning to the end. But it cannot be said, as Johnson says, that this is so. The action is, indeed, a still action, because the force which is to produce the catastrophe is the inward force of Samson's own despair, not an external necessity pressing upon him. Precisely the same is the case in the 'Prometheus Vincetus' of Æschylus, a drama consisting, like 'Samson Agonistes,' of a series of interviews.

The Professor went on to inquire as to the spirit of 'Samson Agonistes.' Granting it to be in diction and in structure representative of that Greek drama which was its model, how far was it animated by the spirit, by the dominant idea, of its original? Milton's mind was, in the literal and proper sense, Hebraic, and he habitually thought of the English people as holding the same place under the New Covenant which the Hebrews had held under the Old Covenant. When a man with this bent of thought selected as the subject for a poem an episode of Hebrew history, the treatment of the subject was sure to be genuinely Hebraic. Hellenism contrasts man with fate. Hebraism contrasts God and His servants with idols and their servants. The difference was illustrated by the comparison of Samson and Heracles, who offer analogies of epoch, mission, temperament, sufferings, and death.

2. 'Milton in the Eighteenth Century (1701-1750),' by Prof. E. Dowden, read by Prof. W. P. Ker.—The influence of Milton on the literature of the eighteenth century was threefold: an influence on poetic style, independent in a great degree of poetic matter, during the first half of the century; an influence on both sentiment and style; an influence on thought, always associated with political liberalism. These three streams of influence are in the main connected with (1) 'Paradise Lost,' (2) the early poems of Milton, (3) his political writings. Milton scholarship was active throughout the whole period, from Dennis to Cowper, Hayley, and Todd. The earliest critic is John Dennis. His point of view connects the criticism of Milton with the quarrel of the Ancients and Moderns in France. Dennis aimed at the reformation and advancement of English poetry, and believed that these could come only by connecting art with the religious emotions. Poetry is an affair of the passions, and our loftiest passions are those proceeding from religion. The Christian religion, as being true, gives the moderns a vast advantage over the ancients. Milton, who surpassed all the ancients and all the moderns, is a proof of this, his excellence proceeding from the union of high genius with religious enthusiasm. Addison's 'Spectator' papers were written, not because Milton was unknown, but because he was well enough known to make readers desire to know him better.

The early poems of Milton were much less widely known than 'Paradise Lost.' Warton tells an anecdote of his father's having, through Mr. Digby, introduced Pope to acquaintance with the minor poems, after which Pope's pilferings appear. In fact, however, Pope was well acquainted with them from the first, and used them with discretion, borrowing happy phrases, but never adopting the Miltonic style, as did the smaller poets of the time. Voltaire, as an English critic, in his 'Essay on Epic Poetry' introduced the subject of Milton's sources in 'Paradise Lost.' Milton, he stated, had seen at Florence the 'Adamo' of Andreini, and had recognized the majesty of the theme. The interest in the study of sources was turned to account by Lauder in his investigations and his forgeries. The 'Protoplasma' of Hieronymus Ziegler, mentioned by Edward Phillips in his 'Theatrum Poetarum,' may have been read by Milton. Lauder failed to discover a copy, nor does the 'Protoplasma' seem to have been examined by any Milton scholar during the eighteenth century. 'La Scena Tragica d'Adamo ed Eva,' described by Joseph C. Walker and by Hayley, has been supposed to be an original work of Troilo Lancetta. In fact, it is only a translation or re-handling of Ziegler's 'Protoplasma.'

Fenton's edition of Milton is supposed by Monk to have suggested to Bentley his castigation of Milton's text. But Fenton was, on the whole, discreet in his emendations. Bentley's biographers, Monk and Jebb, differ as to that great scholar's good faith in his theory of a fraudulent editor of the early texts of 'Paradise Lost.' We can trace back, through Johnson and Lauder to The Grub Street Journal of 1732, the suggestion that Bentley manufactured this man-of-straw as a politic device. Jebb commends Bentley's proposal to read ichorous for "nectarous" in 'Paradise Lost,' B. vi. l. 332; but ichor and ichorous were probably not in the sense required until after Milton's death. Bentley, however, made a few suggestions of value. His soul for "fowl" in B. vii. l. 451, is certainly right; and his swelling gourd for "smelling gourd" in B. vii. l. 321, may be the true reading.

The interest of Jonathan Richardson's 'Notes' for modern readers lies chiefly in the memoir of Milton prefixed; he gathered some important recollections from personal friends of Milton. His son, a classical scholar, collaborated in the 'Notes.' The portrait prefixed is founded on a crayon drawing supposed to be by Faithorne. Two pencil drawings by Richardson on vellum are in the possession of the writer: one (dated 1734) evidently from the Richardson crayon (by Faithorne?) photographed for Sotheby's 'Ramblings in Elucidation of the Autograph of Milton'; the other, dated 1737, perhaps an attempt by Richardson to imagine and depict a profile.

Dalton's arrangement of 'Comus' for dramatic representation, with added characters and songs—the music by Dr. Arne—did much to call public attention to the early poems. Quin contributed to its success by his dignified presentation of the Enchanter.

The half-century with which these notes deal closes with Lauder's forgeries and the first two volumes of Newton's variorum edition.

3. 'Milton's Fame on the Continent,' by Prof. J. G. Robertson.—Milton was the first English poet to inspire respect and win fame for our literature on the Continent, and to his poetry was due, to an extent that has not yet been fully recognized, the change which came over European ideas in the eighteenth century with regard to the nature and scope of the epic. 'Paradise Lost' was the mainstay of those adventurous critics who dared to vindicate, in the face of French classicism, the rights of the imagination over the reason in poetry. Milton was first known on the Continent as the Secretary of the Commonwealth and the notorious defender of regicides; his Εἰκονοκλάστης was translated into French by John Dury in 1652, and from that date until the end of the seventeenth century sporadic references are to be found to Milton in memoirs, journals, and biographical dictionaries, but rarely or never is there any mention of his poetry. Even Bayle, who devoted three pages of his 'Dictionary' to him in 1697, evidently regarded his poetry as of subordinate importance. Many years before this a German resident in England, Theodor Haake, who knew Milton personally, had begun a translation of 'Paradise Lost'; and although Haake's work was neither finished nor published, it appears to have stimulated another German, Ernst Gottlieb von Berge, to undertake the same task. Berge's translation of 'Das verlustigte Paradies'—the oldest translation of Milton's verse into a Continental language—was published at Zerbst in 1682; but it was very indifferent in quality and attracted little notice. There was, however, no permanency in German interest in Milton, and for the next few years we have to look to French periodicals. In spite of Bayle's notice and a remarkable dissertation on English poetry in the Journal littéraire in 1717, with a very full account of 'Paradise Lost,' that interest remained exceedingly restricted until the first quarter of the eighteenth century was over. When the first translator of The Spectator arrived, in 1718, at Addison's papers on Milton, he excused himself from translating them on the ground that "'Paradise Lost' had not been, and doubtless never would be, translated into French."

The critical years for Milton's fame on the Continent were 1727-30. In 1727 appeared first in English, and some months later in a French translation by the Abbé Desfontaines, Voltaire's 'Essay upon Epic Poetry.' This established Milton's reputation abroad. Very shortly after appeared the first French translation of 'Paradise Lost' by Dupré de Saint Maur. Dupré's translation is in prose and very far from satisfactory; but it was eminently readable, and suited the taste of the time. It was followed by a translation of Addison's papers from The Spectator on Milton, and round these the eighteenth-century criticism of the poet in France virtually turned.

Meanwhile, the Italians and the Germans were interesting themselves in Milton. It was, in fact, the Italians rather than the French who were the pioneers of a true critical appreciation of Milton's genius on the Continent. An Italian settled in England, Paolo Rolli, produced the best translation of 'Paradise Lost' into verse in the eighteenth century. But even greater importance must be attached to the relation of Italian criticism to Milton. Muratori, in his eloquent pleading for the freedom and supremacy of the imagination in poetry, had prepared the way, and that writer's 'Della perfetta poesia italiana,' although it does not mention Milton, is the best vindication of Milton's greatness. Muratori's distinguished disciple Luzán was the first Spaniard to interest himself in Milton; and the two Swiss critics Bodmer and Breitinger, who vigorously championed the English poet in Germany, drew their most vital ideas from Muratori.

Bodmer's prose translation of 'Paradise Lost' (1732), clumsy although it is, is of the first importance for the history of German poetry and criticism. It was virtually round this translation that the famous literary controversy took place between the Swiss critics on the one hand, and the Leipzig professor Gottsched, as the defender of French classicism, on the other. Gottsched was worsted, and from the midst of the strife emerged in Klopstock a genuine poet, the fountain head of whose inspiration was Milton.

When we turn to the nineteenth century Milton becomes more and more—with the exception of France and to some extent Italy—an object of literary and bookish interest. The French literature of the first twenty or thirty years of the nineteenth century represents the most intense period of Miltonic influence on any alien literature, the centre of the enthusiasm being Chateaubriand.

4. 'Milton as Schoolboy and Schoolmaster,' by Mr. Arthur F. Leach.—Milton less than any other poet answered to the common notion of a poet as a kind of Puck or Ariel wafted on the wings of the wind in irresponsible vagaries. All his life he was a staid stayer at home, who passed fifty-six out of his sixty-six years of life in London, within a mile of where he was born, and in the bosom of his family. A scholar from his earliest to his latest years, his schooldays had a far more predominant influence on his works than had been hitherto supposed. His school was St. Paul's. The effect of its ancient history and the genius loci on Milton could be traced in his works. For St. Paul's was still, after the days of Colet, what it had been before—the grammar school of the Cathedral Church. It still remained attached to the Cathedral, and masters and boys took part in Cathedral processions and attended its services. The masters under whom Milton learnt with such avidity as to start the disease which afterwards deprived him of sight were the two Alexander Gills. To the High Master, who published while Milton was at school an English grammar in Latin, which advocated and illustrated phonetic spelling and gave examples of rules taken from the best modern English authors, Spenser especially, Daniel, "the English Lucan," and Wither, "the English Juvenal," Milton undoubtedly owed his early knowledge and love of English poetry. To the younger Gill, who came when he was in his last year at school, he probably owed his skill in Latin verse, and a close friendship, which imbued him with his predilections for the Parliamentary and reform party. Gill himself was on one occasion, for seditious remarks, hauled out of the school by two royal pursuivants before the Star Chamber, and condemned to a fine of 2,000*l.* and the loss of his ears, which he narrowly escaped. The books read in the school undoubtedly gave Milton his bent to sacred subjects for his poetry, and particularly 'Paradise Lost.' Colet had prescribed "Auctours Christian, as Lactantius, Prudentius, and Proba." Lactantius, the early Christian Cicero, was a prose writer "on divine institutions," and his influence on Milton, especially on Book V. of 'Paradise Lost,' which takes the same semi-Arian view of the relation of the Son of God to the Father and to creation, was long ago pointed out. Proba, a Proconsul's wife, who wove lines of Virgil into a life of Christ, may almost certainly be traced in the Invocation at the beginning of 'Paradise Lost.' But the influence of Prudentius, who like Proba wrote at the beginning of the fifth century, and is called the Christian Pindar, is most marked. Among his 'Cathemerinon,' his Hymns on Christmas Day and the Epiphany suggested Milton's early hymns, written at the age of nineteen on the same subject, while his 'Apotheosis' is the direct inspiration of the pathetic lines on the decay of the heathen deities on Christ's birth in the 'Nativity' ode. So, too, Prudentius's 'Hamartigenia,' or 'Origin of Sin,' with its elaborate description of heaven and hell, and his 'Psychomachia,' or 'Battle of Virtues and Vices,' undoubtedly first gave Milton's mind its bent towards the subject of 'Paradise Lost,' and furnished many hints in its treatment.

Of Milton as a schoolmaster it almost requires an apology to speak, as he always disowned the title. He was, in fact, for some seven years a distinguished private tutor of aristocratic youth, and his tutorship had fair at one time to develop into what he called an academy, or, in vulgar parlance, a school, had not a modest competence and the counter-attraction of politics distracted him. But he left his mark as a schoolmaster in literature in the 'Tractate on Education,' which set out his own practice. He was in advance of his age in that, as in other spheres. He insisted on the necessity of ample playing fields; he wished for the Italian pronunciation; he advocated learning things, not words; and, though Latin was to be the medium, that was only because in Latin these things were to be found. His list of authors to be read and of subjects might appal the youthful mind. But Phillips himself asseverated that it did not. He anticipated the demand for natural science, and the addition of experts in agriculture and gardening, horse-riding and carpentry—in fact, practical work of all sorts—to the ordinary staff. In a word, both as a theoretical and a practical teacher he was Milton, a miracle of industry, of ideas, and in both magnificent.

5. 'Consideration of Macaulay's Comparison of Dante and Milton,' by Dr. W. J. Courthope, Fellow of the Academy.—Macaulay's essay on Milton is largely vitiated by the unfairness of its comparisons and party spirit. It seems to be deliberately meant as a rejoinder to Johnson, whose judgment on Milton, in his 'Lives of the Poets,' is supposed to have been affected by his Tory prejudices. It exalts the controversial prose writings of Milton almost to the same level as his poetry. The panegyric is made to depend upon contrast and comparison. Milton's virtues as a statesman are brought into strong relief by contrasting him with the different party extremists of his age, and showing that he combined all their excellences without any of their faults, being in this respect the illustrious forerunner of the later Whigs. As a poet, he is naturally compared with Dante. In order to exalt his character, Macaulay depresses that of the Florentine poet, by dwelling on his sullen pride and intense bitterness, which are contrasted with the "sedate and majestic patience" of Milton in the midst of misfortune. No allowance is made for the greater degree of injustice and suffering involved in Dante's treatment by his fellow-citizens, nor is any account taken of the leniency shown to Milton, as a defender of regicide, after the Royalist Restoration. The greatness of Milton's poetical achievement in 'Paradise Lost' is proclaimed by insisting on the paradox that "as civilization advances poetry almost necessarily declines." Poetry is described as "the art of employing words in such a manner as to produce an illusion on the imagination"—an obviously inadequate definition, which, however, enables Macaulay to restrict the comparison between Dante and Milton to the opposite methods employed by each poet in the use of imagery. The conclusion of Macaulay is that "the images which Dante employs speak for themselves; they stand simply for what they are"; while the value of Milton's images "depends less on what they directly represent than on what they remotely suggest." This judgment seems to be the exact inverse of the truth, since, by Dante's own statement, the sense of 'The Divine Comedy' is allegorical; while in 'Paradise Lost' the action is "directly represented," not "remotely suggested," since the narrative of it is, in a sense, historical and epical, and is in no way invested with an allegorical meaning.

While a comparison between Dante and Milton is both natural and fitting, it ought to be raised high above the atmosphere of partisanship, political or literary. Both poets are representatives of humanity, and protagonists in the battle of life which has been proceeding from the beginning of the Christian era. 'The Divine Comedy' is a true mirror of the thought of the Middle Ages, reflecting the ideas and character of a citizen of Florence; 'Paradise Lost' reflects the great movements of the Reformation and the Renaissance operating on the arena of English politics. Both poets may be regarded as representative men, working at different points of a single movement of civilization, and, thus viewed, there are certain points of resemblance in the conception and execution of their great poems which seem to deserve consideration. In the first place, each poet intended to write his epic in Latin; and the different reasons which led them to prefer the vernacular are well worthy of remark. Again, there is at once similarity and difference in the causes which made each postpone the execution of his undertaking till a comparatively late period in his life; and a curious parallel may be observed in the length of time between the first conception and the completion of their monumental works, as well as in the period that elapsed between the end of their labours and their death. Macaulay makes the contrast in the main features of their respective styles depend almost entirely upon differences in their individual characters, but fails to do justice to the softer and more beautiful aspects of 'The Divine Comedy.' When the two poems are considered as mirrors of thought of their respective ages, it is easier to understand the profound significance which underlies Dante's use of the allegorical form in 'The Divine Comedy,' and Milton's choice of classical epic form for 'Paradise Lost.' To attempt to award the superiority in poetical performance to Dante or Milton would be as idle as to compare the two systems of thought which they severally represent. It is more profitable to observe how comprehensively each poet embodies in an ideal form the character of his age and nation, and the perfection of artistic skill with which each succeeds in combining contrary tendencies in life and thought into one harmonious imaginative organism.

ROYAL ASTRONOMICAL. — Dec. 11. — Mr. H. F. Newall, President, in the chair. — Major MacMahon read a paper on the determination of the apparent diameter of a fixed star, and proposed a method founded on the application of the principle of the biroscope to the photography of occultations of stars by the moon. It was shown that a star might have an apparent diameter of $\frac{1}{1000}$ of a second, and that the time taken by the moon to occult a fairly bright star might give an approximate measure of its diameter. Prof. Dyson agreed with the principle, and hoped that results might be obtained in the case of bright stars occulted by the dark limb of the moon, if a large reflecting telescope and extremely sensitive plates were employed. — The Astronomer Royal and Mr. Davidson showed further photographs of Comet Morehouse, in continuation of the series exhibited at the preceding meeting, carrying them on to November 25th, after which the moon interfered and the comet got too low. The structure of the tail showed very interesting particulars, but the cyclical changes apparent in September and October did not appear to continue. A fine series of photographs by Prof. Barnard, taken at the Yerkes Observatory between October 16th and November 19th, was also shown. — Prof. George Forbes read a paper on the comet of 1556, and its possible breaking up into three parts, afterwards seen in 1843, 1880, and 1882. These three comets formed a group closely related to one another, and the author showed reasons for thinking that the disruption had occurred through the influence of an ultra-Neptunian planet, which he believed to exist at a mean distance from the sun of 100 celestial units, with a period of about 1,000 years, and an inclination of about 50° to the ecliptic. — Mr. J. W. Gifford read a paper on an improved telescope triple object-glass, giving complete formulae for figuring and testing.

GEOLOGICAL. — Dec. 16. — Prof. W. J. Sollas, President, in the chair. — Messrs. A. Lewis, E. R. Lloyd, M. Odling, and D. S. Palk were elected Fellows. — The communication read was: 'On the Igneous and Associated Sedimentary Rocks of the Tourma-kedy District, County Mayo,' by Mr. C. Irving Gardiner and Prof. S. H. Reynolds, with a Palæontological Appendix by Mr. F. R. Cowper Reed.

ROYAL NUMISMATIC. — Dec. 17. — Sir Henry H. Howorth, President, in the chair. — Mr. F. A. Walters, exhibited an unpublished groat, half-groat, and penny of the rosette-mascle issue of Henry VI., struck at Calais. The groat and half-groat differed from the usual type of this coinage in the placing of a small mascle in the spandril of the tressure on each side of the king's head. — The President showed a badge of the Pitt Club. — Dr. Head read a paper on some Ephesian tesserae having on the obverse a stag, and on the reverse a bee surrounded by the legend $\kappa\eta\rho\iota\lambda\lambda\iota\varsigma\ \omega\delta\epsilon\ \pi\rho\delta\varsigma\ \pi\acute{\alpha}\lambda\upsilon\rho\iota\nu$. Eckhel had considered these pieces to be druggists' tickets for the purpose of advertising the sale of a medicament compounded of beeswax for the cure of a disease called $\pi\acute{\alpha}\lambda\upsilon\rho\iota\varsigma$. Dr. Head, however, put forward the suggestion that they might be charms used by bee-keepers, and that they referred to the calling back of bees to the hive at swarming time by the rattling of them in a resounding pot or kettle.

Mr. J. G. Milne communicated a paper on 'Leadens Tokens of Roman Times' recently found at Behnesa, the ancient Oxyrhynchus, in Egypt. Mr. Milne divided these tokens into two chief classes: one with bust of Athene on the obverse, and Victory on the reverse; the other with a figure of the god Nilus and with various reverses, showing figures of Athene, Sarapis, Horus, Abundantia, Pietas, &c. A summary was given of all the billon and bronze coins found during the excavations at Behnesa, which had extended over a period of five seasons. From this summary it appears that from the time of Augustus to Severus Alexander the predominating currency in the district was bronze money, which from that date to the reign of Diocletian was entirely superseded by billon money. As a large number of the leaden pieces bear not only the initials of Oxyrhynchus, but also dates such as are met with on the coins of Alexandria of Roman times, it was suggested that they served as token money from the middle to the end of the third century A.D. Mr. Milne would separate these tokens from the ordinary leaden tickets which were in common use in Egypt from the reign of Augustus onwards, and which served as checks for admission to games, for commercial purposes, advertisements, &c.

LINNEAN. — Dec. 17. — Dr. D. H. Scott, President, in the chair. — Miss A. F. S. Williams, B.Sc., Miss E. N. Thomas, B.Sc., Mr. C. F. U. Meek, and Mr. A. H. Maude were admitted Fellows. — Mr. W. B. Waterfall was elected a Fellow. — Mr. Rupert Vallentin exhibited a rare barnacle, Lepas fascicularis, obtained in July last off the Scilly Isles, and the coral Dendrophyllia cornigera, dredged in St. Ives Bay. The Rev. T. R. R. Stebbing contributed some observations. — Mr. W. C. Worsdell exhibited living specimens of various forms of Selaginella, and the President remarked upon the interest of the exhibition. — The third exhibition was by Mr. G. Massee, who exhibited preserved specimens, and lantern-slides of the "Black Scab" of potatoes. During the past few years this disease, caused by a parasitic fungus, has assumed the proportions of an epidemic in various parts of this country. — Prof. Dendy, Mr. A. P. Young, and the President contributed some remarks. — Messrs. H. and J. Groves exhibited specimens of Luzula pallescens, Besser, collected in Woodwalton Fen, Hants, by Mr. J. Groves in company with Mr. E. W. Hunnybun, who discovered the plant there last year. Dr. Otto Stapf exhibited, for comparison, specimens of L. pallescens from Central Europe. Dr. Stapf, Mr. G. C. Druce, and Mr. F. N. Williams engaged in the discussion. — Mr. G. Claridge Druce exhibited, as a probable new British plant, Montia lamprosperma, Chamisso, the character by which it is distinguished from M. fontana being, it was stated, the larger, chestnut-brown shining seeds, reticulate rather than tubercular. Mr. Clement Reid believed he had met with the seeds of both species in his researches in British leaf-beds. — Mr. F. M. Burton sent for exhibition an oyster-shell with a remarkably large calcareous concretion formed at the point of attachment of the adductor muscle. Prof. Herdman, to whom the shell had been shown, considered the phenomenon due to some parasitic infection which had caused irritation, and consequent growth. There was no trace of any animal having bored in from the outside at the place.

The first paper was by Mr. W. Riddell, communicated by Prof. Herdman, on 'The Anomura of the Sudanese Red Sea.' — The second paper, by Mr. R. P. Gregory, 'Forms and Flowers in Valeriana dioica,' was communicated by Prof. A. C. Seward. — Prof. Gruvel's short paper, entitled 'Études sur les Cirrhipèdes du Musée de Cambridge,' communicated by Mr. J. Stanley Gardiner, was read in title; and was followed by a descriptive paper by Mr. W. L. Distant, communicated by the same, on the Rhynchota obtained on the Sealark Expedition.

ZOOLOGICAL. — Dec. 15. — Dr. H. Woodward, V.P., in the chair. — The Secretary read a report on the additions to the menagerie during November. — Mr. F. Gillett gave an account of his recent hunting trip to the Thian Shan, illustrated by lantern-slides. — Mr. R. I. Pocock exhibited photographs of a male Sumatran tiger recently purchased by the Society, remarking that the Society has at present, living in the gardens, examples of three out of four known races of tigers. — Mr. F. E. Beddard communicated a paper entitled 'Some Notes on the Muscular and Visceral Anatomy of the Batrachian Genus Hemisus, with Notes on the Lymph Hearts of this and other Genera.' — Mr. G. A. Boulenger described a 'New Species of Lacerta from Persia.' — A communication was received from Dr. Einar Lönnberg 'On some Wart-Hog Skulls in the British Museum.' — Mr. R. Lydekker communicated a paper 'On Two Chinese Serow Skulls.' — Mr. Pocock read a paper entitled 'Warning Coloration in the Musteline Carnivora,' and exhibited skins of skunk, badger, &c., to illustrate his argument. — Dr. W. T. Calman communicated a paper 'On a New River-Crab of the Genus Gecarcinus, from New Guinea.' — Mr. Oldfield Thomas read a paper on mammals collected in the provinces of Shan-si and Shen-si, Northern China, by Mr. M. P. Anderson, for the Duke of Bedford's Zoological Exploration of Eastern Asia. Thirty-three species were included, represented by 335 specimens, presented, as before, to the National Museum by his Grace. Several were described as new.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS. — Dec. 22. — Mr. J. C. Inglis, President, in the chair. The paper read was 'An Investigation of the Heat-Losses in an Electric Power Station,' by Mr. F. H. Corson.

FARADAY. — Dec. 15. — Dr. T. M. Lowry in the chair. — Dr. F. J. Brislee communicated a paper (read by Dr. N. T. M. Wilmshire) on 'A Redetermination of the Electrolytic Potentials of Silver and Thallium.' — A paper entitled 'The Heats of Combustion of Aluminium, Calcium, and Magnesium' was read by Mr. F. E. Weston and Mr. H. Russell Ellis. — Mr. Ellis then read a paper on 'The Formation of Graphite by the Interaction of Magnesium Powder and Carbonates.' — A preliminary communication on 'Colloidal Barium Sulphate' was made by Dr. Ernest Feilmann.

MEETINGS NEXT WEEK.

- | | |
|--------|--|
| MON. | London Institution, 4.—'The Romance of Animal Life, Lecture I., Mr. F. Martin-Duncan. (Juvenile Lecture.) |
| | Royal Academy, 4.—'Ambition,' Sir Hubert von Herkomer. |
| | Surveyors' Institution, 7.—'Modern House-Purchase Schemes,' Mr. F. E. Blunt. (Junior Meeting.) |
| | Aristotelian, 8.—'Some Implications of Recognition,' Dr. G. F. Goldsborough. |
| TUES. | Royal Institution, 3.—'Rivers of Life,' Prof. W. Stirling. (Juvenile Lecture.) |
| WED. | London Institution, 4.—'The Romance of Animal Life,' Lecture II., Mr. F. Martin-Duncan. (Juvenile Lecture.) |
| THURS. | Royal Institution, 3.—'Sentinels and Citadels,' Prof. W. Stirling. (Juvenile Lecture.) |
| | Royal Academy, 4.—'Portraiture,' Sir Hubert von Herkomer. |
| FRI. | London Institution, 4.—'The Romance of Animal Life,' Lecture III., Mr. F. Martin-Duncan. (Juvenile Lecture.) |
| | Astronomical, 5. |
| | Philological, 8.—'Some Anglo-Romance Etymologies,' Prof. E. Weekley. |
| SAT. | Royal Institution, 3.—'Work, Fatigue, and Repose,' Prof. W. Stirling. (Juvenile Lecture.) |

Science Gossip.

THE LIMERICK TECHNICAL EDUCATION SCHOOL has received a grant of 1,000*l.* for scholarships. Half of this sum has been subscribed by the Earl of Dunraven and half by the Department of Technical Instruction in Ireland.

PREPARATIONS are in progress in the United States for the commemoration this year of the three-hundredth anniversary of the exploration of the Hudson River by Henry Hudson in 1609, and the hundredth anniversary of the first successful application of steam to navigation on the river by Robert Fulton in 1807. The latter has been deferred for two years in order to admit of a joint commemoration.

WIRELESS telegraphy has been successfully established between Mergui and Port Blair in the Andamans; and to complete the chain it is now proposed to establish the same means of communication between Mergui and Victoria Point on the Tenasserim coast.

THE sun will be in perigee about 6 o'clock on the morning of the 3rd inst. The moon will be full at 2h. 13m. (Greenwich time) on the afternoon of the 6th, and new at 12 minutes past midnight on the 21st. She will be in perigee early in the afternoon on the 23rd. Mercury will be at greatest eastern elongation from the sun on the 27th, and will be visible in the evening from about the 12th, moving from Capricornus into Aquarius, and passing about ten degrees due south of β Aquarii on the 21st. Venus rises now about 6 o'clock in the morning, and later each day, from the eastern part of Scorpio; she passes into Sagittarius about the middle of the month, and will be very near the moon on the 20th (conjunction before rising). Mars is moving in an easterly direction through Scorpio, and rises a little earlier each morning, increasing also very slowly in brightness; he will be about five degrees due north of Antares on the 21st. Jupiter is in Leo, and rises earlier each evening; he will be in conjunction with the moon before setting on the morning of the 11th. Saturn is in Pisces; he sets now about 11 o'clock in the evening, and before 10 by the end of the month.

WE have received Vol. XXIV. Part I. of the Cambridge Observations, containing the results of a series of measures of double stars, which were obtained with the Northumberland equatorial, under the direction of Prof. Challis, during the years 1839 to 1844, but which, for some unexplained reason, have long remained in manuscript. They have now been fully reduced and edited by Sir Robert Ball, the present Lowndean Professor and Director of the Observatory. It was in 1904 that they were met with in a rearrangement of the reduction-books, and as Mr. Lewis, of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, was then engaged in his great collection and discussion of the observations of the double stars in Struve's list, these were sent to him, and many of them were incorporated in vol. lvi. of the Memoirs of the Royal Astronomical Society. His report of the great care with which they appear to have been made, and the value which belongs to a large part of them as the only measures made between those of Struve and Mädler, led to the present publication; some other results not hitherto published were also included, and the whole have been revised and passed through the press by Messrs. Hinks and Hartley. It is very satisfactory that, after an interval of more than sixty years, these observations should at last be made useful to astronomy.

PROF. KOBOLD publishes in No. 4289 of the Astronomische Nachrichten a new set of elements (with an extended ephemeris) of Morehouse's comet (c. 1908) from later observations. These show no sign of ellipticity. The perihelion passage took place last Saturday, but early this month the comet will begin to come nearer the earth again (distance on February 5th, 1.75 in terms of the earth's mean distance from the sun), and its theoretical brightness still exceeds three times that when it was discovered. The apparent place is now very near the star ξ Sagittarii, and the comet is still moving almost in a due southerly direction.

THAT useful guide for the amateur astronomer, the Companion to the Observatory, has been issued for 1909, and is replete with information for subjects of observations of all classes during the year. As in former issues, Mr. Denning contributes a list of the radiant points of the principal meteoric showers, and Mr. Maw supplies a number of observations of double stars. A useful table is given of the countries in which the standard time depends directly on the Greenwich meridian, with the number of exact hours by which they are arranged to differ. Thus 1 hour fast from Greenwich is called Mid-European time; 2 hours fast, East-European. Ireland still uses Dublin time, 25 minutes slow on Greenwich; France that of the Paris meridian, 9h. 21m. fast on Greenwich; and Russia that of Pulkowa, 2h. 1m. fast on Greenwich. The "inferred" magnetic elements for Greenwich Observatory in 1909 are declination, $15^{\circ} 50'$ west; horizontal force, 0.1854; dip, $66^{\circ} 55'$.

WE have received Nos. 8 and 9 of Vol. I. of the Publications of the Allegheny Observatory, containing papers by Mr. Schlesinger describing a new partly graphical method for predicting solar eclipses, and a determination of the orbit of a spectroscopic binary by the method of least squares.

THE eleventh number of Vol. XXXVII. of the Memorie della Società degli Spettroscopisti Italiani has been received, and contains a description by Father Fényi of an eruption on the sun's disc on August 5th, and of a large prominence observed by Mr. Fox and Signor G. Abetti with the Yerkes spectroheliograph from July 25th to 29th; and a list of stars which may be observed as occulted by the moon at Italian stations during the lunar eclipse on the 3rd of next June.

FINE ARTS

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

A RECENT book on Michelangelo, to which we have not previously had an opportunity of referring, is the Vie de Michel Ange by E. Rolland (Hachette). It is an eloquent, fervid piece of writing on the theme that greatness is ever paid for by suffering. "Vous attristez le monde, mais vous l'embellissez," he cries, apostrophizing the great Christians of history, among whom he would number his subject. By his manner of working out his theme, however, he seems to suggest more than this—to enforce the essential similarity of human character under apparent variety by showing (and showing as typical) the reverse of the medal. Was Michelangelo pre-eminently heroic as an artist? then he shall be shown as in active life, a poltroon and a weakling, eaten up by petty anxieties and imaginary poverty and sudden panics. "He so scornful of cowardice was himself a coward." No doubt there is an element of truth in this, but it seems (particularly in the absence of illustrations to urge the other side) exaggeratedly pessimistic. His artistic life was after all the larger part of Michelangelo.

Arts and Crafts in the Middle Ages. By Julia De Wolf Addison. (Bell & Sons.)—This extremely well-intentioned book lacks form. It is a collection of notes from the author's reading, all interesting, and many of them authentic, collected in eleven chapters, but otherwise undigested, and not arranged in any order of place, time or subject. The whole is nicely illustrated, and if it were entirely recast and rewritten would be of great value to the students it is intended to serve.

By the Roman Wall, by Maria A. Hoyer (Nutt), describes a visit paid in August, 1907, to the Roman Wall in Northumberland and Cumberland and the chief points of interest near its line. It tells the tourist less than a guide-book would. It makes no claim to scholarship: indeed, it occasionally confronts us with forms like castelli and phrases like "tall and slender hypocausts." Its gossip is abundant and unoriginal. But it is readable and pleasing, and generally sensible in its choice of technical details. Readers who want something more personal than Baedeker and less learned than Bruce may find it well worth purchasing.

The Priory Church of St. Bartholomew-the-Great, Smithfield. By George Worley. (Bell & Sons.)—A considerable monograph has been for some time in preparation on the memorable priory church of St. Bartholomew the Great, which well merits more specific and detailed treatment than it has yet received. Meanwhile Mr. Worley's small book, with its numerous careful illustrations, is welcome. A valuable feature is the series of reproductions of prints. A brief chapter at the end deals with St. Bartholomew the Less and the Hospital associated with the saint.

Lettering and Writing, by Percy I. Smith (Batsford), consists of 16 plates in a neat case, each $13\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $8\frac{1}{2}$ in., giving examples for a course of systematic study of lettering and writing. Mr. Smith would be the first to acknowledge the debt he owes to Mr. Johnston's book on 'Writing, Illuminating, and Lettering'; but these sheets have merits of their own, and will be found useful by teachers of the subject, and students who desire to continue their work at home. We are glad to welcome any sign of growing interest in this most simple of the decorative arts—one within the reach of everybody with the sense of form and pattern. These sheets, or some like them, should be hung up in every school in the country, elementary or middle-class, as well as in the Schools of Art for which they are particularly designed.

Grammar of Lettering. By Andrew W. Lyons. (MacLaren & Co.)—We can commend this book very heartily to those who are interested in lettering on a large scale, such as sign-writing, mural inscriptions, &c. They will find in it not only a very clear account of the principles on which the form of letters depend, but also a practical course of instruction in the actual writing, or rather painting, of the letters themselves, and a full account of the materials and implements to be used. It should be in the library of every school of art and architecture in the country. The examples of Gothic letter are perhaps open to improvement, but this is a matter the student will soon correct for himself, when once his eye is trained to observe form and plan out the disposition of his letters to the space available.

MR. JAMES TREGASKIS has issued the Caxton Head Catalogue of Portraits, which collectors will be glad to get. It adopts a convenient arrangement which we have often urged in these columns—an index of painters and engravers. But Mr. Tregaskis has gone further than this, for he provides a general index in which subjects are classified under such headings as authors, admirals, ambassadors, artists, bishops, and so forth. This is an excellent idea, for the desires of collectors are varied. Professional men, for instance, collect portraits of those distinguished in their own branch of study. The arrangement of the Catalogue is alphabetical, and each of the 2,164 portraits is briefly described, whilst the dates of the artist's birth and death are added. We notice one little slip. Mlle. Porisot (No. 1560) should, we think, be Parisot, the dancer. In announcing her marriage in 1808 to a Mr. J. Hughes, Le Beau Monde of March of that year states that "the lady is said to be three score years of age, and to have retired from public life with three score thousand pounds"! Mr. Tregaskis's drawing of her is doubtless one made by J. R. Smith for the purpose of engraving the large picture after A. W. Devis.

MR. LOWES DICKINSON.

By the recent death, in his ninetieth year, of the well-known portrait painter Mr. Lowes Dickinson (briefly noted in last week's Athenæum), the world of art loses a singularly attractive personality, although the greater part of his work necessarily belongs to the past.

His grandfather was a farmer in Northumberland, and his father started business in Bond Street as a stationer and publisher of lithographs. The son worked here at lithography, and was earning his own living from the age of sixteen. Through one of the early connexions he made at this time he was enabled to visit Italy, where he resided from 1851 to 1854. On returning to England he took a studio in Langham Chambers, where Millais also then had a studio. Lowes Dickinson was well acquainted with the Pre-Raphaelites, and about 1854 came into contact with F. D. Maurice, and together with Charles Kingsley, Tom Hughes, Mr. J. M. Ludlow, Mr. Llewelyn Davies, and others, was one of the band of Christian Socialists who, under Maurice's banner, strove to infuse Christian ideals into the then budding movement for social reform. An important and permanent outcome of the movement was the foundation of the Working Men's College, where in early days Mr. Dickinson taught drawing with Ruskin and D. G. Rossetti, and in which, until his death, he maintained a warm interest, testified by the admirable crayon portraits of Maurice, Kingsley, and Hughes which adorn its walls. In 1858 he painted portraits in oils of the same three fellow-workers for his friend Alexander Macmillan, the publisher, of whom in later life he made a most characteristic crayon drawing. From this time onwards he was actively engaged as a portrait painter, and The Times has published a list of the many remarkable men—soldiers, statesmen, lawyers, divines, men of letters and of science—who sat to him. Through his friend Mr. Augustus Vansittart he established a special connexion with Cambridge, where many of his portraits hang in college halls. His striking posthumous portrait of General Gordon at Khartoum hangs in the dining-hall of the Gordon Boys' Home.

Mr. Dickinson had an almost unique gift for posthumous portraiture in crayons, and many families cherish such representations of their departed relatives from his skilful pencil. Few artists have been so successful in reproducing the characteristic expression even from indifferent photographs, and sometimes unaided by previous knowledge of the subject.

Lowes Dickinson's success in this difficult branch of the art was largely due to that intense power of sympathy which endeared him to so many friends. The well of love in him seemed ever flowing, and was reflected in the tender expression of his eyes and the tones of his gentle voice. Not only the few survivors among his contemporaries, but also many of the younger generation, with whom he so readily shared the affection he had felt for their parents, will cherish the gracious memory of his beautiful face, with its setting of white hair and beard.

Mr. Dickinson married in 1857 the daughter of Richard Smith Williams, who, as reader to Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co., discovered the genius of the Brontës. Mrs. Dickinson's sister, Miss Anna Williams, was the well-known singer. One of his sons, Mr. G. Lowes Dickinson, Fellow of King's College, Cambridge, has, as stated last week, achieved distinction as an essayist and writer on political and social subjects.

Shortly after his marriage Mr. Dickinson took a cottage at Hanwell, where he lived from 1864 to 1879, still retaining his studio in Langham Chambers. In 1879 he built the house known as 1, All Souls' Place, where he lived until his death.

Fine-Art Gossip.

The Burlington Magazine for this month contains an article by Mr. Henry James on his friend the late Charles Eliot Norton. A retrospective editorial note on the completion of the magazine's fifth year contains some sharp criticism of the Prime Minister's attitude to the National Gallery; while the discussion of the reorganization of the Victoria and Albert Museum is continued. 'Whistler and Modern Painting' is the first of the illustrated articles, which include also a note by Mr. Lionel Cust on Lucas Cranach's portrait of Martin Luther as "Junker Jörg" at Windsor Castle; a study of 'Eight Italian Medals,' by Mr. G. F. Hill; an article by Dr. E. W. Braun on some early Fürstenberg porcelain figures of the characters in the Italian comedy; and a further instalment of Mrs. Herringham's researches into the origin and meaning of the patterns of Oriental carpets. In the notes Mr. O. M. Dalton discusses a Byzantine painted panel in the British Museum; Dr. W. Martin ascribes to Hans Jordaens the Younger the 'Interior of an Art Gallery' in the National Gallery; and M. Georges Hulin suggests the Cardinal de Chatillon as the subject of a portrait by Corneille de Lyon, now in London. The frontispiece is a large reproduction of Whistler's early landscape 'The Coast of Brittany.'

THE UNITED ARTS CLUB hold their fifth exhibition of pictures and other works of art at the Grafton Galleries from January 6th to February 12th. The private view is fixed for the former date. The exhibition will include sculpture and handicrafts, rare old Temple kakemonos, eighteenth-century buckles, and three pictures by John Martin: 'The Day of His Great Wrath,' 'The Last Judgment,' and 'The Plains of Heaven.'

THE latest addition to the National Gallery is the 'Portrait of a Lady' (No. 2292) by M. J. Mierevelt, who has hitherto been unrepresented at Trafalgar Square. The picture, which hangs on the north-west wall of Room X., has been bequeathed by Mr. George Fielder.

EARLY this month an exhibition is to be held at the Goupil Gallery of a representative collection of water-colours by Mr. George Thomson, this being the first time an exhibition has been held of the artist's works.

THE following portraits have been added to the Scottish National Portrait Gallery: Gladstone by Prince Troubetskoy, a head done in later life; the presentation portrait of J. S. Blackie, by Sir George Reid; Robert Brown, botanist, by H. W. Pickersgill; J. E. Lauder, by Robert Innes; Thomas Faed, by Sir W. F. Douglas; and George Manson, a promising artist who died at twenty-six. There have also been added to the Gallery a cast of a bust of Paul Jones by Houdon; and busts of Brougham by an unknown sculptor and the late Marquis of Linlithgow by Mr. D. W. Stevenson.

THE INSTITUTE OF IRISH ARCHITECTS has presented a recommendation to the Senate of the newly created Irish University to the effect that a School of Architecture should be formed in the University. Precedents for the establishment of such a school are found in the Universities of London and Manchester and the University College of Liverpool.

THE COUNCIL OF THE ARTS AND CRAFTS SOCIETY OF IRELAND has arranged for a course of lectures to be given in Dublin during January and February. Amongst the lecturers will be the Earl of Mayo, Mr. James Ward, Mr. Oswald Reeves, and Miss Evelyn Gleeson. The lectures will be delivered in the Mansion House, and will be free to the public.

COUNT PLUNKETT has been made a foreign corresponding member of the Académie Royale d'Archéologie de Belgique.

THE Anglo-French exhibition in Paris, to which we referred some months ago, is to be called 'L'Exposition des Cent Portraits de Femmes,' and will be exclusively devoted to portraits by English and French artists of the eighteenth century. It will be opened in Paris on April 25th, and the profits will be devoted to the relief of the families "des marins français naufragés (Société de Courcy)." The general organization of the exhibition will be carried out by M. Armand Dayot, the English members of the committee of selection being Mr. Lionel Cust, Mr. Sidney Colvin, Mr. Herbert Cook, Mr. Roger Fry, Mr. Claude Phillips, and Sir Walter Armstrong.

THE death is announced of M. Gustave Émile Doudemont, a member of the Société des Artistes Français, at the age of seventy-four. He studied under G. Boulanger and Jules Lefebvre. He was for many years an exhibitor at the Salon, contributing to that of last year a fishing scene.

The Builder in its New Year's Number begins a reissue of its series of illustrations and plans of English cathedrals, which have been long out of print. The first is the view of St. Paul's, by Mr. H. H. Statham. The plan has been revised to include some recent alterations. Among other illustrations in the number are the design for a façade in ferro-concrete for which the prize was awarded in a competition instituted by The Builder; a view of the Roman Forum before the modern excavations, by Mr. A. C. Conrade; the Armenian Church in Paris; and views of Old London from drawings in the Crace Collection.

THE Punch Exhibition at the Leicester Galleries, which opens to-day, includes a poem by Mr. Owen Seaman, written for the occasion, and an introduction to the souvenir catalogue by Mr. E. V. Lucas.

THE death at Colombo of Mr. Harold Wright, a magistrate in the Potteries, removes a capable caricaturist. Mr. Wright did as "Stuffgownsmen" and "Stuff" for Vanity Fair many excellent caricatures of prominent figures in the legal world.

EXHIBITIONS.

SAT. (Jan. 2).—Royal Academy Winter Exhibition, Private View.
— Landscape Exhibition, Royal Society of Painters in Water Colours.
— Mr. Punch's Pageant, Leicester Galleries.
WED. United Arts Club, Fifth Exhibition, Private View, Grafton Galleries.
FRI. International Society of Sculptors, Painters, and Engravers Ninth Exhibition, Press View, New Gallery.

MUSIC

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Musical Instruments: English and Irish Instruments. By Robert Bruce Armstrong. (Edinburgh, T. & A. Constable.)—In this sumptuous volume the author has continued his profound studies on obsolete stringed instruments, of which his first volume (on Irish and Scotch harps) is still in our recollection. He has given us beautiful pictures of various guitars, lutes, and harps, all in vogue not very long since, but now displaced by the Spanish guitar, and the large pedal harp, so effective in orchestras. Even the Spanish guitar, which was so popular in the Ireland of fifty years ago, that its price used to rise in summer, "when the young gentlemen went out to serenade the ladies," is now seldom heard, and people who like to carry about an accompaniment seem to prefer the far inferior banjo. All these lute-harps, harp-lutes, and so forth now rank as curiosities, and the name of Edward Light, the inventor of several of them, will be strange to most people.

In the history of music a careful record of the various attempts to reach perfection is highly interesting, and it is important to teach us that what we now have is the survival of the fittest. There was similar groping for the best form of fiddle, and we advise any reader who travels in Italy to visit the collection of mediæval fiddles—we have no English for Streichinstrumente—which are in the museum at Bologna, from the trompette marine, a huge double-bass with one string, down to the most delicate and fantastic violins.

All the details of the construction, the stringing, and the tuning of the various modifications of English harps and lutes (the Spanish guitar and Erard harp are excluded) are illustrated with careful diagrams and descriptions, and on this point the book before us leaves nothing to be desired. There is added a considerable collection of the music composed for these instruments, which consists mainly of arrangements of well-known airs, and the "air and variations" popular in the days of Light, a hundred years ago. We confess we find this music vapid and dull. There is not even a clever use made of the resources of the instruments. The exercises are, like most exercises, banal; and there is not, so far as we can find, a single fresh melody, or rare old ditty, preserved in these specimens. Even Thomas Moore, in those days, preserved only the obvious Irish melodies; the quainter and more characteristic he despised, or did not appreciate, and so the composers for these guitars and lutes have not left us anything worth preserving in our modern music. That is not Mr. Armstrong's fault. He has done all that was possible for his subject, and we congratulate him on his splendid record of a forgotten art. The vein of original melody among the people had apparently disappeared before the epoch of these lutes. The old Irish melodies bear clear traces of being suggested by the instruments then in fashion; but we have found little or nothing of this in the volume before us. Mr. Armstrong tells us that Sir Robert Stewart, the famous organist and professor in Dublin University, gave a course of lectures on obsolete musical instruments many years ago. He notes that it was then possible to find people who played some of them, but an art then dying is now gone beyond recall. These lectures were given about 1880, and the interest they excited was great, but we are not aware that any record of them remains beyond the notice quoted by Mr. Armstrong. His work will, we trust, stimulate those who still possess such instruments to take religious care of them.

Musical Gossip.

ON the 13th inst., the opening of the Brighton Festival, Sir Edward Elgar will conduct his 'Dream of Gerontius,' and on Saturday, the 16th, his new Symphony in A flat will be performed under the direction of Mr. Joseph Sainton. On the 14th Mr. S. Coleridge-Taylor will conduct his new 'Bon-Bon' Suite. The Brighton Municipal Orchestra and the Brighton Philharmonic Society will take part in the Festival.

NEXT Sunday the season of popular concerts will open with a special concert by Mr. Henry J. Wood and members of the Queen's Hall Orchestra.

At the annual meeting of the members of the Royal Irish Academy of Music, held a few days ago in Dublin, the chairman Sir Francis Brady, referred to the withdrawal of the grant from the Corporation of Dublin, owing to the exhaustion of the funds available for this purpose. He also stated that the Parliamentary grant of 300*l.* yearly was given on condition that the annual subscriptions amounted to 100*l.*, and urged all interested in the work of the Academy to contribute to its funds.

THE LEINSTER SCHOOL OF MUSIC, which, under the directorship of Mr. S. Myerscough and Mr. Joshua Watson, has grown rapidly in importance as a teaching institution, gave its annual concert recently in Dublin.

MR. WILLIAM SHORT, principal trumpeter to the King, was adjudicator in Australia at the recent Ballarat Eisteddfod. The title of "Serjeant Trumpeter" lapsed when the late Thomas John Harper retired. In The Monthly Musical Record for December there is an interesting article, signed James A. Browne, entitled 'Handel's Trumpeter,' in which reference is made to the Serjeant Trumpeters in the times of Purcell and Handel.

WE are glad to read the enthusiastic notices by the principal critics of New York referring to the production of M. Massenet's 'Le Jongleur de Notre-Dame' at the Manhattan Opera. It has also been received by the public with great warmth. This fine work when produced at Covent Garden in 1907 was received in a cold manner. Let us hope that the directors will give it another trial.

FRANÇOIS AUGUSTE GEVAERT, who passed away at Brussels on December 24th, produced three works—'Traité d'Instrumentation,' 'Histoire et Théorie de la Musique de l'Antiquité,' and 'Les Origines du Chant liturgique'—which bear special testimony to his learning and research, also to his ability as a writer. When thirteen years old he entered the Ghent Conservatoire, and his setting of 'Super Flumina,' performed at the "Zangverband" in 1847, when he was nineteen, caused Spohr to predict for him a "brilliant and noble" career, and the prophecy was fulfilled. For a time he was chef de chant at the Paris Opéra, and in 1871, on the death of Fétis, he was appointed chief director of the Brussels Conservatoire.

Le Ménestrel of December 26th, in referring to the centenary celebrations of distinguished musicians to be held this year, mentions the jubilee of Spohr, who died November 22nd, 1859, which, we believe, is to be celebrated at Cassel. Le Ménestrel has not heard of any proposed festival in honour of Mendelssohn at Berlin, a city with which the composer was intimately connected, but adds that Germans now blush at the name of the author of 'St. Paul' and the 'Midsummer Night's Dream,' preferring the strange art of Richard Strauss.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

SUN. Concert, 3.30, Royal Albert Hall.
Sunday Society Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.
Sunday League Concert, 7, Queen's Hall.
THURS. Special Elgar Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
SAT. Chappell's Ballad Concert, 2.30, Queen's Hall.
Brussels Quartet, 3, Bechstein Hall.

DRAMA

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

English Pastoral Drama. By Jeannette Marks. (Methuen & Co.)—Inasmuch as Miss Marks has, after ranging carefully through her subject from the time of the Restoration to the close of the eighteenth century, come to the conclusion that there are no more than three first-class specimens of pastoral drama in our literature; and since two of these—Fletcher's 'Faithful Shepherdess' and Ben Jonson's 'Sad Shepherd'—stand outside her period, and the other is the work of a Scotsman, 'The Gentle Shepherd' of Allan Ramsay, hers might seem a case of "love's labour lost." But at all events she has the satisfaction of having accomplished a task which, though ungrateful, is one that has not hitherto been systematically undertaken, and she has also been able, on the strength of her studies, to reach certain definite generalizations. It is her opinion that, whereas the success of 'The Faithful Shepherdess' and 'The Sad Shepherd' might seem to suggest at first the possibility of pastoral drama becoming acclimatized and naturalized in England, the very isolation of these pieces hints at what the study of eighteenth-century attempts in this style proves—that its hold on our country was alien and ephemeral. Miss Marks passes in review the various definitions of the pastoral; she traces its origin to the idylls of Theocritus; and she reckons Poliziano's 'Orfeo' (1472) as the first real dramatic pastoral. Dismissing the two pieces of Fletcher and Jonson as outside her survey, she finds herself able to praise unreservedly, among later seventeenth- and eighteenth-century efforts, Allan Ramsay's above-mentioned work; and such productions as Webster and Rowley's (?) 'Thracian Wonder,' Killigrew's 'Bellamira,' Shadwell's 'Royal Shepherdess,' Crowne's 'Callisto,' Oldmixon's 'Thyrsis,' and Hoadly's pastoral opera 'Phoebe,' with more hesitation.

The one complaint to be urged against her volume is that it too often reads like jottings from a notebook. Its most valuable feature is its bibliography, which gives the title-pages of the first editions of the examples of English pastoral drama that are covered by Miss Marks's period. She claims that she has been fortunate enough to discover several unrecorded manuscripts.

THE PANTOMIMES.

DRURY LANE.—Dick Whittington.
LYCEUM.—Little Red Riding Hood.
ADELPHI.—Cinderella.

PANTOMIME, that curious hybrid of our stage, as essentially English a thing as the revue is French, an amalgam of spectacle and fairy tale, ballet and farce, music-hall songs and social travesty, is once more giving delight to thousands of playgoers—old and young—throughout the kingdom. As an art-form it is cumbrous, almost ridiculous, and it is usually a vulgarization of some of the prettiest elements of our literature—our nursery legends; yet on its pictorial side, in the matter of the grouping of costumes and the arrangement of light, colour, and scenery, it often attains to striking achievements of beauty; while, whatever may be its defects, it has somehow won the suffrages of the general public as more legitimate kinds of drama have never done, partly perhaps because its associations are those of the Christmas holiday season. Now, as a year ago, the West End of London is provided with three pantomimes, Drury Lane having again rivals in the Lyceum and the Adelphi, and it is significant that these are three of the largest theatrical houses in town.

The pictures and colour-schemes of a Drury Lane pantomime always leave on the spectator an impression of dazzling, almost crushing magnificence. The light is intense, the tints are of kaleidoscopic variety, the details of the different tableaux are massed in a way that suggests overwhelming size. Almost of necessity there is a tendency in Mr. Arthur Collins's spectacles towards the garish. But in 'Dick Whittington' he has managed to combine grandeur with refinement, and the big scene of the pantomime, in which the hero's dream of civic greatness is realized, and argosies containing the riches of East and West float into London's "Harbour of Gold," is one of the loveliest we have had at Drury Lane, so quiet though sumptuous is its scheme of decoration—all ivory and gold, ermine and silver. Apart from this scene, the features which stand out are the wonderful Cat of Mr. George Ali—a creature that children will find amusingly feline in its antics, especially in its fight with the Alderman's dog and its attempt to smoke a pipe—and the unforced, yet irresistible humour of Mr. Wilkie Bard. Recruited from the "halls," Mr. Bard proves himself a comedian of no less reticence than versatility. He is most droll when he is most lugubrious, and he has one moment which convulsed the audience on Boxing Night, when, as an orator who has been roughly handled by militant Suffragettes, he sits alone in disarray on the stage and croons to the music of Mendelssohn's 'Spring Song' a request to be placed on some island "where the girls are few."

The Lyceum, which has made its new reputation under Messrs. Smith and Carpenter's management as a "popular" theatre, is bound to rely for both its fun and its spectacle on broad effects. Still, its woodland ballet, with a transformation from the green of summer to the snow and ice of winter, is a charming thing, and distinguished by dancing that is above the ordinary pantomime level; and there is much in 'Little Red Riding Hood,' with its demon wolf and fairies and child-heroine, that will please the youthful playgoer. One anomalous character has been introduced into the story—a Yiddish baron—that might well be spared, did not Mr. Julian Rose redeem its intrusion by the cleverness with which he reproduces Jewish characteristics. On the other hand, little Miss Marjory Carpenter makes the daintiest of Red Riding Hoods, as free from self-consciousness as precociousness. Her singing voice is small, but sweet; she dances as if with pleasure; and speaks, moves, and smiles with the naturalness of childhood.

It seems rather a pity that Mr. Edwardes and Mr. Courtneidge, happy as they were in their choice of subject, happy too in the representative of the heroine, did not permit the most dramatic of fairy stories to make its own appeal at the Adelphi. They have taken one step in a right direction by abolishing the rule which requires Cinderella's sisters to be ugly, and to be played by men in petticoats; but, as if to propitiate stage conventions, they have allowed the tale to be almost smothered by the humours of their two chief comedians, Mr. Rolyat and Mr. Humphries. The former's fun consists mainly of feats that are acrobatic and eccentric, and reflect the comic side of drunkenness; but since his staggering rushes across the boards, his stumbles and his sudden recoveries, prompt young people to laugh heartily and are really ingenious, much may be forgiven to his dexterity and good nature. Mr. Humphries, again, an actor somewhat like Herbert Campbell in style, may be pardoned his woman's dress because there is so much geniality in his portrait of the termagant Baroness. These comedians almost fill the stage, but nevertheless they leave Miss Phyllis Dare a little room to show us what a dainty, ingenuous Cinderella she would have been in a pantomime that followed more closely the lines of the legend.

After all, Mr. Edwardes and his colleague grant the story a chance in their toilet scene; and there, too, their decorative artists appear to the greatest advantage. Their bouquet ballet, particularly, with dresses of green and white, is conceived in exquisite taste.

Dramatic Gossip.

THE TRINITY COLLEGE DRAMATIC CLUB appeared a few days ago at the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, in 'Much Ado about Nothing' and 'The Duke of Killcraunkie.' The plays were produced under the management of Mr. E. H. Brooke.

MR. A. B. WALKLEY, speaking in connexion with the newly established course of lectures in journalism in Trinity College, Dublin, took for his subject 'Some First Principles of the Theatre.'

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—T. G.—C. B.—G. K. G.—D. C. B.—A. D.—Received. W. T.—S. L. P.—Many thanks. We cannot undertake to reply to inquiries concerning the appearance of reviews of books.

THE ATHENÆUM.

SCALE OF CHARGES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS

5 Lines of Pearl..	0	3	6
75 " " (Half-Column)	1	16	0
A Column	3	3	0
A Page	9	9	0

Auctions and Public Institutions, Five Lines 4s., and 8d. per line of Pearl type beyond.

IN THE MEASUREMENT OF ADVERTISEMENTS, CARE SHOULD BE TAKEN TO MEASURE FROM RULE TO RULE.

Advertisements across Two Columns, one-third extra beyond the space occupied, the first charge being 30s.

JOHN C. FRANCIS and J. EDWARD FRANCIS,
The Athenæum Office, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, London, E.C.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

	PAGE
ASHER & CO. ..	27
AUTHORS' AGENTS ..	2
BAGSTER & SONS ..	26
BELL & SONS ..	24
BOOKSELLER ..	27
CATALOGUES ..	2
COVE ..	25
DUCKWORTH & CO. ..	4
EDUCATIONAL ..	1
ENO'S FRUIT SALT ..	26
EXHIBITIONS ..	1
HARPER & BROS. ..	27
INSURANCE COMPANIES ..	26
LECTURES ..	1
LONGMANS & CO. ..	3
MACMILLAN & CO. ..	4
MAGAZINES, &C. ..	3
MISCELLANEOUS ..	2
NOTES AND QUERIES ..	27
PRINTERS ..	2
PROVIDENT INSTITUTIONS ..	1
SALES BY AUCTION ..	2
SITUATIONS VACANT ..	1
SITUATIONS WANTED ..	2
SMITH, ELDER & CO. ..	23
SOCIETIES ..	1
TYPE-WRITERS, &C. ..	2
UNWIN ..	4

MESSRS. BELL'S BOOKS.

FOURTH EDITION NOW READY.

Royal 16mo, cloth, 1s. net.

THYSIA.

An Elegy in Forty-Five Sonnets.

"Sonnets which I hold to be of exquisite quality.... They have that pathos inscribed on marble in the best Greek epitaphs."—MR. FREDERIC HARRISON in the Nineteenth Century, Nov., 1908.

"A series of in memoriam sonnets.... which claim respect by the genuineness of their feeling, and the polished simplicity of their diction."—Times.

"There is some good work here, and some high thought too."—Daily Chronicle.

VOL. III. JUST PUBLISHED. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

THE WORKS OF FRANCIS BEAUMONT & JOHN FLETCHER.

Variorum Edition. Edited by A. H. BULLEN.

To be completed in 12 vols.

Contents of Vol. III. — THE FAITHFUL SHEPHERDESS, Edited by W. W. Greg. THE MAD LOVER, Edited by R. Warwick Bond. THE LOYAL SUBJECT, Edited by John Masefield, with an Introduction by R. Warwick Bond. RULE A WIFE AND HAVE A WIFE, Edited by R. Warwick Bond. THE LAWS OF CANDY, Edited by E. K. Chambers.

"A critical edition of Beaumont and Fletcher is the boon most desired by students of the Tudor drama.... The previous labours of Mr. Bullen have fitted him for the task now in progress, and its accomplishment may be regarded as the crown of editorial work by which scholarship has largely profited.... The edition is entitled to a warm welcome, and is admirable in typographical as in other respects."—Athenæum.

NOW COMPLETED IN TWELVE VOLUMES, 5s. each.

THE PROSE WORKS OF JONATHAN SWIFT.

Edited by TEMPLE SCOTT.

With an Introduction by W. E. H. LECKY.

In 12 vols. small post 8vo, with numerous Portraits and Facsimiles, 5s. each.

[Bohn's Standard Library.]

Vol. XII, completing the Edition. Complete Bibliography by W. SPENCER JACKSON, and Full Index, with Essays on the Portraits of Swift and Stella by the Right Hon. Sir FREDERICK FALKNER, K.C., and on the relations between Swift and Stella by the Very Rev. J. H. BERNARD, D.D., Dean of St. Patrick's. With 2 Portraits and a View of Woodpark.

"Of the care and thoroughness of all concerned in it—editors, contributors, publishers, and printers—we cannot speak too highly. For the first time the student has a really complete and satisfactory edition... issued in a very convenient form, and at a very moderate price."—Athenæum.

JUST PUBLISHED. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

IN VIKING LAND: Norway, Its

People, Its Fjords, and Its Fjelds. By W. S. MONROE. With many illustrations.

MR. MALLOCK'S NEW NOVEL. Cloth, 6s.

AN IMMORTAL SOUL. By W. H. MALLOCK.

Author of 'A Human Document,' 'The Individualist,' &c.

"Mr. Mallock's new novel must be read through with that attention which every line of his demands.... By far the most remarkable and impressive piece of English writing yet produced in connexion with modern psychic research."—Outlook.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

BROWNING AND DOGMA. Being

Seven Lectures on Browning's Attitude on Dogmatic Religion. By ETHEL M. NAISH.

THE STANDARD AUTHORITY. WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY.

TWENTIETH-CENTURY EDITION.

Revised and Enlarged with an Appendix of 25,000 Words, Phrases, and Definitions.

2,348 pages. 5,000 Illustrations.

WRITE FOR DETAILED PROSPECTUS, with Specimen Pages, Opinions of Eminent Men, and prices in various styles of binding.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS,
York House, Portugal Street, W.C.

THE OLDEST HORTICULTURAL NEWSPAPER.

3d. WEEKLY. Postage $\frac{1}{2}$ d.	THE GARDENERS' CHRONICLE.	15s. YEARLY. Post free.
--	--	---

(THE 'TIMES' OF HORTICULTURE.)

FOR OVER SIXTY YEARS THE LEADING JOURNAL.

ITS CONTRIBUTORS COMPRISE THE MOST

EXPERIENCED BRITISH GARDENERS,

AND MANY OF THE MOST

EMINENT MEN OF SCIENCE,

AT HOME AND ABROAD.

IT HAS AN INTERNATIONAL REPUTATION FOR ITS ILLUSTRATIONS OF PLANTS.

SPECIMEN COPY POST FREE ON APPLICATION TO THE PUBLISHER,

H. G. COVE, 41, Wellington Street, Strand, London.

Telegraphic Address—"GARDCHRON, LONDON."

Telephone No. 1543 GERRARD.

May be ordered of all Booksellers and Newsagents, and at the Railway Bookstalls

Magazines, &c.—continued.

2s. 6d.

2s. 6d.

CONTEMPORARY REVIEW.

Edited by Sir PERCY BUNTING.

No. 517. JANUARY. NOW READY.

THE ARRIVAL OF THE SLAVS. By W. T. Stead.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE. By Harold Spender.

THE PEDIGREE OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE. By Frank Podmore.

THE CULT OF THE HEAVENLY TWINS. By Dr. J. Rendel Harris.

GERMAN LITERATURE. By Prof. Richard M. Meyer (of the University of Berlin).

A NEW ANGLICAN ARGUMENT. By J. Horace Round, LL.D.

THE LATE DOWAGER EMPRESS OF CHINA. By Mrs. L. H. Hoover.

GERMAN ART AND THE EMPEROR. By Eulenspiegel.

LITERARY SUPPLEMENT:—

CHRISTMAS AND THE ELDER GODS. By Museum.

REVIEWS OF BOOKS.

London: HORACE MARSHALL & SON.

NOW READY.

4to, cloth boards, pp. 192, Maps, Photographs, &c., price 15s. 6d.

NATIONAL ANTARCTIC EXPEDITION,
1901-1904.

P H Y S I C A L.

Observations (Tidal, Pendulum, Earthquakes, Aurora, Magnetic), with Discussions by various Authors.

Published by THE ROYAL SOCIETY.

Sold by Messrs. HARRISON & SONS, 45, St. Martin's Lane, W.C.

SECOND EDITION. Price 2s. 6d. net.

CATHOLICISM ON A PHILOSOPHICAL BASIS.By B. C. NIXON, M. E. UNDERDOWN, and H. CUNLIFFE.
SWAN SONNENSCHN, London; and of all Booksellers.THE HIGHER EDUCATION OF THE YOUNG:its Social, Domestic, and Religious Aspects. By S. H. SADLER.
Author of 'Suggestions to Mothers,' 'Henrietta,' 'Bothers of Married Life,' &c. Second Edition. Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.
"Mastering of subjects having a direct bearing on ordinary daily life. A pressing need."—Reader."New ideas that more exactly meet altered conditions of life."
Liverpool Daily Post.
"It is to be hoped that a large number of those concerned will read and ponder over what is here so thoughtfully set down."
*British Weekly.*London: GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS, Ltd.
New York: E. P. DUTTON & CO.BURKE'S PEERAGE,
BARONETAGE, KNIGHTAGE, and COMPANIONAGE, 1909.

Published at 42s. Subject to Cash Discount.

BURKE IS MORE COMPLETE AND UP-TO-DATE
THAN ANY OTHER PEERAGE.Of all Booksellers, or the Publishers,
HARRISON & SONS, 45, Pall Mall, S.W.CATALOGUING RULES: AUTHOR AND TITLE ENTRIES. Compiled by COMMITTEES OF THE LIBRARY ASSOCIATION and the AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION, 88 pp. 4to. Paper, 2s. (post free, 2s. 3d.); cloth, 2s. 6d. (post free, 2s. 10d.); cloth, interleaved, 3s. (post free, 3s. 4d.).Published at the OFFICES OF THE LIBRARY ASSOCIATION, 24, Whitcomb Street, London, W.C.Insurance Companies.*NORWICH UNION FIRE INSURANCE SOCIETY, Ltd.

Founded 1797. HEAD OFFICE: NORWICH.

50, Fleet Street, E.C.
71 and 72, King William Street, E.C.
Norwich Union Chambers (Entrance, St. James's Street), Piccadilly, W.
1, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.
26, Charles Street, St. James's, S.W.
81, Edgware Road, W.Claims Paid £22,000,000.
Applications for Agencies invited.

For Acidity of the Stomach.

For Heartburn and Headache.

For Gout and Indigestion.

DINNEFORD'SMAGNESIA.

For Sour Eructations and Bilious Affections.

A Safe and most effective Aperient for regular use.YOUR BIRTHRIGHT IS HEALTH.*THE SCIENCE IN A NUTSHELL.

'Health is a Man's Birthright. It is as natural to be well as to be born. All pathological conditions, all diseases, and all tendencies to disease are the result of the transgression of physiologic and hygienic law. This is the science of health in a nutshell.'—DENSMORE.

Eno's
Fruit
SaltIS NATURE'S ANTIDOTE FOR HUMAN ILLS
arising from the neglect or violation of her laws.

'Our Acts, our angels are, for good or ill, our fatal shadows that walk by us still.'

'And such is life, so gliding on, it glimmers like a meteor, and is gone.'

CAUTION.—Examine the capsule, and see that it is marked ENO'S 'FRUIT SALT.' Without it you have the sincerest form of flattery—IMITATION.

Prepared only by J. C. ENO (Limited), 'FRUIT SALT' WORKS, LONDON, S.E.

WORKS BY WILLIAM THYNNE LYNN.

ELEVENTH EDITION NOW READY, price Two Shillings net.

CELESTIAL MOTIONS:

A Handy Book of Astronomy.

Eleventh Edition. With 5 Plates.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S., Member of the British Astronomical Association, formerly of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich,

Author of 'Remarkable Comets,' 'Remarkable Eclipses,' 'Astronomy for the Young,' &c.

"Well known as one of our best introductions to astronomy."—Guardian.

NINTH EDITION NOW READY, fcap. 8vo, cloth, price Sixpence net.

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES:A Sketch of the most interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses, both in Ancient and Modern Times.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"The booklet deserves to continue in popularity. It presents a mass of information in small compass."—Dundee Advertiser.

THIRTEENTH EDITION, JUST OUT, price Sixpence, cloth.

REMARKABLE COMETS:A Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

FIFTH EDITION, REVISED TO 1908, NOW READY.

Fcap. 8vo, cloth, price Sixpence net.

ASTRONOMY FOR THE YOUNG.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Nothing better of its kind has ever appeared."—English Mechanic.

London: SAMUEL BAGSTER & SONS, LIMITED, 15, Paternoster Row.

Important Notice to Publishers and Booksellers.

On and after FRIDAY, JANUARY 1, 1909,

THE BOOKSELLER

WILL BE ISSUED

W E E K L Y

Instead of Monthly as hitherto.

Publishing Day, the FRIDAY in each Week.

OFFICE: 12, WARWICK LANE, PATERNOSTER ROW, E.C.

CLIFFORD'S INN.

For View of CLIFFORD'S INN, taken in 1892, see

NOTES AND QUERIES, April 2, 1892.

The same Number also contains Sketches of the ROLLS CHAPEL, OLD SERJEANTS' INN, the GATEWAY, LINCOLN'S INN, &c.

Price 4½d., free by post, of

JOHN C. FRANCIS and J. EDWARD FRANCIS,

Notes and Queries Office, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE.

JANUARY NUMBER NOW READY.

THE BEGINNING OF THINGS:

A New Nebular Hypothesis. By R. K. DUNCAN.

THE RECORD IN MOUNTAIN CLIMBING.

Illustrated. By ANNIE S. PECK.

AT THE LAND'S END.

Illustrated. By ARTHUR SYMONS.

LOVERS.

By RICHARD LE GALLIENNE.

THE INNER SHRINE. Part II.

ANONYMOUS.

Other Contributions by PERCEVAL GIBBON, NORMAN DUNCAN, HOWARD PYLE, E. SHIPPEN GREEN, FRANK CRAIG, &c.

LATEST PUBLICATIONS.

THE NEW SPIRIT IN INDIA.

Illustrated. 10s. 6d. net. By H. W. NEVINSON.

ROMAN HOLIDAYS AND OTHERS.

Illustrated. 10s. 6d. By W. D. HOWELLS.

WOMEN, &c.

5s. net. By GEORGE HARVEY.

COURTS AND CAMPS OF THE ITALIAN RENAISSANCE.

Illustrated. 10s. 6d. By CHRISTOPHER HARE.

MADAME DE POMPADOUR.

Frontispiece. 7s. 6d. H. NOEL WILLIAMS.

HARPER & BROS.,
45, Albemarle Street, London, W.

JUST PUBLISHED.

STIELER'S ATLAS

OF

MODERN GEOGRAPHY.

100 Maps, with 162 Inset Maps engraved on Copper, with a complete Alphabetical Index of about 240,000 Names.

Adapted for the use of the English-speaking Public

BY

B. DARBISHIRE, M.A. (Oxford).

NINTH REVISED EDITION.

FIRST ENGLISH EDITION.

Handsomely bound in half-morocco, cloth sides, gilt top, £2 6s. net.

All References, Explanations of Signs, Abbreviations, &c., are now given on the back of each Map in English, whereby, for the first time, this famous Atlas is made fully adapted to the use of all English-speaking people.

To be obtained through all Booksellers.

A detailed Prospectus will be sent on application.

Published by JUSTUS PERTHES, Gotha.

London Agency:

ASHER & CO.

13, Bedford Street, Covent Garden, W.C.

GUARDIAN.—"The counsel of perfection is to purchase the CORNHILL that you may not only enjoy its contents but keep them to show a friend."

Punch.—"The CORNHILL is always among the brightest of the magazines, dealing with an unfailling variety of interesting matter."

Daily Graphic.—"The CORNHILL provides plenty of substantial fare, but it is evidently not going to neglect the humorous side of things."

THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE.

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, price 1s. Contents of JANUARY Number.

A NEW SERIAL STORY BEGINS IN THIS NUMBER,

ENTITLED

THE PALADIN: as Beheld by a Woman of Temperament.

By HORACE ANNESLEY VACHELL,

AUTHOR OF 'THE HILL,' 'BROTHERS,' 'THE WATERS OF JORDAN,' &c.

NOW READY, AT ALL BOOKSELLERS' AND BOOKSTALLS.

A NEW YEAR'S RONDEAU. By Austin Dobson.

THE PALADIN. Chaps. 1-2. By Horace Annesley Vachell.

SIXTY YEARS IN THE WILDERNESS. XXVI.-XXVIII. By Henry W. Lucy.

STANZAS ADDRESSED TO THE HON. CHARLES PARSONS, F.R.S. By C. L. G.

THE STORY OF SUSAN. By Mrs. John Lang.

CRIMEAN PAPERS. By the Right Hon. Sir Herbert Maxwell, Bart.

CHARLES ELIOT NORTON. By Frederic Harrison.

PETER'S BOOTS. By Dorothea Deakin.

THE DEFEAT OF MOULAI ABD-EL-AZIZ. By L. J. Brown.

JOHN THADEUS DELANE. By the Dean of Canterbury.

THE NOVELS OF FOGAZZARO. By Jane H. Findlater.

THE MAN WHO DISCOVERED AUSTRALIA. By W. H. Fitchett, B.A. LL.D.

PRISCILLA OF THE GOOD INTENT. Chaps. 14-15. By Halliwell Sutcliffe.

PALL MALL GAZETTE.

"The best 3s. 6d. series on the market....The paper is quite excellent, and the print is fine and clear."

MORNING LEADER.

"An attractive series."

Crown 8vo,

3/6

Each Volume.

ATHENÆUM.

"Well printed and neatly bound."

EVENING STANDARD AND ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE.

"Neat, well printed, and cheap."

THE WATERLOO LIBRARY.

This Series comprises some of the best works of Modern Authors. The Volumes are well printed, and issued in a neat cloth binding of special design.

VOLUMES ALREADY ISSUED.

THE CRUISE OF THE "CACHALOT." By FRANK T. BULLEN.

With 8 Full-Page Illustrations and a Chart.

Times.—"Cannot but fascinate all lovers of the sea."

THE WHITE COMPANY. By A. CONAN DOYLE. With 8 Full-Page Illustrations.

Speaker.—"A notable and very brilliant work of genius."

RODNEY STONE. By A. CONAN DOYLE. With 8 Full-Page Illustrations.

Punch.—"There is not a dull page in it from first to last. All is light, colour, movement, blended and inspired by a master hand."

THE LOG OF A SEA WAIF: being the Recollections of the First Four Years of My Sea Life. By FRANK T. BULLEN, F.R.G.S. With 8 Full-Page Illustrations by ARTHUR TWIDLE.

Times.—"Full of thrilling adventure, admirably told."

UNCLE BERNAC: a Memory of the Empire. By A. CONAN DOYLE. With 12 Full-Page Illustrations. THIRD AND CHEAPER EDITION.

Daily Chronicle.—"Uncle Bernac is for a truth Dr. Doyle's Napoleon....The fascination of it is extraordinary."

DEBORAH OF TOD'S. By Mrs. HENRY DE LA PASTURE.

Daily Telegraph.—"A really clever and interesting book....Every feminine figure, however slightly drawn, has about it some vivifying touch to render it memorable."

THE BRASS BOTTLE. By F. ANSTEY. With a Frontispiece.

Spectator.—"Mr. Anstey has once more shown himself to be an artist and a humorist of uncommon and enviable merit."

THE GAMEKEEPER AT HOME: or, Sketches of Natural History and Rural Life. By RICHARD JEFFERIES. With Illustrations.

Saturday Review.—"Delightful sketches. The lover of the country can hardly fail to be fascinated whenever he may happen to open the pages."

THE TRAGEDY OF THE "KOROSKO." By A. CONAN DOYLE. With 40 Full-Page Illustrations.

Daily News.—"A fine story, the interest of which arrests the reader's attention at the start and holds it to the close."

THE GREEN FLAG, and other Stories of War and Sport. By A. CONAN DOYLE. With a Frontispiece.

Daily Telegraph.—"The battle picture is perfect of its kind. Altogether the volume is admirable."

JESS. By H. RIDER HAGGARD. With 12 Full-Page Illustrations.

Pall Mall Gazette.—"The story is a capital one, and the interest never flags for a moment."

ADAM GRIGSON. By Mrs. HENRY DE LA PASTURE.

Daily Telegraph.—"Quite a notable achievement in many ways, there being at least three pictures of women contained in it which could not be improved upon."

 OTHER VOLUMES TO FOLLOW.

READY JANUARY 5, 1909, with a Portrait in Photogravure, small demy 8vo, 8s. 6d. net.

LORD HALIBURTON: a Memoir of His Public Services. By J. B. ATLAY, Author of 'Sir Henry Wentworth Acland,' 'The Victorian Chancellors,' &c.

A son of the famous Sam Slick, the late Lord Haliburton was for upwards of forty years a prominent Civil Servant, closing his official career as Permanent Under-Secretary for War. He took a leading part in the defence of the Short Service System in the army, and was largely instrumental in its retention. The Memoir contains a selection from his correspondence.

RE-ISSUE OF THE Dictionary of National Biography.

Edited by LESLIE STEPHEN and SIDNEY LEE.

IN TWENTY-TWO VOLUMES.

Cloth, gilt top, 15s. net each; half-morocco, marbled edges, 21s. net each.

Vols. I.-X. now ready, Vol. XI. (KENNETT-LLUELYN) ready January 11, and a Volume will be issued each Month until the completion of the Edition in December, 1909.

"Should become a universal household possession. There is nothing to compare with it anywhere. It is, in short, priceless....It ought to be in every public library and in every private library of any pretensions. As it stands it is about the cheapest book in the market."—British Weekly.

 PROSPECTUS, WITH SPECIMEN PAGES, POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

London: SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo Place, S.W.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "THE EDITOR"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "THE PUBLISHERS"—at the Office, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Published Weekly by JOHN C. FRANCIS and J. EDWARD FRANCIS at Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C., and Printed by J. EDWARD FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C. Agents for Scotland, Messrs. BELL & BRADFUTE and Mr. JOHN MENZIES, Edinburgh.—Saturday, January 2, 1909.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 4237.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 9, 1909.

PRICE
THREEPENCE.
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER.

MESSRS. THOS. AGNEW & SONS.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the partnership heretofore subsisting between William Lockett Agnew, Charles Morland Agnew, and David Croal Thomson, carrying on business as Print Sellers and Publishers, and Dealers in Fine Arts at No. 43, Old Bond Street, London, W. under the style or firm of Thos. Agnew & Sons having expired by effluxion of time, has been dissolved as from the 31st day of December, 1908. All debts due to and owing by the said late firm will be received and paid respectively by the said William Lockett Agnew and Charles Morland Agnew who will continue to carry on the said business in partnership under the same style as hitherto.

Dated the 7th day of January, 1909.
C. MORLAND AGNEW.
WILLIAM LOCKETT AGNEW.
DAVID CROAL THOMSON.
Witness to the above signatures, R. T. Watkin-Williams, 54, New Broad Street, London, Solicitor.

Exhibitions.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF ARTS.
WINTER EXHIBITION.
Open from 9 A.M. to 6 P.M. Admission 1s.
Catalogue, 6d. Season Ticket, 5s.

MR. PUNCH'S PAGEANT, 1841-1908. Famous Jokes, Famous Cartoons, Famous Punch Relics, including the FAMOUS ROUND TABLE. 10-6. Admission 1s.
THE LEICESTER GALLERIES, Leicester Square.

EARLY BRITISH SCHOOL—SHEPHERD'S
WINTER EXHIBITION OF PORTRAITS AND LANDSCAPES by EARLY BRITISH MASTERS is NOW OPEN.
SHEPHERD'S GALLERY, 27, King Street, St. James's.

Provident Institutions.

NEWSVENDORS' BENEVOLENT AND PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.
Founded 1839.

Funds exceed 27,000l.
Office: 15 and 16, Farringdon Street, London, E.C.
Patron:
The Right Hon. THE EARL OF ROSEBERY, K.G. K.T.
President:
The LORD GLENESK.
Treasurer:
THE LONDON AND WESTMINSTER BANK, LIMITED.

OBJECTS.—This Institution was established in 1839 in the City of London, under the Presidency of the late Alderman Harmer, for granting Pensions and Temporary Assistance to principals and assistants engaged as vendors of Newspapers.

MEMBERSHIP.—Every Man or Woman throughout the United Kingdom, whether Publisher, Wholesaler, Retailer, Employer, or Employed, is entitled to become a Member of this Institution, and enjoy its benefits upon payment of Five Shillings annually, or Three Guineas for life, provided that he or she is engaged in the sale of Newspapers, and such Members who thus contribute secure priority of consideration in the event of their needing aid from the Institution.

PENSIONS.—The Annuity now number Thirty-six, the Men receiving 25l. and the Women 20l. per annum each.
The "Royal Victoria Pension Fund," commemorating the great advantages the News Trade enjoyed under the rule of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, provides 20l. a year each for Six Widows of News-vendors.

The "Francis Fund" provides Pensions for One Man, 25l., and One Woman 20l., and was specially subscribed in memory of the late John Francis, who died on April 6, 1882, and was for more than fifty years Publisher of the Athenæum. He took an active and leading part throughout the whole period of the agitation for the repeal of the various then existing "Taxes on Knowledge," and was for very many years a staunch supporter of this Institution.

The "Horace Marshall Pension Fund" is the gift of the late Mr. Horace Brooks Marshall. The employees of that firm have primary right of election to its benefits.

The "Herbert Lloyd Pension Fund" provides 25l. per annum for one man, in perpetual and grateful memory of Mr. Herbert Lloyd, who died May 12, 1899.

The principal features of the Rules governing election to all Pensions are, that each Candidate shall have been (1) a Member of the Institution for not less than ten years preceding application; (2) not less than fifty-five years of age; (3) engaged in the sale of Newspapers for at least ten years.

RELIEF.—Temporary relief is given in cases of distress, not only to Members of the Institution, but to News-vendors or their servants who may be recommended for assistance by Members of the Institution. Inquiry is made in such cases by Visiting Committees, and relief is awarded in accordance with the merits and requirements of each case.
W. WILKIE JONES Secretary.

THE BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Founded 1837.
Patron—HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.
Invested Capital, 30,000l.
A UNIQUE INVESTMENT
Offered to London Booksellers and their Assistants.

A young man or woman of twenty-five can invest the sum of Twenty Guineas (or its equivalent by instalments), and obtain the right to participate in the following advantages:—

FIRST. Freedom from want in time of Adversity as long as need exists.

SECOND. Permanent Relief in Old Age.

THIRD. Medical Advice by eminent Physicians and Surgeons.

FOURTH. A Cottage in the Country (Abbots Langley, Hertfordshire) for aged Members, with garden produce, coal, and medical attendance free, in addition to an annuity.

FIFTH. A furnished house in the same Retreat at Abbots Langley for the use of Members and their families for holidays or during convalescence.

SIXTH. A contribution towards Funeral expenses when it is needed.

SEVENTH. All these are available not for Members only, but also for their wives or widows and young children.

EIGHTH. The payment of the subscriptions confers an absolute right to these benefits in all cases of need.

For further information apply to the Secretary Mr. GEORGE LARNER, 28, Paternoster Row E.C.

Educational.

KING'S COLLEGE, LONDON. (UNIVERSITY OF LONDON.) EVENING CLASS DEPARTMENT.

Courses are arranged for the Intermediate and Final Examinations for the B.A. and B.Sc. Degrees of the University of London. Students taking the full Course pay Composition Fees, and rank as Internal Students of the University.

EVENING CLASSES are also held for Mechanical and Electrical Engineering, Architecture and Building Construction, Drawing, Mathematics, Physics, and all Science Subjects.

For full information and Prospectus apply to the Dean (Mr. R. W. K. EDWARDS) or to THE SECRETARY, King's College, Strand, London, W.C.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, CIRENCESTER. (Founded 1845. Reorganized 1908.)

Patron—H.M. KING EDWARD VII.
Chairman—LORD MORETON.
For Landowners, Land Agents, Surveyors, Agriculturists, Intending Colonists, &c.
FARMING AND COLONIAL BRANCH.
ESTATE MANAGEMENT AND FORESTRY BRANCH.
For Prospectus of Curriculum, Fees, Entrance Exhibitions, Scholarships, Diplomas, &c., apply to THE PRINCIPAL.

BIRMINGHAM AND MIDLAND INSTITUTE.

SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Visitor—Sir EDWARD ELGAR, Mus.Doc. LL.D.

Visiting Examiner—W. G. MCNAUGHT, Mus.Doc.

Principal—GRANVILLE BANTOCK.

SESSION 1908-1909.

The SESSION consists of AUTUMN TERM (September 31 to December 19), WINTER TERM (January 15 to April 3), SUMMER TERM (April 19 to June 26).

Instruction in all Branches of Music. Students' Choir and Orchestra, Chamber Music, Students' Rehearsals, Concerts, and Opera.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from ALFRED HAYES, Secretary.

BEDFORD COLLEGE FOR WOMEN (UNIVERSITY OF LONDON),

YORK PLACE, BAKER STREET, LONDON, W.
Principal—Miss M. J. TUKE, M.A.

The LENT TERM BEGINS THURSDAY, January 14.
Lectures are given in preparation for all Examinations of the University of London in Arts, Science, and Preliminary Medicine for the Teacher's Diploma, London, the Teacher's Certificate, Cambridge, and for the Cambridge Higher Local Examination.

There is a Special Course of Scientific Instruction in Hygiene. Six Laboratories are open to Students for Practical Work. Students may attend the Art School who are not taking other Subjects at the College.

A Single Course in any Subject may be attended. Regular Physical Instruction is given free of cost to Students who desire it by a fully qualified Woman Teacher.

Students can reside in the College.
Full particulars on application to the Principal.

TRAINING DEPARTMENT FOR SECONDARY TEACHERS.

Head of the Department—Miss MARY MORTON, M.A.
Students are admitted to the Training College in OCTOBER and JANUARY.
Entrance Scholarships.
Applications should be sent to the Head of the Department.

REDUCED FEES.—Education in the Country (near London).—To FILL VACANCIES in a FINISHING SCHOOL of the first style (over 500 feet above sea; excellent Masters; home comforts; Outdoor Games; extensive Grounds; Riding) an inclusive Educational Fee of 100 Guineas will be accepted for PUPILS ENTERING IN JANUARY.—B.A., care of Gabbitts, Thring & Co., 35, Sackville Street, London, W.

WEYBRIDGE LADIES' SCHOOL, SURREY.

Miss E. DAWES, M.A. D.Lit.Lond., Classical Scholar, Girton. Refined Home. Thorough Education and Physical Care. Good Grounds, position high, and one of the healthiest in England.

EDUCATION.

Parents or Guardians desiring accurate information relative to the CHOICE of SCHOOLS for BOYS or GIRLS or TUTORs in England or Abroad are invited to call upon or send fully detailed particulars to MESSRS. GABBITTs, THRING & CO., who for more than thirty years have been closely in touch with the leading Educational Establishments.

Advice, free of charge, is given by Mr. THRING, Nephew of the late Head Master of Uppingham, 35, Sackville Street, London, W.

Situations Vacant.

THE SOCIOLOGICAL SOCIETY.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY WANTED.

Apply, by letter only, summarizing University and other Educational Qualifications (e.g., Languages, Shorthand, &c.), age, experience, &c. Salary, 100l.-150l., Man or Woman.
Sociological Society, 24, Buckingham Street, Strand, London.

Yearly Subscription, free by post, Inland, 15s. 3d.; Foreign, 18s. Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class matter.

THE ATHENÆUM is published on FRIDAY AFTERNOON at 2 o'clock.

NEW ZEALAND.

The COUNCIL of VICTORIA UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, WELLINGTON, invite applications for the position of PROFESSOR of PHYSICS at a Salary of 600l. per annum. First term of engagement, Five Years. The successful Applicant must be ready to take up his duties at the College in Wellington not later than JULY 1, 1909. Applications must be sent in to the High Commissioner of New Zealand not later than FEBRUARY 2 NEXT.—For further particulars, and for the Forms on which applications must be made, apply to THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR NEW ZEALAND, 13, Victoria Street, London, S.W.

TWICKENHAM COUNTY SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

A HEAD MISTRESS will be REQUIRED for this new SECONDARY SCHOOL for GIRLS, which is to be opened in MAY NEXT. Salary 200l. per annum, together with a Capitation Fee of 1l. per annum per Pupil on all in excess of 100. Accommodation is provided at the School for about 250 Scholars. Candidates must be Graduates, or hold an equivalent qualification. Canvassing is strictly prohibited. —All applications must be made upon a Form which may be obtained from Mr. B. S. GOTT, M.A., Guildhall, Westminster, S.W., to whom they must be returned not later than 10 A.M. on SATURDAY, January 30.

CAMBRIDGE.

PERSE HIGH SCHOOL FOR GIRLS. APPOINTMENT OF HEAD MISTRESS.

The MANAGERS invite applications for the post of HEAD MISTRESS, which will be vacant in JULY, 1909.—Candidates should send ten copies of their Application and Testimonials, together with any references, on or before SATURDAY, February 6, to the Secretary to the Managers, Miss JEX-BLAKE, Girton College, Cambridge, from whom particulars of the appointment may be obtained.
December, 1908.

COUNTY COUNCIL OF THE WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE.

EDUCATION DEPARTMENT.

The EDUCATION COMMITTEE will require the services of FOUR EXAMINERS—Two Men and Two Women—in connexion with the award of their County Minor Scholarships and Intending Pupil-Teacherships, 1909. The Examiners appointed will be required to conduct both the Written and the Oral Portions of the Examination, and will be occupied from about MARCH 15, 1909, until about JUNE 15, 1909. Remuneration 60l., together with out-of-pocket expenses.—Further particulars and Forms of Application may be obtained from the Education Department (Secondary Branch), County Hall, Wakefield. Applications must be returned by WEDNESDAY, January 20, 1909.

NATIONAL FROEBEL UNION, NORWICH HOUSE, SOUTHAMPTON STREET, BLOOMSBURY, LONDON, W.C.

APPOINTMENT OF EXAMINERS.

The GOVERNORS of the NATIONAL FROEBEL UNION are prepared to receive applications for EXAMINERSHIPS in the following Subjects:—

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION.—Arithmetic, English Language, Geography, History, English Literature, French, German, Elementary Mathematics, Physiology and Laws of Health, Botany and Zoology.

ELEMENTARY CERTIFICATE.—Life of Froebel, his Principles and Methods; Knowledge of Child Nature.

HIGHER CERTIFICATE.—Literature, Geography, History of Education, Theory of Education, Froebel's Principles, Practice of Education, Physiology and Hygiene, and Physical Exercises.

ELEMENTARY AND HIGHER CERTIFICATES.—Singing, Blackboard Drawing, Geometry, Educational Handwork, Class Teaching, and Nature Knowledge.

Forms of Application, and particulars may be obtained from the Secretary, to whom applications should be forwarded not later than JANUARY 21, 1909.

E. H. MACLEAN, Secretary, National Froebel Union.

LONGTON HIGH SCHOOL, STOKE-UPON-TRENT.

Head Master—Dr. W. HARRIS, M.A. Camb.,
With Staff of University Graduates.

WANTED, to start on JANUARY 18, an ASSISTANT MASTER, qualified to take Latin to the standard of the Oxford Senior Locals; with Elementary Mathematics and English as Subsidiary Subjects. Salary 150l. per annum.

The Longton High School is a mixed Secondary School under the Board of Education. The Master appointed will also be required to give instruction on certain Evenings each Week in the Technical School.

Ability to take a share in the supervision of School Games a qualification.

Apply, stating age, qualifications, and enclosing copies of not more than three recent Testimonials, before JANUARY 11, 1909, to W. T. COPE, Secretary, Education Committee.

Longton, Stoke-upon-Trent.

COUNTY BOROUGH OF SUNDERLAND.

DAY TRAINING COLLEGE.

ASSISTANT MISTRESS REQUIRED, to enter upon duties in FEBRUARY. Must be a Graduate of a British University, specially qualified in English, and able to assist in the Teaching of Method. Salary at the rate of 130l. per annum.

Applications will be received by the undersigned up to JANUARY 18.

T. W. BRYERS, Secretary.

Education Offices, 15, John Street, Sunderland.

December 23, 1908.

MUNICIPAL SECONDARY SCHOOL AND PUPIL-TEACHER CENTRE, ACCRINGTON.

WANTED, an ASSISTANT MISTRESS, with good qualifications for the Teaching of English, Geography, and History. Applicants must be Graduates, and experienced Teachers. Salary 100*l.*, rising by 10*l.* a year to 170*l.*, and by possible further increments to 200*l.*

The Scale provides for an allowance in recognition of previous teaching experience in a Secondary School.—Forms of Application (to be returned not later than JANUARY 13, 1909) obtainable from JNO. RHODES, Secretary.

BEDFORD COLLEGE FOR WOMEN (UNIVERSITY OF LONDON).

YORK PLACE, RAKER STREET, W.

The COUNCIL are about to appoint a SECRETARY to the PRINCIPAL.

University Training and knowledge of Secretarial Work essential. Applications, from Women only, must be sent, not later than JANUARY 16, to THE PRINCIPAL, from whom further particulars may be obtained.

ETHEL T. McKNIGHT, Secretary of Council.

CANVASSER WANTED for important ART PUBLICATION, likely to appeal to all Connoisseurs and Collectors.—Apply A. B., Box 1457, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

BOOKSELLER'S ASSISTANT WANTED.—

Smart and energetic Man, with some knowledge of Technical Literature and experience of Town Travelling.—Apply, with full particulars as to age, experience, and Salary required, Box 1459, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

REQUIRED, JUNIOR CLERK (Male, 18-20).

Must be good Shorthand Writer and Typist, and be sharp and reliable at Office Routine Work.—Apply by letter, in own handwriting, stating Salary required and enclosing Specimen of Typing, to B. T. BATSFORD, Publisher and Bookseller, 94, High Holborn, W.C.

COMPETENT TRANSLATOR from the GERMAN WANTED for Theological and Historical Works.—

Reply, stating Qualifications and Terms, to Box 1456, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, London, E.C.

Situations Wanted.

A CLERGYMAN'S DAUGHTER desires

A SITUATION as SECRETARY. Knowledge of French, Shorthand, and Type-Writing. Experienced in Literary Work, Arranging Indexes, and Preparing MSS. for the Press.—J. D., 37, Norfolk Square, Brighton.

TO MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT, AUTHORS,

PUBLISHERS, &c.—REQUIRED, Post as SECRETARY, Whole or Part Day. Thoroughly experienced. Business and Private Work. Shorthand. Typist. French and German Scholar. Translations.—Box 1458, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

A YOUNG GENTLEMAN, with Literary and Artistic Tastes, and a thorough knowledge of Spanish, Italian, and French, desires EMPLOYMENT, Secretarial or other. Shorthand and Type-Writing. Good references.—Address ALPHA, care Davies & Co., Advertising Agents, Finch Lane, Cornhill.

SHORTHAND TYPIST is OPEN to take an

ENGAGEMENT after lengthy and satisfactory employment in well-known Office of Literary Paper. Used to long hours and continuous work. Personal reference will be given by present Employer. Salary 25*l.* to commence.—Apply Box 1444, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

ADVERTISER, with ripe experience in all details of Publishing, Literary as well as Commercial, desires ENGAGEMENT in any Department. Excellent References.—Box 1386, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Miscellaneous.

EDUCATION.—Modern Languages, with High

Classics, &c., Abroad.—SENIOR PUPILS for I.C.S., Diplomatic, University Scholarships, &c., RECEIVED by experienced FIRST-CLASS MAN OF CAMBRIDGE, with strong Staff. Very moderate Terms.—Full details from X., care of Gabbitts, Thring & Co., 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

GERMAN TRANSLATIONS and PROOF-

READING UNDERTAKEN by competent ENGLISH TRANSLATOR and PRESS WRITER, also Daily Secretarial Work, at moderate Terms. Excellent Testimonials.—B. Z., care of Day, 42, Great Castle Street, W.

PUBLISHING.—EXPERT in PUBLISHING is OPEN to TAKE PUPIL who will be thoroughly taught the Trade, with Practical Experience in various Offices, including Production, Authors' Contracts, Valuations, Counting-house Work, Advertising, and Selling. Substantial Premium required.—Address EXPERT, care of Anderson's Advertising Agency, 14, King William Street, Strand, W.C.

MISS BISHOP'S PRIVATE SOCIAL TOURS.

—First Spring Party leaves for Italy MARCH 3.—Rome, Naples, Florence, Venice, &c. Castles of the Loire Valley MAY 16. The Danube, Vienna, Budapest, and Salzburg, JUNE. Inclusive Terms. References exchanged.—27, St. George's Road, Kilburn, London.

PUBLIC-HOUSE REFORM.—The People's Re-

freshment House Association, Ltd., founded by the Bishop of Chester, manages 68 Licensed Inns. Ask for List and Report. APPLY FOR 1*l.* SHARES. 5 per cent paid since 1899. P.R.H.A., Broadway Chambers, Westminster.

TO SECURE FRIENDS and FRIENDSHIPS

Join the CORRESPONDENCE CLUB, 10*l.* 6*d.*; or the ENGLISH-SPEAKERS' LINK, 2*l.* 6*d.*, of 350, Mansion House Chambers, E.C.

LITERARY RESEARCH undertaken at the British Museum and elsewhere on moderate terms. Excellent Testimonials.—A. B., Box 1062, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

TRAINING FOR PRIVATE SECRETARIAL WORK AND INDEXING.

THE SECRETARIAL BUREAU,

52A, CONDUIT STREET, BOND STREET, LONDON, W.

Founded 1895.

Telephone: 2426 GERRARD.

MISS PETHERBRIDGE (Nat. Sci. Tripos).

EMPLOYED BY THE INDIA OFFICE AS—Indexer of the East India Company's Records, the new edition of the Imperial Gazetteer of India; Dutch and Portuguese Translator.

The Drapers' Company's Records Catalogued and Arranged. The Library of the Rt. Hon. W. H. Long M.P., Catalogued and Arranged.

INDEXER OF—The Records of the County Borough of Cardiff; The Warrington Town Records; The Blue Books of the Royal Commissions on: London Traffic, The Supply of Food in Time of War, Motor Cars, Canals and Waterways, Coast Erosion, Shipping Rings; and of the Committees on International Exhibitions, National Guarantee for War Risks of Shipping, Oriental Studies; The Minutes of the Education Committee of the Somerset County Council.

MISS PETHERBRIDGE trains from Three to Six Pupils every year for Private Secretarial and Special Indexing Work. The training is one of Apprenticeship, Pupils starting as Junior Members of the Staff and working up through all the Branches. It is practical, on actual work, each Pupil being individually coached. The training consists of Indexing—which includes Research Work and Precise Writing—Shorthand, Type-Writing, Stenotypy, and Business Training. THE TECHNIQUE OF INDEXING. By MARY PETHERBRIDGE. 2*l.* 9*d.* post free.

Type-Writers, &c.

TYPE-WRITING.—Literary Matter, 6*d.* per

1,000. Carbon Copies, 1*d.* per 1,000. First-Class Work guaranteed. Testimonials, 6*d.* per dozen.—ETHEL DEXTER, 31, Leicester Road, East Finchley, N.

AUTHORS' MSS., 9*d.* per 1,000 words. Sermons,

Plays, and all kinds of TYPE-WRITING carefully done at home (Remington). Good paper. Orders promptly executed. Duplicating from 3*l.* 6*d.* per 100.—M. L. L., 18, Edgeley Road, Clapham, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING of every description by Expert, 8*d.* per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies, 3*d.* per 1,000 words. Accuracy and prompt return guaranteed. Reliable references.—NORA DICKINSON, 1, Sackville Gardens, Ilford.

TYPE-WRITING.—The WEST KENSINGTON

OFFICES. Authors' MSS., Translations, &c. Legal and General Copying. Private Dictation Room. Circulars, &c. Duplicated. Usual terms. References. Established fifteen years.—SIKES & SIKES, 22A, Hammersmith Road, London, W.

TYPE-WRITING.—AUTHORS' MSS., &c.,

accurately and intelligently COPIED, 9*d.* per 1,000 words; with Carbon Copy 1*l.* per 1,000.—Miss ARCHER, 14, St. Andrew's Chambers, Wells Street, Oxford Street, W.

TYPE-WRITING of every description carefully

and promptly executed at home (Remington, Brief), 7*d.* per 1,000. Cambridge Local.—Miss N. McFARLANE, 11, Palmeira Avenue, Westcliff, Essex.

TYPE-WRITING.—AUTHORS' MSS.,

8*d.* 1,000 words. Carbon Copies, 3*d.* Paragraphs, Essays, 600 words, or less, 5*d.* Remington. Excellent Testimonials. Mention Athenæum.—C. A. GIRTON, 2, Grove Lane, Camberwell.

AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS, STORIES, PLAYS,

ESSAYS TYPE-WRITTEN with complete accuracy, 9*d.* per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies guaranteed. References to well-known Writers.—M. STUART, Allendale, Kymberley Road, Harrow.

TYPE-WRITING, 9*d.* per 1,000 words. All kinds of MSS. accurately typed. Clear Carbon Copies, 3*d.* per 1,000. References to well-known Authors. Oxford Higher Local. Tel. 1272, Richmond P.O.—M. KING, 24, Forest Road, Kew Gardens, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING undertaken by highly educated

Women (Classical Tripos; Cambridge Higher Local; Modern Languages). Research, Revision, Translation, Shorthand, Dictation Room.—THE CAMBRIDGE TYPE-WRITING AGENCY, 10, Duke Street, Adelphi, W.C.

Catalogues.

BERTRAM DOBEL L,

SECOND-HAND BOOKSELLER and PUBLISHER,

77, Charing Cross Road, London, W.C.

A large Stock of Old and Rare Books in English Literature, including Poetry and the Drama—Shakespeareana—First Editions of Famous Authors—Manuscripts—Illustrated Books, &c. CATALOGUES free on application.

BOOKS.—ALL OUT-OF-PRINT and RARE

BOOKS on any subject SUPPLIED. The most expert Bookfinder extant. Please state wants and ask for CATALOGUE. I make a special feature of exchanging any Saleable Books for others selected from my various Lists. Special List of 2,000 Books I particularly want post free.—EDW. BAKER'S Great Bookshop, 14-16, John Bright Street, Birmingham. Rhead's Staffordshire Pots and Pottery, illus., 2*l.*, for 10*l.* 6*d.*; Ainsworth's Novels, 20 vols., 3*l.* 5*s.*; Burke's Peerage, 1907, 2*l.* 4*s.*

CATALOGUES.—CLEARANCE CATALOGUE

of SECOND-HAND BOOKS post free on application. Books in all Branches of Literature, many scarce items and First Editions. No fancy prices. Parcels sent on approval if desired. CATALOGUES issued Monthly.—Address J. BALDWIN, 14, Osborne Road, Leyton, Essex.

CATALOGUE No. 50.—Drawings by Turner,

Prout, Ruskin, &c.—Turner's Liber Studiorum and other Engravings—Proofs touched by Turner—Constable's English Landscape—Etchings by Whistler—Japanese Colour-Prints—Illustrated Books. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD 2, Church Terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

P. M. BARNARD, M.A.

(Formerly Classical Scholar of Christ's College, Cambridge),

ANTIQUARIAN AND FOREIGN BOOKSELLER,

85, BRIDGE STREET (near the John Rylands Library), MANCHESTER.

A Select Stock of Rare, Valuable, and Interesting Books on View.

Foreign Books and Periodicals promptly supplied.

Out-of-Print Books sought for.

OLD ENGRAVINGS.

CATALOGUE No. 27.—OLD ENGRAVED PORTRAITS by the GREAT MASTERS. The Works of Jost Amman, Balechou, Beauvarlet, Beckett, Berville, Carmontelle, Cars, Chereau, Cranach, Daulle, Drevet, Van Dyck, Edelinck, Faber, Faithorne, Goltzius, Grateloup, Greenwood, Masson, Nanteuil, Schmidt, Smith, Wille, &c.—Early Mezzotints—Fine Portraits of the English School after Reynolds, Gainsborough, Lawrence, &c. 3,011 Lots. With Topographical and Alphabetical Index, Facsimiles, and Appendix, Portraits of Napoleon I. Now ready. Free on application.

GODEFROY MAYER, Printseller, 41, Rue Blanche, Paris, France.

MAGGS BROS.,

109, Strand, London, W.C.

DEALERS IN RARE AND VALUABLE BOOKS, PRINTS, AND AUTOGRAPHS.

CATALOGUES sent post free to all parts of the World.

Export Orders Solicited.

Telegraphic and Cable Address: "Bibliolite, London." Telephone: "Gerrard 4664."

ANCIENT and MODERN COINS.—Collectors

and Antiquarians are invited to apply to SPINK & SON Limited, for Specimen Copy (gratis) of their NUMISMATIC CIRCULAR. The finest Greek, Roman, and English Coins on View and for Sale at Moderate Prices.—SPINK & SON, Limited, Experts, Valuers, and Cataloguers, 16, 17, and 18, Piccadilly, London, W. Established upwards of a Century.

Authors' Agents.

THE AUTHOR'S AGENCY.—Established 1879.

The interests of Authors capably represented. Agreements for Publishing arranged. MSS. placed with Publishers.—Terms and Testimonials on application to Mr. A. M. BURGESS, 24, Paternoster Row.

MR. GEORGE LARNER, Accountant and

Licensed Valuer to the Bookselling, Publishing, Newspaper, Printing, and Stationery Trades. Partnerships Arranged. Balance Sheets and Trading Accounts Prepared and Audited. All Business carried out under Mr. Larner's personal supervision.—28, 29, and 30, Paternoster Row, E.C., Secretary to the Booksellers' Provident Institution.

Printers.

ATHENÆUM PRESS.—JOHN EDWARD

FRANCIS, Printer of the Athenæum, Notes and Queries, &c., is prepared to SUBMIT ESTIMATES for all kinds of BOOK, NEWS, and PERIODICAL PRINTING.—13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Sales by Auction.

Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE

will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, January 13, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, comprising the Property of THOMAS FRANCIS, Esq., a PORTION of the LIBRARY of the late GEORGE NICHOLSON, F.R.S., &c., and other Properties, including a large Collection of Works Relating to Freemasonry and the various Masonic Lodges—Notes and Queries, a complete set to 1904—First Editions of the Writings of Modern Authors—Poetry—Works on the Fine Arts—Archæology—Americana—a Collection of Coloured and Mezzotint Prints, &c.—a fine Series of Daniel Defoe's Various Writings, mostly First Editions, uniformly bound in tree-marbled calf extra, gilt edges, by J. Clarke, &c.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

A Portion of the Library of the Right Hon. LORD ANNALY, and the Library of the late E. ASCHERSON, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE

will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, January 20, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS including a SELECTION from the LIBRARY of LORD ANNALY, the LIBRARY of the late E. ASCHERSON, Esq., and other Properties, comprising Works on the Fine Arts—Antiquarian, Archaeological, and Topographical Books—First Editions of Modern Authors—Collections of Caricatures, Costume Prints and Portraits—Books on Sport—Dugdale's Monasticon Anglicanum, 1817-30—Holbein, Imitations of Original Drawings, 1792—Scottish History Society, 47 vols.—Fraser's Book of Claverhouse, and Scott's of Buccleuch—Biblia Sacra Latina, manuscript on vellum, 3 vols.—Collection of Books, Paintings, Prints, Relics, &c., relating to Lord Byron—Ackermann's Microcosm of London, 3 vols., 1808—Chronicon Nurembergense, 1493—Lafontaine's Fables, Oudry's fine Edition, on large paper, in old red morocco, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

HAMPTON & SONS have received instructions to SELL by AUCTION DURING JANUARY, the valuable LIBRARY formed by the late J. VASSEUR, Esq., comprising Works in all Branches of Literature, many in fine Bindings by Riviere, Zaehnsdorf, Bedford, and other eminent Binders.—Further particulars will be duly announced, and Catalogues forwarded on application to the AUCTIONEERS.

N.B.—The FURNITURE, unique Collection of Japanese Art Objects, Bronzes, Ivory Carvings, Enamels, Jewellery, Old Silver, &c., will be SOLD on JANUARY 26 and Following Days.

Offices, 2 and 3, Cockspur Street, S.W.

Valuable Miscellaneous Books.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on TUESDAY, January 19, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock, VALUABLE MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, comprising an extensive Collection of Books relating to the Topography, Genealogy, and Antiquities of the County of Suffolk—the entire Stock of Copinger's Suffolk Records and MSS., 5 vols.—Howard and Crisp's Visitations, 12 vols.—Yorkshire Archaeological Society, 27 vols.—Books relating to Nottinghamshire—Racinet, Le Costume Historique, 6 vols.—Mrs. Frankau's J. R. Smith and the Wards—Bryan's Dictionary of Painters, 5 vols., and other Modern Art Books—the Editions de Luxe of Lytton, 32 vols., and Byron, 13 vols.—a few Books with Presentation Inscriptions—the Probate of the Will of Izaak Walton with original seal, 1683—a fine and complete Set of the Zoological Society's Proceedings, 65 vols. 1830–1903—Curtis's Botanical Magazine, the first 117 vols. 1793–1891—Oeder's Flora Danica, 6 vols.—old Books of Travel and Americana—Early Coloured Views of South Africa—Alken's Analysis of the Hunting Field—Carlyle's French Revolution, 3 vols. and other First Editions, &c.

Catalogues on application.

Curiosities.

MR. J. C. STEVENS'S NEXT SALE of CURIOSITIES will take place on TUESDAY, January 19, and will include a choice COLLECTION OF ROMAN AND GREEK GLASS, POTTERY, and BRONZES—about Thirty Terracotta Tanagrian Figures—a Collection of Cut and Polished Opals—Pictures—Prints—and the usual Miscellaneous Assortment.

Catalogues on application to the Auctioneer, 33, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION at their Galleries, 47, Leicester Square, W.C., at the END OF JANUARY, BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, comprising several Small Libraries, including Standard Works by Esteemed Authors—valuable First Editions—Books with Coloured Plates, &c., further particulars of which will be duly announced.

Magazines, &c.

THE DUBLIN REVIEW.

Edited by WILFRID WARD.

Published Quarterly. Single Copy, 5s. 6d. net.

Advance Yearly Subscription for the four quarterly issues sent post paid, One Guinea.

Contents for January.

MR. CHESTERTON AMONG THE PROPHETS. By the Editor.
THE MEASURE OF NATIONAL WEALTH. By Hilaire Belloc, M.P.

ENGLISH CATHOLICS IN THE XVIIIth CENTURY. By Mgr. Ward.

CATHOLIC SOCIAL WORK IN GERMANY—III. Organization and Method.

SONNET. By R. B.

EUGÈNE FROMENTIN. By Prof. J. S. Phillimore.

THE CENSORSHIP OF FICTION. By Canon W. Barry.

DUCHESNE'S ANCIENT HISTORY OF THE CHURCH. By John Chapman, O.S.B.

MODERN TURKEY. By Mark Sykes.

MR. RUNCIMAN'S BILL.

SOME RECENT BOOKS.

BURNS & OATES, 23, Orchard Street, London, W.

UNIVERSITY OF LIVERPOOL

ANNALS OF ARCHÆOLOGY AND ANTHROPOLOGY

ISSUED BY THE LIVERPOOL INSTITUTE OF ARCHÆOLOGY

Edited by J. L. MYRES

IN COLLABORATION WITH

F. P. BARNARD, R. C. BOSANQUET, J. G. FRAZER, T. W. GANN, J. GARSTANG, J. G. MILNE, P. E. NEWBERRY, and T. G. PINCHES.

Quarterly. Imp. 8vo, 2s. 6d. net each part. Annual Subscription, 10s.

JUST PUBLISHED, No. 3, Vol. I.

CONTENTS:—

THE CAPPADOCIAN TABLETS BELONGING TO THE LIVERPOOL INSTITUTE OF ARCHÆOLOGY. Theophilus G. Pinches, LL.D. (With Plates XVII.-XXXI.).

NOTES ON PASSAGES IN THE CAPPADOCIAN TABLETS. Prof. A. A. Sayce, LL.D.

THE DISPUTED FLINTS OF BREONIO VERONESE. T. E. Peet, B.A., Craven Travelling Fellow to the University of Oxford. (With Plate XXXII.)

ON THE TITLE. Prof. W. M. Flinders Petrie, D.C.L. LL.D. F.R.S.

A Descriptive Prospectus will be sent on application.

ARCHIBALD CONSTABLE & CO., LTD., 10, Orange Street, London, W.C.

CURTIS'S BOTANICAL MAGAZINE.

Contents.

JANUARY, 1909. Coloured Plates, 3s. 6d.

ENCEPHALARTOS BARTERI. W. Tropical Africa. Double Plate.

ANGADENIA NITIDA. Tropical S. America.

ERIA RHYNCHOSTYLOIDES. Java.

CLERODENDRON UGAUDENSE. Tropical Africa.

LONICERA GIRALDII. China.

Fourth Series, Vol. IV. 1908. 72 Coloured Plates, 42s.

LOVELL REEVE & CO., LTD., 6, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden.

THE BUILDER (founded 1842), 4, Catherine Street, London, W.C., JANUARY 9, contains:—

PROVINCIAL ARCHITECTS AND REGISTRATION.

THE "CONSERVATOIRE DES ARTS ET MÉTIERS," PARIS.

THE ROYAL ACADEMY LOAN EXHIBITION.

COLCHESTER TECHNICAL INSTITUTE COMPETITION. AUSTRALIAN AND NEW ZEALAND TIMBERS.—II.

A PROVINCIAL VIEW OF THE QUESTION OF REGISTRATION.

PRIVATE BILLS IN PARLIAMENT.

ILLUSTRATIONS:

LATE RENAISSANCE CHURCHES OF LONDON.—I. ST. JOHN THE EVANGELIST, WESTMINSTER;

DESIGN FOR A FAÇADE IN FERRO-CONCRETE (Second Prize);

PROPOSED CHURCH OF ALL SAINTS, BEDFORD;

ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS, MIDDLETON;

ABBOTT'S HOSPITAL, GUILDFORD.

From Offices as above (4d., by post 4½d.), at Railway Bookstalls, Bookshops, and of all News-agents.

A GREAT PSYCHOLOGICAL NOVEL.

Every one interested in the evolution of human character and the power of circumstances in moulding human lives should read

G. COLMORE'S GREAT NOVEL,

PRIESTS OF PROGRESS.

Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 6s.

The Globe says:—"The novel has a poignant human appeal in its plot; the characters are real; the writing fine and eloquent."

London: STANLEY PAUL & CO. Clifford's Inn, E.C.

EBENEZER PROUT'S WORKS.

Bound, each net, 5s.

HARMONY: its Theory and Practice. Twenty-fourth Impression. Revised and largely Re-written.

ANALYTICAL KEY TO THE EXERCISES in the Same. Net 3s.

COUNTERPOINT: Strict and Free. Ninth Impression.

DOUBLE COUNTERPOINT AND CANON. Fourth Impression.

FUGUE. Fifth Impression.

FUGAL ANALYSIS. Third Impression.

MUSICAL FORM. Seventh Impression.

APPLIED FORMS. Fifth Impression.

THE ORCHESTRA. 2 vols. Fourth Impression.

AUGENER, LTD., 6, New Burlington Street, and 22, Newgate Street.

Swan Sonnenschein & Co.,

LTD.

STUDENT'S TEXT-BOOK OF ZOOLOGY.

By ADAM SEDGWICK, M.A. Professor of Zoology and Comparative Anatomy in the University of Cambridge. Profusely illustrated. The Third Volume, completing the Work, is now ready.

Vol. I. PROTOZOA TO CHAETOGNATHA 18s.

Vol. II. CHORDATA TO MAMMALIA. 21s.

Vol. III. Completing the Work. 24s.

A NEW ENLARGED EDITION OF ELEMENTARY TEXT-BOOK OF PRACTICAL BOTANY.

By Prof. E. STRASBURGER. Edited by Prof. HILL-HOUSE. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d.

NOW READY.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITIONS OF DICTIONARY OF BATTLES.

By T. B. HARBOTTLE. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

DICTIONARY OF HISTORICAL ALLUSIONS.

By T. B. HARBOTTLE. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

THE REFLECTIONS OF LICHTENBERG.

Selected and Translated by NORMAN ALLISTON. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

CATHOLICISM ON A PHILOSOPHICAL BASIS.

By HENRY JAMES SAINT-BENNO CUNLIFFE, M.A. Crown 8vo, cloth 2s. 6d.

NEW VOLUME OF THE NEW CLASSICAL LIBRARY. THE INSTITUTES OF GAIUS. (Extracts.)

The Digest. Title XLV. Translated by J. GRAHAM TRAPNELL, B.A. LL.B. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. net; leather, 4s. 6d. net.

THE PRECINCT OF RELIGION IN THE CULTURE OF HUMANITY.

By Prof. CHARLES GRAY SHAW, Professor of Philosophy in New York University. Demy 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.

DRAMATIC SCENES FROM GREAT NOVELISTS.

Adapted for representation by ROSE PATRY, Author of 'Handbook of Elocution.' Crown 8vo, cloth, 1s. net; paper, 6d. net.

NEW SCIENTIFIC ROMANCE. AN EPISODE OF FLATLAND.

By C. H. HINTON. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

NEW, REVISED, AND ENLARGED EDITION OF CONTEMPORARY SOCIALISM.

By JOHN RAE, M.A. Demy 8vo, cloth, 5s. net.

READY SHORTLY.

A NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION OF TEXT-BOOK OF PETROLOGY.

By FREDERICK H. HATCH, Ph.D. With numerous Illustrations. 7s. 6d. net.

NEW IMPRESSION OF FEUDAL ENGLAND.

By J. HORACE ROUND. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d.

NEW IMPRESSION OF SKEPTICS OF THE ITALIAN RENAISSANCE.

By the late Rev. J. OWEN. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d.

STUDIES IN ROMAN HISTORY.

Vol. II. By E. G. HARDY, M.A. D.Litt. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

SWAN SONNENSCHN & CO., LTD., 25, High Street, Bloomsbury, W.C.

MACMILLAN'S NEW BOOKS.

EVERSLEY SERIES.—New Vol.

Shakespeare.

By Prof. WALTER RALEIGH. Globe 8vo, 4s. net.
[Tuesday.]

William Morris.

By ALFRED NOYES. Crown 8vo, 2s. net.
[English Men of Letters.]

William Haig Brown of Charterhouse.

A Short Biographical Memoir. Written by some of his Pupils and Edited by his Son, HAROLD E. HAIG BROWN. With Portrait. 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

Notes of a Botanist on the Amazon and Andes.

Being Records of Travel during the Years 1849-1864. By RICHARD SPRUCE, Ph.D. Edited and Condensed by ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE, O.M. F.R.S. With Portrait of the Author and other Illustrations and Maps. 2 vols. 8vo, 21s. net.

Observer.—"A veritable mine of delightful information, clad in an easy, readable style, free from all pedantic gloss. No more wonderful, more beautiful spots exist than these regions explored by Mr. Spruce....Scientifically, the work is of real value, and about the Amazon fighting women, too, the author has a chapter. Truly a book of interest and delight."

The One Volume Bible Commentary.

With Introductions and Explanatory Notes to every Book, General Articles, and Maps, by various Writers.

Edited by
The Rev. J. R. DUMMELOW, M.A. (Camb.).
1,250 pp., demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

Mars as the Abode of Life.

By PERCIVAL LOWELL, LL.D., Author of 'Mars and Its Canals,' &c. Illustrated. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.
[Tuesday.]

The Origin and Development of the Moral Ideas.

By EDWARD WESTERMARCK, Ph.D., Martin White Professor of Sociology in the University of London. In 2 vols. 8vo. Vol. II. 14s. net.

Previously published: Vol. I. 14s. net.

Earthwork of England.

Prehistoric, Roman, Saxon, Danish, Norman, and Mediæval. By A. HADRIAN ALLCROFT, M.A. Illustrated with Plans, Sections, &c. 8vo, 18s. net.

Morning Post.—"Mr. Allcroft's thorough and complete monograph upon the old earthworks which remain to us in such great numbers is the last, as it is among the very best, of a great series of studies which Englishmen have devoted to such survivals."

Caesar's Commentaries on the Gallic War.

Translated into English by T. RICE HOLMES, Hon. Litt.D. Dublin. With Map. Crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net.

India: Its Life and Thought.

By JOHN P. JONES, D.D. Illustrated. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

The Novels of Henry James.

Édition de Luxe. In 23 vols. 8vo, 8s. 6d. net each. Vol. VIII. THE TRAGIC MUSE, Vol. II.

NEW 6/- NOVELS.

Joan of Garioch. By ALBERT KINROSS.

The Red City. By Dr. S. WEIR MITCHELL.

The American As He Is.

By NICHOLAS M. BUTLER, President of Columbia University. Crown 8vo, 4s. net.

The Friendly Craft.

A Collection of American Letters. Edited by ELIZABETH D. HANSCOM, Ph.D. Fcap. 8vo, 5s. net.

MACMILLAN & CO., LTD., London.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE.

DR. HARNACK'S MONUMENTAL WORK.

NOW READY. 2 vols. with Maps, 25s. net.

THE MISSION AND EXPANSION OF CHRISTIANITY IN THE FIRST THREE CENTURIES. By ADOLF HARNACK, D.D. Translated and Edited by Rev. JAMES MOFFATT, D.D. With much new matter, and altered so as to need re-translation.

THEOLOGICAL TRANSLATION LIBRARY.

Subscribers obtain Three Volumes for 22s. 6d., post free, payable in advance.

Separately, the volumes cost 10s. 6d. net, postage extra.

Subscriptions for forthcoming year now due.

NOW READY. 500 pages. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

ETHICS OF THE CHRISTIAN LIFE. By Dr. THEODOR VON HÄRING, Professor of New Testament Dogmatics and Ethics at Tübingen.

CROWN THEOLOGICAL LIBRARY.

Author just awarded the NOBEL PRIZE for LITERATURE.

JUST READY. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s.

THE LIFE OF THE SPIRIT. By RUDOLF EUCKEN, Professor of Philosophy in Jena. This is a translation of the Author's latest work, and embodies his Philosophy.

Dr. Harnack's New Testament Studies.

Vol. III, JUST READY. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES. By ADOLF HARNACK, D.D., Professor of Church History in the University of Berlin.

EARLIER VOLUMES OF STUDIES.

Vol. I. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

LUKE THE PHYSICIAN.

Vol. II. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

THE SAYINGS OF JESUS.

JUST READY. Demy 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d. net.

NATIONAL IDEALISM AND THE BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER. An Essay in Re-interpretation and Revision. By STANTON COIT, Ph.D.

NOW READY. Crown 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d. net.

THE VULGATE: the Source of False Doctrines. By Rev. Prof. G. HENSLOW, M.A. F.L.S. &c.

JANUARY NUMBER READY.

2s. 6d. net; 2s. 9d. post free.

THE HIBBERT JOURNAL.

Principal Contents.

SOME RECENT INVESTIGATIONS BY THE SOCIETY FOR PSYCHICAL RESEARCH. By the Right Hon. G. W. Balfour.

NEW FACTS ON OUR SURVIVAL OF DEATH. By Principal John Graham.

THE DOCTRINE OF THE EARTH-SOUL AND OF BEINGS INTERMEDIATE BETWEEN MAN AND GOD. By Prof. William James.

PSYCHOTHERAPEUTICS AND RELIGION. By Dr. Henry Rutgers Marshall.

THE SOCIAL CONSCIENCE OF THE FUTURE. By Miss Vida Scudder.

IS THE OLD TESTAMENT A SUITABLE BASIS FOR MORAL INSTRUCTION? By the Right Rev. The Bishop of Tasmania.

THE CENTRAL PROBLEM OF THE INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS ON MORAL EDUCATION. By Prof. J. H. Muirhead.

JESUS OR CHRIST? AN APPEAL FOR CONSISTENCY. By the Rev. R. Roberts.

THE MESSAGE OF MODERN MATHEMATICS TO THEOLOGY. By Prof. C. J. Keyser.

A GREAT REFORM IN THE TREATMENT OF CRIMINALS. By Miss Lucy C. Bartlett.

CHRISTIAN MISSIONS AS AFFECTED BY LIBERAL THEOLOGY. By the Rev. J. W. Burton.

RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL ASPECTS OF THE CULT OF ANCESTORS AND HEROES. By Dr. Lewis R. Farnell.

With a Number of Discussions, Signed Reviews and Bibliography of Recent Literature.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE,
14, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

DENT'S NEW BOOKS

THE MYSTICAL ELEMENT OF RELIGION.

Studied in the Lives of St. Catherine of Genoa and her Friends.

By Baron F. VON HÜGEL.

Photogravure Portraits. 2 vols. demy 8vo, 21s. net.

"The most complete and balanced attempt in any language to apply the modern scientific method to all the facts of religion on the grand scale.....The best-informed and most inspiring study of religion in our time—a mine for all future workers in that field."—DAILY NEWS.

BEETHOVEN'S LETTERS.

Critical Edition, with Explanatory Notes.

By Dr. ALF. CHR. KALISCHER, translated with Preface by J. S. SHEDLOCK, M.A.

Photogravure Frontispiece. Many interesting Portraits, Facsimiles of Music hitherto unpublished, &c. 2 vols. demy 8vo, 21s. net.

This will be the First Complete English Edition of Beethoven's Letters, and will contain over 1,100 Letters and Notes.

A NEW LIGHT ON THE RENAISSANCE.

By HAROLD BAYLEY. Over 400 Illustrations. Super-royal octavo, 12s. 6d. net.

The design of this work is to explain the origin and meaning of the multifarious "trademarks" and decorative designs used by the early printers and papermakers, and as far as possible to recover some of the fragrance with which these neglected emblems were once permeated.

"Guides to the Spirit of the Place."—DAILY NEWS.

THE MEDIÆVAL TOWNS. Literary Guide Books.

With numerous Illustrations, Reproductions, and Maps. Fcap. 8vo (pocketable), cloth gilt, 4s. 6d. net, and limp paste grain roan bindings, 5s. 6d. net.

NEW VOLUME.

P I S A.

By JANET ROSS and NELLY ERICHSEN. Fully Illustrated by NELLY ERICHSEN.

A full Prospectus of this well-known Series will be forwarded on application.

"They are guide books, books for study, and books for reference, and at the same time little galleries of art."—ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

HADDON HALL LIBRARY.

OUR FORESTS AND WOODLANDS.

By Dr. J. NISBET. A New Edition, revised and brought up to date. Illustrated in Photogravure and Half-Tone. Large crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

LES CLASSIQUES FRANÇAIS.

Edited by H. WARNER ALLEN. A Series in the original French. Photogravure Frontispiece. Pott 8vo, cloth, 1s. 6d. net per volume; limp lambskin, 2s. 6d. net.

TWO NEW VOLUMES.

SATIRES ÉPÎTRES, ET L'ART POÉTIQUE DE BOILEAU.

Préface d'AUGUSTIN FILON.

POÈMES DE VICTOR HUGO (1822-1865).

Préface de L. AGUETTANT.

A complete List of Volumes published sent free on application.

J. M. DENT & CO.
15, Aldine House, Bedford Street, London, W.C.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 9, 1909.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
FERRERO ON GREATNESS AND DECLINE OF ROME ..	33
ANNE SEYMOUR DAMER	34
GERMANY IN THE LAST TWO CENTURIES ..	35
FRANCIS THOMPSON'S SELECTED POEMS ..	37
NEW NOVELS (Jim Mortimer; Handicapped; The Miracle; Ciel rouge)	38
BOOKS ABOUT CHINA	39
OUR LIBRARY TABLE (Napoleon and his Fellow Travellers; Chaucer and his England; Les Anglais au Combat; Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border) ..	40-41
THE BOOK SALES OF 1908; ROYAL BOOKS AND THE PUBLISHING SEASON; THE SHAKESPEARE QUARTOS; 'POEMS BY TWO BROTHERS,' BY THE TENNYSONS	41-44
LIST OF NEW BOOKS	45
LITERARY GOSSIP	45
SCIENCE—COMMON AFFECTIONS OF THE LIVER; HYGIÈNE INDUSTRIELLE; THE GAME ANIMALS OF AFRICA; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS NEXT WEEK; GOSSIP	46-47
FINE ARTS—ROYAL ACADEMY WINTER EXHIBITION; LANDSCAPE EXHIBITION; NEW PICTURE GALLERY AT THE VATICAN; GOSSIP; EXHIBITIONS ..	47-50
MUSIC—THE EVOLUTION OF ORCHESTRATION; SCARLATTI'S HARPSICHOORD AND ORGAN MUSIC; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	50-51
DRAMA—MATHILDE; JOHN THE BAPTIST; GOSSIP ..	51-52
INDEX TO ADVERTISERS	52

LITERATURE

The Greatness and Decline of Rome. By Guglielmo Ferrero. Translated by the Rev. H. J. Chaytor. Vols. III. and IV. (Heinemann.)

THE third and fourth volumes of this fascinating book have followed with commendable promptness upon the earlier two noticed in these columns on June 15th, 1907. The third volume covers a period of matchless excitement in Roman history—the moment after Cæsar's murder and the agitations which resulted for the next twelve years. On few moments of ancient history are we so minutely informed. Cicero's correspondence almost covers the period, and gives us the daily hopes and fears of politicians among the swaying chances of war and peace, Senate and Triumvirs, Antony and Octavian, armies and navies, East and West, in these birth-pangs of the Roman Empire.

But any student who read this book without previous knowledge could no more guess the result than he could undo the Gordian knot. This is due not only to the extraordinary complexity of the interests involved, but also to the new attitude the author takes regarding the two main actors in the drama. In most Roman histories we are allowed to forecast the result from the pictures drawn of Antony—an unprincipled, impetuous, mainly military personage, with little political insight, who alternates vulgar dishonesties with sensual excesses, and who with great armies at his disposal, and great popularity behind him, sacrifices all to his passion for the famous queen of Egypt. Plutarch and Shakespeare have made this picture of him the world's property. Octavian, on the other hand, the future Augustus, is a cold, selfish, calculating youth, very old for his years, very wise in his counsels, whose only difficulties are his lack of military genius, and his want of any power of fascinating men. Any intelligent child could anticipate the result as an ordinary moral lesson.

But Prof. Ferrero's book allows no such simple solution, for his reading of the two characters is, if not reversed, at least wholly novel to us, who have not read the Italian essays to which he refers on these matters. Antony is here an almost respectable hard-working politician, not carried away by his passions, still less by any love of ease; his affair with Cleopatra is wholly an intrigue on her part to escape the spoliation of Egypt, amid the spoliation of all the Eastern provinces, by becoming the queen of the ruler of the world, first Cæsar, then Antony; and we are told that the treaty of Brundisium, which first separated the Roman world into East and West, was the all-important moment which heralded the great decision of Constantine. Prof. Ferrero will not believe the story of the impassioned harangue over Cæsar's blood-stained remains; he thinks Antony was far too busy, and indeed too frightened, for such play-acting. He will not believe that the fascinations of Alexandria beguiled him from the great task of recruiting Roman finances by a new conquest of the Parthian, or Persian, empire, as he frequently calls it. How Antony was defeated in the end we cannot even conjecture. For novel as is Prof. Ferrero's Antony, his Octavian is positively bewildering.

Such judgments seem to us not history, but impressionist pictures of men, drawn by an historian's imagination, and fit for the stage rather than the classroom. There are two pictures of Roman society, apparently only a couple of years apart, which seem to us to show a similar instance of this impressionist art. In the first the whole Roman people has gone to pieces. When Horace comes to Rome in 40 B.C. there is general bankruptcy, ruin, moral dissolution, despair. Not a single ray of light pierces the gloom. In 37 B.C., when Virgil undertakes his 'Georgics,' there is a wholly different picture presented to us. Every one is sober and reflective; the virtues of country life and the value of agriculture are fashionable; and the whole tone of society is represented as hopeful and even respectable. We cannot believe in any such laying-on of colours. Rome could never have recovered from the horrors of proscriptions and confiscations had there not been all through a large body of sober, respectable people, who produced the regeneration. We even believe that their religion—real religion—helped largely in the result. With Prof. Ferrero religion is only superstition, and has none but evil results on modern life. Such a view is not uncommon in present-day Italy, especially among politicians, but to English readers implies an inadequate grasp of the motives that make for good in every civilized society. To say that in all history the law is that "good leads to evil, and evil to good," is not to announce any rational principle.

Apart from the pictures of Rome, and indeed of Egypt, painted in grelle Farben, as the Germans say, there is much to be learnt from this notable book. The author praises Sallust for "his artistic and psychological mode of writing history, in contrast to the dry annals which had for centuries been the official history of Rome—as dry and absurd a mode of narration as the critical and scientific historical methods which certain pedants would revive to-day."

We are in full sympathy with the author, and have often maintained in these columns that history is an art, with many sciences as her handmaids—not a science with Art for a tire-woman. But this great art, like those of painting and sculpture, does not consist in the perfection of single figures so much as in harmonious composition giving primary and secondary figures in proportion and perspective. Nor is there any greater interest, or greater risk, than the pressing of an analogy between diverse men when we find them in like circumstances. The famous moment in Napoleon's life, when his almost craven hesitation was overruled by a stupid brother's decision, is evidently the key which unlocks the secret of Mark Antony's conduct. He was forced on by his brother Lucius and Fulvia, his daring wife. That may be true, but it is conjecture, not history.

The fourth volume is marked by the same high qualities as its predecessors—ample erudition, lively imagination, and strikingly independent judgment of the characters that played their parts in one of the greatest crises of the world's history. That a book should be so fascinating, even in a translation, is its highest praise, for it implies that its style is not mere polish of diction, but the expression of clear and persuasive thinking. The gravest defect we find here is, as we have said of the third volume, a superficial and somewhat random psychology, which does not appreciate what qualities are consistent, and inconsistent, in human character. We have spoken above of the author's picture of Antony. No doubt there is great complexity in the motives that actuate even ordinary men, but no reasonable analysis could, we think, attain the conclusions which the author has reached regarding the character of Augustus. He evidently felt himself shackled by the estimate (to our mind false, and resting on mere gossip) of the violent lust, rapacity, and cruelty of the young Triumvir. When he comes in the present volume to describe his cautious, wise, and moderate policy, the change is astonishing, and he is obliged to find reasons to account for it. The pages in which he endeavours to do this seem to us the weakest in the whole volume.

Bringing comparisons to bear on this problem, which requires, he tells us, careful consideration, he says:—

"He was not like Alexander, Cæsar, or Napoleon, in that his weak health made him impressionable and timid; he resembled Cicero rather than Cæsar, being by nature rather a man of letters, fitted for sedentary reflection, but with a powerful intellect which might have rivalled Cicero in letters."

All this is wonderful enough, and based on no evidence whatsoever: but then we are told that he was forced into great dangers and positions beyond his capacity; that this had stimulated all his bad qualities—ambition, rancour, sensuality, avarice—and made him a precocious tyrant, fierce, greedy, revengeful, and jealous. But these, it seems, were only "temporary aberrations of a weak character under great strain." "He was naturally," it seems after all, "of a moderate temperament, caring little for luxury or dissipation," &c. Prof. Ferrero might have found in his Horace the ridicule of this monstrous animal composed of the limbs of divers species. Presently we hear that the sudden conversion of Augustus from vices, public and private, to virtue, was due to the study of Cicero's 'De Officiis,' and the advice of the obscure Didymus Areus, a neo-Pythagorean! Risum teneatis, amici. If he can give us no better account of the character of Augustus than this, he may as well lay down his pen. And when he sets a comparison with Napoleon aside so glibly, it occurs to us that if we leave out Napoleon's military genius (which is indeed difficult) there are great similarities between the two men. Both started from obscurity; both reduced disorder to order; both organized a great new system on the lines of the old, for Napoleon's debt to Louis XIV. in his idea of government is now generally acknowledged. Both were enormously industrious; and, though both regarded women as mere instruments of pleasure, neither was sensual in temperament. Both were wanting not only in true geniality, but also in any moral goodness. This may be fanciful; it is at least consistent.

In estimating Antony, Prof. Ferrero makes, as we have already said, the same sort of spasmodic judgments. At one moment Antony shows splendid vigour and ability in saving his army from disaster in Parthia; at another, not far removed in time, he is worn out with age and debauchery. This is, of course, absurd; but it is not so to hold that Antony was ruined by his inconsistencies, and on this there are many instructive pages.

Nothing is more attractive in this volume, as well as the previous one, than the constant effort to bring the literature of the age into relation with its social and political phenomena. But the judgments seem to us often extreme and fanciful. Thus Prof. Ferrero greatly exaggerates the naughtiness of Horace's 'Epodes'; he gives absurd importance to Cicero's 'De Officiis' as an agent of moral conversion; he tells us to observe the unity of the whole body of Horace's 'Odes,' and then goes on to show that this unity is really in their inconsistencies. How could it, indeed, be otherwise, if Horace was really what our author describes him—"a powerful but lonely mind, standing apart from events, judging them in isolation"—while Virgil on the other hand, is "a communicative [sympathetic?] genius in contact with life," &c.? If he had said the opposite—that Horace was a social creature, gay and Epicurean, valuing polished style and the favour of the great more than moral teaching, while Virgil was an idealist, standing aloof from the foibles and vices of his age—he would have been nearer the truth. But what shall we say of an historian, when he finds a letter from Antony to Octavian (among Suetonius's scandal) that cannot be translated for modern readers, advancing to the broad assertion that "the sense of common decency is absolutely unknown to the ancient world"? Yet he has studied Virgil and Cicero, who are as reticent regarding sexual matters as the best moderns.

One of the most convincing and original points in his discussion of Augustus's earliest acts, after his power was assured, is his proof (iv. 158) that their apparently sporadic character arises from the fact that they were all bold attempts to obtain money from subject races in distant lands to replenish the exhausted treasury without increasing the burden of taxation. Of such fruitful suggestions there is abundance, though the work labours under the defects which it was our duty to notice. Whether a careful collation of the original with the translation would weaken some of our criticisms we cannot tell. From the ease and fluency of Mr. Chaytor's style and his position as a scholar, we do not think it likely; but we have had no opportunity of reading the original, and have therefore treated the translation as a complete exposition of the author's mind. "Triakontaschoeni" is given as the name of an Ethiopian king: it is really good Greek (the thirty leagues) for a district in Upper Egypt or Nubia!

Anne Seymour Damer: a Woman of Art and Fashion, 1748-1828. By Percy Noble. (Kegan Paul & Co.)

MRS. DAMER deserved a biography, if only on account of her friendships. Unfortunately, she ordered all her correspondence to be destroyed; and Mr. Noble has had to construct his "short biographical sketch" from a few letters and papers lent by connexions, helped out by extracts from contemporary memoirs. Since Leslie Stephen wrote his page in the 'Dictionary of National Biography,' several publications have appeared which touch upon Anne Damer, notably Lady Mary Coke's letters and the correspondence of Lady Sarah Lennox. 'The Creevey Papers' are also cited among works consulted; but we have come upon only one citation from them, and that contains at least two errors. Mrs. Damer did not pay all her husband's debts, nor did she renounce all claim to half Lord Clinton's estate. The latter inaccuracy is pointed out by Mr. Noble himself.

We cannot undertake to pronounce here upon the merits of Mrs. Damer as an artist. If Horace Walpole's praises of her, coloured by personal bias, are excessive, Allan Cunningham is, we think, unduly harsh. Her present biographer admits that her work "may now appear rather rough and unfinished"; but he reminds us how rare a thing it was then for a woman to attempt sculpture, and he supplies undeniable proofs both of her enthusiasm and her industry. The examples selected for illustration are, with the exception of the Edinburgh statue of George III., pleasing; they include the Thame and Isis masks on Henley Bridge, and the busts of Nelson, Miss Farren, Sir Joseph Banks, Mary Berry, her own mother, and herself, with two bas-reliefs.

But, after all, Anne Seymour Damer has other claims to remembrance. David Hume, for some time her father's secretary, is generally credited with having aroused her artistic aspirations; whilst Horace Walpole, General Conway's bosom friend, gave her a lifelong attachment both as friend and art-lover, leaving her at death the mistress of his beloved Strawberry Hill. It was Walpole who introduced her to the Berrys, with whom her intimacy became both close and permanent. There appears to have been a mutual attraction between Mrs. Damer and Charles James Fox, whose bust his friend gave Napoleon; and she helped the Duchess of Devonshire and Mrs. Crewe at the famous Westminster election. The Whig statesman averred that he valued her talent more than his own ancient descent. It was through Sir William Hamilton that she came to know Nelson, who made her a present of the coat which he had worn at the Nile and wore when he was sitting for his bust. Other more or less intimate acquaintances were the Empress Josephine, the Cosways, Mrs. Siddons, and Erasmus Darwin, not to mention the unfortunate Queen Caroline, who "was in the habit of coming to watch Mrs. Damer at her work."

As an amateur actress Mrs. Damer seems to have excelled. At Richmond House in April, 1787, she played Mrs. Lovemore in 'The Way to Keep Him,' in a performance which had been superintended by Mrs. Siddons and Miss Farren, and was "the only dramatic entertainment regulated by the nobility and personages of distinction that had yet taken place." Mrs. Damer, we are told, wore as one of her dresses

"an embroidered gauze on a white ground, a diamond necklace of prodigious value, a wheatsheaf of ornaments of diamonds in her hair, and a girdle of diamonds and stars of the same festoons on her dress."

The costumes of Lord Derby, Mr. Edgecumbe, and others of the male performers were little less sumptuous; and the success of the entertainment led to several repetitions. Of one of these the following incident is recorded:—

"Pitt had received a ticket from the Duke of Richmond (inscribed with the customary warnings 'No one admitted after half-past seven'), and, knowing that he should be late, wished to return the ticket; but the Duke on learning this promised Pitt that he should be made the one exception and be admitted at whatever time he pleased. Fox, who had also been invited, heard of this concession, and postponed his arrival until after the debate. Following Pitt, he arrived at the door of the great saloon at the same time as his opponent. The doorkeeper in accordance with his instructions admitted Pitt, but tried to exclude Fox, as it was now long after half-past seven, and he had received an order to admit only one after that time. In answer to his explanation, Fox said to him, 'I know that, but to-night I am a "rider" on Mr. Pitt.' He gained admission, and appears to have been greatly impressed by the brilliant talent displayed by his friend Mrs. Damer."

Walpole, however, says that the Opposition leader caught a bad cold on this occasion; and a contemporary critic remarked that Mrs. Damer's "tones are too frequently depressed, and sometimes not audible at the conclusion." When we hear that the lady had to deliver an Epilogue which alluded to her own talent for statuary, this weakness sounds rather becoming than otherwise.

Mrs. Damer's marriage was unhappy, her husband, the heir of Lord Milton, being a reckless gambler who put an end to his own existence. After eight years of married life they separated; and there were no children. The lady then became freer than ever to indulge her taste for travel. In 1779, when crossing the Channel to visit her father, at that time Governor of Jersey, her packet was fired upon by a French vessel, and, after a futile attempt to outsail it, had to surrender. Mrs. Damer is said to have "thoroughly enjoyed the experience," and the French were so much taken with her spirit that they very soon liberated "la belle Anglaise." She paid more than one visit to the Hamiltons at Naples, where the Princess Dashkoff describes her studio as "a fashionable morning resort." Lady Hamilton (the celebrated Emma) wished to have a carriage and liveries like those of the artist. In 1790-91 the latter went to Lisbon for her health, and returned through Spain to Paris, where she went to the National Assembly and visited the ruins of the Bastille. Some of her letters from the Peninsula to Miss Berry, printed by Mr. Noble, are rather curious. She mentions a case of a Portuguese match being broken off because the lady had asked her suitor (her cousin) "how he did."

Perhaps, however, Mrs. Damer's most notable Continental experiences were her visits to Paris at the time of the Peace of Amiens and on the eve of Waterloo. The object of the earlier, on which she was accompanied by Mary Berry, was to see the First Consul and present him with her bust of Fox. The friends saw a great many celebrities, and were well received by Joséphine (an old acquaintance of Mrs. Damer's); but when at last they obtained the long-sought interview with Bonaparte, "he appeared never to have heard of Mrs. Damer's fame as a sculptress," and gave her no opportunity of presenting the bust. It was not until after his return from Elba that the great man made amends by receiving her, and presenting her, in exchange for the bust, with a valuable snuff-box on the lid of which was his portrait set in diamonds. This later visit of Mrs. Damer's was somewhat singularly timed, and her action was not, as Mr. Noble naively remarks, "regarded with much popularity." The snuff-box is now to be seen at the British Museum, where also the donor's features are perpetuated in Ceracchi's statue of the Muse of Sculpture.

Walpole left Mrs. Damer, as we have already said, custodian of Strawberry Hill, where she lived till 1811. Here, in the summer of 1807, she was privileged to receive the Princess of Wales and "Willikins"; and here, six years earlier, she produced the comedy 'Fashionable Friends,' the character of which has rather shocked some admirers of the blameless Mary Berry, to whom the authorship is usually attributed. Its unexpected failure to please a general audience when produced at Drury Lane, with Charles Kemble and Mrs. Jordan in the cast (Miss du Camp taking Mrs. Damer's own part), greatly disappointed both Miss Berry and her actress-manager. Mr. Noble is sceptical about the Berry authorship. Another historical mansion, York House, Twickenham, was Mrs. Damer's last country residence; ultimately, like the Berrys, she established herself in London.

We have not much fault to find with Mr. Noble's agreeably written and tastefully illustrated volume. In the chapter on Marshal Conway we meet with the curiously awkward sentence:—

"One of his earliest efforts in the House of Commons was his opposition to the Government on the question of the legality of general warrants; for supporting this measure he was dismissed from his post," &c.

What Conway did was to vote for a resolution condemnatory of this mode of executive procedure.

A note as to the identity of Hume's correspondent referred to as "Blake" (p. 24) seems desirable: he could hardly have been either of the best known personages of that name. In the very curious letter which Conway wrote to Sir William Hamilton, congratulating him upon his second marriage, this cultivated man is allowed to write epithalium with never a sic; and Creevey is represented as writing "Lord Brougham" long before that enterprising lawyer attained the Woolsack. Vittoria is not "on the Bay of Biscay" (p. 129). Several additions are necessary to the Errata, which face the Contents. "Prince Frederick of Brunswick" (p. 8) should be Ferdinand; "Milden" (p. 16), Mildenhall; "Lady Caroline Campbell" (p. 166), Lady Charlotte; whilst "Neckar" (the financier) and "Bertier" (both on p. 181) require correction, as also "Hesse, Homburg" (p. 81). It is curious that the Mrs. Howe who, according to the author, was a sort of magazine of all the virtues and talents, has escaped the 'Dictionary of National Biography.' The Index is useless.

A History of Germany, 1715-1815. By C. T. Atkinson. (Methuen & Co.)
The Evolution of Modern Germany. By William H. Dawson. (Fisher Unwin.)

A HISTORY of Germany in the eighteenth century was certainly a book that was wanted, and a young Oxford tutor has arisen to supply the need. Perhaps only a young man, and a college don, would have ventured on a task so arduous and so critical. Was there ever a country, or a century, so confusing, we are inclined to ask? Mr. Atkinson's book makes us repeat the question.

Not that Mr. Atkinson has written with any vagueness or confusion. On the contrary, his style and arrangement are both straightforward and clear, and he is successful both in arranging facts in orderly fashion and in telling plainly a tale that is not always plain. It is no discredit to him if Germany and the eighteenth century between them have been too much for him. It would need an historical genius of the first rank to produce order from such a chaos. And indeed Mr. Atkinson's task, we cannot but feel, would have been easier if it had not been set within such narrow limits. The year 1815 is certainly a definite date in German history; but 1715 as certainly is not, and the rather tepid defence of the choice of this date for a beginning, in Mr. Atkinson's first chapter, does not at all convince us. The true beginning of the age with which it was evidently the author's purpose to deal was 1648, and the critical event was the signing of the treaties of Westphalia. In 1715 nothing of real importance happened to Germany; and, as a matter of fact, Mr. Atkinson admits as much. His introductory chapter might serve as well, or better, for 1648.

Beginning with this initial difficulty of a distinction where no real distinction exists, Mr. Atkinson is confronted by an amazing confusion of circumstances and persons, of things geographical and political, to which his date of starting gives the reader no clue. He endeavours to supply the defect by finding a unity of interest for his book in military history. The book is primarily a military history of Germany from the rise of Frederick the Great to the fall of Napoleon.

Judging the volume in this light, we have nothing but praise for it. It is extremely lucid, and written with full knowledge, carefully, and with a certain restrained enthusiasm which is distinctly effective. No pains are too great for the author to take to master the details of a campaign, to understand the strategy or to elucidate the tactics; and many sources of information other than purely military ones have been judiciously utilized to elaborate a picture which is both expressive and complete. A considerable number of new plans adds to the interest of the descriptive writing. On the other hand, Mr. Atkinson's evidently keen military interests do not merely supply him with a centre of interest for German history; they also cause him to wander outside the history of Germany altogether. Why are we given a plan of the battle of Marengo in 'A History of Germany, 1715-1815'? There is even less excuse for it than there is for a plan of Ligny. And it is surely going a little too far when we are supplied with a detailed account of the battle of Waterloo. Mr. Atkinson's enthusiasm has certainly misled him. It has induced him to make his history mainly military. For this reason foreign policy plays an excessive part in the tale. His book comes to deal primarily with the external, not the internal, history of the country.

Mr. Atkinson's interests afford a clue to his capacities. He is excellent at summarizing events and policies. Next to the military pages, perhaps the best parts of his book are the accounts of the condition of Prussia under Frederick William and again under Frederick the Great, and of Austria under Maria Teresa and Joseph II. But of principles, tendencies, characters, he is not a sure judge. Nor is he always clear in observing facts that do not lie on the surface. Racial divisions and jealousies, he tells us, had not become a pressing question in 1715. This is hardly the case. If Bohemia was for the moment outwardly quiet, it was only because of the persistent policy of persecution which had followed the Thirty Years' War; and Hungary was not merely constitutional, it was also nationalist, in its opposition. Perhaps because so many have tried to draw the character of Frederick the Great, Mr. Atkinson makes little attempt to do so; and yet how much of the history of Germany was influenced by that character! How many delightful little touches in contemporary writers which throw light, from different sides, on Frederick's personality, have been ignored! There is one, for example, in the curiously interesting account of the 'Present State of Germany' published anonymously in England in 1738, which is worth quotation even now:—

"The Prince Royal is adorned with every Virtue: He has a lovely Countenance, but the Beauties of his Mind are not inferior to those of his Person; he has all his Mother's good Qualities, especially her Sweetness, so that such as are (unreasonably) disaffected with the present, promise to themselves Halcyon Days in the future Reign. He is no Enemy to innocent Diversions, but does not suffer himself to be wholly engrossed by them; he prefers the Conversation of Men of Letters, and Reading, especially Books of History and Geography, to all other Pleasures. He loves Musick and the liberal Arts, tho' the main of his Education was committed to two Military Gentlemen; yet it is easy to foresee that the Happiness of the Subject, and the cultivating the Arts of Peace, will make the distinguishing glories of his Reign. When he is present at Musters, it is obvious to every spectator how much he is displaced, and that he is there only in Obedience to the Royal Command."

What a sermon on the insecurity of human prediction Mr. Atkinson might have preached with that passage for text! Admirable in his collection of facts, he is a little too inclined to neglect the interesting side-lights which contemporary literature throws upon the history of eighteenth-century Germany. Literature, in fact, meets with scant treatment in his pages. This is surely a mistake, for the complete change in German literature which marked the period with which he deals is as significant a fact, and as interesting a subject of study, as the military development. The social and economic condition of the country, too, is (pace Mr. Atkinson at p. 61) worthy of fuller treatment. The long volume is not exactly one of the old "drum-and-trumpet" records, but its political and constitutional aspects decidedly need relief.

The book would have been helped by a good marginal analysis and a more frequent division into paragraphs. It has very few errors. In one of the maps "St. Eyr" is printed for St. Cyr, and there is a puzzling misplacement of lines on p. 366. Mr. Atkinson is an accurate writer, but it is not correct to say that outside the Electoral College the only archbishops in the Holy Roman Empire were of Salzburg and Magdeburg, or that of the former one hears little in the years 1715-1815.

It is no slight achievement to have written in one volume even a partial history of Germany in the eighteenth century, and we hope that success will encourage Mr. Atkinson to further efforts.

A very solid book by one who knows Germany thoroughly, in literature, in statistics, in actual life—that is what Mr. Dawson now puts before us, as a study of the transformation of the country during the last fifty years. At first sight the reader will wonder whether the book is likely to be in any sense parallel to Mr. Bodley's book on France. He will soon discover that it is not so. Mr. Dawson gives few pictures of German life, dwells little on German politics, and hardly at all on German history. His book is primarily economic, yet by no means exclusively so. It is an elaborate and interesting study of Germany as a trading nation, and it deals by the way with the education and social environment which are the setting of the great trading spirit.

Before he goes into details and discusses taxation and agricultural problems, rural labour, co-operation, colonization, Socialism, and the Polish question, Mr. Dawson has an extremely valuable chapter on 'The Modern Spirit,' the eventful change which has come over Germany to-day. The great influences of the War of Liberation have now entirely passed. "A century ago idealism was supreme; half a century ago it had still not been dethroned; to-day its place has been taken by materialism." He compares with modern German aims the words of Fichte, who disclaimed all views of expansion, and found in concentration and commercial self-reliance the "salvation" of Germany, and through it the welfare of Europe. The growth of natural science and technical improvement has substituted progress in industry, commerce, and material life for the old idealism and desire of self-realization. The author happily illustrates the tendency of the age from the German architecture of the day. Compare Berlin of the eighteenth with Berlin of the twentieth century. To-day,

"everywhere one sees the worship of massivity, the striving after crude, imposing effects—in the modern monuments, the public buildings, the bridges, and not least the cathedral which has arisen on the site of Schinkel's light and dainty structure. If one is to speak of art in relation to these works, it is primitive art, wherein form is subordinated to size. They impress, indeed, by their mass and dimensions, and by the suggestion of power which they convey, but they are without imagination—they are body without soul—and create in the beholder a sense of unrest and oppression. It is significant that while the statue of Charlemagne before the Rathaus of Aix-la-Chapelle is a finely modelled life-size figure, the statue which Hamburg has erected to Prince Bismarck is a monstrous structure, more like a lighthouse than a monument."

But Germany is not one. Mr. Dawson clearly distinguishes how different the North German is from the South: how gemütlich the latter, how utterly apart from Gemütlichkeit the former. Yet, when he has done so, for the greater part of his book he falls under the supremacy of Prussia, and, except where he actually distinguishes in statistics, seems to set Prussia's impression on the whole land. Again, there is the division between the east and west of the Prussian kingdom; yet that is not a complete cleavage. It is interesting in this connexion to observe that, though in the centre hardly a tenth of the population is Catholic, when the whole kingdom is considered the Catholics form more than a third.

The central part of the book is concerned with the increase of German trade and commerce. The figures are indeed remarkable; and more remarkable still is the testimony they afford to personal interest and personal energy. It is in this that Mr. Dawson sees the cause of Germany's industrial strength. "In Germany trade is a passion." It occupies a position of all-embracing control which it has long lost in England, and in this the importance of technical education, great though it is, is dwarfed by that of "the personal equation." The devotion and energy and entire absorption in work of the German trader are wonderful.

We can deal only in generalities. Mr. Dawson's book supplies abundance of detail. As it advances he becomes more minute; his information is always sound, and, we think, is presented impartially. He has an admirable chapter on the German workman, whose character, aptitudes, and training he exhaustively analyzes. His comparison with the corresponding English class is illuminative, and the figures which he gives—notably in regard to insurance, and the recent movement (not at all religious or moral, but materialistic and socialist in its development) in favour of temperance—are well worth study. His comments on child-labour in England are just, and the comparison in regard to women and children is interesting. Another valuable chapter deals with the growth of syndicates, which are not regarded always and everywhere as inimical to the prosperity of the worker. The account of State enterprise in railways and canals is most striking. The saving is so great that nearly one-fifth of the State's needs is supplied by the profit on railway traffic. In the Budget of 1905 for the Empire it was shown that the gross receipts of State enterprises formed 31·3 per cent of the revenue, while in the federated States they formed 68 per cent. What relation does this bear to the growth and the attitude of Socialism? The question may be asked, though it is not directly answered here.

The book is one to be studied, not to be critically dissected in a review. The author has wide knowledge, and his opinions, though they are open in many points to attack, do not obtrude themselves. He supplies a reasoned collection of facts, not a partisan presentation of conclusions.

When we ask for conclusions which affect ourselves we get these. It is "science, education, application, and an equal regard for small as for large things" that have won Germany her trade success. Her colonies at present sorely hamper her. Her strength lies in the extraordinary development of nationalization and municipalization; but the existing relations between capital and labour do not promise that industrial progress will continue. The cost of production is greatly rising, and with it the chances of British competition are being renewed.

Selected Poems. By Francis Thompson.
(Methuen & Co. and Burns & Oates.)

THIS volume will serve to bring before a wider circle of readers some of the most individual poetic work of the last century, though, indeed, we hope that 'The Hound of Heaven' is known to most lovers of verse. Thompson, however, will not be popular in the sense that Tennyson and Keats and, longo intervallo, Kipling are popular. His obscurity, his love of unusual words, his Latinisms, his mysticism, all mark him out as appealing mainly to a special type of mind. This sense is heightened by the themes he chooses, and the lack of narrative and dramatic elements in his work. The ode is his chosen vehicle; and odes are not popular. Perhaps the affinities of his work are beyond the ordinary reader. One must know something of Crashaw in the Caroline period, of Blake in the Georgian, of Coventry Patmore in the Victorian, fully to appreciate his value—although his work is all his own, anything but a pastiche of remembered phrases and cadences. Still, there is no doubt that Thompson will have a place of his own in the English Pantheon of poets. What that place will be it is too soon as yet to say, and we shall not attempt to prophesy. The organ tones, the coloured lights, the figured thought, are all there unmistakably; what precise worth posterity will attach to them lies—with posterity. It will depend on many things besides merely cultivated tastes, and will be a function of the whole attitude of the future towards life, the sense of the universe in its artistic meaning. For Thompson is above all things "sacramental." Of him more than many romantic, more than of most religious, poets, the definition is true, "Apparent pictures of unapparent realities." He revels in the concrete; colour and odour and sound are the breath of life to him; the mere notion has no attraction, and in this sense he is not a "metaphysical poet"; there is no discussion, no theology as in Browning; it is the "colour and curve of the single rose-leaf" which possess him; but they possess him only to carry him beyond the rose-leaf, to see in its harmony of line and hue some glimpse of an "altogether lovely," of which it is but the symbol. The loveliness of love might be said to be his unending theme, with the proviso that it is love, heavenly and eternal, shining through the eyes of women and children, and illuminating the shows of sense with a glory that is at once a revelation and a veil of that beyond them. He does not, like Shelley, disembody Nature; or, like Keats, adore the sensuous and external; or even, like Wordsworth, preach heavenly communion and austere renunciation. Nor does he versify devotion, like Christina Rossetti or Herbert. His whole being is aflame with love—the love of beauty, physical earthly beauty, beauty of sunlight and snowflake, beauty of trees and flowers and fruits, beauty of golden sounds and dying cadences. Yet he never rests in that beauty; it is never enough for him. He knows its elusive and unsatisfying character better than any cynic. "Far in the unapparent," he feels behind it all, inbreathing, uplifting, the ideal, the eternal. It is his own, this feeling, he has learnt it bitterly, and knows that "all is vanity," except that name which is above every name. This is what gives so poignant an appeal to 'The Hound of Heaven.' In that incomparable poem are expressed once for all the experiences of what, in religious language, used to be called a "converted soul"; and its value is their reality. It is no analysis of profligacy by some pulpiter, complacent and patronizing, telling people what they ought to feel, and how they may be helped, if only they will take his advice. It is the vital utterance of a soul whose very gift of love has seduced it from the "first and only fair"; the cry of the passion-torn worshipper of beauty, who passes through an inferno of varied disillusionment before he turns to revere the source of it all. The poem is not merely splendid and sonorous, profound and religious. It is "the general confession" of all those who have sinned rather by excess of passion than defect of love; the cry of all who have adored greatly and wrongly, when at last to them, too,

God makes Himself an awful rose of dawn.

In proof we quote the first and last strophe.

However well known the lines are, they bear repeating:—

I fled Him, down the nights and down the days;
I fled Him, down the arches of the years;
I fled Him, down the labyrinthine ways
Of my own mind; and in the mist of tears
I hid from Him, and under running laughter.
Up vistaed hopes I sped;
And shot, precipitated
Adown Titanic glooms of chasmed fears,
From those strong Feet that followed, followed after.

But with unhurrying chase,
And unperturbed pace,
Deliberate speed, majestic instancy,
They beat—and a Voice beat
More instant than the Feet—
"All things betray thee, who betrayest Me.

Now of that long pursuit
Comes on at hand the bruit;
That Voice is round me like a bursting sea:
"And is thy earth so marred,
Shattered in shard on shard?
Lo, all things fly thee, for thou fleest Me!
Strange, piteous, futile thing,
Wherefore, should any set thee love apart?
Seeing none but I makes much of naught" (He said),
"And human love needs human meriting:
How hast thou merited—
Of all man's clotted clay the dingiest clot?
Alack, thou knowest not
How little worthy of any love thou art!
Whom wilt thou find to love ignoble thee
Save Me, save only Me?
All which I took from thee I did but take,
Not for thy harms,
But just that thou might'st seek it in My arms.
All which thy child's mistake
Fancies as lost, I have stored for thee at home:
Rise, clasp My hand, and come!"

Halts by me that footfall:
Is my gloom, after all,
Shade of His hand, outstretched caressingly?
"Ah, fondest, blindest, weakest,
I am He Whom thou seekest!
Thou dravest love from thee, who dravest Me."

Surely nothing could be truer or more broadly human than this. Yet the lofty rhyme, intricate, subtle, gorgeous, is built with an elaborated skill not surpassed by any ode in the language. For even in Wordsworth's 'Intimations' there are some lines not exactly of inevitable quality. Coventry Patmore has nowhere the white heat of passion or the flaming images of Thompson.

What is meant by calling Thompson a mystical poet is best expressed by lines of his own, in which he describes his method:—

So I would win
In such a song as hath within
A smouldering core of mystery,
Brimmed with nimbler meanings up
Than hasty Gideons in their hands may sup.

Perhaps, however, this feeling becomes most articulate and self-conscious in the beautiful lines found after his death, 'In no Strange Land,' which it was our privilege first to give to the world.

It is this double aspect, this sense of the beyond, immanent in the actual, that is the very notion of a sacrament, and illumines all Thompson's pictures with the light "that never was on sea or land," redeeming them from what, to a superficial view, seems a merely decorative flamboyance, or an excess of elaborate verbal harmony. As he says of his songs in the 'Envoy,'

Tell them ye grieve, for your hearts know to-day;
Tell them ye smile, for your eyes know to-morrow.

With an eye for all that is gorgeous and ornate, with a sense of colour and splendour and sound to be satisfied rather in some pontifical ceremonial at St. Mark's or St. Peter's than in the gloomy mystery of Northern Gothic, Latin rather than Teutonic alike in religion, sympathy, and diction, Thompson never appears tasteless or cold, because he is never merely decorating an exterior. There is nothing rococo, nothing hollow or merely clever, in his art. Always sincere and profound, he is splendid in the true sense—splendid with accumulated treasures, with music and elaborate harmonies, with massive and noble forms—like the heavenly Jerusalem, with her foundations of jewels, her gates of pearl, and her light—not of earth. It is the splendour of burning love in both cases, not of loaded wealth, or the pride of power. Thompson can see the great in the little :—

All's vast that vastness means. Nay, I affirm
Nature is whole in her least things exprest,
Nor know we with what scope God builds the worm.
Our towns are copied fragments from our breast,
And all man's Babylons strive but to impart
The grandeurs of his Babylonian heart.

The sense of little things, the appealing tenderness of children, are present to him no less than the grand and sublime elements of being. He hears the "music of the spheres," it is true; but he hears it as much in the child's prattle or the sea-shell as in the thunder and the earthquake. His poems on children, rightly placed first in this selection, are not the least of his legacy. To our thinking, they are far wiser and deeper than the unrestrained rhapsodies of another well-known lover of the young.

Another virtue comes out, too, in these poems—simplicity. Alike in word and thought Thompson loves the arduous and elaborate, yet here at times he is as simple as Wordsworth at his best. For instance,—

Where 'mid the gorse the raspberry
Red for the gatherer springs,
Two children did we stray and talk
Wise, idle, childish things.

* * * * *

She went her unremembering way;
She went, and left in me
The pang of all the partings gone,
And partings yet to be.

Perhaps, however, the tenderest and most appealing of all these poems on children is that 'Ex Ore Infantium,' the opening of which we give :—

Little Jesus, wast Thou shy
Once, and just so small as I?
And what did it feel like to be
Out of Heaven, and just like me?
Didst Thou sometimes think of there,
And ask where all the angels were?
I should think that I would cry
For my house all made of sky;
I would look about the air,
And wonder where the angels were;
And at waking 'twould distress me—
Not an angel there to dress me!

Hadst Thou ever any toys,
Like us little girls and boys?
And didst Thou play in Heaven with all
The angels, that were not too tall,
With stars for marbles? Did the things
Play Can you see me? through their wings?

The introduction to this selection, which is due to Mr. Wilfrid Meynell, is reprinted with revisions from our own columns. This fact ought not, however, to prevent us from saying that he who, of all men, has the best right to speak on the life and work of the poet, has spoken with grace and ample knowledge, though the time will doubtless come to speak more clearly on some points. On what surpassing claims, that right rests is known only to a few. W. M. should rank with W. H. as one of the "onlie begetters" of great poetry.

NEW NOVELS.

Jim Mortimer. By Warren Bell. (A. & C. Black.)

A THEATRICAL kind of person is the young doctor whose melodramatic doings in a rough quarter of South London are recorded in this sentimental tale. In his encounters with the hooligans who openly proclaim their hatred of him, no less than in his courtship of the charming maiden who conceals her full affection for him, he appears to live in a flood of limelight. But the story, for all its exaggeration of incident and sentiment, has an engaging simplicity and pleasantness. It is redeemed by the brightness with which it is told. The scenes in the boarding-house in which the heroic doctor lives, and the irresponsible doings of the medical students who occasionally visit him, are described with a delightful touch of humour. Amid the melodrama and the sentimentality there is much that is human and real.

Handicapped. By Emery Pottle. (John Lane.)

THOUGH the scene of this novel is laid in America, there is nothing distinctively American about it. It possesses an elemental strength to which local colour would add very little. Don O'Hara, the handsome, brave, wayward son of a vulgar horsedealer, who struggles, under the influence of his finer impulses, to break "his birth's invidious bar," is a vivid and interesting figure. All the characters, including two well-contrasted women who touch Don's life most intimately, have the quality of life. The story is one of passion, but never degenerates into sentimentality; it is swift in movement, but never sinks into melodrama.

The Miracle. By Antrim Oriel. (Constable & Co.)

APART from its dedication "to the Young Turks" as "workers of a modern miracle," this book is strongly anti-Turkish. The author, having gratuitously killed Abdul Hamid II., imagines a war between Bulgaria and Turkey, with Great Britain supporting the former. Bulgaria is victorious, with the result that at a conference of the Powers Turkey is shorn of all her European provinces except the wilayet of Constantinople. The knowledge incidentally displayed of the various factors in the late political situation in the Balkans is wide, but superficial. The sectarian hatred of Greeks for Bulgarians, chief among the causes of Macedonian disturbance, is barely mentioned, and its origin not so much as hinted. In the chapter on Pan-Islamism the reader is led to suppose that this movement sprang entirely from German intrigue, which is by no means the case. The author's manifest enthusiasm for the Bulgars and their national ideals we do not share. But as an attempt at political prophecy on the line of known tendencies, the book would have been interesting if put forward as an extravaganza and published before the recent Turkish revolution changed the aspect of affairs. As a novel, it is not a success. The characters are doll-like and insipid, the dialogue poor. Some of the political disquisitions are good, but they are now, through no fault of the author's, vieux jeu.

Ciel rouge. By Claude Ferval. (Paris, Charpentier.)

JUST before the annual rush of Christmas books caused overwork in bookshops and the usual lock-out in French literature, there had not appeared abroad many new novels worthy of notice. As we have remarked in previous winters, the best and also the best-paid (far from the same thing) among French novelists have taken to writing for the stage. Memoirs are issued in abundance, but works of pure imagination, written for the great theatres, attract more notice than do novels of the kind current twenty years ago, or than short stories. Those who need such pabulum seem to prefer the ultra-Parisian disconnected sketches provided for them by the contributors to La Vie Parisienne, Willy, and others yet more "shoking."

Among recent volumes that have been talked about, two are studies of peasant or sailor life written in local dialects, trying to the foreigner. The better of these is L'Amour guette, by the author of 'Amitié amoureuse,' said to be Madame Lecomte de Nouy. From the pen of M. Abel Hermant has come the "succès de scandale" of the present Paris season, Trains de Luxe, in which figure the Spanish, Roumanian, and Venezuelan reigning rastaquouères. The storm had its origin in the clever illustrations which place before the reader the portraits of the German Ambassador (Prince Radolin), the Infanta Eulalie, the Duc de Morny—also "le Petit Duc" of Willy's latest book—and, above all, M. de Morny's father-in-law, the predecessor of ex-President Castro among the "Liberators" of Venezuela. It is curious to note that the adventures of this ex-dictator, placed by M. Abel Hermant in 1908, are in most particulars precisely those of the latest Venezuelan ex-President, Castro, as they have been revealed by the press since 'Trains de Luxe' appeared.

The only other volume which needs reference is a story said to be from the pen of la Baronne de Pierrebouurg, the title of which we have selected to stand at the head of these paragraphs. The plot is not new. A stern, hard, even cruel husband; a wife of strong character; a conventional good child; a shadowy male friend of the lady, possessing all those admirable qualities which the husband lacks; and a pair of conventional mothers, are the personages. The lady preserves her dignity, but loses her reputation—no doubt unjustly, but not without contributory action on her own part. All this may be described as hackneyed, but the tragic force with which the story is told, from the moment of the inevitable duel, in which the interloper is killed by the husband's hand, makes the resultant book one well worth reading.

BOOKS ABOUT CHINA.

Ancient China Simplified. By Edward H. Parker. (Chapman & Hall.)—The origin of the Chinese race has long formed the subject of discussion among ethnologists. By some it has been considered that they are primarily related to the primitive races of India; and by others that they came into China from Mesopotamia. The late Prof. Terrien de la Couperie elaborated the theory favoured by the latter school, and brought forward many and cogent arguments in support of this view. He held that the absence of any elementary records of the early history of the people in China proved that the days of their national childhood were passed in other lands, and that their writing and culture show traces of Accadian civilization. There is much to be said for this theory; but Prof. Parker will have none of it, professing himself content to know that many centuries before Christ the Chinese were in occupation of parts of what is now North-Eastern China.

Prof. Parker considers that 842 B.C. is the beginning of the historical life of China, and he devotes many interesting chapters in his book to describing the state of the country during the several hundred years following that date. China at this time was composed of a number of States which were ruled independently, that is to say, so far as this was consistent with fealty to their sovereign lord. Several incidents in the career of Confucius, as narrated by Prof. Parker, illustrate the political condition of the States. One of the first offices held by Confucius was the governorship of a town, where his administration was so admirable that he was soon promoted to the rank of Chief Justice. His views on legal matters are instructive. He was a strong supporter of case-made law, and held that a judge should always declare the law and make "the punishment fit the crime,"

"instead of giving the people opportunities to test how far they could strain the literal terms of the law.....The ancients strove to save a prisoner's life; now we can only do our best to prove his guilt. However, he added, better let a guilty man go free than slay an innocent one."

Another saying of this matter-of-fact Chief Justice was that they who discuss by diplomacy should always have the support of a military backing. The late Dowager Empress of China was a strong supporter of this view, and owed more to Yuan Shikai's many battalions than the righteousness of her cause. An illustration of its application was also furnished in Confucius's career. An occasion arose when it became necessary to make a treaty between the States of Lu and Ts'i:—

"A couple of generals accompanied the party to the trysting place.....wine was offered, and the usual rites were being fulfilled when suddenly a Ts'i officer advanced rapidly and said, 'I now propose to introduce some foreign musicians,' a band of whom at once entered the arena with brandished weapons, waving feathers, and noisy yells. Confucius saw through this sinister manoeuvre at once, and, hastily mounting the dais, expostulated in the plainest terms. The Ruler of Ts'i was so ashamed of his position that he at once sent the dancers away. But a second group of mountebanks were promptly introduced in spite of this check. Confucius was so angry that he demanded their instant execution under the law providing the punishment of death to those who should excite animosity between princes. Heads and legs soon covered the ground; and Confucius played his other cards so well that he secured, in the sequel, a formal treaty, actually surrendering to Lu certain territories that had unlawfully been held by Ts'i."

When fifty-six years of age Confucius exchanged his office of Minister of Justice for that of First Counsellor; and under his administration the people prospered so, that complete order was restored, thieves disappeared, "and sucking pigs and lambs were sold for honest prices." So enviable was the condition of the State under his rule that the Marquis of Ts'i, fearing lest his subjects should desire to enter so excellent a jurisdiction, sent the ruler of Lu a present of "eighty of the most beautiful women Ts'i could produce, besides thirty four-horse chariots of the most magnificent description." The Marquis of Lu fell into the trap; business was neglected; and Confucius's advice was thrown on one side. Disappointed with the conduct of his prince, Confucius threw up his office and left the principality.

After many wanderings he reached the State of Wei, where his fame had preceded him, and where he was asked by one of the rulers' wives to visit her. This he did, exercising every precaution against gossip. This was bad enough; but the same lady subsequently invited him to drive with her, and started on the expedition with a eunuch seated by her side, and Confucius in an inferior chariot in the rear. This was more than he could endure, and he took his leave of the lady and the Court.

Such are a few indications of the state of society at the time of which Prof. Parker writes. It was a lawless time, when might was right, and when a few enlightened statesmen began to foresee a peaceful solution of difficulties by the consolidation of the empire.

The Far East Revisited. By A. Gorton Angier. (Witherby & Co.)—One of the most noteworthy features of the modern history of the world is the change which has come over the leading empires of the Far East within the last few decades. We have been accustomed to look with astonished amazement at the rapid conversion of Japan from a feudal and anti-foreign State to a leading Power in the world. An almost similar boulevercement has taken place in Korea, which has been led to change her political system and welcome foreigners to her shores. Siam also, which, until lately, maintained its character as a typical Oriental State, has now entered the comity of nations; and last of all, China is bracing herself up to face the problems which recent events are forcing on her attention. The Chinese and Japanese and the Russo-Japanese wars have been revelations to the Chinese, who were accustomed to regard with contempt the Wojên, or dwarfs, as they were in the habit of calling the Japanese; and they were forced to inquire into the secret of such startling success. The answer came speedily and without hesitation. Unless they reformed their methods—political, social, and commercial—their doom was cast. A large party in the Empire straightway advocated reforms in all directions of State. A constitution was to be granted to the Empire; the lore of Confucius and Mencius was exchanged for the learning of Europe; colleges and schools were opened in every large city in the Empire; and factories were founded for the manufacture not only of warlike materials, but also of articles of commerce. These changes were introduced on all sides.

Hongkong, which sixty years ago was little more than a barren rock which formed the home of a few native fishermen, is now one of the largest ports in the world. Three hundred steam launches ply on the waters of the harbour, which are overlooked by terraces of large and commodious houses which line the hill.

"The banks, the new blocks of offices on the reclaimed Praya ground, the new law courts and post office, and the dwelling-houses may with justice be described as palatial."

That reforms so marked should have occurred at Hongkong is not surprising, as it had been the great port for the transshipment of goods for the China coast, and has been in the hands of Englishmen during its lifetime as a colony. But with Canton things are different. There, in a purely native city under the influence of native traditions, the "new learning" is making pronounced headway, and accommodation is being found by the conversion of temples and other public buildings into school-houses.

"The most conspicuous is the normal college now under construction on the site of the old Examination Hall. The long rows, with their hundreds of cubicles, have entirely disappeared, and in their place three blocks of buildings are being erected. In the rear is a three-story building that will provide accommodation for some hundreds of the students that will attend the college. Primary and secondary school buildings are also contemplated, as well as a hospital and medical school. The whole scheme is intended as an example that may be copied elsewhere."

Five post offices, managed on the European system, are to be met with in the city, and from these, it may be noted, letters can be sent to any part of the Chinese Empire for one halfpenny; while the streets have police distinguished from their fellows by neat and serviceable uniforms.

In many respects Canton is typical of the cities of Southern China: its streets are narrow, indicating the impossibility of vehicular traffic, and its buildings, until lately, were modelled on the strictest native patterns. The inhabitants are an independent people, and have a rough-and-ready way of making their wants known, as was recently shown on the appearance of the Imperial edict prohibiting opium smoking, when, with flags flying and banners waving, crowds marched through the city proclaiming their approval of the order.

What Canton is to the South of China Peking is to the North. Its streets are wide, but until lately were a disgrace to Chinese civilization. Now, however, the roads, especially those in the neighbourhood of the Legations, are well macadamized. The indecencies which used to be prominent have also disappeared, and the hawkers who were accustomed to frequent the streets have been relegated to the by-lanes. But the most noticeable innovation is the substitution of jinrickshas and European carriages for the sedan chairs and carts. New official buildings are also taking the forms of European models. But the greatest change which has come over China, northern and southern, is the institution of railways. Until recently the "iron horse" was abhorred by the Chinese; now lines of railway cannot be too quickly constructed for their taste. Already 4,079 miles of railway have been laid, and half as many more are in course of construction.

On this and numerous other topics of interest Mr. Angier enlarges, and his well-known knowledge of Far Eastern matters makes his comments important and trustworthy.

Things seen in China. By J. R. Chitty. (Seeley & Co.)—There was a time when any statement, however outrageous, concerning China found credence with the British public; but we have now advanced many stages beyond this. Careful observers have given us the results of their investigations, and numberless books have been written which contain accurate and well-authenticated facts. There is little excuse, therefore, for the appearance of the present work, since the information which it contains appears to be eminently commonplace. We exclude from this remark the photographs with which the volume is adorned, and which are excellent.

One of the first things which strike a traveller when landing on a foreign shore is the language spoken by the people. On this subject we read:—

"Seven different languages, including Kuanhua, or Mandarin, but not counting subdivisions of dialect, are spoken in China; each is as distinct from another as the English and German."

As a matter of fact, one language, and one only, is spoken by the Chinese of the eighteen provinces, and to these the author refers, as the context shows. That there are seven or seventy times seven dialects spoken in China no one who has visited the country will be disposed to deny. But that there is more than one language no one who knows anything of the subject will for a moment contest. Although the dialects differ materially, so as to make a Peking man unintelligible in the streets of Canton, the written language is the same all over the Empire, and is understood by all educated persons.

We notice a further statement on the subject. "There are," we read, "three written languages, all of them different from the seven spoken tongues and from each other." This again seems misleading. That there are three or more literary styles is known to all men. These differ considerably in construction and in the use of words. But the words are all Chinese, and the sentences differ only by verbiage and construction.

On p. 25 we are told that "a first-class mandarin is nearly always related to the Emperor." This is not so. Apart from the misstatement of fact, there is so strong a feeling against the official employment of relations that the fact of being of the same kindred as the Emperor would probably militate against appointment among the first-class mandarins in the provinces.

The remarks about the army include the following. "The fourth class [of mandarins]," we read, "is mainly distinguished military officers, the soldier not being accounted a very admirable person." Then a story is told which illustrates this contention:—

"A Chinese lady, on calling upon a European lady, had been interested in all the arrangements of a European ménage, and had inspected everything with an eagerness and appreciation distinctly complimentary, until it occurred to her.....to ask to see a picture of her honourable hostess's exalted and illustrious father. The production of a military portrait obviously overcame the visitor to the point of embarrassed stupefaction, and making some Chinese excuse, she executed a speedy retreat. The explanation lay in the fact....that respectable Chinese families do not, or until quite recently did not, allow any of the members to enter the army, the profession of arms being disgraceful; hence the little lady, confronted by a soldier's daughter, was immediately seized with grave doubts as to the society in which she found herself."

It is true that the peaceably-minded Chinese regard the military profession with comparative contempt, on the lofty principle that "right" should not require "might" to enforce it; but at the same time it is probable that the Chinese lady had some other reason for her hasty retirement, as above described, than suspicion of the contaminating influences of her hostess's connexion with the soldier's calling.

Comprehensive Geography of the Chinese Empire. By L. Richard. Translated by M. Kennelly. (Luzac & Co.)—This title is too modest, and fails to represent the nature of the contents of the work before us. Far from being only a geography of the Empire, it is an encyclopædia of knowledge on all matters geographical, historical, ethnographical, statistical, and commercial relating to China. It was originally published in French in 1905; but so great was the demand, as we are told in the Preface, for an English edition that Mr. Kennelly at once set to work to supply the present volume.

For the sake of convenience the Chinese Empire is considered in three divisions, viz., the valley of the Yellow River, the valley of the Yang-tsze Kiang, and the valley of the Si-kiang. Elaborate details relating to each division are given. The idea of change seems foreign to the Chinese nature; yet the present work brings out the great and fundamental reforms which are now being introduced into China. For instance, we know that for many centuries the six boards at Peking have administered the affairs of the Empire. These six have now become ten; and the original authorities have been so remodelled that they are scarcely recognizable. Some of the strangest institutions, however, remain unchanged. For example, the court of censors still perform their duties. It is incumbent on these censors, who number sixty-six in all, that they should "animadvert on the conduct even of the Emperor himself for any act which they consider unjust, illegal, or extravagant, and they do so at times with boldness and courage, though they occasionally get degraded for their unpalatable advice."

Thus, as has been said, the Emperor and the mandarins live in the presence of a chronic day of judgment.

The administration of the provinces is undergoing many modifications, which are duly chronicled in the present work. The incorporation of Manchuria within the more intimate boundaries of China Proper has added three provinces to the Empire, a process which is likely to be extended to Tibet in the near future. Each of these provinces is ruled by either a viceroy or a governor. Subordinate to these higher officials is a whole hierarchy of office-bearers, from the literary Chancellor down to the village Elder, whose existence illustrates the democratic basis on which Chinese society is arranged. These Elders are elected to their offices by the inhabitants of the districts concerned,

"on account of their ability, their literary degrees, and their family influence. These acquire at times such authority that they must be practically considered as the sole rulers of the locality."

Their decisions are rarely appealed against, as the people are only too glad to keep out of the clutches of the mandarins. Another change which is in progress, and of which Mr. Kennelly takes notice, is the result of the recent edict prohibiting the manufacture of native opium. Mr. Kennelly tells us that the normal amount of the native-grown opium was 400,000 chests per annum. If the Chinese Government is in earnest in this matter, this figure will undergo great and regular diminution, and pari passu the amounts imported from India will grow less. By latest accounts, in some parts of the country the edicts have been taken to heart by the farmers, while in other provinces no change has been made in the amount produced.

In all statistical matters the present work is a mine of information; but owing to the inherent want of accuracy of Chinese State accounts, little reliance can be placed on the figures quoted; and so when we are told that the expenditure of the Empire for 1901 amounted to a hundred and one million taels we can only accept the figure as an approximate estimate. It is not until we come to the Chinese maritime customs ruled over by Sir Robert Hart that we are on solid ground; and we can recommend the paragraphs relating to this and the newly established Postal Service as examples of what can be done in China by able and honest administration.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

In Napoleon and his Fellow Travellers, edited by Mr. Clement Shorter (Cassell & Co.), we have an attempt to whip up sentiment respecting Napoleon's detention by Great Britain and his exile at St. Helena. The volume consists of memoirs or letters by George Home, Capt. Ross (of H.M.S. Northumberland), the Hon. W. H. Lyttelton, and William Warden. By far the longest of these is the account contained in the letters of William Warden, which comprise pp. 133-284 of this work. Napoleon's opinion about Warden's book was as follows: "The foundation of it is true; but in it are a hundred absurdities and a hundred lies." Gourgaud's condemnation of it was still more emphatic; and nothing said by Mr. Shorter in its defence will convince us that it was not founded mainly on gossip. Mr. Shorter's reference to Napoleon's criticism of Warden's book is not quite ingenuous. He says (p. 112): "It was admitted by the Emperor and his friends to contain many inaccuracies." The Emperor's words were those quoted above.

If Mr. Shorter had given us a really critical study of these narratives, his book might have been welcomed; but his footnotes are in the main biographical notices of the persons named in the text. Here and there he adds a few trifling corrections, but they are, as a rule, on trivial personal matters. He also adds a few extracts from Warden's unpublished 'Diary,' which, it seems (p. 164, note), "is less generally favourable to the exiles than the letters." The uncharitably disposed will perhaps be led to see here a reason why only a few extracts are given from the unpublished 'Diary,' while the well-known 'Letters' are reprinted in full.

Mr. Shorter will have only himself to thank if such an impression is produced, for his Introduction bears marks of partisanship and does not impress us with his knowledge of the Napoleonic age. He asserts that much of the waste of life of that time occurred "because England intervened in quarrels that were not her own—quarrels to which all the best minds of that age were opposed." Wordsworth's opinion of Napoleon is dismissed as that of "a renegade"; and it is clear that Mr. Shorter considers the chief requisite in thinkers and historians who deal with that epoch to be admiration of Napoleon. He himself evidently believes that the history of that time can best be gathered from the St. Helena literature, which students, who look for facts, know to be full of misstatements. The most valuable of the narratives in this volume is that of the Hon. W. H. Lyttelton. It describes his interview with Bonaparte on board the Northumberland. Especially noteworthy is the frankness with which Lyttelton reminded the ex-Emperor that the engagements made to him at Rochefort had not in any way been violated. And when the illustrious exile remarked that he desired only to live privately in England, and that his career was terminated, Lyttelton observed that he had used the same words a year ago at Elba. There was the crux of the problem in July, 1815; and nearly everybody but Mr. Shorter now sees that, after the unfortunate Elba experiment, the treatment of Napoleon was necessarily somewhat strict. The narrative of George Home, to which Mr. Shorter seems to attach some importance, is admitted by the writer himself to be "hare-brained." It gives acrid and belated expression to the feelings of an embittered man, and lacks every element of credibility.

Chaucer and his England. By G. G. Coulton. (Methuen.)—We do not know any book from which the ordinary reader would be likely to get a better idea of the England of the end of the fourteenth century than from the volume before us. Not that the author gives us a perfect picture of it—that is beyond the power of any one but such another as Shakespeare; even Chaucer himself leaves out of sight whole fields of mental and spiritual activity; but taking into account Mr. Coulton's well-known personal view of mediæval life, and allowing for it as a useful corrective of much indiscriminate laudation, a student will be able to form a fairly correct judgment. It is, perhaps, unfortunate that William Morris is selected as a "laudator temporis acti" to an extent that would mislead persons unacquainted with his work. As some writers see in the Middle Ages the "age of faith," and are so far justified that many shining examples of whole-hearted surrender can be pointed to in any portion of the period, so he saw in it a time when great art was produced of a kind to which he was particularly sensitive, and in the men of the time the public necessary for the production of that art. He was never blind to the faults and defects of their life, or to the fact that he, in common with the "unemployable," was the heir of the ages, even though he failed to see that many of our contrivances for escaping those defects were any better than the faults themselves. No passage from his works can be interpreted as a desire to see those times back again, or as a wish that he could have lived in them, to any greater extent than the desire we all feel to see for a moment Athens at its prime, Paris when its University was at its best, or any other acme of dead civilizations.

It is hardly possible within the limits of our space to particularize all the good points of this book, and at the same time to indicate a few minor matters in which improvement is possible; and therefore we desire to reiterate our expression of opinion as to its merits. Mr. Coulton takes a sane and reasoned view of the whole life of the time, and we should like especially to commend his chapters on love of all kinds, which looms largely in Chaucer's work. English people at present have so fallen into the habit of reading exclusively romances, many of them excellent, dealing with love, that they are in need of a strong dose of common sense on the subject. The fact is recognized in most civilized nations that the heroic love of romances is, fortunately for all concerned, a rare occurrence, with symptoms which are recognized as those of a form of insanity. Mr. Coulton does not say all this, of course, but our fathers knew it and acted on it.

We have noted some few points to which we should like to call his attention, and first, we disagree with his scheme of the order of the 'Tales.' Of all the schemes provisionally drawn up by or for Chaucer, the one adopted appears to us least likely to have been used by him. It would have been far better to adopt any of the MS. orders, even that of the Ellesmere, and to recognize the fact that some difficulties are insuperable because the work was not finished. The orders for impressment of workmen were common things up to the Stuart times, as may be seen from any volume of the Close Roll Calendars, and still survive, it is believed, in the power of impressing seamen for service in war. We are not aware of any authority for the idea that conferring knighthood on children freed them from wardship in case of the death of their father before they came of age. 'Jehan de Saintré' is no more a typical mediæval romance than 'Ivanhoe,' and should be quoted as an illustration of manners with reserve. The meaning of "queke" is given in the 'Oxford English Dictionary'—it is not a form of hopscotch. Let us note, in view of some of his recent strictures, that Mr. Coulton quotes from Deschamps and other early French writers at second-hand. The book is well illustrated, and in every way most desirable as an account of mediæval England.

GENERAL ZURLINDEN, although retired from service in the French army, of which he was at one time a principal general, being at another Minister of War, is active in his military researches, and has in recent years carried on controversy as to Fontenoy and the Waterloo campaign. He now publishes through M. Lavauzelle of Paris Anglais et Français in three parts, of which the first has for sub-title Les Anglais au Combat. The remainder of the book is again occupied with the story of the battle of Fontenoy, and that of the movements of Grouchy and of the Prussians between the 16th and the 18th of June, 1815, inclusive. When General Zurlinden writes of the Prussian army the reader who is acquainted with that officer's own military life is reminded of Zurlinden's close resemblance to the typical officer of the Prussian guards—a likeness that allowed him to escape from imprisonment in 1870, for he had carefully abstained from allowing himself to be put on parole. Speaking, not the German of his own Alsace, but the German of a Prussian gentleman, our author found no difficulty in making his way from East Prussia to the Loire. In 'Les Anglais au Combat' General Zurlinden flatters us by omitting every battle in which our officers and men fell below the highest standard. Beginning with Senlac, Crecy, Poitiers, and Agincourt, he comes quickly to the Peninsula and Napier's history. While dwelling on Napier's description of the respect for one another shown by the English and French in Spain, General Zurlinden rejects the historian's less favourable view of Wellington's character for the courteous treatment of Houssaye. We, of course, are aware that, while Madame de Dino's kindly estimate of the Duke is just, his men never knew the side which the Duke presented to society and the diplomatic world. In the Peninsula Wellington was generally regarded as a hard, cold, contemptuous martinet; and there are undoubted blemishes on his character passed over in silence by General Zurlinden. We recognize his friendliness to the present happy "accord des deux peuples" as Paradin styled the three alliances in the time of Francis I. Nearly three centuries later the King of the French popularized the rival phrase "entente cordiale," and now nightly appears on a popular stage in Paris with Queen Victoria to celebrate such relations.

MR. ALFRED NOYES writes with curious disrespect about the prose in Scott's Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border (Andrew Melrose). When people disputed about the authorship of the early Waverley Novels, some one asked, "Have they forgotten the prose of the 'Minstrelsy'?" It contains a mass of erudition in romance, legend, history, and folk-lore that no man can afford to despise or neglect; that is interesting, in many places, even to very young readers; and that has turned some into the paths of study which Scott opened. Nevertheless, the ballads themselves are the thing, and Mr. Noyes's appreciative preface might have been modified if he had known more about them, or had cared to say what he perhaps knows. If 'Kinmont Willie' is "gloriously strong," it can scarcely be denied that Child was right in claiming its best verses for Scott himself. Mr. Noyes really seems to be unaware that "Barthram's Dirge" is a supercherie by Surtees of Mainsforth, who palmed it off on his unsuspecting fellow-antiquary. He solemnly states that "the words in brackets are only conjectural," whereas they were part of the apparatus of artistic forgery. Mr. Noyes prints only a selection, omitting, for example, 'Jamie Telfer,' and arranges the ballads in his own way, without any but a few glossarial notes. His artist represents "the Gordons good" as Highlanders with kilts and targets! The one merit of the book is the presentation of many of the best ballads (some of the worst being also included), and some songs, in a handy and convenient form. It hardly is what its title proclaims it, "The Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border, collected by Sir Walter Scott," but it contains a good deal of that minstrelsy.

THE BOOK SALES OF 1908.

II.

THE modern portion of the library of the late Dr. Gott, Bishop of Truro, was, as already stated, sold on February 26th, and it was not until March 20th that the more important books, which had been catalogued for private sale by Messrs. Sotheran & Co. under the title of "Bibliotheca Pretiosa," came to the hammer in Wellington Street. If one compares Messrs. Sotheran's catalogue with that of the public sale, as reported virtually in full in 'Book-Prices Current,' it is plain that a considerable number of exceedingly interesting and valuable books were sold privately, including, with one exception, all the Shakespearean quartos; the presentation copy of the 'Workes' of Ben Jonson, 1616, on large paper, with inscription in the author's hand; and the "Indulgence" printed by Caxton in 1481, found with a similar rescript within the binding of 'The Ryal Book' once belonging to the Bedford Library, as recorded in the sixteenth volume of 'Book-Prices Current,' p. 282. Sufficient, however, remained to distinguish Dr. Gott's library as by far the most important disposed of during the year, the Amherst Library not being taken into consideration, for reasons already stated. The first four Shakespearean folios were bought in at 3,850l., as previously mentioned, and the surviving quarto, 'The Merchant of Venice,' J. Roberts, 1600, sold for 290*l.* (morocco extra). Among many interesting manuscripts may be mentioned a York Missal on vellum, said to be the earliest known, 260*l.*; a Breviarium Romanum of the fifteenth century, on vellum, 195*l.*; a Latin Bible of the thirteenth-fourteenth centuries, on vellum, 135*l.*; and the 'Catalogue des Tableaux de M. de Julienne,' on 137 leaves of paper with 147 drawings by Watteau, 140*l.* (old French morocco). Among the many valuable books the following were of exceptional interest: a perfect copy of Caxton's 'Golden Legende,' 1483, folio, 1,300*l.* (morocco); the 'Biblia Pauperum,' ante 1450, a block-book supposed to be by Roger of Bruges, 1,290*l.* (modern morocco, three leaves missing); a unique copy of the Breviarium Eboracense (Pars Hyemalis), printed by Regnault of Paris in 1533, 32mo, 355*l.* (original calf); 'Paradise Lost,' 1667, with the first title according to Lowndes and the second according to Prof. Masson, 192*l.* (morocco); another copy of the same, once belonging to J. P. Kemble, 155*l.* (Lowndes's second title); a copy (imperfect, as usual) of the first edition of the Bible in English, printed by Jacob van Meteren at Antwerp in 1535, folio, 175*l.* (morocco extra); the Prayer Book of Edward VI., R. Grafton, 1550, small 4to, 158*l.* (vellum, title defective); the same Prayer Book printed by Whitchurch in 1549, 105*l.* (morocco extra), and again in 1552 ((third issue), 124*l.* (old calf, title mended); 'Robinson Crusoe,' the three parts, 3 vols., 8vo, 1719-20, 145*l.* (calf extra); and The Original London Post, Nos. 125 to 289 (No. 257 in facsimile), in which the novel originally appeared, 115*l.* This, I believe, affords the first instance of a story being published in serial form in a newspaper, at any rate in this country. The first and second parts of Painter's 'Palace of Pleasure,' in 2 vols., 1566-7, small 4to, realized 140*l.* (calf antique, imperfect); and it is worthy of note that on July 13th what seems to have been the same copy, then described as being on large paper and probably unique, sold for 56*l.* Many other valuable books changed hands at the Gott Sale; in fact, to deal with it in its entirety would necessitate far more space than is available.

On March 18th Messrs. Chesterton & Sons sold a number of interesting books, among them a memorial volume containing a sketch of the life of Cowper, two poems by him in pamphlet form, and many original water-colour drawings, portraits, and autograph letters, all inlaid in a 4to volume. This realized 65*l.*, an extra-illustrated copy of Faulkner's 'History of Kensington,' 1820, bringing 60*l.*; Byron's 'Childe Harold,' printed on one side of the paper, and inlaid with hundreds of proof portraits and autograph letters of the poet and other celebrities, 80*l.*; and an early sixteenth-century MS. Book of Hours, on vellum, presented to Pope Leo X. by Philippe de Gueldres, Queen of Sicily, in 1520, 170*l.* (velvet with silver clasps).

On March 25th and 26th Messrs. Sotheby dispersed the library of the late Mr. John Morgan of Rubislaw House, Aberdeen. This was an excellently assorted collection, noticeable for the large number of books from modern presses and editions of the 'Rubáiyát' (beginning with the third of 1872), none of which, however, fetched more than small sums. A few days later, also at Sotheby's, the original Kilmarnock edition of Burns's 'Poems' realized 210*l.* (calf, one leaf stained), the only copy sold during the year.

From this date to the end of April very little is noticeable, except the 'Cosas de España,' an original poem, bound up in a folio volume with 48 water-colour drawings by Marcus Stone, and four autograph letters from the artist, 45*l.* (morocco extra); and a number of important books sold by Messrs. Hodgson on the 28th. These included a collection of works by Dickens, comprising 52 lots, 130*l.* (morocco, top edges gilt); Keats's 'Endymion,' 1818, 33*l.* 10*s.* (original boards, with label); Chaloner Smith's 'British Mezzotinto Portraits,' 4 vols., 1884, 26*l.* 10*s.* (cloth); Mr. Swinburne's 'The Queen-Mother: Rosamond,' Pickering's first edition of 1860, with the label misprinted "A. G. Swinburne," 32*l.* (original cloth); and 'Poems by Two Brothers,' 1827, 27*l.* 10*s.* (original boards, with the label).

The miscellaneous collection of books sold at Sotheby's on May 11th and two following days was important, as also were the library of the late Mr. W. Jerdone Braikenridge and other properties sold by the same firm on the 18th and three following days. Many of the books in the former sale were from the Beckford Library, the most noticeable among these being the 'Gentleman's Academie,' as altered from the 'Book of St. Albans' by Gervase Markham, 1595, 19*l.* (morocco extra); George Fox's 'Battle-dore for Teachers,' 1660, folio, 5*l.*; Franchiere's 'La Fauconnerie,' 1585, 4to, 12*l.* 10*s.* (morocco extra); Fuchs's 'De Historia Stirpium,' 1542, folio, 43*l.* (old oak boards); and Randle Holme's 'Academy of Armory,' 1688, folio, 10*l.* 15*s.* (original calf). A few days later the scarce first edition of the 'Dyalogue betwyxt a Doctoure of Divynitie and a Student in the Laws of England,' known in legal circles to this day as 'The Doctor and Student,' two parts, n.d. and 1530, 8vo, realized 50*l.* (original binding by Reynes); Alken's 'National Sports,' with 50 large coloured plates, 1821, folio, 43*l.* (old morocco); and Lord Lilford's 'Birds,' second edition, 7 vols., 1891-7, 51*l.* (morocco extra). Mr. Braikenridge's library contained a number of Americana, the most important being 'The Vain Prodigal Life and Tragical Death of Thomas Helliier,' 1680, 4to, 12*l.* 10*s.* (half-calf), and Joutel's 'Last Voyage to the Mississippi,' 1714, 8vo, 10*l.* 5*s.* (old calf). On May 26th Messrs. Puttick & Simpson sold for 50*l.* the lithograph copy of Wagner's MS. score of 'Tannhäuser' (conductor's copy), on 450 pages, folio, with the autograph of the composer on the final page. This was the property of the executors of Sir Augustus Harris, who purchased it some years ago for 200*l.*

We now come to the sale of the first portion of the library of the late Mr. E. J. Stanley of Bridgwater, begun by Messrs. Sotheby on May 26th, and continued on June 22nd and July 16th. It is convenient to consider the library as a whole; it had evidently been formed with great care, and certainly with consummate judgment, regard being had to utility rather than rarity, except, indeed, in the matter of bindings. There is consequently little to chronicle so far as high prices are concerned. Vitre's Latin Bible of 1652, bound by Boyet in 10 vols., 12mo, brought 86*l.* (morocco); the 'Religions of the Order of S. Benet,' by A. C. and T. V., 1663, small 8vo, 40*l.* (morocco, arms of Catherine of Braganza); Le Sieur de la Cuisse's 'Le Répertoire des Bals,' 4 vols., 1762, 15*l.* 10*s.* (contemporary morocco); the 'Chronicon' of Eusebius, 1518, 4to, 48*l.* (original leather, arms of Henry VIII. and Catherine of Aragon); the 'Proprium Sanctorum ad usum Cleri S. B. Vaticanæ, Partes Julii, Augusti, et Septembris,' Rome, 1773, 8vo, 40*l.* (morocco, arms of the Cardinal of York); the 'Nova Statuta' from 1 Edward III. to 12 Henry VII., printed by Pynson about 1497, folio, 61*l.* (morocco, Tudor roses and fleurs-de-lis, imperfect); and a series of Roxburghe Club publications comprising 160 vols., mostly in the original Club binding, beginning with No. 1, according to Lowndes, and carried on to the year 1906, 375*l.* Mr. Stanley's books covered a wide range of subjects, and constituted a general reference library of the highest value.

Glancing for a moment at the Hebrew Pentateuch of 1482, which with the Prophetæ Priores and the Prophetæ Posteriores, together 3 vols., folio, 1482-5, forms the first printed Bible of the Hebrew text, 120*l.* (morocco extra), we approach the miscellaneous sale of June 2nd and two following days, one of the most important held during the year. I referred in the previous article to the volume of plays originally in the possession of Charles I., and to the marriage covenant between Edward Phillips and Anne Milton, so that there is no occasion to do more than earmark them as belonging to this collection. Many other interesting entries are observable, as, for example, a copy of the earliest issue of the original edition of Quarles's 'Emblems,' 1635, 8vo, 34*l.* (original morocco); Vaughan's 'Silex Scintillans,' the first issue of the first edition, before the alterations were made in the poem of 'Isaac's Marriage,' 1650, 8vo, 30*l.* (original sheep); Sir William Barclay's 'The Lost Lady,' the first edition, of which but two other copies have been traced, 1638, folio, 40*l.* (calf); 'Gulliver's Travels,' first issue of the original edition, 2 vols., 1726-7, 52*l.* (morocco extra); and a number of "trial" copies of Tennyson's poems, e.g. 'Morte d'Arthur,' 1842, 20*l.*, and 'The Last Tournament,' 1871, 18*l.*, both in morocco super-extra. 'The Window,' 1867, 4to, with inscription "John Simeon from A. Tennyson," realized 49*l.*; Drayton's 'Poemes,' n.d. (1605), 30*l.* (morocco); Shelley's 'Queen Mab,' 1813, 25*l.* (half-calf); the Fourth Folio Shakespeare, 1685, the portrait and verses in facsimile and several minor defects, 36*l.* (morocco extra); the Second Folio, 1632, title repaired, 137*l.* (morocco extra); and another copy of the Fourth Folio, defective in parts, 52*l.* These prices were, however, for the most part exceeded in the case of other books, as, for example, George Scot's 'Model of the Government of East-New-Jersey,' 1685, 8vo, 120*l.* (original calf), and a series of five works by Milton, including the 'Poems,' 1645, and 'Lycidas,' 1638, 515*l.* (morocco uniform). It was at this sale also that the books from the library of Mrs. Piozzi appeared, among them 'Thraliana,' in 6 vols. 4to, which fetched the large sum of 2,050*l.*, as already mentioned.

During the last two months of the season an immense number of books were sold, those from the Hoskier Library being among the most important. These were catalogued as (a) Incunabula, arranged in chronological order of presses; (b) Works from the presses of Aldus Manutius and his successors, arranged in order of date; and (c) Miscellaneous Books. Among the Incunabula were three books from the press of Sweynheym & Pannartz—the 'Opera' of Lactantius, 1468, 62*l.*; Pliny's 'Historia Naturalis,' 1470, 50*l.*; and the 'Institutiones Oratoriæ' of Quintilian (c. 1470), 36*l.* It was in the final division, however, that the highest prices were obtained. A very fine collection of 186 volumes of the 'Almanach Royal,' nearly 100 of which had armorial bearings on the sides, brought 395*l.*; a Canevari binding, 28*l.*; a 'Pseultier,' Paris, 1586, folio, morocco, with the skull, fleur-de-lis, and royal arms of Henri III., 60*l.*; and the book generally quoted as 'Tewrdamckh,' 1517, folio, 140*l.* (old morocco). Mr. Hoskier had collected a large number of books from old and renowned libraries, and many of them were in fine and rare bindings, as, for instance, examples of Francis II. (the youthful husband of Marie Stuart), Henri II. and III., Louis XIII., XIV., XV., and XVI., Marie Antoinette, Madame Elizabeth, Madame de Pompadour, and other celebrities. It is a pity that this collection was dispersed instead of being sold en bloc, though the remark loses some of its force when it is remembered that the same might be said of virtually every library which excels the majority of its fellows.

Just before the close of the season a series of nine bindings bearing the device of the bear and ragged staff were sold for a total sum of 253*l*. The Earl of Leicester, it seems, affected Italian classics, all the books coming within that category. On July 13th presentation copies (no others known) of 'Purchas his Pilgrimage,' 3rd edition, 1617 and 'Hakluytus Posthumus,' Vols. I.-IV., 1625-6, sold for 250*l*. (original calf); and a good example of Smith's 'Generall Historie of Virginia,' 1624, wanting only the slip of Errata and the portrait of Matoaka, for 405*l*. (calf, arms of James I.). On the 22nd of the same month a presentation copy of Shelley's 'St. Irvyne,' 1811, with inscription and a note in the poet's handwriting inserted, fetched 200*l*.; and a little later 'The Vicar of Wakefield,' 2 vols., Salisbury, 1766, 88*l*. (original calf), and the 'Horæ' printed by Kerver at Paris in 1499, 49*l*. (old French morocco).

The sales which have taken place since October, when the new season opened, especially that of December 17th and 18th at Sotheby's, will be well in remembrance, as the most important have been referred to recently in The Athenæum. On the 29th and 30th of October Messrs. Puttick & Simpson sold a copy of the original edition of Shakespeare's 'Poems,' 1640, for 91*l*. (portrait backed, and line of inscription in facsimile); and Montaigne's 'Essayes,' 1603, for 65*l*. (original vellum). On November 3rd, at Sotheby's, 159*l*.—a record price—was given for a very fine copy of the 'Hypnerotomachia,' 1499, in old French morocco; 115*l*. for 'Paradise Lost,' 1667, with the second title-page according to Lowndes; and 90*l*. for the 'Speculum Humanæ Vitæ' of Rodericus, printed at Augsburg in 1479 (morocco extra, four leaves missing). Messrs. Hodgson's sale of November 4th and two following days was also interesting, the first issue of the first edition of 'Gulliver's Travels,' 1726-7, on large paper, realizing on that occasion 85*l*. (old calf, two maps wanting); and the complete set of the 430 original water-colour drawings to Naumann's 'Die Vögel von Mittel-Europa,' Dresden, 1896-1904, 250*l*. On the 26th and 27th of November the same firm sold the editio princeps of Homer, 2 vols., 1488, for £250 (old morocco); 32 volumes of Gould's "Ornithological Works" for 233*l*. 17*s*. 6*d*.; and a copy of 'King Glumpus' for 148*l*. A contemporary inscription on a fly-leaf of the last-named assigned the authorship to John Barrow, thus corroborating the article on the subject which appeared in The Athenæum of February 23rd, 1907.

In a short survey of the many book sales which take place during the course of a year it is not possible to do more than point to some of the principal features disclosed by the best of them, and even with this limitation it is a matter of some difficulty to keep the record within reasonable bounds. The ordinary reader, who usually has neither the time nor the inclination to analyze the sales as they occur, and who sees high prices quoted one after the other as a matter of course, as though they were rather usual than the reverse, is apt to think that the collection of books has at last become prohibitive to all but a very few by reason of the great expense which it is necessary to incur. This, however, is one of those errors which become recognized directly the facts surrounding them are investigated. As the collection of books is one of the oldest and most intellectual of those homely pursuits which are inspired by a love of accumulation, so also it is by far the cheapest, provided only that the fashionable and very expensive volumes commonly known as "pearls of great price" are relinquished to those who are able and willing to pay for them. When one of these is heralded in the press, we know that hundreds, and perhaps thousands, of other volumes, less noticeable by reason of their comparatively trifling cost, but none the less interesting and instructive for all that, have gone on their way unobserved.

J. HERBERT SLATER.

ROYAL BOOKS AND THE PUBLISHING SEASON.

WE have received the following, from a novelist who issued his first novel in 1870, in reference to the matter of the Queen's book and the publishing trade:—

Undoubtedly the criticisms on Mr. E. H. Cooper's statements by "a well-known member of the trade" are sound. The decadence of the novel trade is to be found in the decadence of the novel, and the necessities of the lending libraries. No one who has had anything to do with the reviewing of current productions during the past forty years can but be struck with the enormous number of novels now issuing from the press and their very low average merit. The incapable writer has existed during all time, but he has had his great chance only during the past fifteen years, because it is only during that period that the cost of printing has been reduced sufficiently to permit a profit to be made out of him. Twenty years ago the ordinary paper material for a novel cost sixpence. Now the light wood-pulp material, rough, uncalendered, and short-lived, can be got for one penny. Mechanical composition, spread over a two-thousand edition, costs only threepence a copy; and printed and bound the book can be circulated at a cost of sevenpence a copy. Every additional thousand costs but fivepence a copy. A sale of two hundred and fifty copies at six shillings will pay the bill, irrespective of art, common sense, or even grammar. Who can be surprised that the speculation is entered into by the self-confident author and the mushroom publisher? The speculation would be a dismal failure, however, were it not for the necessities of the lending libraries. These institutions, which fifty years ago encouraged reading among the middle classes who were unable, from lack of means, to provide themselves by purchase, are now oppressed by an obligation to furnish their two-guinea subscribers with three books a week, more or less. Inquiry among one's friends will show that the proper quantity of printed paper in indifferent binding is supplied, but not ten per cent of it is read. The books are sampled and thrown aside, to be replaced by others equally vapid. The better books, other than those by exceptionally well-established writers, are drowned in the flood, and the best of these will soon cease in their endeavours to float into publicity. The so-called six shillings of to-day corresponds with the three volume guinea-and-a-half of the seventies, and produces a much more disastrous effect upon the current novel. If publishers depended upon sales at lower rates, they would think twice before they speculated a hundred pounds on a production. The couple of dozen copies taken by a circulating library of each and all that is issued suffices to yield the publisher his outlay and a margin of profit; but it would not suffice to do this if the published price were reduced to two shillings or one shilling, as it might be if the book were really good.

So far as my experience goes—and it has been long, and not confined to the literary part of the trade—I am convinced that the defective book is the result of the ease with which a moderate profit may be made from material that would not be for a moment considered if the public taste and the purchasers among the million were alone the source of profit. A six-shilling book, with the libraries needing supplies, can show a profit on a thousand edition with certainty. If published at one shilling for the purchasing public, it would need an edition of ten thousand to give a reasonable return; and a publisher would think twice before taking that risk, because the reading public cannot be got at so easily as the buyers of half a dozen library companies. The gain to the reading public would be immense. Books would be fewer, but they would be better. Only the best would be produced, because only the best could be sold. The library companies would of course be able to buy their stock at less cost; but it is also probable that their subscribers would be fewer, and confined to those who used them for the opportunity they gave of reading the necessarily costly productions.

* * We do not intend to carry this discussion further at present.

THE SHAKESPEARE QUARTOS.

MR. LEE's letter with regard to Mr. W. W. Greg's second article 'On Certain False Dates in Shakespearian Quartos,' in the October number of The Library, has found its way into print when Mr. Greg happens to be out of England. As one of the editors of The Library, I may therefore be permitted to reply to it.

The letter, though very judicial in tone, contains some confusions of thought. Mr. Lee claims to have shown in an earlier letter on Mr. Greg's first article that "the evidence which Mr. Greg adduced was incapable of the positive interpretation which he placed on it." Mr. Lee's previous letter certainly did not prove this, and a later sentence in his present communication suggests that what he really means is that, owing to lack of time, he himself is incapable of investigating the evidence of the watermarks which is the main argument on which Mr. Greg's case rests. Mr. Lee is incorrect, however, in stating that "Mr. Greg now bases his case exclusively" on this, for in his October article Mr. Greg reiterates several other points which certainly create a strong presumption that all the plays found together in the volume which once belonged to Edwin Gwynn were printed at the same time. These points are the striking similarity of the nine title-pages as contrasted with those of other Shakespeare quartos; the fact that the large numerals employed in all of them, in printing the dates, are first found in 1610; and that the "Heb Ddieu" device has not yet been found in any book printed by James Roberts. Somewhat over generously, Mr. Greg spoke of these arguments as "lying at the mercy of any chance discovery in the future"—a criticism which applies to the second and third, but hardly to the first. Mr. Greg's critical attitude towards his own discovery has not prevented Mr. Lee from remarking that,

"in view of the inaccuracy which Mr. Greg now admits in the original presentation of his case, it would be manifestly rash for Shakespeare bibliographers to accept Mr. Greg's guidance in the matter, without ampler and clearer corroboration than is at present forthcoming."

There was no inaccuracy in Mr. Greg's original presentation of his case, and I feel entitled to protest strongly against the confused thinking by which Mr. Lee represents the quite accurate statement of facts, the relevance of which has since been modified by new evidence, as an inaccuracy on the part of Mr. Greg, and one making it rash for any one to accept his guidance. Mr. Greg's case now stands exactly where it stood when it sufficed to convince me that I was wrong in the interpretation which I had published as to the relations of these nine quartos. I take no pleasure in being convinced that I am wrong, but, unlike Mr. Lee, I found time to appreciate the "complicated argument" from watermarks, and there was no resisting it. It was foreseen, however, that the argument might be found complicated by busy people, and noticing the imperfections in the woodblock of the Half Eagle and Key, Mr. Greg and I agreed to search for instances of the use of this block subsequent to 1600, the date printed on the edition of the 'Midsummer Night's Dream' in which it occurs. If these imperfections were less in subsequent years than in 1600, this would offer—so it seemed—an easily appreciated proof that the date 1600 could not be right. Mr. Greg found an instance in 1605 in which the imperfections showed as distinctly less, and called this book as a witness. Subsequently, in tracing the history of the woodblock through the eighty years during which it continued in use, I myself found an instance of it, earlier than 1600, in which the imperfections were as conspicuous as in the 'Midsummer Night's Dream.' The fact had therefore to be faced, that while the evidence offered by breaks in a woodblock is trustworthy enough, no reliance can safely be placed in that from cracks, which may apparently vary according to the dryness of the block or the force used by the pressman. Mr. Greg very properly withdrew this one witness on the first opportunity, and Mr. Lee considers himself thereby entitled to make magisterial remarks on "the inaccuracy which Mr. Greg now admits in the original presentation of his case." I am not without hope that in a 'Study of the Early Bibliography of Shakespeare,' on which I am now engaged, I may be able to offer "the ampler and clearer corroboration" of Mr. Greg's case which Mr. Lee desiderates. For the present it may be enough to regard the dates which Mr. Greg has impugned as open to suspicion. Except for those who have to buy or sell the quartos in question, there is no great urgency in the matter; and even as regards this commercial aspect of the matter, it is as likely as not that the interest attaching to these editions will be found to have changed rather than diminished.

Meanwhile it is very important that all the available evidence should be examined, and in this matter, although Mr. Lee has not the leisure to investigate for himself the "complicated argument from watermarks," he may be able to give valuable help. In his little book on 'Four Quarto Editions of Plays by Shakespeare, the Property of the Trustees and Guardians of Shakespeare's Birthplace,' which appeared shortly before Mr. Greg's first article, Mr. Lee wrote:—

"It is worth the bibliographer's notice that the four Shakespearean quartos which are described in this pamphlet are sometimes met bound together with early quarto editions of five other plays in a plain brown calf cover dating from early in the seventeenth century"; and he proceeded to describe "the other contents of this old bound volume" as

"invariably 'Henry V.' (1608), 'Pericles' (1619), and 'The Whole Contention between the two famous Houses Lancaster and Yorke' (1619).....as well as two quarto plays from other pens which were wrongly assigned to Shakespeare in his lifetime, viz. 'Sir John Oldcastle' (1600), and 'A Yorkshire Tragedy' (1619)."

Personally I only know of one volume still to be found in "a plain brown calf cover dating from early in the seventeenth century" (and this is gilt on the back); but the words "sometimes" and "invariably" used by Mr. Lee entitle me to hope that his 'Census' operations have informed him of several others. As it would be of the greatest possible help both to Mr. Greg and myself to be allowed to examine these, I shall be deeply grateful to Mr. Lee if he will state where they are to be seen.

ALFRED W. POLLARD.

'POEMS BY TWO BROTHERS,' BY THE TENNYSONS.

THE second portion of the library of Mr. H. W. Poor of New York City, now in process of sale by the Anderson Auction Company, of 12, East 46th Street, New York, included an undoubtedly unique copy on large paper of the 'Poems by Two Brothers,' 1827. The importance of this was fully realized by Messrs. Anderson's cataloguer, and two pages are devoted to its description. As the Catalogue can be in the possession of but few collectors in this country, there is all the more reason for giving this particular entry a wider publicity than it could possibly enjoy through the medium of a book-sale catalogue. The literary interest of the subject would, however, be of sufficient importance to warrant the extracts (given here "without prejudice") which follow:—

"It is the copy presented by Tennyson to his solicitor, C. R. Haddelsey, of Caistor, Lincolnshire, and bears on the fly-leaf his name and address, written by the poet. The book appears to have been afterwards presented to 'Miss Charlotte Turquand from her affectionate friend, C. R. Haddelsey'—this is written on the second fly-leaf. In addition, there is inserted a note from 'A. Tennyson,' viz. :—

DEAR HADDELEY, I sent back the conveyances signed yesterday, and hope you got them safe. Make all haste to a final settlement.

Ever yours,

A. Tennyson.

"The most interesting point in connexion with this book, however, is that it proves the poems to have been written not by two brothers, but by three; and Tennyson has himself gone through each leaf and marked those by Frederick, by Charles, and by himself.

"Appended is a copy of some inquiries which were made before purchasing the book, and also copy of the reply received. This makes the book of singular interest, because it corrects the errors made in Macmillan's reprint of 1893. In that edition a number of the poems were attributed to Charles or to Alfred which this copy shows to be incorrect; but as the present owner points out, they arrived at their conclusion, in the reprint, by an inspection of the manuscript, verified by the present Lord Tennyson. This evidence is not nearly so valuable as the evidence of this copy, as the marks in it were made at a time when Alfred Tennyson's memory was clear and distinct on the subject.

"The present Lord Tennyson, in his preface to the 'Poems by Two Brothers' published in 1893, states: 'It is requested that none of the poems in this volume said to be by my father, and consequently signed A. T., be included in any future edition of his Works, as my uncle, Frederick Tennyson, cannot be certain of the authorship of every poem, and as the handwriting of the manuscript is known not to be a sure guide."

The correspondence in connexion with this copy consists, as already stated, of two letters. In both cases—the letter of inquiry and the answer—the names of the writers are suppressed, but these are not material. The first letter runs thus:—

"I have received safely the copy of Tennyson which you were good enough to send me. I should like very much to purchase it, but before doing so there are one or two points which I would like to raise. Can you tell me any history of the book?—in whose hands it has been all these years, or if you purchased it direct from the family to whom it was given? Again, can you tell me who is responsible for the pencil note which appears on the half-title? This note, you will remember, states to whom the book was given, and gives the different marks of the three brothers. Also, on comparing this copy of the 'Poems by Two Brothers' with the reprint issued by Macmillan in 1893, I notice other points to which I would direct your attention. As to the Stanza on p. 1, this is signed in your copy Frederick Tennyson, in the reprint the initials of Charles are given.

"Page 67, 'Egypt' is signed in your copy Charles, but in the reprint it says 'Begun by Charles, finished by Alfred.'

"Page 90, 'Scotch Song' is signed in your copy Alfred, and is queried in the reprint.

"Page 109, 'The Deity,' signed Charles, is queried in the reprint Alfred or Charles.

"Page 139, 'Epigram on a Musician,' signed Charles, is queried in the reprint.

"Page 165, 'Thou cam'st to thy Bower,' signed Alfred, is not signed in the reprint.

"Page 173, signed Charles, in the reprint queried Alfred.

175, signed Charles, in the reprint queried Alfred or Charles.

184, signed Charles, in the reprint queried Alfred.

197, signed M. Who is M.? In the reprint signed Charles.

209, signed Charles, attributed to Alfred in the reprint.

210, signed Alfred, bears Frederick's name in the reprint.

"These are interesting points which I should like settled before purchasing. Possibly you may be able to give me the information. The marks added to the poems, if made by Tennyson himself, should have settled any dispute as to who was the author of the various pieces, but the reprint was carefully edited from reliable information, I take it, and so I do not understand how the divergence has arisen."

The reply to this series of inquiries is as follows:—

"We fear we can do little to solve the difficulties which you mention. From inquiry we made at the time of purchase, we felt satisfied it had belonged to Haddelsey, that he gave it to Miss Turquand, in whose hands it remained till a recent date. If, as the latter owner believed, the marks were made while the book was in Mr. Haddelsey's possession, they were purposely made on good information, at a time when the memory of Tennyson would be of some value. The list in the reprint ('Poems by Two Brothers'—reprint—Macmillan, 1893) was prepared by the present writer from the original manuscript, entirely from handwriting, confirmed by the present Lord Tennyson; some of those that were marked doubtful, as to which of the two brothers wrote, were claimed by Frederick, the third brother. No one living has anything else than handwriting to go by; and if the present volume is genuine, it is a strange confirmation of the accuracy of the list made from the manuscript. We do not think it likely that the difficulty which you note will ever be explained."

It may be added that this copy formed lot 958 in the Poor Sale on December 9th. It does not appear to have passed through any auction sale in England, and was presumably sold privately. The original MS. of 'Poems by Two Brothers' mentioned above was sold at Messrs. Sotheby's in December, 1892, for 480l. It consisted of 88 leaves, the greater part being in the handwriting of Alfred Tennyson. According to Mr. J. H. Slater ('Early Editions,' p. 307), this "MS. has since been resold at a high premium to an American collector."

W. ROBERTS.

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Baptist Handbook, 1909, 2/6 net.
 Coggin (Rev. F. E.), Man's Great Charter, 3/6 net. An exposition of the first chapter of Genesis. New Edition.
 Commentary on the Holy Bible, 7/6 net. Edited by the Rev. J. R. Dummelow. Complete in one volume, with maps.
 Daniel (H. C.), Common Sense and the Emancipation of Man, 1/6 net. Deals with life, death, &c.
 Harnack (A.), The Mission and Expansion of Christianity in the First Three Centuries, Vol. II., 2 vols., 25/ net. Translated and edited by James Moffatt. New Edition. In the Theological Translation Library.
 Henslow (Rev. Prof. G.), The Vulgate, the Source of False Doctrines, 2/6 net.
 Hibbert Journal, January, 2/6 net.
 Mayor (J. E. B.), The Church of Scotland, 6d. net.
 Nisbet's Church Directory and Almanack, 1909, 2/ net.

Law.

- Digest of English Case Law from 1898 to 1907. By E. Manson. 2 vols., 63s. Forms a supplement to 'Mew's Digest of English Case Law.'

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Cameron's (D. Y.) Etchings. With an introductory essay by Frank Rinder, and a list of the artist's etchings.
 Coomaraswamy (A. K.), Mediaeval Sinhalese Art, 63/ net. A monograph on mediaeval Sinhalese arts and crafts, mainly as surviving in the eighteenth century, with an account of the structure of society and the status of the craftsmen.
 Gray (H. St. George), Interim Report on the Excavations at Maumbury Rings, Dorchester, 1908, 1/. Reprinted from Proceedings of the Dorset Natural History and Antiquarian Field Club.
 India, Archaeological Survey, Northern Circle: Annual Progress Report of the Superintendent for the Year ending 31st March, 1908, 1/4
 Konody (P. G.), Brockwell (M. W.), and Lippmann (F. W.), The National Gallery, Part V., 1/ net. With coloured illustrations.
 McCulloch Collection of Modern Art, shown at Burlington House as the Royal Academy Winter Exhibition, 1/ net. Special number of The Art Journal, with 140 illustrations. See p. 47.
 Palestine Exploration Fund: Quarterly Statement, January, 2/6
 Reliquary and Illustrated Archaeologist, January, 2/6. Edited by the Rev. Dr. Cox.
 Third International Art Congress for the Development of Drawing and Art Teaching, London, 1908, 6/. The transactions of the Congress, edited by C. Myles Mathews.
 Wheeler (G. Owen), Old English Furniture from the Sixteenth to the Nineteenth Centuries, 10/6 net. A guide for the collector, with much additional matter and many new illustrations. New Edition. For notice of former edition see Athen., Oct. 19, 1907, p. 488.

Pictures.

- Fragonard, The Swing, 31/6 net. In the Menpes Series of Great Masters.
 Hemy (C. Napier), Last Reef Down: Fair Wind—Fine Weather.
 Scholar's Cartoons: No. III., King Arthur's Knights departing from Camelot on the Quest of the Holy Grail; No. IV., The Canterbury Pilgrims, 7/6 each. A series of decorative lithographs illustrating great events and incidents of British national life.

Poetry and Drama.

- Amphora, 2/6 net.
 Hagedorn (H.), The Woman of Corinth. A tale in verse.
 Hymns Ancient and Modern: Guide to the Use of, 9d.; Guide with Concordance, 2/6; Selection for Mission-Rooms, &c., 2d.
 Jones (M. H.), The Dawn of Life, and other Poems, 2/6 net.
 Miffin (L.), Toward the Uplands, 5/ net.
 Mordaunt (H. J.), Translations, 5/ net. Greek and Latin renderings from well-known poets, including Matthew Arnold, Christina Rossetti, and Tennyson.
 Musset (A. de), Poésies, 1828-1851, 5 vols., 2/ each.
 Poems and Sonnets, by J. O. P., 3/6 net.
 Rushton (W. L.), Shakespeare and 'The Arte of English Poesie,' 2/6 net.
 Wild Lyrics, and other Poems, by J. E. L., 1/.
 Woods (M. A.), The Characters of Paradise Lost, 2/. Reprinted, with additions, from The Expository Times.

Music.

- English Traditional Songs and Carols, 2/6 net. Collected and edited, with annotations and pianoforte accompaniments by Lucy E. Broadwood.
 Schünemann (G.), Mozart as an Eight-Year-Old Composer, Wolfgang's Notebook.

Bibliography.

- Library of Congress: Report of the Librarian, and Report of the Superintendent of the Library Building and Grounds, for the Year ending June 30, 1908.
 London University, List of Accessions to the Library, October, November, and December, 1908—List of Manuscripts, Maps and Plans, and Printed Books and Pamphlets, mostly on Railways and Navigation, from the Collections of John Urpeth Rastrick, and his Son Henry Rastrick.

Philosophy.

- Aristotle, Works, Vol. III., Metaphysica, 7/6 net. Translated into English under the editorship of J. A. Smith and W. D. Ross.

Political Economy.

- Co-Partnership, January, 1d. The organ of the Housing and Industrial Co-partnership Movement.

History and Biography.

- Atlay (J. B.), Lord Haliburton, 8/6 net. With a portrait.
 Beaven (M. L. R.), Sir William Temple, 2/6 net. The Gladstone Essay, Oxford, 1908.
 Colby (C. W.), Canadian Types of the Old Régime, 1608-98. Lectures delivered recently in Ottawa before the May Court Club. The author's aim is to discuss various aspects of French colonization. There are several illustrations.

Cooke (J.), John Milton. A lecture delivered in the Parochial Hall, St. Bartholomew's, Dublin, on the occasion of Milton's Tercentenary.

Essex "Whoandwhere," 1909, 3/6. A muster roll of prominent men and women and leading residents in Essex.

Garratt (Evelyn R.), Life and Personal Recollections of Samuel Garratt, 7/6 net. Part I. is a memoir by his daughter; Part II. consists of personal recollections by himself.

Holland (R. S.), Builders of United Italy (1808-98), 4/6 net. Deals with Alfieri, Manzoni, and others, and contains 8 portraits.

Lumet (Louis), Napoleon I., Empereur des Français, 10/ Racial Problems in Hungary, by Scotus Viator, 16/ net. With illustrations and a map.

Roiné (J. E.), The Lincoln Centennial Medal, presenting the Medal of Lincoln, 25s. net. With papers by various authors.

Sports and Pastimes.

Haultain (A.), The Mystery of Golf, 5 dols. net. An account of games in general and golf in particular.

Education.

St. Paul's School Calendar.

Philology.

Year's Work in Classical Studies, 1908, 2/6 net. Edited for the Council of the Classical Association by W. H. D. Rouse.

School-Books.

Evans (E.), Plants and their Ways, 1/4. An introduction to the study of botany and agricultural science, with many illustrations.

Pulling (E.), Arithmetic by Decimals, 6d. net. For schools and colleges.

Science.

Bird Notes and News, Vol. III. No. IV., 3d. The journal of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds.

Book of Nature Study, Vol. II., 7/6 net. Edited by J. Bretland Farmer and others, and has many illustrations. For notice of Vol. I. see Athen., Dec. 12, 1908, p. 765.

Boole (Mary Everest), The Message of Psychic Science to the World, 3/6 net.

Finn (F.), Wild Beasts of the World, Part VII., 1/ net. With coloured illustrations by L. Sargent, C. E. Swan, and Winifred Austen.

Flammarion (C.), Mysterious Psychic Forces, 8/6 net. An account of the author's investigations in psychical research; also contains those of other European savants.

Hill (A.), The Body at Work, 16/ net. A popular treatise on the principles of physiology, with 46 illustrations.

Pilgrim (G. E.), The Geology of the Persian Gulf and the Adjoining Portions of Persia and Arabia, 5/4. Memoirs of the Geological Survey of India, Vol. XXXIV., Part IV.

Queensland, Vital Statistics, 1907, Forty-Eighth Annual Report of the Government Statistician.

Royal Scottish Arboricultural Society, Transactions, January, 3/. Edited by Lieut.-Col. F. Bailey.

Shaw (J.), The Shaw Treatment of Cancer, 6d. net.

Wright (H. J. and W. P.), Beautiful Flowers and How to grow Them, Part VI., 1/ net.

Juvenile Books.

Mac Bride (Mac Kenzie), King Penda's Captain, 4/. A romance of fighting in the days of the Anglo-Saxons, with coloured illustrations by John Duncan.

Miller (Evelyn), The Drawn Line, 1/. A story of children and their pets.

Fiction.

Becke (L.), The Adventures of Louis Blake, 6/. A partly autobiographical narrative of trading in the South Seas.

Blair (H. B.), Sarah Valliant's Problem, 1/. Has to do with county Society.

Blyth (J.), A Bid for Loyalty, 6/.

Byatt (H.), The Testament of Judas, 6/. An autobiography by Judas Iscariot, in which the narrative is completed by a Phœnician merchant.

Creswick (P.), Idols of Flesh, 6/. Deals with the friendship between a well-educated man and a girl employed in a tea shop.

Dallas (D.), Paul Richards, Detective, 1/. Contains seven detective tales.

Dickens (C.), Great Expectations, 7d. net. New Edition in Nelson's Library.

Flowerdew (H.), The Ways of Men, 6/. A tale of a girl's hazardous adventures and marriage.

Forster (R. H.), Harry of Athol, 6/. The scene is Northumbria in the year 1402, and the tale deals with the struggle between the Percies and Bolingbroke.

Gould (Nat.), Charger and Chaser, 6d. New Edition.

Granville (C.), God's Abyss and a Woman, 1/ net. New Edition.

Kenealy (A.), The Whips of Time, 6/. Presents interesting hereditary problems.

Loomis (C. B.), A Holiday Touch, and other Tales of Undaunted Americans, 5/. Consists of 15 short sketches, with 8 illustrations.

Mansfield (C.), Love and a Woman, 6/. Narrates the suicide of a married man, a rising politician, in order to leave a girl free to marry her cousin.

Oppenheim (E. Phillips), The Long Arm, 6/. With illustrations.

Shore (W. Teignmouth), A Soul's Awakening, 6/. Introduces a Holborn bookseller, his assistant, and the daughter of an unsuccessful writer.

Swan (E.), The Sword and the Cowl, 6/. Deals with the relations of Norman and Saxon about 1066.

Warden (Florence), The Baronet's Wife, 6/. A tale of a burglar moving in fashionable circles.—The Case of Sir Geoffrey, 6/. Introduces a disused mansion taken at a nominal rent which leads to a complicated series of mysteries.

Wells (H. G.), Kippis, 7d. net. New Edition in Nelson's Library. For notice see Athen., Nov. 18, 1905, p. 681.

General Literature.

Bullen (F. T.), Idylls of the Sea, and other Marine Sketches, 1/ net. New Edition in Nelson's Shilling Library.

Carter (R. N.), The Simplex Guide to the Income Tax, its Assessment and Repayment, 2/6 net.

Greyfriar, December, 1/6. A chronicle in black and white by Carthusians.

Investor's Blue Book for 1909, 3/6 net. Edited by G. J. Holmes.

Manchester Quarterly, January, 6d. net. An illustrated journal of literature and art.

Melville (F. J.), Great Britain: Line-Engraved Stamps, 6d. net. With illustrations.

Oliver & Boyd's Edinburgh Almanac, 6/6 net.

Smart Set Birthday Book, 2/6

Trewby (A.), Healthy Boyhood, 1/ net. With an introduction by Sir Dyce Duckworth, and a foreword by Field-Marshal Earl Roberts. New Edition.

Utopian Papers, 3/6 net. Addresses to "The Utopians" a Chelsea Association, by various authors, edited by Dorothea Hollins.

Calendars.

Artists' Almanac for 1909, 6d.
 Bodleian Library Staff-Kalendar 1909; Supplement to the Staff-Kalendar.

Jenkins (B. G.), The British Astronomical Weather Almanac and Chart, 1909, 2d.

FOREIGN

Fine Art.

Clausse (G.), Les Sforza et les Arts en Milanais, 1450-1530, 15fr.

Man (A.), Pompeji in Leben und Kunst, 17m. Revised Edition, with a chapter on Herculaneum, and over 300 illustrations.

History and Biography.

La Mara, Beethovens unsterbliche Geliebte: das Geheimnis der Gräfin Brunsvik und ihre Memoiren. With portraits of Gräfin Brunsvik, Beethoven, and Gräfin Deym.

Vogt (A.), Basile I., Empereur de Byzance (867-86), et la Civilisation byzantine à la Fin du neuvième Siècle, 7fr. 50.

* * All Books received at the Office up to Wednesday Morning will be included in this List unless previously noted. Publishers are requested to state prices when sending Books.

Literary Gossip.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN will publish shortly 'Totemism and Exogamy,' by Dr. J. G. Frazer, which includes a reprint of his 'Totemism' of 1887 and four articles in The Fortnightly, a 'Geographical Survey of Totemism,' and a summary with conclusions. They are also issuing 'The County Lieutenancies and the Army, 1803-14,' by Mr. John W. Fortescue; Dr. A. C. Bradley's 'Oxford Lectures on Poetry'; and two novels—Mr. H. G. Wells's 'Tono-Bungay,' and 'One Immortality,' by Mr. Fielding Hall, who has made a reputation in other fields of literature.

AN edition of the Authorized Version of the Bible will be published immediately in "The Cambridge English Classics." The text has been reprinted—it is hoped with literal accuracy—from a copy of the folio of 1611 in the possession of Mr. Aldis Wright, who has edited the reprint for the Syndics of the Press. It will be comprised in five volumes, the Old Testament occupying three and the New Testament and the Apocrypha one volume each.

PROF. FIRTH opens the January number of The Scottish Historical Review with a sketch of the ballads illustrating the relations of England and Scotland during the seventeenth century, with many racy quotations. Mr. E. M. Barron advances a new, and pro-Highland, view of the War of Independence. Mr. J. G. A. Baird comments on a household book of 1699-1712. Prof. J. L. Morison has an appreciation of Sir Thomas More. Mr. Lang, with characteristic banter, edits five curious and important vernacular letters of Cardinal Beaton to James V., written 1537-41; and Sir Herbert Maxwell gives a section of the Lanercost Chronicle in translation.

MESSRS. SEELEY & Co. will shortly publish 'Behind the Veil in Persia and Turkish Arabia,' by Mrs. M. E. Hume-Griffith; 'A British Officer in the Balkans,' by Major Percy E. Henderson; and 'Among the Wild Tribes of the Afghan Frontier,' by Dr. T. L. Pennell.

MR. H. G. HARRISON has during the last seven years been engaged on 'A Bibliography of British Monasticism' (about A.D. 600 to 1908), which is intended to be a complete guide to the MSS. and printed works (general and topographical) relating to the religious orders and houses in the British Isles from the earliest times to the end of the nineteenth century. The work will be in two volumes.

MR. W. G. BLAICKIE MURDOCH's new book, 'The Royal Stuarts in their Connection with Art and Letters' is to be published next month by Messrs. J. & J. Gray & Co., of the St. James Press, Edinburgh. The author, who has had the assistance of several specialists, begins with King James I. of Scotland. He refers to the Stuarts as "the family of artists scorned by a nation of shopkeepers."

MR. ELLIOT STOCK is publishing 'An Oxford Tutor,' by Mr. C. E. H. Edwards, being the life of the Rev. Thomas Short, B.D., a well-known character in his day.

WE are informed by Messrs. Luzac & Co. that the work by Dr. Belleli, 'An Independent Examination of the Assuan and Elephantine Papyri,' which was expected to appear last November, is to be ready by the end of this month. The work will consist of two parts: (1) Chronicles of Papyri; (2) History of all Aramaic Papyri brought to Europe since 1826.

THE hundredth anniversary of the birth of John Stuart Blackie is to be celebrated in July next. His nephew Mr. Stodart Walker is preparing a volume of his correspondence, to be issued about that time. Any friends or others who may possess letters of interest from Prof. Blackie's pen are requested to forward them to Mr. Stodart Walker, 30, Walker Street, Edinburgh, who will return them to their owners as soon as copies have been made.

THE death is announced from the United States of Mr. Donald G. Mitchell ("Ik Marvel") at the age of eighty-six. He was a sentimental writer who continued the tradition of Washington Irving in his 'Dream Life' and 'Reveries of a Bachelor.' He was born in Connecticut in 1822, studied law in New York, and was United States Consul in Venice 1853-4, since which time he had lived on his farm of Edgewood, New Haven.

THE hundredth anniversary of the birth of Edgar Allan Poe is to be commemorated at the University of Virginia by the opening of a Poe Museum. At Columbia University, New York, on the 19th inst., Mr. Thomas N. Page and Prof. Brander Matthews will be the speakers. A visit is to be paid to Poe's Cottage at Fordham, where Mr. H. W. Mabie will speak.

SEVERAL books of interest to classical scholars are shortly to be published by Messrs. Macmillan: Prof. Bury's Harvard Lectures on 'The Ancient Greek Historians'; Mr. Warde Fowler's 'Social Life at Rome in the Age of Cicero'; a new issue of Jebb's translation of 'The Characters of Theophrastus,' edited by Dr. J. E. Sandys; and 'The Acropolis at Athens,' by Prof. M. L. D'Ooge.

MANY of the same publishers' well-known monographs on "English Men of Letters" are to appear in a new form at a shilling, while Prof. Raleigh's brilliant 'Shakespeare' will be added to the "Eversley Series."

WE regret to find that there was a confusion of names in our paragraph last week concerning Messrs. Ward, Lock & Co.'s forthcoming novels. 'Sir Morecambe's Marriage' is by Florence Warden; 'A Crime on Canvas' by Mr. F. M. White; and 'A Bid for Loyalty' by Mr. James Blyth.

M. FERNAND BOURNON, a well-known member of the staff of the Journal des Débats, has just died at the age of fifty-one. A native of Paris, he was educated at the École des Chartes, and devoted nearly the whole of his literary life to the history of old Paris, on which he published many books. His great work, however, is the collection of "Monographies des Communes du Département de la Seine," which comprises no fewer than 77 volumes.

M. JEAN DE BONNEFON is publishing shortly in Paris 'La Corbeille des Roses; ou, Les Dames de Lettres,' which is announced as offering a critical account of all the "women of letters" now writing in France. It will be of great interest if it clears up some of the feminine pen-names which puzzle readers.

AMONGST the few British books published in Messina was an Italian translation of Brydone's 'Tour through Sicily and Malta, in a Series of Letters to William Beckford, Esq., of Somerly in Suffolk,' which, when published by Messrs. Strahan & Cadell in 1773, went through seven or eight editions. Mr. George Pignatorre, now of Rome, while British Vice-Consul at Messina, was so impressed with the excellence of Brydone's work that he made the translation mentioned in 1901.

THE Sanskrit scholar Prof. Richard Pischel, whose death is announced from Madras, was born at Breslau in 1849. He studied at the University of his native town and at Berlin, and spent some time in Oxford and London. In 1875 he was appointed Professor of Sanskrit at Kiel; ten years later he accepted a professorship at Halle; and in 1902 he received a call to Berlin. At the time of his death he was on his way to Calcutta to deliver a course of lectures. He published among other works some valuable editions of Sanskrit, Vedic, and Pali texts, some of which were issued by the Pali Text Society; and a grammar of the Prakrit language, generally considered his most important work.

THE death in his sixty-third year is announced from Vienna of Friedrich Schütz, well known as a political journalist, and for many years one of the editors of the Neue Freie Presse.

PROF. KRAUS of Prague University has just found a number of interesting letters and documents relating to Danish history in the town archives. Among them is a remarkable collection of love-letters written by Christian IV. (1588-1648) to his second wife, Kirstine Munk.

THE novelist and dramatist Hermann Jahnke, whose death at the age of sixty-three is reported from Pötscha, near Wehlen, was a teacher by profession. He was the author of a number of novels and plays, many of them written in Niederdeutsch. His volume on Bismarck is widely known.

AT a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Booksellers' Provident Institution, held on December 17th, it was announced that 130*l.* had been granted in relief to 66 members or their widows. Since the last meeting 291*l.* 18*s.* 10*d.* had been received in donations and subscriptions, and the funds showed an increase of over 1,000*l.* compared with the same period last year. Special Christmas gifts were presented by Mr. Wm. E. Green, Mr. Richard Bentley, Mr. Henry H. Hodgson, and Mr. C. J. Longman. To these gentlemen the Board gave a vote of thanks.

WE note the issue of the following Government publications: Colonial Statistical Abstract (2*s.*); Public Record Office, Vol. IV. of List of Early Chancery Proceedings, 1500-15 (15*s.*); and Register of the Privy Seal of Scotland, Vol. I. 1488-1529 (15*s.*).

NEXT week we shall pay special attention to School-Books, and recent books and meetings of educational interest.

SCIENCE

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

IN Common Affections of the Liver (Nisbet & Co.) Dr. W. Hale White has collected and digested many valuable clinical lectures upon the subject which he has delivered from time to time in the Medical School of Guy's Hospital. The material for such lectures is large, and Dr. Hale White has utilized his opportunities to the uttermost. The information is accurate, the teaching modern, and the language simple. The book might perhaps have been made a little more interesting by the inclusion of a few cases. In the description of hydatids, for instance, Dr. Hale White might have alluded to Locke's excellent description of the case of Lord Shaftesbury,

The false Achitophel....
▲ fiery soul, which, working out its way,
Fretted the pigmy body to decay,
And o'er-informed the tenement of clay.

John Locke was Shaftesbury's physician, and he gives an extraordinarily accurate account of the case and the treatment he adopted by the advice of Sydenham and Glisson. In like manner there are many historical cases of malignant disease of the liver, the inclusion of which would have served to maintain the interest of the subject, whilst they would not have added materially to the size of the book. Dr. Hale White discusses the condition known as "a torpid liver," and comes to the conclusion that the symptoms are rather due to gastro-intestinal catarrh, the result of overeating, than to any primary inflammation of the liver. The slight jaundice which occurs in such cases is caused by a mild catarrh of the bile ducts spreading from the intestine.

M. LECLERC DE PULLIGNY, general secretary directing industrial hygiene in the French Ministère du Travail, publishes through the Librairie Baillière Hygiène industrielle, forming the introductory portion of Brouardel's 'Traité d'Hygiène.' This volume may be rendered useful by an index, but without it is not of much value for purposes of consultation. On the whole, it is well put together, and the few mistakes caused by translation and transcription are such as must be expected in such a book. The statistics of military health quoted are vitiated, for purposes of comparison, by the existence of conscription in one of the two countries named, and its absence in the other. It is not safe to found an argument upon British enlistments without bearing in mind the cautions prefixed to all such figures by our Army Medical Department. We detect throughout some repetition, and in that repetition some sign of collection of material at different periods, with insufficient subsequent correlation. In one part it is rightly pointed out that precautions taken in this country under Special Rules greatly reduced suffering from saturnine intoxication, commonly called lead poisoning, when they were first applied, but that there has been recent increase. In a later page the figures of the last few years are not given, and from this omission a false impression might be derived but for the other passage. Under the head of Employment we are told with truth that Factory Acts do not apply to places of commerce, e.g., ordinary shops; but no mention is made (in the principal passage dealing with hours) of Provand's Acts, applying, among ourselves, similar principles to those discussed, although the French law of eight years ago regulating the employment of women in certain shops is set forth. Among small errors for correction in future editions of this book we note an unnecessary s at the end of the name of Miss Anderson, our principal woman inspector of factories; and several acknowledgments of doctrine drawn from Furnivall, in which that writer's name is made to begin with T. The doctrine with regard to the diseases of occupation here set forth as that of official France is, on the whole, in accord with our own. In certain matters, such as anthrax, we are far ahead, but there are others in which the tables are turned by progress in French and German administration as yet unrealized on this side of the Channel.

In The Game Animals of Africa (Rowland Ward) Mr. R. Lydekker is endeavouring to do for Africa what he has already attempted for India, Burma, Malaya, and Tibet (see Athen., Nov. 30th, 1907), namely, to provide sportsmen and naturalists who visit those countries with trustworthy descriptions of the chief game beasts, and some others which may be encountered. Birds, fishes, and reptiles are excluded, and therefore the use of the word "Animals" in the title seems irregular, and might mislead. The author explains that the task he has set himself in Africa is more difficult than that with which he grappled in India, because, the country being larger, there are many more races and species to be described; and further, because of "the imperfect state of our knowledge of no inconsiderable proportion of these, and the uncertainty still existing as to the limitations of species, in contradistinction to local varieties or races. In the main, species have been regarded in as wide a sense as possible; but in the case of many groups, such as the duikerboks, the time is not yet ripe for anything approaching a final classification, and there can be little doubt that several nominal species will in the future have to take a lower grade."

This is probably true. A man who obtains a specimen different from the ordinary type in some minor degree may claim that he has discovered a new species, and is entitled to have it named after himself. There is more of this than is warranted, and he who successfully combats this tendency will deserve thanks from naturalists and sportsmen.

The author rightly states that this book can only be looked on as an attempt to describe the game-fauna of Africa, and that much revision will have to be made as time passes and our knowledge increases. Additions are probable, but unfortunately subtractions from the list are no less likely; indeed, some kinds of animals are now extinct which not long ago were numerous, and others seem similarly doomed.

The book is largely compiled from the writings of African sportsmen, from Roualeyn Gordon-Cumming, Cornwallis Harris, Oswald, &c., to F. C. Selous, Bryden, A. H. Neumann, F. Vaughan Kirby, Powell-Cotton, and others; the illustrations, apparently, being similarly collected, whilst the plates are reduced from those in the quarto called 'The Great and Small Game of Africa.'

Attention is invited to the curious fact of the marked distinction of the fauna north of the Great Desert, or north of the Tropic of Cancer, from that of the rest of the continent. "Northern Africa is, in fact, so far as its animals are concerned, a part of Europe."

The volume is admirably turned out, but very heavy to hold, the illustrations being sufficient and well reproduced; it is dedicated to the Duke of Bedford, "who has done much to increase our knowledge of the big game of the world."

SOCIETIES.

HISTORICAL.—Dec. 18.—The Rev. W. Hunt, President, in the chair.—The following were elected Fellows: R. A. Roberts, C. H. Jenkinson, W. K. Boyd, A. H. Neve, F. M. Stenton, and Miss E. M. Wilmot-Buxton.—A paper was read by the Rev. Clement Pike on 'The Regium Donum in Ireland,' and the history of the obscure negotiations connected with the secret fund was elucidated by the author. An interesting discussion followed, in which the President, Mr. I. S. Leadam, and the Director took part.

FARADAY.—Dec. 21.—Dr. N. T. M. Wilsmore in the chair.—Mr. E. A. Ashcroft read a paper on 'The Influence of Cheap Electricity on Electrolytic and Electrothermal Industries.'

MEETINGS NEXT WEEK.

- MON. Royal Academy, 4.—'The Philistine,' Sir Hubert Herkomer.
— London Institution, 5.—'Water and its Work,' Prof. V. B. Lewes.
— Surveyors' Institution, 8.—Discussion on 'The Administrative Aspects of Sewage Disposal.'
— Geographical, 8.30.—'Across the Sahara from Tripoli to Lake Chad,' Mr. Hannsbiischer.
TUES. Mathematical Association, 3.—Annual Meeting; Papers 'On the Mathematical Preparation for Students who propose to take up Technical Work,' Dr. H. T. Bovey; 'On the Introduction of the Idea of Cross-Ratio and Homography, and its Connexion with Involution,' Mr. A. Lodge; 'A Proposal for the Unknown Digit,' G. H. Bryan.
— Asiatic, 4.—'Mahayana Bronzes from Ceylon and Java,' Dr. A. K. Coomaraswamy.
— Colonial Institute, 8.—'Rhodesia and its Agricultural Possibilities,' Prof. R. Wallace.
— Zoological, 8.30.—'Zoological Results of the Third Tanganyika Expedition, 1904-5: Report on the Copepoda,' Prof. G. O. Sars; 'Studies on the Flagellate Blood Parasites of Fresh-water Fishes,' Prof. E. A. Minchin; 'A Further Note on the Gonadial Grooves of a Medusa, Aurelia aurita,' Mr. T. Goodey; 'The Tuberculin Test in Monkeys, with Notes on the Temperature of Mammals,' Dr. A. E. Brown; 'A Few Notes on Balaena glacialis and its Capture in Recent Years in the North Atlantic by Norwegian Whalers,' Prof. R. Collett.
WED. Geological, 8.—'On Labradorite-Norite with Porphyritic Labradorite-Crystals: a Contribution to the Study of the "Gabbroidal Eutecticum,"' Prof. Johan H. L. Vogt; 'On the Genus Loxonema, with Descriptions of New Proterozoic Species,' Mrs. Jane Longstaff.
THURS. Royal Academy, 4.—'Some Personal Experiences,' Sir Hubert Herkomer.
— Royal, 4.30.
— London Institution, 6.—'A Basis for the Appreciation of Works of Art,' Mr. W. Rothenstein.
— Institution of Electrical Engineers, 8.—'The G. B. System from a Tramway Manager's Point of View,' Mr. Stanley Clegg.
— Society of Antiquaries, 8.30.—'Excavations on the Site of the Roman Town at Caerwent, Mon., Mr. A. T. Martin.
FRI. Institution of Mechanical Engineers, 8.—'The Filtration and Purification of Water for Public Supply,' Mr. J. Don.

Science Gossip.

THE SELBORNE SOCIETY has revived the old title of its magazine, which will henceforth be called The Selborne Magazine (and Nature Notes), and will be published by Messrs. George Philip & Son. All communications with regard to the Society should be addressed to the Honorary General Secretary, 20, Hanover Square, W., as heretofore.

MR. ARTHUR MEE, of Llanishen, Cardiff, has issued his handy card entitled 'The Heavens at a Glance,' for 1909—the thirteenth year of its appearance. It contains a great mass of well-arranged astronomical information and data for the year, printed on both sides of a small card, so that it can be conveniently suspended for reference.

WE regret to notice the death, in the forty-second year of his age, of Major Percy B. Molesworth. He was stationed at Trinkomali, Ceylon, where he made many valuable planetary and other observations, particularly of Jupiter. He was a member of the British Astronomical Association from its foundation, and was elected a Fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society in 1898.

SEVEN more small planets were photographically discovered at the Astrophysical Institute, Königstuhl, Heidelberg, on the 16th ult.—six by Herr Kopff, and one by Herr Lorenz. One was similarly detected by Mr. Davidson at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, on the 17th.

SEÑOR COMAS SOLÁ publishes in No. 4290 of the Astronomische Nachrichten the results of some of his recent observations of the principal satellites of Jupiter and of Titan, the largest satellite of Saturn, obtained at the Fabra Observatory, Barcelona. The first satellite of Jupiter he finds to be decidedly ellipsoidal, the compression amounting to about one-fifth of the major axis, the direction of which makes a considerable angle with the line of the belts of the planet. The second always appears round. On the third satellite various features were noticed: white polar caps varying in brightness and size, equatorial bands, and shadowy areas, the changing appearance of which would seem to arise from the satellite's rotation. No distinct features could be discerned on the fourth, except a faint north polar cap seen on one occasion. The observations of Titan appear to indicate the existence of a more or less dense atmosphere, the limbs being always dark and difficult of perception, whilst towards the centre of the disk lighter patches were visible. Eight drawings accompany the paper, five of these being of the third satellite of Jupiter.

FINE ARTS

ROYAL ACADEMY WINTER EXHIBITION.

THE change of policy which offers us this year at Burlington House modern pictures in place of Old Masters is probably induced by the best of motives. Contemporary artists are undoubtedly suffering much from what has been called "the unfair competition" of the dead, the latter being usually treated with an exaggerated and indiscriminating deference, against which we have sometimes had occasion to protest. Sympathy ought to be enlisted in favour of any honest attempt to rectify this state of things by contrasting a consistently fine and representative collection of the best contemporary work with the rather mixed exhibitions of old paintings usually gathered at this season of the year—exhibitions which have on the last few occasions harboured not a little second-rate work, and some that was absolutely mediocre.

If such were the intentions of the organizers of the present exhibition, the means by which they have proceeded reveal a lamentable ignorance of the time of day. We are asked to compare an art which at least was always decorous, and based on a sound tradition of design, with a collection consisting mainly of the popular pictures of past Academies, which attracted many shillings in their day, but at which even the crowd gapes not a second time. Not thus, we fear, will purchasers be convinced of the superior desirability of modern over old pictures. Our misgiving is rather lest so lamentable an error of judgment may discredit, in the eyes of a hastily judging public, the art of a whole period. Fashion has always counted for something in the estimation in which works of art are held, and there is an increasing tendency (which is to be deprecated) to measure their value by the vulgar test of the saleroom. It is important, therefore, to insist that by neither of these criterions can the verdict on many of these pictures be regarded as a verdict on the best of modern painting.

Many gifted artists have essayed the part of sensation-monger during the period covered by the collection of the late George McCulloch. It was the besetting sin of Academicians of that time, as portrait painting is to-day, and indeed, with a body handling "gate money" on such a colossal scale, not to try one's hand at it might seem, in a sense, to lack public spirit. The faulty, but very distinguished and beautiful portrait group (290) by Sir W. Q. Orchardson reminds us of what finer possibilities there were in his work, had he not grown accustomed to satisfying the taste for obvious attractiveness. But he was painting for a public which loved such things as Mr. Dicksee's Burial of the Viking (63), Mr. Marcus Stone's Gambler's Wife (68), and Miss Henrietta Rae's Psyche before the Throne of Venus (156)—such things as Mr. Collier's Glass of Wine with Caesar Borgia (115), as Pettie's Jester's Merry-thought (253), as Mr. Burton Barber's Lucky Dog (297)—and he suffered, as has almost every exhibitor at the Academy of his time, for his half-acceptance of the standards of that public.

Could it be accomplished without damage to the intrinsic reputations of the many artists who at some time or other bowed to the ideal of the "Academy picture," and who are usually represented in this collection at their moment of most complete prostration, we should welcome this striking exhibition of the results of that false ideal as an opportunity for moral stock-taking suitable to the New Year, with its atmosphere of good resolutions. Never again ought artists to forget that the fineness of a painting, as of any other work of art, lies in the perfect co-ordination of its parts, the delicacy and elasticity of its structure. To mask the weakness of the general structure by plastering it over with fragments of illusive detail may please the ignorant public, but stamps the work as false in the eyes of any one with insight, with whatever cleverness the tour de force be accomplished. To regard the structure of a picture not as the picture itself, which if complete implies that the picture is finished, but as a kind of scaffolding on which may be hung "trimmings" of naturalistic detail, is a sin of which Turner himself was often guilty, and in our accusation against recent painting he must, even though he now ranks as an Old Master, be included as an arch-corrupter. Of the men who followed him in his downward path towards the rococo, some have had considerable sense of structure—some hardly any—some an elegant taste in trimming, and some a vulgar. The recognized painter of Academy pictures, however, over-trims, draping a slender real picture with a cloying and over-developed false one. Sir W. Q. Orchardson's Young Duke (77), being the apotheosis of such technical achievement, claims from us astonishment and admiration, but not respect. Here is plentiful ability for the painting of a picture elaborate enough, had the painter the character to resist the temptation to dazzle us by mere quantity, by painting a number of separate units artfully joined into the semblance of a single picture. Mr. Abbey's clever Richard, Duke of Gloster, and the Lady Anne (50) keeps a semblance of more severe design, because almost all the picture consists of costume of a formal character, leaving but tiny emerging patches of heads and hands; and this device for preserving a look of design, without sacrifice of the literalism demanded by the public, has been largely followed by younger painters. Such obedience to the letter rather than the spirit of the canons of art does not avail, and it broke down in Mr. Abbey's later pictures, wherein the incrustation of superficial realism is more and more apparent. Lord Leighton is a more flagrant example of a man with some gift, and still more ambition, for design deliberately ruining his work in order to bring it up to the standard of realism demanded by the public. Colour was his greatest difficulty, and we see him in The Garden of the Hesperides (41) brightening up the objects in his pictures from two or three different centres, and losing his way so badly that at first sight we take the trees in the middle distance for spray cast up by the breakers. The same sporadic over-colouring breaks up the Daphnephoria (100), wherein the line also is constantly over-modelled, still with the same motive of detailed realism. There is in this picture however, an amount of careful, conscientious draughtsmanship, which makes it respectable, if not inspiring. Mr. Waterhouse is at the opposite extreme. Defective in power of design—witness Flora and the Zephyrs (66)—he carries out his process of elaborating pretty detail with a good deal of superficial charm, St. Cecilia (61) being a not unfavourable example.

Of the landscape painters, Mr. David Murray—who is represented by sixteen canvases, most of them of large size—is one of the most capable exponents of the Academic art of the period. His work is always a little over-decorated, like a plant over-weighted with full-blown flowers, and it was a cruel kindness which hung his large Hampshire (221) at the end of a long vista, where distance shows its weakness. Mr. Stanton is less certain in his design, but puts it down rather more barely for what it is worth. His picture (110) is too badly hung to be judged fairly, and indeed here, as in the Summer Exhibitions, there is an obvious tendency for Academicians to be on the line and outsiders above. As this enormous collection fills only a part of the ample walls at the disposal of the Academy, it seems as though the work of Mr. Mark Fisher (4), Mrs. Stokes (14), Hope McLachlan (24), and Mr. Aumonier (52) might have been offered a place on the line, where their pictures would certainly have been seen to better advantage. Bred in the worst period of Academy-picture-painting, the late David Farquharson was sufficiently an artist to emerge from its bondage from time to time, and Full Moon and Springtide (111) is one of his best pictures, the sea being admirably alive. The drawing of the shore, on the other hand, is a little inert and unresponsive, as though the artist had failed to see the changed look it would take on at the challenge of so strong a contrasting set of forms. Just as Chevreuil pointed out (when he formulated the rudimentary laws of colour) that it denoted only healthy activity in the eye that, at the sight of any strong hue, it should see its complementary colour modifying the surrounding tints, so we might now begin to realize that a vigorous artistic eye sees a like interplay between the forms of nature; and it is the lack of this sense that makes these carefully overpainted academic landscapes move stiffly, as though clogged at the joints—that makes our figure pictures unreal as a whole, for all their parade of literal actuality.

Whistler's Valparaiso (249) is a natural, forcible piece of painting, the result of a training in a milieu where standards were more scholarly than with us. Hung with unconscious irony to balance a picture by Mr. Stanhope Forbes of the same size and (apparent) hue, it has a serene superiority over its surroundings at which the painter's ghost might be conceived gleeful. The Portrait of the Artist (299), on the other hand, shows him tampering with the integrity of his picture at the bidding of sentiment—a concession already to English practice—painting in a formal setting a head conceived in terms of actuality. Watts and Burne-Jones are both, with Whistler, on a higher plane of inspiration than the other Englishmen; but neither is represented by first-rate pictures. Watts's Fata Morgana (67), though dated 1865, has already the inferior execution which marred his later work; but it is at least a design, not a collection of "properties." So also is the starved and dismal Sleeping Princess (153) by Burne-Jones, in which the chilly harmony of greens and greys might impress us if seen in a setting of dull white, instead of the gold and crimson which now surrounds them. Love among the Ruins (9) is pleasanter in execution, but at some cost of expressiveness, as though it had an overlay of Mr. Waterhouse's vagueness.

It is comforting to our national pride to remember that M. Roybet's Propos galant (199), a dull imitation of Hals, once took the Grand Prix at the Salon; so that our exhibitions have no monopoly of vulgarity. Among the better Continental works are At the Well (321), by Matthew Maris; Bastien-Lepage's Potato-Gatherers (1); and the Ploughing (84), wherein Mr. Clausen appears as a convinced disciple of the French painter. Dagnan-Bouveret, another follower of this artist, is seen only in his later vein of overwrought sentiment. A few English painters of a later generation—Mr. D. Y. Cameron (283), Mr. Orpen (270), Mr. Sims (140, 248, 260), and noticeably Mr. Sargent in an admirable sketch (46)—show to advantage, pointing the way to sounder art. This is not implying, of course, that their pictures display greater ability than many of the works whose tendency we have criticized. Indeed, it is because the less satisfactory pictures are so much more important—so typical, and instructive of much that should be avoided—that we find ourselves relegating the praiseworthy features of the show to the tail end of our notice. One delightful and important picture there is—the Winds and Seasons (232) by Albert Moore, a work at once learned and naive. It somewhat lacks the quality we have previously referred to—that sense of the active interchange of mutual comparisons between form and form which is so essential in dealing with groups at different distances, and one of the last achievements of virile draughtsman-ship; but this lack is naively admitted, rather than artfully concealed as in Sir W. Q. Orchardson's brilliant passage of rapier-parrying, through which only the coolest and most analytic eye discerns the joins of the armour. Here, on the other hand, there is a distinct awkwardness, but how lovely is the quiet steadiness of the draughtsmanship! When have we seen a bank of flowers treated with such perfection of daintiness and noble breadth? Clearly it is not abundance of detail in itself which makes a work redundant and overdecorated. The pair of running figures against the corn in the middle distance are simply exquisite. For all its envelope of feminine prettiness, the picture stands in virile fashion, pointing the way for the next generation.

The sculptors are less copiously represented than the painters, Mr. Swan being the principal figure. His art is a little that of the dainty statuette grown beyond its proper scale, but is full of artistry. Rodin's involved marble group The Kiss (353) is not a favourable example, and compares ill with the clean, brilliant modelling of Mr. Alfred Gilbert's Comedy and Tragedy (356). We regret that the attractions of elaborate decoration and niceties of craftsmanship should have lured this artist away from the direct and careful modelling which in his hands was always so interesting.

LANDSCAPE EXHIBITION.

THE extraordinary copiousness of the Academy show leaves us little space in which to deal with the exhibition of landscapes in Pall Mall. The pictures of the two new-comers are by no means the least attractive. Mr. Lawton Wingate has two pictures (22 and 25) of most delicate texture, daintily handled, but with extraordinary unity of fluid paint lightly whipped on to the canvas. Nos. 48, 54, and 56 are the best of Mr. Stanton's; the first in particular, of a clear silvery tonality, is very agreeable. He has a keener sense of structure in his colour than in his form, which is a little immobile and lifeless, wanting in sense, for example, of the greater stability of a tree trunk near the root—the greater freedom of foliage towards, and final flutter at, the extremity of branches. Mr. Peppercorn's Surrey Village (4), Mr. Aumonier's Afternoon (47), and Mr. James Hill's Harlech (60) are also among the best things in the exhibition.

THE NEW PICTURE GALLERY AT THE VATICAN.

THE rearrangement of the pictures in the old Vatican Gallery, the Pinacoteca, would in itself have been an artistic event of no common importance. The rooms, it will be remembered, were totally unfit for the proper display of such a priceless collection of the pictorial art of the Italian Renaissance. The space was notoriously insufficient, and the lighting was of the worst possible kind. Yet even more unfortunate than the cramped space and the prevailing obscurity was the system—if so it may be termed—on which the works were hung. It being justifiably assumed, for example, that 'The Transfiguration' by Raphael was the dominating masterpiece of the Collection, and that 'The Communion of St. Jerome' by Domenichino was the second (a proposition which, perhaps, to-day might not find universal assent), the two works received equal prominence, and were placed almost alone in the same room, although the art of the one was representative of that of the ripe Renaissance, and that of the other of the eclectic school dating a century later. Again, in another were found canvases by Titian in his maturity, Spagnoletti, and Guercino, mingled with others inspired by the severe, almost ascetic art of quattrocento Umbrian masters. This clashing of styles was naturally misleading to the uninitiated and the general public. It was also an ever-present disturbing element which no faculty of self-abstraction in the connoisseur could wholly ignore.

The unsatisfactory state both of the arrangement of the paintings and of the locality assigned for their display had long been deplored in Roman artistic circles, and has equally been the cause of regret to the authorities of the Vatican. The latter, indeed, had for some time been studying the question of removing the collection to rooms where it could be suitably exhibited and also intelligently classified. But the vast fabric of the Vatican Palace, whereof a large portion dates from remote centuries, and was built by Popes who often unduly hastened the labour of their architects and workmen, is now in a condition necessitating constant care and watchfulness on the part of the authorities responsible for the preservation of the building. The work of reparation hence proceeds unceasingly—it is true, without haste, but also without rest. Moreover, the question of expenditure has to be taken into account, and the revenue at the disposal of the building authorities is not unlimited. And, again, when a large extra outlay has been incurred, as in the case of the recent repairs and alterations of the Appartamenti Borgia, without which it could not have been opened to the public, similar operations have for a time to stand in abeyance; so that it was not until two and a half years ago that Monsignor Misciattelli, "Pro-prefetto dei Sacri Palazzi," was able to begin the building of the new Gallery.

Although the palace of the Vatican is of colossal size, it was, naturally, no easy task to find a series of rooms of ready access and sufficiently large to contain the collection of paintings. The problem, however, has been solved, and in a manner which we are inclined to think will meet with universal approbation. The place chosen is the west side of Bramante's long Cortile di Belvedere, consequently facing the Galleria Lapidaria, which is on its eastern side. The buildings here are three stories high, but the new Gallery will be on the ground floor, and the entrance door will be in the Vialone di Belvedere, which is the road behind St. Peter's along which the visitor drives to the entrance of the Etruscan Museum and the Sculpture Galleries, having on his left hand the wall of the extensive Vatican garden.

The advantages pertaining to the present locality are that the rooms will be in a continuous line, having the same lighting from the east, which, on the whole, is of all aspects the most favourable for the judicious display of oil paintings. The rooms will also be the same in depth and height. But as the representation of the various schools is numerically different, and as the pictures vary in size, so the rooms will be of various length; thus the length of the largest of the seven rooms will be 23 metres, and that of the smallest $8\frac{1}{2}$ metres. The entire length of the Gallery, including the small chapel of Pius V. at the end, is 145 metres. When it is remembered that the uniform height of the rooms is 8 metres, the reader will easily realize that in all dimensions their proportions are admirable. As to the decoration of the Gallery, a uniform scheme prevails through the entire suite of rooms, the coved ceiling being decorated in low relief ornament of the Roman Renaissance period. Its colour will be ivory white, perhaps sparingly picked out with gold. The walls on which the paintings will be hung are to be covered with watered silk of an olive-green tint. The "line," of the usual height, is defined by a delicate moulding, panelled beneath and terminating in a plain dado; the whole being in walnut wood. The floor will be parquetté in oak. Nothing could be simpler, or at the same time more impressive, than this fine harmony of subdued tints. It is truly suggestive of a sumptuous setting for works of art infinitely precious.

As stated above, the vestibule is on the level with the road; it will have on the right hand Rooms 1 to 4, those on the left being 5 to 7. The first room will contain the few Byzantine panels belonging to the Vatican (described by Prof. Muñoz in his notice of the late Grotto Ferrata Exhibition), and the works of the trecentisti. These were not exhibited in the old picture gallery, but were distributed about the Museum of Christian Art and the Library. The panels are mostly of small size; some, however, are of considerable interest. The second room will be assigned to the painters of the Tuscan School and others showing more or less Florentine influence. The Florentines will be represented by Fra Angelico, the Benozzo Gozzoli and the Lippo Lippi from the Lateran Gallery, and a few others. The central place facing the windows has been given to Melozzo da Forlì's important fresco showing Sixtus IV., Cardinals Giuliano della Rovere and Girolamo Riario, and the kneeling Platina, which is one of the greatest portrait pictures ever painted. It is to be regretted that circumstances will not allow the master's angels singing and playing musical instruments, now in the Sacristy of St. Peter's, to be also removed to this room, though this, however, may possibly be done later. As it is, the fresco will be worthily supported on either side by Marco Palmezzano's panels from the Lateran Gallery. The marvellous predella of the miracles of St. Hyacinth, by F. Cossa, is also in this room. The well-known series of altar-pieces by Perugino, Pinturicchio, Lo Spagno, together with the elaborate arrangements of Niccolò da Foligno, and other works of the Umbro-Marchigiana School, which gave a special character to the old Gallery, will be found in Room 3. As the reader has already divined, the series on the right-hand side of the vestibule will be closed by a room dedicated to Raphael, namely, No. 4. In this room the best light will be found on the side wall at the end, where 'The Transfiguration' has already been placed. Facing it on the opposite side will, of course, be hung the 'Madonna di Foligno,' which received a rather unsatisfactory lighting in the old Gallery, but will be well seen here. So also will the other works of the master. The centre opposite the windows has been given to Perugino's throned Madonna with the four saints. It will be flanked on either side by Raphael's 'Coronation of the Virgin,' with its original predella, and the same subject designed by Raphael and painted by Giulio Romano. The good Giovanni Santi has not been forgotten. His very creditable 'St. Jerome,' from the Lateran Gallery, has been transferred to the same room in which are collected the works of his illustrious son.

Returning to the vestibule, which will contain a marble bust of the Pope, and will probably be hung with some choice panels of old tapestry, the visitor will pass into Room 5. Here will be arranged the works of the Venetian School, the Crivellis (including the striking altarpiece from the Lateran).

the Bonifazio from the old Gallery, and on the side wall to the right Titian's great altarpiece of S. Nicolò dei Frari, which was also one of the grand canvases badly lighted in the past, and from which some of its fuliginous deposit has been carefully removed. Room 6 will be filled with the large canvases of the Seicentisti. 'The Communion of St. Jerome,' by Domenichino, will be on the side wall to the right, and opposite to it Caravaggio's 'Entombment.' The last room of all, No. 7, has been set apart for the foreign pictures, a rather miscellaneous gathering, but having some interesting works. Nicholas Poussin's 'Martyrdom of St. Erasmus' is unquestionably a fine scholarly work. Lawrence's portrait of George IV. is a good example of the master. So also the Murillo canvases fairly represent his style; but the collection is too heterogeneous to make an impressive display.

There can be little doubt that the creation of the new Vatican Gallery is likely to exercise a considerable influence, not only on the arrangement, but also on the construction, of similar public galleries in the future. It may therefore be useful to note how, in this instance, the work has been accomplished. So far as we can learn, the result has been attained by leaving nothing to chance, nor has responsibility been shirked in any quarter. The chief authority has been Monsignor Misciattelli, the head of his staff being Prof. Seitz, Director of the Pinacoteca and the Pontifical Galleries (whose recent sudden death has been generally lamented), Prof. Dr. Pietro d'Achiardi, and Prof. Comm. Costantino Sneider, Architect to the Vatican Palace. As soon as the place of the Gallery had been determined, a table of the pictures under their various schools was drawn up. Their position on the walls was then planned, and drawings made of their arrangement on the walls of the seven rooms it was found they would require. Then the entire gallery was spaced out, and the architect began the construction of the side walls, and made designs for the stucco ornamentation of the ceiling for the approval of Monsignor Misciattelli and the Directors. The questions of the method of heating (which will be by steam tubing placed near the windows), the fixed seats, the blinds, doors, panelling beneath the line, and, in short, the numerous details, were thought out and discussed. On account of the danger to the building from the installation of the wires, the electric light will not be used.

There are, it is to be feared, regions where all this forethought and scrupulous attention to details would be considered, if not superfluous, at least outside the scope of official cognizance. In the case of the erection of a national picture gallery or an art museum, where such ideas prevail, an architect of reputation would be chosen, and informed that the edifice was to be built on the usual lines of public monuments—that it was to have a handsome façade, ornate interior, and so forth. But that the Director was to be consulted on the arrangement and decoration of the rooms would be the last thing thought of by the officials, or the architect. He would probably have his ideas, and say that at length the time had come when he could translate into stone that cupola which was for ever to associate his name with those of Brunelleschi, Michelangelo, and Sir Christopher Wren. Or it might be a staircase which had long haunted his imagination, and was to eclipse those of the Scala dei Giganti at the Doges' Palace at Venice and the Durazzo cortile at Genoa. Or, again, his fancy might have run in the direction of palatial halls, such as at the National Gallery has given us the enormous Venetian Room, whereof the present contents would be sufficient to fill half a dozen judiciously arranged chambers, and where even the splendid 'Raising of Lazarus' by Michelangelo and Sebastian del Piombo is lost. Here, at least, the example of the new rooms at the Vatican may, it is to be hoped, lead to some salutary attempt at reconstruction and rearrangement.

The day on which the Vatican Gallery will be opened to the public has not yet been definitely fixed. It is believed, however, that it will be towards the end of February.

Fine-Art Gossip.

THE annual exhibition of drawings, designs, and objects of handicraft by the students of the Metropolitan School of Art, Dublin, was opened last week. The success of the School in the National Art-Competition last year is shown by the fact that twelve medals were won by the students. Amongst the most successful exhibits are those in enamel and metal work, in which the School took the highest place at the National Competition. Some of the studies by members of the School Sketching Club are also remarkably good; and in the Modelling Section Mr. Albert Power shows some excellent work.

IN March next the Paris house of Pierre Lafitte & Cie. will begin publication of a series of art monographs with the general title of "Les Peintres Illustres," under the direction of M. Henri Roujon, the Secrétaire perpétuel of the Académie des Beaux-Arts. Each volume will be devoted to a celebrated artist, and will contain eight reproductions in colours and 76 pages of text on fine paper.

THE SCHOOL OF ART WOOD-CARVING, South Kensington, formerly in Exhibition Road, has removed to 39, Thurloe Place.

THE collection of sculptures of Pierre Puget, recently on view at the Franco-British Exhibition, has been transferred by the French Minister of Marine to the Louvre.

It may interest those who are visiting Paris during the present and four following months to know that the Municipal Council has decided to throw open the Dutuit Collection at the Petit Palais on two evenings each week—Monday and Wednesday.

THE French Académie des Beaux-Arts elected last week a new member in the section of engraving, the vacancy being caused by the death of Achille Jacquet. At the third ballot M. Waltner was declared the successful candidate. The new Academician, who is sixty-two years of age, is a native of Paris, and won the Prix de Rome in 1868. His greatest achievements are probably his renderings of Rembrandt; he is well known in this country as the engraver of works by Gainsborough, Lawrence, and Hoppner.

THE next number of the Liverpool Annals of Archæology and Anthropology will contain, among other papers, a fully illustrated summary by Prof. Garstang of his recent excavations at Sakje-Geuzi in North Syria, where he has laid open a Hittite temple with sculptured wall-slabs, and an unusually large series of pottery going back to the later Stone Age.

EXHIBITIONS.

- SAT. (Jan. 9).—Prof. C. J. Holmes's Paintings and Water-Colours, Carfax Gallery.
—Aron Jéruddahl's Sculpture and Statuettes, Baillie Gallery.
—Quartette of Roman Painters, Pictures and Water-Colours, Private View, Fine-Art Society's Gallery.
—Mr. G. Thomson's Water-Colours, Private View, Goupil Gallery.
—Second Annual Children's Exhibition, Baillie Gallery.

MUSIC

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

The Evolution of Modern Orchestration. By Louis Adolphe Coerne. (New York, the Macmillan Company.)—Our author speaks of the admirable handling of the subject by Lavoix in his 'Histoire de l'Instrumentation,' but as regards German romanticists Lavoix virtually stopped at Wagner. Further, he notes that there is no similar comprehensive work in English; hence the present volume.

The dawn of independent instrumentation began in Italy with the two Gabriellis. Monteverde occupies an important place, and his orchestra and the particular effects he drew from it have often been mentioned; Mr. Coerne, however, points to Striggio, who, about thirty years before 'Euridice' was produced, used an orchestra of which more than half were stringed instruments, seven of them being played with a bow. Monteverde, nevertheless, is rightly described as the "founder of modern orchestration." Between him and Bach, Alessandro Scarlatti by his treatment of strings and wind paved the way for Bach and Handel, to whom brief space is given, as neither was really a link in the chain of orchestral evolution. Haydn and Mozart, as our author remarks, were virtually unfamiliar with the greater part of Bach's works. Haydn's knowledge of them must, we imagine, have been very small. The next great name is Gluck, and though he "relied to an excessive degree upon the string band," various features of interest in his scores are mentioned, notably his employment of a group of three trombones—a precedent "endorsed by all subsequent composers."

Our author calls Monteverde the "father of modern instrumentation," but Haydn the "father of modern orchestration." If we pass over Haydn, Mozart, and Beethoven, whose achievements in orchestration, if important, are fairly familiar, Spontini and Meyerbeer are the next names that attract attention, and they are of special interest in that Wagner owed much to their works. The romantic school is then considered, and we arrive at the "new movement of which Berlioz, Liszt, and Wagner were the founders." It is somewhat strange that Mr. Coerne should include Liszt, since he afterwards states that his orchestration "embodies nothing conspicuously new"; moreover, Liszt was helped in his scoring by at any rate one composer, viz., Raff. Many pages are devoted, of course, to Richard Strauss and his orchestration.

The final chapter treats of the music of Hungary and Bohemia; Scandinavia and Russia; England and America. Of Sir George Macfarren we are told that his "works are among the most important contributions to the literature of English music"—a statement that will astonish lovers of music in this country, for, except here and there in the provinces, his name is scarcely ever seen now on any concert programme. If Sullivan had consecrated himself to a nobler form of art than comic opera, he might, says Mr. Coerne, "have become the greatest of all English composers," which, to say the least, is open to question. Mr. Coerne names Paine, Buck, Foote, Chadwick, MacDowell, and Parker as America's representative writers for the orchestra; but he believes that there are many others who granted the opportunity, "would undoubtedly rise to epoch-making greatness." There is an interesting 'Appendix of Musical Illustrations,' ranging from Monteverde to Strauss.

The book shows wide reading and experience. We have given only an outline of the contents, mentioning the special links in the chain of development; but there are many valuable details about the scoring of lesser composers who foreshadowed new features in that way frequently ascribed to their greater successors. Our author in discussing modern composers, especially the English and American, has indulged in praise or the reverse concerning their music, though this in itself did not, we think, form part of his argument. We have given quotations about English composers as specimens. Of Chadwick we read that his music is "above all manly and energetic"; and of Dudley Buck, that he "occupies an honorable position as one of the foremost of our writers of church music."

FROM Messrs. Bach & Co. we have received Part I. of Alessandro Scarlatti's Harpsichord and Organ Music, edited by J. S. Shedlock. The composer in question, who was born in Sicily in 1659, or possibly a year earlier, and died at Naples in 1725, is known as the creator of opera, and some of the beautiful songs from his lyric works still retain favour to-day. He also wrote many Toccatas, Fugues, and other compositions for the harpsichord, as well as some for the organ; and manuscript copies of these are to be found in various libraries in Italy. Two books of Toccatas are at the Naples Conservatoire, and ten pieces of the same description have found a home at the Milan Conservatoire. The manuscript volume upon which Mr. Shedlock has drawn comprises 336 pages, all, with the exception of the last nine, filled with music. Particular interest attaches to the harpsichord pieces of Alessandro Scarlatti in that they were written before any work of the kind by Johann Sebastian Bach had been published, and also because Scarlatti and Bernard Pasquini, who wrote much for the harpsichord, were contemporaries, both, indeed, being members of the Arcadian Academy at Rome. Though important from an historical point of view, Scarlatti's harpsichord music does not claim attention solely by reason of its antiquarian interest.

Musical Gossip.

PROF. NIECKS of Edinburgh, in the paper he read last week at the Conference of the Incorporated Society of Musicians on 'Musical Terminology, Considered Historically, Theoretically, and Remedially,' pointed out some of the anomalies, inadequacies, and confusions of musical terminology; and with regard to our nomenclature of time values, he thought England could not do better than follow the example of the Teutonic countries and America. Mr. Swift-Paine Johnston, in his practical paper on 'Teachers and the Study of Psychology,' dwelt on the important question how to provide suitable training for teachers. With regard to general education, he thought that the Society ought to register only teachers acquainted with at any rate one of the three languages, French, German, Italian. Prof. Prout, who joined in the discussion, recommended German, because, as he truly remarked, it contained the largest amount of musical literature. The number of serious works in French is, however, rapidly increasing.

At the orchestral concert at Queen's Hall on Thursday evening, December 31st, there were six new works in the programme. First came a bright, well-scored 'Comedy Overture' by Mr. Henry E. Gheel. An Orchestral Suite, 'The Miracle of the Roses,' by Dr. James Lyon, having as its basis

Southey's poem of that name, was principally noticeable for the clever orchestration of the third and last sections; as programme music it was not always easy to follow. A Scena, 'In English Seas,' by Mr. J. Weston Nicholl, did not prove very satisfactory. The title was not happy. A composer by certain realistic effects may imitate the movement of the sea, or, like Wagner in the first act of 'Tristan,' create, as it were, a sea atmosphere; but he cannot by any means describe, or even suggest, "English" seas. Mr. J. Carlowitz Ames's Symphonic Poem 'Sir Galahad' won a well-deserved success. Thematic material, workmanship, and scoring were all excellent. The works were well rendered by the London Symphony Orchestra under the energetic direction of Mr. Allen Gill.

MR. CHARLES MANNERS has issued to the members of the National English Opera Union, a sketch-programme of a three weeks' season of opera at Drury Lane, to begin on May 17th. Three operas by British composers have been selected: Mr. Coleridge-Taylor's 'Thelma,' Mr. Colin McAlpin's 'Ingomar,' and Mr. Nicholas Gatty's 'Duke or Devil.' Mr. Manners hoped to include Miss Ethel Smyth's 'The Wreckers,' but she feared there would not be sufficient time to rehearse it properly.

FEBRUARY 3RD will be the hundredth anniversary of the birth of Felix Mendelssohn Bartholdy, and to celebrate the event a special concert, to be given under the direction of Mr. Henry J. Wood, has been arranged by the directors of the Queen's Hall Orchestra for that day. The programme will include the 'Hymn of Praise,' with Madame Lilian Blauvelt, Miss Edith Miller, and Mr. Gervase Elwes as soloists. The choir will be that of the Sheffield Amateur Musical Society.

THE programme of the Philharmonic Concert of Tuesday, February 2nd, will be largely devoted to Mendelssohn; it includes among other works the 'Scotch' Symphony and the G minor Pianoforte Concerto, with M. Pugno as pianist. There will be a novelty, a Border ballad, 'Gray Galloway,' by Mr. McEwen, and a first performance at these concerts of Chabrier's 'Gwendoline' Overture. These works are welcome; but as Mendelssohn frequently appeared, both as composer and conductor, at the Philharmonic Concerts, the whole programme might surely have been devoted to his music. The concert will be under the direction of M. Chevillard. The programme-book will contain a notice of Mendelssohn specially written for the occasion by Mr. F. Gilbert Webb.

DR. JAMES KENDRICK PYNE has retired from the post of organist of Manchester Cathedral, to which he was appointed in 1875, in succession to Sir Frederick Bridge. He comes of a musical family. His grandfather was in his day a noted tenor singer, and his father was an organist and composer.

DR. JOHN E. BORLAND has been appointed musical adviser and inspector to the Education Committee of the London County Council.

THE composer and writer M. Louis Étienne Ernest Reyer was on friendly terms with Berlioz, and succeeded him as musical critic on the Journal des Débats. His best-known operas are 'La Statue,' produced in 1861, and 'Sigurd,' produced at Brussels in 1884, and in the same year at Covent Garden. M. Reyer is now in his eighty-seventh year. We are glad to learn that the report from Marseilles of his being seriously ill is unfounded.

A "STRAUSS" week will mark at Dresden the production of the composer's new opera this month. In addition to 'Elektra' will be given 'Feuersnot,' 'Salome,' and the 'Sinfonia Domestica.'

THE Beethovenhaus Verein will give a chamber-music festival at Bonn during May.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

SUN.	Concert, 3.30, Royal Albert Hall.
—	Sunday Society Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.
—	Sunday League Concert, 7, Queen's Hall.
MON.	Messrs. G. Elwes and James Friskin's Concert, 8.30, Æolian Hall.
TUES.	Messrs. Orton Bradley and M. Watson's Pianoforte and Violin Recital, 3, Steinway Hall.
THURS.	Broadwood Concert, 8.30, Æolian Hall.
SAT.	Mr. Harold Bauer's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Bechstein Hall.
—	Mozart Society, 3, Portman Rooms.
—	Queen's Hall Orchestra, 3, Queen's Hall.

DRAMA

OUR LIBRARY-TABLE.

Mathilde. By Adolphus A. Jack. (Constable & Co.)—In his 'History of English Prosody' Prof. Saintsbury speaks of "that curious false note which pervades all our modern dramatic blank verse, no matter whether it be Lamb's or Landor's, Taylor's or Tennyson's, not to speak of that of living persons." "It is good [blank verse] poetically," he adds, "but not good dramatically; it is evidently written, in nature if not in intention, to be read rather than heard." Sweeping as this generalization may seem, it is essentially sound, and so far has the habit of writing poetic drama for the study, rather than the stage, gone that we have had poets who have penned blank-verse plays which could not be performed within the limits of six or even more hours. Mr. Jack's new drama, which recalls at once the work of Webster and that of Browning in its partiality for the intriguing atmosphere of the Italian Courts of the Renaissance and for strange revolutions of character and subtleties of argument, would, with a few cuts, play within the time tradition allots to the traffic of the stage; but the verse has about it the artificiality of which Prof. Saintsbury complains, and it has been obviously composed more for the reader than for the playgoer. With that reservation, and with the further provisos that the atmosphere of the piece is romantic—nay more, Italianate; that the characters of the story are rhetoricians, and even sophists; and that their changes of front, though picturesque, are apt to be sudden, and even somewhat incalculable, 'Mathilde' fully deserves the warmest praise for its ingenious reproduction of the manner and—to no small extent—the rhythm of the Elizabethans. One startling anachronism—an allusion to "back numbers" in the sense understood by American slang—seems hardly admissible even in a comic scene. And it can scarcely be denied that Mr. Jack's blank-verse lines are too often of the end-stopped, or at any rate the self-enclosed, type. But for the most part he catches the style and swing of greater days with a happy imitiveness.

His story is placed in the Court of Ferrara, and when the curtain rises we are introduced to its Duke, a half-crazy despot who treats his heiress, the young Princess Mathilde, with a neglect that is the result of jealousy, and leans on the advice of a peasant-born and newly ennobled Chamberlain. The latter can do everything with his master save help the Princess; and when she taunts him with indifference to her interests, he makes an avowal of love, only to meet with a harsh and insulting snub. His plan is formed: he will have the mad Duke assassinated; he will spread rumours as to the Princess's complicity; and meanwhile he will move a step nearer her rank, and rob her of her throne by himself taking the office of Regent. All this he accomplishes, and there comes a day when the lifting of his finger might cost the Princess her life; instead, he stands up in her defence, and wins not only her gratitude, but also her hand. Years pass by, but the satisfaction of his ambitions cannot drown in him the voice of remorse or the sense that he has won his royal consort by a trick; and so he makes confession to her of his scheming, and dies when his confession is but just ended. "Cover his eyes," says the Cardinal of the play, with an audacious adaptation of Webster's line, but mercifully refrains from completing the quotation.

John the Baptist: a Play. By Hermann Sudermann. Translated by Beatrice Marshall. (John Lane.)—How Herr Sudermann's play would impress English theatre-goers, were there any chance of its production, it is a little difficult to say. Certainly it contains no element, except the fact that its hero is a Biblical character, which should prevent our censor, who has already licensed the Drury Lane version of 'Ben Hur,' the piece which, along with 'Salome,' it most nearly resembles, from sanctioning its representation. To judge by the reception which was accorded to a situation in 'Ben Hur' almost identical with the closing tableau of Herr Sudermann's work—a situation which represents the scene celebrated by our Church on Palm Sunday—there should be little doubt as to how the last act of 'John the Baptist' would be regarded in the playhouse, especially as this tableau comes as the culmination of an act which piles climax on climax. Into this one section of the drama the playwright crowds such episodes as the feast of Herod—given, we are to imagine, in honour of the visit of a Roman legate; the dance of Salome and Herod's promise; the appeal for the head of the Baptist; the summoning of John, and his reception of his two messengers returned from their mission of questioning the Messiah; the sentencing of John, happy at last in discovering what the Gospel means; the account of Salome's mad revel with the head of the man who has scorned her beauty; and finally the singing of the Hosanna hymn heard from the palace as John's successor enters Jerusalem. The effect of that act in the theatre would be tremendous. What we may be dubious about is whether the action of the earlier scenes might not drag—whether the characterization of the Baptist is not too subtle to get across the footlights. If Herr Sudermann does not suggest that hothouse atmosphere of Oriental luxury and depravity which Oscar Wilde indicates in 'Salome,' if his heroine is more of a minx and less of a young witch than the English poet's, still we are saved from that ugly touch of decadence on which Wilde prided himself, "J'ai baisé ta bouche," and the members of the Herod family are sufficiently individualized for stage purposes. All the scenes, indeed, in which Herodias or Salome or Herod encounters John are full of vivacity and the clash of temperament. It is the passages in which the Baptist comes into contact with his own disciples, and shows himself helpless to deal with their problems and desires, that might hang fire in the playhouse. Yet Herr Sudermann's portrait of John—a Forerunner who knows not the nature of the kingdom which his Prince will found, a hermit preaching repentance and the wrath to come who learns with bewilderment that the Prophet whose way he has prepared talks of love, and moves freely and humbly amongst men—to a reader at all events, is the most impressive and pathetic feature of the play. Another striking thing is the way in which the influence of Christ gradually makes itself felt more and more as the action progresses, till at last John can resign himself to removal from the path of his Master. There should be no necessity to add, in the case of so admirable an artist as Herr Sudermann, that his handling of his theme is always reverent, or that his use of the sacred text is never other than dignified. Miss Beatrice Marshall may be congratulated on a graceful translation.

Dramatic Gossip.

M. PAUL FLAT in the Revue Bleue of this week has an interesting article on the administration of the Comédie Française. M. Siblot and Madame Berthe Cerny have been promoted to the "sociétariat." M. Claretie has taken energetic measures by informing the artists under his rule that their absence will not be tolerated without leave from the administration, and hopes to put an end to what is described as a state of anarchy by making actors responsible for receipts which suffer by their absence.

MESSRS. HENRY YOUNG & SONS will shortly publish another work by the octogenarian Liverpool author Mr. W. L. Rush-ton, entitled 'Shakespeare, and the Arte of English Poesie,' in which Mr. Rushton shows by many examples Shakespeare's indebtedness to that source.

THE death in his seventy-ninth year is announced from Berlin of the dramatist Georg Kruse, the father of the well-known musical critic Georg Richard Kruse. He was for many years the Director of the Berlin National Theatre. Among his plays are 'Sie weint,' 'Sie ist stumm,' 'Kriegsgefangen,' and 'Roland von Berlin.'

THE "January Society of 1908" in Copenhagen has just invited Mr. William Archer to give two lectures there on dramatic art towards the end of this month, as the first of a number of English lectures on literature, science, art, travel, and social questions of the day. This society, which numbers most of the professors of the Copenhagen University among its members, besides prominent men in other ranks of life, intends to develop intellectual and literary intercourse between Denmark and Western Europe, especially England.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—J. N. F.—W. M.—F. W.—H. E.—C. C. S.—Received. N. M.—All right.
No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.
We do not undertake to give the value of books, china, pictures, &c.
We cannot undertake to reply to inquiries concerning the appearance of reviews of books.

THE ATHENÆUM,

PRICE THREEPENCE.

Is published every FRIDAY in time for the Afternoon Mails. Terms of Subscription, free by post to all parts of the United Kingdom: For Six Months, 7s. 8d.; for Twelve Months, 15s. 3d. For the Continent and all places within the Postal Union: For Six Months, 9s.; for Twelve Months, 18s., commencing from any date, payable in advance to JOHN C. FRANCIS.

Athenæum Office, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, London, E.C.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

	PAGE
AUTHORS' AGENTS	30
BAGSTER & SONS	55
BELL & SONS	52
CATALOGUES	30
CONSTABLE & CO.	31
DENT & CO.	32
DUCKWORTH & CO.	53
EDUCATIONAL	29
EXHIBITIONS	29
INSURANCE COMPANIES	55
LONG	56
MACMILLAN & CO.	32
MAGAZINES, &c.	31
MISCELLANEOUS	30
NOTES AND QUERIES	54
PRINTERS	30
PROVIDENT INSTITUTIONS	29
SALES BY AUCTION	30
SITUATIONS VACANT	29
SITUATIONS WANTED	30
SONNENSCHNEIN & CO.	31
TYPE-WRITERS, &c.	30
WILLIAMS & NORGATE	32

MESSRS. BELL'S BOOKS.

FOURTH EDITION NOW READY.

Royal 16mo, cloth, 1s. net.

THYSIA.

An Elegy in Thirty-Five Sonnets.

"Sonnets which I hold to be of exquisite quality....They have that pathos inscribed on marble in the best Greek epitaphs."—Mr. FREDERIC HARRISON in the Nineteenth Century, Nov., 1908.

"A series of in memoriam sonnets....which claim respect by the genuineness of their feeling, and the polished simplicity of their diction."—Times.

"There is some good work here, and some high thought too."—Daily Chronicle.

JUST PUBLISHED. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

IN VIKING LAND: Norway, Its

People, Its Fjords, and Its Fjelds. By W. S. MONROE.

With many Illustrations.

"A compendium of information on the history, people, religion, commerce, life, scenery, literature, music, and art of Norway, with suggestions for travellers, and a short bibliography."

MR. MALLOCK'S NEW NOVEL. Cloth, 6s.

AN IMMORTAL SOUL. By W. H.

MALLOCK, Author of 'A Human Document,' 'The Individualist,' &c.

"Mr. Mallock's new novel must be read through with that attention which every line of his demands....By far the most remarkable and impressive piece of English writing yet produced in connexion with modern psychic research."—Outlook.

VOL. III. JUST PUBLISHED. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

THE WORKS OF FRANCIS BEAUMONT & JOHN FLETCHER.

Variorum Edition. Edited by A. H. BULLEN.

To be completed in 12 vols.

Contents of Vol. III. — THE FAITHFUL SHEPHERDESS, Edited by W. W. Greg. THE MAD LOVER, Edited by R. Warwick Bond. THE LOYAL SUBJECT, Edited by John Masefield, with an Introduction by R. Warwick Bond. RULE A WIFE AND HAVE A WIFE, Edited by R. Warwick Bond. THE LAWS OF CANDY, Edited by E. K. Chambers.

"A critical edition of Beaumont and Fletcher is the boon most desired by students of the Tudor drama....The previous labours of Mr. Bullen have fitted him for the task now in progress, and its accomplishment may be regarded as the crown of editorial work by which scholarship has largely profited....The edition is entitled to a warm welcome, and is admirable in typographical as in other respects."—Athenæum.

Write for Prospectus.

NOW COMPLETED IN TWELVE VOLUMES, 5s. each.

THE PROSE WORKS OF JONATHAN SWIFT.

Edited by TEMPLE SCOTT.

With an Introduction by W. E. H. LECKY, M.P.

In 12 vols. small post 8vo, with numerous Portraits and Facsimiles, 5s. each.

[Bohn's Standard Library.]

Vol. XII, completing the Edition. Complete Bibliography by W. SPENCER JACKSON, and Full Index, with Essays on the Portraits of Swift and Stella by the Right Hon. Sir FREDERICK FALKNER, K.C., and on the relations between Swift and Stella by the Very Rev. J. H. BERNARD, D.D., Dean of St. Patrick's. With 2 Portraits and a View of Woodpark.

Write for Prospectus.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

BROWNING AND DOGMA. Being

Seven Lectures on Browning's Attitude on Dogmatic Religion. By ETHEL M. NAISH.

THE STANDARD AUTHORITY. WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY.

TWENTIETH-CENTURY EDITION.

Revised and Enlarged with an Appendix of 25,000 Words, Phrases, and Definitions.

2,348 pages. 5,000 Illustrations.

WRITE FOR DETAILED PROSPECTUS, with Specimen Pages, Opinions of Eminent Men, and prices in various styles of binding.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS,
York House, Portugal Street, W.C.

New and Forthcoming Books from DUCKWORTH & CO.'S List of Publications

Great Masters of Dutch and Flemish Painting. By Dr. W. BODE.

With 48 Illustrations. Pott 4to, 7s. 6d. net.
The list of Painters whose works are discussed and illustrated here includes Rembrandt, Frans Hals, Vermeer, Metsu, Jan Steen, Wouwermans, Paul Potter, Reubens, and Van Dyck. [January 14.]

Christopher Wren. By LENA MILMAN. With upwards of 50 Illustrations. Pott 4to, 7s. 6d. net. [Now ready.]

Sir Richard Tangye. By STUART J. REID, D.C.L. With Photogravure

Portrait. Large crown 8vo, 6s.
"A very well-written account of an excellent man, a typical specimen of a fine class, a man with an amiable and interesting personality, and many-sided activities which were beneficial to his fellow-townsmen, to the country, and the Empire."—Standard.

Great Actors of the Eighteenth Century. By KARL MANTZIUS.

Being Vol. V. of 'A History of Theatrical Art,' with 73 Illustrations from Photographs, Prints, Drawings, &c. Royal 8vo, 10s. net. [In the press.]

A History of Art. By Dr. GIULIO CAROTTI, of the Royal Academy in Milan and the Royal University of Rome. Edited by Mrs. S. ARTHUR STRONG, LL.D.

Volume I. Ancient Art. With 500 Illustrations. Small crown 8vo, 5s. net. [Ready.]
Volume II. The Middle Ages. With very numerous Illustrations. Small crown 8vo, 5s. net. [Shortly.]

Francis Joseph I.: his Life and Times. An Essay in Politics (with an Appendix dealing with Recent Events). By R. P. MAHAFFY. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net. [Just published.]

This book attempts to summarize the life of the oldest and one of the most important of European Sovereigns, the Emperor-King who has been sixty years on the throne. The portion dealing with recent events in Austria-Hungary will serve to correct some false impressions.

Some African Highways. A Journey of Two Women to Uganda and the Transvaal. By CAROLINE KIRKLAND. Introduction by Lieut.-Gen. BADEN-POWELL. Illustrations and Maps, crown 8vo, 6s. net.

"Enthusiasm and vitality. A very vivacious book."—Observer.

Pros and Cons of Vivisection. By Dr. CHARLES RICHEL, Professor of Physiology in the Faculty of Medicine, Paris. With a Preface by Professor HALLIBURTON. Illustrated. 2s. 6d. net.

Woman in Industry. From Seven Points of View. With a Preface by

D. J. SHACKLETON, M.P. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

The Rubaiyat of Umar Khayyam. Fitzgerald's 2nd Edition. With

Notes by EDWARD HERON ALLEN. Crown 4to, 10s. 6d. net.

NEW AND FORTHCOMING FICTION. Crown 8vo, 6s. each.

The Spy: the Story of a Superfluous Man. By MAXIM GORKY.

The Kiss, and other Stories. By ANTON TCHEKHOFF.

Faith, and other Sketches. By R. B. CUNNINGHAME GRAHAM. [In the press.]

The Heart of a Gypsy: a Tale. By ROSAMOND NAPIER. [Shortly.]

The English Review. JANUARY NUMBER, contains Contributions by D. G.

ROSSETTI, GEO. MEREDITH, ANATOLE FRANCE, R. B. CUNNINGHAME GRAHAM, COUNT TOLSTOI, H. G. WELLS, JOSEPH CONRAD, VERNON LEE, THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON. Price 2s. 6d. net.
On Sale everywhere.

"LEARNED, CHATTY, USEFUL."—Athenæum.

"THAT DELIGHTFUL REPOSITORY OF FORGOTTEN LORE, 'NOTES AND QUERIES.'"

Edinburgh Review, October, 1880.

Every Saturday, of any Bookseller or Newsagent in England, price 4d.; or free by post to the Continent, 4½d.

NOTES AND QUERIES:

A MEDIUM OF INTERCOMMUNICATION FOR LITERARY MEN AND GENERAL READERS.

* * * Subscription, 10s. 3d. for Six Months; 20s. 6d. for Twelve Months, including postage.

The NINTH SERIES of NOTES AND QUERIES, complete in 12 vols. (JANUARY, 1898, to DECEMBER, 1903), price 10s. 6d. each Volume, contains, in addition to a great variety of similar Notes and Replies, Articles of Interest on the following Subjects.

FIRST SELECTION.

AMERICANA.

President J. Adams's Biography—Sarah Flower Adams and Mrs. Beecher Stowe—The Alabama and Lord John Russell—Alewife, an American Fish—Discovery of America—Study of Dante in America—Genealogical Research in America—England and Scotland reproduced in America—America v. United States—Raleigh in America—British Suzerainty in South America—Losses in American Civil War—Value of American Diplomas and Degrees—American Orthography.

BIBLIOGRAPHY and LITERARY HISTORY.

Addison and Tennyson—Harrison Ainsworth—"Anne of Swansea," her Works—Anonym: Autonym—"Abbey of Kilkhampton"—"Butterfly's Ball and the Grasshopper's Feast"—"The Coming K"—"History of the Rod"—Junius's Letters—"Nova Solyma"—"Twelve Profits of Tribulation"—Matthew Arnold—Arnold of Rugby—H. S. Ashbee—Poet Laureate's Birthplace—Authors' Mistakes—Francis Bacon, his Mistakes in Classical Names—Philip James Bailey—Barclay's "Argenis"—Bibliography of the Bicycle—History of Bookselling and Publishing—Book-Sale Catalogues—Riming Warnings to Book-Borrowers—Books and Bookmen—E. B. and Robert Browning—Michael Bruce and Logan—Bunyan and the "Pilgrim's Progress"—Peculiar Words in Burns—Burton's "Anatomy"—Ode on Byron's Death.

BIOGRAPHY.

Bridget Abbot—Two George Abbots, contemporary M.P.s—Adam the Carthusian and Adam the Scot—Elizabeth Alkin, "Parliament Joan"—Annie of Tharau—General Benedict Arnold—Dr. Barry, Female Army Doctor—Beaconsfield's Birthplace—Cardinal Beaton's Reputed Marriage—Admiral Bligh—Bonaparte's Attempted Invasion of England—John Bond, two Puritan Divines—Cæsar Borgia's Parentage—Cobham Brewer's Monument—Robert Bruce's Heart.

ECCLESIASTICAL MATTERS.

Collect for Advent Sunday—Alfriston Registers—Wood-carvings at Allhallows the Great, Upper Thames Street—Cushions on the Altar—Anchorites and Low Side Windows—Angels, their Traditional Representation—Martyr Bishop of Armagh—Christian Basilicas—Bell Inscriptions—Bell-ringers' Rimes—"Breeches," "Treacle," "Vinegar," and "Wicked" Bibles—Bishops' Signatures.

FOLK-LORE and POPULAR ANTIQUITIES.

Acervation, the Custom—Animals in People's Insides—Animals Tried and Sentenced—Apple Blossoms in Coffins—Wassailing the Apple Tree—White Gloves at Assizes—Cutting Baby's Nails—Baptismal and Marriage Superstitions—Bees—Bird of the Soufrière—Bluebeard, the Original—Borrowing Days—Building Customs.

GENEALOGY and HERALDRY.

Acts of the Apostles as a Christian Name—Agnes a Fateful Name—Algernon, its Origin—Alias in Family Names—Ancestors Defined—Soldier Ancestors—Andrews Family of Cornwall—Angier or Aungier Family—Anglo-Saxon Heraldry—Arbuthnot Family—Archer Family—Armigerous Families—Arms of Continental Cities, and of Boroughs and Dioceses—Foreign Arms in England—"Bar sinister"—Arms of Ulster in Baronet's Shield—Bear and Ragged Staff—Bibliography of Heraldry—Bulls in Coats of Arms—Borough English Succession—Bristow Family.

HISTORY: ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTTISH.

Abbot of Westminster's Plot, 1399—Long Administrations—South African War, Newspaper Correspondents Killed and Wounded—King Alfred, the Truth-teller and England's Darling—Lines on Queen Anne—Queues worn in the Army—Chain-mail in the Army—King Arthur's Crown—The Indian Mutiny and the Athenæum—Duchy of Berwick—Boadicea or Boudicca—Anne Boleyn's Execution—Battle of the Boyne—Britain as "Queen of Isles" and "Empress of the Main"—British Academy, its Foundation Members.

PHILOLOGY and GRAMMAR.

Short a v. Italian a—A or an before h sounded—Accent and Etymology—Accorder, its Derivation—Extraordinary Adjectives—Affection and Connexion, their False Forms—African Names, their Pronunciation and Derivation—Alamains, its Meaning—"Alright" for "All right"—Erroneous use of "And which"—Anglo-Hebrew Slang—Anglo-Saxon Speech—Anyone: Everyone—Appendicitis—Peculiar Use of "Arrived"—Barracked, Colonial Slang—Bask Language—Bayard, Horse-name—Bezique—Bird-eyed—Bletheramskite—Bonnet-laird: Cock-laird—Bridewain, its Meaning—Bridge, the Card Game, its Derivation.

PROVERBS and QUOTATIONS.

South Africa, "grave of great reputations"—"Devil walking through Athlone"—"A far cry to Loch Awe"—"All Cooper's ducks with me"—"All roads lead to Rome"—"Babies in the eyes"—"Save one's bacon"—"Baff week"—"Be the day weary"—"Beatific vision"—"Better to have loved and lost"—"Between the devil and the deep sea"—"Blood is thicker than water"—"Box Harry"—"Bristol look"—"Broaching the Admiral."

TOPOGRAPHY.

Achill Island, its History—"Gibraltar and Malta" at Albert Gate—Aldersgate, its Name—Aldgate and Whitechapel—Amen Court, its Name—Argh as Termination—Arundel and Ash, Place-names—Meaning of "Bailey"—Ball's Pond Road—Barras, Bayswater, Beaulieu, and Bibury as Place-names—Changes in Bream's Buildings.

JOHN C. FRANCIS and J. EDWARD FRANCIS, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, London, E.C.

WORKS BY WILLIAM THYNNE LYNN.

ELEVENTH EDITION NOW READY, price Two Shillings net.

CELESTIAL MOTIONS:

A Handy Book of Astronomy.

Eleventh Edition. With 5 Plates.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S., Member of the British Astronomical Association, formerly of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich,

Author of 'Remarkable Comets,' 'Remarkable Eclipses,' 'Astronomy for the Young,' &c.

"Well known as one of our best introductions to astronomy."—Guardian.

NINTH EDITION NOW READY, fcap. 8vo, cloth, price Sixpence net.

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES:

A Sketch of the most interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses, both in Ancient and Modern Times.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"The booklet deserves to continue in popularity. It presents a mass of information in small compass."—Dundee Advertiser.

THIRTEENTH EDITION, JUST OUT, price Sixpence, cloth.

REMARKABLE COMETS:

A Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

FIFTH EDITION, REVISED TO 1908, NOW READY.

Fcap. 8vo, cloth, price Sixpence net.

ASTRONOMY FOR THE YOUNG.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Nothing better of its kind has ever appeared."—English Mechanic.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY, price One Shilling.

BRIEF LESSONS ON THE PARABLES AND MIRACLES OF OUR LORD.

With an Appendix on the Names of the Apostles and 4 Maps.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.,

Associate of King's College, London, Lay Reader in the Diocese of Southwark.

"That praiseworthy little book."—Guardian, August 22, 1906.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY, price One Shilling.

BIBLE CHRONOLOGY:

The Principal Events Recorded in the Holy Scriptures, arranged under their Probable Respective Dates, with a Description of the Places named, and a Supplement on English Versions.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.,

Associate of King's College, London, Lay Reader in the Diocese of Southwark.

"This compendious and useful little work."—Guardian, March 14, 1906.

SECOND EDITION, fcap. 8vo, price Fourpence.

NEW TESTAMENT CHRONOLOGY:

The Principal Events Recorded in the New Testament, arranged under their Probable Respective Dates.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.,

Associate of King's College, London, Lay Reader in the Diocese of Southwark.

London: SAMUEL BAGSTER & SONS, LIMITED, 15, Paternoster Row.

Insurance Companies.NORWICH UNION FIRE INSURANCE SOCIETY, LTD.

Founded 1797. HEAD OFFICE: NORWICH.

LONDON OFFICES { 50, Fleet Street, E.C.
71 and 72, King William Street, E.C.
Norwich Union Chambers (Entrance, St. James's Street), Piccadilly, W.
1, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.
26, Charles Street, St. James's, S.W.
81, Edgware Road, W.

Claims Paid £22,000,000.

Applications for Agencies invited.

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS, SICKNESS,
EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY, BURGLARY, AND
FIDELITY GUARANTEE RISKS

INSURED AGAINST BY THE

RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE CO.

Capital (fully subscribed), £1,000,000. Claims paid, £5,600,000.

64, CORNHILL, LONDON.

A. VIAN, Secretary.

NATIONALPROVIDENT*INSTITUTION

FOR

MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE.

Established 1835.

ASSURANCE AND INVESTMENT.

Write for Leaflet on net cost of Endowment Assurances,

48, Gracechurch Street, London, E.C.

Applications for Agencies invited.

HIGHEST AWARDS.

CORK, 1883. LIVERPOOL, 1886. PARIS, 1886. ADELAIDE, 1887
PARIS, 1889. CHICAGO, 1893. PARIS, 1900. ST. LOUIS, 1904.
FRANCO-BRITISH, 1903.

OLD BUSHMILLS.Have you tried this—the Prize-Winning Whisky?

From all Wine Merchants.

Address of nearest Agent sent on application.

"OLD BUSHMILLS" DISTILLERY CO., LTD.,
20, Mark Lane, E.C.

HOP PILLOWS.—"Goodnight" Brand.
Invaluable to sufferers from Insomnia, Neuralgia, Nervous Headaches, &c. Specially prepared, post free, 5s. from THE HOP COMPANY, 26, Denman Street, London Bridge, S.E.

THE FIRST NEW NOVELS OF 1909

Mr. JOHN LONG has much pleasure in announcing that, during the months of January and February, he will publish the following brilliant array of New Novels. These novels have been selected with the greatest care from the hundreds of MSS. submitted to him. They should appeal to the tastes of all readers.

SIX SHILLINGS EACH

THE WHIPS OF TIME. By ARABELLA KENEALY, Author of 'Dr. Janet of Harley Street.'	[Ready.]
HARRY OF ATHOL. By R. H. FORSTER, Author of 'A Jacobite Admiral.'	[Ready.]
THE CASE OF SIR GEOFFREY. By FLORENCE WARDEN, Author of 'A Devil's Bargain.'	[Ready.]
THE COURTSHIP OF SYBIL. By L. T. MEADE, Author of 'Little Josephine.'	[Ready.]
FLOWER OF THE WORLD. By Mrs. HENRY TIPPETT.	[Ready.]
IDOLS OF FLESH. By PAUL CRESWICK, Author of 'The Temple of Folly.'	[Ready.]
FATALITY. By G. G. CHATTERTON, Author of 'The Dictionary of Fools.'	[Ready.]
LADY LETTY BRANDON. By ANNIE E. HOLDSWORTH, Author of 'Johanna Traill, Spinster.'	[Ready.]
A SOUL'S AWAKENING. By W. TEIGNMOUTH SHORE, Author of 'The Pest.'	[Ready.]
THE GIRL FROM GATFORD. By OLIVIA RAMSEY, Author of 'The Marriage of Lionel Glyde.'	[Ready.]
THE TESTAMENT OF JUDAS. By HENRY BYATT, Author of 'Land o' Gold.'	[Ready.]
NOBLESSE OBLIGE. By M. E. FRANCIS, Author of 'Hardy on the Hill.'	[Ready.]
THE FAULT. By C. T. PODMORE, Author of 'A Cynic's Conscience.'	[Ready.]
POMP AND CIRCUMSTANCE. By DOROTHEA GERARD, Author of 'Restitution.'	[Ready.]
A FORSAKEN GARDEN. By JESSIE AINSWORTH DAVIS, Author of 'When Half Gods Go.'	[Ready.]
THE THUNDER OF THE HOOFS. By WILLIAM HENRY LANG. (A New Author.)	[Ready.]
THE COMBAT. By ARTHUR CAMPBELL. (A New Author.)	[Ready.]
THE WORLD, THE FLESH, AND THE CASINO. By GERTRUDE WARDEN, Author of 'The Millionaire and the Lady.'	[Ready.]
HILARY THORNTON. By HUBERT WALES, Author of 'Mr. and Mrs. Villiers.'	[Ready.]
THE GREATER POWER. By HAROLD BINDLOSS, Author of 'Thrice Armed.'	[Ready.]
LINKS IN THE CHAIN. By HEADON HILL, Author of 'The Hidden Victim.'	[Ready.]
THE MEMBER FOR EASTERBY. By JAMES BLYTH, Author of 'Rubina.'	[Ready.]
THE QUENCHLESS FLAME. By VIOLET TWEEDALE, Author of 'Mrs. Barrington's Atonement.'	[Ready.]
WHO SHALL HAVE HER? By JOHN CAVE, Author of 'The Wiles of a Wife.'	[Ready.]

THE AUTHOR WITH THE LARGEST PUBLIC

THE SALES OF NAT GOULD'S NOVELS EXCEED 6,000,000 (SIX MILLION) COPIES.

Nat Gould's Latest Novel ... THE BUCKJUMPER

Picture boards, 2s.; cloth gilt, 2s. 6d.

[January]

ARE YOU A LIVE BOOKSELLER IN A LIVE TOWN?

If so, you want the Books the Live Man is asking for.

Here they are, price 1s. net each, crown 8vo, 320 pages, sewed, covers in colours :

RUBINA (Just out)	James Blyth
THE CONFESSIONS OF CLEODORA (Immediately)	Carlton Dawe
ANNA LOMBARD	Victoria Cross
MR. AND MRS. VILLIERS	Hubert Wales
AMAZEMENT	James Blyth
THE CONFESSIONS OF A PRINCESS	Anonymous
THE LITTLE WONDER	Nat Gould
THE SECRET HISTORY OF THE COURT OF BERLIN	H. W. Fischer

N.B.—In this Series none but the most saleable books will be included.

TWO NEW SIXPENNY NOVELS FOR JANUARY.

CHARGER AND CHASER Nat Gould | TRAITOR AND TRUE J. Bloundelle-Burton

London: JOHN LONG, 12, 13 and 14, Norris Street, Haymarket.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 4238.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 16, 1909.

PRICE
THREEPENCE.
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER.

Lectures.

ROYAL INSTITUTION OF GREAT BRITAIN,
ALBEMARLE STREET, PICCADILLY, W.

TUESDAY NEXT, January 19, at 3 o'clock, Prof. KARL PEARSON, M.A. F.R.S., FIRST of TWO LECTURES on 'Albinism in Man.' Half-a-Guinea the Course.
THURSDAY, January 21, at 3 o'clock, Prof. J. O. ARNOLD, D.Sc., FIRST of TWO LECTURES on 'Mysteries of Metals.' Half-a-Guinea.
SATURDAY, January 23, at 3 o'clock, Prof. Sir HUBERT VON HERKOMER, C.V.O. D.C.L. LL.D. R.A., FIRST of TWO LECTURES on (1) 'The Critical Faculty.' (2) 'Sight and Seeing.' Half-a-Guinea.
Subscription to all the Courses in the Season, Two Guineas.

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON.

The following ADVANCED COURSES OF LECTURES will be delivered:—
'Roman Municipal Institutions,' by J. S. REID, Esq. M.A. LL.M. Litt.D., Professor of Ancient History in the University of Cambridge, at UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, GOWER STREET, W.C., on JANUARY 21, 28, FEBRUARY 4, 11, 18, and 25, 1909, at 4.30 p.m.
'The Spanish Drama,' by JAMES FITZMAURICE-KELLY, Esq. Litt.D. F.B.A., at KING'S COLLEGE, STRAND, W.C., on FEBRUARY 9, 23, and MARCH 9, 1909, at 4.30 p.m.
Admission to the above Lectures is free.
P. J. HARTOG, Academic Registrar.

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON.

RELIGION IN RELATION TO ART IN GREECE AND ROME.
A COURSE OF LECTURES on this subject will be given by Prof. ERNEST GARDNER on FRIDAYS at 2 p.m. First Lecture (open to the Public without Payment or Ticket) on FRIDAY, January 22. For Prospectus of these and the other Lectures on Sculpture, Vases, Epigraphy, &c., apply to the undersigned.
WALTER W. SETON, M.A., Secretary.
University College, London, Gower Street, W.C.

Societies.

ROYAL HISTORICAL SOCIETY.
(Incorporated by Royal Charter.)

An ORDINARY MEETING will be held at 7, SOUTH SQUARE, GRAY'S INN, W.C., on THURSDAY, January 21, at 5 p.m., when Mr. C. L. KINGSFORD, M.A. F.R.Hist.S., will read a Paper on 'Sir Otho de Grandison (1233-1328), the Friend and Secretary of Edward I.'
H. E. MALDEN, Hon. Sec.

THE FOLK LORE SOCIETY.—The ANNUAL MEETING of the SOCIETY will be held at 22, ALBEMARLE STREET, PICCADILLY, on WEDNESDAY, January 20, at 8 p.m., when the President, Dr. GASTER, will deliver an Address.
F. A. MILNE, Secretary.

11, Old Square, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.
January 11, 1902.

Exhibitions.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF ARTS.
WINTER EXHIBITION.
Open from 9 A.M. to 6 P.M. Admission 1s.
Catalogue, 6d. Season Ticket, 5s.

BAXTER COLOUR PRINTS,
First London Exhibition.
NEW DUDLEY GALLERY,
169, Piccadilly (Opposite Old Bond Street), W.

MR. PUNCH'S PAGEANT, 1841-1908. Famous Jokes, Famous Cartoons, Famous Punch Relics, including the FAMOUS ROUND TABLE. 10-6. Admission 1s.
THE LEICESTER GALLERIES, Leicester Square.

Provident Institutions.

THE BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.
Founded 1837.
Patron—HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.
Invested Capital, 30,000l.

A UNIQUE INVESTMENT
Offered to London Booksellers and their Assistants.

A young man or woman of twenty-five can invest the sum of Twenty Guineas (or its equivalent by instalments), and obtain the right to participate in the following advantages:—
FIRST. Freedom from want in time of Adversity as long as need exists.
SECOND. Permanent Relief in Old Age.
THIRD. Medical Advice by eminent Physicians and Surgeons.
FOURTH. A Cottage in the Country (Abbots Langley, Hertfordshire) for aged Members, with garden produce, coal, and medical attendance free, in addition to an annuity.
FIFTH. A furnished house in the same Retreat at Abbots Langley for the use of Members and their families for holidays or during convalescence.
SIXTH. A contribution towards Funeral expenses when it is needed.
SEVENTH. All these are available not for Members only, but also for their wives or widows and young children.
EIGHTH. The payment of the subscriptions confers an absolute right to these benefits in all cases of need.
For further information apply to the Secretary Mr. GEORGE LARNER, 28, Paternoster Row E.C.

NEWSVENDORS' BENEVOLENT AND PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Founded 1839.
Funds exceed 27,000l.
Office: 15 and 16, Farringdon Street, London, E.C.

Patron:
The Right Hon. THE EARL OF ROSEBURY, K.G. K.T.
President:
The LORD GLENESK.
Treasurer:

THE LONDON AND WESTMINSTER BANK, LIMITED.

OBJECTS.—This Institution was established in 1839 in the City of London, under the Presidency of the late Alderman Harmer, for granting Pensions and Temporary Assistance to principals and assistants engaged as vendors of Newspapers.

MEMBERSHIP.—Every Man or Woman throughout the United Kingdom, whether Publisher, Wholesaler, Retailer, Employer, or Employed, is entitled to become a Member of this Institution, and enjoy its benefits upon payment of Five Shillings annually, or Three Guineas for life, provided that he or she is engaged in the sale of Newspapers, and such Members who thus contribute secure priority of consideration in the event of their needing aid from the Institution.

PENSIONS.—The Annuitants now number Thirty-six, the Men receiving 25l. and the Women 20l. per annum each.
The "Royal Victoria Pension Fund," commemorating the great advantages the News Trade enjoyed under the rule of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, provides 20l. a year each for Six Widows of News-vendors.

The "Francis Fund" provides Pensions for One Man, 25l., and One Woman 20l., and was specially subscribed in memory of the late John Francis, who died on April 6, 1882, and was for more than fifty years Publisher of the Athenæum. He took an active and leading part throughout the whole period of the agitation for the repeal of the various then existing "Taxes on Knowledge," and was for very many years a staunch supporter of this Institution.

The "Horace Marshall Pension Fund" is the gift of the late Mr. Horace Brooks Marshall. The employees of that firm have primary right of election to its benefits.

The "Herbert Lloyd Pension Fund" provides 25l. per annum for one man, in perpetual and grateful memory of Mr. Herbert Lloyd, who died May 12, 1899.

The principal features of the Rules governing election to all Pensions are, that each Candidate shall have been (1) a Member of the Institution for not less than ten years preceding application; (2) not less than fifty-five years of age; (3) engaged in the sale of Newspapers for at least ten years.

RELIEF.—Temporary relief is given in cases of distress, not only to Members of the Institution, but to News-vendors or their servants who may be recommended for assistance by Members of the Institution. Inquiry is made in such cases by Visiting Committees, and relief is awarded in accordance with the merits and requirements of each case.
W. WILKIE JONES Secretary.

Educational.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE,
CIRENCESTER. (Founded 1845. Reorganized 1908.)

Patron—H.M. KING EDWARD VII.
Chairman—LORD MORETON.
For Landowners, Land Agents, Surveyors, Agriculturists, Intending Colonists, &c.
FARMING AND COLONIAL BRANCH.
ESTATE MANAGEMENT AND FORESTRY BRANCH.
For Prospectus of Curriculum, Fees, Entrance Exhibitions, Scholarships, Diplomas, &c., apply to THE PRINCIPAL.

BIRMINGHAM AND MIDLAND INSTITUTE.

SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Visitor—Sir EDWARD ELGAR, Mus.Doc. LL.D.

Visiting Exandner—W. G. MCNAUGHT, Mus.Doc.

Principal—GRANVILLE BANTOCK.

SESSION 1908-1909.

The SESSION consists of AUTUMN TERM (September 31 to December 19), WINTER TERM (January 15 to April 3), SUMMER TERM (April 19 to June 26).

Instruction in all Branches of Music. Students' Choir and Orchestra, Chamber Music, Students' Rehearsals, Concerts, and Opera.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from ALFRED HAYES, Secretary.

SCHOOL OF LITERATURE, 25, Soho Square,
S.W.—NEW YEAR'S TERM BEGINNING JANUARY 20. Private Lessons in every form of Writing; Weekly Discussions on Contemporary Drama, Poetry, &c. Details on application.—Address Mr. F. MACNAMARA.

MISS DREWRY'S COURSES OF LECTURES and CLASSES on ENGLISH LANGUAGE and LITERATURE will BEGIN again in the LAST WEEK of JANUARY.—For particulars apply by letter, 143, King Henry's Road, London, N.W.

THE DOWNS SCHOOL, SEAFORD, SUSSEX.
Head Mistress—Miss LUCY ROBINSON, M.A. (late Second Mistress, St. Felix School, Southwold). References: The Principal of Bedford College, London; The Master of Peterhouse, Cambridge.

EDUCATION.

Parents or Guardians desiring accurate information relative to the CHOICE of SCHOOLS for BOYS or GIRLS or TUTORs in England or Abroad, are invited to call upon or send fully detailed particulars to MESSRS. GABBITAS, THRING & CO.,
who for more than thirty years have been closely in touch with the leading Educational Establishments.
Advice, free of charge, is given by Mr. THRING, Nephew of the late Head Master of Uppingham, 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

Yearly Subscription, free by post, Inland, 15s. 3d.; Foreign, 18s. Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class matter.

THE ATHENÆUM is published on
FRIDAY AFTERNOON at 2 o'clock.

REDUCED FEES.—Education in the Country (near London).—To FILL VACANCIES in a FINISHING SCHOOL of the first style (over 500 feet above sea; excellent Masters; home comforts; Outdoor Games; extensive Grounds; Riding) an inclusive Educational Fee of 100 Guineas will be accepted for PUPILS ENTERING IN JANUARY.—B.A., care of Gabbitas, Thring & Co., 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

WEYBRIDGE LADIES' SCHOOL, SURREY.
Miss E. DAVES, M.A. D.Lit.Lond., Classical Scholar, Girton. Refined Home. Thorough Education and Physical Care. Good Grounds, position high, and one of the healthiest in England.

Situations Vacant.

RHODES UNIVERSITY COLLEGE,
GRAHAMSTOWN, CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

Applications are invited for a LECTURESHIP in the DEPARTMENT OF CLASSICS.
Salary 300l. per annum.

Further particulars may be obtained from F. I. WYLIE, Esq., 9, South Parks Road, Oxford, to whom applications, with Testimonials, should be sent on or before MONDAY, February 1.

The successful Candidate will be required to enter upon his duties at Grahamstown on APRIL 15, 1909.

NEW ZEALAND.

The COUNCIL of VICTORIA UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, WELLINGTON, invite applications for the position of PROFESSOR of PHYSICS at a Salary of 600l. per annum. First term of engagement, Five Years. The successful Applicant must be ready to take up his duties at the College in Wellington not later than JULY 1, 1909. Applications must be sent in to the High Commissioner of New Zealand not later than FEBRUARY 2 NEXT.—For further particulars, and for the Forms on which applications must be made, apply to THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR NEW ZEALAND, 13, Victoria Street, London, S.W.

COUNTY BOROUGH OF DUDLEY DAY TRAINING COLLEGE.

It is proposed to open this TRAINING COLLEGE, for 100 Men and Women Students, in SEPTEMBER, 1909, and a PRINCIPAL will be REQUIRED to commence work from that date. He must be a Graduate of some University in the United Kingdom, and should have had experience in the Training of Teachers.

Salary 500l. per annum.

Canvassing forbidden.

Forms of Application (on receipt of a stamped and addressed foolscap envelope) will be forwarded, and they must be returned in a sealed envelope, endorsed "Training College," not later than JANUARY 30, 1909, accompanied by copies of not more than four recent Testimonials, &c., to J. M. WYNNE, Secretary to College Council, Town Hall, Dudley, Worc.

HALSTEAD GRAMMAR SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

SECONDARY AND TECHNICAL DAY SCHOOL WITH PROBABLE PUPIL-TEACHERS' CENTRE ATTACHED.

WANTED a fully qualified LADY PRINCIPAL for the new SECONDARY and TECHNICAL DAY SCHOOL at HALSTEAD, ESSEX.

The Lady appointed must be a Graduate of one of the Universities of the United Kingdom, or have passed an examination equivalent to that for any such Degree.

Salary 170l. with three annual increments of 10l. each and a Capitation Grant of 1l. on the first 50 paying Scholars, and 10s. for each paying Scholar after that number.

Applications must be made on Forms, which will be supplied by me, and must be sent in not later than FEBRUARY 17, 1909, to me the undersigned.

ROBERT MANTON, Clerk to the Governors.
Halstead, Essex.

BEDFORD COLLEGE FOR WOMEN

(UNIVERSITY OF LONDON).

YORK PLACE, BAKER STREET, W.

The COUNCIL are about to appoint a SECRETARY to the PRINCIPAL.

University Training and knowledge of Secretarial Work essential. Applications from Women only, must be sent, not later than JANUARY 16, to THE PRINCIPAL, from whom further particulars may be obtained.

ETHEL T. McKNIGHT, Secretary of Council.

COUNTY BOROUGH OF BOLTON.

LIBRARY ASSISTANT.

The LIBRARIES COMMITTEE are prepared to receive applications for the appointment of a SENIOR ASSISTANT in their LIBRARIES.

Commencing Salary 65l. per annum.

Experience in Public Library Work absolutely essential, and the selected Candidate will be required to study for the Library Association Examinations.

Applications, stating age, qualifications, and Library experience, accompanied by copies of not more than three recent Testimonials, (which will not be returned), and endorsed "Library Assistant," to be delivered to the undersigned on or before SATURDAY, January 23rd instant.

SAMUEL PARKER, Town Clerk.
Town Hall, Bolton, January 12, 1909.

CHERWELL HALL, OXFORD, TRAINING COLLEGE FOR WOMEN SECONDARY TEACHERS.—RESIDENT TUTOR WANTED after EASTER. Honours Degree. Secondary Diploma and experience in Secondary Schools essential. Salary 100l.—Particulars on application to PRINCIPAL.

ART.—An ASSISTANT MASTER REQUIRED AT ONCE. Must be able to assist generally and be strong in Design.—Apply SECRETARY, Blackheath School of Art, Lee Road, Blackheath.

THE UNIVERSITY OF LIVERPOOL.—WANTED IMMEDIATELY expert CATALOGUER for UNIVERSITY LIBRARY. Salary 100l. Candidates should furnish three Testimonials, and state age, experience, and knowledge of Languages.—Applications should be sent to THE REGISTRAR not later than MONDAY, January 25.

REQUIRED, JUNIOR CLERK (Male, 18–20). Must be good Shorthand Writer and Typist, and be sharp and reliable at Office Routine Work.—Apply by letter, in own handwriting, stating Salary required and enclosing Specimen of Typing, to B. T. BATSFORD, Publisher and Bookseller, 94, High Holborn, W.C.

Situations Wanted.

ADVERTISER, with ten years' experience of Literary and Commercial sides of Publishing, and knowledge of French, German, Italian, and Spanish, desires POST in PUBLISHER'S OFFICE, as Librarian, or as Assistant to Author.—Apply R.S.S., Box 1560, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

A YOUNG GENTLEMAN, with Literary and Artistic Tastes, and a thorough knowledge of Spanish, Italian, and French, desires EMPLOYMENT, Secretarial or other. Shorthand and Type-Writing. Good references.—Address ALPHA care Davies & Co., Advertising Agents, Finch Lane, Cornhill.

SHORTHAND TYPIST is OPEN to take an ENGAGEMENT after lengthy and satisfactory employment in well-known Office of Literary Paper. Used to long hours and continuous work. Personal reference will be given by present Employer. Salary 25s. to commence.—Apply Box 1444, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

ADVERTISER, with ripe experience in all details of Publishing, Literary as well as Commercial, desires ENGAGEMENT in any Department. Excellent References.—Box 1386, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Miscellaneous.

EDUCATION.—Modern Languages, with High Classics, &c., Abroad.—SENIOR PUPILS for I.C.S., Diplomatic, University Scholarships, &c., RECEIVED by experienced FIRST-CLASS MAN OF CAMBRIDGE, with strong Staff. Very moderate Terms.—Full details from X., care of Gabbitts, Thring & Co., 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

PUBLIC-HOUSE REFORM.—The People's Refreshment House Association, Ltd., founded by the Bishop of Chester, manages 68 Licensed Inns. Ask for List and Report. APPLY FOR 17. SHARES. 5 per cent paid since 1899. P.R.H.A., Broadway Chambers, Westminster.

TO SECURE FRIENDS and FRIENDSHIPS join the CORRESPONDENCE CLUB, 10s. 6d.; or the ENGLISH-SPEAKERS' LINK, 2s. 6d., of 350, Mansion House Chambers, E.C.

TRANSLATIONS (into and from English). Research, and other Literary Work. French, German, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, Dutch. Varied experience. Moderate terms.—Miss STRACK, 35, Mall Chambers, Kensington, W.

AUTHOR of Dramatic and successful SERIALS wishes to MEET PUBLISHER, willing to consider same. Book Rights.—Write AUTHOR, Devonshire Cottage, Fox Hill, Norwood, S.E. Phone 1456 Sydenham.

PRINTING AND PUBLISHING.—Acting or sleeping PARTNER REQUIRED, with about 2,000l. to complete scheme for starting Business and securing an Agency.—ALPHA, Reynell's, 44, Chancery Lane.

A SMALL PRIVATE COLLECTION of BOOKS chiefly English Classics, many First and Early Editions. Very low prices. Would be sold in one lot or per single volume.—Write for List to Q., Box 1600, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

Type-Writers, &c.

AUTHORS' MSS., 9d. per 1,000 words. Sermons, Plays, and all kinds of TYPE-WRITING carefully done at home (Remington). Good paper. Orders promptly executed. Duplicating from 3s. 6d. per 100.—M. L. L., 18, Edgeley Road, Clapham, S.W.

AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS, STORIES, PLAYS, ESSAYS TYPE-WRITTEN with complete accuracy, 9d. per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies guaranteed. References to well-known Writers.—M. STUART, Allendale, Kymberley Road, Harrow.

TYPE-WRITER.—PLAYS and MSS. of every description. Carbon and other Duplicate or Manifold Copies.—Miss E. M. TIGAR, 64, Maitland Park Road, Haverstock Hill, N.W. Established 1884.

TYPE-WRITING undertaken by highly educated Women (Classical Tripos; Cambridge Higher Local; Modern Languages). Research, Revision, Translation, Shorthand, Dictation Room.—THE CAMBRIDGE TYPE-WRITING AGENCY, 10, Duke Street, Adelphi, W.C.

TYPE-WRITING.—The WEST KENSINGTON OFFICES. Authors' MSS., Translations, &c. Legal and General Copying. Private Dictation Room. Circulars, &c. Duplicated. Usual terms. References. Established fifteen years.—SIKES & SIKES, 223A, Hammersmith Road, London, W.

AUTHORS' MSS. TYPED from 6d. 1,000 words; Scientific from 9d. Accuracy guaranteed.—Miss HABERSHON, J. L. A. St. Andrews (Hons. in Science and Language), 101, Palmerston Road, Southsea.

TYPE-WRITING of every description by Expert, 8d. per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies, 3d. per 1,000 words. Accuracy and prompt return guaranteed. Reliable references.—NORA DICKINSON, 1, Sackville Gardens, Ilford.

TYPE-WRITING, 9d. per 1,000 words. All kinds of MSS. accurately typed. Clear Carbon Copies, 3d. per 1,000. References to well-known Authors. Oxford Higher Local. Tel. 1272, Richmond P.O.—M. KING, 24, Forest Road, Kew Gardens, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING OF ALL KINDS. 7d. per 1,000 words, over 50,000 words 6d. Carbon Copy 2d. per 1,000. Duplicating 2s. 100 Copies. First-Class Work.—A. M. P., Shamrock, Sutton Road, Muswell Hill, London, N.

Catalogues.

BOOKS.—ALL OUT-OF-PRINT and RARE BOOKS on any subject SUPPLIED. The most expert Bookfinder extant. Please state wants and ask for CATALOGUE. I make a special feature of exchanging any Saleable Books for others selected from my various lists. Special List of 2,000 Books I particularly want post free.—EDW. BAKER'S Great Bookshop, 14-16, John Bright Street, Birmingham. Rhead's Staffordshire Pots and Pottery, Illus., 21s. for 10s. 6d.; Ainsworth's Novels, 20 vols., 35s.; Burke's Peerage, 1907, 24s.

CATALOGUES.—CLEARANCE CATALOGUE of SECOND-HAND BOOKS post free on application. Books in all Branches of Literature, many scarce Items and First Editions. No fancy prices. Parcels sent on approval if desired. CATALOGUES issued Monthly.—Address J. BALDWIN, 14, Osborne Road, Leyton, Essex.

CATALOGUE No. 50.—Drawings by Turner, Prout, Ruskin, &c.—Turner's Liber Studiorum and other Engravings—Proofs touched by Turner—Constable's English Landscape—Etchings by Whistler—Japanese Colour-Prints—Illustrated Books. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD 2, Church Terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

P. M. BARNARD, M.A. (Formerly Classical Scholar of Christ's College, Cambridge), ANTIQUARIAN AND FOREIGN BOOKSELLER, 85, BRIDGE STREET (near the John Rylands Library), MANCHESTER.

A Select Stock of Rare, Valuable, and Interesting Books on View. Foreign Books and Periodicals promptly supplied. Out-of-Print Books sought for.

ANCIENT and MODERN COINS.—Collectors and Antiquarians are invited to apply to SPINK & SON Limited, for Specimen Copy (gratis) of their NUMISMATIC CIRCULAR. The finest Greek, Roman, and English Coins on View and for Sale at Moderate Prices.—SPINK & SON, Limited, Experts, Valuers, and Cataloguers, 16, 17, and 18, Piccadilly, London, W. Established upwards of a Century.

FIRST EDITIONS of MODERN AUTHORS, including Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, Ainsworth; Books illustrated by G. and R. Cruikshank, Phiz, Rowlandson, Leech, &c. The largest and choicest Collection offered for Sale in the World. CATALOGUES issued and sent post free on application. Books Bought.—WALTER T. SPENCER, 27, New Oxford Street, London, W.C.

CATALOGUE of FRENCH BOOKS, at greatly reduced prices. I. PHILOSOPHY. II. RELIGION. III. HISTORY. IV. POETRY. DRAMA. MUSIC. V. BEAUX-ARTS. VI. GEOGRAPHY. VII. MILITARY. VIII. FICTION. IX. GENERAL LITERATURE. DULAU & CO. 37, Soho Square, London, W.

Authors' Agents.

THE AUTHOR'S AGENCY.—Established 1879. The interests of Authors capably represented. Agreements for Publishing arranged. MSS. placed with Publishers.—Terms and Testimonials on application to Mr. A. M. BURGESS, 24, Paternoster Row.

Sales by Auction.

A Portion of the Library of the Right Hon. LORD ANNALY, and the Library of the late E. ASCHERSON, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, January 20, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, including a SELECTION from the LIBRARY of LORD ANNALY, the LIBRARY of the late E. ASCHERSON, Esq., and other Properties, comprising Works on the Fine Arts—Antiquarian, Archaeological, and Topographical Books—First Editions of Modern Authors—Collections of Caricatures, Costume Prints, and Portraits—Books on Sport—Dugdale's Monasticon Anglicanum, 1817–39—Holbein, Imitations of Original Drawings, 1792—Scottish History Society, 47 vols.—Fraser's Book of Carlevarock, and Scott's of Buccleuch—Biblia Sacra Latina, manuscript on vellum, 3 vols.—Collection of Books, Paintings, Prints, Relics, &c., relating to Lord Byron—Ackermann's Microcosm of London, 3 vols. 1808—Chronicon Nurembergense, 1493—Lafontaine's Fables, Oudry's fine Edition, on large paper, in old red morocco, &c. May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Library of Books and Periodicals on the Game of Chess, the Property of the late M. NUMA PRÉTI, of Paris.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, February 1, at 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of BOOKS and PERIODICALS on the GAME of CHESS, the Property of the late M. NUMA PRÉTI, of Paris. May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Valuable Collection of Greek Coins formed by the late FRANK SHERMAN BENSON, Esq., of Brooklyn, New York.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, February 3, and Two Following Days, and on MONDAY, February 8, and Three Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the valuable COLLECTION of GREEK COINS, formed by the late FRANK SHERMAN BENSON, Esq., of Brooklyn, New York, comprising choice and interesting Examples of the Ancient Coinages of Italy and Sicily, Greece and the Islands, Asia Minor, &c., Syria, Egypt, Zeugitana, &c. May be viewed two days prior. Illustrated Catalogues may be had, price 2s. 6d. each.

Valuable Miscellaneous Books.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on TUESDAY, January 19, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock, VALUABLE MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, comprising an extensive Collection of Books relating to the Topography, Genealogy, and Antiquities of the County of Suffolk, including a Set of the Suffolk Institute of Archaeology, from 1853 to 1906—Histories of Thetford, Bury St. Edmunds, Ipswich, Yarmouth, &c.—Genealogical Books, and Albums of Engravings, relating to the county—the entire Stock of 107 complete copies of Copinger's Suffolk Records and MSS., 6 vols.—Howard and Crisp's Visitations, 12 vols.—Yorkshire Archaeological Society, 27 vols.—Books relating to Nottinghamshire—Racinet, Le Costume Historique, 6 vols.—Mrs. Frankau's J. R. Smith and the Wards—Bryan's Dictionary of Painters, 5 vols., and other Modern Art Books—Burton's Arabian Nights, original edition, 16 vols.—the Editions de Luxe of Lytton, 32 vols., and Byron, 13 vols.—a few Books with Presentation Inscriptions—the original Probate of the Will of Isaac Walton with seal, 1683—a fine and complete Set of the Zoological Society's Proceedings, 65 vols. 1830–1903—Curtis's Botanical Magazine, the first 117 vols. 1793–1891—Oeder's Flora Danica, 6 vols.—old Books of Travel and Americana—Early Coloured Views of South Africa—Surtees's Analysis of the Hunting Field—Carlyle's French Revolution, 3 vols. and other First Editions, &c.

To be viewed and Catalogues had.

Rare and Valuable Books.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., during FEBRUARY, RARE and VALUABLE BOOKS, including duplicates from a NOBLEMAN'S LIBRARY, comprising Volumes of Architectural Engravings by Piranesi and others—Buck's Views of England and Wales—French Illustrated Books, several in Royal Bindings—Early Pamphlets and Maps relating to America—Old Herbals—Fifteenth-Century Illuminated Horæ on Vellum—Rare and Curious Books in Old English Literature, many in contemporary calf bindings.

Catalogues on application.

STEVENS'S AUCTION ROOMS.

Established 1769.

TUESDAY NEXT at half-past 12 o'clock.

MR. J. C. STEVENS'S NEXT SALE of CURIOSITIES will take place on TUESDAY NEXT, January 19, and will include a choice COLLECTION of ROMAN and GREEK GLASS, POTTERY and BRONZES—about Thirty Tanagrian Figures—a Collection of Cut and Polished Opals—Chinese and Japanese Porcelain, Bronzes, &c.—Native Idols and other Curios—Coins and Medals—Pictures and Prints—also about 20 Lots of Japanese Dwarf Trees—and the usual Miscellaneous Assortment. On view day prior to 4 and morning of Sale.

THURSDAY and FRIDAY NEXT, at half-past 12 o'clock each day.

PHOTOGRAPHIC CAMERAS and LENSES—Optical Lanterns and Slides—Phonographs, Gramophones, and Records—Electrical, Microscopic, and Scientific Apparatus—the Outfit of a Civil Engineer and Draughtsman, comprising Theodolite, Level, Instruments, &c., by Troughton & Simms, Negretti & Zambra, and others—Royal Microscope by Watson—Objectives and Appliances by Zeiss and others, together with a fine Collection of Objects—Astronomical Telescope and other Instruments, the Property of the late Mr. COMPTON—Prismatic Field Glasses by Zeiss, &c.—a magnificent Five-Stone Half-Hoop Diamond Ring—a Twenty-five-Stone Diamond Crescent Brooch—and other Jewellery from Private Sources.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION on THURSDAY and FRIDAY NEXT. Catalogues on application.

British and Foreign Lepidoptera.

TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY, January 26 and 27.

THE COLLECTIONS of LEPIDOPTERA formed by C. H. SCHILL, Esq., A. M. SMALLPEICE, Esq., and others, including many rare Varieties in fine condition, together with the Cabinets in which they are contained; also an Assortment of Natural History Specimens.

Catalogues of any of the above Sales may be had on application to Mr. J. C. STEVENS, 38, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

SHREWSBURY.—No. 15, Belmont.

To Art Collectors and others desirous of obtaining a commodious Freehold Residence containing elegant Reception Rooms and Galleries highly suitable for the Storage and display of Art Treasures, Pictures, &c.

TO BE SOLD BY AUCTION BY MESSRS.

HALL, WATERIDGE & OWEN at the COUNTY MART, SHREWSBURY, on WEDNESDAY, January 27, inst. The above exceptional Residence is one of the most important of its kind in the fine old historic town of Shrewsbury, the Gardens, with Tennis Court or Bowling Green, being connected by a Subway extending under the ancient Town Walls.

The valuable ANTIQUE FURNITURE, PICTURES, and EFFECTS will be SOLD the WEEK FOLLOWING.

Particulars, with Plan and Orders to View, apply to THE AUCTIONEERS, Shrewsbury, or to Messrs. FREEMAN & SON, Solicitors, 30A, George Street, Hanover Square, London, W.

Magazines, &c.

JOURNAL OF THE ROYAL STATISTICAL SOCIETY.

Vol. LXXI. Part IV. DECEMBER 31, 1908.

Published Quarterly. Price 5s.

Contents.

SOCIAL INSURANCES. By Sir Edward Brabrook. With Discussion. AMERICAN METHODS OF RAILWAY ACCOUNTING. By Samuel Chapman, formerly Chief Accountant of the Inter-Oceanic Railway of Mexico, and Honorary Member of the Association of American Railway Accounting Officers. With Discussion.

MISCELLANEA:—

1. KARL THEODOR RITTER VON INAMA-STERNEGG.
2. ON THE PROBABLE ERRORS OF FREQUENCY-CONSTANTS. Continued. By Prof. F. Y. Edgeworth, D.C.L.
3. A STUDY OF INFANT LIFE IN WESTMINSTER. By Barbara Drake.
4. NOTE ON THE NUMBER OF PLAICE AT EACH LENGTH IN CERTAIN SAMPLES FROM THE SOUTHERN PART OF THE NORTH SEA, 1906. By T. Edser.
5. A NOTE ON CERTAIN TABLES IN PART II. OF THE SUPPLEMENT SIXTY-FIFTH ANNUAL REPORT OF THE REGISTRAR-GENERAL. By Dr. E. Dudfield.

BOOK REVIEWS, AND OTHER ARTICLES.

London:

ROYAL STATISTICAL SOCIETY, 9, Adelphi Terrace, Strand, W.C.

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW.

No. 427. JANUARY, 1909. Price 6s.

1. WHIGS AND RADICALS BEFORE THE REFORM BILL.
2. HENRY IRVING.
3. THE VICTORIAN CHANCELLORS.
4. TARIFF REVISION IN THE UNITED STATES.
5. A SCHOOL OF IRISH POETRY.
6. VENICE AND THE RENAISSANCE.
7. "NIMROD."
8. GRÆCO-ROMAN AND ROMAN SCULPTURE.
9. BIOLOGICAL PROBLEMS OF TO-DAY.
10. SCOTLAND IN THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY.
11. THE POLITICAL SITUATION IN EUROPE.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. 39, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

THE ENGLISH HISTORICAL REVIEW.

Edited by REGINALD L. POOLE, M.A. LL.D.

Fellow of Magdalen College and Lecturer in Diplomatic in the University of Oxford.

No. 93. JANUARY, 1909. Price 5s.

Contents.

Articles.

- THE CAMPAIGN AGAINST PAGANISM. By Edwin Pears.
PETRUS CANISIUS. By the Rev. J. Neville Figgis, Litt.D.
THE ECONOMIC CAUSES FOR THE SCOTTISH UNION.
By Miss Theodora Keith.
THE RELATIONS BETWEEN ENGLAND AND FRANCE IN 1802. By Conrad Gill.

Notes and Documents.

- ÆTHELWERD'S ACCOUNT OF THE LAST YEARS OF ALFRED'S REIGN. By F. M. Stenton.
DECEMBER'S VERSION OF THE VITA HENRICI QUINTI
BY TITO LIVIO. By J. H. Wylie, Litt.D.
ELIZABETH WYDEVILE IN THE SANCTUARY AT WEST-
MINSTER, 1470. By Miss C. L. Scofield.
ARCHBISHOP MORTON AND ST. ALBANS. By James
Gairdner, C.B. LL.D.
VOYAGE OF THE "BARBARA" TO BRAZIL IN 1540. By
R. G. Marsden.
THE LITANY UNDER HENRY VIII. By the Rev. F. E.
Brightman.
THE DEBATES IN THE IRISH HOUSE OF COMMONS,
1776-1789. By M. W. Jernegan.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. 39, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

THE QUARTERLY REVIEW.

No. 418. JANUARY, 1909. 6s.

1. THE VALUE OF THE TERRITORIAL FORCE.
2. SIR HENRY WOTTON.
3. RELIGION AND EMPIRE IN ANCIENT EGYPT. By Arthur
E. P. Weigall.
4. SWEATED INDUSTRIES AND THE MINIMUM WAGE.
5. THE FOUNDATION OF THE THIRD REPUBLIC. By Sir
Ernest Satow, G.C.M.G.
6. HERODOTUS THE HISTORIAN. By G. B. Grundy.
7. THE PUBLIC AND THE MOTOR-CAR.
8. MILTON AND DANTE: A COMPARISON AND A CONTRAST
By Alfred Austin, P.L.
9. THE CARE OF THE FEEBLE-MINDED. By G. H. Savage, M.D.
10. A NEW DEPARTURE IN ENGLISH POETRY. By Henry Newbolt.
11. THE WORKS OF ANTHONY TROLLOPE. By T. H. S. Escott.
12. THE REFORMING TURK. By Dr. E. J. Dillon.
13. TRUTH AND FICTION IN IRISH HISTORY. By R. Dunlop.
14. WOMAN SUFFRAGE. By Prof. A. V. Dicey.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle Street, W.

JANUARY NUMBER READY.

2s. 6d. net; 2s. 9d. post free.

THE HIBBERT JOURNAL.

Principal Contents.

- SOME RECENT INVESTIGATIONS BY THE SOCIETY
FOR PSYCHICAL RESEARCH. By the Right Hon.
G. W. Balfour.
NEW FACTS ON OUR SURVIVAL OF DEATH. By Principal John Graham.
THE DOCTRINE OF THE EARTH-SOUL AND OF BEINGS INTERMEDIATE BETWEEN MAN AND
GOD. By Prof. William James.
PSYCHOTHERAPEUTICS AND RELIGION. By Dr.
Henry Rutgers Marshall.
THE SOCIAL CONSCIENCE OF THE FUTURE. By Miss Vida Scudder.
IS THE OLD TESTAMENT A SUITABLE BASIS FOR MORAL INSTRUCTION? By the Right Rev. The Bishop of Tasmania.
THE CENTRAL PROBLEM OF THE INTERNATIONAL
CONGRESS ON MORAL EDUCATION. By Prof.
J. H. Muirhead.
JESUS OR CHRIST? AN APPEAL FOR CONSISTENCY
By the Rev. R. Roberts.
THE MESSAGE OF MODERN MATHEMATICS TO THEOLOGY. By Prof. C. J. Keyser.
A GREAT REFORM IN THE TREATMENT OF CRI-MINALS. By Miss Lucy C. Bartlett.
CHRISTIAN MISSIONS AS AFFECTED BY LIBERAL
THEOLOGY. By the Rev. J. W. Burton.
RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL ASPECTS OF THE CULT
OF ANCESTORS AND HEROES. By Dr. Lewis R.
Farnell.

With a Number of Discussions, Signed Reviews, and Bibliography of Recent Literature.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE,

14, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

{Magazines, &c., continued on p. 60.]

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESSTHE CAMBRIDGE MODERN HISTORY. Planned by the late
Lord Acton. Edited by A. W. Ward, Litt.D., G. W. Prothero, Litt.D. and Stanley
Leathes, M.A.

Volume XI. THE GROWTH OF NATIONALITIES, is now ready. The contributors are Professor J. H. Clapham (on 'Great Britain and Free Trade'), Professor Emile Bourgeois, Professor F. Meinecke, Professor E. Masi, Dr. A. W. Ward, Professor W. Oechsli, Mr. Geoffrey Drage, Mr. E. C. Blech, M. Albert Thomas, the late Sir Spencer Walpole (on 'Great Britain and the Crimean War'), Professor H. Walker (on 'English Literature, 1840-1870'), Professor H. Friedjung, Dr. Karl Breul, Professor A. B. Yolland, Dr. G. Roloff (on 'Bismarck and German Unity'), Professor C. Segré, Mr. J. Fitzmaurice-Kelly, Major F. Maurice (on 'The Franco-German War'), Mr. R. Nisbet Bain, the Rev. George Edmundson, Mr. W. F. Reddaway, Mr. Edmund Gosse (on 'Dano-Norwegian Literature'), Mr. G. A. Fawkes (on 'Rome and the Vatican Council'), Sir W. Lee-Warner, Mr. H. W. V. Temperley, Dr. Stuart J. Reid, Mr. A. R. Colquhoun, Mr. J. D. Rogers and Sir E. M. Satow (on 'The Far East, 1815-1871').

The text of the work will be completed in twelve volumes, of which ten are now ready:—I. The Renaissance; II. The Reformation; III. The Wars of Religion; IV. The Thirty Years' War; V. The Age of Louis XIV.; VII. The United States; VIII. The French Revolution; IX. Napoleon; X. The Restoration; and XI. The Growth of Nationalities.

Any volume may be purchased separately at 16s. net, but subscriptions of 7l. 10s. net are received for the complete text in twelve volumes. Such subscriptions may be paid either at once in full, or in a sum of 6l. 5s. (for the ten volumes ready) and the balance in instalments of 12s. 6d. net on the publication of each of the two remaining volumes.

Royal 8vo
buckram
16s netSubscription
termsITALY FROM 1494 TO 1790. By Mrs. H. M. Vernon.
(K. Dorothea Ewart), Author of Cosimo de' Medici in the Foreign Statesmen Series.Crown 8vo four maps
5s 6d net

The history of Italy in the period treated in this volume divides itself naturally into two parts, 1494-1559 and 1559-1790. Since the events of the earlier years are fully described in numerous accessible works, the author deals with them briefly, in spite of their importance, treating them rather as an introduction to the later and neglected period, about which it is difficult for the ordinary reader to obtain information.

THE RHETORIC OF ARISTOTLE. A Translation by the lateSir R. C. Jebb, O.M., Litt.D. Edited, with an Introduction and Supplementary Notes, by J. E. Sandys, Litt.D.Demy 8vo
6s net

This translation, left in manuscript by Sir Richard Jebb and not hitherto published, has been revised by the editor, who has supplied a few accidental omissions and a brief analysis, partly founded on the translator's own memoranda.

THE THIRTEEN BOOKS OF EUCLID'S ELEMENTS.Translated from the text of Heiberg, with Introduction and Commentary by T. L.
Heath, C.B., Sc.D., sometime Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.Royal 8vo
3 vols
42s net

This new translation is necessary, in Dr. Heath's opinion, for two reasons. "First, though some time has elapsed since the appearance of Heiberg's text and prolegomena, published between 1883 and 1888, there has not been, so far as I know, any attempt to make a faithful translation from it into English even of the books which are commonly read; and, secondly, the other books, VII. to X. and XIII., were not included by Simson and the editors who followed him, or apparently in any English translation since Williamson's (1781-8), so that they are now practically inaccessible to English readers in any form." In the notes Dr. Heath has endeavoured to include all the main results of the latest researches in the history of mathematics.

THE HISPERICA FAMINA. Edited, with Introduction andIndex Verborum, by F. J. H. Jenkinson, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, University Librarian.With three facsimile plates
Demy 8vo
6s net

The text of this work is reproduced by Mr. Jenkinson as left by Henry Bradshaw, with occasional modifications of his own. Other editors, he writes, "have been content to reproduce the work in prose, whereas Bradshaw points out its metrical character, and arranges it in lines, with a colon or point to mark the middle of each line." Mr. Jenkinson's aim has been "to provide a text as correct as I can make it, and also easy to cite or refer to," and he has added an Index Verborum.

HYMENAEUS: a Comedy acted at St. John's College, Cambridge.Now first printed, with an Introduction and Notes by G. C. Moore Smith, Litt.D.
Professor of English Language and Literature in the University of Sheffield.Small 4to
3s 6d net

This Latin play is preserved in two MSS., one belonging to Caius and the other to St. John's College, Cambridge. The author is unknown, but the play was written in the sixteenth century and probably acted at Cambridge in 1579.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER. PLAYS AND POEMS.

Volume VI. Edited by A. R. Waller, M.A.

Crown 8vo
4s 6d net
each volume

This edition of the Plays and Poems of Beaumont and Fletcher, the text of which will be completed in ten volumes, is reprinted from the folio of 1679, with a complete record of earlier variant readings. Volume VI., now ready, contains The Queen of Corinth, Bonduca, The Knight of the Burning Pestle, Love's Pilgrimage, The Double Marriage.

Subscribers for complete sets are entitled to purchase copies at the reduced rate of 2l. net for the set of 10 volumes, payable in ten instalments of 4s. net on the publication of each volume.

London, Fetter Lane: CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS WAREHOUSE: C. F. Clay, Manager

Magazines, &c.—continued.

JOURNAL OF THE INSTITUTE OF ACTUARIES.

No. 225, JANUARY, 1909. Price 3s.

Contents.

Opening Address by the President, G. F. Hardy, Esq.
 Messenger Prize Essay (1905): "On the Methods of ascertaining the Rates of Mortality amongst the General Population of a Country, District, or Town, or amongst Different Classes of such Population, by means of Returns of Population, Births, Deaths, and Migration." By Chas. H. Wickens, A.I.A., of the Commonwealth Bureau of Census and Statistics, Melbourne, Victoria, Australia.
 Legal Notes. By Arthur Rhys Barrand, F.I.A., Barrister-at-Law.
 An Act to provide for Old Age Pensions.
 Actuarial Notes.
 Correspondence.
 The Institute of Actuaries.
 Obituary Notice.

London: O. & E. LAYTON, Farringdon Street.

NOW READY, royal 4to, whole-bound cloth, pp. 300, price 17. 11s. 6d.

NATIONAL ANTARCTIC EXPEDITION, 1901-1904.

ALBUM OF PHOTOGRAPHS AND SKETCHES.

With a PORTFOLIO OF PANORAMIC VIEWS.

ALBUM contains 165 Plates and Descriptive Letterpress, with Preface by Sir ARCHIBALD GEIKIE, Pres.R.S.

PORTFOLIO contains 24 Panoramic Sketches and 2 Maps.

Published by the Royal Society.

Sold by HARRISON & SONS, 45, St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C., and OLIVER & BOYD, Tweeddale Court, Edinburgh.

THE BUILDER (founded 1842), 4, Catherine Street, London, W.C., January 16, contains:—

INTERNATIONAL ARCHITECTURAL COMPETITIONS.
 REGISTRATION OF ARCHITECTS.
 BUILDING MATERIALS (Architectural Association).
 ARCHITECTURAL AND TOPOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.
 ARCHITECTURAL COPYRIGHT.
 A TESTING NEEDLE FOR PORTLAND CEMENT.
 EXHIBITION OF THE INTERNATIONAL SOCIETY.
 ILLUSTRATIONS:
 POLICE STATION, SHOREDITCH;
 CARNEGIE LIBRARY, THORNHILL SQUARE;
 SUGGESTION FOR A LONDON BRIDGE WITH COVERED FOOTWAYS;
 DESIGN FOR FACADE OF A CLUB IN FERRO-CONCRETE.

From Offices as above (4d., by post 4½d.), at Railway Bookstalls, Bookshops, and of all Newsagents.

EBENEZER PROUT'S WORKS.

Bound, each net, 5s.

HARMONY: its Theory and Practice. Twenty-fourth Impression. Revised and largely Re-written.

ANALYTICAL KEY TO THE EXERCISES in the Same. Net 3s.

COUNTERPOINT: Strict and Free. Ninth Impression.

DOUBLE COUNTERPOINT AND CANON. Fourth Impression.

FUGUE. Fifth Impression.

FUGAL ANALYSIS. Third Impression.

MUSICAL FORM. Seventh Impression.

APPLIED FORMS. Fifth Impression.

THE ORCHESTRA. 2 vols. Fourth Impression.

AUGENER, LTD., 6, New Burlington Street, and 22, Newgate Street.

Mr. FIFIELD has much pleasure in announcing the publication of a new edition of Mr. Allen Upward's very remarkable demonstration of the reality of the soul and God,

THE NEW WORD.

BY

ALLEN UPWARD,

Corresponding Member of the Parnassus Philological Society of Athens.

Cloth extra, large crown 8vo, 320 pages, 5s. net.

"As I turn over the pages and re-read the passages I have marked, I utterly despair of conveying within my appointed limits any inkling of the author's fertility of thought and illustration."

Mr. WILLIAM ARCHER, in Morning Leader.

"The insight and wit with which this inquiry is carried out are remarkable as a deep-going criticism of modern science and philosophy, and must be carefully studied in the original to be appreciated."

Mr. G. R. S. MEAD, in Theosophical Review.

"The New Word' is a book of rare enchantment, with something of the freshness of the world's youth about it.....To him the infallible church of the materialists is not substantially different from the infallible church of the sacerdotalists."

Mr. HARRY JONES, in Daily Chronicle.

"It is impossible to do Mr. Upward any justice by quoting him, unless we quote nearly the whole of his book, because it all hangs together, and it is all good.....The New Word' is a book to add to the small store by the side of your bed. It is full of scholarship and wit, and full of hope."

Westminster Gazette.

London: A. C. FIFIELD, 44, Fleet Street, E.C.

THE LONDON LITERARY ALLIANCE,

2, THE CRESCENT, TOWER HILL, E.C.

Recent Publications, 1s. each, delivered free. Please order by post.

TASSO'S LATER WORK and YESTERDAYS. By HENRY CLORISTON.

Mr. W. M. ROSSETTI writes:—"I find the translations from Tasso's Odes able, dignified, and poetic in tone.... The prose-matter is interesting, and should appeal to students of Milton."

Pamphlet, just out, 40 pp. 6d. net.

THE SIN OF SOCIALISM.

By HENRY CLORISTON.

The Month says:—

"The author has a cultivated style and a good grasp of moral principles. He weakens his case, however, by implying that suicide can in some cases be a justifiable protest against social injustice."—December, 1908.

NOTE.

More than this is implied—and less. Deeply imbued with the Christian principle that violation of one commandment (Thou shalt not steal) does not justify the retaliatory breach of another (Thou shalt not kill), Porphyry rejects the doctrine, favoured by Antiquity, that Tyranny may be tempered by Assassination. On the other hand in his exalted state of mind he feels that blood must flow to cleanse the National Council from the sin of dishonesty. In defence, therefore, to the injunction to bestow his cloak on him that has taken away his coat—having been deprived of his means of subsistence by unjust rulers—he gives them his life also.

The incident is thus narrated:—

Following the speech came a short pause, a silence as of expectation such as attends a peal of thunder when there is that in the reverberation which betokens another immediate discharge. Nor was expectancy deceived, for, to the amazement of all, a man who had been sitting quietly and unobserved in the Strangers' Gallery, suddenly stood up. His face was very pale; his eyes galled by recent weeping. He extended one hand towards the member who had just spoken, while with the other he appeared to grasp some object hidden in his bosom, and exclaimed:—

"You speak to dead ears. They would not believe though, at the bidding of God, every Senator you tell of rose from his grave to warn them. Let them believe me!"

The words were followed, or rather accompanied, by a muffled report, for no one was able to interfere, the space allotted to strangers being rather empty at the time; and the man fell forward on to the rail in front of the gallery, his form obscured at first by a little cloud of smoke which hung in silvery wreaths about the spot, as if loth to depart until the spirit's deliverance was fully accomplished, and then floated away and dispersed.

The supreme act of mediation was consummated; and that which to the darkening eyes of victim and priest seemed an altar flaming around him, received due libation.

In preparation.

RHYMES REASONABLE AND UNREASONABLE.

Specimen Leaflet, 120 lines, 1d. post free, contains the following

E L E G Y

TO A MISPLACED "I."

Quoth Thackeray—in all pedagogue's despite—
 "The dullest dunce may spell." No dunce can write.
 And were orthography a weaker point,
 My prosody is seldom out of joint;
 Syntax the same, and ditto etymology—
 While half the Bishops grant me sound theology!
 Yet have I told them plainly they're all wrong
 Through rash construction of the word Belong,
 Concerning which poor BUNG is more canonical
 Than CANTUAR, LONDON, or the Morning Chronicle.
 A strange ally! whose readers sourly think
 High Prelacy a greater crime than "drink";
 Still nourish memories of Laudian shears,
 Of pilloried Bastwick, and Prynne's twice trimmed ears;
 Hope still, in settlement of these old scores,
 To bundle Cope and Crosier out of doors,
 And give all creeds within St. Paul's a station—
 Nave, Choir, or Crypt to each Denomination—
 Where every ist or 'ian could unite
 To raise the ... of contentious spite!
 I tell them there's small grace and poor economy
 To Jesuitize the text in Deuteronomy—
 Discriminate deferred from present stealing,
 And flout the A B C of honest dealing—
 A grievous fault in their orthography
 Which spells distrust in many an angry SEE.

ARIEL.

HOW GREAT MEN RECOUP THEIR ENERGIES.

REMARKABLE TESTIMONY.

The keynote of happiness, long life, and successful achievement is the healthy mind in the healthy body. Sanatogen is the tonic food which is being prescribed by the medical profession to-day to bring about this happy condition. Not only have 7,600 physicians endorsed, in writing, the merits of Sanatogen as the ideal recuperative and restorative, but the most distinguished men and women of the day have not hesitated in coming forward to testify as to the great benefit they have derived from the use of Sanatogen.

Thus Lord RONALD SUTHERLAND GOWER, the sculptor and historian, says:—

"Hammerfield, Penshurst, Kent.

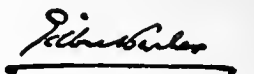

"I feel it only due to the benefit conferred in my general health by Sanatogen to write to inform those interested in that wonderful medicine that in a couple of months' time it has cured me of all gouty trouble. Sanatogen has done me far more good than all the waters of Bath and Harrogate."

Sir GILBERT PARKER, M.P., the eminent author and traveller, writes:—

"20, Carlton House Terrace, S.W.

"I have used Sanatogen at intervals since last autumn with extraordinary benefit. It is to my mind a true food tonic, feeding the nerves, increasing the energy, and giving fresh vigour to the overworked body and mind."

Sir JOHN HARE, the popular actor, says:—

"75, Upper Berkeley Street, W.

"I have found Sanatogen a most valuable tonic and stimulant during a period when I had to work very hard under conditions of great weakness and ill-health. I can heartily recommend it to those working under similarly distressing circumstances."

Mme. SARAH GRAND, the eminent authoress, writes:—

"10, Grove Hill, Tunbridge Wells.

"Sanatogen has done everything for me which it is said to be able to do for cases of nervous debility and exhaustion. I began to take it after nearly four years' enforced idleness from extreme debility, and felt the benefit almost immediately. And now, after taking it steadily three times a day for twelve weeks, I find myself able to enjoy both work and play again, and also able to do as much of both as I ever did."

Space forbids mention of the many more very interesting autographs of people eminent in nearly every walk of life, and their testimony contained in a dainty publication issued by the Sanatogen Co., under the title of 'Autographs of Celebrities.' All those interested should write for a copy, which will be forwarded gratis and post free on application to the Sanatogen Co., 12, Chenies Street, London, W.C., mentioning the Athenæum. Sanatogen, which, by the way, is the tonic food remedy used in the Royal Family, is sold by all chemists in tins from 1s. 9d. to 9s. 6d.

MESSRS. BELL'S RECENT EDUCATIONAL BOOKS.

ARITHMETIC.WORKS BY CHARLES PENDLEBURY.

A New School Arithmetic. Fifth Edition. 4s. 6d.; or in 2 parts, 2s. 6d. each. Examples, separately, 3s.; or Part I., 1s. 6d.; Part II., 2s.

A Junior Arithmetic. 1s. 6d.; or with Answers, 2s. (The Answers separately, 6d. net.) Examples, separately, 1s.; or, with Answers, 1s. 6d.

New Shilling Arithmetic. 1s.; or, with Answers, 1s. 4d.

Examples in Arithmetic. With some Notes on Method. By C. O. TUCKEY, M.A., Assistant Master at Charterhouse. 3s.

ALGEBRA.

Elementary Algebra. By W. M. BAKER, M.A., and A. A. BOURNE, M.A. Fifth Edition. Revised. With or without Answers, 4s. 6d. Also in Parts—Part I. To Quadratic Equations, 2s. 6d.; or, with Answers, 3s. Part II. With or without Answers, 2s. 6d. FULL KEY, 10s. net; or, in Two Parts, 5s. net each. Examples. Separately, 3s., and in Parts.

A First Algebra. By W. M. BAKER, M.A., and A. A. BOURNE, M.A. 1s. 6d.; or, with Answers, 2s. The Answers, separately, 6d. net.

Examples in Algebra. By C. O. TUCKEY, M.A. Fifth Edition. 3s. Appendix of Supplementary Examples. 6d. net.

GEOMETRY.

Elementary Geometry. By W. M. BAKER, M.A., and A. A. BOURNE, M.A. Complete. Sixth Edition, Revised. 4s. 6d. COMPLETE KEY, 6s. net. Also in Parts. Complete List on application.

A First Geometry. By W. M. BAKER, M.A., and A. A. BOURNE, M.A. With or without Answers, 1s. 6d.

Algebraic Geometry. A New Treatise on Analytical Conic Sections. By W. M. BAKER, M.A. Crown 8vo, 6s.; also Part I., separately, 2s. 6d.

Examples in Practical Geometry and Mensuration. By J. W. MARSHALL, M.A., and C. O. TUCKEY, M.A. With or without Answers. 1s. 6d.

Practical Solid Geometry. By the Rev. P. W. UNWIN, M.A., Assistant Master at Cheltenham College. Part I. Ready immediately. Part II. In the Press.

Elementary Mensuration. By W. M. BAKER, M.A., and A. A. BOURNE, M.A. Crown 8vo, 1s. 6d.

TRIGONOMETRY.

A New Trigonometry for Schools. By W. G. BORCHARDT, M.A., and Rev. A. D. PERROTT, M.A. 4s. 6d.; or, in 2 parts, 2s. 6d. each.

BOTANY AND CHEMISTRY.

Elementary Botany. By PERCY GROOM, M.A. Cantab. et Oxon. D.Sc. Oxon. Assistant Professor at the Imperial College of Science and Technology. Eighth Edition, Revised and Enlarged, with 275 Illustrations. 3s. 6d.

General Chemistry for Colleges. By ALEXANDER SMITH, B.Sc. Ph.D. F.R.S.E., Professor of Chemistry and Director of General and Physical Chemistry at the University of Chicago. Demy 8vo, 6s. 6d. net.

An Introduction to Chemistry. By D. S. MACNAIR, Ph.D. B.Sc. Third Edition, Revised. Crown 8vo, 2s.

Elementary Inorganic Chemistry. By JAMES WALKER, D.Sc. Ph.D. F.R.S. Professor of Chemistry in the University of Edinburgh. Third Edition, Revised. 3s. 6d.

MODERN LANGUAGES.

Bell's French Course. By R. P. ATHERTON, M.A., Assistant Master at Haileybury. Complete in Two Parts. Illustrated. 1s. 6d. each.

Bell's First French Reader. By R. P. ATHERTON, M.A. 1s.

Bell's Illustrated French Readers. Tales by ERCKMANN-CHATRIAN. Edited by G. H. PRIOR, Assistant Master at Rugby. First Series. Pott 8vo. Now ready. Second Series. In the press.

Gasc's Concise Dictionary of the French and English Languages. Fourth Edition, Revised. Medium 16mo, treble columns, xii+941 pp., 3s. 6d. Also in Two Parts, 2s. each.

Bell's First German Course. By L. B. T. CHAFFEY, M.A., Assistant Master at Eton. Illustrated. 2s.

A German Historical Reader. By J. E. MALLIN, B.A. 2s.

A Practical German Grammar. By CALVIN THOMAS. Fourth Edition, Revised. Crown 8vo, 4s. 6d.

A German Reader and Theme-Book. By CALVIN THOMAS, Professor in Columbia University, and W. A. HERVEY. Crown 8vo, 438 pp., 4s. 6d.

A Spanish Primer. By the Rev. A. C. CLAPIN. Crown 8vo, 1s.

LATIN AND GREEK.

A Latin Reader (Prose and Verse). By W. KING GILLIES, M.A., and HECTOR J. ANDERSON, M.A. Crown 8vo, 2s.

Bell's Concise Latin Course. Part I. By E. C. MARCHANT, M.A. and J. G. SPENCER, B.A. 2s. Part II. By E. C. MARCHANT, M.A., and S. E. WINBOLT, M.A. 2s. 6d.

Bell's Illustrated Latin Course for the Year. By E. C. MARCHANT, M.A., and J. G. SPENCER, B.A. In Three Parts. 1s. 6d. each.

Latin Unseens. Selected and arranged by E. C. MARCHANT, M.A. 1s.

Climax Prote. A First Greek Reader. In Two Progressive Parts. With Hints and Vocabulary. By E. C. MARCHANT, M.A. With 30 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 1s. 6d.

ENGLISH.

Elementary English Grammar through Composition. By JOHN D. ROSE, M.A., Rector of the Kirkcaldy High School. Crown 8vo, 1s.

Poetry for Upper Classes. Selected and Arranged, with Explanatory Notes, by EDMUND ARTHUR HELPS. 352 pp. 1s. 6d.

Bell's English Texts for Secondary Schools. Chosen to suit the Four Years' Course in English prescribed by the Board of Education. Full Prospectus on application.

English Reading. A new Series of English Texts, edited for use in Schools. 16mo. Full List sent on application.

PRACTICAL PHYSICS.

A Three Years' Course in Practical Physics. By JAMES SINCLAIR, M.A. Glas., B.Sc. Lond., Head Science Master in Shawlands Academy, Glasgow. In 3 vols. With numerous Diagrams. 1s. 6d. each.

A First Year's Course in Practical Physics.

A Second Year's Course in Practical Physics.

A Third Year's Course in Practical Physics.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

TEN PERSONAL STUDIES.

By WILFRID WARD. With 10 Portraits. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

Contents.—A. J. BALFOUR — THREE NOTABLE EDITORS: DELANE, HUTTON, KNOWLES—HENRY SIDGWICK—ROBERT EARL OF LYTTON—FATHER I. RYDER—SIR M. E. GRANT DUFF—LEO XIII.—CARDINAL WISEMAN—JOHN HENRY NEWMAN—NEWMAN AND MANNING.

"A singularly attractive volume."—Standard.

"A genuine contribution to contemporary biography.... This book will be highly valued by the historian of the future, as well as by the reader of to-day."

Daily Telegraph.

STALKS ABROAD:

Being some Record of the Sport obtained during a Two Years' Tour Round the World.

By HAROLD FRANK WALLACE, F.Z.S. With numerous Illustrations by the Author and from Photographs. 8vo, 12s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 5d.)

"This is one of the most pleasant books of sport published during recent years, full of the joy of the outdoor life, yet with many shrewd observations and criticisms of lasting value."

Country Life.

THE RUSSIAN CONQUEST OF THE CAUCASUS.

By J. F. BADDELEY. With 7 Maps and Plans and 15 other Illustrations. Royal 8vo, 21s. net. (Inland postage 6d.)

"Mr. Baddeley's learning is prodigious, and he has an intimate knowledge of the Caucasus and the Caucasians which gives life to his learning. It is a valuable, and indeed an indispensable contribution to military history."

Times.

THE SCOTTISH STAPLE AT VEERE:

A Study in the Economic History of Scotland.

By the late JOHN DAVIDSON, M.A. D.Phil. (Edin.), sometime Professor of Political Economy in the University of New Brunswick, and ALEXANDER GRAY, M.A. With 13 Illustrations. 8vo, 12s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

LETTERS TO AN ELECTOR.

By J. H. BALFOUR BROWNE, K.C. 8vo, paper covers, 6d. net. (Inland postage 2d.)

Contents.—Tariff Reform (Four Letters)—The Licensing Bill (Two Letters)—The Miners' Eight Hours Bill (Two Letters)—Property—One Word on Education—Socialism—The Right to Work—Unearned Increment—Railways (Two Letters)—Socialism and Patriotism—Freedom and Socialism—Mining Royalties.

BUDDHISM, PRIMITIVE AND PRESENT IN MAGADHA AND IN CEYLON.

By REGINALD STEPHEN COPLESTON, D.D., Bishop of Calcutta. SECOND EDITION. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

THESAURUS OF ENGLISH WORDS AND PHRASES.

Classified and Arranged so as to Facilitate the Expression of Ideas and Assist in Literary Composition.

By PETER MARK ROGET, M.D. F.R.S. Crown 8vo, 9s. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

HUMAN PERSONALITY AND ITS SURVIVAL OF BODILY DEATH.

By FREDERIC W. H. MYERS.

ORIGINAL EDITION, 2 vols. 8vo, 42s. net. (Inland postage 5d.)

ABRIDGED EDITION, in 1 vol. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.
39, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

PHILIPS' GEOGRAPHICAL PICTURES.

A new Series of 24 Pictures Enlarged from Photographs direct from Nature illustrating Geographical Features, beautifully printed in Sepia Tint on 20 Enamelled Cards.

SERIES I.
LAND FORMS:

CLIMATE AND VEGETATION.

EDITED BY

P. H. L'ESTRANGE, B.A.,

Author of 'A Progressive Course of Comparative Geography on the Concentric System.'

Size of Picture 20 ins. by 14½ ins.

Size of Card 24 ins. by 20 ins.

At the foot of each Picture is printed a Descriptive Note and Series of Questions.

Price 1s. 3d. each net; the Set complete in Cardboard Box, 21s. net.

Prospectus, with List, on application.

In use at Charterhouse, Rugby, Marlborough, Malvern, Repton, Blundell's (Tiverton), Felsted, and other Public Schools, and at many Secondary Schools and Pupil-Teachers' Centres.

THIRD EDITION, REVISED.

Demy 4to, 6s. net.

A PROGRESSIVE COURSE
OF COMPARATIVE GEOGRAPHY
ON THE CONCENTRIC SYSTEM.

By P. H. L'ESTRANGE, B.A.,
Assistant Master at Malvern College.

With 177 Illustrations and 172 Maps and Diagrams in Colour.

Also in Two Volumes as under:—

(1) The Text, with 177 Illustrations, 3s. 6d. net;

(2) The Maps and Diagrams, with Index, 3s. 6d. net.

A JUNIOR COURSE OF
COMPARATIVE GEOGRAPHY.

Being Course A (Text only) of the 'Progressive Course.'

By P. H. L'ESTRANGE, B.A.

Demy 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

The Educational News says:—"The method is sound, and the book should help to bring about a revolution in geographical teaching."

CATALOGUE OF EDUCATIONAL PUBLICATIONS, ALSO OF MAPS, ATLASES, GLOBES, &c., POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

GEORGE PHILIP & SON, LTD., 32, Fleet Street, London.
PHILIP, SON & NEPHEW, LTD., South Castle Street, Liverpool.

MACKINDER'S
ELEMENTARY STUDIES IN GEOGRAPHY.

By H. J. MACKINDER, M.A.

Reader in Geography in the University of London.

Large crown 8vo.

With numerous Coloured Plates and Illustrations.

Book I. OUR OWN ISLANDS. Third Edition. 2s. 6d.

Or in Two Parts, each 1s. 3d.

Book II. LANDS BEYOND THE CHANNEL. 1s. 9d.

Prof. LYDE, University College, London, says:—"The selection of material is just as admirable as the treatment; it is infinitely the best book on Europe for school use that I have ever seen; and I cannot imagine anything better for the training of a child's outlook faculty."

A RATIONAL GEOGRAPHY.

By ERNEST YOUNG, B.Sc.

Head Master of the Lower School of John Lyon, Harrow.

In Three Parts, with numerous Maps and Diagrams. Cloth, crown 8vo, 1s. 6d. each.

"The book will do much to produce a greatly needed revolution in the method of teaching geography. It meets the Board of Education's Syllabus in geography for secondary schools. Whoever has to give a lesson in geography will find it of service. It is full of hints and new ideas."

Schoolmaster.

APPLIED GEOGRAPHY.

By J. SCOTT KELTIE, LL.D.

Second Edition. Revised and Enlarged.

Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

"A sound and interesting introduction in a small compass to the leading principles of human geography."—Nature.

LESSONS IN PHYSICAL GEOGRAPHY.

By CHARLES R. DRYER, M.A.

Professor of Geography in the State Normal School, Indiana.

With 360 Maps, Diagrams, and Illustrations.

Crown 8vo, 6s. net.

This book is in use at the School of Economics, University of London.

MATHEMATICAL
GEOGRAPHY.

By WILLIS E. JOHNSON, Ph.B.,

Vice-President and Professor of Geography and Social Sciences, Northern Normal and Industrial School, Aberdeen, South Dakota.

With Glossary of Terms and 127 Illustrations and Diagrams.

Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

COMMERCIAL GEOGRAPHY.

By HENRY GANNETT, of the U.S. Geological Survey; CARL L. GARRISON, Principal of the Morgan School, Washington, and EDWIN J. HOUSTON, A.M. Ph.D.

Designed for use in the Commercial Departments of Secondary Schools, &c.

With Maps, Diagrams, and Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 6s. net.

MACMILLAN'S EDUCATIONAL LIST.

- A SCHOOL ARITHMETIC. By H. S. HALL, M.A., and F. H. STEVENS, M.A. Complete, with Answers, 4s. 6d.; without Answers, 3s. 6d. Or, in Two Parts—Part I., with Answers, 2s. 6d.; without Answers, 2s. Part II., with Answers, 2s. 6d.; without Answers, 2s. Answers, 1s. KEY in Preparation. This work follows closely the recommendations of the Mathematical Association.
- A MODERN ARITHMETIC, with Graphic and Practical Exercises. By H. SYDNEY JONES, M.A. Parts I. and II., with or without Answers, 2s. 6d. each. Complete, with or without Answers, 4s. 6d.
- A NEW ALGEBRA. By S. BARNARD, M.A., and J. M. CHILD, B.A. B.Sc. Volume I. containing Parts I., II., and III. 2s. 6d.
Part I.—A Generalized Arithmetic, in which Letters are employed to represent Natural Numbers and the idea of Algebraic Form is introduced.
Parts II. and III.—Zero and Negative Numbers and Fractions are considered. These two new classes of numbers are defined so that the expressions $a-b$ and a/b may always have a meaning.
- PRACTICAL ARITHMETIC AND MENSURATION. By F. CASTLE, M.I.M.E. 2s.
- A COURSE OF PLANE GEOMETRY FOR ADVANCED STUDENTS. Part I. By CLEMENT V. DURELL, M.A. 8vo, 5s. net.
- A LATIN READING BOOK. Gotham and other Stories. By Rev. E. D. STONE, formerly Fellow of King's College, Cambridge, and Assistant Master at Eton. Crown 8vo, 1s. 6d.
- MACMILLAN'S OROGRAPHICAL MAP OF EUROPE. Printed in 10 Colours. Designed by B. B. DICKINSON, M.A. F.R.G.S., and A. W. ANDREWS, M.A. F.R.G.S. Varnished, mounted on Canvas and Rollers, 15s. Unmounted, 11s.
- ALSO NOTES TO SAME. Limp cloth, 1s.
- REPRESENTATIVE ENGLISH POEMS. Selected and Edited, with Introduction and Notes. By G. S. BRETT. Globe 8vo, 3s. 6d. [English Classics.]
- A BOOK OF POETRY. Illustrative of English History. Edited by G. DOWSE, B.A. Globe 8vo, limp cloth. Part I. (A.D. 61–1485). 9d. Part II. (The Tudors and Stuarts). 9d. Part III. (The Hanoverian Dynasty). 9d. [English Literature for Secondary Schools.]
- SELECTIONS FROM WHITE'S NATURAL HISTORY OF SELBORNE. Edited, with Introduction, Notes, and Glossary. By F. A. BRUTON, M.A. With 40 Illustrations. Globe 8vo, limp cloth, 1s. [English Literature for Secondary Schools.]

CAMBRIDGE LOCAL EXAMINATIONS, 1909.

RELIGIOUS KNOWLEDGE.

- The Gospel according to St. Matthew. Greek Text. With Introduction and Notes by Rev. Canon Sloman, M.A. 2s. 6d. [Preliminary, Junior, and Senior.]
- The Acts of the Apostles. Greek Text. With Notes by T. E. Page, M.A. 3s. 6d. [Junior and Senior.]
- The Acts of the Apostles. Authorized Version. With Notes by T. E. Page, M.A., and Rev. A. S. Walpole, M.A. 2s. 6d. [Junior and Senior.]
- The Epistles to the Thessalonians. Greek Text. With Commentary by Rev. G. Milligan, D.D. 12s. [Senior.]
- The First Epistle to the Thessalonians. By C. J. Vaughan, D.D. 1s. 6d. [Senior.]
- The First Epistle to the Thessalonians. Analysis and Notes by Rev. G. W. Garrod, B.A. 2s. 6d. net. [Senior.]
- The Second Epistle to the Thessalonians. Analysis and Notes by Rev. G. W. Garrod, B.A. 2s. 6d. net. [Senior.]

ENGLISH.

- Lamb—Tales from Shakespeare. Edited by Rev. A. Ainger, LL.D. Contains 'A Midsummer Night's Dream,' 'The Winter's Tale,' 'Much Ado About Nothing,' 'Macbeth,' 'The Comedy of Errors,' 'Othello.' 2s. 6d. net. [Preliminary.]
- Shakespeare—Julius Cæsar. With Introduction and Notes by K. Deighton. 1s. 9d. [Junior and Senior.]
- Julius Cæsar. Eversley Edition. With Notes. 1s. [Junior and Senior.]
- Julius Cæsar (Text only.) Sewed, 6d. [Junior and Senior.]
- Richard II. With Introduction and Notes by K. Deighton. With an Appendix. 1s. 9d. [Senior.]
- Richard II. Eversley Edition. With Notes. 1s. [Senior.]
- Scott—A Legend of Montrose. 2s. net. [Junior.]
- Spenser—The Faerie Queene. Book I. With Introduction and Notes by H. M. Percival, M.A. 3s. [Senior.]
- Tennyson—Geraint and Enid and the Marriage of Geraint. With Introduction and Notes by G. C. Macaulay, M.A. 2s. 6d. [Senior.]
- Gareth and Lynette. With Introduction and Notes by G. C. Macaulay, M.A. 2s. 6d. [Senior.]
- Tennyson for the Young. Edited by Rev. A. Ainger, LL.D. 1s. net. [Preliminary.]
- Bacon—Essays. With Introduction and Notes by F. G. Selby, M.A. 3s. [Senior.]
- Gibbon—The Age of the Antonines. The History of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. By E. Gibbon. Chapters I.–III. Edited by J. H. Fowler, M.A. 1s. [Senior.]

LATIN AND GREEK.

- Caesar—The Invasion of Britain. By W. Welch, M.A., and Rev. C. G. Duffield, M.A. Selections from Books IV. and V., adapted for Beginners. With Exercises. 1s. 6d. [Preliminary.]
- De Bello Gallico. Book IV. With Notes and Vocabulary by C. Bryans, M.A. 1s. 6d. [Junior.]
- De Bello Gallico. Book V. With Notes and Vocabulary by C. Colbeck, M.A. 1s. 6d. [Junior.]
- Virgil—Aeneid. Book XI. With Notes and Vocabulary by T. E. Page, M.A. 1s. 6d. [Junior and Senior.]
- Livy. Book XXII. With Notes and Vocabulary by Rev. W. W. Capes, M.A., and J. E. Melhuish, M.A. 1s. 6d. [Senior.]
- Books XXI. and XXII. Edited by Rev. W. W. Capes, M.A. 4s. 6d. [Senior.]
- Cicero—Pro Milone. Edited by F. H. Colson, M.A. 2s. 6d. [Senior.]
- Xenophon—Anabasis. Book II. With Notes and Vocabulary by Rev. A. S. Walpole, M.A. 1s. 6d. [Junior.]
- Sophocles—Antigone. Edited by Rev. M. A. Bayfield, M.A. 2s. 6d. [Junior and Senior.]
- Herodotus. Book VI. Edited by Prof. J. Strachan, M.A. 3s. 6d. [Senior.]
- Plato—Euthyphro, Apology, Crito, and Phaedo. Translated by F. J. Church, M.A. 2s. 6d. net. [Senior.]
- Euthyphro (and Menexenus). With Introduction and Notes by C. E. Graves, M.A. 1s. 6d. [Senior.]
- Crito (and Phaedo). Edited by Prof. C. H. Keene, M.A. 2s. 6d. [Senior.]
- Homer—Iliad. Books I.–XII. Edited by W. Leaf, Litt.D., and Rev. M. A. Bayfield, M.A. 6s. [Senior.]

FRENCH AND GERMAN.

- Moliere—Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme. Edited by L. M. Moriarty, M.A. 1s. 6d. [Senior.]
- Schiller—Die Jungfrau von Orleans. Edited by Joseph Gostwick. 2s. 6d. [Senior.]
- Die Jungfrau von Orleans. Edited by W. Humphreys. 3s. 6d. [Senior.]

OXFORD LOCAL EXAMINATIONS, 1909.

RELIGIOUS KNOWLEDGE.

SEE CAMBRIDGE LOCAL EXAMINATIONS.

ENGLISH.

- Keary—Heroes of Asgard. 2s. 6d. [Preliminary.]
- Macaulay—Lays of Ancient Rome. With Introduction and Notes by W. T. Webb, M.A. 1s. 9d. [Preliminary.]
- Scott—The Talisman. With Introduction and Notes. 2s. 6d. [Preliminary.]
- Shakespeare—The Tempest. With Introduction and Notes by K. Deighton. With an Appendix. 1s. 9d. [Junior and Senior.]
- The Tempest. Eversley Edition. With Notes. 1s. [Junior and Senior.]
- The Tempest. (Text only.) 6d. [Junior and Senior.]
- Henry V. With Introduction and Notes by K. Deighton. 1s. 9d. [Junior and Senior.]
- Henry V. Eversley Edition. With Notes. 1s. [Junior and Senior.]
- Macbeth. With Introduction and Notes by K. Deighton. With an Appendix. 1s. 9d. [Junior.]
- Macbeth. Eversley Edition. With Notes. 1s. [Junior.]
- Macbeth. (Text only.) Sewed, 6d. [Junior.]
- Scott—Quentin Durward. With Introduction and Notes. 2s. 6d. [Junior and Senior.]
- The Lay of the Last Minstrel. With Introduction and Notes by G. H. Stuart, M.A., and E. H. Elliot, B.A. 2s. [Junior.]
- The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Edited by F. T. Palgrave. 1s. [Junior.]
- Tennyson's Select Poems. With Introduction and Notes by H. B. George, M.A., and W. H. Hadow, M.A. 2s. 6d. [Preliminary, Junior, and Senior.]
- Burke—Thoughts on the Cause of the Present Discontents. With Introduction and Notes by F. G. Selby, C.I.E. M.A. 2s. 6d. [Junior and Senior.]
- More—Utopia. With Introduction and Notes by H. B. Cotterill, M.A. 2s. 6d. [Senior.]
- Chaucer—The Prologue. With Introduction and Notes by A. W. Pollard, M.A. 1s. 9d. [Senior.]

LATIN AND GREEK.

- Caesar—The Gallic War. Edited by Rev. John Bond, M.A., and Rev. A. S. Walpole, M.A. 4s. 6d. [Senior.]
- Gallic War. BOOKS II. and III. With Notes and Vocabulary by Rev. W. G. Rutherford, LL.D. 1s. 6d. [Junior and Senior.]
- Gallic War. BOOK IV. With Notes and Vocabulary by C. Bryans, M.A. 1s. 6d. [Senior.]
- Virgil—Aeneid. BOOK III. With Notes and Vocabulary by T. E. Page, M.A. 1s. 6d. [Junior and Senior.]
- Aeneid. BOOK IV. With Notes and Vocabulary by T. E. Page, M.A. 1s. 6d. [Senior.]
- Livy. BOOK XXII. By W. W. Capes, M.A., and J. E. Melhuish, M.A. 1s. 6d. [Senior.]
- BOOKS XXI. and XXII. Edited by Rev. W. W. Capes, M.A. 4s. 6d. [Senior.]
- Horace—Odes. BOOKS III. and IV. With Notes and Vocabulary by T. E. Page, M.A. (Elementary Classics.) 1s. 6d. each. (Classical Series.) 2s. each. [Senior.]
- Xenophon—Anabasis. BOOK III. With Notes and Vocabulary by Rev. G. H. Nall, M.A. 1s. 6d. [Junior and Senior.]
- Anabasis. BOOK IV. With Notes and Vocabulary by Rev. E. D. Stone, M.A. 1s. 6d. [Senior.]
- Euripides—Hecuba. With Notes and Vocabulary by Rev. J. Bond, M.A., and Rev. A. S. Walpole, M.A. 1s. 6d. [Senior.]
- Plato—Apology. Edited by H. Williamson, M.A. 2s. 6d. [Senior.]
- Crito. Edited by C. H. Keene, M.A. 2s. 6d. [Senior.]
- Euthyphro, Apology, Crito and Phaedo. Translated by F. J. Church, M.A. 2s. 6d. net. [Senior.]
- Aeschylus—Prometheus Vincetus. With Notes and Vocabulary by Rev. H. M. Stephenson, M.A. 1s. 6d. [Senior.]
- Prometheus Vincetus. Edited by E. E. Sikes, M.A., and St. J. B. W. Willson, M.A. 2s. 6d. [Senior.]

MACMILLAN'S LIST

TENNYSON CENTENARY.

THE WORKS OF ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON.

EVERSLEY EDITION. Annotated by the Author. Edited by HALLAM LORD TENNYSON. 9 vols. Globe 8vo, 4s. net each.

- I. POEMS.
- II. POEMS.
- III. ENOCH ARDEN, and IN MEMORIAM.
- IV. THE PRINCESS and MAUD.
- V. IDYLLS OF THE KING.
- VI. BALLADS, and other Poems.
- VII. DEMETER, and other Poems.
- VIII. QUEEN MARY and HAROLD.
- IX. BECKET, and other Plays.

EVERSLEY SERIES.—New Vol.

Shakespeare.

By Prof. WALTER RALEIGH. Globe 8vo, 4s. net.

William Morris.

By ALFRED NOYES. Crown 8vo, 2s. net.
[English Men of Letters.]

Notes of a Botanist on the Amazon and Andes.

Being Records of Travel during the Years 1849-1864. By RICHARD SPRUCE, Ph.D. Edited and Condensed by ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE, O.M. F.R.S. With Portrait of the Author and other Illustrations and Maps. 2 vols. 8vo, 21s. net.

The Acropolis of Athens.

By MARTIN L. D'OOGE, Professor of Greek in the University of Michigan. Fully illustrated. 8vo, 17s. net.
[Tuesday.]

The Origin and Development of the Moral Ideas.

By EDWARD WESTERMARCK, Ph.D., Martin White Professor of Sociology in the University of London. In 2 vols. 8vo. Vol. II. 14s. net.

Previously published: Vol. I. 14s. net.

Times.—"The publication of Dr. Westermarck's second volume completes a noteworthy contribution to sociological literature."

Earthwork of England.

Prehistoric, Roman, Saxon, Danish, Norman, and Medieval. By A. HADRIAN ALLCROFT, M.A. Illustrated with Plans, Sections, &c. 8vo, 18s. net.

Caesar's Commentaries on the Gallic War.

Translated into English by T. RICE HOLMES, Hon. Litt.D. Dublin. With Map. Crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net.

The Fulness of Christ.

Three Sermons preached before the University of Oxford, and other Papers. By EDWARD STUART TALBOT, D.D. and LL.D. (Cantab.), Bishop of Southwark. Globe 8vo, 1s. 6d. net.

The Religion of the Common Man.

By Sir HENRY WRIXON, K.C. Crown 8vo, 3s. net.

NEW 6/- NOVELS.

One Immortality. By H. FIELDING HALL. [Jan. 22.]

Joan of Garloch. By ALBERT KINROSS.

The Red City. By Dr. S. WEIR MITCHELL.

MACMILLAN & CO., LTD., London.

J. M. DENT & CO.'S BOOKS.

JANUARY NUMBER NOW ON SALE.

THE NEW QUARTERLY.

A Review of Science and Literature.

Edited by DESMOND MACCARTHY.

Contents:

IBANT OBSCURI: With Prefatory Remarks on Virgilian Rhythms. ROBERT BRIDGES.

RECENT PSYCHICAL RESEARCH. Mrs. VERRALL.

MOUNTAIN SICKNESS. J. S. HALDANE, M.D. F.R.S.

ARISTOPHANES ON TENNYSON. A. W. VERRALL, Litt.D.

GEORGE CANNING. HERBERT PAUL, M.P.

THE STABILITY OF MOUNTAINS. Captain J. E. E. CRASTER, R.E.

THE HOUSE OF HOSPITALITIES. THOMAS HARDY.

THE SOLDIER'S WIFE. E. VON KEYSERLING.

HALF-A-CROWN NET.

Yearly Subscription 10s. post free.

THE MYSTICAL ELEMENT OF RELIGION.

Studied in the Lives of St. Catherine of Genoa and her Friends. By Baron F. VON HÜGEL. Photogravure Portraits, 2 vols. demy 8vo, 21s. net.

"The most complete and balanced attempt in any language to apply the modern scientific method to all the facts of religion on the grand scale The best-informed and most inspiring study of religion in our time.....a mine for all future workers in that field."—Daily News.

A NEW LIGHT ON THE RENAISSANCE.

By HAROLD BAYLEY. Over 400 Illustrations. Super-royal octavo, 12s. 6d. net.

The design of this work is to explain the origin and meaning of the multifarious "trademarks" and decorative designs used by the early printers and papermakers, and as far as possible to recover some of the fragrance with which these neglected emblems were once permeated.

A large number of the embellishments used by the early printers, such as headlines, tail-pieces, initials, and other forms of book decoration are reproduced. [Ready shortly.]

BEETHOVEN'S LETTERS.

Critical Edition, with Explanatory Notes. By Dr. ALF. CHR. KALISCHER, translated with Preface by J. S. SHEDLOCK, M.A. Photogravure Frontispiece. Many interesting Portraits, Facsimiles of Music hitherto unpublished, &c. 2 vols. demy 8vo, 21s. net.

This will be the First Complete English Edition of Beethoven's Letters, and will contain over 1,100 Letters and Notes. [Ready shortly.]

A CENTURY OF EDUCATION.

Being the Centenary History of the British and Foreign School Society. By HENRY BRYAN BINNS. With valuable Supplementary Chapters on Educational Matters by Dr. Macnamara, Prof. Foster Watson, Mr. Sidney Webb, and Mr. Graham Wallas. Portraits. Large crown 8vo, 5s. net.

"Told with a charm and an eloquence not always associated with the treatment of educational problems."—Daily News.

"Mr. Binns has worked well and discreetly, while appendices on educational subjects by Messrs. Macnamara, Sidney Webb, Foster Watson, and Graham Wallas add value and interest to his book."—Evening Standard.

J. M. DENT & CO.

29 and 30, Bedford Street, London, W.C.

MESSRS. CONSTABLE'S BOOKS.

FIRST LIST.

RACIAL PROBLEMS IN HUNGARY:

a History of the Slovaks. By R. W. SETON-WATSON ("Scotus Viator"), Author of 'The Future of Austria-Hungary.' 42 Illustrations and Map. Demy 8vo, 16s. net.

ÆNEAS SILVIUS (Enea Silvio de' Piccolomini — Pius II.), Orator, Man of Letters, Statesman, and Pope. By WILLIAM BOULTING. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

A comprehensive and scholarly picture of the Papacy in the years following the Council of Constance, culminating in a fascinating portraiture of one of the most interesting of all occupants of the Chair of St. Peter.

AN HISTORICAL INTRODUCTION TO

THE MARPRELATE TRACTS. By W. M. PIERCE. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

A valuable and thorough study of a subject of much importance to scholars of both the social and ecclesiastical history of the sixteenth century.

UNIVERSITY ADMINISTRATION.

By CHARLES W. ELIOT, President of Harvard. Crown 8vo, 6s. net.

A CONCORDANCE TO THE ENGLISH

POEMS OF THOMAS GRAY. Edited by ALBERT S. COOK. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

PORCELAIN: Oriental, Continental, and British. A Book of Handy Reference for Collectors. By R. L. HOBSON. 49 Plates. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net. [Second Edition.]

ESSAYS BIOGRAPHICAL AND CHEMICAL. By Prof. Sir WILLIAM RAMSAY, K.C.B. LL.D. F.R.S. D.Sc. &c. 7s. 6d. net.

A volume of studies by one of our most eminent men of science.

CHAPTERS ON SPANISH LITERATURE.

By J. FITZMAURICE-KELLY. Crown 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

Written by the greatest living authority on the literature of Spain.

STUDIES AND MEMORIES.

By Sir CHARLES VILLIERS STANFORD. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

The volume deals with other than musical subjects. The papers are brightly written.

THE MAKING OF CANADA, 1763-1814.

By A. G. BRADLEY, Author of 'The Fight with France for North America,' 'Canada in the Twentieth Century,' &c. With Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net. Tells the story of the first fifty years of British rule in Canada, during which time the Dominion became a united country.

THE SECRET OF OUR NATIONAL

LITERATURE. Chapters in the History of the Anonymous and Pseudonymous Writings of our Countrymen. By WILLIAM PRIDEAUX COURTNEY, Author of 'A Register of National Biography.' Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

What more interesting subject could the book-lover wish to hear discussed than the attempts of famous authors to hide their personalities? Mr. Courtney can write on these matters with authority.

RUWENZORI. An Account of the Expedition of H.R.H. the Duke of the Abruzzi to the Snow Ranges situated between the Equatorial Lakes of Central Africa. By FILIPPO DE FILIPPI, F.R.G.S. With a Preface by H.R.H. the DUKE OF THE ABRUZZI. Done into English by CAROLINE DE FILIPPI, née FITZGERALD. Illustrated from Photographs taken by VITTORIA SELLA, Member of the Expedition. Numerous Plates, 5 Panoramas, 3 Maps, &c. 31s. 6d. net. [Second Impression ready shortly.]

"A more lavishly magnificent mountain book has never been seen."—Pall Mall Gazette.

RAILROAD REORGANIZATION.

By STUART DAGGETT, Ph.D. Demy 8vo, 8s. 6d. net.

THE LIFE-STORY OF SIR CHARLES

BRIGHT; with which is incorporated the story of the first Telegraph to America, India, and the Colonies. By CHARLES BRIGHT, F.R.S.E. 70 Illustrations. 500 pages, demy 8vo. Revised and Abridged Edition. 12s. 6d. net.

"Not only of interest to the general reader, but of value to the profession of which Sir Charles Bright was one of the chief pioneers."—Westminster Gazette.

THEODORE M. DAVIS' EXCAVATIONS.

THE TOMB OF SIPHTAH; THE

MONKEY TOMB; AND THE GOLD TOMB. With an Account of the finding of the Tombs, a Life of King Siptah and Queen Taosrit, a Catalogue of the Objects discovered. 28 Illustrations in Colour and Collotype, and several Plans. 4to, 42s. net.

Prospectuses on application.

ARCHIBALD CONSTABLE & CO. LTD.
10 Orange Street Leicester Square London W.C.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 16, 1909.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
OXFORD IN THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY	65
HAIG BROWN OF CHARTERHOUSE	66
A LITERARY HISTORY OF RUSSIA	66
SHELburne ESSAYS	67
EDUCATIONAL BOOKS	68
SCHOOL-BOOKS	70
OUR LIBRARY TABLE (A Maharajah's Impressions of Europe; The Oxford Edition of Lamb; Finn the Wolfhound; Ancient Egypt the Light of the World; Die Gotische Bibel; Baptist Historical Society's Transactions; Burke; Lodge; Post Office Directory; Debrett; Hazell's Annual; Who's Who in Germany)	71-72
THE SHAKESPEARE QUARTOS; TWO STORIES OF VAUGHAN; IZAAK WALTON'S WILL; ASSISTANT MASTERS IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS; THE HEAD MASTERS' CONFERENCE	73-74
LIST OF NEW BOOKS	75
LITERARY GOSSIP	76
SCIENCE—MATHEMATICAL BOOKS; HUMAN SPEECH; THE MODERN STEAM ENGINE; THE SCIENCE YEAR-BOOK; ANTHROPOLOGICAL NOTES; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS NEXT WEEK; GOSSIP	78-79
FINE ARTS—THE INTERNATIONAL SOCIETY; MR. G. THOMSON'S WATER-COLOURS; THE WORK OF PROF. C. J. HOLMES; CORNELIUS JANSSEN'S PORTRAIT OF MILTON; A PORTRAIT OF TURNER; GOSSIP; EXHIBITIONS	80-82
MUSIC—HANDEL AND HIS ORBIT; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	82-83
DRAMA—PENELOPE; HENRY OF NAVARRE; RUTLAND BARRINGTON; BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER	83-84
INDEX TO ADVERTISERS	84

LITERATURE

Oxford in the Eighteenth Century. By A. D. Godley. (Methuen & Co.)

OXFORD still has her wits; and here one of the brightest, whose verse has now delighted a whole generation, comes forth to tell in witty prose the "curiosities" of a bygone age. Yet the eighteenth century is not so very far away—in Oxford. In one college the Head has had but a single predecessor in office elected since 1795. Among middle-aged dons there are some whose grandfathers were born when Pitt was only a cornet of horse, or at least before he was known as a Parliamentary leader. The sedan in the streets is still remembered. Old furniture survives in undergraduates' rooms which was new when Walpole was Prime Minister. We are credibly informed that one of the archbishops sang the "very eighteenth-century" Mallard Song at a recent Gaudy.

But it is the memories to be found in books to which Mr. Godley has mainly restricted himself in his entertaining account of 'Oxford in the Eighteenth Century.' For the most part his material is in print; but he has read the portions of Hearne's diary which are still in manuscript; the Provost of Queen's (himself a delightful writer on old Oxford) has lent him "a MS. memoir which throws some light on Oxford society"; and there is also a mysterious "Shepelinda" to whom he refers from time to time in his pages, and who appears to have some fragrant records of college eccentricity that have never been printed. What, we may say in passing, is the Oxford Historical society about to leave these treasures in their obscurity? Why have these gifts a curtain before them? They are very like to take dust if some scholar does not make them known.

Mr. Godley comes and delicately lifts the veil. He shows us something—not too much—of the humours and misfortunes of the unreformed University. He takes us round its streets and its colleges, and points out how they looked in the eighteenth century. He talks of the teaching, the fellowships, college life and college discipline, exercises and examinations, reforms and reformers (there has never been a time, strange to say, when there have not been such in Oxford), and of what he calls politics and persecutions (of which in the eighteenth century there were far too many). All the subjects are musty enough to those who have read in Oxford history; but the quaintness and wit of Mr. Godley lend them a new life. He has the art of setting things incongruous in pleasing juxtaposition, the wit of suggestion, the facility of a repetition which is not tedious. So a delightful writer has produced a delightful book.

The book is much more than a mere record of unedifying academic history—for it must be confessed that, for the most part, the history of both Universities in the eighteenth century was unedifying: it is a criticism with a moral. The society described was far from unintelligent. So modern an observer as Mr. Frederic Harrison has not been chary of defending the century. Mr. Godley reminds us that in some respects, even in its attitude towards learning, it will bear comparison with our own:—

"It patronized learning theoretically, and even practically. Bishoppries rewarded the heads of presumably learned societies with a frequency not since observable. It was possible to collect 9,000*l.* to enable Kennicott to continue his Hebrew studies. Certainly society was neither Philistine nor unprogressive; but the progress was unintentional and almost unfelt. Morally and intellectually, the ethos of that part of the century which has given a character to the whole differed altogether from ours. It was not imaginative, nor was it humanitarian."

There, indeed, is the rub. The century "if coarse and material, was sane and vigorous." But (we venture to say, alas!) "Oxford cannot afford to be only sane and vigorous." It may be wondered whether a century or two hence a student of University life to-day, if he is willing to admit that it was vigorous—and he is at least as likely to consider its energy feverish—will declare that it was sane. Anyhow, we are ready enough to criticize our predecessors, and to regard the Universities in their days as "an awful warning to the Universities of our great commercial towns."

The blame for most of what was wrong in eighteenth-century Oxford Mr. Godley, with a pleasing charity, is inclined to attach to political interests. Oxford has always been disposed to look too much abroad. Cambridge has been more practical. The danger is far from being past to-day. The lesson of the eighteenth century, if we are to believe Mr. Godley, is that dons had better keep out of politics; and we are not at all sure that he is wrong. Jacobitism was the trouble in the eighteenth century; and it was of longer duration in Oxford than Mr. Godley thinks, for he would put the end of its influence in 1750; but when did Dr. King of St. Mary's Hall die, and did not Prince Charlie visit him (or was said to have visited him, which is much the same thing from the point of view of surviving interest) between 1751 and 1754? Dr. Holmes, it is true, became President of St. John's College earlier, and reconciled that recalcitrant society to the Hanoverians, but hardly till the king who gloried in the name of Briton visited him in college, and gave those too flattering portraits of himself and the homely Charlotte. Things certainly have changed now: the burning question is not Jacobitism, but Socialism; and concerning Socialism Mr. Godley is, even by implication or suggestion (arts in which he excels), severely silent. Matters that excite the nervous academic mind have changed almost as much as has the "local habitation"; and as for that, our author remarks that "much of the ground covered by Beaumont Street, now a resort of the medical profession, had been a cemetery."

That pregnant memory suggests to us that Universities need not blame themselves too seriously when critics look askance at them:—

"In England, at least, the instruction of youth is every one's butt; and while the medical profession has been congratulated on the fact that its successes walk abroad, but the earth conceals its failures,—places of education enjoy no such advertisement. They are known by their failures. In regard of their relation to their alumni, Cicero's word is only too true, 'cui placet obliviscitur, cui dolet meminit': a good education is forgotten, a bad one rankles. Were the world just, schools and Universities would get credit for the successes of their pupils in after-life, as they now are blamed for their subsequent failures. But men are supposed to fail in consequence, and to succeed in spite, of education. It has then to be remembered that even improved educational manners and customs have in the last thirty years heard but little of praise and much of condemnation. The public will still be cavilling. Nevertheless it must be allowed that the modern satirist has changed his object; charges of sloth are no longer his permanent stock-in-trade; Universities are blamed less for idleness than for misplaced and perverse activity. It is not that the Fellow of these days does not teach; the gravamen is that he teaches the wrong things, and wears himself out for frivolous ends, such as compulsory examinations in Greek."

So Mr. Godley endeavours to console an academic world, which criticizes its own past not without an uneasy memory that its present is meet for criticism too. Examination "is no better than a wolf held by the ears": so goes the uneasy feeling to-day within the walls, while the critics buzz outside.

We have insensibly fallen to gossip with Mr. Godley. But our aim has been to show that he by no means confines his sage observations to the doings of the degraded past. Whether we are inspired by "the ideals of the Middle Ages or of the Midland Counties," we may still find profit in his pages. When we have finished his story we part from him with regret, for he is a master of story-telling. Still we feel that he is even more at home in the nineteenth century than in the eighteenth, and we would beseech him to tell us with candid sincerity, in another volume, what in Oxford the nineteenth century did and thought. The record, in his hands, should prove, if even more instructive, at least as entertaining as the book we have just read.

William Haig Brown of Charterhouse.

Written by some of his Pupils, and edited by his Son, Harold E. Haig Brown. (Macmillan & Co.)

WILLIAM HAIG BROWN, after taking a brilliant degree in classics in 1846, was elected Fellow of his College—Pembroke, Cambridge—and for a few years was occupied in College and University work. During this period he became acquainted with the family of the Rev. Evan Edward Rowsell, and what he had “foreseen as dimly possible soon became an actual fact: in 1855 he became engaged to Annie Marion, Mr. Rowsell’s eldest daughter”; but this event necessitated the resignation of the Pembroke Fellowship, and the finding of some appointment supplying an income sufficient for the support of himself and a wife. He was appointed Head Master of Kensington Proprietary School in 1857. In 1863 he was elected “Schoolmaster” of Charterhouse, and retained his official connexion with Thomas Sutton’s great foundation till his death in 1906. He held his headmastership for thirty-four years, and spent the remainder of his life in London in the dignified position of Master of Charterhouse.

Dr. Haig Brown’s intellectual eminence, his striking power of organization, and the remarkable way in which he gained not only the respect, but also, as we learn from the contributors to this volume, the affection of his boys, place him among the “great headmasters”; and many beside Carthusians, many who are interested in the Public Schools of England, will welcome this account of his life. The great event of his professional career was the removal of Charterhouse from its old home in the City—the home in which Sutton planted it in 1611—to its present site near Godalming. The school “went down into Surrey but some six score strong, and within five years the Governing Body was fondly enacting that five hundred should be the limit of its capacity”; and the Head Master in his farewell sermon in 1897 stated that during the preceding thirty-four years 4,000 Carthusians had passed through the school. The different phases of Dr. Haig Brown’s life and work—first at Kensington School, subsequently at Charterhouse School, and at Charterhouse—are described in successive chapters by “some of his pupils,” and submitted by them to friendly, but fair and judicious criticism; and these contributions are edited by his son in a volume exhibiting a literary skill which “the Doctor” would have appreciated, and also such a view of the manifold responsibilities of the head master of a great school as we think he would have commended.

It appears that Dr. Haig Brown strongly advocated the removal of the school; and it may well be, as Dr. Macan surmises, “that he went to Charterhouse with the idea already germinating in his mind”; it seems also probable that he was the first to recognize the suitability of the site chosen by the Governors for the new buildings. However this may be, there is no doubt that the growth and efficiency of the New Charterhouse were almost wholly due to the Head Master, and he may therefore be “rightly acclaimed, in a very real sense, the Second Founder of the School”; but the “Second Founder” was always ready to recognize how much the loyal co-operation of members of his staff contributed to his success.

Dr. Haig Brown was undoubtedly a great organizer, essentially, as we read in the last chapter, “a practical man—a man of business.” In this department of a head master’s activity he was pre-eminent, rather than as a class teacher; but boys in his form had the great advantage of being submitted to the influence of a mind of comprehensive culture: for although he never established a modern side at Godalming, he was in full sympathy with the authors of the latest developments in literature and science. The chapter devoted to his ‘Spiritual Work as Head Master’ shows us how truly he felt his responsibility for the moral and religious training of the boys under his care.

Mr. Campbell, in discussing and describing Haig Brown’s ‘Scholastic Work as Head Master,’ tells us that by some “the Doctor” was considered “the last representative of the old generation of schoolmasters”—by others “the pioneer of a new generation.” It is not easy to define his exact position, as he seems not at any time to have shown himself a keen partisan in matters either scholastic or political. He is said to have adhered too rigidly to the old lines of schoolwork, and to have retained classical studies too exclusively as the foundation of the education given under his rule. We read, however, that Charterhouse won its fair share of mathematical and scientific distinctions at the old Universities, and Mr. Campbell admits that the education given “was by no means illiberal”—this perhaps is more than an impartial critic could say of many schools in which “modern” subjects preponderate. Dr. Haig Brown, himself an unusually good modern linguist, and, as we read, a man of “wide culture and generous outlook,” must, we doubt not, have seen to it that the best modern ideas in education, as well as the most efficient methods of instruction, permeated his school without detriment to the teaching of the humanities and mathematics. The chapter on ‘Scholastic Work’ is of considerable interest, not only in conveying a presentment of a distinguished head master at work in his school, but also as an aid to the solution of the ever-present problem, What shall be taught in our schools, and how?

No doubt a main cause of Dr. Haig Brown’s success was that, his mind once made up on a question of organization or method, it was no easy matter to deflect him. He always knew very definitely what he wanted; he generally realized what was the best means of obtaining it; and he seldom wasted time or energy in ineffective discussion or argument. A strong sense of humour, quiet determination, and unfailing tact enabled him, in most cases, to surmount the thousand and one difficulties that present themselves to a head master in his dealings with governors, parents, masters, and boys. It is curious to note that an old description of Thomas Sutton, quoted in this volume by Sir Arthur Stokes, “might not inaptly have been written” of the later Master of Charterhouse. The passage is too long to give here, but it is clear that the likeness between the two men was marked.

In August, 1904, Dr. Haig Brown wrote a ‘Recipe for Old Age’:—

A diet moderate and spare,
Freedom from base financial care,
Abundant work and little leisure,
A love of duty more than pleasure,
An even and contented mind
In charity with all mankind;
Some thoughts, too sacred for display
In the broad light of common day;
A peaceful home, a loving wife,
Children, who are a crown of life:
These lengthen out the years of man
Beyond the Psalmist’s narrow span.

Two years later he died, having experienced the truth and wisdom of the recipe.

A Literary History of Russia. By A. Brückner. Edited by E. H. Minns. Translated by H. Havelock. (Fisher Unwin.)

A GREAT deal of water has flowed under the bridges since Madame de Staël wrote that some gentlemen in Russia had amused themselves with literature. The universal popularity of the great Russian novelists has done what the charming lyrics of Pushkin could not bring about. There has long been a demand for a history of Russian literature in our language. Many books of the kind may be found in French and German. A few years ago the work of M. Waliszewski appeared in French, and was translated into English. May we say that justice was hardly done to Russian literature in it, especially in the treatment of Pushkin?

Prof. Brückner, the author of the work before us, has been deservedly known as one of the foremost Slavonic philologists. His researches among manuscripts preserved at St. Petersburg led to the discovery of some of the earliest documents in the Polish language. At length he entered upon a new field, and wrote both in Polish and German an excellent history of Polish literature, which has not been translated into English, probably because so little interest has been felt in the subject. The present work appeared first in German, and will be welcomed, no doubt, by many in this country. Prof. Brückner is a Pole, but does not allow his sympathies to be warped. To him Pushkin is a great genius, and rightly so. We only trace his Polish point of view in his regret that the Russians have adopted Byzantine culture and followed in the steps of Byzantine literature. They thus, our author says, cut themselves off from the other great Slavic family, the Polish. The latter accepted the Roman Catholic religion, and a fatal barrier was raised. Prof. Brückner rightly dwells upon the culture of Kiev and South Russia. It was a mere accident which caused the Principality of Moscow to become great amidst its Finnish surroundings. The earliest Cyrillic press was at Wilno. The earliest grammarians were White Russians and Poles. The first Russian university was at Kiev, then in Lithuanian territory. From the West came Simeon Polotski, who taught the children of Alexis Mikhailovich, and is supposed to have inspired the bold Sophia, sister of Peter the Great, with some of her ideas. But leaving our author's point of view, in which he shows much minute reading, we may make a few general remarks.

Russian literature divides itself into two great sections: first, the early Byzantine period; secondly, Russia under Western influence. The first occupies by far the smaller part of the volume, and is only of secondary importance with Prof. Brückner. He mentions, however, the Chronicles, the wonderful 'Story of Igor's Expedition,' and the curious historical works of Prince Kurbski. The controversy of the latter with Ivan the Terrible is a strange page in Slavonic literature. Ivan showed a great deal of reading, and, like Henry VIII., was fond of bringing out his knowledge of the Bible. The works of Krizhanich and Kotoshikhin are duly quoted. The country was in a barbarous state, and Prof. Brückner does not hesitate to let us see it. We learn more about it from foreigners, but many interesting works by natives have perished, such as the Chronicle which Prince Mstislavski showed to Jerome Horsey, according to the diary of the latter. Towards the end of the period we do not find much improvement. Sophia, the sister of Peter the Great, seems to have been a literary woman; but the translations of Molière about which we hear were made by his youngest sister Natalia. Prof. Brückner shows a decidedly iconoclastic spirit towards some of these heroes, but has long been familiar to Slavs as an antagonist of the claims of Cyril and Methodius.

With the coming of Peter the Great (the second period) things changed. This Titanic man of genius (for he can be called nothing else) both conquered provinces and modified the letters of the Russian alphabet. Russia cast aside her Byzantine models, and looked, as all Europe did, to France. We have Kantemir the satirist, Sumarokov the dramatist, and Derzhavin, the lyrical panegyrist of Catherine. There was strictly no reading public. Prof. Brückner is very sarcastic, and probably with reason, about these courtly writers. Catherine he looks upon as a supreme dilettante. She was, however, a woman of brilliant versatility, and did something for literature. Among other things she made a Russian adaptation of 'The Merry Wives of Windsor.' All thought then that an Augustus could make a Virgil. Greater figures are Radistchev, who anticipated the lines upon which the serfs would be emancipated, and Novikov, the pioneer of the education of the people. Karamzin the historian belongs to the next reign. His style is excellent, but he was not a mere stylist, as the learned notes to his history show.

A whole chapter is devoted to Pushkin, for whom Prof. Brückner shows a generous admiration. It is a pity that 'Onegin' has not met with a good translator into English verse. Mr. Minns, the editor, allows himself to adopt versions of some of these poems, but they are not very happy. The romantic school created by Pushkin (or shall we say Zhukovski?) reigned triumphantly. Next come the novelists, e.g., Gogol, the great critic Bielinski, and Herzen, whose charming style showed to what perfection Russian prose could be brought. Turgueniev, Tolstoy, and Dostoevski complete the great galaxy of novelists, and are followed by men of secondary rank, especially Tchekhov and Gorki. A chapter is devoted to these as writers of short stories, and we may add that short stories are a prominent feature with the Russians.

At the present time the lyrical school of poetry is very strong in Russia. Many of these poets are decadents. Special mention must be made of Constantine Balmont, who has produced some beautiful lyrics, and shows a rare power of translation, as in his version of Shelley, for which he gets due praise from our Professor. We must not forget Tiutchev, Maikov, Fet, and the great realistic poet Nekrasov. These belong, however, to a previous generation. Besides Balmont, we now have Briusov, Bunin, and others. The drama is in a poor condition. For a time the Russians took to historical plays, as in the trilogy of Count Alexis Tolstoy on Ivan the Terrible and his immediate successors. The best plays which have as yet appeared are the bourgeois comedies of Ostrovski.

It only remains to add that the book has been carefully edited by Mr. Minns, and translated by Mr. Havelock. One of the greatest Slavonic scholars has in this volume his say on the greatest Slavonic literature.

Shelburne Essays. By Paul E. More.
5 vols. (Putnam's Sons.)

APPARENTLY there has sprung up in the United States a large reading public with tastes similar to those obtaining among the English middle classes in 1820 or thereabouts. Children of successful business men, they have inherited the means of leisure without the traditions of culture necessary for its fine enjoyment, and, conscious at last of this, they are now setting out in pursuit of the refinements of life with the same strenuous application of mind as their fathers set out in the pursuit of wealth. Naturally, they have as yet little delicacy or depth of taste: they are out in search of general information, and what they really appreciate in literature is its instructive qualities. A literary critic who intends to inform the minds of a public of this order must naturally refrain from writing for amateurs of the finer delicacies of literature, in the manner of Hazlitt, Lamb, Arnold, or Pater. He must adopt the methods elaborated by English reviewers of an older school, and not unknown in some of our modern journals. He must make a display of erudition about the commonplaces of literary discussion; he must draw comparisons between different writers, instead of trying to distinguish and define the idiosyncrasy of their genius; and, in general, he must subordinate matters of fine taste to the commoner interest in the biographical side of literature.

This is what Mr. More has mainly done in the five volumes of his 'Shelburne Essays,' and on the whole, it seems to us, he has done it fairly well. There are few living critics who bring to the varied task of reviewing the publications of the day a mind as learned and as industrious as his. There is, perhaps, no other critic who is as much in earnest about this sort of work as Mr. More. We cannot, however, help doubting if his essays will have the effect he intends. His faith in the virtue of criticism is as strong as was that of Matthew Arnold, and on the title-page of his first volume he cites Lowell's saying: "Before we have an American literature we must have an American criticism." But there are various kinds of criticism: the criticism founded on learning, for instance, and the criticism based on knowledge. Criticism of the first-mentioned kind is not a great stimulus to creative work, to judge by the history of German literature since the German mind became mainly absorbed in the pursuit of mere learning. It is only when erudition is transformed, by observation, experience, and reflection on actual life, into ready knowledge, that it feeds the imagination instead of clogging it. Unhappily, Mr. More, like many American students of letters at the present day, inclines to the German view of scholarship. "So deficient has been his education that," when he began to review contemporary literature he was, he says, "actually better acquainted with the aspirations and emotions of the old dwellers by the Ganges than with those of the modern toilers by the Hudson or the Potomac." In simpler words, he was a professor of Sanskrit, with little interest in anything outside his special branch of learning. American literature did not seem to him to be worthy of much study:—

"Our land of multiform activities has produced so little that is really creative in literature or art! Hawthorne and Poe, and possibly one or two others, were masters in their own field; yet even they chose not quite the highest realm for their genius to work in."

And on Emerson he remarked:—

"If Emersonianism was mischievous to weak minds then, what shall we say of its influence in New England to-day—nay, throughout the whole country? For it is rampant in our life; it has wrought in our religion, our politics, and our literature, a perilous dizziness of the brain. Christian Science, or faith-healing, or what not—the gospel of a certain Mrs. Baker-Eddy—is a diluted and stale product of Emersonianism."

These two passages are taken from the first volume of the 'Shelburne Essays'—the best, we think, of the series. They are examples of criticism based on knowledge: the kind of criticism which Lowell had in mind. In them American literature is studied in relation to American life, by a well-informed American observer. No doubt the paper on Emerson is coloured by a feeling of anger; but anger is at least more exciting than mere indifference. When Mr. More grows indifferent, and turns away from his proper field of criticism, his work loses much of its interest. In his studies on English writers, where his personal feelings are not brought into play, his judgments are often either timid or conventional. He gets up his subjects industriously, it is true, but he is seldom able to define vividly the character of the man whose life he sketches, or to give a clear, personal impression of the quality of his genius. He is too fond of basing his opinions on the authority of other men. "The reception given to Kipling by such critics as Prof. Norton proves that he in his own way is a true artist." That is a phrase in one of his earlier essays, which throws some light on his method of criticism. His authentic tastes and sympathies, as distinct from the tastes and sympathies which he occasionally picks up in his learned excursions, are, we fancy, rather narrow. In violent reaction against the garish, noisy, whirling life around him, he has apparently adopted the literary and political conventions of English society in the eighteenth century. That, we are afraid, is the direction in which the minds of the public for whom Mr. More writes are turning. They are ineffectual dilettanti in the making, and Mr. More, instead of purifying, enlarging, and training their taste, reflects it.

EDUCATIONAL BOOKS.

Textbook of School and Class Management. By Felix Arnold. (Macmillan & Co.)—This is the first of three volumes that the author intends to devote to the consideration of school matters. Each volume is complete in itself; and the one now before us "deals with co-operation between principal and teachers, and class management"—the treatment of class management being restricted to "the problem of conduct." We cannot, after a careful perusal of the work, recommend it at all warmly to the notice of English specialists, whether theoretical or practical, and we doubt its acceptability to American readers. The author brings few new principles or opinions under the reader's attention, and the commonplaces of the subject put before us are treated in a style of singular dryness. Books published in New York have accustomed us to composition exhibiting brightness, clearness, and accuracy—qualities which we certainly are entitled to expect from a writer on educational matters; but here we find much clumsy English, and not a few instances of ambiguity in the construction of sentences.

The earlier chapters are devoted to the principals and teachers of schools, their distinctive functions, the relations between the two grades, and the co-operation that should exist between them in successful and efficiently conducted classes. These topics—though simple enough in themselves—are treated with much show of philosophy; but the utility of Dr. Arnold's discussion of them is most apparent in the passages in which he gives plain advice and practical directions for conduct in cases of difficulty that may occur to the principal or under master in class-management; and we are inclined to think that class-teachers who read the volume for their own profit and enlightenment will skip much of the philosophy, and attend to the counsels of experience that the author not infrequently gives. Conduct, what it is, into what kinds it may be divided, and the best methods of developing it in school, are the subject-matter of the later chapters. The reader of this part of the work will find many hints which, if he be a schoolmaster, may be serviceable to him. The author in writing his chapters on conduct was considering the requirements of American schools and classes, which in organization and discipline differ considerably from those with which English readers are familiar; hence their strangeness in some respect to us. For instance, his opinions concerning corporal punishment will certainly not receive general assent. His disapproval of this form of punishment is probably shared by a great number, if not by the majority, of American schoolmasters; but we are surprised to learn that punitive methods that we should consider in every way reprehensible are prevalent in the United States:—

"Most common practices in the classroom, so common as to be taken by many as a matter of course, are slapping, striking with a ruler, grasping violently by the arm and throwing a child against the seat, knocking the head of the pupil against the desk or the wall, shaking violently, and the like. Such practices usually call forth little comment."

Practices like these are, happily, very rare in this country, and we thought them obsolete in America, where an undoubted and most laudable national characteristic is the great consideration shown to children.

In another place the advice given to a "substitute" teacher is at any rate unexpected: he is to appear before his new class with an "omnibus plan of work ready with him," and to have in readiness much apparatus of different kinds, including

"a magnetised needle, a compass, a few Prince Rupert drops.....a large and small bottle arranged to illustrate the Cartesian diver, a piece of magnesium tape, or some flashlight powder."

We are not told how the teacher is to carry all these things, but "thus equipped, the beginner can boldly face the juvenile world." We have never observed any correspondingly elaborate process of preparation on the part of a teacher in this country when assuming temporary charge of a class, and we doubt its necessity elsewhere. Other glimpses given of the working details of school life have also surprised us.

Life and Letters of Hannah E. Pipe. By Anna M. Stoddart. (Blackwood & Sons.)—Miss Pipe was undoubtedly one of the great schoolmistresses of the Victorian period, although she is hardly so well known as her contemporaries Miss Beale and Miss Buss. Both she and Miss Beale were born in the same year, 1831; and Miss Stoddart tells us that "Laleham," as Miss Pipe's school in Clapham Park was named, "was the first of the greater schools for girls."

Miss Pipe spent a happy childhood in Manchester. Her father was a man of deep religious conviction, a Wesleyan, as indeed all the members of her family were, and also a great lover of books. Hannah Elizabeth Pipe was brought up to appreciate the value of intellectual pursuits, for which she always—and from the earliest—displayed a strong liking; but happily for her, games and merriment were also encouraged, and, as she grew up, long holidays spent in an old-fashioned farmhouse ensured health and vigour, and fostered the love of nature and keen appreciation of scenery which independently of and in addition to interest in natural science, formed one of her marked characteristics. Miss Pipe retained her loyalty to the religious denomination of her family; but we gather from Miss Stoddart's pages that, as years went by, she approximated, to some extent, to the Established Church. At no period, either in her school or out of it, did she attempt to make proselytes. There is something in her attitude towards spiritual matters that recalls the position of the nobler-minded "quietist" ladies whom Fénelon must have known.

Education—especially that of the daughters of the wealthy, but not too refined manufacturers and business men of Lancashire and Yorkshire who were her contemporaries—evoked her enthusiasm. Lady Huggins, in her 'Appreciation,' says:—

"Three things stand out in even the most cursory consideration of the life of Miss Pipe. She was a born teacher, a born friend, and a born letter-writer;"

and her work as a teacher "was to her both mission and vocation, and her whole being and life were devoted to it." Outside her school work—but in this case school work was largely comprehensive—Miss Pipe did not exhibit marked activity. She devoted much time, thought, and money to her orphanage and certain kindred works of beneficence; these, however, were included in the scope of her scholastic work, being essentially a department of her system of moral education. The moral training given by Miss Pipe, or given under her immediate direction at Laleham, was perhaps the most striking feature of the school; and if we may credit the numerous grateful appreciations of its value and effectiveness, quoted from old pupils' letters, the girls who fell under Miss Pipe's influence were indeed fortunate. The name given to the school shows the influence of Dr. Arnold's teaching. This department of the training at Laleham was founded on distinct dogmatic Christian instruction—we imagine, indeed, that no other basis would have been considered possible.

Miss Pipe had experienced in her own schooldays, and later, great difficulty in obtaining the highest education, and attaining to the widest culture possible to her in literature, art, science, and other branches of learning. Indeed, at that period the intellectual progress of girls and women was beset by obstacles and difficulties such as scholars and teachers of to-day can hardly realize. Miss Pipe resolved to place the education of girls on a better footing and a higher plane; and setting before herself in her work a high ideal, to a great extent reached it. She adopted in her teaching the best possible methods—the natural sciences taught by means of observation and experiment; literature and languages found their right places in her curriculum; nor was artistic training overlooked. But the great care devoted to hygiene must, to the parents of the time, have appeared the most striking innovation. Hygiene was not only a subject of study in the class-room; it dominated the whole organization of the school. Miss Pipe, moreover, spared no expense in acquiring the service of the best resident and visiting teachers, and frequently invited men of distinction and learning to give lectures to her girls and the teaching staff. But although she strongly advocated the opening to girls and women of all avenues to erudition and intellectual eminence, she was not in favour of submitting them to the same public examinations as confront boys and young men, except in the cases of those preparing for practical schoolwork, for whom certificates and diplomas are a valuable professional asset: "Her own school remained immune from examinations, excepting those conducted by its teachers at the end of every term." Miss Pipe's views deserve careful consideration. Authorities of to-day seem to be leaving the position she and the teachers of her time occupied, but the advantage of the change is not in all respects certain.

The English Grammar Schools to 1660: their Curriculum and Practice. By Foster Watson. (Cambridge, University Press.)—The scope of this volume is more comprehensive than the title leads one to suppose. Prof. Foster Watson shows us much of the working of schools that would now probably be called Elementary, as well as of the courses of University education that succeeded the work done in Grammar Schools, and gives many details of the curricula adopted in these scholastic institutions. Incidentally he throws light on the everyday life of children, youths, and young men at home as well as in school and college; the work will therefore, we think, be read with interest not only by specialists, but also by many who like to know something of the old daily life in England, especially during the Reformation, the Renaissance, and the Puritan period.

Prof. Watson quotes, as the first general charter of education for the Middle Ages, Charlemagne's proclamation, A.D. 787, enjoining the clergy to give gratuitous instruction to all children whose parents desired it for them. From the earliest times, both in this country and on the Continent, the monasteries were not only "the storehouses of learning," but also centres of instruction and training, mainly, of course, for monks, and all persons desirous of doing the important work in official and Court life which fell to the lot of ecclesiastics. Indeed, in considering the development of education in England and on the Continent, we must remember that for centuries "there were no non-Church schools." By the side of the monasteries and Universities, and outside of them, were the systems of training organized in the households of nobles and prelates—"Sir Thomas More, for instance, was brought up in Cardinal Morton's household"—and "the great palace schools for the children of courtiers, nobles, and others." These institutions existed for the children of the well-born, or of parents who could at any rate obtain the patronage of the great: they were in no sense the people's schools.

Poor men's sons were educated in cathedral schools, or in the schools attached to chantries. Chantries, Prof. Watson tells us, were special foundations in connexion with the large majority of the important churches in the country, and the duties of the chantry priest "usually included the teaching of boys." These chantries were extremely numerous, and were the means of bringing education within reach of the poorer children in nearly every parish in the kingdom; and although many of the priests may not have been expert or even highly qualified teachers, yet opportunities of obtaining elementary teaching of lower or higher grade were within reach of all who desired them; and no doubt instruction was more general in pre-Reformation days than many contemporary writers and speakers on education admit. The classes taught by the chantry priests were often small, but they sometimes contained 140 and even 160 pupils. We read that out of "259 schools in the records of the Commission under the Chantries Act, 93 were Grammar Schools, 140 are so called.....23 are Song-Schools, and 22 may perhaps be regarded simply as Elementary Schools"; so that, as Prof. Watson points out, our English Grammar Schools are an old institution, and of pre-Reformation ecclesiastical origin. The teaching in these schools was of necessity mainly oral; the subject-matter was principally religious and classical (Latin); and the medium of teaching was to a large extent Latin.

At the Reformation the chantry endowment was diverted, the chantry priest abolished, and the elementary instruction given in connexion with the chantries ceased, and "left a void not easy to be filled up." This reacted injuriously on the Grammar Schools, by diminishing, if not stopping altogether, their supply of duly prepared young scholars. To get over this difficulty, a number of Elementary Schools were founded; but in most cases provision for "petties," or children requiring preparatory elementary instruction, was made in the Grammar Schools themselves, or in close connexion with them; and pupil-teachers were for the first time used in this elementary work in Grammar Schools in the sixteenth century.

Although instruction was fairly generally distributed about the country, proficiency in the arts of reading and writing remained uncommon, and its importance was not altogether realized till the Reformation period and subsequently. In earlier times school teaching was mainly oral, and the retention of knowledge depended largely upon the scholar's power of memory; while outside the schools the people at large gained knowledge from "graphic methods of presentation, through ceremonials, pictures, frescoes, paintings, mosaics, &c., together with the word-pictures from sermons." But the habit of theological discussion introduced by the Reformation, the substitution of the authority of the Bible for the older standards, and the new doctrine of every one's personal responsibility for his own theological opinions, rendered a close study of the Bible text necessary, and therefore made it vitally important that a man should be able to read the book for himself. This necessity was the more felt as the influence of the extreme Protestant party in the Continental Reformation grew stronger in this country. Moreover, the needs of theological polemic impressed on the revival of classical learning in England a distinctly religious character—Latin, Greek, and Hebrew were the "holy languages"—that did not appear in the Renaissance studies of Italy and other Latin countries. This religious character was strongly marked in the statutes and life of the Grammar Schools, and was long a predominant characteristic of them.

The introduction of written methods into schoolwork, which occurred in the sixteenth century, was a consequence of the vast multiplication of printed books as well as of the growing complexity of the school curriculum. Roger Ascham insists on the importance of writing; and the necessity of it for Grammar School work is pointed out in the statutes of several schools.

The teaching of English literature was introduced late into the schools—not till the second half of the seventeenth century—and then it appeared as a development of the Renaissance subject rhetoric; but the importance of writing correct and elegant English was fully recognized by some of the older authorities. The so-called modern subjects—history, geography, natural history, and even mathematics—appear very late in the schools; and Prof. Watson tells us that even when they were admitted, it was not so much for any value of their own as "for illustrative purposes in composition."

Religion permeated the whole work of instruction, but it is curious to find "the first indication of the entrance of the Bible into the schoolroom" in the injunctions of commissioners of 1547 to Winchester College; while in schools giving elementary education the Bible, as a book to be used in class, is first mentioned more than a century later.

Much curious and interesting information concerning the details of systems of teaching and classwork, and the positions of different subjects in the curricula, is given. It is also interesting to read the opinions of the great scholars and schoolmasters of the Renaissance and even earlier times, and to find that the "grammar war" was as keenly waged in the days of Comenius as of more recent authorities.

Prof. Watson's volume well deserves perusal for the light it throws on the history of the two centuries closed by the Restoration.

Tudor Schoolboy Life: the Dialogues of Jean Luis Vives. Translated by Foster Watson. (Dent & Co.)—To leisurely students of the history of education, and those who have time to loiter in pleasant, but unfrequented bypaths of life during the revival of learning, this volume will be welcome. Prof. Foster Watson gives in his Introduction, and the English version of the Dialogues of Jean Luis Vives, an account of the life and educational teaching of a distinguished scholar, and includes also quaint glimpses of the home and school life of schoolboys, their work, play, and general behaviour. Vives himself—a contemporary of Erasmus and Guillaume Budé—was born at Valencia, in Spain. He spent a considerable time in England, lecturing sometimes in Oxford, but generally occupied at the Court of Henry VIII. and Queen Catharine. After the divorce of Catharine of Aragon, Vives, who was a strong supporter of the Queen, was imprisoned for six weeks, and freed on condition that he left the country. He subsequently made his home at Bruges, and died in 1540. Prof. Watson tells us that the 'School Dialogues' were first published in 1538.

Vives set before teachers and parents a truly high ideal of real, solid, noble education, and the curriculum advocated by him was, in view of the circumstances of the time, singularly comprehensive and judicious. Prof. Watson explains that the training in school embraced not only work, but also games; and the attention devoted to the preparation of the "laws of play," the six leges ludi, shows that the value of games and pastimes was adequately realized. Vives in his moderation exhibits perhaps greater wisdom than some modern schoolmasters:—

"Play until you feel the mind renewed and restored for labour, and the hour for serious business calls you. Who does otherwise seems to do ill."

Moreover, the scholar's attention was not to be exclusively devoted to classical learning; and we of to-day, criticizing schools of the sixteenth century, are apt to forget that there was little literature available for study other than that of Greece and Rome. Vives insists strongly on the necessity of teaching pure and correct English, and points out the advantage to all English scholars of speaking and writing the mother tongue with reasonable elegance. There was not much experimental science within the scope of practicable schoolwork, but Vives's scholars were trained to be alert in observation, and keep their senses open to the sights, sounds, and everyday phenomena of the country; and the dialogue entitled 'Iter et Equus' shows how boys should acquire that sort of knowledge of natural history that the sportsman and the farmer gain, and the modern specialized science-student sometimes misses.

The school dialogues in their original Latin form were written by Vives to initiate boys into colloquial Latin, to supplant by correct and elegant words and constructions the barbarisms and inaccuracies which disfigured the speech of the time, and to supply learners with "Latin expressions for all sorts of common things"; but, as Prof. Watson points out, they have "become, as it were, historical documents, serving a purpose which was certainly far from being present in the mind of the author." They show us what the daily routine of a school-boy's life was from his getting up in the morning to his going to bed. The life, as Vives presents it to us, was a fairly happy and very human existence: parents and teachers were sympathetic with children; the pupils respected their schoolmasters, and were really anxious to learn. It may, however, well be that Vives's enthusiasm for humane learning led him to accentuate the lights rather than the shades of his picture. The 'Dialogues,' at any rate, were in great demand, and acquired popularity among readers of all ages, including boys and girls. They were dedicated "to Philip, son and heir to the august Emperor Charles, with all good will," but only one or two of them have special reference or applicability to the young prince in whose training Vives was keenly interested; many of them develop more or less fully the author's view of liberal education, and all throw light on the life led by the youth of the period.

Studies in French Education from Rabelais to Rousseau. By Geraldine Hodgson. (Cambridge University Press.)—In this little book Miss Hodgson gives a sensible and painstaking account of the great French writers on education, beginning with Rabelais, and ending with appreciative notices of Madame d'Épinay's ideal of female education and the witty Abbé Galiani's short essay on pedagogy. "To teach children to bear injustice, to teach them to bear ennui"—such was the Abbé's hardy ideal, as Miss Hodgson terms it; and, as she wisely adds, when "everywhere to-day, in the kindergarten, in the school, in the popular lecture, ease is the aim and pleasantness the path," it is salutary to remember Galiani's stern conclusion: "All pleasant methods of teaching children necessary knowledge are false and ridiculous." Galiani's treatise runs directly counter to its famous contemporary, 'Émile.' The immense influence of that extraordinary work justifies Miss Hodgson in devoting much space to analyzing and exposing the faults in Rousseau's system. The root fault in that system she finds in its straining after individualism, but justly observes that the world is the debtor of Jean-Jacques for his insistence on the importance of right training of the senses—accepted as a commonplace now—and his plea that children should be trained to realize the action of cause and effect. Not that Rousseau was original in these ideas; Rabelais and Locke, at least, had certainly forestalled him; but he had the gift of writing so that men believed and acted in accordance with what he wrote.

SCHOOL-BOOKS.

THE laudable policy of making each part of a series complete in itself is responsible, in The Clerkes Tale and The Squieres Tale, edited by Lilian Winstanley for the Cambridge University Press, for an unusually comprehensive Introduction. This comprises a brief survey of English literature in its early stages from the so-called "Anglo-Saxon" period to the Chaucerian, including the inevitable assignment of a "place" to the poet on the roll of fame; some really useful chronological tables dealing with his life and work; expositions of grammar and metre both able and scholarly, if a trifle over-complex for the literary as distinguished from the linguistic student, together with an exceptionally full history of 'The Clerkes Tale' and that of the "Squier." The whole should prove of real value to those embarking on Chaucer. Miss Winstanley's notes are brief and adequate, and generally to the point, though in deeming necessary such explanations as that "humblesse" is equivalent to "humility," that "whylom" means "once," and that the phrase "have me excused" is to be interpreted "hold or consider me excused," she seems to presuppose a more than average density on the part of her readers.

The third instalment of Messrs. Edmunds and Spooner's admirable Readings in English Literature (John Murray)—of which we have already had occasion to speak in terms of high praise—comprises the period between 1780 and 1880. As before, the selections in prose and verse are made with taste and discretion, and conveniently arranged in three "Courses"—Senior, Intermediate, and Junior—supplemented and explained by a corresponding volume of the editors' excellent Story of English Literature, which contains much sane criticism, especially in dealing with Dickens, Browning, and Meredith. This series should help to inculcate an early love of English letters.

The third volume of Miss Elizabeth Lee's School History of English Literature (Blackie & Son), without being in any way exhaustive, provides an adequate and intelligible account of the literary forces and personalities at work in the period ranging from Pope to Burns. Such criticism as it contains runs on familiar lines, its principal fault being a tendency to sum-up accepted opinions in terms too vague to be helpful, as in the case of Sterne, concerning whose humour the student is informed that "it possesses an imperishable quality which will ever give his works a very high place in our literature." Though somewhat burdened with clichés, the book will prove of service to "the middle forms of schools," for which, primarily, it is intended.

Selections from White's Natural History of Selborne (Macmillan), edited, with Introduction, notes, and glossary, by F. A. Bruton, are just out in "English Literature for Secondary Schools." We have here thirty of the famous letters, which, backed by good illustrations in the text, make a pleasant reading-book for the increasing army of nature-lovers. The introduction is sufficient, and, perhaps judiciously, does not mention the fact that Gilbert White had the eighteenth-century laxity regarding the acceptance of livings. The notes are good so far as they go, but certainly brief. With regard to the "Plestor," or play-place, mentioned in Letter 2, it might have been mentioned that the same word is supposed to be preserved in the place-name "Plaxtol" in Kent.

In the excellent "English Literature for Schools" series, issued by the Cambridge University Press, we have received Defoe's Memoirs of a Cavalier; the True Travels of Captain John Smith, England's first successful colonizer; Hazlitt's Characters of Shakespeare's Plays, and a selection from Cobbett's Rural Rides, the first edited by Mrs. O'Neill, the next by Mr. A. E. Benians, and the last two by Mr. J. H. Lobban. Each volume is furnished with an adequate Introduction, and notes that are sufficient without being burdensome; and the task of editing has been adequately performed. Mr. Lobban, however, in seeking to exclude from the 'Rural Rides' possibly confusing allusions to questions of bygone politics and controversies, without impairing the interest, has, we think, attempted the impossible, since the sturdy sincerity of Cobbett's partisanship is essential and all-pervading, and largely responsible for the peculiar quality which is his charm. Mrs. O'Neill brings excellent judgment and knowledge of history to her editing of Defoe.

Mr. Frowde's "Select English Classics," edited in each case by the accomplished writer known as "Q.," are wonderfully cheap. They are clearly printed, available both in cloth and paper, and provided with capable introductions, of which we have only to remark that they do not always achieve the requisite simplicity of language. The adult, however, as well as the young scholar, may well choose some of these booklets to slip into his pocket. We have before us selections of Sonnets: Milton and Wordsworth, Walt Whitman, Walpole's Earlier Letters, Tennyson, Wordsworth, and Early Lyrics.

The inclusion of Dryden's version of Juvenal's Tenth Satire in Representative English Poems, edited by G. S. Brett (Macmillan), seems scarcely defensible, even as an aid to the better comprehension of 'The Vanity of Human Wishes'; but, this consideration apart, the volume, which is primarily intended for Indian colleges, leaves little to be desired. The poems, ranging from 'L'Allegro' to 'Rabbi Ben Ezra,' are well chosen—notably in the case of Scott, who is represented by that admirable, but neglected ballad 'The Eve of St. John.' The notes are helpful and sufficiently numerous, while Mr. Brett's Introduction shows an unusual measure of poetical discernment, together with the power of lucid compression.

The Remaking of Modern Europe, from the Outbreak of the French Revolution to the Treaty of Berlin, 1789–1878. By J. A. R. Marriott. (Methuen & Co.)—In this volume, which completes the 'Six Ages of European History' intended to impart to students in the higher forms of schools a fundamental knowledge of the history of the Continent, the author has given a lucid account of the period with which he deals. While he has made it his aim to avoid producing a "cram" book, he has gathered into a small compass a surprising amount of salient detail, particularly in his account of the Napoleonic struggle, its causes and effects. We welcome this useful addition to our "histories," as being trustworthy, free from bias, and interesting.

Balzac: Le Médecin de Campagne. Edited, with Notes and Introduction, by De V. Payen - Payne. (Cambridge, University Press.)—The editor is a well-known master of French idiom, and his notes and Introduction are both excellent. Our only doubt is as to the interest for young scholars of the book chosen. To say that "it is better than a novel—it is a magnificent study of applied sociology," is not to commend it for the "Pitt Press Series." The next piece of Balzac selected for school use will, we hope, be a fine story.

If we are not mistaken, the German Reader and Theme-Book, by Prof. Calvin Thomas and Mr. Wm. Addison Hervey (Bell & Sons), was originally published in America several years ago, and has been subjected to no changes in its present form. The selection of the passages has been made with good judgment, the exercises are suitable for classwork, there is a full vocabulary, and the volume may therefore be recommended as fulfilling its purpose satisfactorily.

Selected Epigrams of Martial. Edited by Edwin Post. (Ginn & Co.)—The revived interest in Martial is further proved by a good transatlantic edition by Mr. Edwin Post in the "College Series of Latin Authors." The text is made to conform largely to Lindsay's Oxford text, though the selection is not identical with, and much shorter than, that of the 'Epigrammata Selecta.' Mr. Post therefore covers less ground than Messrs. Bridge and Lake, but his annotations are more thoroughgoing. Indeed, the careful and scholarly notes are the characteristic feature of the book before us. There is also an excellent Introduction, in which the views of the best modern authorities, chiefly German, find a reasoned place. Not the least attractive pages of the Introduction are those which trace—clearly, though briefly—the development of the epigram, and its culmination in the literary form which Martial made his own. "Point" seems to be the essence of the epigram as conceived by Martial and subsequent epigrammatists, and possibly it is the modern craving for point that is partly contributing to the recent revival of interest in Martial. There is, of course, a solid substratum in his work which compels interest. If his occasional grossness and obscenity repel, it should be remembered, as Mr. Post says, that four-fifths of his epigrams, aggregating 1,500 or more, are wholly unobjectionable. On the other side must be set the sincerity and candour of the man, his plainness of speech, his reflection of real life, his freedom from sermonizing, his metrical accomplishment (learnt largely from Catullus and Ovid), and his "point." The only fault we have to find with the Introduction is excessive and needless quotation: inverted commas in too great abundance tend to check the smoothness of the narrative, and to suggest that the writer has not completely made his own the points he is anxious to present.

The selection of the text seems, on the whole, judicious, though we are sorry to miss I. 49, "Vir Celtiberis," with its lively description of country life in Spain. On the very first page of the text, I. i. 4, there is an unfortunate slip, or error of judgment. Mr. Post prints as a pentameter Dissimulet deum cornibus ara frequens.

As "deum" refuses to be scanned, we are at once assailed by the suspicion that we have here an instance of the bad results of that disregard for Latin prosody of which the late Prof. Lewis (of Cambridge) complained. Lindsay reads "Delon," so also Duff, and Bridge and Lake, after T. F. Gronovius. They also quote as an inferior reading "dissimuletque deum." In fact, Mr. Post chooses the weakest reading and distorts it against metre by dropping the necessary "que." However, we have noted no similar lapses, and this error at the outset need not shake our confidence in Mr. Post as a good guide to Martial's works.

The Electra of Sophocles. With a Commentary abridged from the Larger Edition of Sir R. C. Jebb by Gilbert A. Davies. (Cambridge, University Press.)—Prof. Davies has performed the work of condensation with skill, and the result is an excellent edition. It is a great boon to have Jebb's supreme work in a handy form. Our only suggestion is that the "small alterations and additions" might have included some explanation of the usage of the negatives in οὐδὲν ὄντα (1129) and τὴν μηδὲν ἐς τὸ μηδὲν (1166). The explanation we seek is that given by Jebb himself on 'Antigone,' 1322. The upper forms of schools, which, we presume, will use this edition, need such notes.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

THE ST. CATHERINE PRESS publish, under the title Impressions: the Diary of a European Tour, by B. C. Mahtab, the Maharajah of Burdwan's account of a visit to the three kingdoms, to Italy, and to Germany between April and November, 1906. The author is an Indian Conservative of a modern British type rather than a representative Oriental. He criticizes the "Radicalism" of the wife of his brother Maharajah, also an "adoptive" product of our rule—an allusion which leads us to add that the Baroda ruler may be regarded as a pendant or as a corrective to the lesser prince, being an Indian Liberal of a British type. The Burdwan chief is given to reflection in the style of Mrs. Grundy. In "Paris... a degree of depravity exists of which no idea can be formed in the East. Atheism and satanism reign supreme." He often attacks the Roman Catholic Church, but explains, and in part withdraws, his words. He is pleased to obtain his audience of the Pope, but records these things unsaid:—

"It was on the tip of my tongue to tell the Pope all the revolting things that I had noticed at Naples and in Rome, and to ask him to come out of the Vatican to see how his Church was gradually crumbling away, how hundreds of anti-Christian things were being taught to the simple people of Italy, and the grand teachings of the Man-God, Christ, were being distorted and lowered by the growth of paganism. But then I was an outsider, and not a Roman Catholic; so silence was golden. Reading through these pages, one might think that my constant attacks on some of the ways of the Roman Catholic Church in Italy prove that I am very much against this old Christian Church; but this is far from being the case. What I feel is that this early Church of Christ is so full of Saint worship and idolatry, driving the very Trinity into obscurity, that it is degenerating into that identical idolatry of which every true-thinking Indian is now trying his best to shake himself free."

The Maharajah admires Lord Curzon, but charges him with the "crime" of "bustling the East," having in mind, when he uses the words "never 'bustle' the East," the tombstone of the man who "tried to hustle the East." A similar alteration makes "Caprivi" (for Crispi) a superstitious "great statesman" of Southern Italy. There are a good many rash assertions by the author, and a good many blunders in proof-reading, such as in the Maharajah's verse translation of "an appropriate inscription in Latin over the Crematorium" at Milan. The Mistral is made to sweep "up" the valley of the Rhone—in a sense other than that of healthy cleansing. We fail to find in "the famous Appian Way" a "wonderful waterway." But the Maharajah, though rash, is praiseworthy for good intention.

... pray no more
To worms,

THE "Oxford Edition" of The Works in Prose and Verse of Charles and Mary Lamb, 2 vols. (Frowde), is edited by Mr. Thomas Hutchinson, and more than maintains the reputation of the Oxford University Press for careful work and excellent editing. Mr. Hutchinson says handsome things about the recent editors of Lamb, who have, indeed, done much to advance the subject; but the few who are competent to criticize are well aware that he himself is the man best qualified, alike by long experience, knowledge, and taste, to give us the final edition of all that concerns the brother and sister. The troubles of copyright are, however, likely, we fear, to prevent the delectable scheme of a complete Lamb, essays, verse, and letters, for many a year. Meanwhile this present collection is a great boon: the first volume has a 'Bibliographical List' of the published writings of the Lambs, which will give the reader some idea of the difficulties of the subject, and a very useful summary entitled 'Growth of the Body of Collected Works,' the disiecta membra having been gathered from the most various sources. The modern discoveries are not, it is true, of such importance as the pair of arms which the French gentleman lacked when Mr. Venus entertained Mr. Wegg with a view to a friendly move: but trifles due to Lamb or his sister (strangely deprived, by some older editors, of the privileges of immortal association with her brother) are worth more than the average treatise of the respectable author. Of the 'Tales from Shakespeare' some will learn with surprise that Mary wrote fourteen as against Charles's six, but the latter deals with the great plays, 'King Lear,' 'Macbeth,' 'Hamlet,' and 'Othello.'

The editor's notes are all of interest, and our only regret is that the plan of the book did not allow of more freedom of annotation. Thus at p. 840 of vol. i. we learn of the protests called forth by Lamb's fanciful addition to the biography of his friend G. D. At p. 827 we are reminded of the editor's contribution to our own columns in 1902 concerning the 'Confessions of a Drunkard,' in which the editio princeps of the essay was traced, and a proper protest was made against the sin and folly of regarding the essay as sheer autobiography. This last protest, not mentioned here, is the sort of note we would willingly see added to the book.

The variations of text, which are noted at the bottom of the page in a style befitting a classic, are often of interest. Thus Mrs. Battle's 'Opinions on Whist' are printed from the 'Elia' text of 1823, but that of 1821 in The London Magazine adds to the opening words, "A clear fire, a clean hearth, and the rigour of the game," the comment: "This was before the introduction of rugs, reader. You must remember the intolerable crash of the unswept cinder, betwixt your foot and the marble." Similarly to the mention of "your lukewarm gamesters.... who affirm...that they like to win one game, and lose another," was added in 1821: "As if a sportsman should tell you, he liked to kill a fox one day, and lose him the next."

An Appendix to vol. ii. includes several things which may be Lamb's. The last of these, 'Two Epigrams' from our own columns, August 6th, 1831, we must definitely reject, for our private file assigns the verses in question to "Rice," who sent them from "Derby."

Finn the Wolfhound. By A. J. Dawson. (Grant Richards.)—From the outset of this interesting book it is obvious that the writer is an experienced breeder of dogs. Many people are this; but it is rarely that the capacity of writing goes with kennel knowledge. Mr. Dawson is one of the exceptions. His story of the wolfhound is so fascinating and vivid that one does not notice how lengthy it is. The history begins before Finn's birth, with his mother, Tara, from whom the master has been parted by poverty. Tara, however, comes back to him, by one of those poetic strokes of sheer benevolence which one would dearly like to observe in real life, and Finn is Tara's youngest son. It must have been with the memory of personal exaltations in the past that Mr. Dawson wrote of Finn's triumphs in the show, and his seven insignia of victory.

The career of this champion, however, was not such as you would imagine from this auspicious opening. Finn's celebrity caused him to be stolen early in life, and to suffer many pangs and wrongs. But this even was not the worst. Mr. Dawson's imagination takes a high flight; and he transports us to Australia, where once again the master is forced by dire need to part with his favourite. Finn passes thus into other hands, is stolen once more, and slips through the degrading and decivilizing influences of a menagerie into the open savage life of the primitive animal. He joins a dingo pack, and becomes its wild and trusted leader. In the end we arrive at a conclusion which is meet and proper, and only fair treatment to a reader who has faithfully and absorbedly followed the adventures of the hero.

Mr. Dawson knows these dogs so intimately that they are to him living personages with individualities. Thus he is enabled to endow his creation Finn with the breath of life. We believe in Finn, we admire him, and we grow attached to him. That is a considerable performance for any writer to accomplish. If Mr. Dawson had only refrained from certain unessential obstetric matters, his book would have been an ideal book for boys.

Ancient Egypt the Light of the World. By Gerald Massey. 2 vols. (Fisher Unwin.)—In a rather pathetic Preface the author announces that these two large volumes were his "life-work" and that he was thankful for being allowed to see them in print on his seventy-ninth birthday; to which we may add that he did not long survive the issue. Like many mystics, Massey was greatly interested in the birth and evolution of religious ideas, and in this work he traces the Christian religion back to Totemism, Fetishism, and faiths more primitive still by the road of Ancient Egypt. In this view there is certainly much truth, in the sense that every religion takes over from its predecessors a great body of beliefs and (in the true sense of the word) superstitions which belong to an earlier stage of mental development. Moreover, as we become more closely acquainted with Egyptian customs, we find them influencing Western practices and habits of thought to an extent that would have seemed fantastic to the scholar of Victorian times. Whether the Egyptian texts quoted by Massey—generally, we think, at second or third hand—will really bear the stress he lays on them may be doubted; but he has written in a very temperate way, and in a manner calculated to offend the susceptibilities of no one. We think, therefore, that the book will be read with pleasure even by those who are not likely to agree with the author's conclusions; and that his brother-mystics will welcome it gladly. The form in which it is produced is unusual and rather unwieldy, and the Index might be fuller; while an extended Table of Contents would have been an advantage.

WE have received the first part of Die Gotische Bibel, herausgegeben von Wilhelm Streitberg (Heidelberg, Carl Winter), an admirably comprehensive and, it need scarcely be added, scholarly edition, which provides all the material requisite for a thorough study of Ulfilas's work. The Gothic text with variant readings is given on the right-hand page, and on the left the Greek original used by the translator; while the foot-notes explain, so far as is possible, the deviations from that original which occur in the text, the influence of parallel passages in such cases being carefully indicated. The Introduction quotes in full the sources of our information regarding Ulfilas, and gives an account of the MSS. and tradition of the Gothic Bible. We note that the second part of this most serviceable work will supply the student with a concise Gothic-Greek-German dictionary.

THE Baptists, like the Congregationalists, have now their own Historical Society, and from the first number of the Transactions sent to us from the Baptist Union Publication Department we augur that much valuable material will be collected for the future historian. The only surprise is that the Society should not have been formed long since, for the Baptists possess stores of ancient documents. Many of the churches, such as the Metropolitan Tabernacle, can trace their origin to very early times, and the records in most cases have been well kept. The Baptist plan of holding monthly meetings of the members of their churches, mostly for the transaction of business, conduces to a systematic history of each.

The Baptist Historical Society has for its President Principal Gould; its Vice-Presidents are the Rev. J. H. Shakespeare, Dr. Tymms, and Judge Willis, with Dr. Whitley as Secretary. The members already number 120. The articles include 'Early Welsh Baptist Doctrines,' by Mr. Burrage; 'Baptists and Bartholomew's Day,' by the Secretary; 'William Vidler, Baptist and Universalist,' by Mr. Butt-Thompson (Vidler was the predecessor of W. J. Fox at South Place); and 'Porton Baptist Church, 1655-85,' by Mr. Andrew Tucker.

MESSRS. HARRISON & SONS send us Burke's Peerage, Baronetage, and Knightage for 1909. This standard work of reference has reached its seventy-first edition. The Preface draws attention to revision of minute detail which makes no show, but it is just such revision as this which secures the confidence of the expert. Information, it is further stated, "has been carefully collated and verified by reference to the public and official records"—a necessary precaution in view of the flights of imagination due to human pride and vanity. Where we have tested this handsome volume, we have found it clear and accurate. As we said before, the list of 'Mottoes with Translations' is capable of improvement. There are many more references to the best-known passages in the classics than the few provided, while some of those in other languages are not translated at all.

Lodge's Peerage, Baronetage, and Knightage for 1909 (Kelly's Directories) is the seventy-eighth edition, revised and enlarged. Special attention has been paid as heretofore to the heraldic illustrations. Lists of 'Occurrences during Printing' and the 'Birthday Honours' of last November will be found useful. The 'Index to Peerage' will also be of material assistance to those who are puzzled about courtesy titles and family names, and have not been able, like Macaulay, to get the whole of the peerage by heart as a pastime. In view of its comely get-up and appearance, this big volume is issued at a very moderate price.

THE same firm also send us, in an excellent binding, specially stamped with our name, the Post Office London Directory, which we once described as an indispensable mammoth. It is a wonderful collection of matter admirably disposed, and in our constant use of the book we have never found ourselves deceived as to an address by a wrong number. This year the number of pages of the complete volume (with County Suburbs) is reduced to 3,440, without curtailment, by increasing the width of the pages. No addition, however, is made to the height of the Directory. Its promoters deserve high praise for the assiduous and careful organization which its appearance involves.

THE "Royal Edition" of Debrett's Peerage, Baronetage, Knightage, and Companionage (Dean & Son) is neat, well arranged, and compact. The Preface is of special interest, and informs us that the "number of New Honours conferred in the past twelve months has reached the generous total of 575." The comparative table of such awards which is also given shows how cheap they are likely to become by their multiplication in recent years. The information provided in the text is accurate, so far as we have tested it, and laudably up to date. The illustrations of crests are clear and good as a rule. We do not know why some mottoes are translated and not others. Perhaps this detail depends on titled students, who, like the St. Pancras Borough Council, have occasionally an indifferent knowledge of easy Latin.

MR. W. PALMER is to be congratulated on his editing of Hazell's Annual, 1909 (Hazell, Watson & Viney). A comprehensive Index forms a ready key to the mass of information which is provided on topics of the day. Among the themes treated are 'Aeroplanes,' 'Pageants,' 'The Public Trustee,' 'Religious Congresses of the Year,' 'Anthropology,' 'The Socialist Movement,' and 'Sport in 1908'—details which are sufficient to indicate the wide scope of the publication.

THE fourth edition of Who's Who in Germany (Wer ist's?) is edited by Mr. H. A. L. Degener of Leipsic, and published by him in common with Mr. Fisher Unwin. It is a volume we have already learnt to appreciate, for its 1,621 pages of biographies present a mass of information not easily obtainable elsewhere. The whole is a credit to German industry and enterprise, including as it does leading people in Austria and Switzerland, foreign artists, statesmen, writers, &c., "as far as they come in special contact with Germany," and notable Germans abroad. Mr. Degener in his 'Vorwort' is entitled to be proud of the success which has attended his venture. Some interesting statistics are among the prefatory matter, some of them international in character. Thus among the biggest cities New York is said to rank second, Paris third, Tokio sixth, and Chicago and Philadelphia next in order. We pointed out last year that Sir A. C. Harmsworth had reached a higher grade of honour, but he still figures under the old title. Those, however, who use the book will be grateful for the standard of accuracy which it maintains.

THE SHAKESPEARE QUARTOS.

I DO not wish to disparage in any way the recent labours of Mr. Pollard and Mr. Greg, although Mr. Pollard's letter compels me to restate my view of the present position of his and his friend's joint-research. In April Mr. Greg cited in support of his case a detailed statement on a typographical point which he not merely called "pretty strong evidence," but which he also backed by two pictorial plates—an advantage which he denied the rest of his testimony (The Library, April, pp. 119-20, with two plates). An unsigned article in The Athenæum on May 2nd described this "pretty strong evidence" as "hardly less cogent" than the rest, and superior to most in being "entirely ocular." In October the scene undergoes a transformation. Mr. Greg then admits that his "pretty strong evidence" proves, on further examination, to be "invalid" (Library for October, p. 384). "I regret," Mr. Greg adds, "having to relinquish this evidence, because it seemed to supply the most obvious and the most easily explained proof of the theory" (ibid. p. 385). Nor does his withdrawal end with the abandonment of this "most obvious and most easily explained proof." Of all the like pieces of typographical evidence, to which he had pinned a barely qualified faith in April, Mr. Greg writes in October: "It is clear that as evidence they are at the mercy of any chance discovery of the future." In any event he dismisses "the typographical evidence" from the case, and concentrates his attention on the watermarks. That aspect of the question is of manifest importance, but no decisive settlement is possible before Mr. Greg's and Mr. Pollard's data and deductions have been independently tested. A jury of paper-makers, who are technical experts in old processes of manufacture, would form the only fit tribunal. Mr. Pollard deems it immaterial that his brother-in-arms should have withdrawn a part of his original case because fuller information had shown that it was untenable. I quite agree that such withdrawal may have no effect on the final issue. But, in the meantime, the partial collapse of the original case involves the whole theory, for all apparently save its parents, in a cloud of doubt and uncertainty.

Mr. Pollard's letter suggests to me a different matter, which, although of minor importance, may be of interest to Shakespeare bibliographers. The late Mr. Justin Winsor stated in 1875 that in the library of the University of Virginia at Charlottesville there was a bound volume of Shakespeare's plays, which had been presented some time before by Governor Thomas Mann Randolph, a nephew of President Jefferson. On Mr. Winsor's authority I referred to this Virginian volume in my bibliography of 'Pericles' (published by the Oxford University Press). From notes by Mr. Winsor, I learnt that the volume consisted of those nine Shakespeare quartos the history of which Mr. Greg and Mr. Pollard are investigating. In June last fuller and most curious information regarding this volume reached me from the courteous librarian of the University of Virginia, Mr. John S. Patton, who wrote independently and without knowledge of any controversy. I have not hitherto had an opportunity of making public his fuller intelligence.

Mr. Patton now informs me that in 1853 Governor Randolph made the University of Virginia a gift of quarto plays, including the nine Shakespeare quartos in question, and no other Shakespeare plays; that each quarto was then in a separate binding; that the nine plays associated with Shakespeare's name were bound together by a bookbinder of Charlottesville in 1853 or soon after that year, and at no earlier date; and that, according to the contemporaneous library catalogue, 'The Contention' opened this bound volume, 'Pericles' came fourth, and the 'Midsummer Night's Dream' was last.

I know no more of the matter than Mr. Patton has written to me. But, these being his facts, it follows that the Virginian copies of these nine pieces found themselves no longer ago than some fifty years for the first time within the cover of a single book. This is a small confirmation of a growing impression that too much importance has been paid to the fact that this particular set of nine plays has twice or thrice been met with inside the same covers. The fact may need no other explanation than the bookbuyer's long-enduring habit of binding together quarto pamphlets (to the number of from six to twelve) whenever these were of approximate dates and like literary calibre, and were distinguished by cognate typography and imprints of similar pattern.

According to the Virginian librarian, the old practice was well alive in Charlottesville in 1853, and the earliest combination in one binding of these nine quartos on the shelves of the University Library was due to no more recondite cause. On this showing it becomes otiose to deduce any cryptic bibliographical theory of simultaneous origin in 1619 from the mere recurrence in two or three places of conglomerate volumes encasing this identical set of quartos. Obvious typographical resemblances, which need not confute the varying dates of origin and differing names of publishers on their title-pages, impelled the owner to put these nine quartos into the same binding in Virginia about 1853; such resemblances may possibly have produced the like phenomenon at earlier periods in other libraries. These particular quartos are fairly common, and most large collections of Elizabethan or Jacobean quarto plays seem to include or have included them. Both the favourable and unfavourable chances that, in the instances when the collection submitted in the known conditions to the experience of conglomerate binding, some of the bound volumes should contain precisely the same set of quartos, adequately correspond with the number of ascertained examples.

Mr. Patton concludes his story of the Virginian composite quarto volume thus:—

"In 1895 the Rotunda of the University was burned, and nearly the entire library was destroyed. The books contiguous to this volume were saved, but the quarto was never seen again. It was probably stolen."

Mr. Patton writes with full knowledge, and stands in no need of corroboration. The account, which he has lately given me, of the condition of the quarto conglomerate volume and of its contents before the fire of 1895 seems to have been made independently of Mr. Justin Winsor's report on Shakespeare quartos in America, which was prepared for the Boston Public Library in 1875. There is no discrepancy between the two descriptions. SIDNEY LEE.

* * Two other articles on this subject are held over till next week.

TWO STORIES OF VAUGHAN.

January 9, 1909.

THE review of Mr. Lionel Tollemache's book mentions two allusions for which I am responsible, and you may care to have the incidents exactly as they occurred. Both belong to my Harrow days.

In 1868 Matthew Arnold came to live in Harrow, and I soon got to know him through his sons. As a good Harrovian, I had a tremendous reverence for Vaughan (though I was under Butler), and I said to Arnold, almost with awe: "I suppose, sir, you know Dr. Vaughan." "Do I know Vaughan? Oh, dear me, yes. A good creature, Vaughan, but brutally ignorant." You see it was not an "epitaph."

The second story relates to Dean Stanley (whom Vaughan never called "Arthur," always "the Dean"). In 1870 I had an exeat from Harrow, and spent the Sunday in London. A friend took me to call at the Deanery on Sunday afternoon (it was my introduction to the Dean and Lady Augusta). Among the guests at tea were the Duke of Somerset and Sir Arthur Helps, and a third, of like kidney, whom I cannot remember. After tea I walked to the Temple, to the Vaughans', who were old friends. I told them of my visit to the Deanery, and Dr. Vaughan was much interested: "Now tell us whom you met there." "The Duke of Somerset, Sir Arthur Helps, and Lord Blank." "I see, I see. Aged unbelievers of title—the Dean's favourite associates."

These are ancient memories, but I believe pretty accurate. Vaughan's sarcasms would fill a volume. G. W. E. RUSSELL.

IZAACK WALTON'S WILL.

MESSRS. HODGSON are about to sell an official copy of Izaak Walton's will, written in a clear, round law hand, the initials on the first line in large Old English letters and decorated, on a sheet of parchment, with the probate of the same, dated Feb. 4th, 1683 (Old Style), and signed by Thomas Welham, Registrar, attached, also the seal of the Court of Canterbury (slightly broken), endorsed in a contemporary hand "Is: Walton Sen^rs Will." The original will, written throughout in Walton's beautifully clear hand, and dated August 3, 1683, is preserved at Somerset House. After the usual declaration "In the Name of God, Amen, I, Izaak Walton the elder of Winchester," being ninety years old and "in perfect memory," he declares his belief in "onely one God," and his faith "as the Church of England now professeth," and the latter "the rather because of a very long and very trew friendship with some of the Roman Church." As to his worldly estate, "which I have neither gott by falsehood or flattery or the extreme crewelty of the law," he bequeaths to his son-in-law Dr. Hawkins and his wife the house and shop in Paternoster Row, and the house in Chancery Lane; to his son Izaak "Norington ffarme" and "a ffarme or land neare to Stafford." Should his son, however, not marry before he is forty-one, he desires the Town and Corporation of Stafford to pay out of the rent 10% to bind "two boyes, the sons of honest and poore parents," to be apprentices, that they may "the better afterward gett their own liveing." Five pounds a year is to be given "to some maide servant" who has "dwelt long in one service," to be paid her on the day of her marriage; "twenty shillings yearly" to be given to those "that shall collect the said rent," and "what money shall remain undistributed of shall be employed to buy coles for some poore people," and these are to be "delivered to them the last weeke in January or early in February, the hardest and most pinching times with poore people. And God reward those that shall doe this without partiality." He then bequeaths to his son-in-law, "whome I love as my owne son," also to the Bishop of Winchester and others, his rings and his books, referring in particular to Donne's Sermons, "which I have heard preacht and read with much content"; to his son Izaak "a deske of prints" and a cabinet, "in which are some little things that he will vallow, tho of not great worth." Then follow bequests to his aunts—"about fifty shillings a yeare in or for Bacon and Cheese (not more)," and he desires his son to be kind to them according to "their necessity and his owne ability"; while he bequeaths his "cloathes, linnen, and wollen" to his servant. And then "to my old friend Mr. Richard Marriot," the publisher of the 'Angler,' he leaves 10*l*. Lastly, he appoints his son Izaak sole executor, and desires his burial to be "free from any ostentation or charge."

A codicil is added indicating 34 persons (including Charles Cotton) to whom rings are to be given; and finally there is a statement that "severall lines are blotted out" because they were repeated. These appear in the original will to have been crossed out by Walton's own pen.

ASSISTANT MASTERS IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS.

UNDER the chairmanship of Mr. W. A. Newsome (Stationers' School), the President for the year, the annual meeting of the Incorporated Association of Assistant Masters in Secondary Schools, which was held on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday in last week, at St. Paul's School, West Kensington, was well attended by representatives from all parts of England and Wales. On the first two days the Council discussed the future policy of the Association and passed important resolutions for submission to the general meeting on the following day.

Mr. J. H. Bray (Montrose College, Streatham Hill), the Treasurer, in presenting the annual statement of accounts, referred to the satisfactory condition of the finances of the Association, and especially to the Benevolent Fund, which, though only in its first year, had grown to a good sum, and had enabled assistance to be rendered in a typical case of distress.

In moving the adoption of the Report Mr. R. F. Cholmeley (St. Paul's School), the ex-Chairman, emphasized the importance of the work done by the Association during the past year in securing a better system of tenure by means of the Endowed Schools (Masters) Act, and while giving to the Head Masters all due credit for their support in obtaining that measure, he claimed it as a success for this Association. He said that members must not rest satisfied or relax their vigilance in consequence of that Act; there were many points to be pressed on the Board of Education—points about which agreement had already been reached at the Joint Conference between the Head Masters' Association and their own. It was essential that governing bodies of schools should have their functions defined, and that the definition should be in accordance with right principles. It was satisfactory to note that, though the Act applied only to assistant masters in endowed schools, it was being readily accepted by school authorities generally. Members must not rest until the whole profession enjoyed the protection of this Act.

Reference was then made to the efforts of the Association to secure a federation of the various organizations of Secondary teachers, to the limitations imposed upon their own Council by the retarding policy of others, and to the withdrawal from the Federal Council of the Head Masters' Conference. In spite of many difficulties the Federal Council had given promise of life, and "The action of the Head Masters' Conference last month, when, perceiving this still swaddled and faintly crying babe upon its threshold, it nerved itself to utter the final word of repudiation, and cast it into the street, deserved to be counted among the cases of heartless infanticide."

Would the Head Masters' Association be callous enough to complete the murder? If so, the unity of the profession was nothing but a name.

The Registration question was a good illustration of the necessity for co-operation, for it was now evident that the Government was unwilling to accept as "representative" Dr. Gow and his friends, but insisted upon dealing only with the accredited representatives of the various sections of the profession. Into this channel the Association must direct all the energy and skill that can be spared for the purpose. Mr. Cholmeley congratulated members on the success achieved in raising their salaries, but it was becoming more and more obvious that there was a crying need for a comprehensive system of pensions. Though low salaries would defeat their own end by the scarcity of men to apply for them, the provision of pensions could not be left to the law of supply and demand, or to the arrangements of scattered governing bodies of schools, but must be the result of national organization.

Mr. A. A. Somerville (Eton) seconded the adoption of the Report, and this was agreed to.

The following resolution on Tenure was submitted by Mr. Somerville:—

"That in the opinion of this Association no assistant master should sign an agreement (a) if it provides for the possibility of his dismissal at any time other than at the end of a school term, and except after at least two months' notice has been given him, save in cases of grave misconduct; (b) or if it does not provide that, before the dismissal takes effect, the assistant master concerned shall be given the opportunity of appearing before the governing body, with or without the help of a friend."

The meeting was asked to put on record this resolution as its interpretation of the meaning of the recent Act. Stress was laid on the fact that there was an excellent understanding between Head Masters and Assistants on this question, and the position was similar to that in Hartlepool under the scheme of co-partnership created by Sir Christopher Furness. The Association must strengthen itself by raising its membership from its present total of 2,500 to 7,000.

Mr. A. L. Watson (Enfield Grammar School) seconded the motion, which was passed unanimously.

The Hon. Secretary, Mr. J. Whitehead (Berkhamsted), moved the resolution on Superannuation which had received the sanction of the Council:—

"That in the best interests of Secondary education it is imperative that the Board of Education should take all necessary steps for the early establishment of a Superannuation Fund for teachers in recognized Secondary Schools. Such a scheme should provide for—

(a) Contributions to the Fund from the teacher and the Governing Body.

(b) The expenses of management being borne by the State.

(c) The provision by the State of a disablement allowance.

(d) The possibility of the teacher emigrating from school to school without loss of pension rights."

Mr. Whitehead argued that in our educational system the one thing important was the teacher, whatever value we might attach to school buildings, apparatus, and other things. There were always crowds of applicants for posts in the Civil Service, but, owing to the poor prospects of their profession, it was not always easy to procure good men for vacant posts. He maintained that a good pension scheme would have much influence in attracting able men.

Mr. Milner Barry having seconded, the resolution was carried with one dissentient.

Mr. Cholmeley, in moving an expression of regret at the withdrawal of the Head Masters' Conference from the Federal Council, declared that this action was taken by the Conference immediately it became possible for the Federal Council to do something for the benefit of Secondary education. He referred in plain terms to the inability of the Head Masters' Conference to do anything. Its component parts elicited sympathy and esteem; which could not be felt for it as an organized body. Its withdrawal from the Federal Council must not be allowed to damage that body.

Mr. T. E. Page (Charterhouse) declared, in seconding the motion, that this withdrawal was a clear proof that the Federal Council was doing good to the cause of education; that Council was the living voice of the profession, and when it showed signs of becoming effective, the Head Masters' Conference withdrew. The motion was agreed to unanimously.

Mr. C. H. Greene (Berkhamsted) moved that

"This Association instructs the Executive Committee to move the Federal Council to take such further steps as may seem good to them to bring about the formation of a Registration Council, in concert with duly accredited representatives of other bodies desirous and qualified to co-operate."

He urged co-operation with teachers of all kinds to obtain a Registration Council which should be satisfactory to all. The motion was carried.

The afternoon meeting was open to members of the Assistant Mistresses' Association and to friends.

Dr. Rouse (Perse School) read, as promised, a paper entitled 'A Dream.' This proved to be a clever satire on the conditions prevalent in the world of education at the present time. The paper, being an imitation of the style of 'The Pilgrim's Progress,' was thoroughly appreciated by the company, to whom it afforded much amusement.

Mr. S. E. Winbolt (Christ's Hospital) introduced a discussion on the pronunciation of ancient Greek, other speakers being Dr. Rouse, Prof. Rippmann, Mr. Strangeways, and Mr. Greene.

The meeting terminated with the usual votes of thanks.

THE HEAD MASTERS' CONFERENCE.

OF this Conference, which took place on December 22nd and 23rd, and was widely reported in the daily papers, we summarize only the main points. Dr. J. A. Nairn, Head Master of the Merchant Taylors' School, where the meetings were held, presided, and the numbers present were head masters 58, assistant masters 42. Dr. Gow (Westminster), supported by the Rev. R. D. Swallow (Chigwell), moved

"That this Conference is of opinion that, in the formation of a Registration Council under the Education (Administrative Provisions) Act of 1907, representatives of the teaching profession should be chosen with reference to the types and grades of existing schools, and not with reference to the several faculties of teachers," and

"That this Conference calls upon the Board of Education to proceed to the constitution of such a Council without further delay."

Dr. Upcott (Christ's Hospital) recognized Dr. Gow's admirable work in the matter, but suggested that the second part of the motion should be put in a more conciliatory form, and proposed that it should read

"and that this Conference trusts that the Board of Education will take steps to facilitate the constitution of such a Council without further delay" — an amendment which was accepted by the Conference.

Dr. Grey (Bradfield), supported by the Rev. A. A. David (Clifton), then moved a resolution:—

"That this Conference, while anxious for the preservation of a variety of types in the Secondary Schools of this country, recognizes the value of securing a more complete co-ordination of the educational system, and, with this end in view, would welcome a closer touch between the Board of Education, and the authorities of the non-local schools, through inspection and other direct means of communication."

Dr. A. E. Hillard (St. Paul's) opposed this resolution, and moved the previous question. The Rev. W. H. Chappel (King's School, Worcester) seconded, and after speeches giving a varied experience of inspection by the Board of Education, the opposition carried the day by 25 votes to 20.

Dr. Field (Radley) then proposed a motion

"That the emoluments of entrance scholarships should be of two kinds: (1) general, of comparatively small amount; (2) special, depending on a definite statement of inability to send a boy without such assistance."

We are glad to see that this was carried, for it calls attention to a marked defect alike of Public School and University education—that valuable scholarships are accepted by those whose parents do not really need help in educating their sons, and ought not to claim it when it is essential to so many poorer parents. The honorary scholarship and fellowship ought to be much more common than they are.

On the 23rd the proceedings opened with the acceptance of a resolution

"That this Conference, while withholding its assent to many details, and in particular to the proposal to postpone the study of Latin to the age of twelve, approves of the main conclusions of the Report of the Committee of the British Association, Education Section."

A resolution brought forward concerning the Army Council and examinations was withdrawn after the suggestion that the whole matter should be referred to the Committee of the Conference, and another resolution was accepted, asking the Committee to appoint a sub-committee to deal with the development of school rifle clubs and cadet corps.

Mr. R. C. Gilson (King Edward's School, Birmingham) then moved three resolutions, suggesting that (1) the average boy could not undertake the study of more than two languages besides English, before he was fourteen, without harm to his general education; (2) as the Public Schools largely controlled the curriculum in preparatory schools for the average as well as the exceptional boy, it was desirable that no candidate for admission should offer more than two foreign languages, and, if Latin were offered, Greek, French, and German should be of equal weight as alternatives; (3) as it was possible for a boy to attain a high standard in Greek at eighteen or nineteen, though he had not begun the subject till fourteen or later, it was the duty of the Public Schools to provide a class or classes in which the study of Greek could be begun. The speaker said that the Conference had in 1906 resolved to postpone the study of Greek till thirteen or fourteen, and that Greek should not be a subject for entrance at the schools represented by the Conference. In 1907 a recommendation that the standard of Greek required for scholarship examinations in preparatory schools should be lowered was defeated. He went on to make some wild remarks about the ignorance of a classical scholar of his college and University. Dr. Upcott seconded the resolutions. An amendment recommending a committee to confer with the preparatory schoolmasters on studies advisable from nine to sixteen was then brought forward by the Rev. E. Lyttelton (Eton), but it was decided to treat it as a separate resolution after Mr. Gilson's had been dealt with. Dr. James (Rugby) contested Mr. Gilson's views as to Greek, and said that the resolutions, if passed, would reduce that language to the position of Hebrew at the present day. The first resolution, with the amendment of thirteen for fourteen, proposed by Mr. W. G. Rushbrooke (St. Olave's, London), was passed; the second was rejected; and the third was carried. Mr. Lyttelton's resolution for a committee was then carried.

The Rev. W. C. Compton (Dover College), supported by the Rev. T. N. H. Smith-Pearse (Epsom), carried a resolution that the standard of the school certificate of the Oxford and Cambridge Joint Board was too high for the purpose for which it was intended, and that a committee be instructed to approach the Board on the subject. A motion by Mr. W. W. Vaughan (Giggleswick) regarding the increasing neglect of German in Secondary Schools was carried, but elicited the obvious comment that there were other neglected subjects with as great a claim.

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Anglican Church Handbooks: Christianity and the Supernatural, by the Bishop of Ossory; Social Work, by the Rev. W. E. Chadwick; Pastoral Work, by the Rev. R. C. Joynt; The Joy of Bible Study, by the Rev. H. C. Lees, 1/ net each.
 Congregational Year-Book, 1909, 2/6
 Craigie (J. A.), The Country Pulpit, 3/6 net.
 Ecclesiastical Review, January, 15/ yearly. An American Roman Catholic publication for the clergy.
 Egerton (Hakluyt), Father Tyrrell's Modernism, 5/. An expository criticism of 'Through Scylla and Charybdis' in an open Letter to Mr. Athelstan Riley.
 Gollancz (H.), Sermons and Addresses, 10/6 net. Sermons preached in various synagogues by a Jewish minister.
 MacLaren (Alexander), The Gospel according to St. Luke, Chapters XIII.—XXIV., St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans, 7/6 each. In Expositions of Holy Scripture.
 Peace and the Churches, 6/ net. Souvenir of the visit to England of representatives of the German Christian Churches, May 26 to June 3 last.
 Southwark (Bishop of), The Fulness of Christ, 1/6 net. Three sermons preached before the University of Oxford, and other papers.
 Wrixon (Sir H.), The Religion of the Common Man, 3/ net.

Law.

- Latifi (A.), Effects of War on Property, 5/ net. Consists of studies in International Law, with a note on 'Beligerent Rights at Sea' by John Westlake.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Bode (W.), Great Masters of Dutch and Flemish Painting, 7/6 net. Translated by Margaret L. Clarke, with several illustrations.
 Dean (Hannah) The "A. L." Mass-Drawing of Common Objects, 3/6 net.
 Luxmoore (H. E.), Eton from a Backwater, 7/6 net.

Poetry and Drama.

- Adams (W. M.), Grafton Chimes; or, When I was a Boy, 3/6
 Arteaga y Pereira (F. de), Nine Spanish Poems, 1/ net.
 Bulkeley (H. J.), Hic et Illic, 2/6 net. Poems written at home and abroad.
 Campbell (W.), Poetical Tragedies, 1 dol. 50. The tragedies are 'Mordred,' 'Daulac,' 'Morning,' and 'Hildebrand.'
 Church (H.), Egmont, 2/6. An Australian volume of verses, a few of which have appeared in The Bookfellow.
 Freeman (J.), Twenty Poems, 1/ net. Some of the poems have appeared in magazines.
 Gibson (H. W.), Seen from the Hill, and other Verses, 1/ net. A series of verses on religious subjects.
 Gowans (A. L.), Lyric Masterpieces by Living Authors, 6d. net.

- Gwynne (A. M.), A Social Experiment, 1/. A comedy.
 Hymenæus, 3/6 net. A comedy acted at St. John's College, Cambridge, with an introduction and notes by G. C. Moore Smith.
 MacNaughton-Jones (H.), The Dawn of Life, and other Poems, 2/6 net. Contains 9 illustrations.
 Raleigh (W.), Shakespeare, 4/ net. Originally appeared in English Men of Letters, and is now reprinted in the Eversley Series. For review see Athen., June 8, 1907, p. 689.
 Rawlings (B. B.), The Waters of Argyra, the Vision of Belshazzar, and other Verses, 3/6 net.
 Shakespeare, Coriolanus, Sonnets, Poems, 7/6 each. Renaissance Edition.
 Thiselton (A. E.), Notulæ Criticæ (72-88), 1/ net. An interesting little series of notes on Æschylus, Virgil, and Shakespeare.
 Vernon (Hon. W. W.), Readings on the Paradiso of Dante, 2 vols., 15/ net. Based on the Commentary of Benvenuto da Imola, with an introduction by the Bishop of Ripon. Second Edition, revised. For former notice see Athen., Jan. 5, 1901, p. 10.
 Wells (C.), Joseph and his Brethren, 1/ net. A dramatic poem, with an introduction by A. C. Swinburne, and a note on Rossetti and Charles Wells by Theodore Watts-Dunton. In the World's Classics.

Music.

- Anthems, Ancient and Modern. Contains Anthems by Attwood, Boyce, and Purcell, as well as by Barnby, Macfarren, Stainer, and living musicians.
 New Cathedral Psalter, containing the Psalms, also the Canticles and Proper Psalms for certain days, edited by the Bishop of Stepney.
 Scarlatti (A.), Harpsichord and Organ Music, Parts II. and III., 5/ net each. Edited by J. S. Shedlock. For notice of Part I. see last week's Athen., p. 51.
 Taylor (David C.), The Psychology of Singing. Rational Method of Voice-Culture, &c., 6/6 net.

Bibliography.

- Columbia, District of: Public Library, Eleventh Annual Report of the Board of Trustees, and Tenth Annual Report of the Librarian, 1907-8.
 Library World, January, 6d.
 Reader's Index, January and February, 1d. Periodicals for 1909 at the Croydon Public Libraries.
 Savage (Ernest A.), The Story of Libraries and Book-Collecting, 2/6

Philosophy.

- International Journal of Ethics, January, 6s cents. A quarterly devoted to the advancement of ethical knowledge and practice.
 Marden (O. S.) and Holmes (E. R.), Every Man a King; or, Might in Mind-Mastery, 3/6 net. In New Thought Library.
 Schuré (E.), Hermes and Plato, 1/6 net. Translated by F. Rothwell.
 Whitby (C. J.), The Wisdom of Plotinus, 2/ net. A metaphysical study.

Political Economy.

- Barnett (Canon and Mrs. S. A.), Towards Social Reform, 5/ net.
 Ravenshear (A. F.), The Industrial and Commercial Influence of the English Patent System, 5/ net. Written in the hope that it may be found suggestive not only to those whose primary concern is with patents, but also to students of economics.

History and Biography.

- Andrássy (Count J.), The development of Hungarian Constitutional Liberty, 7/6 net. Translated by C. Arthur and Ilona Ginever.
 Cambridge Modern History; Vol. XI., The Growth of Nationalities, 16/ net.
 Davidson (J.), and Gray (A.), The Scottish Staple at Veere, 12/6 net. A study in the economic history of Scotland.
 Dictionary of National Biography: Vol. XI., Kennet—Lluelyn, 15/ net. Reissue.
 Friendly Craft: a Collection of American Letters, 5/ net. Edited by Elizabeth D. Hanscom.
 Leslie (Major J. H.), The Services of the Royal Regiment of Artillery in the Peninsular War, 1808-14: Chap. II. The Coruna Campaign (October, 1808, to January, 1809), 1/6. Also contains the diary of Capt. Richard Bogue, with 5 illustrations and a map.
 MacRae (Rev. D.), America Revisited and Men I have Met, 2/6 net.
 Magnus (L.), The Jewish Board of Guardians and the Men who Made It, 1859-1909, 2/6 net.
 Orkney and Shetland Records: Sasines, Vol. I., Part III., 2/. Edited by Henry Paton. No. 10 of Old-Lore Series.
 Ruvigny and Raineval (Marquis of), The Plantagenet Roll of the Blood Royal, 84/ net. A table of all the descendants now living of Edward III., King of England. The Isabel of Essex volume, containing the descendants of Isabel (Plantagenet), Countess of Essex and Eu, with a supplement to the three previous volumes.
 Sands (P. C.), The Client Princes of the Roman Empire under the Republic, 4/6. Awarded the Thirlwall Prize, 1906.
 Theal (G. McCall), History of South Africa since September, 1795, Vol. III., 7/6.
 Treherne (P.), The Right Hon. Spencer Perceval, 5/ net.

Geography and Travel.

- Bunting (F.), Where to Live Round London (Northern Side), 2/6 net. With a chapter on the geology and soils by O. A. Shrubsole. Edited by Prescott Row and A. H. Anderson. In the Homeland Reference Books. New Edition.
 Maps: Ontario, Russell Sheet and Winchester Sheet, 2/ each.
 Merrick (G. B.), Old Times on the Upper Mississippi, 3 dols. 50 net. The recollections of a steamboat pilot from 1854 to 1863, with illustrations and maps.
 Nikkelsen (E.), Conquering the Arctic Ice, 20/ net. With numerous illustrations and maps.
 Ordnance Survey: Sheet 30, Colchester, 2/ net. In Large Sheet Series.
 Stewart (B.), My Experiences of Cyprus, 6/. An account of the people, mediæval cities and castles, antiquities, and history of Cyprus, illustrated from 50 photographs by the author. New Edition with additional matter.

Education.

- Crook (C. W.), Notes of Lessons on Arithmetic, Mensuration, and Practical Geometry, Vol. I., 3/
 Franco-British Exhibition, Report of the British Education Section.
 Frere (M.), Children's Care Committees, 1/ net. Advises how to work them in public elementary schools.
 Gautier (J.), The Progress of Secondary Education in France since the Time of Napoleon I. A Lecture delivered in the Congress Hall of the Franco-British Exhibition, under the auspices of the British Education Section.
 School World, Vol. X., 7/6 net.

Folk-lore.

- Gerould (G. H.), The Grateful Dead, 10/6 net. The History of a folk story. One of the Folk-lore Society's publications.
 Hollis (A. C.), The Nandi, their Language and Folk-Lore, 16/ net. With introduction by Sir Charles Eliot, and several illustrations.
 Waite (A. E.), The Hidden Church of the Holy Graal, its Legends and Symbolism, 12/6 net. Considered in its affinity with certain mysteries of initiation and other traces of a secret tradition in Christian times.

Philology.

- Catulli Carmina, 5/ net. Edited, with introduction and notes, by Charles Stuttaford. Revised Edition.

School-Books.

- MacKinder (H. J.), Seven Lectures on the United Kingdom, for Use in India, 1/ net. Indian Edition, reissued for use in the United Kingdom.
 Marriott (J. A. R.), The Remaking of Modern Europe, 2/6. See p. 70.
 Terence, Pamulus, 2/. As performed at the Royal College of St. Peter, Westminster, Edited by John Sargeant and the Rev. A. G. S. Raynor.
 Walpole (Rev. A. S.), The Gospel according to St. Mark, 1/6. With introduction and notes, also illustrations.

Science.

- Abramowski (O. L. M.), Vitalism, the Art of Eating for Health, 1/6. The evolution of a common-sense conception of disease and a natural system of its prevention and cure.
 Adams (J. G.), The Principles of Pathology: Vol. I. General Pathology, 30/ net. In the Oxford Medical Publications.
 Annals of Mathematics, January, 2/ net.
 Leicester, Museum and Art Gallery Committee, Sixteenth Report of the Town Council, from 1st April, 1905, to 31st March, 1908.
 O'Donahue (T. A.), Colliery Surveying, 3/6. A primer designed for the use of students and aspirants to colliery management.
 Paper Mills Directory of England, Scotland, and Ireland, and Year Book of the Paper-making Trade for 1909, 2/6 net.
 Ramsay (A. Maitland), Diathesis and Ocular Diseases, 3/6 net.
 Russell (Alexander), The Theory of Electric Cables and Networks, 8/ net.
 Smithsonian Institution, Annual Report of the Board of Regents for the Year ending June 30, 1907.—Report of the Secretary for 1908.
 South (R.), The Moths of the British Isles, 7/6 net. Second Series, comprising the families Noctuidæ to Hepialidæ, with coloured figures of every species, and many varieties, and drawings of eggs, caterpillars, chrysalids, and food-plants. In the Wayside and Woodland Series.
 South African Natives, their Progress and Present Condition, 6/ net. Edited by the South African Native Races Committee. A supplement to 'The Natives of South Africa: their Economic and Social Condition.'
 Spolia Zeylanica, December, 1.25 rupees. Issued quarterly by the Colombo Museum, Ceylon, and contains plates and illustrations.
 Stubbs (Lucas P.), Consider the Butterflies how They Grow, 3/6 net. Illustrated.
 Treatise on Zoology, Part I. Introduction and Protozoa. First Fascicule, 12/6 net. Edited by Sir R. Lankester.
 Vacher (F.), The Food Inspector's Handbook, 7/6 net. A guide for medical officers of health, meat inspectors, &c. New Edition.
 Verrall (G. H.), British Flies, Vol. V., 31/6 net.
 Wimperis (H. E.), The Internal Combustion Engine, 6/ net. A textbook on gas, oil, and petrol engines, for the use of students and beginners.

Fiction.

- Atherton (Gertrude), A Whirl Asunder, 1/ net. New Edition.
 Chatterton (G. G.), Fatality, 6/. The story of a wife accused of murdering her unloved husband.
 Dudney (Mrs. Henry E.), Rachel Lorian, 6/. Two men and a woman are concerned in the tale. One man, maimed physically on his wedding day, dies, releasing the woman to marry the other, who, however, turns out to be maimed morally by having taken a mistress.
 France (Anatole), Balthazar, 6/. Short stories translated by Mrs. John Lane.
 Gull (C. Ranger), A Gentleman from Portland, 6/. The theft of an international document forms the basis of this tale.
 Holdsworth (A. E.), Lady Letty Brandon, 6/. The story of a woman's bigamous double life.
 Johnson (F. M.), It was not to Be, 3/6. Translated from the German.
 Parrott (W.), Under the Pink Chestnuts, 6/
 Ramsey (O.), The Girl from Catford, 6/. The story of an entanglement between a married duke and a young girl.
 Rita, The House called Hurrish, 6/. Concerned with effects of the drug habit.
 Shiel (M. P.), The Isle of Lies, 6/. An improbable tale of adventure.
 Slater (F. C.), The Sunburnt South, 3/6. Tales and sketches of life in South Africa.
 Walther (T. H.), A Simple Heart, 6/

- Watson (H. B. Marriott), The Flower of the Heart, 6/. A novel which aims at dealing broadly with some phases of modern life, including the City and the Stock Exchange.
 Wynne (May), Henry of Navarre, 6/. A romance founded on the play noticed on p. 84.—A Maid of Brittany, 1/ net. With frontispiece by H. M. Brock. New Edition.

General Literature.

- Butler (N. M.), The American as He Is, 4/ net. A series of lectures delivered before the University of Copenhagen in September last.
 Edwards (E.), Personal Information for Girls, 1/ net. One of the Personal Purity publications.
 Elector, Vol. I. No. I., 1/ annually. The official organ of the Middle Classes Defence Organization and Centre Party Union.
 Faculty of Actuaries, Translations, Vol. IV., Part VII., No. XII., 1/ Includes 'The Fundamental Principles of Pension Funds,' inaugural address by the President.
 Healer, January, 3d. Devoted to spiritual healing.
 Hellenic Herald, December, 9d. A political and literary review.
 McKechnie (W. S.), The Reform of the House of Lords, 2/6 net. With a criticism of the Report of the Select Committee of the 2nd of December last.
 Orkney and Shetland Miscellany, Vol. II., Part I., 2/. No. 9 of Old-Lore Series.
 Pancoast (H. S.), An Introduction to English Literature, 5/ net. Third and enlarged Edition.
 Royal Statistical Society Journal, December, 5/
 Ryan (P. W.), A Plea for Irish Studies, 6d. An address delivered in the Regent House of Trinity College, at the opening meeting of the second session of the Dublin University Gaelic Society.
 Willing's Press Guide, 1909, 1/

Pamphlets.

- London County Council: Indication of Houses of Historical Interest, Parts XX., XXI. and XXII., 1d. each.

FOREIGN

Theology.

- Schelven (A. A. van), De Nederduitsche Vluchtelingenkerken der XVIIe Eeuw in Engeland en Duitschland, in hunne betekenissen voor de Reformatie in de Nederlanden, 5fl.

Poetry and the Drama.

- Bever (A. van), Les Poètes du Terroir du XVe Siècle jusqu'à nos Jours, Tome I., 3fr. 50.
 Kossmann (E. F.), Der Deutsche Musenalmanach, 1833-9. An account of the contents of the Almanach for each year.

History and Biography.

- Almèras (Henri d'), La Vie parisienne sous la Révolution et le Directoire, 5fr. Has many illustrations from old prints.
 Croiset (A.), Les Démocraties antiques, 3fr. 50.
 Guichen (Vicomte de), Crépuscule d'ancien Régime, 5fr.
 Murat (Prince), Lettres et Documents pour servir à l'Histoire de Joachim Murat, 1801-15, Vol. II., 7fr. 50.
 Revue historique, janvier-février, 6fr.
 Visconti (Primi), Mémoires sur la Cour de Louis XIV., 7fr. 50. Translated and edited by Jean Lemoine.

Science.

- Boletín del Cuerpo de Ingenieros de Minas del Perú, Nos. 63-7.

Fiction.

- Bernard (T.), Les Veillées du Chauffeur, 3fr. 50.
 Kipling (R.), Œuvres choisies, 3fr. 50. Extracts chosen and translated by Michel Epy.
 Loti (P.), La Mort de Philé, 3fr. 50.

General Literature.

- Revue germanique, janvier-février, 4fr.

* * All Books received at the Office up to Wednesday Morning will be included in this List unless previously noted. Publishers are requested to state prices when sending Books.

Literary Gossip.

MR. MURRAY is publishing 'The Press Album,' edited by Mr. T. Catling, for the benefit of the Journalists' Orphan Fund; 'Life of the Hon. Mrs. Norton,' by Miss Perkins, including unpublished letters; 'Two Admirals,' Sir Fairfax Moresby and his son, by Admiral John Moresby; and 'Letters from the Peninsula, 1808-12,' by Sir William Warre, edited by his nephew, Dr. Edmond Warre. Capt. Warre had exceptional opportunities of appreciating the Peninsular campaign, owing to his knowledge of Portuguese.

IN Chambers's Journal for February Lord Ronald Sutherland Gower writes on Charles Kirkpatrick Sharpe, and the Rev. R. A. Gatty on the traces of prehistoric man he has found in 'The Pit-Camp Dwellings of Holderness'; while Mr. A. Stodart Walker continues the series of 'Celebrities I Have Known,' this instalment including his uncle John Stuart Blackie, R. L. Stevenson, and Robert Buchanan, some of whose unpublished poems and letters are quoted. An ex-custodian gives anecdotes and recollections of 'Royal Holyrood.'

MR. UNWIN will publish soon a novel by the Rev. Victor L. Whitechurch, author of 'The Canon in Residence,' entitled 'Concerning Himself: the Autobiography of an Ordinary Man.' Many of the scenes are laid in a cathedral city, and the atmosphere of a theological college and certain aspects of clerical life are humorously presented.

THE fresh issue of The New Quarterly includes 'The House of Hospitality,' by Mr. Thomas Hardy; 'Ibant Obscuri,' by Mr. Robert Bridges; 'Recent Physical Research,' by Mrs. Verrall; 'The Causes of Mountain Sickness,' by Dr. J. S. Haldane; 'Aristophanes on Tennyson,' by Dr. Verrall, 'George Canning,' by Mr. Herbert Paul; 'The Stability of Mountains,' by Mr. J. E. E. Craster; and 'A Soldier's Wife,' translated from E. von Keyserling's 'Schwüle Tage.'

AMONG the cheap books with which the twentieth century is threatened is a new and enterprising series by Messrs. Harper & Brothers. It is to be called "Harper's Library of Living Thought." Being of opinion that the new century is in too much of a hurry to wait for a long treatise upon new and important subjects, the publishers are issuing at the cost of a single review essential précis of vital thought, without the delay involved in expansion of that thought into book form.

THE first issue promises to be of prime importance. It is to contain a treatise upon three typical plays of Shakespeare, by Mr. Swinburne; a treatise on 'The Teaching of Jesus,' by Count Tolstoy, and 'Personal Religion in Egypt before Christianity,' by Prof. Petrie. These volumes will be published on the 1st of February, and will be followed by a treatise on 'The Life of the Universe,' by Prof. Arrhenius, and another upon 'Poetic Adequacy in the Twentieth Century,' by Mr. Theodore Watts-Dunton.

THE identification of religion with a political party has always been a difficulty. This problem is treated in 'Nonconformity and Politics,' by a Nonconformist minister, which Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons will publish immediately.

'ANNE OF GREEN GABLES,' a novel by L. M. Montgomery, is promised by the same firm. It is a story of misunderstanding between a clever, imaginative girl and her homely relatives and friends.

ELIZABETH GODFREY has completed the study of Elizabeth, Princess Palatine, on which she has been engaged, and it will be brought out by Mr. John Lane about the end of the month, under the title of 'A Sister of Prince Rupert.' The Princess is an interesting subject, as the intimate friend of Descartes, protectress of the Labadists, and correspondent of William Penn and other English Quakers.

THE GROlier CLUB of New York has organized an exhibition of rare editions, relics, and portraits of Milton. The exhibition comprises a "full collection of first editions of the poetical works, with many examples of later issues." There are three copies of the 'Poems' of 1645, with Marshall's portrait: one with the imprint ending "in S. Pauls Churchyard," and two without the "S." Two of the three copies of the 'Poems' of 1673 are "Printed for Tho. Dring at the Blew Anchor," and the other issued by him "at the White Lion." There are two copies of 'Paradise Lost,' 1667, the second copy of the title with Milton's name in large capitals having Dryden's lines inscribed in his own autograph.

THERE is also a copy of the first American edition of Milton's works (Philadelphia, 1777). The Miltoniana include the MS. of the first book of 'Paradise Lost,' sold at Messrs. Sotheby's a few years since; and the twelve original drawings of Blake illustrating 'L'Allegro' and 'Il Penseroso.' The number of portraits amounts to 324, and claims to be "the largest collection of engraved portraits of Milton ever exhibited."

MR. E. M. COX writes from 38A, Curzon Street, Mayfair:—

"I have a copy of Habington's 'Castara,' 4to, 1634, which collates as follows: A to L in fours, L 4 blank, followed by leaf of errata, with errata on recto. I have not been able to trace any other copy, except one in the Museum, with the leaf of errata; and I can find no other copy with the blank L 4. It is only a small point in bibliography; but as the book is very rare, I thought it might be of interest. Perhaps some of your readers may have seen a copy like mine."

MESSRS. SANDS & Co. will publish in February the official 'Report of the Eucharistic Congress' held in Westminster last September, including the correspondence and press comments which it elicited.

THE HARVARD COLLEGE LIBRARY has received by request from the late Prof. Norton the early portrait of Chaucer known as the Seddon portrait. The picture is to be inscribed as "a memorial of two lovers of Chaucer, Francis James Child and James Russell Lowell."

MR. A. FIFIELD will issue in February 'Natural Monopolies in relation to Social Democracy,' by Mr. Charles Derwent Smith; 'Socialism and National Minimum,' by Mrs. Sidney Webb and Miss B. L. Hutchins; and 'The Wastage of Child Life,' by Dr. J. Johnston, the latter two being the sixth and seventh volumes in "The Fabian Socialist Series."

THOUGH based on what should have been sound authority, our paragraph of last week regarding Dr. Belleli's book, 'An Independent Examination of the Assuan and Elephantine Papyri,' was incorrect. Instead of the portion beginning 'Chronicles of Papyri' should be read 'Chronology of the Papyri.'

DR. BERNARD BOSANQUET AND DR. WALTER LEAF have been elected members of the Committee of the London Library.

THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS is about to publish 'The Moral System of Dante's Inferno,' by Mr. W. H. V. Reade, who thinks that there is still an opening for students to modify, or even revolutionize, some of the common opinions concerning 'The Divine Comedy.'

WE are interested to learn that Canon Beeching's 'William Shakespeare: Player, Playmaker, and Poet,' which traverses the conclusions of Mr. Greenwood's recent book 'The Shakespeare Problem Restated,' is to have a rejoinder from Mr. Greenwood, whose work has been the foundation for a considerable amount of fresh controversy. Mr. John Lane will issue Mr. Greenwood's new volume immediately.

THE same publishers will issue shortly a new colour book on the Isle of Man by Miss Agnes Herbert, with illustrations by Mr. Donald Maxwell. Miss Herbert is the author of 'Two Dianias in Somaliland' and 'Two Dianias in Alaska'; and, being a native of the island, she knows her subject thoroughly.

AN interesting book promised by Mr. John Murray is 'Six Oxford Thinkers,' by Mr. Algernon Cecil, which offers studies of Gibbon, Newman, Froude, Church, Pater, and Lord Morley.

IN the February Sunday at Home Mr. W. J. Gordon writes on 'Landmarks of Protestantism in London Galleries,' with reproductions of pictures by George Cattermole, Marcus Gheeraerts, and Gerard Terborch. The Deanery of Westminster is described by Mr. G. A. Wade. The Rev. G. Wauchope Stewart writes on 'Popular Misunderstandings of Scripture Texts'; Sir Edmund Verney on 'Riches'; and an account is given of a little-known book by Defoe, entitled 'Religious Courtship.'

LORD ROBERTS has written an Introduction to a notable book shortly to be issued by Messrs. Seeley & Co., 'Among the Wild Tribes of the Afghan Frontier,' by Dr. Pennell.

A BOOK of interest at the present time will be published by the same firm, 'A British Officer in the Balkans.' It is a breezy account of a long tour through the disturbed States of Bosnia, Herzegovina, Montenegro, and Dalmatia. The author's impressions are the result of close intercourse with the people. Numerous illustrations are added.

THE library of M. Georges Hugo, which was sold at the Hôtel Drouot this week, once belonged for the most part to his famous grandfather Victor Hugo. One of the noteworthy volumes in the collection—in view of Hugo's fierce attacks on "Napoléon le Petit"—was a presentation copy of that monarch's 'Études de l'Artillerie,' 1846, inscribed: "A Victor Hugo, hommage de haute estime et de vive sympathie." This copy realized 1,000 francs.

MESSRS. PAUL ELDER & Co., publishers, return in February from New York to San Francisco. Promptly after the disaster of 1906 they erected a building in the new business centre of the city for local and retail trade, and now they are able again to concentrate all their departments in San Francisco. This shows how rapidly the ruin of the city has been met by American enterprise.

THE death in his seventy-ninth year is reported from Amalfi of the popular novelist Ludwig Habicht. His novels (among which are 'Der Stadtschreiber von Liegnitz,' 'Vor dem Gewitter,' 'Am Genfersee,' and 'Unter fremder Schuld') are brightly written, and show considerable inventive power.

THE Russian novelist and illustrator Nikolai Karasin, whose death at the age of sixty-seven is announced from St. Petersburg, was the writer of a number of stories of adventure dealing with the Russian conquests in Central Asia. As an artist he worked for some time for the best-known illustrated papers in Russia.

'MARIAGE AMÉRICAIN,' by M. Georges Ohnet, is to appear next week in Paris.

ACCORDING to the returns just issued by the German Universities, there were 48,717 matriculated students during the winter term, an increase of over 2,000 on the corresponding term of 1907. Of these 12,716 entered for philosophy, philology, and history; 11,392 for law (as against 11,900 last year); 8,737 for medicine; and 6,370 for mathematics. There is a decrease in the number of theological students, both Evangelical and Roman Catholic; while the students of agriculture continue to increase. At Berlin there were 8,641 students, Munich 6,303, Leipsic 4,418, Bonn 3,282, Breslau, 2,248, Halle 2,158, Göttingen 2,054, Freiburg 1,966, Strasburg 1,856, Heidelberg 1,841, Marburg 1,750, Tübingen 1,647, Jena 1,419, Würzburg 1,345, Giessen 1,196, Königsberg 1,191, Kiel 1,103, Erlangen 1,090, Greifswald 786, and Rostock 685.

ONE of the most notable features of the session has been the admission of matriculated woman students to the Prussian Universities. The number entered was 663, and there were in addition over 900 non-matriculated students ("Hospitanten") attending courses. There were over 100 foreigners, including 43 Americans, 35 Russians, 14 Austro-Hungarians, 7 British, and 1 Australian. The total number of woman students at the German Universities was 1,077, of whom 499 entered the philosophical faculty.

THE only Parliamentary Paper of general interest to our readers this week consists of Statistical Tables relating to British Colonies, Possessions, and Protectorates, Part XXXI., 1906 (6s. 2d.).

OUR notice of the Association of Head Masters is unfortunately not in time for this week's number, but will appear a week hence.

SCIENCE

MATHEMATICAL BOOKS.

Elementary Algebra. By C. H. French and G. Osborn. (Cambridge, University Press.)—In examining a text-book on elementary algebra we try first of all to discover whether the authors are amongst those who regard algebra as an end in itself or as an aid to the study of other sciences. We have no hesitation in placing Messrs. French and Osborn in the first category. Their method has been to study old-fashioned textbooks and old-fashioned examination papers, and give the clearest possible explanations of the processes and examples there found. The fault of the system is that it makes the pupil spend so much time on the manipulation of expressions which are virtually meaningless that he has no opportunity to learn to handle algebra as a useful tool. Any task less profitable than the simplification of elaborate fractions we cannot imagine. The divorce between theory and practice in this book could not be illustrated better than by the remark that, although quadratic equations are solved in chap. xvi., it is not until we reach chap. xxviii.—about a year later in the course—that we find problems which require quadratic equations for their solution. After this we were not surprised to find that there was not a single example of the application of geometrical progressions; that the chapter on variation and proportion ignored the preceding work on graphs; and that logarithms were introduced without any discussion of the method of obtaining them by the square-root rule, and dismissed without any applications of four-figure logarithms to problems. To sum up our criticism, we may say that the authors have been eminently successful in carrying out their plan, but that it is a plan of which we do not approve.

Differential Calculus for Beginners. By A. Lodge. Third Edition. (Bell & Sons.)—The third edition of this little book on the calculus differs from its predecessors, as far as we can see, only by the inclusion of miscellaneous examples and revision papers, which should prove of great assistance to the numerous classes in which the textbook has been adopted. Those who have handled the earlier editions will remember the outstanding features: an Introduction by Sir Oliver Lodge; a preference for differentials rather than differential coefficients; a judicious selection of examples, many of them interesting to the physicist or engineer; and above all a lucidity of treatment which makes the subject anything but dry.

Modern Geometry. By C. Godfrey and A. W. Siddons. (Cambridge, University Press.)—Messrs. Godfrey and Siddons are well known as pioneers in the movement towards the adoption of new methods in mathematical teaching, and are generally regarded as representative members of the Committee of the Mathematical Association, which has been remarkably successful in persuading examining bodies to give up their insistence on Euclid's geometry in favour of greater freedom of treatment.

The book before us is a sequel to the 'Elementary Geometry' by the same authors; it gives in a connected form most of the matter which is usually found in small type in appendixes to school Geometries, and includes also some useful chapters on 'Cross-ratio' and 'The Principle of Duality.' The discussion of the convention or "mathematical fiction" that there is only one point at infinity on a straight line will be helpful to the student eventually, although he will probably find it bewildering when read for the first time. The authors have omitted Pascal's Theorem from their course, and have not considered the construction of the regular pentagon, which we expected to find here as it was omitted from their elementary book. Their justification is found in their desire to keep to the schedule of the Cambridge Mathematical "Special"; but it is to be hoped that, for the benefit of other users of this excellent book, they will supply these omissions in the next edition.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Human Speech. By N. C. Macnamara. (Kegan Paul & Co.)—The volume of "The International Scientific Series" to which Mr. N. C. Macnamara has given the name 'Human Speech' explains the nature and action of the living matter of those parts of our bodies by means of which we gain ideas concerning the external world, and are able to express our thoughts in intelligent speech. Mr. Macnamara begins with the lowest forms of animal life, and carries his reader through the different classes, the diapason closing full in man when he deals with the highly specialized cells forming the frontal lobes of a great orator or metaphysician. The language is clear, the facts are accurate, and the conclusions are sound, the result being to show how great an advance was made by man when he acquired or invented the art of speech. Mr. Macnamara, as a former Vice-President of the Royal College of Surgeons of England, is familiar with the magnificent collection of human and comparative anatomy in Lincoln's Inn Fields, and he has drawn many of his illustrations and examples from that storehouse of specimens. Incidentally there are some good stories, as of the parrot who was able to formulate a simple sentence; and there is some practical advice upon the education of young children.

The Modern Steam Engine. By John Richardson. (Constable & Co.)—Mr. Richardson has dealt comprehensively with his subject, and produced a book which contains much information of value to the student, for whom, primarily, the volume is intended. He tells him what "horse-power" and "foot-pound" mean, and enumerates the "natural laws." This section on the natural forces is one of the best parts of the book, for, by means of illustration and analogue, the author explains the fundamental laws which the most ingenious inventor may not disregard.

The descriptions of the various valves, valve-gears, governors, electrical control, condensers, &c., to each of which a separate chapter is devoted, are well done and informative, and are amply supplied with explanatory diagrams and photographs, though some of the latter are by no means clear. The steam turbine is dealt with fully, the engines of the Lusitania and Mauretania being taken as examples of the Parsons turbine. De Laval's rotary engine is also described, as are others of which less is known. The chapter on 'Design of Details' is instructive, and should be read carefully by all engineering students, who will glean from it many valuable hints for designing the less conspicuous, but often the most important parts of an engine.

'Examples of Various Types' is a heading which, almost inevitably, leads to some disappointment, for the exigencies of space prevent more than a small number from being included, and the descriptions of each are somewhat meagre; the discussion on various systems of lubrication is out of place in this chapter, and should have come on p. 74. The method of equalizing the pressure on the rams of the pumping engines at Coolgardie is worthy of special attention, for the contrivance is extremely ingenious, and the space which Mr. Richardson devotes to it is well justified. The most useful of the 'Hints to Users' is the ten-page description of the indicator, which is complete and clear, and the value of this accessory is fully demonstrated by the example quoted by the author. There are useful appendixes on 'Thermodynamics,' 'The Properties of Saturated Steam at Various Pressures,' 'Areas of Circles,' &c. The book contains much that is worth study, but the proof-reading has been badly done. The whole of the illustrations want careful revision. Several of them are lettered incorrectly according to the text, though sometimes the text is at fault. In other cases the letterings lead only to confusion. On p. 278 the last paragraph refers partly to fig. 245, partly to fig. 246, without explanation. This is an example of the puzzles provided for the reader through the author's want of care; and Mr. Richardson has given us a problem in grammar at the top of p. 231. No doubt the solution will appear in the second edition of the book, which is almost sure to be called for.

MESSRS. KING, SELL & OLDING send us The Science Year-Book, admirable alike for its scientific summaries, and for the ample and well-equipped page provided for every day in the year, which gives details of sunset, maximum and minimum temperatures observed, &c. The ordinary man as well as the expert will find this one of the most convenient and satisfactory diaries that can be got. We have used the book for years with increasing satisfaction.

ANTHROPOLOGICAL NOTES.

THE CORRESPONDING SOCIETIES COMMITTEE OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION has selected for special notice twenty-one contributions to anthropology from the Transactions of fifteen local affiliated societies during the year ended May 31st, 1908. Three of these papers are in The Essex Naturalist: two by Mr. T. V. Holmes on deneholes, and one by Mr. F. W. Reader on a flint axe found at Pleshey. Mr. Meyrick contributed to the Marlborough College Natural History Society his annual anthropometric report, and also a paper on the practical difficulties in obtaining measurements of growth in schoolboys. Mr. St. George Gray was the author of a paper in the Proceedings of the Somersetshire Archaeological and Natural History Society on Maesbury Camp, and (jointly with Mr. A. Bulleid) of another on the excavations undertaken during 1906 and 1907 at the Glastonbury lake village. To the Dumfriesshire and Galloway Natural History and Antiquarian Society Prof. G. F. Scott-Elliot delivered a presidential address on the migrations of men, and Mr. A. M'Cormick a paper on the gipsies. The Perthshire Society of Natural Science published papers by Sir A. M. Mackenzie on prehistoric burials and by Dr. John H. Lyell on a new view of human descent. The other papers, each contributed to a separate local society, are by Mr. W. G. Clarke, on the distribution of flint and bronze implements in Norfolk, to the Norfolk and Norwich Naturalists' Society; by Mr. J. M. Mello, on prehistoric man in Europe, to the Warwickshire Field Club; by Canon Auden, on prehistoric man in Shropshire, to the Caradoc and Severn Valley Field Club; by the Rev. A. Hunt, on the pygmy flint age in Lincolnshire, to the Lincolnshire Naturalists' Union; by Mr. T. Sheppard, on prehistoric remains from Lincolnshire, to The Naturalist for 1908; by Mr. G. Benson, on an excavation at the corner of Castlegate and Coppergate, to the Yorkshire Philosophical Society; by Mr. J. H. Craw, on a cist and urn found on Harelaw Hill, Chirnside, to the Berwickshire Naturalists' Club; by Col. J. Sconce, on cup-marked stones, to the Edinburgh Field Naturalists' and Microscopical Society; by Dr. J. M. Macphail, on the Santals of Bengal, to the Royal Philosophical Society of Glasgow; and by the Rev. W. A. Adams, on the Stone Age in South Africa, to the Belfast Naturalists' Field Club.

In 1866 the late Sir A. W. (then Mr.) Franks presented to the British Museum a casket made of the bone of a whale, and ornamented on the top and three of the sides (the fourth being wanting) with various scenes, accompanied by Runic inscriptions. The fourth side has since been identified as a panel which is now in the Royal National Museum at Florence, and it is the subject of a communication by Mr. O. M. Dalton to Man for December. The scene is supposed to relate to the murder of Siegfried, and it includes a human figure with the head of a horse or ass, which Mr. Dalton illustrates by comparison with a similar figure in an eleventh-century Anglo-Saxon MS. (Cott. Tib. B.V., f. 80).

The Kikuyu of East Africa have six ages of man, and five of woman. They believe that ten "generations" only have lived since man was created. The Hon. K. R. Dundas gives in Man particulars of these ages and generations, and of the penalties that may be inflicted under Kikuyu law. Mr. H. W. Garbutt figures and describes two alphabet boards inscribed with Arabic characters from British Central Africa.

Folk-lore for September contains an interesting article (which might well have been communicated to the Royal Anthropological Institute) by M. Henri A. Junod, of the Swiss mission at Shilouvane, on the Balemba of the Zoutpansberg, and Dr. Haddon cites from it in Man further information relating to the copper-rod currency of the Transvaal.

Mrs. Florence E. Hewitt, wife of the Curator of the Sarawak Museum, gave in The Sarawak Gazette of October last a list of fourteen tabus for women, and six for men, observed by the Sea-Dayaks of Banting, and these are communicated to Man by Mr. R. Shelford. A correspondence between Mr. Lang and Dr. Seligmann indicates the necessity for an agreement between students of totemism more clearly defining the technical terms they employ. Father W. Schmidt, in a preliminary paper on Australian linguistics, divides the Australian languages into two main groups—the northern and the Australian group proper.

SOCIETIES.

ARISTOTELIAN. — Jan. 4. — Dr. Shadworth H. Hodgson, V.P., in the chair. — A paper was read by Dr. G. F. Goldsborough entitled 'Some Implications of Recognition.' The subject was suggested by recent papers on the subject of mental activity, and by the publication of an empirical view of mind recommended for adoption by medical men in preference to a metaphysical treatment of the subject. Dr. Goldsborough adopted the conclusion of Mr. Carr, who, following Hume, passed the judgment upon Idealism that, from the point of view of Idealism, a final or philosophical judgment on mental activity was impossible. After the judgment of impossibility, immediately a person began again to think on the subject, he was obliged to take the chance whether a philosophical judgment would be found possible or not. On recognizing the reappearance of other persons who had engaged in the pursuit of philosophy in the past, a predication of mental activity in other persons as objects became possible by the subject. This experience constituted the true foundation for the predication of mental activity. Two persons in union in this experience proved to each other that mental activity was no illusion. Through subsequent experience they could predicate that their experience of mutual reappearance and recognition had been an experience of union; and the immediately subsequent experience which appeared to enable them to do this was mutual pressure of one on the other. Pressure was realized as between the two persons, but the experience of between only confirmed the predication of the previous experience of union, and when, subsequently to the initial experience of union, which inferentially through pressure had ceased, the predication of the previous reality of union had only been confirmed. The experience of union could thus be predicated to consist in freedom from pressure, or rest. Union and rest thus became the foundations of the judgment of possibility for future philosophical judgment. In order, however, to render judgment on mental activity from these persons accessible to others further steps were necessary. The first of these steps was concerned with the problem of identity, which for the purpose of judgment might be confined to formal identity. When through the analysis of experience an agreement on formal identity was reached, the passage to philosophical judgment became relatively easy. Not, however, through two persons only. There was the connexion of past and present to be considered, and to be expressed through formal identity. For this purpose another person in union with the previous two was called for, who, through formal identity, could predicate knowledge of the past of the one who was passive object to the other's mental activity. The experience of three persons of this nature constituted the experience of communion, upon which all future philosophical judgment must be based.

MEETINGS NEXT WEEK.

- MON. Bibliographical, 5.—'Gabriele Giolito, Printer, of Venice,' Mr. A. J. Butler.
— London Institution, 5.—'County Council Finance and Audit,' Mr. A. J. Windus. (Travers Lecture.)
— Royal Institute of British Architects, 8.—'Public Abattoirs,' Mr. R. S. Ayling.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'The Public Supply of Electric Power in the United Kingdom,' Lecture I., Mr. G. L. Addenbrooke. (Cantor Lecture.)
TUES. Royal Institution, 3.—'Albinism in Man,' Lecture I., Prof. K. Pearson.
— Statistical, 5.—'Hospital Relief in London,' Mr. P. E. Braun.
— Institution of Civil Engineers, 8.—Discussion on 'High Speed on Railway Curves.'
WED. Meteorological, 7.30.—Annual Meeting; President's Address on 'Some Aims and Efforts of the Society.'
— Entomological, 8.—Annual Meeting.
— Microscopical, 8.—Lord Avebury's Presidential Address on 'Seeds, with Special Reference to British Plants.'
— Society of Arts, 8.—'Gothic Art in Spain,' Mr. H. C. Brewer.
THURS. Royal Institution, 3.—'Mysteries of Metals,' Lecture I., Prof. J. O. Arnold.
— Royal, 4.30.
— London Institution, 6.—'The Outlook for Britain,' Mr. Arnold White.
— Linnean, 8.—'The Genus Nototriche, Turcz., Mr. A. W. Hill; 'The Longitudinal Symmetry of Centrospermeæ,' Dr. P. Groom.
— Chemical, 8.30.—'Organic Derivatives of Silicon,' Part IX., Messrs. F. S. Kipping and H. Davies; 'Synthesis of Diurea from Urea,' Mr. F. D. Chattaway; 'Chlorine Derivatives of Substituted Ureas,' Messrs. F. D. Chattaway and D. F. S. Wunsch; and other Papers.
— Society of Antiquaries, 8.30.
FRI. Physical, 5.
— Royal Institution, 9.—'The World of Life as Visualized and Interpreted by Darwinism,' Dr. A. Russel Wallace.
SAT. Royal Institution, 3.—'The Critical Faculty,' Prof. Sir H. von Herkomer.

Science Gossip.

"J. A. OWENS" (Mrs. Visger) has in the press a book on 'Birds Useful and Birds Harmful' to agriculture, a translation, with notes by herself, of a work by M. Otto Herman, the Director of the Central Bureau of Ornithology in Budapest. It will be published by Messrs. Sherratt & Hughes, and profusely illustrated.

THE series of lectures on the pioneers of sanitary reform in the nineteenth century, delivered recently at the London School of Economics by Miss B. L. Hutchins, will be published by Mr. A. C. Fifield in February under the title of 'The Public Health Agitation, 1833-48.'

THE death of Prof. Harry Govier Seeley, F.R.S., on the verge of seventy years of age, removes a well-known figure from the scientific circles of the metropolis. In early life he was assistant to Sedgwick at the Woodwardian Museum, and made his mark by studying the fossils of the Cambridge Greensand. In time he became a leading authority on fossil reptiles, especially the anomodonts, and in the prosecution of his researches travelled in Russia, South Africa, and elsewhere. For many years he had held the Chair of Geology and Geography at King's College, London, and at one time was lecturer on these subjects at the Royal Indian Engineering College at Cooper's Hill. He founded and successfully conducted the London Geological Field Class. Prof. Seeley was a prolific writer and a remarkable speaker at scientific meetings, where his presence will be much missed.

THE death is announced from the United States of Dr. Wolcott Gibbs, for twenty-four years Rumford Professor of Chemistry at Harvard. For the past twenty-five years he had been professor emeritus. He received the degree of Doctor of Laws from five universities, and made many original investigations which have been fruitful of results, especially in chemical analysis.

MR. ELGIE, a Leeds astronomer, writes, with regard to the present absorbing question of earthquakes, that there is probably some connexion between them and unusual solar activity. Auroral displays are often noticed at the time of seismic disturbance, and such, he points out, was the case on the occasion of the great earthquake in South Italy in 1783, electrical discharges also being recorded. In that year a large part of Messina was destroyed on the 5th of February, but the greatest shock was on the 28th of March. Count Ippolito described it in a letter to Sir William Hamilton, who sent full accounts of the disaster to the Royal Society. Mr. Elgie quotes Darwin as having noticed in South America (related in his work on the voyage of the Beagle) that heavy rains frequently followed upon earthquakes, and that the inhabitants rejoiced at the prospect of their occurrence being a precursor of abundant pasture.

SOME remarkably low temperatures were recorded during the cold wave which passed over England at the end of last year. On the morning of December 30th, the exposed thermometer registered 3° at Swarraton, in Hampshire, 7° at Cambridge, and 1° below zero at Liphook. At Greenwich Observatory the lowest reading was 12°·1; the lowest ever recorded there was 6°·6 on January 5th, 1867. The weather for the whole year 1908 scarcely differed from the normal: the rainfall was 23°·8, only 0°·3 below the average for the past fifty years; and the mean temperature 50°·1, almost exactly the average. The greatest monthly rainfall was in July, when it amounted to 3·66 inches, which is 1·26 above the average for that month; the smallest in November, when it was only 0·76 inch, or 1·46 below the average.

DEFINITE numbers are not assigned to new planets for some time after their discovery, lest they should turn out to be identical with others previously discovered. But even then identities are still sometimes detected later; and an instance of this is No. 645, announced as a discovery by Herr Kopff at Heidelberg on September 11th, 1907, which now proves to be identical with Admete, No. 398, discovered by M. Charlois at Nice on December 28th, 1894.

HERR EBELL publishes in No. 4296 of the Astronomische Nachrichten a continuation of the ephemeris of Morehouse's comet (c, 1908) for the next three months. It is approaching the earth again, and towards the end of March its distance from us will be 1·26 in terms of the mean distance of the sun—about the same as at the beginning of November. At the end of April the theoretical brightness will be equal to what it was at the time of discovery. Its apparent place is now in the constellation

Corona Australis, and it will be furthest south on March 25th—little more than ten degrees from the South Pole.

FINE ARTS

THE INTERNATIONAL SOCIETY OF SCULPTORS, PAINTERS, AND GRAVERS.

OF the two galleries in this exhibition devoted to oil paintings, the West Room contains by far the larger proportion of notable work. It is admirably hung, offering at first sight the impression of a general level of brilliant refinement, and a collection of works very varied, but each distinguished in its way. Closer examination shows that tactful arrangement has evolved this imposing whole out of comparatively slender materials. But while we look in vain for work displaying that robust constructive power which might claim kinship with the masters of painting, there is a fair sprinkling of pictures which have a superficial charm, most acceptable in a drab world.

Of these Mr. George Sauter's enigmatically named Resurrection (172) is one of the most delightful. It exhibits a painter of peculiar gifts pushing his own personal qualities to a high degree of intensity—restoring to us the glamour and flashing beauty which a pantomime transformation scene offers to the eye of childhood. The plastic possibilities of the scene are unhesitatingly sacrificed to the sensuous charm of great gleaming sheets of paint, a-quiver with an impasto studiously free from any suggestion of detailed actuality, and soothing us by its monotonous glimmer of subdued light. With this picture, wherein impasto is used to give an immaterial look to the painting, we should compare the flower piece (169) of the late Vincent van Gogh, who used it to enhance our interest in the absolute surface of the picture—a surface wrought with unctuous elaboration. It is encrusted with metallic flakes, splashed with gleaming stamens which are encircled by creamy ridges rolled back with that perfect line which comes of flinging on to the picture an elastic trail of paint hanging from the end of brush or palette knife—a trail which thus settles on the canvas in the very act of motion. In the lighter passages of flower-painting in this picture, which are informed by a passionate sense of colour, such typically modern technical expedients are utilized to produce a piece of low relief modelling in paint, of considerable vitality in its eccentric way. But while of course far from literal, this modelling depends very much on nature for the suggestion of stem, petal and stamen; and when (in painting the vase and background) the artist finds that suggestion withdrawn, he pads out the rest of the picture with paint of a similar texture, but meaningless—an empty daubing of vague strokes, weakening the tenser portion of his work by a multitude of idle forms. If such a technique as this were to be carried to its extreme of brilliancy, it would surely be done by floating the flowers in a background of clear handsome lacquer, with an effect somewhat akin to those polychrome reliefs which the Japanese make by piecing together fragments of many carved materials on a dark wood panel. But to compass the transition between such brilliantly contrasting textures demands a power of supple design greater probably than Van Gogh possessed.

Both Van Gogh and Mr. Sauter show a strong artistic personality, so that their success in some sort excuses a neglect of the more intellectual side of painting—the higher qualities of form. M. Simon Bussy in his Lourd Crépuscule d'Été (177) might seem at first sight to be an example of the same neglect, as though he, too, were bent on reducing a picture to the level of handsome and luxurious bric-à-brac. Certainly he sets great and proper value on paint laid on in tranquil fashion, and the proper co-ordination of a few tones; but he sets great store also on line, and his conception is plastic, though as yet very imperfectly carried out. His form is strangely harsh, and by this we do not mean to find fault with the abrupt, clear differentiation of tone from tone which M. Bussy accepts as a condition of decorative suitability. What we would criticize is a monotonous and competitive angularity which is neither satisfactorily homogeneous, considered as flat pattern, nor, as plastic suggestion, successful in discriminating where a change of line indicates a change of dimension in the object portrayed, and where it stands for the effect of perspective. While it is thus imperfect, however (the foliage in particular seems to have resisted the painter's endeavour to bring it into relation with the rest of the design), this picture appears to us the work of a true primitive, genuinely engaged in solving for himself the problems of painting. It is much better than the large Vierge à l'École (139) of M. Maurice Denis, a dubious importation, the reputation of which with certain foreign critics must surely owe something to a pious wish to assist at any cost in the restoration of painting to its true function of wall decoration. We can imagine that the outlined cartoon on which this picture was based was pretty enough, and a little of this nice sentiment and arrangement survives, but so overlaid with false modelling and trivial colouring that the impression is one of affectation and pretended simplicity.

After these, the advance guard of theoretical painting, we turn to the work of Messrs. Pryde, Nicholson, and Orpen with less prospect of disappointment. In the order in which they are named they may be classed as attaching less importance to the intrinsic beauty of their painting, and more to the claims of actuality, Mr. Pryde obtaining a success of curiosity by the nicety with which, in The Doctor (189), he balances between the semi-Oriental ideals of, say, Van Gogh and the realism of Mr. Orpen. Mr. Nicholson's portrait group of The Earl of Plymouth and Family (66) is ruined by the standing figure which makes a strangely discordant upright line in the middle of the canvas; but his Behind the Scenes (211) in the next room is lightly and happily painted. Mr. Orpen's Young Man from the West (158) is eminently successful in a slightly theatrical fashion. It is surprising to find Mr. George Lambert (The Old Hunter, 180) engaged on a rather dull piece of actuality in the manner of Mr. Orpen. It may have value as a corrective of a certain flashiness which has spoilt some of his recent work, but we hope he will return to the statelier design which best reveals his peculiar talent. Among the other works to be noted in this room are the studies by Delacroix and Daumier (188 and 191), the still life (194) of M. Blanche, and a strong, sensitively painted head (193) by Gertrude des Clayes.

In the North Room the most striking picture is the Montreuil of Mr. F. Mayor, a powerful, lively piece of work, like a rather coarser version of the art of Mr. Wilson Steer. It is by far the best piece of work that Mr. Mayor has shown, and commands respect by sheer strength. Less virile, but of unexpected charm and freshness, is the art of Mr. Arthur B. Davies, a new-comer to London exhibitions, all three of whose pictures (but No. 224 in particular) show feeling for the delicacy and fragility of childhood allied to an equally keen instinct for beauty and directness of workmanship. He supplies the most welcome novelty of this year's exhibition. The paintings sent by M. Forain are disappointing when compared with his last year's exhibits, nor can the interesting Plage de Boulogne (258) be regarded as a worthy example of Manet; while the presence of a large commonplace painting of the nude by M. Caro-Delvaile in the place of honour in this gallery affords an example of misplaced hospitality to foreign work.

The sculpture in the centre hall is less—the drawings in the small gallery more—interesting than usual. Among the former the work which most attracts us is a small statuette, Femme marchant (351), by M. A. Maillol—very compact and alive. Rodin's gigantic head of one of the Bourgeois de Calais (335) looks coarse here, but any one who has studied at close quarters a cast of the head of the Colleone statue will be aware of the strange transpositions effected by distance and open-air lighting on modelling on this scale. His other contribution, Jeunesse de Minerve (356), is a suave and symmetrical rendering of a well-formed head. Neither the group of works of the late J. B. Carpeaux nor that of the late Augustus St. Gaudens is of very high intrinsic merit. Each on occasion did better work, and it seems hardly worth while to make a feature of them if their best things are not available.

Of the drawings we can only briefly cite those of Mr. Augustus John (8) and Mr. Hartrick (36), the lithographs of Jean Veber (22) and C. Léandre (38), the pastel of Mr. Muhrman (30), and the water-colours of Mrs. Jamieson (41) and (42). Of a large group of etchings by Louis Legrand, the drypoint Pediculture (76) is delicately incisive; while Mr. Crawhall's Circus Rider (67) is the best drawing he has shown for a long time.

The water-colours of Mr. Livens are at present more satisfactory than his oil paintings. In the former we are presented with an apparently simple structure which is yet sufficiently subtle to defy analysis. The latter (the best is in the balcony, No. 359) are not really more finely constituted, but are wrapped in the mechanical mystery of a broken and laboured handling, which deprives them of the clear-cut physiognomy of the water-colours, and is at bottom an irrelevant mystification.

MR. GEORGE THOMSON'S WATER-COLOURS.

THE excellence of this show at the Goupil Gallery will be a revelation to many who are probably hardly acquainted with the work of an artist who in all-round capacity has no superior among living water-colour painters. With two or three exceptions, each drawing on the walls is an extraordinarily bold and vivid summary of some aspect of nature, set down with the greatest directness and economy of means. On occasion Mr. Thomson does not disdain the defiant brilliance which comes of sheer jugglery with the paint box. Pisa, a City Gate (15), The Market-Place of Beaune (77), Pennard Castle (70), or again Pisa, the Baptistery (72), show him playing confidently with what would be vicious schemes of colour were they not applied to themes which give them the justification of fact, and were they not controlled, even at the moment of greatest luxuriance, by a habit of large design. His work differs, however, from that of other water-colour painters who are as brilliant executants (the late Arthur Melville may be taken as the type of such) by the spontaneous manner in which it responds to every need of the artist. Mr. Thomson is no specialist repeating with facility a prepared formula, but an observer of insight whose natural method of work lies in well-considered, but vividly direct execution. A spontaneous improvisation like Noon in the Petite Place (16), a compact, clear statement such as the Canal in Burgundy (20), the nervous tensility of Abbeville Towers (21), are as natural outcomes of that technique as the grey reticence of the River in Picardy (28) or the nice notation of a complex colour-scheme brilliantly set down in The Dining-Room, Windlestone (47).

The astonishing variety of these water-colours proves that this is not the mastery which prevents fresh research—that here, if ever, complete self-confidence is justified. Even so we must confess that the spectacle of so much unfaltering sufficiency is somewhat uncanny. We should like to see a little hesitation, some sign of the reverence proper to a landscape painter in the presence of Nature, compromising the steadiness of the artist's hand. Perhaps the most beautiful design of all, A Valley in the Dauphiné (55), has a little of such uncertainty, gives a hint of aspiration after something which just eludes the pencil, and herein is perhaps a promise of something still finer in the future.

THE WORK OF PROF. C. J. HOLMES.

THIS excellent collection at the Carfax Gallery has not the variety of aspect of Mr. Thomson's show, Prof. Holmes having apparently deliberately set himself to work almost on a single scheme, for purposes of thorough experiment. In some of the pictures, such as High Cup Nick from Appleby (1) or the impressive Rain of Ashes, Naples (24), he achieves fine examples of strong, well-knit colour; but in certain others (Nos. 5, 8, 14, 19, may be mentioned) he seems to have wished to underline the main features of his design by exaggerating the one or two leading differences of local colour, so that his colour divides into watertight compartments, too separate to react on one another in detail. The carpentry, so to speak, of his colour is thus assured, but it loses continuity—the free alternation of contrasting hues which makes of all colour only Nature's zigzag from light to dark.

CORNELIUS JANSSEN'S PORTRAIT OF MILTON.

It is stated in the Catalogue of the Milton Tercentenary Exhibition held at Cambridge last summer that the portrait of "John Milton ætatis suæ 10 anno 1618," which was sold by Mr. Edgar Disney on March 22nd, 1884, and has recently been rediscovered in the possession of Mr. J. Passmore Edwards,

"was painted in 1618, and is believed to have been one of the very earliest portraits executed in England by the young Dutch painter, Cornelius Janssen, who came over from Amsterdam in that very year and settled in Black Friars, London."

The words I quote from the Catalogue are not quite accurate, and have been incorrectly amplified in some of the articles which appeared in connexion with the Milton Tercentenary.

That the portrait in question is from the hand of Cornelius Janssen, that the painter was in London in the year 1618, and that this was in all probability the earliest portrait that Janssen executed are generally accepted facts.

It would, however, be rash to assume that he did not know London until he "came over from Amsterdam in that very year," as he was apparently born in London, where he was baptized on October 14th, 1593. The authority for this statement is the entry contained in the late W. J. C. Moens's 'Registers of the Dutch Reformed Church, Black Friars, London,' published in 1884, p. 38. It is there shown that "Cornelis f. Cornelis Jansz" (Cornelis, the son of Cornelis Jansz) was baptized in the Dutch Church on the date above mentioned.

This is corroborated by an archival register at Amsterdam of January 9th, 1646, in which the painter "Cornelis Jonson of London" gives his age as fifty-two. If he had been baptized soon after his birth, he would not have been fifty-three until the summer or autumn of 1646; 1593 may therefore be regarded as the year of his birth. This archival register is referred to by Woltmann and Woermann in 'Geschichte der Malerei,' iii. 663, note 3, and is reproduced in the National Gallery Foreign Catalogue, p. 292, where, however, Janssen's birth is placed in 1594 and he is ranked (p. xxxiv) as a Dutch painter.

There is every reason to believe that Janssen was of Flemish, not Dutch, parentage, and confirmation of this is again afforded by the registers of the Dutch Church in Austin Friars, in which is recorded the marriage, on November 27th, 1604, of Janssen's sister Clara to Nicasius Roussel ("Nicasius Roussel v. Brugghe met Clara Janssen v. Antwerpen"). That he worked in England from 1618 to 1643, and afterwards was at Middelburg, Amsterdam, the Hague, and Utrecht, and died at Amsterdam or Utrecht about 1664, is certain; but I can find no evidence that he was born at, or "came over from," Amsterdam.

Again, Joachim von Sandrart in his 'Academia Nobilissimæ Artis Pictoriæ (Noribergæ, 1683) refers to the painter as "Cornelius Jansonius Londinensis," and says:—

"Belgis propterea annumerari potest, quia parentes ejus in Belgico Hispanico nati fuerant, et ob tumultus saltem bellicos Londinium concesserant, ubi hunc deinde genuere filium."

It has lately been asserted in the daily press that Janssen "settled in Bread Street" in 1618, and that "it is due probably to this fact that we possess his portrait of Milton as a boy of ten." Such an assertion rests on no solid foundation. In fact, Janssen resided mainly, if not solely, at Blackfriars, near his brother-in-law Nicasius Roussel, goldsmith and jeweller to the king, and near his rival Sir Anthony van Dyck. Walpole and many other writers confirm this. In his 'Anecdotes of Painting in England' (edited by Wornum, 1849, p. 211) we are told that the painter, who was "generally, but inaccurately, called Johnson, dwelt in the Blackfriars, and had much business. His price for a head was five broad pieces."

Where and when this relatively second-rate artist was born would in ordinary circumstances be of little importance, except to the exact specialist; but it may be pointed out that in Bryan's 'Dictionary of Painters' (1904 edition) it is inaccurately stated that Janssen "was born probably at Amsterdam, but possibly in London"; but the correct date 1593 is given. "He had," the biographical notice continues, "already reached considerable celebrity in his own country, when he visited England in 1618"; and we read that the Hollis-Disney-Passmore Edwards portrait "was painted when Milton was only ten years old, consequently in the first year of Janssen's arrival in England."

Some of the correct facts of which I here avail myself were included by Mr. Lionel Cust in a paper he read before the Huguenot Society of London in 1903.

At such a time as the present, when we have lately been celebrating Milton's tercentenary, it may be as well to give publicity to the accurate facts as far as they are known.

MAURICE W. BROCKWELL.

A PORTRAIT OF TURNER.

January 9, 1909.

A FEW days ago I first saw a handsome quarto "Turner, by Sir Walter Armstrong, 1902," in which, as a second frontispiece, I found a head and shoulders portrait of that great artist, described on the opposite leaf as "from the sketch in water colours by J. Linnell, in the collection of James Orrock, Esq."

During the last fifty years I have occasionally come across a reference to this likeness, declaring that it was probably the work of some contemporary painter, sketched at a meeting or private entertainment; but as these surmises have at length crystallized into a positive assertion concerning Linnell, I think it may be well to place the truth on record.

My father, Elhanan Bicknell, of Herne Hill, frequently entertained at dinner a large company of the most distinguished artists and patrons of art, amongst whom Turner, but never Linnell, was often one. It being the case that Turner objected to having his portrait taken, on an occasion of that kind two conspirators, Count d'Orsay and Sir Edwin Landseer, devised a little plot to defeat the result of this antipathy. Whilst Turner unsuspectingly chatted with a guest over a cup of tea in the drawing-room, D'Orsay placed himself as screen beside him to hide, when necessary, Landseer sketching him at full length in pencil on the back of a letter. Landseer gave what he had done to D'Orsay, who, after redrawing it at home, and enlarging the figure to eight inches in height, sold it to J. Hogarth, printseller in the Haymarket, for 20 guineas; and it was then lithographed and published by the latter, January 1st, 1851, with the title of Turner's mysterious poem, 'The Fallacy of Hope,' at the bottom. Sixteen copies were included in the Bicknell Sale at Christie's in 1863. The Louis XIV. panelling of the room, as well as a piano inlaid with Sèvres plaques, are indicated in the background; and I may also mention that I was present at that party, which took place, to the best of my belief, about Christmas, 1847, or early in 1849.

Ruskin, who seldom admitted any blemish, even in the person of his hero, called this portrait a caricature, but it was nothing of the kind; I knew Turner extremely well, and I have always considered it to be a most admirable, truthful likeness; indeed, the only one exactly portraying his general appearance and expression in his latter years.

A. S. BICKNELL.

Fine-Art Gossip.

A NOTABLE addition to the Old Masters on loan at the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge, has been made by the Duke of Devonshire, who has lent from Chatsworth his famous Memline of Sir John Donne and his family kneeling in the presence of the Virgin and Child.

At the Chenil Gallery, on account of the interest taken in the exhibition of Mr.

Roussel's etchings, they will be on view till the second week in February. Many new drawings by Mr. Augustus John and Mr. William Orpen are also being shown.

SIR WILLIAM B. RICHMOND will deliver the inaugural address on the occasion of the opening of the first exhibition of the North British Academy, at the Academy of Arts, Blakett Street, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, on Wednesday, February 3rd.

THE Committee of the Walker Art Gallery, Liverpool, have purchased for their collection a large picture by Mr. Robert Burns, called 'The Adieu.'

THE death-roll of French artists has been unusually heavy of late. M. Auguste Mury, who was born in Paris in 1854, began his career in the Préfecture of the Seine, but eventually studied art under Rossin. He first exhibited at the Salon in 1876, and for two or three years devoted himself to scenes in the neighbourhood of Paris. He settled at Donzy in 1878, and until his death took a leading part in all the artistic manifestations of Nièvre.

M. ANDRÉ PERRACHON, the venerable flower painter of Lyons, who died in his eighty-first year, was a well-known exhibitor at the Salon for almost half a century, and was one of the founders of the Société Lyonnaise des Beaux-Arts, of which he was the first President in 1888. Examples of his work are in the galleries of Lyons, Toulouse, Saint-Étienne, and elsewhere.

M. AMÉDÉE BESNUS, the landscape painter, whose death is also announced at the age of seventy-seven, was a sociétaire of the Artistes Français. He studied under Cogniet, and was an intimate friend of Jules Dupré, François, Valadon, and Ropin, concerning whom he has written some pleasant memoirs. For a time Henri Murger lived under his roof. His work is well represented in various French provincial galleries.

FROM Marseilles comes the announcement of the death of two artists established there—Antony Regnier, a native of Aix, where he was born in 1836, and Honoré Boze, who was born in 1830, and exhibited at the Salon from 1864 to 1881.

THE new bureau for 1909 of the Société des Artistes Français is constituted as follows: President, M. H. P. Nénot of the Institute; Vice-Presidents, M. Boisseau and M. A. Dauvant. The Presidents of the various sections are: for painting, M. F. Humbert; for sculpture, M. Gustave Michel; for architecture, M. Daumet; for lithography, M. Hugot; and for decorative arts, M. Laloux.

THE COUNCIL OF THE ESSEX ARCHEOLOGICAL SOCIETY has sanctioned the reprint, in a limited edition of 200 copies, of its first series, consisting of five volumes, which have long been out of print, the whole stock having been destroyed by fire in 1873. Subscribers' names should be sent to the manager, St. Catherine Press, 8, York Buildings, Adelphi, W.C.

MR. BANISTER FLETCHER began on Monday last a course of twelve lectures on 'The Renaissance Architecture of Germany, Belgium and Holland, Spain, and England, at the London University, Imperial Institute Road, South Kensington.

AT the last meeting of the Royal Irish Academy, Mr. E. C. R. Armstrong read a paper on a prehistoric leather shield recently found at Clonbrin, co. Longford, which has been presented to the Academy by Col. King Harman. The shield, which was found nine feet below the level of the bog, is made of a solid piece of leather a quarter of an inch thick, and finished with a central oblong boss. Mr. George Coffey, who added a note to the paper, stated that in his opinion the ornamentation, which includes a curious re-entrant angle, had a magical meaning similar to that of certain bronze shields found in Sweden and Holland.

EXHIBITIONS.

SAT. (Jan. 16).—Baxter Prints, First London Exhibition, New Dudley Gallery.
—Rare Old Aquatints, Walker's Gallery.
—Mr. A. Wallace Rimington's Water-Colours of Italy, Tyrol, England, and Scotland, Private View, Fine-Art Society's Gallery.
—Royal Society of Miniature Painters, Fourteenth Annual Exhibition, Private View, Modern Gallery.
MON. Camisix Art Club, Private View, Goupil Gallery.

MUSIC

Handel and his Orbit. By P. Robinson. (Sherratt & Hughes.)

BURNEY was probably the first to notice Handel's borrowings, but the earliest writer who prominently called attention to the matter was Dr. Crotch, who in his 'Substance of Several Courses of Lectures on Music' (1831) not only gave a long list of composers from whom borrowings were made, but also in his organ arrangements of choruses from Handel's oratorios indicated in foot-notes particular themes or passages, together with the composers from whom they were taken. Ever since Crotch's time the subject has been more and more discussed, and fresh "robberies" discovered. Among modern writers may be especially named Dr. F. Chrysander, Prof. Ebenezer Prout, and Dr. Max Seiffert; while recently Mr. Sedley Taylor in 'The Indebtedness of Handel to Works by other Composers' set side by side the originals and Handel's versions.

We would first refer to the theory which Mr. Robinson advances concerning the Stradella 'Serenata,' the Urio 'Te Deum,' and the Erba 'Magnificat,' from which Handel is supposed to have drawn on a large scale. Sir Henry Bishop, already in 1837, attributed the 'Magnificat' to Handel, and so also did Sir George Macfarren twenty years later. The composer's biographers Schoelcher and Rockstro were of the same opinion. And now Mr. Robinson contends that not only the 'Magnificat,' but also the 'Te Deum' and 'Serenata,' were composed by Handel himself, and we feel that he brings forward many plausible arguments. He points out resemblances between the Urio and Stradella, and the 'Nisi Dominus' which Handel wrote at Rome in 1707; also resemblances between the Urio and Stradella, and Handel's 'Passion' of 1704; yet they do not appear to us very striking. Those on pp. 134 and 137 are not convincing, because the themes given can surely be traced back further than any of the composers in question. External evidence of Urio's 'Te Deum' having been the work of Handel is, however, strong. There are three manuscript copies. One, in addition to the name of the work, has simply "Urio" on it and the date 1660; while the differences on the other two show that the question of authorship is at any rate very vague. Our author thinks that Handel possibly wrote the music at the Castello di Urio, near Lake Como.

As for the so-called Erba 'Magnificat,'

Mr. Robinson gives both external and internal evidence in favour of its being Handel's. He mentions three men: Don Dionigi Erba and his two cousins, Benedetto and Balthasar. Writers mention only the first named as a composer, but do not refer to him in terms which such a work as the 'Magnificat' deserves. Hence we are told that Handel might have written it at the house of Benedetto Erba, who was an "Arcadian," and therefore almost certain to have met Handel.

But now a word or two about the internal evidence. Our author notes a short phrase—which he terms a "theme"—in the 'Magnificat' which occurs also in 'Il Trionfo' of 1707 or 1708. A stronger illustration, however, is offered in the comparison of passages in Handel's 'Gloria Patri,' which is connected with the 'Laudate Pueri,' and the Erba 'Magnificat.' Mr. Sedley Taylor in his work mentioned above gives three bars of a song in Keiser's opera 'Octavia,' produced at Hamburg in 1705, identical with three in Handel's 'Laudate Pueri' (1707), and therefore very similar to the 'Gloria' and Erba passages noted above. Mr. Robinson thinks Handel borrowed first from Keiser, and afterwards from himself. Some of our author's arguments and illustrations in favour of his theory are, as he himself admits, stronger than others; but he asks readers to consider the cumulative evidence, and those who do so will, we believe, feel, as we have at times in reading the book, almost persuaded to become converts to his theory.

With regard to Handel's other numerous borrowings, it is argued that the master made no secret of them. For instance, his anthem for the marriage of Frederick, Prince of Wales, with Princess Augusta of Saxe-Gotha in 1736, contained the first chorus, almost unchanged, from Graun's 'Passion'; and further, Handel introduced a prominent theme from the latter into his opera 'Atalanta,' also intended to celebrate that wedding; so Mr. Robinson thinks that there was a "strong chance of detection." But he says that the Prince "would be likely to know Graun in his boyhood," also that the Princess had "possibly been a pupil of Graun's." Suppositions of this kind, adroitly introduced, tell for the moment, yet on reflection one feels sorry that they should be mixed up with arguments which seem really substantial. We have mentioned the "fugue" theme, and here and there we find what may be described as comparatively weak places in the chain of evidence.

As regards the Kerl 'Canzona' which Handel introduced into 'Israel in Egypt,' we read that it must have been known in London, and therefore easily recognized; but that, again, is only a supposition.

With regard to borrowings without acknowledgment, reference is made to Bach. Mr. Robinson remarks that "some twenty concertos once supposed to be original works of Bach have proved to be mere adaptations of concertos by Vivaldi, Telemann, Marcello, Duke Ernest of Saxe-Weimar, and other composers at present unidentified."

But there is no proof that Bach ever performed them in public under his own name. Again, we are reminded that Griepenkerl saw the now-lost autograph of a movement based on a theme by Legrenzi, but without that composer's name on it. Fugue themes at that time were, however, common property. We read that there is "no trace of acknowledgment of the use of Handel's 'Almira.'" Mr. Robinson has a chapter showing what use he considers Bach made of that work, but here again there does not seem any valid reason why Bach should have written at the head of his score that in some passages he had taken Handel as a model. And once more, Bach introduced Rosenmüller's 'Welt ade' into one of his cantatas, though without acknowledgment. As Bach took it from Vopelius's 'Leipziger Gesangbuch' of 1682, is it not probable that the music was familiar to the congregation of St. Thomas's?

Musical Gossip.

AN ELGAR CONCERT was given at Queen's Hall on the 7th inst. Sir Edward conducted his new symphony. His reading shows much of his own individuality, and in so far is interesting, but on the whole we prefer that of Dr. Richter. Miss Clara Butt sang the 'Sea Pictures' in true artistic style. The orchestral accompaniments were admirably rendered under the composer's direction. Mr. Henry J. Wood conducted the 'Cockaigne' Overture, 'Three Bavarian Dances,' and the 'Pomp and Circumstance' March, No. 4.

THE BRUSSELS QUARTET gave the first of two concerts at Bechstein Hall last Saturday afternoon. Their programme included a Quartet in D flat by Herr E. v. Dohnányi, which they had played at a recent Broadwood Concert. It is a clever and interesting work, though perhaps intellectual rather than emotional. The last of the three movements of which it consists has changes of mood which render it difficult to follow as abstract music. Both the first and last movements of Haydn's Quartet in G, Op. 77, No. 1, are ordinary specimens of his work, but the Adagio and Menuet represent him at his greatest. The rendering of the whole was admirable.

SIR CHARLES SANTLEY has just completed his 'Reminiscences of my Life.' The book will be published by Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, and will contain an account of Sir Charles's life from early years down to the present time.

MISS AMY ATTHILL writes from Mount Crozier, Queenstown, co. Cork:—

"My attention has been drawn to your recent reference to Sir Robert Stewart's lectures on obsolete musical instruments as worth publication. Sir Robert's notes of lectures have recently come into my possession, as a niece of Lady Stewart, and it is my earnest desire to find both an editor and publisher for them, especially the lectures on ancient Irish music, bagpipes, &c., which constitute a record of many years spent in the service of an art and a country which he loved."

MESSRS. SOTHEY will sell by auction next Thursday a collection of autograph letters of Carl Maria v. Weber, Mendelssohn, (in English), and Charles Burney, portraits of composers and musicians, benefit tickets engraved by Bartolozzi, &c.

GEVAERT had named M. Edgar Tinel as his successor, and the appointment has caused general satisfaction. The new Director of the Brussels Conservatoire is an accomplished musician, and his oratorio 'Franziskus' is well known in Germany. From 1881 to 1888 he held the responsible post of Inspector of the Municipal Music Schools of Belgium. The ceremony of installation will take place next week, when M. Edouard Fétis, son of the first Director, and now in his ninety-seventh year, will, as President of the Administrative Commission, be present.

THE dress rehearsal of the new opera 'Monna Vanna,' music by Henry Février, took place at the Paris Opéra on Sunday evening, and the net proceeds, amounting to 1,000*fr.*, will be added to the fund for the sufferers from the Italian earthquake. The first performance for subscribers was given on Wednesday.

IN 1885 Philipp Spitta published one part of a Christmas Oratorio by Heinrich Schütz, which he found in the Royal Library, Berlin, and which had been printed at Dresden in 1664. The remainder of the oratorio was regarded as lost. A manuscript copy has, however, been found in the University Library, Upsala, by Herr Arnold Schering. The name of the composer is not on the manuscript, but Spitta's publication proves it to be the long-lost Schütz oratorio. Herr Schering gives a full account of the contents in the Monthly Journal of the International Musical Society for December last.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

SUN. Concert, 3.30, Royal Albert Hall.
— Sunday Society Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.
MON.—SAT. Royal Opera, Covent Garden.
MON. Mr. Julius Klengel's Cello Recital, 3, Bechstein Hall.
— Brussels String Quartet, 8, Bechstein Hall.
WED. Herr Kreisler's Violin Recital, 8, Queen's Hall.
THURS. Brinsmead's Popular Concert, 3.15, St. James's Hall.
FRI. Miss Leginska's Third Pianoforte Recital, 3, Aeolian Hall.
SAT. Chappell's Ballad Concert, 2.30, Queen's Hall.
— Hambourg's Subscription Concert, 3, Aeolian Hall.
— Open Concert of the Strings Club, 3, Salle Erard.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

COMEDY.—Penelope: a Comedy in Three Acts. By W. Somerset Maugham.

MR. MAUGHAM'S wonderful run of luck continues. His newest play bids fair to be amongst the most successful, as it is amongst the least artificial, of the series. It has all the qualities which have endeared its author's work to our pleasure-loving public—cleverness in technique, the element of humorous surprise, unflagging gaiety of mood, and an avoidance of anything that is disturbingly serious or more than superficially sentimental. At the same time there is more sincerity about this than about the author's former comedies—'Mrs. Dot,' for instance; the wit is less laboured than heretofore; and though there are moments in which the situations are tinged with farcical extravagance, yet the play on the whole has a reasonable scheme. Indeed, when once the dramatist has been allowed certain premisses which are a tax on the credulity of his audience, his story dashes along with a briskness, vivacity, and comic force that are irresistible.

Still, those premisses take a good deal for granted. Among the lessons which life teaches us are surely these—first, the hopelessness of the old seeking to make a present of their experience to the young; and secondly, the difficulty of overcoming natural instincts.

Mr. Maugham requires us to suppose that a young wife who has reached a crisis in her married life would act on the counsel offered by her father and adopt his philosophy of sex in dealing with the disloyalty of her husband. He asks us also to imagine that, after enveloping this husband for years in an atmosphere of enervating affection, she could suppress her inclination towards amorous unreserve and keep up a pose of indifference towards his vagrant fancies. If we can conceive of Penelope following for a time her father's prescription and accepting his code—that man must be starved of kisses to be made to want them, that he must miss affection before he can appreciate it, that he must be given enough rope to hang himself—it is another matter to conceive that a girl of her expansive, caressing type could resist her husband's first symptoms of repentance, and would not, by giving way to her feelings, reenact the old tragedy of showing too much of her heart and once more surfeiting his fastidious appetite. One more word of criticism. Although Mr. Maugham treats most amusingly, after Sardou's fashion in 'Divorçons,' the idea of the wife's rival committing all the follies of which the wife has been guilty—asking for signs of love, inquiring too closely into her lover's movements, and generally boring him by too exacting a display of interest—he forgets surely that a man does not usually tire of a woman while their relations remain platonic. But for once in a way we need not be sorry that the playwright has respected the conventions; on our stage comedy cannot be easily written round lawless love, and Mr. Maugham was writing a comedy.

What bright and genial comedy it is playgoers will have no difficulty in imagining who know 'Jack Straw' and 'Lady Frederick,' on both of which it is an advance. For one thing, there is freshness about its setting. The consulting-room scene, especially the episode in which the medical hero is visited by a fussy patient, who turns out to be a doctor's widow, and therefore pleads non-payment of fees, is one long laugh from first to last, yet has all the air of reality to be expected from a playwright who, as in Mr. Maugham's case, is here drawing on his personal experience. The invention of Mrs. Mack, a supposititious patient whom the hero attends when he wishes to see his Calypso, the solemn announcement of this sham patient's death, and the long talk between the two women on the topic, furnish drollery worthy of the author of 'The Importance of being Earnest,' and all the little feline amenities between Penelope and her rival are admirably managed. Just here and there Mr. Maugham drops into farce, as when he depicts the hero's moral indignation over the calm acceptance of his iniquity by Penelope and her family, and on this occasion the doctor talks rather too like a book. But ordinarily the dialogue, if somewhat ultra-cynical, is agreeably colloquial.

The play is a triumph for the art of Miss Marie Tempest in its most sympathetic yet brilliant aspect. Never has she shown herself more arch, more roguish, more fascinating, and every now and then she throws out a suggestion of pathos which is none the less affecting for being lightly done. She has a fitting colleague in Mr. Graham Browne, whose comedy is as easy and natural as hers; while, though Miss Norma Whalley proves disappointing as Penelope's rival, Mrs. Calvert, Mr. Bishop, and Mr. Eric Lewis contribute sketches that bring out happily the author's humour.

NEW.—Henry of Navarre: a Romantic Play in Four Acts. By William Devereux.

As an historical picture of the Court of Charles IX. and the famous "bridals of blood" and the events which immediately preceded the Massacre of St. Bartholomew, Mr. Devereux's drama demands scarcely much consideration. His Henry of Navarre and Princess "Margot" are little more than the conventional hero and heroine of romance, with a trait or two borrowed from the originals; and the whole conflict of Huguenots and the League is used as a mere framework for a story of sentiment and adventure. Regarded as popular drama decked out in the trappings of history, it is a respectable specimen of its kind, though there is a wide gulf between Dumas and Mr. Devereux. The latter's Henry, when he learns of the conspiracy directed against those of his faith, has but one anxiety, lest his royal sweetheart should be privy to the scheme; and a king whose mind was perhaps the subtlest and astutest of his age is supposed, when in imminent peril of his life, to subordinate all other thoughts to that of love. But our romantic playgoers delight in this sort of hero, especially when he obtains so gallant and jovial a representative as Mr. Fred Terry. They like also to see so beautiful an actress as Miss Julia Neilson playing the haughty and jealous princess, disdainful while she deems her future lord a lout from rustic Béarn, but submissive and tender when once she has found her master. Mr. Devereux provides such a spectacle of love in high places, and his first-night audience was more than satisfied.

Rutland Barrington. By Himself. (Grant Richards.)—There are actors who endear themselves to the playgoer by virtue of the impression which they convey of a kindly and genial nature. To this type belongs Mr. Rutland Barrington, who has been associated with so many of the Savoy operas, both at their original production and in recent revivals. To all his parts, nicely as they have been differentiated in the main, he has given the colour of an amiable temper as well as a considerable sense of humour. Such a conception of Mr. Barrington will not be disturbed by the record which he has just issued of his thirty-five years' experience of the stage, and quaintly entitled 'Rutland Barrington. By Himself.' His reminiscences are well stocked with stories that show a keen appreciation of fun, yet are free from even a semblance of malice. As might have been expected, the best of these anecdotes are concerned with the foibles of the two members of the famous Savoy partnership, Sir William Gilbert and Sir Arthur Sullivan. Sullivan, it appears, used to amuse himself by trying to catch Rutland Barrington at fault over the first rehearsal of the music of a new opera. The artists were expected to read at sight, and sometimes Mr. Barrington would make a slip. "Very good tune indeed, B.," Sullivan would say; "now we'll have mine." Every one is aware that Sir William Gilbert has a masterful manner, but it will be news to many of his admirers that the playwright at one time extended his lawn-tennis court vastly beyond the regulation size, because "Gilbert was a hard hitter, and found it difficult to keep the ball within the court as laid down by the rules." The drollest, however, of Mr. Barrington's tales deals with one of Sir William's experiences in New York. He was attending an evening party in that city, and had been cornered by a lady who paid the usual compliments to the Savoy duumvirate, and then, speaking of other composers than Sullivan, remarked: "I do so admire Mr. Bach's music" (she pronounced it Bayche); "can you tell me if he is now composing?" "No, madam," came the retort, "he is decomposing."

THE Cambridge edition of Beaumont and Fletcher has now reached the sixth volume, which includes The Queen of Corinth, Bonduca, The Knight of the Burning Pestle, Love's Pilgrimage, and The Double Marriage. The Editor, Mr. A. R. Waller, confines himself to the production of an accurate copy of the texts, and to a record of variants in a short Appendix. We have tested the print in several places, and find that it maintains the high standard of the earlier volumes.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—A. H. M. C.—A. J. P.—A. W. D.—C. J. H.—J. H. R.—G. W.—Received.
W. J. T.—W. H. H.—Many thanks.
No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.
We do not undertake to give the value of books, china, pictures, &c.
We cannot undertake to reply to inquiries concerning the appearance of reviews of books.

THE ATHENÆUM.

SCALE OF CHARGES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS

5 Lines of Pearl..	£ s. d.
75 " " " (Half-Column)	0 3 6
A Column	1 16 0
A Page	3 3 0
Auction and Public Institutions, Five Lines 4s., and 6d. per line of Pearl type beyond.	9 9 0

IN THE MEASUREMENT OF ADVERTISEMENTS, CARE SHOULD BE TAKEN TO MEASURE FROM RULE TO RULE.

Advertisements across Two Columns, one-third extra beyond the space occupied, the first charge being 30s.

JOHN C. FRANCIS and J. EDWARD FRANCIS,
The Athenæum Office, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, London, E.C.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

	PAGE
AUTHORS' AGENTS	58
BELL & SONS	61, 84
BLACKWOOD & SONS	85
CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS	59
CATALOGUES	58
CONSTABLE & CO.	64
DENT & CO.	64
EDUCATIONAL	57
ENO'S FRUIT SALT	87
EXHIBITIONS	57
FIFIELD	60
JACK	87
LECTURES	57
LONDON LITERARY ALLIANCE	60
LONGMANS & CO.	62
LUZAC & CO.	87
MACMILLAN & CO.	63, 64
MAGAZINES, &c.	58
MISCELLANEOUS	58
NOTES AND QUERIES	86
PHILIP & SON	62
PROVIDENT INSTITUTIONS	57
RELIGIOUS TRACT SOCIETY	88
SALES BY AUCTION	58
SANATOGEN CO.	60
SITUATIONS VACANT	57
SITUATIONS WANTED	58
SOCIETIES	57
TYPE-WRITERS, &c.	58

MESSRS. BELL'S BOOKS.

READY NEXT WEDNESDAY.

Demy 8vo, illustrated, 10s. 6d. net.

CANADIAN TYPES OF THE OLD RÉGIME (1608-1698).

By C. W. COLBY,

Professor of History in the McGill University, Montreal.

In this volume Prof. Colby has brought the writings of French authors to bear on the English, and vice versa, as no other writer has attempted to do. The result is a clear and authoritative view of the period of French influence in Canada, written by a Canadian who thoroughly understands the attitude of French Canadians towards their own past.

READY NEXT WEDNESDAY.

Crown 8vo, illustrated, 7s. 6d. net.

BUILDERS OF UNITED ITALY (1808-1898).

By R. S. HOLLAND.

An introduction to the study of one of the most fascinating periods of modern European history, in the form of lives of eight of the greatest figures in the struggle for Italian Independence. Eight portraits of much interest are included.

NOW COMPLETED IN TWELVE VOLUMES.

THE PROSE WORKS OF JONATHAN SWIFT.

Edited by TEMPLE SCOTT.

With an Introduction

By the Right Hon. W. E. H. LECKY, M.P.

In 12 vols. with numerous Portraits and Facsimiles, 5s. each.

(Bohn's Standard Library.)

Vol. XII. completing the Edition. Bibliography by W. SPENCER JACKSON, and Full Index, with Essays on the Portraits of Swift and Stella by the Right Hon. Sir FREDERICK FALKNER, K.C., and on the relations between Swift and Stella by the Very Rev. J. H. BERNARD, D.D., Dean of St. Patrick's. With 2 Portraits and a View of Woodpark.

READY WEDNESDAY NEXT.

Vol. IV. containing Parts VII. and VIII. Small 4to.

With 3 Maps and 2 Plans.

THE ITINERARY OF JOHN LELAND.

Newly Edited from the MSS. by LUCY TOULMIN SMITH.

This Edition will be completed in Five Volumes, of which Vol. I. (containing Parts I.-III.), price 18s. net, Vol. II. (Parts IV. and V.), price 12s. net, and Vol. III. (the 'Itinerary in Wales'), price 10s. 6d. net, are already published.

A NEW BOOK BY AN AMERICAN HUMOURIST.

READY WEDNESDAY NEXT. Crown 8vo, illustrated, 5s.

A HOLIDAY TOUCH,

And other Tales of Undaunted Americans.

By CHARLES BATTELL LOOMIS,
Author of 'Cheerful Americans,' &c.

BELL'S MINIATURE SERIES OF GREAT WRITERS.

NEW VOLUME READY WEDNESDAY NEXT.

Pott 8vo, cloth, illustrated, 1s. net.

GOLDSMITH.

By E. S. LANG BUCKLAND.

Full List sent on application.

THE STANDARD AUTHORITY. WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY.

TWENTIETH-CENTURY EDITION.

Revised and Enlarged, with an Appendix of 25,000 Words, Phrases, and Definitions.

2,348 pages. 5,000 Illustrations.

WRITE FOR DETAILED PROSPECTUS, with Specimen Pages, hundreds of Opinions of Eminent Men, and prices in various styles of binding.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS,
York House, Portugal Street, W.C.

FROM

BLACKWOODS' EDUCATIONAL LIST

CATALOGUES FORWARDED POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

THE BEST DICTIONARY.

STORMONTH'S ENGLISH DICTIONARY.

I. SCHOOL AND COLLEGE EDITION. Crown 8vo, 1,100 pp., 5s. net.

II. HANDY SCHOOL EDITION. 16mo, 1s.

Educational News.—"Possesses, in copious selection of words, and keenness as well as clearness of definition, high worth—as a concise, accurate, and full treasury of the most useful vocables in the English language."

"THE STORY OF THE WORLD."

PRIZE EDITION, complete in two volumes 3s. 6d. net each.

Adopted by the London County Council Education Committee.

THE STORY OF THE WORLD. In Five Books. By M. B. SYNGE, Author of 'Stories from European History,' &c. Coloured Frontispiece, numerous Illustrations and Maps.
Book I.—On the Shores of the Great Sea, 1s. 4d. Book II.—The Discovery of New Worlds, 1s. 6d. Book III.—The Awakening of Europe, 1s. 6d. Book IV.—The Struggle for Sea Power, 1s. 9d. Book V.—Growth of the British Empire, 2s.

Uniform with the above.

THE WORLD'S CHILDHOOD. Suitable for Standards I. and II. In Two Books. Fully illustrated, 10d. each.

BLACKWOODS' LITERATURE READERS.

Adopted by the London County Council Education Committee.

Edited by JOHN ADAMS, M.A. B.Sc. F.C.P., Professor of Education in the University of London.

Book I. For Standard IV. Pp. 228 Price 1s.	Book III. For Standard VI. Pp. 303 Price 1s. 6d.
Book II. For Standard V. Pp. 275 Price 1s. 4d.	Book IV. For Standard VII. Pp. 381 Price 1s. 6d.

Athenæum.—"The volumes, which are capably printed, consist of selected readings of increasing difficulty, to which notes and exercises are added at the end. The selected pieces are admirably chosen, especially in the later books, which will form a beginning for a really sound and wide appreciation of the stores of good English verse and prose."

FROM

BLACKWOODS' ILLUSTRATED CLASSICAL TEXTS.

CÆSAR.—GALLIC WAR. BOOKS I.—III. By J. M. HARDWICH, M.A. 1s. 6d.
CÆSAR.—GALLIC WAR. BOOKS IV., V. By Rev. St. J. B. WYNNE-WILLSON, M.A. 1s. 6d.
CÆSAR.—GALLIC WAR. VI., VII. By C. A. DU PONTET, M.A., Harrow. 1s. 6d.
CICERO.—IN CATILINAM. I.—IV. By H. W. AUDEN, M.A. 1s. 6d.
VIRGIL.—GEORGICS. IV. By J. SARGEANT, M.A. 1s. 6d.
VIRGIL.—ÆNEID. V., VI. By St. J. B. WYNNE-WILLSON, M.A. 1s. 6d.
OVID.—METAMORPHOSES (Selections). By J. H. VINCE, M.A., Bradfield. 1s. 6d.
HOMER.—ODYSSEY. VI. By E. E. SIKES, M.A., St. John's College, Cambridge. 1s. 6d.

Full List on application.

BLACKWOODS' ENGLISH CLASSICS.

MACAULAY.—LIFE OF JOHNSON. By D. NICHOL SMITH, M.A. 1s. 6d.
GOLDSMITH.—TRAVELLER, DESERTED VILLAGE, AND OTHER POEMS. By J. H. LOBBAN, M.A. 1s. 6d.
SCOTT.—LADY OF THE LAKE. By W. E. W. COLLINS, M.A. 1s. 6d.
SCOTT.—MARMION. By ALEXANDER MACKIE, M.A. 1s. 6d.
MILTON.—PARADISE LOST. BOOKS I.—IV. By J. LOGIE ROBERTSON, M.A. 2s. 6d.
BYRON.—SELECTIONS. By J. W. DUFF, M.A. 3s. 6d.

Full List on application.

Adopted by the London School Board.

BLACKWOODS' SIMPLEX CIVIL SERVICE COPY BOOKS. By JOHN T. PEARCE, B.A., Leith Academy. In 8 Books. 2d. each.
THE UNIVERSAL WRITING BOOKS. No. 1, No. 2. 2d. each.

BLACKWOODS' SCHOOL SHAKESPEARE.

Edited by R. BRIMLEY JOHNSON.

Each Play complete, with Introduction, Notes, and Glossary. In crown 8vo volumes, stiff paper covers, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

THE MERCHANT OF VENICE.	THE TEMPEST.
RICHARD II.	AS YOU LIKE IT.
JULIUS CÆSAR.	HENRY V.
MACBETH.	TWELFTH NIGHT.

* * * Others in preparation.

ENGLISH.

ENGLISH PROSE FOR JUNIOR AND SENIOR CLASSES. By the Same. In Two Parts. 2s. 6d. each.

PART I.—Malory to Johnson. | PART II.—Nineteenth Century.

HISTORY OF ENGLISH LITERATURE. By J. L. ROBERTSON, M.A. 3s.

OUTLINES OF ENGLISH LITERATURE. By the Same. 1s. 6d.

ELEMENTARY GRAMMAR AND COMPOSITION. 1s.

THE SCHOOL ANTHOLOGY OF ENGLISH VERSE. From Chaucer to the Present Day. By J. H. LOBBAN, M.A. In Two Parts, 2s. each. In 1 vol. 4s. Prize Edition, 5s.

ENGLISH WORDS AND SENTENCES. Book I., for the Junior Division, 6d.
Book II., for the Intermediate Division, 8d.

PARAPHRASING, ANALYSIS, AND CORRECTION OF SENTENCES. By D. M. J. JAMES, M.A., Gordon Schools, Huntley. 1s. Also in Two Parts:—
PASSAGES FOR PARAPHRASING. 6d. EXERCISES IN ANALYSIS, PARSING, AND CORRECTION OF SENTENCES. 6d.

LATIN AND GREEK.

HIGHER LATIN UNSEENS. By W. H. AUDEN, M.A. 2s. 6d.
HIGHER LATIN PROSE. By H. W. AUDEN, M.A. 2s. 6d. * * * Key, 5s. net.
LOWER LATIN PROSE. By K. P. WILSON, M.A. 2s. 6d. * * * Key, 5s. net.
LOWER LATIN UNSEENS. By W. LOBBAN, M.A. 2s.
FIRST LATIN READER. By K. P. WILSON, M.A. 1s. 6d.
TALES OF ANCIENT THESSALY. By J. W. E. PEARCE, M.A. 1s.
HIGHER GREEK UNSEENS. By H. W. AUDEN, M.A. 2s. 6d.
HIGHER GREEK PROSE. By H. W. AUDEN, M.A. 2s. 6d. * * * Key, 5s. net.
GREEK PROSE PHRASE BOOK. By H. W. AUDEN, M.A. Interleaved. 3s. 6d.
GREEK TEST PAPERS. By JAMES MOIR, Litt.D. LL.D. 2s. 6d. * * * Key, 5s. net.
LOWER GREEK PROSE. By K. P. WILSON, M.A. 2s. 6d. * * * Key, 5s. net.
GREEK ACCIDENCE. By T. C. WEATHERHEAD, M.A. 1s. 6d.
THE MESSENIAN WARS. An Elementary Greek Reader. With Exercises and Vocabulary. By H. W. AUDEN, M.A. 1s. 6d.

MATHEMATICS.

ARITHMETIC. With numerous Examples, Revision Tests, and Examination Papers. By A. VEITCH LOTHIAN, M.A. B.Sc. F.R.S.E., Mathematical and Science Lecturer, E.C. Training College, Glasgow. With Answers. 3s. 6d.
PRACTICAL ARITHMETICAL EXERCISES. For Senior Pupils in Schools. Containing upwards of 8,000 Examples. Second Edition, Revised. 3s. With Answers, 3s. 6d.
HIGHER ARITHMETIC. For Upper Classes. With numerous Examples and Examination Papers. Paper, 6d.; cloth, 8d. Answers separate, 3d.
MODERN GEOMETRY OF THE POINT, STRAIGHT LINE, AND CIRCLE. An Elementary Treatise. By J. A. THIRD, D.Sc. 3s.

MODERN LANGUAGES.

ALL FRENCH VERBS IN TWELVE HOURS (except Defective Verbs). By A. J. WYATT. 1s.
THE TUTORIAL HANDBOOK OF FRENCH COMPOSITION. By ALFRED MERCIER, L.-ès-L. 3s. 6d.
THE CHILDREN'S GUIDE TO THE FRENCH LANGUAGE. By ANNIE G. FERRIER. 1s.
A FIRST BOOK OF "FREE COMPOSITION" IN FRENCH. By J. EDWARD MANSION, B.-ès-L. 1s.
A PRACTICAL GERMAN GRAMMAR READER AND WRITER. By LOUIS LUBOVIVUS, Ph.D. Part I. Elementary. 2s. Part II. 3s.
PROGRESSIVE GERMAN COMPOSITION. With Copious Notes and Idioms, and FIRST INTRODUCTION TO GERMAN PHILOLOGY. By LOUIS LUBOVIVUS, Ph.D. 3s. 6d. Also in Two Parts: COMPOSITION, 2s. 6d. PHILOLOGY, 1s. 6d. * * * Key to Composition, 5s. net.
LOWER GRADE GERMAN. By the Same. 2s. 6d.
SPARTANERJUNGLINGE: a Story of Life in a Cadet College. By PAUL VON SZCZEPANSKI. 2s.
A GERMAN READER FOR TECHNICAL SCHOOLS. By E. F. SECKLER. 2s.
A HISTORY OF GERMAN LITERATURE. By J. G. ROBERTSON, Ph.D. 10s. 6d. net.
A SPANISH GRAMMAR. With a Copious General Vocabulary (Spanish-English). By WILLIAM A. KESSEN. 3s. 6d.

FORTY ELEMENTARY LESSONS IN CHEMISTRY. By W. L. SARGANT, M.A. Illustrated. 1s. 6d.
AN INTRODUCTORY TEXT-BOOK OF LOGIC. By S. H. MELLONE, M.A. 5s.
ELEMENTS OF PSYCHOLOGY. By the Same. 5s.

WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS, 45, George Street, Edinburgh, and 37, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

"LEARNED, CHATTY, USEFUL."—Athenæum.

"THAT DELIGHTFUL REPOSITORY OF FORGOTTEN LORE, 'NOTES AND QUERIES.'" Edinburgh Review, October, 1886.

Every Saturday, of any Bookseller or Newsagent in England, price 4d.; or free by post to the Continent, 4½d.

NOTES AND QUERIES:

A MEDIUM OF INTERCOMMUNICATION FOR LITERARY MEN AND GENERAL READERS.

. Subscription, 10s. 3d. for Six Months; 20s. 6d. for Twelve Months, including postage.

The NINTH SERIES of NOTES AND QUERIES, complete in 12 vols. (JANUARY, 1898, to DECEMBER, 1903), price 10s. 6d. each Volume, contains, in addition to a great variety of similar Notes and Replies, Articles of Interest on the following Subjects.

THIRD SELECTION.

BIBLIOGRAPHY and LITERARY HISTORY.

Translations of Galen—Books on Gaming—John Gilpin's Route to Edmonton—Mrs. Glasse—'Globe' Centenary—Goethe—Oliver Goldsmith—Thomas Gray—Greene's 'Frier Bacon and Frier Bongay'—Grub Street—A. H. Hallam's Publications—Harvey, Marston, Jonson, and Nashe—Hawker of Morwenstow—Heber's 'Racing Calendar'—George Herbert's Proverbs—Herrick—Heuskarian Rarity in the Bodleian—'Historical English Dictionary'—Hood's 'Comic Annual.'

BIOGRAPHY.

'The Starry Galileo'—Letters of German Notabilities—W. E. Gladstone—Sir Edmund Berry Godfrey—Duchess of Gordon—Duke of Grafton and Lord Thurlow—Thomas Guy's Will—Nell Gwyn—Serjeant Hawkins—Sir John Hawkwood—Sir Richard Hotham—Victor Hugo.

ECCELESIASTICAL MATTERS.

Genesis i. 1—Nameless Gravestones—Greek Church Vestments—Hagioscope or Oriel—Heretics Burnt—Hexham Priory and the Augustales—Holy Communion, Substitutes for Bread—Honest Epitaphs—Huxley on the Bible—'Hymns Ancient and Modern.'

FINE ARTS.

Gainsborough's lost 'Duchess'—Grinling Gibbons's Statue of James II.—Sir John Gilbert's Drawings in the 'London Journal'—Miss Gunning's Portraits—Haydon's Historical Pictures—Pictures by Sir G. Hayter—Hogarth—Holbein Portraits—Hoppner Portraits.

PHILOLOGY and GRAMMAR.

Caimacam or Kaimakam—Camelry—Cecil, its Pronunciation—Celtic Words in Anglo-Saxon Districts—Chaperon applied to Males—Chic recognized by the French Academy—Chi-ike—"Chink" of Woods—Comically—Corn-bote—Creak as a Verb—Crowdy-mutton—Deadfold—Dewsiers—"Different than"—Dive, Peculiar Meaning—Dude—Electrocute—English Accentuation—Ey in Place-names—Fashion in Language—Fearagurthok, Irish Word—Félibre—Filbert—Flapper, Anglo-Indian Slang—Irish "Flittings"—Floyd v. Lloyd—Folk or Folks—Foulrice—Frail—Gallant, its Varying Accent—Gallimaufry—Gambaleery—Gaol and Goal—Garage—Gavel and Shieling—Ghetto—Ghost-words—"Good afternoon"—Doubtful Grammar in A.V. and Prayer Book—Greek Pronunciation—Gutter-snipe—Gwyneth—Halsh—Hattock—Help with an Infinitive—Helpmate and Helpmeet—Henbane—Heron—High-faluting—Hooligan—Hopeful and Sangw—Huish—Hullabaloo—Hurling.

PROVERBS AND QUOTATIONS.

"Cambuscan bold"—"Carnage is God's daughter"—"Chalk on the door"—"Lug the coif"—"Comparisons are odious"—"Crow to pluck"—"Crying down credit"—"Cutting his stick"—"Who sups with the devil"—"Down to the ground"—"Dutch courage"—"Embarras des richesses"—"English take their pleasures sadly"—"Enjoy bad health"—"Fall below par"—"Farewell, vain world"—"Feggess after peace"—"Fert, Fert, Fert," on Italian Coins—"First catch your hare"—"Flea in the ear"—"Forgive, blest shade"—French Sermon in Proverbs—Familiar French Quotations—"God works wonders now and then"—"Gone to Jericho"—"Green grief to the Grahams"—"Grass widow"—Gratitude Defined—"Green-eyed monster"—"Heart of grace"—"Hook it"—"Hop the twig"—"Horse-marine."

SONGS, BALLADS, and NURSERY RIMES.

"Ask nothing more of me, sweet"—'Bailiff's Daughter of Islington'—'Beggar's Petition'—'Canadian Boat Song'—'Charlie is my Darling'—'Cherry Ripe'—'Comin' thro' the Rye'—'Dulce Domum'—"Gentle shepherd, tell me where"—"God bless the King!—I mean the Faith's defender"—"I dwelt in a city enchanted"—"I'll hang my harp on a willow tree"—"In the days when we went gipsying."

MISCELLANEOUS.

Acacia in Freemasonry—Adelaide Waistcoat—Adulation Extraordinary—Old Advertisements—Æolian Harp, its Construction—Albino Animals Sacrificed—Ale, Bottled, Burton, and "Lanted"—Anagrams on Various Subjects—Apostle Spoons—Athens, the City of the Violet Crown—Autographs, how to keep them—Bagman, for Commercial Traveller—Bank of England and Heberfield—First Lady Barrister—Birch-sap Wine—Ancient Boats Discovered—Bows and Arrows last used in War—Bread by Troy Weight—C.I.V. Nicknames—Originator of Christmas Cards—Beginning and End of Centuries—Clerks—Chancery—Chess Legend—Chimneys in Ancient Houses—Introduction of Chocolate—Twenty-four-hour Clocks—Convivial Clubs—Local Names for the Cowslip—Earliest Cricket Match—Death from Fright—Dutch Fleet captured by Cavalry—Standing Egg—Brewers' "Entire"—Earliest Envelopes—Epigrams and Epitaphs—Farthings Rejected—Feeding-Bottles First Used—Five o'Clock Tea—Flats in London—Flaying Alive—Franciscans v. Freemasons—Earliest Funeral Cards—Gas and Locomotive—Gates on Commons—Genius and Large Families—Gentleman Porter—Germination of Seeds—Slang for Gin—Gipsy Wedding and Funeral—Golf and Pall-mall—Goths and Huns—Guillotine—Gun Reports—Hair Powder last Used—Hansom Cab, its Inventor—First Silk Hat in London.

JOHN C. FRANCIS and J. EDWARD FRANCIS, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, London, E.C.

MODERN PHILOLOGY.

This Journal, the leading periodical of its kind in this country, will contain in the JANUARY Number an article on the authorship of Piers Plowman by M. JUSSELAND, French Ambassador to the United States. Prof. Manly, of the University of Chicago, some time ago announced the discovery of a composite authorship in this poem. No less than five hands, Prof. Manly believes, can be traced in the poem. M. Jusserand replies with a vigorous defence of the single-author theory. The Journal is issued Quarterly. $3.00 a year; Single Copies, $1.00; foreign postage, 41 cents.

CLASSICAL PHILOLOGY.

A Quarterly Magazine devoted to expert study in the field of Classical Languages, Literatures, and Archæology. The list of Contributors includes the chief Scholars of this Country, and many of those in Europe. The Journal is now beginning its Fourth Volume. Issued Quarterly. $2.50 a Year. Single Copies, 75 cents; foreign postage, 23 cents.

THE CLASSICAL JOURNAL.

This periodical is devoted to the interests of Classical Teachers in Academies and Colleges. It aims to voice their needs and aspirations, to keep them informed on events of interest to them, and to serve as a rallying point and a bond of union. Textbooks are reviewed promptly and carefully, and all events of interest to classical teachers are fully described. Published Monthly, except July, August, September, and October. $1.30 a year; Single Copies, 25 cents; foreign postage, 24 cents.

Address Dept. 63,
THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO PRESS,
Chicago New York.
For England,
LUZAC & COMPANY,
46, Great Russell Street, London, W.C.

ELEVENTH EDITION NOW READY.

Price Two Shillings net.

CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of Astronomy. Eleventh Edition. With 5 Plates. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Well known as one of our best introductions to astronomy." Guardian.

London:
SAMUEL BAGSTER & SONS, LIMITED, 15, Paternoster Row.

FIFTH EDITION, Revised to 1908, NOW READY.

Fcap. 8vo, cloth, price Sixpence.

ASTRONOMY FOR THE YOUNG.
By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Nothing better of its kind has ever appeared."—English Mechanic.

London:
SAMUEL BAGSTER & SONS, LIMITED, 15, Paternoster Row.

HOP PILLOWS.—"Goodnight" Brand.
Invaluable to sufferers from Insomnia, Neuralgia, Nervous Headaches, &c. Specially prepared, post free, 5s. from THE HOP COMPANY, 26, Denman Street, London Bridge, S.E.

For Acidity of the Stomach.

For Heartburn and Headache.

For Gout and Indigestion.

D I N N E - F O R D ' S

M A G N E S I A.

For Sour Eructations and Biliary Affections.

A Safe and most effective Aperient for regular use.

THIS GREAT SERIES IS NOW COMPLETE.

20 vols. half-roxburgh binding, 21s. net per vol.

Only a limited number of Sets remain.

THE MAKERS OF CANADA.

Editors { DUNCAN CAMPBELL SCOTT, F.R.S.C.
PELHAM EDGAR, Ph.D.

Advisory Board { B. E. WALKER, D.C.L.
Sir JOHN BOURINOT, K.C.M.G. F.R.S.C.
JAMES BAIN, D.C.L.
ALFRED D. DE CELLES, Litt.D. F.R.S.C.
NATHANIEL BURWASH, S.T.D. F.R.S.C.

Sir JOHN BOURINOT died, and Mr. WALKER took his place, before the Series was complete.

The Series has come into being to supply the need felt for a Work dealing exhaustively with Canadian affairs from the standpoint of personal effort. It is, in fact, the outcome of demands made by the people of Canada and those interested in Canadian development. The Edition consisted of only 120 Copies for the United Kingdom, and only a few Sets now remain unsold.

SIR FREDERICK HALDIMAND. By Jean McIlwraith
SAMUEL DE CHAMPLAIN. By Narcisse E. Dionne, LL.D. F.R.S.C.
LORD ELGIN. By the late Sir John George Bourinot, K.C.M.G. LL.D., &c.

EGERTON RYERSON. By Chancellor Burwash, M.A. S.T.D., &c.
PAPINEAU. CARTIER. By Alfred D. De Celles, Litt.D. F.R.S.C.
JOSEPH HOWE. By Hon. J. W. Longley, K.C. F.R.S.C.
GENERAL BROCK. By Lady Edgar.

WOLFE AND MONTCALEM. By Henri Raymond Casgrain, Litt.D.

F.R.S.C., Author of 'Montcalm and Lewis.'

MACKENZIE. SELKIRK. SIMPSON. By George Bryce, M.A. LL.D. F.R.S.C.

COUNT FRONTENAC. By William Dawson Le Sueur, B.A. LL.D.

BISHOP LAVAL. By Leblond De Brumath.

JOHN GRAVES SIMCOE. By Duncan Campbell Scott, F.R.S.C.

LORD SYDENHAM. By Prof. Adam Shortt.

SIR JAMES DOUGLAS. By R. E. Gosnell.

WILLIAM LYON MACKENZIE. By William Dawson Le Sueur, B.A. LL.D.

BALDWIN, LAFONTAINE, AND HINCKS. By Stephen Leacock, of McGill University.

GEORGE BROWN. By John Lewis, B.A.

WILMOT AND TILLEY. By James Hannay.

SIR JOHN A. MACDONALD. By George R. Parkin, C.M.G. LL.D., &c.

LORD DORCHESTER. By A. G. Bradley.

"A series of books entitled 'The Makers of Canada' needs no praise from us, and it is most happily inaugurated by Miss McIlwraith's monograph on Sir Frederick Haldimand."—Spectator.

"A very handsome series of historical biographies... When the twenty volumes prescribed are brought to a conclusion, the reader will be furnished with a survey of Canadian history passing from the early romantic period, when French nobles in brocade and high heels picked out amid rapids and pine forests peopled by wild Iroquois and couteurs de bois, down to the comparatively prosaic period of confederation and modern colonial expansion."—Times.

"No loyal son of the Dominion of Canada, however anxious for the assertion of her claims, can fail to appreciate the thoroughness with which her history is being set forth in the series of twenty elaborate monographs."—Pall Mall Gazette.

London: Published by T. C. & E. C. JACK, 16, Henrietta Street, W.C.; and Edinburgh.

JUST PUBLISHED.

GREAT STANDARD WORK ON SCOTTISH ART.

SCOTTISH PAINTING:

Past and Present, 1620-1908.

By JAMES L. CAW,

Director of the National Galleries of Scotland,
Author of 'Scottish Portraits,' &c.

Containing 76 Full-Page Plates,

Forming a Unique Series from Private and Public Collections.

One Volume 4to, (9½ by 7½), 500 pp., buckram, gilt, 21s. net.

Synopsis of Contents:—Introduction: Part I. The Past, 1620-1860; (1) The Precursors; (2) The Earlier School. Part II. The Present, 1860-1908; (1) The Pupils of Robert Scott Lauder; (2) The Middle Period and its Aftermath; (3) The Younger Generation; Résumé and Conclusion; Index.

The book is in an exceptional way the result of first-hand acquaintance with the subject, and is the only work which presents a complete and comprehensive survey of the achievement of the Scottish School. The Publishers are certain that it will become the standard work on Scottish Art.

"The book is worth the time (10 or 12 years) that has been spent upon it."—Times.

"It is rich in taste, in subtle discrimination, and a specialist's knowledge. Whether it be of Michael Wright, of Raeburn, Geddes, Orchardson, or W. J. Yule he writes, the author seems to have expressly specialized in every case."—Outlook.

"Genuinely illuminative, searching, and charmingly sympathetic.... He has been as honest and unflinching in his criticism of his contemporaries as in his judgment of those who have gone, and though some of his conclusions may seem disconcerting in their frankness, they are always admirably reasoned, and, however trenchant, they are never unfounded.... The noble volume is altogether admirable."—Glasgow Herald.

"Likely to be the 'last word' on this national subject for some time to come."—Scotsman.

"This brilliant piece of work."—Manchester Courier.

YOUR BIRTHRIGHT IS HEALTH. THE SCIENCE IN A NUTSHELL.

'Health is a Man's Birthright. It is as natural to be well as to be born. All pathological conditions, all diseases, and all tendencies to disease are the result of the transgression of physiologic and hygienic law. This is the science of health in a nutshell.'—DENSMORE.

Eno's Fruit Salt

IS NATURE'S ANTIDOTE FOR HUMAN ILLS
arising from the neglect or violation of her laws.

'Our Acts, our angels are, for good or ill, our fatal shadows that walk by us still.'

And such is life, so gliding on, it glimmers like a meteor, and is gone.'

CAUTION.—Examine the capsule, and see that it is marked ENO'S 'FRUIT SALT.' Without it you have the sincerest form of flattery—IMITATION.

Prepared only by J. C. ENO (Limited), 'FRUIT SALT' WORKS, LONDON, S.E.

NEXT WEEK'S ATHENÆUM will contain
Reviews of LADY PRIESTLEY'S STORY
OF A LIFETIME; and G. LOWES
DICKINSON'S JUSTICE AND LIBERTY.

THE RELIGIOUS TRACT SOCIETY.

AN IDEAL GIFT-BOOK.

Folio (16 $\frac{3}{4}$ by 12 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.), artistically bound in white cloth, full gilt, 16s. net.

THE GOSPEL IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

Containing 24 Original Coloured Pictures (mounted on stout Artistic Paper) by HAROLD COPPING. With Descriptive Letterpress by the LORD BISHOP OF DURHAM.

The Guardian says:—"This is an exceedingly handsome volume, admirably produced in all respects. Mr. Copping's pictures are clever as well as attractive, and full of sympathy with his subject. The colouring and drawing are delightful throughout. The Bishop of Durham's letterpress is by way of being a devotional commentary, and is simple and adequate."

The Morning Post says:—"It is a series of little Scriptural idylls perfectly illustrated and described."

The Times says:—"It is a fine volume."

The Christian World says:—"Altogether as a gift-book nothing handsomer could be desired."

The Glasgow Herald says:—"The remarkably fine pictures constitute an exceptionally interesting Biblical picture gallery."

The Standard says:—"The pictures are strong and vivid in conception, while the execution is marked by power and reverence."

JUST READY. AN ARTISTIC NATURE GIFT-BOOK. 10s. 6d. net.

A handsome crown folio volume, containing 24 Unique Photos from Nature (size of pictures 6 by 9 in.), each mounted on stout, dark paper, 10 by 14 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.; with Descriptions by Mr. PIKE, written from first-hand knowledge gained by tireless observation.

BEHIND THE VEIL IN BIRDLAND.

Some Nature Secrets revealed by Pen and Camera. By OLIVER G. PIKE, F.Z.S., Author of 'Home Life in Birdland,' 'Woodland, Field, and Shore,' &c.

The Church Times says:—"The photographs are wonderful. But it is not a mere picture book; Mr. Pike writes also with knowledge and spirit." The Globe says:—"His descriptions are as fascinating as his photographs." The Yorkshire Post says:—"Some of the photos are worthy to be framed." The Standard says:—"Some of them are especially fine." The Christian World says:—"They are exquisite bits of photography, most exquisitely produced." The Morning Post says:—"The naturalness of the photographs is charming." The Glasgow Herald says:—"The volume is very elegantly got up, and as a gift-book for any one whose taste lies in the direction of natural history, there could hardly be anything more suitable."

With One Hundred Pictures of Life and Work in Uganda.

THE BAGANDA AT HOME.

By C. W. HATTERSLEY, Secretary, Board of Education, Uganda, and Author of 'Uganda by Pen and Camera.' With 100 Illustrations from Photographs. Demy 8vo, cloth gilt, 5s. net.

The Daily News says:—"It is quite one of the most enjoyable missionary volumes we have read for a long time."

The Christian says:—"We seem to see the people living their daily life, and making marvellous strides in the path-way of civilization. Mr. Hattersley has the faculty for being entertaining and instructive at the same time."

The C.M.S. Review says:—"A very prodigal supply of illustrations embellish this book, and serve to make more real its graphic account of the Baganda as seen in the conditions which civilization and Christianity have introduced among them."

THE 400TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE BIRTH OF CALVIN.

READY IMMEDIATELY, crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 2s. 6d.

JOHN CALVIN: the Man and His Work.

By the Rev. C. H. IRWIN, M.A. With Portraits and numerous other Illustrations.

In July, 1909, the 400th Anniversary of Calvin's birth will be celebrated. Influential Committees have been appointed to arrange celebrations throughout the world. Calvin Literature will be in demand. To meet the need, this new and popular Life of Calvin has been written. It is the fruit of years of special study of the leading French and German as well as British authorities. It appeals to the man in the street as well as to the scholar; to the student of history as well as to the theologian. The following chapter-headings give some idea of the contents of the book: The World into which Calvin came—Calvin's Early Days—The Institutes of the Christian Religion; its Origin, Object, and Teaching—Calvin comes to Geneva—An Exile in Strassburg—Calvin's Character and Life—Calvin as Reformer—His Influence on the Reformed Churches—Calvin and Servetus—Calvin as a Religious Teacher. The numerous Illustrations are an important feature of the work.

NEW CHEAPER EDITION.

CREATURES OF THE SEA.

Being the Life Stories of some Sea-Birds, Beasts, and Fishes. By FRANK T. BULLEN, F.R.G.S. With 40 Full-Page Illustrations by THEO. CARRERAS. Large crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

The Spectator says:—"Mr. Ruskin would certainly have rejoiced in Mr. Bullen's delightful collection of marine life-histories, informed as they are with knowledge and illuminated by the creative imagination of the poet."

I. and II. THESSALONIANS: A DEVOTIONAL COMMENTARY.

By the Rev. A. R. BUCKLAND, M.A., Morning Preacher at the Foundling Hospital. In 2 vols. 2s. each.

"Mr. Buckland's Commentary has uniformly interested and delighted me."—BISHOP OF DURHAM.

"It is simple, direct, and withal virile. It has a wide suggestiveness."—Standard.

"To those who wish a clear, terse, sympathetic treatment of St. Paul's message, the book will prove most helpful."—Scottish Review.

GENESIS: a Devotional Commentary.

By the Rev. W. H. GRIFFITH THOMAS, D.D., Principal of Wycliff's Hall, Oxford. In 3 vols. 6s. per set (sold separately, 2s. per volume).

"It will prove suggestive to Bible students as expounding this part of Scripture in a spirit noticeably distinct from that in which it is usually approached by modern theologians of the critical sort."—Scotsman.

EDUCATIONAL BOOKS.

THE BIBLE HANDBOOK: an Introduction to the Study of Sacred Scripture. By JOSEPH ANGUS, M.A. D.D. New Cheap Edition, Revised and partly Rewritten by Rev. S. G. GREEN, D.D. 848 pages, large crown 8vo. Cloth, 3s. 6d.; or in half-paste grain, cloth sides, gilt top, 4s. 6d. net; half-morocco, 7s. 6d. net; full tree calf, gilt edges, 16s. net.

HEBREW.—A HANDBOOK TO OLD TESTAMENT HEBREW. Containing an Elementary Grammar of the Language, Reading Lessons, Exercises, and Notes. Edited by SAMUEL G. GREEN, D.D. Demy 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

GREEK.—HANDBOOK TO THE GRAMMAR OF THE GREEK NEW TESTAMENT. Together with a complete Vocabulary, and an Examination of the chief New Testament Synonyms. Illustrated by numerous Examples and Comments. By the Rev. S. G. GREEN, D.D. 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.

GREEK TESTAMENT, A COMPLETE VOCABULARY OF THE. With a Collection of Synonyms. Reprinted from the 'Handbook to the Grammar of the Greek Testament.' By SAMUEL G. GREEN, D.D. Demy 8vo, cloth gilt, 2s.

GREEK.—A BRIEF INTRODUCTION TO NEW TESTAMENT GREEK. By the Rev. S. G. GREEN, D.D. Present Day Primers, No. 4. Cloth, 1s. Key to the above Introduction. By Prof. S. W. GREEN, M.A. 1s. These two volumes bound together, cloth, 1s. 6d.

BIBLICAL ATLAS AND SCRIPTURE GAZETTEER. New and Revised Edition. Maps by HENRY COURTIER, F.R.G.S., and a very elaborate Gazetteer, giving information about nearly every place which is marked upon the Maps, with Scripture References, &c. Cloth, 2s. 6d. net.

EADIE'S BIBLICAL CYCLOPÆDIA. A Dictionary of Eastern Antiquities, Geography, Natural History, Sacred Animals, and Biography. Theology and Biblical Literature illustrative of the Old and New Testaments. New Edition, thoroughly Revised from the Original Text of JOHN EADIE, D.D. LL.D., with numerous Illustrations, 4 Coloured Maps, and 27 beautiful Plates. Small royal 8vo, cloth gilt, 10s. 6d.; half persian, 16s.

A HANDBOOK OF CHURCH HISTORY. From the Apostolic Era to the Dawn of the Reformation. By SAMUEL G. GREEN, D.D., Author of 'A Handbook of Old Testament Hebrew,' &c. With Full Dates, Chronological Tables, and Index. 640 pp. 6s. net.

THE SCHOOL AND HOME SERIES

1. STORIES OF ANIMALS. By M. T. YATES, LL.D. With 39 Illustrations. 192 pp. crown 8vo, cloth, 1s. For children under ten years of age.

2. ANIMAL LIFE: Stories of Natural History. By M. T. YATES, LL.D. With 102 Illustrations. 256 pp. crown 8vo, cloth, 1s. 6d. For boys and girls over ten years of age.

3. STORIES OF THE SEASONS. By M. T. YATES, LL.D. With numerous Illustrations. 192 pp. crown 8vo, cloth, 1s. For children under ten years of age.

4. ROUND THE SUN. By M. T. Yates, LL.D. With numerous Illustrations. 256 pp. crown 8vo, cloth, 1s. 6d. For boys and girls over ten.

THE NATION READERS.

An entirely new Series of English Reading Books. With Coloured Pictures. Type large, bold, and clear; selected to obviate strain upon the children's eyes. The Pictures, admirably reproduced in Three Colours, are intimately connected with the Text, to correlate symbol, sound, and idea to the very fullest extent.

THE NATION PRIMER I. 32 pp. With 65 Coloured Pictures. Price 4d. Three-letter words and short vowel sounds.

THE NATION PRIMER II. 48 pp. With 68 Coloured Pictures. Price 5d. Four-letter words, short vowel sounds and double consonants and simple long vowel sounds.

LONDON: 4, BOUVERIE STREET, and 65, ST. PAUL'S CHURCHYARD, E.C.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 4239.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 23, 1909.

PRICE
THREEPENCE.
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER.

Lectures.

ROYAL INSTITUTION OF GREAT BRITAIN,
ALBEMARLE STREET PICCADILLY, W.

Prof. Sir HUBERT VON HERKOMER, C.V.O. D.C.L. LL.D. R.A., will THIS DAY (SATURDAY), January 23, at 3 o'clock, begin a COURSE of TWO LECTURES on (1) 'The Critical Faculty'; (2) 'Sight and Seeing.'

Subscription to this Course Half-a-Guinea; to all the Courses in the Season, Two Guineas.

Exhibitions.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF ARTS.
WINTER EXHIBITION.

Open from 9 A.M. to 6 P.M. Admission 1s.
Catalogue, 6d. Season Ticket, 5s.

MR. PUNCH'S PAGEANT, 1841-1908. Famous Jokes, Famous Cartoons, Famous Punch Relics, including the FAMOUS ROUND TABLE. 10-6. Admission 1s.
THE LEICESTER GALLERIES, Leicester Square.

Provident Institutions.

THE BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Founded 1837.

Patron—HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

Invested Capital, 30,000l.

A UNIQUE INVESTMENT
Offered to London Booksellers and their Assistants.

A young man or woman of twenty-five can invest the sum of Twenty Guineas (or its equivalent by instalments), and obtain the right to participate in the following advantages:—

FIRST. Freedom from want in time of Adversity as long as need exists.

SECOND. Permanent Relief in Old Age.

THIRD. Medical Advice by eminent Physicians and Surgeons.

FOURTH. A Cottage in the Country (Abbots Langley, Hertfordshire) for aged Members, with garden produce, coal, and medical attendance free, in addition to an annuity.

FIFTH. A furnished house in the same Retreat at Abbots Langley for the use of Members and their families for holidays or during convalescence.

SIXTH. A contribution towards Funeral expenses when it is needed.

SEVENTH. All these are available not for Members only, but also for their wives or widows and young children.

EIGHTH. The payment of the subscriptions confers an absolute right to these benefits in all cases of need.

For further information apply to the Secretary MR. GEORGE LARNER, 28, Paternoster Row E.C.

NEWSVENDORS' BENEVOLENT AND PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Founded 1839.

Funds exceed 27,000l.

Office: 15 and 16, Farringdon Street, London, E.C.

Patron:

The Right Hon. THE EARL OF ROSEBERY, K.G. K.T.

President:

The Lord GLENESK.

Treasurer:

THE LONDON AND WESTMINSTER BANK, LIMITED.

OBJECTS.—This Institution was established in 1839 in the City of London, under the Presidency of the late Alderman Harmer, for granting Pensions and Temporary Assistance to principals and assistants engaged as vendors of Newspapers.

MEMBERSHIP.—Every Man or Woman throughout the United Kingdom, whether Publisher, Wholesaler, Retailer, Employer, or Employed, is entitled to become a Member of this Institution, and enjoy its benefits upon payment of Five Shillings annually, or Three Guineas for life, provided that he or she is engaged in the sale of Newspapers, and such Members who thus contribute secure priority of consideration in the event of their needing aid from the Institution.

PENSIONS.—The Annuity now number Thirty-six, the Men receiving 25l. and the Women 20l. per annum each.

The "Royal Victoria Pension Fund," commemorating the great advantages the News Trade enjoyed under the rule of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, provides 20l. a year each for Six Widows of News-vendors.

The "Francis Fund" provides Pensions for One Man, 25l., and One Woman 20l., and was specially subscribed in memory of the late John Francis, who died on April 6, 1882, and was for more than fifty years Publisher of the Athenæum. He took an active and leading part throughout the whole period of the agitation for the repeal of the various then existing "Taxes on Knowledge," and was for very many years a staunch supporter of this Institution.

The "Horace Marshall Pension Fund" is the gift of the late Mr. Horace Brooks Marshall. The employees of that firm have primary right of election to its benefits.

The "Herbert Lloyd Pension Fund" provides 25l. per annum for one man, in perpetual and grateful memory of Mr. Herbert Lloyd, who died May 12, 1899.

The principal features of the Rules governing election to all Pensions are, that each Candidate shall have been (1) a Member of the Institution for not less than ten years preceding application; (2) not less than fifty-five years of age; (3) engaged in the sale of Newspapers for at least ten years.

RELIEF.—Temporary relief is given in cases of distress, not only to Members of the Institution, but to News-vendors or their servants who may be recommended for assistance by Members of the Institution. Inquiry is made in such cases by Visiting Committees, and relief is awarded in accordance with the merits and requirements of each case.

W. WILKIE JONES Secretary.

Educational.

MISS DREWRY'S COURSES of LECTURES and CLASSES on ENGLISH LANGUAGE and LITERATURE will BEGIN again in the LAST WEEK of JANUARY.—For particulars apply by letter, 143, King Henry's Road, London, N.W.

CHRIST'S COLLEGE, BLACKHEATH, S.E.

F. W. AVELING, M.A. B.Sc.
Preparation for Universities and Professions.
Stress on Modern Languages and Science.

TUITION BY CORRESPONDENCE.—For all

Exams. in Classics, Modern Languages, Mathematics, Science, Logic, &c. Highly qualified Staff.—Address Mr. J. CHARLES-TON, B.A., Burlington Correspondence College, Birkbeck Bank Chambers, London, W.C.

REDUCED FEES.—Education in the Country (near London).—To FILL VACANCIES in a FINISHING SCHOOL of the first style (over 500 feet above sea; excellent Masters. Home comforts: Outdoor Games; extensive Grounds: Riding) an inclusive Educational Fee of 100 Guineas will be accepted for PUPILS ENTERING IN JANUARY.—B.A., care of Gabbitts, Thring & Co., 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

WEYBRIDGE LADIES' SCHOOL, SURREY.

Miss E. DAWES, M.A. D.Lit.Lond., Classical Scholar, Girton. Refined Home. Thorough Education and Physical Care. Good Grounds, position high, and one of the healthiest in England.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, CIRENCESTER. (Founded 1845. Reorganized 1908.)

Patron—H.M. KING EDWARD VII.

Chairman—LORD MORETON.

For Landowners, Land Agents, Surveyors, Agriculturists, Intending Colonists, &c.

FARMING AND COLONIAL BRANCH.

ESTATE MANAGEMENT AND FORESTRY BRANCH.

For Prospectus of Curriculum, Fees, Entrance Exhibitions, Scholarships, Diplomas, &c., apply to THE PRINCIPAL.

EDUCATION.

Parents or Guardians desiring accurate information relative to the CHOICE of SCHOOLS for BOYS or GIRLS or

TUTORS in England or Abroad

are invited to call upon or send fully detailed particulars to

MESSRS. GABBITS, THRING & CO.,

who for more than thirty years have been closely in touch with the leading Educational Establishments.

Advice, free of charge, is given by Mr. THRING, Nephew of the late Head Master of Uppingham, 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

Situations Vacant.

RHODES UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, GRAHAMSTOWN, CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

Applications are invited for a LECTURESHIP in the DEPARTMENT OF CLASSICS.

Salary 300l. per annum.

Further particulars may be obtained from F. I. WYLIE, Esq., 9, South Parks Road, Oxford, to whom applications, with Testimonials, should be sent on or before MONDAY, February 1.

The successful Candidate will be required to enter upon his duties at Grahamstown on APRIL 15, 1909.

HALSTEAD GRAMMAR SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

SECONDARY AND TECHNICAL DAY SCHOOL WITH PROBABLE PUPIL-TEACHERS' CENTRE ATTACHED.

WANTED a fully qualified LADY PRINCIPAL for the new SECONDARY and TECHNICAL DAY SCHOOL at HALSTEAD, ESSEX.

The Lady appointed must be a Graduate of one of the Universities of the United Kingdom, or have passed an examination equivalent to that for any such Degree.

Salary 170l. with three annual increments of 10l. each and a Capitation Grant of 12l. on the first 50 paying Scholars, and 10s. for each paying Scholar after that number.

Applications must be made on Forms, which will be supplied by me, and must be sent in not later than FEBRUARY 17, 1909, to me the undersigned.

ROBERT MANTON, Clerk to the Governors.

Halstead, Essex.

COUNTY OF LONDON.

The LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL invites applications for the undermentioned posts:—

(1) LADY SUPERINTENDENT of a TEMPORARY TRADE SCHOOL for GIRLS to be accommodated in the L.C.C. HAMMER-SMITH SCHOOL of ARTS and CRAFTS, LIME GROVE, SHEPHERD'S BUSH, W. Salary, 200l. a year, rising by annual increments of 10l. to 300l. a year. The appointed Candidate will be required to teach English Subjects. Preference will be given to Candidates possessing a knowledge of Industrial Conditions.

(2) ART MISTRESS to give half-time to each of the TRADE SCHOOLS for GIRLS, (i) at QUEEN SQUARE, BLOOMSBURY, W.C., and (ii) at the L.C.C. HAMMERSMITH SCHOOL of ARTS and CRAFTS. Salary 120l. a year, rising by annual increments of 5l. to 150l. a year. Applicants must have had experience in Design for Industrial purposes.

Applications should be made on the Official Form, to be obtained, together with particulars of the appointment, from the Education Officer, London County Council Education Offices, Victoria Embankment, W.C., to whom they must be returned not later than 11 A.M. on FEBRUARY 6, 1909, accompanied by copies of three Testimonials of recent date. All communications on the subject must be endorsed T1, and a stamped addressed footslop envelope must be enclosed. Canvassing, either directly or indirectly, will be held to be a disqualification for employment.

G. L. GOMME, Clerk of the London County Council.

Education Offices, Victoria Embankment, W.C., January 21, 1909.

Situations Wanted.

A LADY requires a POST as PRIVATE SECRETARY. Oxford History Schools. Knowledge of French and German. Trained for Private Secretarial Work and Special Indexing by Miss Petherbridge, The Secretarial Bureau, 52A, Conduit Street, W.—Apply Miss WARNER, Rydal, Woodford Green.

Yearly Subscription, free by post, Inland, 15s. 3d.; Foreign, 18s. Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class matter.

THE ATHENÆUM is published on FRIDAY AFTERNOON at 2 o'clock.

THE BOROUGH LIBRARIAN of ST.

PANCRAS, Mr. Henry Bond (who, owing to the decision of the Borough Council not to proceed for some time with the erection of other Libraries, will shortly be engaged only as a half-time Officer) desires an additional appointment in or near London as LIBRARIAN, PRIVATE SECRETARY (preferably with Literary Worker or Owner of large Library), or with Publisher or large Bookseller. He is experienced in Cataloguing, Classifying, Book-Purchasing, and all other Departments of Library Work, as well as in Editorial and Secretarial Work. Having Organized the Public Libraries of St. Pancras, Plumstead, Woolwich, Lincoln, and Kendal, Mr. Bond is also prepared to advise Library Authorities in the establishment of New Libraries.—Address 98, Cranley Gardens, Muswell Hill, N.

ADVERTISER, with ten years' experience of Literary and Commercial sides of Publishing, and knowledge of French, German, Italian, and Spanish, desires POST in Publisher's Office, or as Librarian, or as Assistant to Author.—Apply R. S. S., Box 1560, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

A YOUNG GENTLEMAN, with Literary and Artistic Tastes, and a thorough knowledge of Spanish, Italian, and French, desires EMPLOYMENT, Secretarial or other. Shorthand and Type-Writing. Good references.—Address ALPHA care Davies & Co., Advertising Agents, Finch Lane, Cornhill.

SHORTHAND TYPIST is OPEN to take an ENGAGEMENT after lengthy and satisfactory employment in well-known Office of Literary Paper. Used to long hours and continuous work. Personal reference will be given by present Employer. Salary 25s. to commence.—Apply Box 1444, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

ADVERTISER, with ripe experience in all details of Publishing, Literary as well as Commercial, desires ENGAGEMENT in any Department. Excellent References.—Box 1386, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Miscellaneous.

GRANTS to the value of 350l. will be made in JUNE NEXT for TRAINING NEEDY YOUNG GENTLE-WOMEN in ways of earning a living.—Application Forms from SECRETARY, Girls' Realm Guild, La Belle Sauvage, Ludgate Hill, London, E.C.

PUBLIC-HOUSE REFORM.—The People's Refreshment House Association, Ltd., founded by the Bishop of Chester, manages 68 Licensed Inns. Ask for List and Report. APPLY FOR 17. SHARES. 5 per cent paid since 1899. P.R.H.A., Broadway Chambers, Westminster.

TRANSLATIONS (into and from English).

Research, and other Literary Work. French, German, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, Dutch. Varied experience. Moderate terms.—Miss STRACK, 35, Mall Chambers, Kensington, W.

WORK WANTED IN INDEXING, CATALOGUING, BIBLIOGRAPHY, &c. Good experience. Spanish, Italian, and French Translated. Research Work of any kind undertaken.—Address ALPHA, care Davies & Co., Advertising Agents, Finch Lane, Cornhill.

NEWSPAPER, very high class.—Income doubled in Twelve Months.—CAPITAL REQUIRED (in large or small amounts) to float as a Public Company.—Write 678, Sell's Advertising Offices, Fleet Street, London.

Type-Writers, &c.

AUTHORS' MSS., 9d. per 1,000 words. Sermons, Plays, and all kinds of TYPE-WRITING carefully done at home (Remington). Good paper. Orders promptly executed. Duplication from 3s. 6d. per 100.—M. L. L., 18, Edgeley Road, Clapham, S.W.

AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS, STORIES, PLAYS, ESSAYS TYPE-WRITTEN with complete accuracy, 9d. per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies guaranteed. References to well-known Writers.—M. STUART, Allendale, Kymberley Road, Harrow.

TYPE-WRITING undertaken by highly educated Women (Classical Tripos; Cambridge Higher Local; Modern Languages). Research, Revision, Translation, Shorthand, Dictation Room.—THE CAMBRIDGE TYPE-WRITING AGENCY, 10, Duke Street, Adelphi, W.C.

TYPE-WRITING, 9d. per 1,000 words. All kinds of MSS. accurately typed. Clear Carbon Copies, 3d. per 1,000. References to well-known Authors. Oxford Higher Local. Tel. 1272, Richmond P.O.—M. KING, 24, Forest Road, Kew Gardens, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING.—AUTHORS' MSS., &c., accurately and intelligently COPIED, 9d. per 1,000 words; with Carbon Copy 1s. per 1,000.—Miss ARCHER, 14, St. Andrew's Chambers, Wells Street, Oxford Street, W.

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY, 74, NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON.

REPRODUCTIONS IN MONOCHROME OF FAMOUS WORKS OF ART BY THE AUTOTYPE PERMANENT PROCESS.

Amongst the numerous Publications may be mentioned
SELECTIONS from THE NATIONAL GALLERY (London), THE WALLACE COLLECTION,
THE TATE GALLERY, THE WALKER ART GAL-LERY (Liverpool).

DRAWINGS BY HOLBEIN, from the ROYAL COLLECTION, Windsor Castle.

SELECTED EXAMPLES OF SACRED
ART from various Collections.

ETCHINGS BY REMBRANDT.

DRAWINGS BY ALBERT DÜRER.

PICTURES from the Louvre, Luxembourg, Paris.

Prospectuses of above Issues will be sent on application.

FULL PARTICULARS OF ALL
THE COMPANY'S PUBLICATIONS ARE GIVEN IN THE AUTOTYPE FINE-ART
CATALOGUE.

NOW READY,
ENLARGED EDITION, with Hundreds of Miniature
Photographs and Tint Blocks of Notable Autotypes.

For convenience of Reference the Publications are arranged Alphabetically under Artists' Names.
Post free, One Shilling.

A Visit of Inspection is invited to
THE AUTOTYPE FINE-ART GALLERY
74, NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.C.

TYPE-WRITING OF ALL KINDS, 7d. per 1,000 words; over 50,000 words, 6d. Carbon Copy, 2d. per 1,000.
Duplicating 2s. 100 Copies. First-class Work.—A. M. P., Shamrock, Sutton Road, Muswell Hill, London, N.

TYPE-WRITING OF EVERY DESCRIPTION
by EXPERT, 8d. per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies, 3d. per 1,000 words. Accuracy and prompt return guaranteed. Reliable references.—NORA DICKINSON, 1, Sackville Gardens, Ilford.

TYPE-WRITING.—The WEST KENSINGTON
OFFICES. Authors' MSS., Translations, &c. Legal and General Copying. Private Dictation Room. Circulars, &c.
Duplicated. Usual terms. References. Established fifteen years.
—SIKES & SIKES, 223A, Hammersmith Road, London, W.

Catalogues.

CATALOGUES.—CLEARANCE CATALOGUE
of SECOND-HAND BOOKS post free on application. Books in all Branches of Literature, many scarce Items and First Editions.
No fancy prices. Parcels sent on approval if desired. CATALOGUES issued Monthly.—Address J. BALDWIN, 14, Osborne Road, Leyton, Essex.

ANCIENT and MODERN COINS.—Collectors
and Antiquarians are invited to apply to SPINK & SON
Limited, for Specimen Copy (gratis) of their NUMISMATIC
CIRCULAR. The finest Greek, Roman, and English Coins on View and for Sale at Moderate Prices.—SPINK & SON, Limited, Experts,
Valuers, and Cataloguers, 16, 17, and 18, Piccadilly, London, W.
Established upwards of a Century.

PUBLISHERS' REMAINDERS.

Bookbuyers should write for
GLAISHER'S CATALOGUE OF REMAINDERS,
which contains Books in all Departments of Literature.
A large and constantly varying Stock always on hand.
Great Reductions in Price.

WILLIAM GLAISHER, LTD.
Remainder and Discount Booksellers,
265, HIGH HOLBORN, LONDON.

BOOKS.—ALL OUT-OF-PRINT and RARE
BOOKS on any subject SUPPLIED. The most expert Bookfinder extant. Please state wants and ask for CATALOGUE. I make a special feature of exchanging any Saleable Books for others selected from my various Lists. Special List of 2,000 Books I particularly want post free.—EDW. BAKER'S Great Bookshop, 14-16, John Bright Street, Birmingham. Rhead's Staffordshire Pots and Potters, illus., 21s., for 10s. 6d.; Ainsworth's Novels, 20 vols., 35s.; Burke's Peerage, 1907, 24s.

CATALOGUE No. 50.—Drawings by Turner,
Prout, Ruskin, &c.—Turner's Liber Studiorum and other Engravings—Proofs touched by Turner—Constable's English Landscape—Etchings by Whistler—Japanese Colour Prints—Illustrated
Books. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church Terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

P. M. BARNARD, M.A.

(Late Scholar of Christ's College, Cambridge),
10, DUDLEY ROAD, TUNERIDGE WELLS;
Also at 85, BRIDGE STREET (near the John Rylands Library),
MANCHESTER.

JUST ISSUED.

CATALOGUE No. 27. MANUSCRIPTS (35),
INCUNABULA (175), with 8 Full-Page Illustrations.

TO BE ISSUED SHORTLY.

CATALOGUE No. 28. SCOTCH HISTORY
AND LITERATURE, OLD SCIENCE.

P. M. BARNARD is prepared to undertake the formation of LIBRARIES and COLLECTIONS on SPECIAL SUBJECTS.

MAGGS BROS.,

109, Strand, London, W.C.
DEALERS IN RARE AND VALUABLE BOOKS,
PRINTS, AND AUTOGRAPHS.

CATALOGUES sent post free to all parts of the World.

Export Orders Solicited.

Telegraphic and Cable Address: "Bibliolite, London."
Telephone: "Gerrard 4664."

OLD ENGRAVINGS.

CATALOGUE No. 27.—OLD ENGRAVED PORTRAITS by the GREAT MASTERS. The Works of Jost Amman, Balechou, Beauvarlet, Beckett, Bervic, Carmontelle, Cars, Chereau, Cranach, Daullé, Drevet, Van Dyck, Edelinck, Faber, Faithorne, Goltzius, Grateloup,
Greenwood, Masson, Nanteuil, Schmidt, Smith, Wille, &c.—Early
Mezzotints—Fine Portraits of the English School after Reynolds, Gainsborough, Lawrence, &c. 3,011 Lots. With Topographical and Alphabetical Index, Facsimiles, and Appendix, Portraits of Napoleon I. Now ready. Free on application.

GODEFROY MAYER, Printseller,
41, Rue Blanche, Paris, France.

IN THE PRESS.

Will be sent gratis and post free to all Applicants.

A CATALOGUE (No. 476) of a large COLLEC-TION of BOOKS, chiefly Second-hand or Reviewers' Copies, dealing with the Archaeology, History, Philosophy, Science, and Comparison of Religion and Ethics; also Treatises upon Primitive or Early Religions, Cults, and Mythology; Works expounding Psychology, Mental and Moral Philosophy, Logic, and Mental Science generally; Expositions of "the Higher Criticism," Rationalism, and Free-Thought—with resultant Controversy—and kindred Subjects.

THE WHOLE BEING NOW OFFERED, FOR CASH, BY

CHARLES HIGHAM & SON,

27A, FARRINGTON STREET, LONDON, E.C.

Theological and other Books PURCHASED in any quantity—a Parcel or a Library—for Cash, or by way of Exchange, upon the most liberal terms possible.

Authors' Agents.

THE AUTHOR'S AGENCY.—Established 1879.

The interests of Authors capably represented. Agreements for Publishing arranged. MSS. placed with Publishers.—Terms and Testimonials on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHESE, 24, Paternoster Row.

Sales by Auction.

Miscellaneous Books.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by
AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on THURSDAY, January 23, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock, MISCE-
LANEOUS BOOKS, comprising Combe's Wars of Wellington, Coloured Plates by Heath—Tableaux Historiques de la Révolution Française, par Duplessi-Bertaux, 3 vols.—Smith's Narrative of Major André—Four interesting Volumes of MS. Exchequer Accounts and Matters relating to the State of the Navy, temp. Queen Anne—a few Early Manuscripts and Incunabula—Chauncy's Historical Antiquities of Hertfordshire—Coxe's Tour in Monmouthshire, 2 vols.—Brayley's Surrey, 5 vols., and other County Histories and Antiquarian Works by Hutchinson, Billings, Grose, &c.—a small Collection of Books relating to Dante—Recent Fine-Art Monographs, and the Writings of P. G. Hamerton, Mrs. Mark Pattison, J. A. Symonds, Ruskin and others, being a SELECTION from the MODERN LIBRARY of a GENTLEMAN—Library Editions of Standard Authors—The English
Dialect Dictionary, Hand-made Paper Edition, 6 vols., &c.
To be viewed and Catalogues had.

Valuable Law Books.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, EARLY IN FEBRUARY, VALUABLE LAW BOOKS, including a Complete
Set of the Law Reports from 1865 to 1898, 353 vols.—Modern Text Books, &c.; also Handsome Mahogany Glazed Bookcases—Portraits and Engravings.

Catalogues are preparing.

IMPORTANT SALE OF VALUABLE BOOKS.

On view TO-DAY (SATURDAY). Sale MONDAY, at 1 p.m.

HAMPTON & SONS will SELL by AUCTION on MONDAY NEXT, at ROTHBURY, BLACKHEATH
PARK, S.E., at 1 o'clock, the valuable LIBRARY formed by the late
J. VAVASSEUR, Esq., amongst which will be found Gould's Birds of Europe—Robert's Holy Land—Ackermann's Westminster Abbey—
Norfolk Archaeology—Beauties of England and Wales—Smith's Catalogue Raisonné—Les Arts Somptueux—Gerrotet et Chipiez Histoire de l'Art—Strutt's Dress and Habits—Musée Français et Musée Royal —Quaritch's General Catalogue with Supplements—Alison's History of Europe—Hallam's Works—Rawlinson's Herodotus, Five Great Monarchies and Oriental Monarchy—Berry's Encyclopedia Heraldica
—Lafontaine Fables—Walton and Cotton's Complete Angler—Cotman's
Sepulchral Brasses—Nuremberg Chronicle, 1493—Gosse L'Art
Japonais—Audley and Bowes, Ceramic Art of Japan—Racinet, Costume Historique—Hamerton's Graphic Arts—Camden's Britannia
—Encyclopædia Britannica, in revolving bookcase—East Anglian—
Chaffers's Marks and Monograms—Audley's Ornamental Arts of Japan—Shaw's Dresses and Decorations of the Middle Ages—King's Study Book of Medieval Architecture—Rickman's Architectural Remains—Hogarth's Works—Humbert, Le Japon Illustré—Westlake's Design for Painted Glass—Bentham's Ely Cathedral, &c., &c., many in fine bindings by Riviere, Zaehnsdorf, Bedford, and other eminent binders.

Catalogues free of the Auctioneers.

N.B.—The FURNITURE, UNIQUE COLLECTION OF JAPANESE
ART OBJECTS, BRONZES, IVORY CARVINGS, ENAMELS,
JEWELLERY, OLD SILVER, &c., will be SOLD on TUESDAY
NEXT and Three Following Days. Catalogues, post free, 6d. each.

Offices, 2 and 3, Cockspur Street, S.W.

The Library of Books and Periodicals on the Game of Chess,
the Property of the late M. NUMA PRETI, of Paris.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE
will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, February 1, at 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of BOOKS and PERIODICALS on the GAME of CHESS, the Property of the late M. NUMA PRETI, of Paris.
May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE,
will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington
Street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, February 2, at 1 o'clock precisely,
BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS comprising the Property of a GENTLE-MAN, deceased, and other Properties, including Biographical and Historical Works—Poetry and Drama—Incunabula—Americana—
First Editions of the Writings of Modern Authors—Coloured Prints,
&c.—Shelley, Works, ed. H. Buxton Forman, 8 vols.—Greville Memoirs,
8 vols.—Arabian Nights, 17 vols.—Burton Club—Daniell's Voyage
Round Great Britain—Portraits des Grands Hommes, Femmes
Illustres, et Sujets Mémorables de France, Complete Set, &c.
May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Valuable Collection of Greek Coins formed by the late
FRANK SHERMAN BENSON, Esq., of Brooklyn, New York.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE
will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington
Street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, February 3, and Two Following Days, and on MONDAY, February 8, and Three Following
Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the valuable COLLECTION of GREEK
COINS, formed by the late FRANK SHERMAN BENSON, Esq., of Brooklyn, New York, comprising choice and interesting Examples of the Ancient Coinages of Italy and Sicily, Greece and the Islands,
Asia Minor, &c., Syria, Egypt, Zeugitana, &c.
May be viewed two days prior. Illustrated Catalogues may be had, price 2s. 6d. each.

A Collection of Japanese Colour Prints.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE
will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington
Street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, February 12, at 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of ORIGINAL JAPANESE COLOUR PRINTS and BOOKS.
May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A selected Portion of the Library of the Right Hon.
LORD POLWARTH.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE
will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington
Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, February 15, and Following Day at 1 o'clock precisely, an interesting COLLECTION of valuable and rare BOOKS and PAMPHLETS selected from the LIBRARY of the Right Hon. LORD POLWARTH (of Mertoun House, Berwick), including an extensive Series of Civil War Tracts and Newspapers—rare Americana—Books of Travel and on Trade—
East Indies—Broadside—Proclamations—Virgil's Aeneidos, printed by Caxton—Rare Old English Black-Letter Books—Corte di Pavia, Il
Cavalierizzo, Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester's Copy—Series of Maps, Charts and Plans of Battles—American Maps—Penn's Laws for Pennsylvania, Original Manuscript—Cases of Appeal in the Scottish
Courts—Engraved English and French Portraits, &c.
May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

STEVEN'S AUCTION ROOMS. Established 1760.

British and Foreign Lepidoptera.

TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY, January 26 and 27.
The COLLECTIONS of LEPIDOPTERA formed by C. H. SCHILL, Esq., A. M. SMALLPEICE, Esq., and others, including many rare Varieties in fine condition, together with the Cabinets in which they are contained; also an Assortment of Natural History Specimens.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above, by AUCTION, at his Rooms, 38 King Street, Covent Garden,
London, W.C.
Catalogues on application. On view day prior and morning of Sale.

TUESDAY, February 2, at half-past 12 o'clock.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION,
CURIOSITIES—Chinese and Japanese Porcelain and Bronzes—
Savage Weapons—Prints, Paintings, and Engravings—China—and a Variety of other Curios.
Catalogues on application.

Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL
by AUCTION, at their Galleries, 37, Leicester Square, W.C., on THURSDAY, February 4, and Following Day, at 10 minutes past
1 o'clock precisely, several SMALL LIBRARIES, removed from the Country, comprising Library Sets of Standard Authors—valuable
First Editions—Works on Natural History, including Gould's Birds of Great Britain, 5 vols. whole morocco, and other important Works—
Americana—Works on the Fine Arts—Autograph Letters, &c.
Catalogues in preparation.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS
respectfully give notice that they will hold the following
SALES by AUCTION at their Great Rooms, King Street, St. James's
Square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely.

On FRIDAY, January 29, PORCELAIN and DECORATIVE FURNITURE of the late T. RUSSEL KENT, Esq.;
the late Mrs. HENRIETTA LEWES, and others.

On SATURDAY, January 30, ANCIENT and MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS, the Property of the late
Mr. T. M. McLEAN.

SHREWSBURY.—No. 15, Belmont.

To Art Collectors and others desirous of obtaining a commodious Freehold Residence containing elegant Reception Rooms and Galleries highly suitable for the Storage and display of Art Treasures, Pictures, &c.

TO BE SOLD BY AUCTION BY MESSRS.

HALL, WATERIDGE & OWEN the COUNTY MART, SHREWSBURY, on WEDNESDAY, January 27, inst. The above exceptional Residence is one of the most important of its kind in the fine old historic town of Shrewsbury, the Gardens, with Tennis Court or Bowling Green, being connected by a Subway extending under the ancient Town Walls.

The valuable ANTIQUE FURNITURE, PICTURES, and EFFECTS will be SOLD the WEEK FOLLOWING.
Particulars, with Plan and Orders to View, apply to THE AUC-TIONEERS, Shrewsbury, or to Messrs. FREEMAN & SON, Solicitors, 30A, George Street, Hanover Square, London, W.

For Magazines, &c., see p. 114.

H A R P E R & B R O T H E R S.

Harper's Library of Living Thought: Foolsap 8vo. Gilt Tops. Decorative Covers.
Richly Gilt Backs. Per volume: Cloth, 2s. 6d. net; Leather, 3s. 6d. net.

HARPER'S LIBRARY OF LIVING THOUGHT.

HARPER'S LIBRARY OF LIVING THOUGHT is intended as a response to what appears to be the special demand of the century now opening. Just as in the organic world every organism is, we are told, a growth of cells springing from the parent cell, so every good book is nothing more than a synthetic expansion of a single, central, living thought. Before Darwin and Wallace simultaneously announced a new cosmogony of growth, the living thought at the heart of that great revolutionary system was expressed in a footnote to an article in the Westminster Review by Herbert Spencer. That brief footnote was of more importance to the world than most of the books published in that year. The twentieth century is and must needs be in a hurry, and what it asks for is the central living thought of every intellectual movement without delay. Its energies are so enormously active that new living thoughts are jostling each other daily. The consequence is that when a writer feels that he has a new living thought to express, he does not wait to develop it fully—he does not pause to write a book, as he would have done in times past—he sends the suggestive article to one of the great reviews or magazines. Before getting into permanent form, this suggestive article has to wait until the creator of the thought has the opportunity of developing it, of expanding it into a book, or else until he republishes it in a collection of miscellaneous essays upon all kinds of other subjects. Now, it is the object of this new Series to furnish the living central thought in permanent book form as soon as it is born, and at a low price. The reader will find that for the same price which he would give for a review he can obtain a beautifully printed little volume, well bound, and an ornament to his library.

ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE

Three Plays of Shakespeare.

There is no literary question in which the twentieth century is more deeply concerning itself than that of Shakespeare and his art, and Mr. Swinburne is, above all men, admirably equipped for treating such a subject. Concerning 'King Lear' he has indeed given us a new living thought—that King Lear is an expression of the most advanced doctrine as to the absolute equality of mankind confronted by Nature.

[Ready February 1.

W. M. FLINDERS PETRIE

Personal Religion in Egypt before Christianity.

A remarkable volume on an important phase of the evolution of religious thought. It is an examination of the "old bottles into which the new wine was poured," and Prof. Flinders Petrie gives the reader all the resources of his unrivalled knowledge of that period.

[Ready February 1.

COUNT LEO TOLSTOY

The Teaching of Jesus.

At this moment a great and passionate attention is being given to religious questions. "New theologies" are springing up like mushrooms. Yet there is no more commanding figure in the realm of religious thought to-day than Count Tolstoy. By the suffrages of the Christian world he would be the one above all others chosen to tell once more the old, old story.

[Ready February 1.

THEODORE WATTS- DUNTON

Poetic "Adequacy" in the Twentieth Century.

Which treats of the immense difficulty poets will find in keeping abreast of the thought of the century now opening. Mr. Theodore Watts-Dunton stands in the foremost line of great English critics by right of the subtle and profound insight which is his, perhaps, because he is himself a creator.

[Ready shortly.

SVANTE ARRHENIUS

The Life of the Universe. In 2 vols.

A deeply interesting account of the conceptions which man has formed from the earliest to the latest times of the origin and formation of the universe. No more important contribution to the solution of the problem of the universe has been made than the previous work of Prof. Arrhenius—'Worlds in the Making.'

[Ready shortly.

Other Volumes in preparation will be shortly announced. Descriptive Leaflet on application to

HARPER & BROTHERS, 45, Albemarle Street, London, W.

MACMILLAN'S LIST

PROF. BURY'S NEW BOOK.

The Ancient Greek Historians
(Harvard Lectures).

By J. B. BURY, Litt.D. LL.D., Regius Professor of Modern History in the University of Cambridge. 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

The Acropolis of Athens.

By MARTIN L. D'OOGE, Professor of Greek in the University of Michigan. Fully illustrated. 8vo, 17s. net.

Caesar's Commentaries on the Gallic War.

Translated into English by T. RICE HOLMES, Hon. Litt.D. Dublin. With Map. Crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net.

TENNYSON CENTENARY.
The Works of Alfred, Lord Tennyson.

EVERSLEY EDITION. Annotated by the Author. Edited by HALLAM LORD TENNYSON. 9 vols. Globe 8vo, 4s. net each.

EVERSLEY SERIES.—New Vol.

Shakespeare.

By Prof. WALTER RALEIGH. Globe 8vo, 4s. net.

William Morris.By ALFRED NOYES. Crown 8vo, 2s. net.
[English Men of Letters.]Notes of a Botanist on the Amazon and Andes.

Being Records of Travel during the Years 1849-1864. By RICHARD SPRUCE, Ph.D. Edited and Condensed by ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE, O.M. F.R.S. With Portrait of the Author and other Illustrations and Maps. 2 vols. 8vo, 21s. net.

The Origin and Development of the Moral Ideas.

By EDWARD WESTERMARCK, Ph.D., Martin White Professor of Sociology in the University of London. In 2 vols. 8vo. Vol. II. 14s. net.

Previously published: Vol. I. 14s. net.

Times.—"The publication of Dr. Westermarck's second volume completes a noteworthy contribution to sociological literature."

Earthwork of England.

Prehistoric, Roman, Saxon, Danish, Norman, and Medieval. By A. HADRIAN ALLCROFT, M.A. Illustrated with Plans, Sections, &c. 8vo, 18s. net.

The Religion of the Common Man.

By Sir HENRY WRIXON, K.C. Crown 8vo, 3s. net.

The Novels of Henry James.ÉDITION DE LUXE. In 23 vols. 8vo, 8s. 6d. net each.
Vol. IX. THE AWKWARD AGE.

NEW 6/- NOVELS.

One Immortality. By H. FIELDING HALL.

"There are three loves that make and keep the world—the love that binds man and woman into one flesh and soul, the love that draws families into nations, the love that holds the world to God.... This book is about the first."

Joan of Garioch. By ALBERT KINROSS.The Red City. By Dr. S. WEIR MITCHELL.

MACMILLAN & CO., LTD., London.

PHILLIMORE & CO.

Genealogical Publishers.

IN THE PRESS, READY SHORTLY,
price 10s. 6d. net.IRISH RECORD SERIES: Vol. I.

Calendars of Wills in the Dioceses of Ossory (1536), Ferns (1601), Leighlin (1652), and Kildare (1661) down to 1800.

Cloth gilt, royal 8vo.

Vol. II. will contain Cork and Ross (1548) and Cloyne (1621).

Other Dioceses will follow.

This Series has been projected to range with the Will Calendars of the British Record Society and the Scottish Record Society.

PRELIMINARY NOTICE.COUNTY PEDIGREES.

Edited by W. P. W. PHILLIMORE, M.A. B.C.L. Author of 'How to Write the History of a Family.'

This Series will afford a convenient means of recording Pedigrees in more detail than is possible in the ordinary genealogical works of reference. The Pedigrees of each county will be collected together in separate volumes, which will be issued in quarterly parts. Demy 8vo, price 5s. each. The first County to be issued in this Series is

NOTTINGHAMSHIRE.

Part I. is now in the Press.

Prospectuses of the Series, with Forms for filling up the Pedigrees, sent post free on application.

The Editor will be glad to receive Pedigrees of any County for inclusion in this series.

PHILLIMORE'S PARISH REGISTER SERIES.

Over One Hundred Volumes Issued.

These volumes, demy 8vo, cloth gilt, are supplied to Subscribers only, price 10s. 6d. net. Only 150 printed. An absolute necessity for all Genealogists and Reference Libraries, 20 Counties, 800 Parishes.

Seven new Counties now in the Press:—Cheshire, Devon, Essex, Kent, Middlesex, Oxfordshire, and Suffolk. Others in progress.

Particulars and Lists post free on application.

THE FAMILY RECORDER.

Arranged by Sir WILLIAM BULL, M.P.

Price 7s. 6d.; by post, 8s. net.

ALFORD FAMILY NOTES.

By Canon ALFORD and W. P. W. PHILLIMORE.

Demy 4to, cloth, 250 pp. Illustrated with Portraits, Arms, &c. Price 25s. net.

MR. PHILLIMORE'S HANDBOOKS

Pedigree Work. Price 1s. net.

Heralds' College and Coats of Arms. Third Edition. Price 1s. net.

Grants of Arms and Registration of Pedigrees. Price 1s. net.

The Parish Historian. Price 1s. net.

Law and Practice of Change of Name. Price 1s. net.

The Family Charter-Chest. Price 6d. net.

Parish Registers: their History and Suggestions for Transcription. Price 6d. net.

PEDIGREE FORMS.

In fcap. and 8vo size. List free on application.

PHILLIMORE & CO. 124, Chancery Lane.

MR. T. FISHER UNWIN

1, ADELPHI TERRACE,

LONDON

THE RISE AND PROGRESS OF THE SOUTH AMERICAN REPUBLICS. By GEORGE W. CRICFIELD. Illustrated. 2 vols. Royal 8vo, cloth, 25s. net.

This is probably the most complete encyclopædia of information about South America in existence.

TOWARDS SOCIAL REFORM. By Canon and Mrs. BARNETT. 5s. net.

This volume embodies the views of two of the most experienced and respected of living Social Reformers on various subjects connected with poverty and education and recreation. The book shows the growth of social activity as regards unemployment, charitable relief, Poor Law methods, and holidays.

MYSTERIOUS PSYCHIC FORCES. An Account of the Author's Investigations in Psychical Research, together with those of other European Savants. By CAMILLE FLAMMARION. With 21 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 8s. 6d. net.ARISTOTLE'S THEORY OF CONDUCT. By THOMAS MARSHALL, M.A. Cheaper Edition. Medium 8vo, 8s. 6d. net.THE FAITH OF A MODERN PROTESTANT. By Prof. W. BOUSSET, Author of 'What is Religion?' Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.THE INDUSTRIAL AND COMMERCIAL INFLUENCE OF THE ENGLISH PATENT SYSTEM. By A. F. RAVENSHEAR. Large crown 8vo, 5s. net.MASTER FLACHSMANN: A COMEDY. By OTTO ERNST. Translated from the German by H. M. BEATTY. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.JOSEPH SKIPSEY: HIS LIFE AND WORK. By the Right Hon. ROBERT SPENCE WATSON. With 3 Portraits. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

NOTABLE NEW NOVELS.

1. HIGH LIFE IN THE FAR EAST. By JAMES DALZIEL. 6s.2. THE BARONET'S WIFE. By FLORENCE WARDEN. 6s.3. THE CAPTURE OF PAUL BECK. By M. McDONNELL BODKIN, K.C. 6s.4. JOHN BROOME'S WIFE. By E. B. MOFFAT. 6s.5. THE WAYS OF MEN. By HERBERT FLOWERDEW. 6s.THE ADELPHI LIBRARY of Standard Copy right Fiction. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. per volume.

NEW VOLUME.

THE PORTENT, AND OTHER STORIES. By GEORGE MACDONALD.

Write for a copy of the ADELPHI LIBRARY Prospectus.

T. FISHER UNWIN

LONDON

SATURDAY, JANUARY 23, 1909.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
LOWES DICKINSON ON JUSTICE AND LIBERTY	93
THE LATINS IN THE LEVANT	94
LADY PRIESTLEY'S STORY OF A LIFETIME	95
THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH	95
NEW NOVELS (A County Family; The Sibyl of Venice; The Baronet's Wife; The Whips of Time; The Ways of Men)	96-97
EGYPTOLOGICAL BOOKS	97
OUR LIBRARY TABLE (Lecky's Historical and Political Essays; From Ploughshare to Parliament; Mr. Winston Churchill's African Journey; At Large; Reminiscences of a Stonemason; Out-of-Doors in the Holy Land; Little People)	98-100
COLLOQUIALISM IN THE DRAMATIC BALLAD; THE SHAKESPEARE QUARTOS; TEACHERS' REGISTRATION COUNCIL; TUDOR SCHOOLBOY LIFE; THE SEAL OF DORCHESTER; INCORPORATED ASSOCIATION OF HEAD MASTERS; MODERN LANGUAGE ASSOCIATION; "LORDLINGS AND ATHEISTS"; "MR. SHAKSPEARE, ONE BOOK," 1595	100-104
LIST OF NEW BOOKS	104
LITERARY GOSSIP	105
SCIENCE—SUESS ON THE FACE OF THE EARTH; THE SURVEY OF INDIA REPORT; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS NEXT WEEK; GOSSIP	106-108
FINE ARTS—TWO BOOKS ON HERCULANEUM; THE 'PUNCH' EXHIBITION; MINOR EXHIBITIONS; BRITISH ART IN VENICE; GOSSIP; EXHIBITIONS	108-110
MUSIC—THE BRIGHTON FESTIVAL; 'THE RING' IN ENGLISH; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	110-111
DRAMA—OLIVE LATIMER'S HUSBAND; ERNST VON WILDENBRUCH	111-112
INDEX TO ADVERTISERS	112

LITERATURE

Justice and Liberty. By G. Lowes Dickinson. (Dent & Co.)

THIS is the third dialogue which Mr. Dickinson has published, and his mastery over one of the most difficult and attractive of literary methods is once more evident. This book does not, however, seem to us so brilliant or interesting as 'The Modern Symposium,' or so profound as 'The Idea of Good.' Socialism in one form or another is always with us in political discussion, and we are beginning to be a little tired of reading the same arguments, the same denunciation of the ugliness of Western civilization, and the same or very similar promises of its removal by the panacea of collective ownership of capital. This is not from lack of sympathy, but malediction, even where one agrees with it, is apt to pall, and pictures of Utopia cease to inspire when exhibited with wearisome iteration.

Still, the frequent production of attempts such as that of Mr. Dickinson is proof of the weakness at the core of the modern world, and that weariness which generally follows the triumph of aims purely materialistic, whether in modern Europe or the Roman Empire. As the Professor in this dialogue declares in words which recall Mr. Benjamin Kidd:—

"It is not only, not even chiefly, the working classes that are the strength of that great movement of revolt we call broadly Socialism. Its strength is the weakness of the ruling class, the scepticism of the rich and the powerful, the slow, half-unconscious detachment of all of them who have intelligence and moral force from the interest and the active support of their class."

The "all" is, perhaps, an exaggeration; but the fact here noted is the centre of the situation. Those at the top are beginning to disbelieve—some in the justice, others in the value, of the system that puts them there. To some their privileges seem an unfair boon; to others the whole fabric seems a shoddy structure, an elaborate "much ado about nothing," with ingenious methods by which the many toil and suffer in order that the few may have rights which are not really worth fighting for, and not true "goods" at all. Now, no civilization can endure if those for whom it is reared have ceased to believe in it. Fifty years ago men did believe in it. The "bagman's paradise" of Cobden; the facile optimism and "economic harmonies" of Bastiat; the ideals which are represented in 'John Halifax, Gentleman,' the works of Samuel Smiles, and the "Great Exhibition," remain as evidence of what that faith meant. But where are we to find now such enthusiasm for the capitalist régime, unless in intellectual backwaters? True, the régime may be and is passionately, and even "brutally" defended, as Martin (the Socialist Professor in this book) says. Or it may be tolerated as the best arrangement in a world of imperfections; but it has ceased to be a religion, except to a very few. But that is what it was to the older Utilitarians and the philosophic Radicals. Of course this need not mean that Collectivism is the only substitute, or even the probable successor. But it does mean that the fashion of this world is passing away, though the passing may take some centuries. The question is one of fact. Is it or is it not the case that men the most gifted and advantageously placed are ceasing to respect the practical aims of our civilization, and are beginning to echo the gibe in 'Tancred' concerning the blindness of those who supposed that they were in the van of progress because, by the ingenious manipulation of mechanical contrivances, they had succeeded in establishing a society which had mistaken comfort for civilization? Disraeli was an Oriental, and with all his ambition and lack of scruple he discerned earlier and more clearly than others the canker at the heart of the Western world.

The strength of this book lies in its convincing exposure of the evils of our present system, and its proof that they are inherent, not accidental. As a discussion it is inadequate. Neither Stuart, the Conservative man of business, nor Harington the aristocrat, is really given a chance. Their remarks serve merely as pegs for Martin to hang his speeches upon. It is this which makes the book artistically much inferior to 'A Modern Symposium,' where the persons have a more equal say. Still, it is idle to complain; a really fair dialogue has not yet, we suppose, been written.

What is valuable is the combination of moderation and severity with which Martin brings his indictment against the existing system. We do not think he says a word too much, yet he nowhere shrieks or merely denounces, and he admits towards the close of the discussion that the rich are not to blame:—

"Society is not a deliberate exploitation of the poor by the rich; it is a silly, sordid muddle, grown up out of centuries of violence, and perpetuated in centuries of stupidity and greed. In many respects the rich are as much to be pitied as the poor, and the poor as much to be reprobated as the rich."

There is none of the virus of the agitator here, nor in the passages which analyze the system:—

"Modern society, as I see it from top to bottom, is a descending hierarchy of oligarchic groups, each with its own familiar privileges, for which it fights, and in and by which it lives. I image society as a pyramid, broadening down from its apex by a series of steps, each cut off from the one above, not indeed by an impassable barrier, but by a height which it requires a considerable degree of athleticism to scale; and on each step crowded together a fighting, trampling mob of desperate men, bent every one above all on enlarging his own space and making room for his children, under penalty that if he fails, he or they will be thrust down to the step below, and perhaps, through all the degrees, to the very bottom."

Take again the passage where the speaker analyzes its motives:—

"It is a class-state, which means that every one is born without rhyme or reason into an advantageous or disadvantageous position. Consequently the main object of every one is to rise, as it is called, or to prevent himself from falling. This is true of all the individuals within each class, and also of the classes themselves, in their relation to one another. From this point of view competition is the most obvious mark of the society; and the inner correlative of competition is egotism. Further, since the fundamental inequality is one of property, the competition is for money, and thus cupidity is its motive—a cupidity intensified almost beyond belief by the fact that the mass of men live on the borders of starvation, while the few, however rich they are, never think they have enough to save them from the possibility of falling to the same level. Egotism and cupidity—these then, to begin with, are the most obvious components of the spirit of our society."

Can any honest observer deny the truth of this description? (We may mention that all the reserves needful for exemplary private life, or individual exceptions, are made in the course of the book.) Think what we will of the remedies proposed, no one, unless he is blinded by self-interest or custom, can, in the present reviewer's opinion, deny the correctness of this diagnosis of disease. It is that which makes men find the existing system intolerable; it has taken centuries to develop the immanent logic of capitalism; but it has developed, and in Western Europe, though still more unreservedly in America, we can see it to-day "in all the naked horror of the truth."

Into the details of Mr. Dickinson's scheme we need not enter; it does not differ in essentials from other presentments of the Collectivist ideal. We should like, however, to make one or two criticisms. Mr. Dickinson, like most moderns, laughs at the definition of interest as "the wages of abstinence." True of the greater accumulations of capital, this gibe is, perhaps, not true of the smaller.

The underpaid clerk or vicar who saves on his holidays to insure his life for his children's schooling, the hard-worked artisan who saves wages to pay for fresh education and get better posts in future, is receiving the "wages of abstinence" by the additional advantages he secures, for himself or his family.

Then there is the question of the family? Is not that the real unit of society rather than the individual? Yet it is never easy to see how this is provided for in the Socialist ideal of equality of opportunity. Nor do we think things will be improved by the rather mechanical view of marriage which is put forward in this book. We like this part of the dialogue far less than the rest, especially the hint that laxer relations between the sexes are to be approved, or at any rate tolerated. Still, it is a boon to have stress laid, as it is here, upon the real centre of the problem, that of making personality rather than material good the principle of the whole system. The ideal "to make work honoured and leisure noble"; "to unseat things from the saddle of destiny and seat there instead the human soul," is finely conceived and expressed.

We are glad that it is a levelling up rather than a levelling down that the author contemplates. Critics of the Socialist ideal, even Lord Morley, are fearful of the system being hostile to culture and to history. Mr. Dickinson, or rather Martin, states clearly that this is not his aim; he looks for the time when the dock labourer shall dine in evening clothes with the Cabinet Minister, and listen to Wagner's operas to his heart's content. The hope is to bring within the reach of all not the ostentation and luxury, but the graces and refinements, all the values of life, which nowadays can be secured by wealth alone. The hope is, indeed, to secure for all the worthy tastes and occupations of a man what the widespread prevalence of football does for bodily development and virtues thereon dependent. Just as popular games to some extent level the culture of the Public School with that of the artisan or the factory hand, so in a perfect State all the other values of a developed society ought to be secured, not as the monopoly of a small caste, but as the priceless treasure of a whole people.

Is such an aim possible or practicable? We cannot say here. Certainly it requires a change not only of human conditions, but also of human nature; for men will have to learn not to want many of the things they now greatly desire. Such changes, in the reviewer's opinion, need a religious rather than a merely political or economic momentum to make them even conceivable. Even here, however, Martin admits the problem, and in the most eloquent page of the dialogue expresses his feeling that it is only in something higher than mere statesmanship that hope must be placed:—

"This animal Man, this poor thin wisp of sodden straw buffeted on the great ocean of fate, this ignorant, feeble, quarrelsome, greedy, cowardly victim and spawn of the unnatural parent we call Nature, this abortion, this clod, this indecent, unnamable thing, is also, as certainly, the child of a celestial father. Sown into the womb of Nature, he was sown a spiritual seed. And history, on one side the record of man's entanglement in matter, on the other is the epic of his self-deliverance. All the facts, the dreadful facts, at which we have timidly hinted, and which no man could fairly face and live, all these facts are true; stop at them, if you will. But true also is the contest of which they are the symbol, real the flood no less than the deposit it has left; real of all things reallest, the ideal! Do not conceive it as an idea in somebody's head. No; ideas are traces it leaves, shadows, images, words: itself is the light, the fire, the tongue of which these are creatures. Poetry, philosophy, art, religion, what you will, are but its expressions; they are not It. Thought is a key to unlock its prison, words are a vessel to carry its seed. But it is Reality of Realities, fact of facts, force of forces. It refutes demonstration; it unsettles finality; it defies experience. While all men are crying 'impossible,' it has sped and done. Even in those who deny it, it lies a latent spark; let them beware the conflagration when the wind of the spirit blows."

It is a fine passage breathing the aroma of a fine book, fit more than most we have perused of its like to arouse the dulled conscience of the comfortable, and breathe hope into the disinherited!

The Latins in the Levant. By William Miller. (John Murray.)

OF few historical books can it be said more unreservedly that the work is excellent throughout than of this history of mediæval Greece under Latin rule. The author is already known as a student of the history of the Balkan countries, in which he has travelled extensively; and he has the knowledge at first hand of geographical conditions and relations, without which his difficult subject could not have been competently treated. The subject is difficult to investigate, on account of the labour involved in collecting and co-ordinating the scattered material; and it is difficult to present without dissipating the interest, because there is no central theme round which the complicated relations of the numerous little States which arose in Greece and the islands after the Fourth Crusade can easily be grouped. Finlay dissipated the interest, and so did Hopf, each in his own way. The problem of treatment is even more difficult than in the case of the shifting history of the Hellenistic States and political combinations after the death of Alexander the Great. Mr. Miller discovered the secret that, if the stories of Corfu and the Duchy of Naxos were told separately, the histories of the other States could be wrought into a connected narrative, in which the main interest is concentrated on Achaia and Athens. The fortunes of Athens and the Peloponnesus have been related in greater detail by Gregorovius in his 'Geschichte der Stadt Athen im Mittelalter,' and Sir Rennell Rodd in his attractive book 'The Princes of Achaia'; but Mr. Miller's concise narrative represents the fruits of a wider study of special literature.

The history of the Duchy of Naxos, to which the last eighty pages are devoted, cannot be found elsewhere in a connected form. The author describes this Italian State as "the most romantic, and also the most durable, of all the creations of the Fourth Crusade." Founded in 1207, it survived the Turkish conquest of Constantinople by more than a century (till 1566). The founder was a Venetian citizen, Marco Sanudo, who established himself in Naxos, and it ought to have been from the first a dependency of Venice. But Sanudo was not a conspicuously devoted son of the republic. Instead of placing himself under Venetian protection, he did homage to Henry, the Emperor of Romania, who invested him with his island conquests as the "Duchy of the Dodekanesus," which soon came to be called the Duchy of Naxos or of the Archipelago. The latter name is a curious transformation of "Aigaion pelagos," a corruption which can hardly be accounted for without supposing some conscious suggestion of the prefix archi-("chief"). (See Notes and Queries, Jan. 2nd.) Under the second duke the suzerainty was transferred by the Emperor from himself to Villehardouin, the Prince of Achaia; and the duchy remained in feudal subordination to the Achaian principality till the end of the fourteenth century, though Venice sometimes asserted claims and often interfered. The story of the duchy is full of exciting and romantic incidents, such as the matrimonial adventures of the Duchess Fiorenza, who succeeded in 1361, and was kidnapped by Venice in order to prevent her from marrying Nerio Acciajuoli; or the foul murder of her son Niccolò dalle Carceri by Francesco Crispo; or the massacre of the islanders of Seriphos by the Venetian Niccolò Adoldo, "a perfect fiend in human shape." In 1418 John Crispo II. became duke through the influence of Venice, and acknowledged Venetian overlordship. At this time, when the Turks were raiding the Ægean coasts and islands, it was the habit of the Dukes of the Archipelago to light beacon fires to warn the Venetians of Negroponte of the approach of a Turkish fleet. As the gravity of the Turkish danger increased, the duchy became more and more dependent on the republic, which, after the fall of Constantinople and the Ottoman conquest of Morea and Athens, was the only power in the Levant that could maintain resistance to the Turk.

Of the islands included in the duchy none, perhaps, is more interesting than Andros, where the ruins of a baronial castle impressively remind the traveller of this episode in its history:—

"Situated on a rock at the mouth of the harbour, and approached by a stone bridge of a single span, which has defied the tremendous storms of seven centuries, and by three steps, it bore over the entrance a statue of Mercury. The statue has disappeared; but the castle of green stone, the work of Marino Dandolo, its first Venetian lord, still remains, though the sea has eaten away its face till it is as jagged as the teeth of a saw, and a vaulted roof inside one of the blocks of masonry may have been the baronial chapel."

The island ultimately came, through the marriage of Maria Sanudo, into the possession of the family of Sommaripa. Her son, Crusino Sommaripa, who was also lord of Paros and part-lord of Eubœa, is an interesting figure. He seems to have been imbued with the culture of the Renaissance. The Latin rulers in the Levant took no interest in classical Greece, but Crusino was an exception:—

"He had excavated marble statues at Paros, and was delighted to show them to Cyriacus of Ancona, who visited him more than once and inspected the quarries of that island whence marble was still exported. The antiquary found a ship laden with a cargo of the polished Parian stone lying in the harbour ready to sail for Chios, whose rich Genoese colonists ordered the material for their villas, and Crusino allowed him to send the head and leg of an ancient statue to one of his friends there. When, therefore, archæologists blame the Latin rulers of the Cyclades for destroying classical temples in order to build their own castles out of the marble fragments—an example of which may be seen at Paros itself—it is well to remember that some of them, like Crusino, did something for archæology—more, perhaps, than archæologists have ever done for the remains of the Middle Ages. Cyriacus himself mentions that he saw at Mykonos marble fragments of statues, which had been brought from Delos. Buondelmonti, a quarter of a century earlier, had noticed more than a thousand scattered on the ground of the sacred island whence he had in vain tried to raise the colossal statue of Apollo."

Still, notwithstanding a few exceptions, the truth is that, though the society in the Cyclades was not without culture in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, it missed its opportunities so far as archæology is concerned.

Mr. Miller has rigorously adhered to the narrative of events, and allowed himself little latitude for discussion. We confess that we miss some general consideration of the question, What permanent effects did the Latin occupation, for three hundred years more or less, exercise on the civilization of Greece and the Ægean?

The Story of a Lifetime. By Lady Priestley. With Illustrations from Original Drawings, &c. (Kegan Paul & Co.)

WE noticed on December 5th a book of memoirs in which a daughter of Robert Chambers formed the central figure; and now another daughter has published her recollections of an active and distinguished life. Indeed, a few identical letters appear in both volumes. There is this great difference between the sisters, however—that while Mrs. Frederick Lehmann retained her remarkable individuality, and became yet more interesting, after her marriage, Lady Priestley merged herself more thoroughly in her husband's career and work. Mr. R. C. Lehmann's book was a collection of letters, and good letters are always vivid. Lady Priestley's is chiefly an autobiography, and this needs, perhaps, some gifts which she has not cultivated. One misses the music and bookishness of the other sister, and Lady Priestley cannot quite rival Mrs. Frederick Lehmann's humour or literary charm—at least so far as the present volume may be taken as evidence. We will not commit ourselves to any generalization upon the sobering effect of professional life upon doctors' wives, but there is no doubt that the earlier chapters of this book are much more lively than those which relate to hospitals, antiseptics, &c. It must, however, be remembered that Lady Priestley wrote her recollections for her children only, who would naturally be more interested in the famous gynæcologist's work than unrelated readers. The book came to be published, as such books usually are, in consequence of the admiration of friends and the leakage of private copies.

Those were great days at Edinburgh, of which Lady Priestley writes with proper enthusiasm—when the Stuart "princes," John Sobieski and his brother, "two magnificent Highlanders," came laden with sweetmeats to Robert Chambers's house and drank porter out of old silver tankards, a feat which they repeated many years after, with the same tankards in Mayfair—days of strong heads and stout stomachs. The father writes of a jovial night with the Thrieplands of Fingask:—

"We carry on right merrily. Last night there was 'High Jinks' of the most extreme character. What would you think of a whole night of singing, dancing, and capering in all sorts of dresses, ending at about one in the morning with three or four of them, including Lord M[ansfield], roaring out the chorus of 'It's no use knocking at the door' at the top of their voices with the gesticulations of mountebanks?....The whole made good the saying that men are only overgrown laddies....This morning I don't know how we are all to face each other. There was a locking of doors to make the ladies submit to an accolade before escaping, but they picked Lord Charles's pocket of the key of the back door and stole away."

Lady Priestley herself danced endless Highland flings with "Christopher North" in his "stocking soles." The quaint figure of Charles Kirkpatrick Sharpe, who descended from the famous Sir Roger of Closeburn of "I mak siccar" notoriety, was a feature of Edinburgh in the first half of the nineteenth century, and he enjoyed advantages unknown to present visitors to Holyrood. In 1825 the relics of the dead were not treated with much reverence, and Sharpe wrote:—

"I remember many fragments of the royal bodies shown in the chapel of Holyrood House; and a Countess of Roxburgh entire, saving one hand. The woman went into the vault, and threw out the body on the grass—like a blackamoor's; with one white tooth, which gave an undescribable horror to the face—it used to make children squall prodigiously. In later times I once paid a visit to the chapel with some friends after the royal vault had been shut up. The woman who showed the place made a sad lament: 'O, gentlemen, if ye had cam here a while syne, I cud hae showed ye muckle mair in this place—King James the Fifth's shuther and Lord Darnley's thie banes; and a gude bit o' the Earl of Buchan's back—but there cam a French hizzie that deid here—sae first they pat her in a lead coffin; and then in a wooden ane; and set her up on four stoops, and closed up the door: they say she's to gang back to France whan the King gets there again—but I think she'll lie here till the day o' joodgement.' This in a very peevish tone."

Walter Scott, of course, comes largely into the reminiscences of Robert Chambers, and so does that "dapper little person" De Quincey, who "used to spend his Sundays at my father's house, and had to rush back to get into Sanctuary before twelve o'clock, after which hour he could be arrested. For the sake of convenience he left a pair of his Wellington boots in my mother's keeping."

There must have been joy in "Embro" when those two pioneers Bulwer Lytton and Simpson were experimenting on "the girls" with electro-biology and chloroform, respectively. Bulwer would make one of them try to climb the bell-rope, or stick another's hand irremovably to the wall, till his passes released it; whilst Simpson, with his chloroform simply sprinkled on handkerchiefs,

"would have half a dozen of us lying about in various stages of sleep. Our mother feared nothing, and was only too delighted to sacrifice, if unavoidable, a daughter or two to science!"

One would have liked to see Prof. Simpson and Dr. Lyon Playfair personating "the Babes in the Wood" in white muslin with short sleeves tied with blue ribbons, sucking oranges, as they wandered aimlessly through the wood. We fully believe that, though they "did not say much, they looked everything, and fairly brought down the house." Simpson, by the way, having, in concert with a professional colleague, duly "capped" Lady Priestley as a joke at the end of the proceedings in the Senate, discovered that he had really made her M.D., by virtue of the statute giving two King's physicians the power to confer degrees in medicine. We wonder if that statute is still valid.

If she was not strictly M.D., Lady Priestley took a vivid interest in Sir William's profession, and has much to say that was worth saying about the condition of the hospitals—especially the maternity wards—in the days of indiscriminate mixture of infectious diseases and ignorance of septic dangers. Her own interest in the Children's Hospital at Great Ormond Street is well-known to many; and Pasteur had few more enthusiastic sympathizers in his great work. There is perhaps rather too much of Pasteur and too little of herself in the latter part of the book, but these semi-professional chapters will doubtless attract some readers. A number of clever sketches by Noel Paton, "Dicky" Doyle, and others add considerably to the interest of these recollections.

The Life of Thomas Bailey Aldrich. By Ferris Greenslet. (Constable & Co.)

THE late Mr. Thomas Bailey Aldrich was better known on this side of the Atlantic as a poet than as a novelist, but in his own country his popularity was attained through fiction. It is as the author of 'Marjorie Daw' and 'The Story of a Bad Boy' that he will be best remembered in America. 'Marjorie Daw,' written in his thirty-seventh year, seized the fancy of the public at once. It was only a short story in the pages of The Atlantic Monthly. Yet those were the days when magazine literature was watched and valued. It is hard to think of the discovery of a new Kipling through the pages of a modern magazine. 'Marjorie Daw' was immediately translated into several foreign languages, and made Aldrich a European reputation. Four years earlier he had published 'The Story of a Bad Boy,' which, in Mr. Greenslet's phrase, has become an American "classic." We doubt if it is well known in this country. Both these stories embodied much of the essential Aldrich, who persisted, however, like all poets, in valuing his poetical work higher. In that he was probably right. Mr. Greenslet, a judicious and sympathetic biographer, considers that "it would be hard to find an English author who has made more of his native endowment." He had a few exquisite gifts, and he utilized them to perfection. His style was admirably cultivated, and chaste to a nicety. He had a passion for "good English," and he loathed "sloppiness" with a sincere hatred. Mr. Greenslet does not think, however, that his stories have "the potency of enduring life," accomplished as they are. In his poetry it is otherwise. Influenced by Tennyson, Longfellow, Chatterton, and Poe, he developed a pleasant individuality of his own. His melody was delightful, his fancy charming, and his sentiment delicately human. It is not for strength that we go to him, but rather for pretty touches of feeling which at times delight in being whimsical. Indeed, it is perhaps not too much to say that the characteristics of the man, humour and urbanity, are the dominant notes of his verse.

An urbane humour was certainly the striking feature of his social intercourse. According to Mark Twain, "Thomas Bailey Aldrich has said fifteen hundred if not fifteen thousand things as brilliant as the things Talleyrand said." There is abundant proof of his pleasant humour in these pages. Aldrich's letters are full of it. He is not an artificial "literary" letter-writer; his merit is that he is natural, spontaneous, and always light of wit. "I was 59 yesterday," he writes. "It is unpleasant to be 59; but it would be unpleasant not to be, having got started." These small sparkles light up a correspondence with gaiety; they leave temporarily upon one the impression of having been handsomely entertained by a friend.

Aldrich was not primarily of the Boston school, though he identified himself with it in later life. At one time he was a member of a coterie in New York which professed to despise Boston. But the "hub" claimed him when he came to settle there in an editorial chair. Born in 1836, he enjoyed the acquaintance of many distinguished men of letters of the nineteenth century. He was a friend of Lowell, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Longfellow, Mark Twain, Mr. Howells, and Bayard Taylor. His success as a poet came early, as at twenty-two he received appreciations from his contemporaries. In 1860 Lowell, in the editorial chair of The Atlantic Monthly, accepted a poem from Aldrich, and sent him a handsome letter.

"Twenty-five years later, when Aldrich in his turn had become editor of The Atlantic, he accepted a poem that Lowell sent him with a copy of this note. Lowell promptly called at the office to say that he was so enheartened by the recognition that he had about made up his mind to follow literature as a profession."

In 1863 Holmes wrote to the budding poet a characteristic and kindly letter of advice, in which he informed him that the poems "are most of them must, not wine. Happy man, whose voice time will be mellowing when he is cracking those of us your preterpluperfect contemporaries." Mr. Greenslet describes Aldrich at this time in these words:—

"Let him be in our minds for the rest of this chapter as an alert, slender young man with clear, steady, gray-blue eyes, and crisp, golden hair. Let us imagine his witty, winsome manner, with its slight touch of Parnassian dignity."

Aldrich's success in life was considerable. In later years he summed it up. He had had a salaried position for twenty-five years, which had enabled him to conserve his small patrimony and his literary royalties. From 1881 to 1890 he was editor of The Atlantic Monthly after much similar experience from the sixties onwards, and under his guidance the magazine was hailed as "the best-edited magazine in the English language." He was able to retire early and devote his time to his own work and European travel, of which he was fond. He died after an operation in the early part of 1907, displaying up to the last that sweetness of blood and fancy which had characterized his life. Here and there only are evidences of a certain distaste and disappointment. He was not satisfied with the American atmosphere. "If the average culture of the men who sit in judgment on American literature is so low," he writes, "what must be the intellectual state of the masses who are engaged in pursuits which afford them few chances for mental improvement?" Many years before Holmes had written to him:—

"You may have noticed that our poets do not commonly ripen well—they are larks in the morning, sparrows at noon, and owls before evening. One reason is that our shallow universal culture is wanting in severe standards of taste and judgment."

Aldrich dwelt with pleasure on his first recognition in Europe, which came from The Athenæum. Though he often visited Europe, it is strange how few references there are in his correspondence to his experiences there, or the literary acquaintances he made in England. Browning he does refer to; he found him a professed admirer of 'Marjorie Daw' and some of the poems.

"He was very cordial to me in a man-of-the-world fashion. I did not care greatly for him personally. Good head, long body, short legs. Seated, he looked like a giant; standing, he just missed being a dwarf. He talked well, but not so well as Lowell."

Of Whitman he wrote:—

"That he will outlast the majority of his contemporaries, I haven't the faintest doubt—but it will be in a glass case or a quart of spirits in an anatomical museum."

NEW NOVELS.

A County Family. By J. Storer Clouston. (John Murray.)

THIS somewhat slight story is virtually an ironical comedy of snobbery. A county magnate dies, full of riches and honours, leaving a mysterious will, which entrusts the interests of his heirs to the keeping of an equally mysterious friend of earlier years. The deftly developed climax shows the inheritors of his name, who are as fully instinct with fine shades and nice feelings as the famous Misses Pole, completely disillusioned as to the origin of their parent's birth and estate, and proportionately chagrined. There are some clever, though superficial character-studies—one in particular, of a vulgar coquette; while the sub-acid humour of the tale barely atones for its lack of breadth and sympathy.

The Sibyl of Venice. By Rachel S. Macnamara. (Blackwood & Sons.)

A MÆDIEVAL witch living on a back canal of modern Venice is the central figure of Miss Macnamara's series of sketches. Pia la Strega has numerous spells and charms wherewith to win back faithless lovers and call down calamities on the heads of rivals. But her powers are not only invoked on behalf of hapless lovers. Two of the girls who come to seek her advice are possessed with the lust of money, and even while they gain their desires, misfortunes overtake them. The book is picturesquely written, and Miss Macnamara has been successful in her sketch of Venetian life on those canals unfrequented by the tourist, but she is not greatly assisted by the too frequent use of words in italics, such as ma che, ebbene, &c.

The Baronet's Wife. By Florence Warden. (Fisher Unwin.)

THIS melodramatic story tells how a rather interfering, but well-intentioned mother and her daughter find their way into the house of a baronet to prevent the murder by his second wife of his invalid son, and how they discover that the step-mother is involved in a number of robberies from surrounding manor houses. Some exciting incidents are related, and the book, while sometimes lacking the minimum of verisimilitude necessary for works of its class, has something more than the virtues of the average "shocker."

The Whips of Time. By Arabella Kenealy. (John Long.)

THE question of heredity versus environment is Miss Kenealy's theme—a problem which, even in fiction, requires for its elucidation a more delicate medium than the good old device of changing two infants at nurse. Yet the result is an interesting and, on the whole, original story. We certainly find little of that subtle analysis of character for which the subject presents peculiar opportunities; for the most convincing person in the book—the beautiful demi-mondaine with her romantic surroundings and essentially prosaic nature—stands more or less apart from the main issue. The author's taste for melodrama is throughout conspicuous, but her peculiar theory with regard to athletic women has assumed a milder and more reasonable form. In construction there is a marked advance upon her earlier novels.

The Ways of Men. By Herbert Flowerdew. (Fisher Unwin.)

A PARVENU peer's son, while his wife lies dying, brutally tears a girl from her affianced lover and is afterwards married to her in France. Marriage with a sister-in-law is still illegal in England at the time of the story, and the husband has to confront an irate father, while the bride suffers at the hands of a hostile clerical uncle. The young man, disinherited by his father, appears to be within an ace of sacrificing his second love to his interests; but the book ends in his forswearing a third and more profitable infatuation, and in a display of fidelity to his second wife. Mr. Flowerdew tells a story which, without rising much above mediocrity, is at least free from dullness; but in depicting the central character of the book as the bully he really is, he has perhaps alienated sympathy more than he intended.

EGYPTOLOGICAL BOOKS.

The Book of the Kings of Egypt. By E. A. Wallis Budge. 2 vols. (Kegan Paul.)—Nothing is more important to the Egyptologist than a good working knowledge of the names of the different kings who reigned over ancient Egypt. It not only enables him to place at once in its historical setting any monument, however small, which bears a royal name, but also gives him the best and most dependable of all keys to the meaning, and sometimes the pronunciation, of a group of hieroglyphs. The only real clue we have to the sounds which Egyptian words in Pharaonic times conveyed to the foreigner's ear is to be found in the transcriptions of names like Rameses and Neb-maat-Ra into Semitic Babylonian written in cuneiform characters, and the perhaps more familiar appearance of Khufu, Khaf-Ra, and Men-khau-Ra in Greek dress, as Cheops, Chephren, and Mycerinus respectively. Moreover, it was the decipherment of the cartouches—as the curious oval frames with which Egyptian loyalty surrounded the royal throne-name from the time of the Fourth Dynasty are called—which first led Champollion to the recognition of the language in which all Egyptian inscriptions are written, and it is perhaps even now the best introduction to it. Hence a complete and ordered list of royal names and titles is invaluable to the student and the tourist alike, and it is wonderful to think how few have been the efforts to furnish them with this equipment. Lepsius, as Dr. Budge reminds us in his Introduction, did indeed publish in 1858 his 'Königsbuch,' which contained nearly all the royal names then discovered; but this was when Egyptology was hardly out of its cradle, and before the distinction of the different parts of the royal style or protocol had been attempted. Brugsch and Bouriant's 'Livre des Rois' in 1887 did something to fill the gap; but French scholars seldom court or expect a large circulation for their scientific works, and a copy of it is by this time very hard to come by. The field has thus been left clear for the present book, and we shall be astonished if its success does not repay the learned author for all the care and pains he has spent on it.

Dr. Budge prefixes to his king-lists an essay on Egyptian royal names which divides the full protocol into five parts. In this he follows the lines laid down by M. Moret in his excellent essay 'La Royauté Pharaonique,' and he adds to what was formerly known on the subject some new instances taken from the Nubian kings, whose pyramids he has himself lately explored in the ancient kingdom of Napata. He also gives a much-needed list of lesser titles, such as neb tauï ("Lord of the two lands"), neter nefer ("Fair God"), per aa ("Great House" or Pharaoh), with their later variants. Then follows a chapter on Egyptian chronology in which Dr. Budge not only enumerates the different sources, such as the Turin Papyrus and the Mural Tablets of Abydos and Saqqara, but also reproduces the essential parts of these last as well as the king-lists of Manetho. He then discusses briefly the different systems proposed for ascertaining the total duration of the dynasties catalogued by Manetho, and declares that that lately put forward by Prof. Eduard Meyer is the only one, besides that of Brugsch, "worthy of serious thought." He tells us, however, that Prof. Meyer is certainly wrong in making the date of Menes, the first king of the First Dynasty, as late as 3315, and that the interval between the Twelfth and the Eighteenth Dynasties—or, in other words, the rule of the Hyksos—must have been longer than the 200 years which Prof. Meyer would assign to it. This part of the book closes with a list of recent papers bearing on Egyptian chronology, of great interest to the reader who wishes to ascertain what has been said on the subject. Then follow the cartouches, and such of the rest of the protocol as can be collected, of all the kings, queens, princes, and princesses of Egypt, amounting to nearly a thousand persons in all, with the provenance of the monuments from which they are taken indicated in every case. The care with which this has been done can be judged from the fact that Dr. Budge has been able to collect no fewer than 141 royal names, exclusive of those known to belong to Hyksos monarchs, for the period between the Twelfth and the Seventeenth Dynasties, which is generally supposed to have been devoid of native kings. An excellent Index completes the book.

It may eventually be found that a few, though probably not many, of these names are duplicates, and some of Dr. Budge's identifications will not be endorsed by every other Egyptologist. This is particularly noticeable in the Thinite dynasties, where he equates Narmer not only with a supposed "Besh," but also with Khasekhemui, makes Perabsen the throne-name of Sekhemab, and omits the recently discovered Per-en-maat altogether. But Dr. Budge's experience in these matters is very great, and he is at least as likely to be right as any one else. Several points of interest will be gathered from a prolonged study of these lists, but in the meantime one or two may be mentioned. One is that the names of the Egyptian kings went through the same process of evolution as those of our own; and thus the simple "Men" with which Dr. Budge's list begins forms as great a contrast with the "Hunnu-nefer-maret-mert-Ptah-Tanen-su" of the last Ptolemy as do the names of Egbert or Alfred with the Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David, &c., of the eldest son of the Heir Apparent. Another is that while the titles, after increasing from one to five, remain fixed at the last number, the names added to them soon began to be settled by precedent instead of caprice, and to assume a predetermined form changing only with the dynasty. That this was done deliberately, and not by accident, is evident from a text found by Dr. Naville at Deir el-Bahari in which the whole process of choosing the names of the king is set forth, and it is declared that "the god suggested to the hearts of [the priests] to make the names in the resemblance of those which he had himself made formerly." It is moreover evident from the vastly greater number of names Dr. Budge has been able to collect than his predecessors, that the lacunæ in our knowledge of the broad lines of Egyptian history are being surely, if slowly, filled up, and that before long we ought to be able to construct an Egyptian chronology upon a firmer basis than the rickety "astronomical" foundation against which Dr. Budge warns us. We leave with regret a book the intrinsic value of which, together with its use as a work of reference, is a credit alike to the author and the great Museum whose Department of Oriental Antiquities he directs.

A History of the Ancient Egyptians. By James Henry Breasted. (Smith & Elder.)—This little volume is founded, as the author tells us in his preface, on the five volumes of 'Ancient Records' that we reviewed last year (see The Athenæum, No. 4151), and the author does not seem to have changed his views much in the interval, although he has incorporated in the present work some discoveries made since the publication of the larger one. He accepts Mr. L. W. King's contention as to the overlapping of the early dynasties of Babylonia, and thinks that the claim of Egypt to have possessed an earlier civilization than the former country is established by Prof. Eduard Meyer's remark that we have no Babylonian monument earlier than 3000 B.C. It is a curious coincidence that Dr. Budge deals with this very remark in the 'Book of Kings' noticed above, and disposes of it with the comment that Prof. Meyer's conclusion "agrees with his [i.e. the Professor's] preconceived belief." One is glad to notice that Dr. Breasted speaks of the transliteration question without heat; dispenses with the terrible commas and gaps used in the German system, of which he was formerly so warm a defender; and uses throughout a spelling which can be pronounced without any difficulties. The book should be very useful to the Bible students to whom it is primarily addressed.

The Temples of Nubia. By James Henry Breasted. (Chicago, Oriental Exploration Fund.)—The Monuments of Sudanese Nubia. (Same author and publisher.)—These two tractates, reprinted from The American Journal of Semitic Languages and Literature, together form the report of Dr. Breasted on the work of an expedition conducted by him into Nubia during the seasons of 1905-7 at the instance of the Chicago University's exploration fund. Its purpose was to inventory, photograph, and note for future excavation the antiquities of both Upper and Lower Nubia, and the materials thus obtained are worthy of every attention. As, however, the Report is stated to be merely preliminary, we propose to wait until the definitive one reaches us before giving it the extended notice it deserves. For the present, it may be noted that in his first season Dr. Breasted discovered on the cliffs at Molokab, near the little village of El Madik, the protocol of a king with the suten bat name of Khent-ab-Ra, which we do not find in Dr. Budge's 'Book of Kings,' and which the finder attributes to the Eleventh Dynasty. In the Sudan his greatest find was, perhaps, the temple of Sesebi, which he declares to have been the centre of the city "Gem-Aton," a town built by the heretic king, Amenophis IV., in honour of his new deity, and in imitation of the "Glory of the Sun-disk," or Tel el-Amarna. As the temple was later "usurped" by Seti I., the characteristic monuments of Khuenaton have hitherto escaped notice; but it is evident that if Dr. Breasted's contention survives critical examination, the site would repay excavation, and we might then know a good deal more of the rise and fall of this strange heresy than we do now. In one or two other places Dr. Breasted shows a disposition to correct statements made by Dr. Budge in his excellent work on 'The Egyptian Sudan,' but it will be well to await his detailed report before entering upon this. It is agreeable to notice that Dr. Breasted, although an American with very pronounced Berlinist tendencies, pays a handsome tribute to the beneficial effects of our rule in the Sudan, and the important interest taken by the Sirdar and his officials in the search for antiquities. His report, with the photographs which appear on every page, should be of the greatest use to scientific and other explorers alike.

New Light on Ancient Egypt. By G. Maspero. Translated by Elizabeth Lee. (Fisher Unwin.)—This is a translation of the author's 'Causeries d'Égypte,' reviewed in these columns on December 7th, 1907. The new title does not seem particularly appropriate. The other innovations are the cutting-out of the greater part of the author's preface, here reduced to a single paragraph and called a "Note"; the addition of twenty-eight photographs reproduced by process by way of illustrations; and an Index. The illustrations are for the most part fitted to the essays against which they appear, although we see no reason why the so-called "Menes" tablet, a discussion of which occupies the greater part of the essay on 'Archaic Egypt,' should be replaced in the illustration by the much-photographed carved slate of "Narmer." The Index is useful, and would have been more so had not its maker overdone the practice of indexing adjectives as well as, and sometimes to the exclusion of, nouns, as when "Old Testament" is indexed under "Old," and "Oasis" under "Great." A well-known Egyptologist appears under one of his Christian names.

As for the translation, the best that can be said for it is that it very seldom entirely misrepresents the meaning of the author, though it is far from giving any idea of his clear and brilliant style. "Les emprunts qu'il [i.e., l'art perse] fit à droite et à gauche" does not mean "the loans that it made right and left"; and M. Maspero would never, had he been writing English, have talked, as does the translator, of suppressing the partition walls when he meant to imply that they were pulled down. She also uses the feminine pronoun "her" in speaking of things that belong to masculine personages such as Triptolemus, Osiris, and Queen Thyi's father Juua; says "dry bricks" when she means sun-dried bricks, and "sense" when she should put "direction." Other mistakes are due to want of acquaintance with the subject-matter of the book. "Lever en roi" she translates "rising to be king," in ignorance that it was a commonplace in coronation scenes for the king's appearing on the throne like the sun rising above the horizon. "L'âge saïte" means not the age of the Sahid or Upper Egypt, but the age of the Pharaohs of Sais, under whom an archaizing movement in art took place. The expression "voix juste" should be rendered not by "voice in perfect tune," but by "rightly pronouncing," the literal translation of the words ma-kheru, by which the Egyptian implied that the initiated or "justified" dead was able to pronounce the spells which would free him from the terrors of the other world. It is worth while to translate M. Maspero's lighter articles for the benefit of those readers who cannot appreciate them in the original, but we think that the work should have been handed to an expert. Among misprints we have noticed "sgraffite" for graffiti, "Euboleus" for Eubouleus, "Assasif" for Assassif, and "Newbury" for Newberry.

A Guide to the Egyptian Collections in the British Museum. By E. A. Wallis Budge. (British Museum.)—This Guide has been written, as we learn from Dr. Budge's Preface, to supplement rather than to replace the Guides to the different galleries published some four years ago. It aims at giving an intelligible account of the history, religion, and art of ancient Egypt, together with a short description of the decipherment of the hieroglyphic characters and their related scripts. The whole of this is illustrated by references to the exhibits in the Museum, many of which are reproduced in the Guide, a handsome volume of some three hundred pages. The clear and concise style in which it is written should make it intelligible to those entirely unacquainted with its subject-matter, for whom, indeed, it forms the best introduction to Egyptology that they are likely to find. The National Collections, containing, as we are told, nearly 50,000 objects, are particularly rich in examples of the 'Book of the Dead,' which here receive adequate treatment; and in what he has to say with regard to the chronology Dr. Budge sets his face firmly against the last German pronouncement, and declares for the system of Brugsch, which would place the establishment of the monarchy in 4400 B.C. rather than for that of Prof. Meyer, which would reduce it to B.C. 3315. In this we think he is thoroughly well advised.

An Account of the Sarcophagus of Seti I., King of Egypt. By the same. (Soane Museum.)—This work, by the same author as the last, is descriptive of the large sarcophagus discovered by Belzoni, for many years known as the "Tomb of Osymandyas," and now in Sir John Soane's too little visited museum in Lincoln's Inn Fields. Dr. Budge has no difficulty in showing that while a part of the sarcophagus is occupied with extracts from the 'Book of the Dead,' the remainder is inscribed with the most perfect copy of the work generally called the 'Book of the Gates' yet known.

As, however, we have lately given a full account of this last-mentioned text in reviewing the author's 'Egyptian Heaven and Hell' (see Athen., No. 4100), we do not propose to dwell further upon it here. There can be no doubt about the attribution of the monument in question to Seti I. of the Nineteenth Dynasty, and the book should be in the hands of every visitor to the Museum.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Historical and Political Essays. By William E. H. Lecky. (Longmans & Co.)—This collection of essays and addresses fully justifies its publication, though the death of the lamented historian left some of the papers incomplete. Thus 'Israel among the Nations' stops short of the most vehement manifestations of the anti-Semite movement, while the article on 'The Private Correspondence of Sir Robert Peel' does not go further than Mr. C. S. Parker's first volume, and even so is more of a running commentary than a criticism. Still, Lecky never wrote anything that was not the outcome of thought and conviction, and the present volume is the more valuable because it contains in 'Formative Influences' an interesting piece of self-revelation, particularly as to the influence of Archbishop Whately on the young men with whom he came into contact. The personal element also agreeably colours Lecky's estimates of his three friends, that much underrated statesman the fifteenth Earl of Derby, Henry Reeve, and Dean Milman. "I rather like shooting," once said the first of them; "it prevents the necessity of general conversation." Of the Dean of St. Paul's we are told that not long before his death he went to an exhibition of contemporary portraits, but could not go through it. "When I found myself," he remarked, "surrounded by the likenesses—often the miserable likenesses—of so many I had known and loved, it was more than I could bear." Milman's writings receive their due, and perhaps a little more than their due; and in an excellent essay, 'Carlyle's Message to his Age,' the power of Carlyle's moral force, in spite of his exaggerations and perversities, is pointed out with temperate admiration.

Of the disquisitions on such wider topics as 'The Political Value of History' it is enough to say that a certain tendency towards truism does not really affect the merits of their luminous lessons. If some of us are aware that "a fatal and very common error is that of judging of the actions of the past by the moral standard of our own age," the scientific writers of the present school are too apt to forget that "the facts of history have been largely governed by its fictions."

From Ploughshare to Parliament: a Short Memoir of the Potters of Tadcaster. By Georgina Meinertzhagen. (John Murray.)—In its quiet way this memoir of the Potters of Tadcaster is uncommonly interesting. The social atmosphere resembles not a little that of a novel by Mrs. Gaskell. We start with John Potter, shopkeeper and farmer, who prospered so well that, when he died in 1802, he left 12,000*l.* behind him. "Honey, thee and me grow two hambling old folks; but thou art the better of the two," was nearly the last recorded observation of the worthy man. Of his numerous children, John, the eldest, failed in business, and, after living in hiding from his creditors, was shipped off to America, where he died of yellow fever. "It will be at least another month before another Ship sails from this Port," he wrote from Liverpool in 1795, on the eve of his departure; and he reached New York after a fairly calm passage of eight weeks and five days. William, the second son, was the oracle of the family, somewhat in the style of Polonius; for example, "Do keep an account of thy expenditure, and practise economy with an appearance of generosity." But, alas! William took to strong drink; there was a quarrel over money matters, and his sister Elizabeth trenchantly wrote: "I am sure you will approve of the principle of not letting such a knave walk the ground in quiet to his grave." The women of the family were gifted with spirit and circumspection, notably Catherine. Nothing could be more to the point than the warmth with which she retorted when her brother expressed doubts as to the prudence of her engagement to Mr. Sargeant, and the caution with which she evidently inquired into that favoured individual's prospects before she would have anything to do with him.

All the Potters had character. Richard, the fourth son, the central figure of the family group, was a capital specimen of middle-class grit. As a boy we find him horribly homesick as an apprentice to a Nottingham linendraper, and recalcitrant against the indignity of having to sit in the kitchen of an evening. Much admonished by William, he worked hard to improve himself. When placed in a shop at Birmingham, he and his mates started a French class with a Swiss lady from half-past five to eight in the morning, and for six years he kept a journal in quite passable French. We need not follow Richard Potter in his rise to be partner in the Manchester firm of Potter Bros. and member for Wigan, with a strong interest in the treatment of prisoners. His diaries are little more than condensations from the newspapers, though valuable as reflecting a sturdy and sensible Radicalism. But the letters written to him by Mary Seddon before their marriage are full of formal charm, though we have it on Mrs. Meinertzhagen's authority that the match did not result in happiness.

Social economics are freely illustrated in this agreeable record. Thus agricultural prices are freely quoted, and we read of a rape threshing in which nearly three hundred, counting children, were employed. Then there are the custom of "giving us a gentleman" after dinner as a toast, and formidable injunctions about wedding cake—a wedge of no less than 3 lb. to be sent to Miss Prescott. A countryman's happy day in London in 1807 included the spectacle of eight men hanged outside Newgate, followed by a visit to the British Institution of Painters. Mrs. Meinertzhagen chronicles this small but sparkling beer with a happy, familiar touch, and links the Potters of Tadcaster with their descendants, including the well-known politician T. B. Potter; and, in the present generation, Lady Courtney and Mrs. Sidney Webb.

My African Journey. By the Right Hon. Winston Spencer Churchill. (Hodder & Stoughton.)—The greater part of Mr. Churchill's book has already seen the light with illustrations in the pages of a monthly magazine, and will therefore be familiar to many readers, though some of it appears for the first time. Mr. Churchill has a graphic touch and a practised pen; and considered as letters to a newspaper, written in the midst of the scenes they describe, his chapters could hardly be better. As contributions to ethnology, social science, or politics, he himself would be the last to wish them classified; nevertheless, they contain many shrewd and suggestive remarks, and certainly set before us in clear and attractive form a number of facts about which most minds are hazy. He has a robust faith in the civilizing power of railways and cotton-mills, and the value of a civilization so produced; but we cannot say we envy the temperament that can spend three hours watching the Nile as it flows out of the Victoria Nyanza, and think all the time of the way to make it drive a turbine. Nor do we sympathize with the wish to change the "uncouth name" of Jinja into "Ripon Falls." But that is a matter of taste.

At Large, by Mr. Arthur C. Benson (Smith & Elder), is lighter, clearer, and much more sensible and bracing than his previous essays concerning life or things in general. It marks a great advance in respect that he has emancipated himself almost completely from the philosophico-sentimental atmosphere or haze which coloured his previous perceptions. The "sad intimité" so much beloved by him, and so cleverly attained in former books, has given way, and with it has departed much of the unconvincing and valueless suggestion of profound malaise which embarrassed his thinking. There is still, it is true, a suggestion that a kind of specialism about life in general is more urgent than any other kind of specialism; a complaint that, considering how much has been said, and sung, and written, and recorded, and prated, and imagined, it is strange to think how little is ever told us directly about life; a craving for books "in which one sees right into the heart and soul of another"; a peculiar joy in "confession of the frankest order." But Mr. Benson's conception of a "life of reflection" is becoming more reasonable. The account in chap. xii. of 'A Speech Day' is admirable "criticism of life." So, too, in a less degree, is the essay on 'Shyness.' The description of his house in the Isle of Ely captivates one's interest, and there are excellent little stories and some memorable remarks scattered throughout the book, though there are several things said which have previously been said better. There is still the "fatal facility" which leads to careless and slipshod passages:—

"It was Lord North, I think, who, when discussing with his Cabinet a list of names of officers suggested for the conduct of a campaign, said: 'I do not know what effect these names produce upon you, gentlemen, but I confess they make me tremble.'"

If Lord North or any one else had made such a remark, it would, we think, have fallen too flat for Mr. Benson to have heard of it. What was, or is supposed to have been, said was something different and witty: "I do not know what effect these names may have upon the enemy, but I know they make me tremble."

Again, we still discover specimens of the Bensonian platitude:—

"Of one thing, however, I am quite certain, and that is that travel should not be a feverish garnering of impressions, but a delicious and leisurely plunge into a different atmosphere."

What is the gentle reader to do when he comes across such a pronouncement as this? It is bound to leave him in a state of muddled indignation, like the countryman at a fair who finds that there is no pea underneath the thimble. We gather from the chapter on 'Contentment' that Mr. Benson has never properly considered with himself as to what a platitude is, or wherein lies its literary vice:—

"What I mean by a platitude is a truth so obvious that it is devoid of inspiration, and has become one of the things that every one does so instinctively, that no reminder of them is necessary."

All that need be said of this is that the second part of it has plainly no business there. Its presence spoils, gratuitously, an excellent definition, and if in his next book Mr. Benson tells us that the longer he lives the more inclined he becomes to take the view that generally, and upon the whole, honesty will be found to be expedient as well as right, he will be continuing to commit a gross literary error in spite of the fact that our jails and workhouses are crowded.

Reminiscences of a Stonemason. By a Working-Man. (Murray.)—The author of this book is no ordinary man. He describes his volume as "a true and faithful description of the everyday life (during practically half a century) of an everyday working-man." We imagine that there are very few working-men who could write with such charm and power. The author is a man of real culture. He tells in simple and direct manner, without any sign of the artificial or commonplace, the story of his failures, troubles, and successes. Left an orphan, he was placed in a home for orphans, and recalls his early love for reading. We next see him in one of the Northern counties under the guardianship of grandparents. His relatives desired that he should become a pupil-teacher. Possessed of a very sensitive nature, he is so hurt by the conduct of his superiors, who seemed jealous of his ability, that he turns his back upon teaching, and begins life on his own account. First he finds employment in his uncle's grocery business, and then is attracted to London, where he starts work as a labourer. He has an evident fondness for change, and we find him in many places. He makes intelligent comments on his occupation and surroundings. He is at work in a quarry:—

"Well, when I recall the means and appliances that I found in that quarry and compare them with those of to-day (with the Employers' Liability Act in operation), I don't wonder that some men say that the result of a lot of recent legislation will be that the average workman will become more helpless every year."

Work becomes so scarce that he emigrates to Canada, to find things no better; and they are even worse in the United States. With a somewhat heavy heart he returns in absolute poverty to England. Then he marries:—

"The woman I married had as little as myself, but she was possessed of character, and principle, and but for her I am certain that, many years ago, I would have gone down in the struggle for existence."

Again and again misfortunes come; work is scarce. The writer tells of a conversation with a clergyman:—

"He had the idea, like all his class (except perhaps a few of the very old clergymen), that a workman that was steady, sober, and a bit of a scholar was certain of constant employment. I combated this view, and said that, though a foreman must be steady, and have a little scholarship, yet every workman who was sober, attentive and given ever so slightly to books, was regarded as a possible rival by the foreman, and where the job was a small one, he was looked upon as a possible competitor by the builder himself."

In another place he says:—

"I am as sober as any man except a teetotaller, and I know plenty more, and they are without a job, whilst the boozier has jobs thrust upon him."

Not much encouragement to temperance advocates!

At last brighter days come, and the man who has spoken as if his very virtues were a hindrance is at peace:—

"It is to-day Easter, 1908, and I am writing these lines while my two sons are enjoying themselves in the next room.....My wife, having satisfied herself that her grandsons enjoyed their Easter Eggs, is busy preparing supper. I linger over these last lines till a melody comes from the other room. 'Tis the opening theme of the overture to 'Tannhäuser'; one is at the piano, the other has taken the 'cello. One piece succeeds another till my wife opens the door: 'Come, it is time to stop.' Yes, it is time to stop."

The author's sincerity, candour, and simplicity combine to make a volume of singular attractiveness. Multitudes of working-men would profit by reading it.

Out - of - Doors in the Holy Land. By Henry Van Dyke. Illustrated. (Hodder & Stoughton.)—Of the writing of books about the Holy Land there is no end. Mr. Van Dyke went to Palestine in the true spirit of the pilgrim, but his book makes no pretensions to archaeological or critical value. Whatever merits it has are personal. It shows the writer to be a man of deep religious feeling, with a vein of poetry, and a real sympathy with nature. It is full of vivid little sketches by one who can see:—

"In the valley night had come. The large, trembling stars were strewn through the vault above us, and rested on the dim ridges of the mountains, and shone reflected in the puddles of the long road like fallen jewels."

Here and there one finds a touch of humour, as when the German market-gardeners of the sect of the "Templars" are described:—

"They are a people of antique theology and modern agriculture. Believing that the real Christianity is to be found in the Old Testament rather than the New, they propose to begin the social and religious reformation of the world by a return to the programme of the Minor Prophets. But meantime they conduct their farming operations in a very profitable way.....and they make an excellent wine which they call 'The Treasure of Zion.' Their effect upon the landscape, however, is conventional."

There is good writing in the book, with a happy, reverent, but not too credulous, feeling for holy sites, and still more for "the big out-of-doors, where the sky opens free above us, and the landscapes roll away to far horizons." Mr. Van Dyke and his three friends travelled with tents, and avoided the disillusion of the first view through the window of a railway carriage. As he wisely observes, "the first taste of a journey often flavours it to the very end." He says many other wise things, and sometimes his ideas are suggestive; and although his illustrations are queerly coloured, his book should be a welcome present to devout people who care more for tone and impressions than bald information. For such there is not a jarring note in the volume.

Little People. By Richard Whiteing. (Cassell & Co.)—The "Little People" of Irish superstition—"the ancient inhabitants of the country, still waiting for a turn of the luck, and meanwhile lying low"—have suggested the title of this delightful volume of essays; but the "Little People" here described with Mr. Whiteing's quick sympathy and understanding are the world's "nobodies and failures," together with all the host of the unassertive and unambitious to be found in every class; and the main body of such may be shortly designated as "ratepayers." It is from one called "The Ratepayer" that the author purports to glean much information concerning the lives and habits of his fellows, and the occasional glimpses given of the character of this personage, illustrating his advance from the semi-divine instincts of childhood to sordidly successful middle-age, are both touching and human. In a lighter vein, but no less charming, are the essays on 'Little People in Love' and 'Little People in Politics'; while that entitled 'A Little Rest Cure' is a masterpiece of unobtrusive pathos. For its humour and kindness, combined with an unerring eye for foibles and follies, the book is one to be read with real pleasure.

COLLOQUIALISM IN THE DRAMATIC BALLAD.

I FIND myself at issue with the editor of The English Review on the subject of colloquialism in the English ballad. Many years ago I had some printed copies made of Rossetti's ballad 'Jan Van Hunks,' in which I carefully preserved all the colloquialisms that I found in the manuscript, such as "they've" for "they have," "he's" for "he has," &c. When, at the request of the editor, I consented to have the ballad published in The English Review, I furnished him with one of these printed copies. On reading the ballad in the Review I find that, in the form printed there, the editor has in a few cases departed, in regard to colloquialisms, from the printed copy I sent him, and given "they have" for "they've," and "he has" for "he's."

In a certain essay on the Border Ballads, which I published many years ago, I endeavoured to show that the dramatic ballad holds a unique place in literature. As a condensed quintessential drama it allows, and even demands, the use of all the realistic resources at the command of the dramatist. Among these are such colloquialisms as

He's mounted her on a milk-white steed,
And himself on a dapple grey,

in 'The Douglas Tragedy'—a form used in scores of other ballads.

THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON.

THE SHAKESPEARE QUARTOS.

AFTER Mr. A. W. Pollard's letter of Jan. 9th. I should not have thought fit to add any words of my own, were it not that Mr. Lee's mention of Mr. A. H. Huth, to whose kindness I am variously indebted, reminds me that there is a minor point on which I can supplement my article in The Library for October.

It is quite true that after the appearance of my first article, last April, Mr. Huth expressed himself sceptical of the value of the argument from watermarks; and it is also true that, being fortunate enough to have a complete set of the quartos in question in his own magnificent library, he enjoys the same "exceptional opportunities for pursuing this side of the inquiry" that are offered to students at the British Museum, the Bodleian Library, or at Trinity College, Cambridge. In my second article, however, I endeavoured to show that, even accepting the theory of watermarks which Mr. Huth has put forward as the result of his own observations, the orthodox view of the quarto dates still makes altogether unreasonable demands upon coincidence. This is a question requiring neither "exceptional facilities" nor "indefinite leisure" to decide, and upon which any intelligent bibliographer is as competent to form an opinion as Mr. Huth or Mr. Lee himself. But, further, I do not accept Mr. Huth's theory of watermarks, and it is upon this point that I wish to add something to what I previously wrote in The Library.

Our point of difference is rather technical, affecting the permanence of the watermark. Mr. Huth thinks that this was moulded and fixed rigidly on to the frame; I think it was fashioned by hand and more or less loosely attached. Through the kindness of Mr. Harold Bayley I have recently had the opportunity of examining an early nineteenth-century frame, and I found the watermark laced thereto with a very fine wire. This I suppose to have been the traditional method, for one can hardly suppose the elaborate attachment contemplated by Mr. Huth to have preceded the much simpler one here found. But it is pretty evident that the frame of 1620 must have been a comparatively rude ancestor of that of 1820; and if the lacing were at all carelessly done, a considerable amount of shifting and bending of the mark might occur. For the moulding there is, I believe, no evidence of any kind; the suggestion is based on the assumption that the mark must have been a fairly permanent design. But the number of different watermarks found in old books is far too great to allow us to suppose that they corresponded in any way to modern trade-marks. Every maker must have used numbers of them. Indeed, the evidence points to each individual frame having had a mark, perhaps resembling that found in other frames, but yet more or less easily distinguished from them. And if that was so, it is pretty certain that M. Briquet is right in giving the watermark a shorter life than the frame. Thus I think that, alike as regards the antiquarian facts themselves and their bearing on the date-theory, Mr. Huth's contentions prove unsatisfactory.

But all this is really of very secondary interest. If, as Mr. Lee would clearly like to believe, the whole of my theory regarding the quartos is mere moonshine, it ought to be easy enough to dispose of it. Let him, or any bibliographer of more "indefinite leisure and opportunity for research," produce ten quartos of different dates, covering any twenty years between 1590 and 1640, which show anything like the same connected series of watermarks as that found in the Shakespeare quartos under discussion, and I grant that there will be little left of my theory.

Since writing the above I have seen Mr. Lee's letter of Jan. 16th, and should like to be allowed one or two observations. In The Athenæum of Jan. 2nd Mr. Lee states that on May 2nd last he pointed out "that the evidence which Mr. Greg adduced was incapable of the positive interpretation which he placed upon it"; and further, that in The Library for October "Mr. Greg admits that a substantial portion of his testimony proves on further inquiry to be unsafe or untenable." Since a casual reader might very naturally take this to mean that Mr. Lee had pointed out the defect in the evidence now withdrawn, I beg leave to state that this is not so. Mr. Lee's criticisms, as I have shown in The Library, were in fact wholly irrelevant, and the evidence was withdrawn on quite other considerations. Moreover, unless assertion be argument, Mr. Lee has certainly never shown—has indeed hardly attempted to show—that my evidence was insufficient for my conclusions. As to the position of my case after the withdrawal of a portion of the evidence, I may refer to my letter of May 30th, in which I explained that I relied upon two quite independent proofs (from the device and from the watermarks), either of which, if substantiated, I held to be conclusive. One of these has proved fallacious and has been withdrawn, and I consequently now rely on the other. This really simplifies the question by narrowing it to a single issue, and I submit that there is neither reason nor fairness in Mr. Lee's remark that it "involves the whole theory, for all apparently except its parents, in a cloud of doubt and uncertainty." If Mr. Lee has no leisure or no inclination to acquaint himself with the facts, that is a matter which interests neither me, nor, I should imagine, other readers of The Athenæum.

The bulk of Mr. Lee's letter, giving details of the Virginia volume destroyed or lost in 1895, is interesting, but hardly relevant to any of the points raised by Mr. Pollard. The particular point upon which the latter suggested that Mr. Lee might furnish more explicit information was the occurrence of the collection of quartos in question in its contemporary binding. Since Mr. Lee has refrained from answering this demand, it is to be assumed that, when he wrote last spring that certain of these quartos are sometimes found in "a plain brown calf cover dating from early in the seventeenth century," and that so bound they are invariably accompanied by the other members of the group, he was merely judging from the one notable instance to which Mr. Pollard himself had previously drawn attention.

Mr. Pollard has expressed a hope that he may be able shortly to produce evidence in confirmation of my theory. For my part, having been fortunate enough to convince those whose adherence to my theory most confirms my belief in its truth, I rest content, satisfied that I leave the further development of it in abler hands than mine.

W. W. GREG.

As Mr. Greg and Mr. Sidney Lee have done me the honour to mention my name in connexion with the Shakespeare Quarto controversy, perhaps I may be permitted to make a few remarks.

Mr. Greg has, as was to be expected from so distinguished a bibliographer, brought forward a very strong case in support of his hypothesis that a false date has been given to certain of the quartos, and that it is so is shown by the endorsement of Mr. Pollard. The fact that it would not greatly matter if the dates of the quartos really were forged is overmastered by the supreme interest of anything connected with the bibliography of Shakespeare's works. It is not a case, however, for anybody to take sides on, but for all who can help in an interesting point to assist to the best of their ability.

Now Mr. Greg's strongest argument, to my mind, is the probability that the quartos in question are far commoner than any of the others, and on this matter Mr. Lee will no doubt be able to help. Still, the mere fact that they are commoner is capable of more than one explanation, such as that of Mr. Pollard's which he has now (I think a little prematurely) given up. I may state, however, in connexion with this point, that if the original volume of plays bound together measured 7½ in. by 5½ in. uncut, then my copy of 'Henry V.' was printed separately, as it measures 5½ in. although it is cut.

Another strong point of Mr. Greg's (for consideration for your space will allow only a very short statement) is the appearance of the "Heb Ddieu" device on the title-pages of all the volumes except one. This device, as Mr. Greg explains, belonged to R. Jones, whose business was sold in 1598 to W. White, who is not known ever to have made use of the device in question. Nor was it used again, as far as we know, until it came into the possession of Jaggard, unless we may accept the plays professing to have been printed by Roberts as having been actually printed by him. Still, it does not follow that because a business was sold the purchaser also bought the whole printing stock; and the fact that the "Heb Ddieu" device was never used by White is surely an indication that he never bought it. Even if he did, the ornaments of the various printers are known to have passed from one to the other in a most perplexing way even when the businesses were not sold. And both this argument and the further one of the numerals used in the dates, which are like those first known to have been used by Jaggard, may quite possibly be upset by further discoveries, as in the case of the Eagle and Key device.

Looking at the typography, we are told by Mr. Greg that the plays of 'The Merchant of Venice' and 'King Lear' were printed in imitation of the others professing to be of the same year. I have not got the other 'King Lear,' but in the two 'Merchants of Venice' one opens with "An. (I)n sooth," while the other has "(A)nthonio. In sooth." How easy to have made them similar, or to have put a typographical ornament at the head in place of the elaborate cut of the Roberts! Why, again, are the 'King Lear' of 1608 and 'The Merchant of Venice' of 1600, if both printed in 1619, not printed with the same type, although at first blush it is apparently the same?

Passing to the watermarks, on which Mr. Greg chiefly relies, I can, out of consideration for your space, as in the other arguments, state only a few points. Mr. Greg argues that the watermarks prove all the paper used for the various editions to be from one batch, which could not have been made from earlier wires, since these wore out in about a year. I venture to think, however, that the marks which are apparently the same are not all from the same wire. To take the first mark I came across that is common to the 'Midsummer Night's Dream' 1600, 'King Lear' 1608, and 'Merry Wives' 1619, it differs in measurement as much as one and a half millimeters. Mr. Greg replies that this may be due to unequal contraction on drying; but if this is so, it is a very considerable one, and amounts to three-eighths of an inch in a page of seven inches. In an experiment with modern paper I found a contraction, when paper was wetted and dried, of one in twenty-eight. Nor if the marks were absolutely identical would that be an actual proof, since we do not know how these wires were made. It is quite possible they were made in a mould, so that successive batches from different wires would all have the identical and same-sized mark. Why these marks are what they are, what they were for, whether they were the sign of the maker, or referred to the quality or the size, we have yet to learn, if we ever do.

ALFRED H. HUTH.

TEACHERS' REGISTRATION COUNCIL.

IN your report of the meeting of the Assistant Masters' Association the summary of the President's address contains the following paragraph:—

"The Registration question was a good illustration of the necessity for co-operation, for it was now evident that the Government was unwilling to accept as 'representative' Dr. Gow and his friends, but insisted upon dealing only with the accredited representatives of the various sections of the profession."

I venture to think that these words ought not to be attributed to Mr. Cholmeley, who knows as well as anybody that the scheme for a Registration Council, which I was instructed to submit to the Board of Education, was in fact drawn by the "accredited representatives" of the twelve chief educational associations, including the Assistant Masters' Association, and was expressly ratified by the Councils of those associations before it was submitted.

The expression "Dr. Gow and his friends" is, I hope, in most contexts a fair description of the meeting of these representatives; but in a certain context it is inappropriate, as suggesting that I am the spokesman only of a private coterie that is trying to secure the control of other people's business. With this connotation, the expression is unfair, and I am entitled to resent it. The facts are these. In February, 1908, I was asked, on behalf of the Federal Council (representing seven associations) and the National Union of Teachers, to convene a meeting between them and four other named associations of teachers. I knew that other conveners had been proposed, but I could not refuse the request on that account, and I called the meeting, as desired, on February 29th. The scheme of a Registration Council then prepared was, as I have said, ratified by the several associations represented, and sent by me to the Board of Education on March 18th. After an interview with Sir Robert Morant and some correspondence, the same representatives of the same associations resolved, on October 10th, once more "to press" the same scheme on the Board of Education, and deliberately challenged the existing deadlock. What we are contending against is Sir R. Morant's theory that a Council is not "representative of the teaching profession" (under the Act of 1907), unless it includes a representative teacher of every subject of instruction. JAMES GOW.

TUDOR SCHOOLBOY LIFE.

January 18, 1909.

THERE are two statements in the review of my book in your last issue for which I do not wish to be considered responsible.

1. Vives's name is twice printed as "Jean" Luis Vives. I gave it as Juan Luis Vives. Vives was not a Frenchman.

2. Your review states that Vives insisted strongly on the "necessity of teaching pure and correct English, and points out the advantage to all English scholars," &c. This statement is highly improbable, and certainly was not made by me. Vives was not an Englishman.

I am responsible for the statement that Vives strongly commended the study of the vernacular by teachers. But, in the absence of any direct statement to the contrary, may we not suppose that Vives, by the "vernacular," would have in mind the Spanish language? For he was a Spaniard.

FOSTER WATSON.

THE SEAL OF DORCHESTER.

I CANNOT repress a smile at the ad captandum "does not deny" of your correspondent Sir R. Edgcumbe, considering that in my previous letter the history of the seals used in Dorchester from the reign of Edward II. to 1836 (later than which none of the town Minute Books were submitted to my examination) was set forth in some detail, to which I must refer your readers.

I am not concerned with what happened in 1897, when the town was induced—I gather on Sir R. Edgcumbe's initiative—to turn its back upon the seal displaying the arms of its greatest benefactor, Charles I., which it had used for 268 years, and to revert to the use of one of the seals abrogated in 1629, ignoring the earliest seal of all, which carried the municipal history of Dorchester back to the reign of the second Edward, and was still in use by the Bailiffs and Burgesses in 1610–11, and probably till 1629.

The question raised by Sir R. Edgcumbe concerns the certificate given by Clarencieux in 1565, and it will be sufficient if I confine myself to showing that this document, which he holds so highly in estimation, is so carelessly drawn as to be of little value, being apparently compiled from hasty notes, without subsequent verification or collation.

1. The arms of France, which it gives in trick (without tinctures, and not blazoned), are neither France ancient nor France modern, but consist of six complete fleurs-de-lis and nothing more, and are not semée of fleurs-de-lis, as, e.g., displayed on the recently revived seal. I am therefore correct in saying that the arms in the certificate are those of France, without attempting more precise definition—a course which had already been taken by the editors of Hutchins's 'Dorset' in 1865. This I have before stated, and I regret having to repeat it.

2. This seal is that of the "Bailiffs" of Dorchester only, whereas the certificate states that it was "of auncientie" used by the Bailiffs, Constables, and Burgesses—a more than doubtful statement, inasmuch as Constables were first granted to the town in 1485, not above 80 years (or a long lifetime) before Clarencieux came, and were inferior ministers, at no time forming part of the style and title of the town.

3. The certificate also mentions one Christopher Hole as Recorder, although no functionary of that designation existed in Dorchester before 1610, when a Recorder was first granted by the sovereign.

4. In the sketch of the seal even the name DORCESTR'E is wrongly copied.

5. The counterseal, which is also sketched, is drawn as large as the seal, though in reality of smaller dimensions.

6. But beyond this, the certificate actually makes the counterseal bear the legend COMITATVS DORCESTR'Æ. This is an extraordinary error, for Dorchester never had been raised to the dignity of a county, and on reference to the seal itself the words are found to be COMITATUS DORS'—Dors' standing for Dorsetie, of Dorset, which Clarencieux mistook for Dorcestrie, and so certified.

A ratification containing so many inaccuracies, and so cardinal an error, can have the least possible evidential value. Yet this is the document to which Sir R. Edgcumbe pins his faith.

The seal of the "Bailiffs" without doubt was registered at the College of Arms, after the Visitation of 1565, as showing France ancient; but it is equally true that this seal, by that time changed to that of the "Bailiffs and Burgesses" under the charter of 1610, was registered there, at the close of the Visitation of 1623, as showing France modern. These are the only occasions on which the College has taken corporate action regarding the seal of Dorchester.

It is scarcely necessary for me to add that the illustrations inserted in the "portly" volume were reproduced as giving an old plan and views of the town, and not on account of the circumstance that two of them show a small armorial shield in the margin.

C. H. MAYO.

INCORPORATED ASSOCIATION OF HEAD MASTERS.

THE nineteenth annual general meeting of the Incorporated Association of Head Masters was held at the Guildhall on Tuesday and Wednesday in last week. Dr. Upcott (Christ's Hospital) presided over a good attendance of members from all parts of the country, and kept such a firm hand on the discussions that the proceedings on the second day terminated two hours before the usual time. In his presidential address he said that the problems which lay before teachers were sufficiently outlined in the subjects proposed for discussion. First and foremost was the status and character of the teacher, to which question all others were subordinate. No system of education, however sound, would be truly and permanently successful unless they had the right persons to carry it into practice, and the right persons could not be secured unless the profession of teaching was put on a sound basis. Under the head of the problem of the teacher came the questions of registration, training, salaries, and superannuation. That of inspection, though important, was hardly ripe for discussion. For himself, he believed inspection to be a healthy tonic for both head and assistant masters. The old-fashioned examination on paper was often sadly barren, and if a system of inspection could bring about variety, without insisting on uniformity, it was a consummation devoutly to be wished. Referring to the question of registration, he believed it was capable of settlement. Two things should be steadily kept in view: the maintenance of their claim as professional teachers to have a voice in the formation of the Registration Council, and the necessity for moderation of language, the avoidance of anything which might make the settlement of this important question more difficult. His final word was a suggestion for a definition of education. It appeared to him that the fault of modern theories of the subject was that they followed the dangerous line of least resistance. "Teach a boy to like what he does, and to do what he likes," was the cry of many modern reformers. But if education were granted to be in its final purpose the strengthening and building-up of character, the truest definition might be "the art of teaching the young to learn to do the things that they do not like to do." If they could more generally adopt such a definition as embodying the general purpose of all their work they would be laying a good foundation for the time to come in a moral as well as in an intellectual sense.

The first subject put down for discussion was the system of "free places" insisted upon by the Board of Education regulations as a condition of Secondary School grants. Canon Swallow (Chigwell) moved, and it was unanimously resolved,

"That when the number of free places in a school amounts to 25 per cent of the whole number of pupils, it should not be necessary in subsequent admissions to throw open 25 per cent of the admissions, provided always that the 25 per cent of free places in the school is kept up; and that where the percentage approved by the Board of Education is less than 25 per cent, the same principles should be applied to the smaller percentage."

Mr. Shaw Jeffrey (Colchester) moved, and it was agreed,

"That in estimating the number of free places, the principle of a distinction being made between local and non-local schools, and of considering the comparative proportion of local and non-local pupils in the same school, deserves cordial approval."

Mr. MacCarthy (Birmingham) moved

"That it is not desirable to confer upon the parents of a pupil admitted as a 'free-placer,' or as a holder of a terminable scholarship which counts as a free place, the permanent right of exemption from all payment of tuition fee so long as he continues to be a member of the school, without any reference to the judgment of the Head Master or of the Governing Body upon his ability to derive advantage from continuing to remain at the school."

This also was carried, with two dissentients.

The next subject was the proposed Teachers' Registration Council, and the Association adopted a resolution which was tantamount to a vote of censure on the Board of Education. It was couched in the following terms:—

"That this Association instructs the Council to take such further steps as may seem good to them to bring about a plan of registration in concert with other educational societies willing and qualified to co-operate; and is of opinion that no efficient Registration Council can be formed which is based on particular subjects of teaching rather than on the general type and grade of the education represented."

An amendment, moved by Canon Bell, which would have meant the summoning of a conference by the Federal Council of Secondary School Associations to discuss the whole question de novo, was rejected by a large majority. The Rev. W. Madeley (Woodbridge) in moving the resolution said that the ship of registration was on the rocks, and that her officers were strongly of opinion that it was the fault of the rocks. He did not believe that the Secretary of the Board of Education had been approached in the proper way. Mr. J. H. Yoxall, M.P., General Secretary of the National Union of Teachers, who attended by special invitation, said that Mr. Madeley's speech, instead of being an effort to get the ship off the rocks, was rather an invitation to the crew to mutiny. This was not a matter of registration alone. At the back of it was the great struggle, which had already begun, between the existence of teaching as a profession, and the demand and intention of the administrators of the country to reduce teaching to a State function, and teachers to the condition of State functionaries. The teachers with whom he was particularly associated were heartily with the Association of Head Masters in the belief that a proper Registration Council should be set up, and that a Register on the lines suggested by Sir Robert Morant was impossible. Canon Swallow wished the Board of Education to understand that teachers were determined to have a Register. Other speakers contended that the Board of Education was determined to wreck any workable scheme that was proposed.

On the question of training in Secondary Schools it was resolved, on the motion of Mr. C. J. Smith (Hammersmith),

"That this Association welcomes the new departure made by the Board of Education in issuing Regulations for the Training of Teachers for Secondary Schools, 1908, as a recognition of a principle maintained by the Association, especially in connexion with registration of teachers."

Mr. G. H. Burkhardt (Swindon), in an interesting speech describing the foreign methods of training teachers, moved, and it was agreed,

"That the Council be instructed to appoint a Committee to watch the working of the Regulations for Student Teachers."

The Honorary Secretaries, Canon Swallow (Chigwell) and Dr. McClure (Mill Hill), and the Treasurer, Mr. W. G. Rushbrooke (St. Olave's), were re-elected, and Mr. R. W. B. Buckland was elected Honorary Legal Adviser; and the proceedings of the first day terminated with the presentation of the reports of committees, which were all received without much discussion, with the exception of the Report of the Joint Committee on National Defence, against which two Head Masters of schools belonging to the Society of Friends, Mr. Arthur Rowntree (York) and Dr. Bevan Lean (Sidcot), made a protest.

Before the business of the meeting was resumed on the second day, the members of the Association attended service in the church of St. Lawrence Jewry. A sermon was preached by the Bishop of Ely, who said that parents regarded education much in the same way as they regarded life insurance, as a provision for the children. Education beginning and ending with the success of the individual was frankly selfish. Scholarships often had a sinister moral result, inculcating that money was the proper reward of ability. Incentive to emulation in education was inevitable, but its use must be kept within narrow bounds.

Mr. J. W. Iliffe (Sheffield) moved

"That the Association take steps to secure an adequate scheme for the superannuation of masters in Secondary Schools, in conjunction with the Association of Education Committees and other bodies."

Mr. R. W. Hinton (Cricklewood), in seconding, said that no system would be satisfactory unless it were national and elastic in its regulations. Mr. G. H. Burkhardt pointed out that there was already a Bill in existence—the Local Government Officers' Superannuation Bill—which with slight modifications could be made applicable to the staffs of Secondary Schools. Mr. R. C. Gilson (Birmingham) said that the more they strove to secure a Government scheme, the more they were rivetting the links which made the teacher a State functionary. The resolution was passed unanimously.

Mr. G. H. Clarke (Acton) proposed:—

"That the Association regards with approval attempts made to remove the inconsistencies of grammatical terminology which confront a young student who has to deal with several languages simultaneously."

Prof. Sonnenschein (Birmingham), who spoke by special invitation, said that the present differences in grammatical terminology had an incalculably bad influence on language-teaching. Co-operation on the part of teachers of ancient and modern languages was urgently wanted, with a view to the creation of a standard terminology which should have a relative fixity, though it might be modified from time to time to meet fresh needs and advances in science. Few new terms were needed: what was wanted was rather an economical use of the terms already existing.

An amendment moved by Mr. W. J. Addis (Brockley), to the effect that the Association would regard with approval attempts made to account for the difference of grammatical terminology, was defeated, and the resolution was adopted, with the following rider, proposed by Mr. W. W. Sawtell (Uxbridge):—

"That this Association recommended the Council to take steps to meet the Classical Association, the Modern Languages Association, and the English Association to formulate a scheme of common terminological usage on definite lines."

Mr. Jenkyn Thomas (Hackney Downs) moved

"That this Association is of opinion that the time has come when the representation in the House of Commons of teachers of Secondary Schools should be secured."

He said that the officials of the Board of Education were the most powerful and autocratic of the permanent Government officials. The Parliamentary Under-Secretary and the Minister for Education were transient, embarrassed phantoms, and exercised but little control over the Board's officials, whose actions in many matters affecting Secondary Schools, and especially registration, have given cause for grave disquietude. Other professions had taken care that they should in some way be represented in Parliament.

The resolution, amended, on the suggestion of Dr. McClure, by the substitution of "Parliament" for "House of Commons," was carried with two dissentients.

The Report of the Classical Association on the pronunciation of Greek was afterwards welcomed; and the following resolution on salaries was adopted:—

"That in the opinion of this Association (a) the salaries offered in connexion with head-masterships of Secondary Schools have in several recent cases been utterly inadequate, and (b) that the Council be instructed to take action in the matter."

Mr. Jenkyn Thomas, who moved the resolution, gave instances of many low salaries recently advertised, one of them, in connexion with a country Grammar School, being not more than 115*l.* per annum.

MODERN LANGUAGE ASSOCIATION.

THE MODERN LANGUAGE ASSOCIATION held its annual meeting for the first time at Oxford, on the 12th and 13th inst. The proceedings began with an address of welcome from the Vice-Chancellor (Dr. T. H. Warren), to whose initiative the meeting was largely due.

The President (Lord Fitzmaurice) then took the chair, and some brief business followed. The Report announced an increase of about 50 members. The Master of Caius College, Cambridge, spoke on the Report on the Training of Modern Language Teachers which a committee of the Association had just drawn up. Mr. Milner-Barry proposed a resolution—the only one submitted to the meeting—welcoming the recent change in the Board of Education regulations for Secondary Schools, which allowed greater freedom to schools in the choice of languages to be taught, and hoping that the Board would take further steps to encourage the study of German in Secondary Schools. This was carried unanimously.

Lord Fitzmaurice then delivered his presidential address. He began with a plea for modern languages in their bearing on international intercourse and the amenities of society. The speaker then diverged into an historical retrospect of the struggle between French and Latin as the language of diplomacy. The final triumph of French might be said to have been accomplished after the French Revolution, and the final abandonment of Latin as the language of diplomacy might perhaps be dated from the fall of the Holy Roman Empire. English treaties had ceased to be entered in Latin since 1668 in the Chancery French Rolls, as the series was called; and in 1731 Walpole's Act dispensed with Latin for legal and official instruments. He was informed that probably the last Latin treaty paper was the "Plena Potestas" to the Earl of Lauderdale, who was sent to France by Fox during his short tenure of the Foreign Office in 1806, just before his death. In England, after 1731, Latin was only used for diplomatic documents as an archaic practice kept up by the officials of the Department of the Chancery Protonotary, who dealt with the Foreign Office enrolments of royal letters, treaty papers, and similar documents. The practice gradually died out, and he supposed came to an end with the reorganization of the Chancery offices in the last century. Since Canning's time statesmen had generally used their national languages in written and spoken communications, and Palmerston was a strong advocate of this system, though here again French still largely maintained its ground. Nevertheless, attempts to vindicate the use of the vernacular as an international instrument met sometimes with unexpected difficulties, as, for instance, in a Congress on the navigation of the Danube held in London in 1883, where the delegates began by using English, but had to revert to French, because the representatives of the Balkan States did not understand the former language. His lordship concluded with some humorous remarks on the possibility of a universal language.

In the afternoon Prof. Lanson of Paris delivered an address on 'Comment Voltaire a fait ses Lettres anglaises,' speaking eloquently in French for about an hour. His general contention was that the 'Letters on England' were a work of imagination rather than an exact record. The substance of the letters on the Quakers was probably derived from a study of Barclay's 'Apology.' Voltaire's peculiar genius was shown in welding what he had learnt in much intercourse with Englishmen into a compact and nervously written recital. Subsequently Prof. Fiedler of Oxford gave an address on 'Die Faust-Dichtung,' in which he argued for the essential unity of the two parts of Goethe's drama. In the evening the annual dinner took place at Magdalen College, and amongst the guests was the German Ambassador, who made a sympathetic speech in replying for the guests.

On the second day the meeting had the curious experience of hearing German schools criticized by a German and defended by an Englishman. Mr. Siepmann of Clifton College, who has been recently studying education in the Fatherland, thought that the German system was too rigid, and did not give sufficient opportunity for specialization. The principle of bringing all boys to the same level was carried to an extreme, and clever lads did not get a fair chance. The able boys in English classical schools were far ahead of their German cousins. There was also too little experiment going on in German schools. On the other hand, the pupils were more anxious to do well than with us, and the qualifications of the teachers were higher. These views were combated by subsequent speakers, and especially by Mr. Milner-Barry, who gave chapter and verse for his contention that as much educational experiment was going on in Berlin as in any town in England.

A discussion on the teaching of French and German in the middle and higher forms of schools came next; but the time allowed was inadequate, and the subject too wide for a fruitful debate.

In the afternoon Mr. H. A. L. Fisher (New College) read a paper on 'Our Insularity,' arguing that England was, of all islands, the least insular. Speaking of English literature, he said it was not insular, but full of splendid echoes from Greece and Rome, from Italy, Spain, and France. Of French in particular this country was never permitted to be ignorant since the day when the 'Chanson de Roland' was chanted on the field of Hastings. The intellectual communion of the two races gave to each an element which it would otherwise have lacked. Mr. Fisher went on to speak of the literary relations between England and Germany which dated from the intellectual revival at the end of the eighteenth century. The joint resistance to Napoleon had aided German studies in this country; Carlyle had revealed to Englishmen something of the depth and the beauty of German literature, and Arnold had introduced German into Rugby; Italian literature had found an exponent in Hallam, but in this case the nineteenth-century historian was only reviving an older tradition. In the age of Elizabeth Italian was the common accomplishment of polite society. With the Protestant Reformation and the forcible expulsion of scholastic philosophy from the lecture-rooms of Oxford and Cambridge the key was lost to the proper understanding of the greatest of all the Italian poets, nor was it recovered until the appearance, in 1814, of Cary's translation of the 'Divine Comedy.' The speaker concluded a most interesting address by references to modern literary developments in Norway, Russia, Greece, Bohemia, and Hungary, the revival of Erse in Ireland, and the beautiful epic that had been written in Provençal.

"LORDLINGS AND ATHEISTS."

I HAVE read with great interest Mr. George Russell's letter in your issue of the 16th. Let me explain that it was not to him that I was indebted for the story about Dr. Vaughan's description of Dean Stanley's guests as "lordlings and atheists," but to a great friend of mine who was formerly a pupil of Dr. Vaughan's, and whom I have always regarded as an accurate reporter. It is clear from Mr. Russell's letter that Dr. Vaughan was quite capable of employing the epigram which my friend put into his mouth; and I venture to think that some of my favourable critics, when charging me with inaccuracy, have ignored the fact that epigrams resembling each other may have been used by two wits independently, or by the same wit on different occasions.

LIONEL A. TOLLEMACHE.

"MR. SHAXSPERE, ONE BOOK," 1595.

THE universal belief in the booklessness of Stratford-on-Avon in general, and the poet's family in particular, makes it the more important to record any facts which tend to weaken that belief. A case came up more than once concerning some property claimed by two women as legacies or gifts. "The names of the jurors in the cause of Margaret Younge v. Jone Perat, 20 July, 37 Elizabeth," are given in the Miscellaneous Documents, Stratford-on-Avon, VII. 245 and 246. Apparently Jone Perat had already disposed of some of the property she held, which chiefly seemed to consist of articles of women's clothing. But at the foot is the note:—

"Mr Shaxspere, one book; Mr Barber, a coverlett, two daggers, the three bokes; Ursula Fyld, the apparell and the bedding clothes at Whitson-tyde was twellmonth. Baeke debts due to the partie defendant."

It is to be supposed that at this date it must have been John, and not William, who was designated "Mr. Shaxspere." Imagination is left to play vainly round the nature of the book; but it is clear from these rough notes that he had coveted one special book in Jone Perat's possession, that he had secured it, but that he had not yet paid for it. Mr. Barber also, it may be noted, held three books on the same doubtful tenure, between plaintiff and defendant. But at least four books were in the market in Stratford at that date.*

CHARLOTTE C. STOPES.

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Behold I show You a Mystery, by Lex, 4/6 net. Treats of "the mystery of life," "the nature of the Great Apostasy in Heaven," and has illustrations by the author.
- Bousset (Prof. W.), The Faith of a Modern Protestant, 2/6 net. Translated by F. B. Low.
- Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. IV., 27/6 net. An international work of reference on the constitution, doctrine, discipline, and history of the Catholic Church.
- Century Bible: Isaiah XL-LXVI., Deutero-Isaiah XL-LV., Trito-Isaiah LVI-LXVI., Vol. II., 2/6 net. With introductions, Revised Version, with notes, index, and map, edited by the Rev. O. C. Whitehouse.
- De Quetteville (Rev. P. W.), Paul the Missionary, and other Studies, 3/6 net.
- Findlay (G. G.), Fellowship in the Life Eternal, 10/6. An exposition of the Epistles of St. John.
- Foxe's Book of Martyrs, 2/. Edited by W. Grinton Berry, with coloured illustrations.
- Lewis (F. Warburton), The Work of Christ, 2/6 net.
- Lovell (A.), Concentration, 2/ net. Third Edition.
- Marett (R. R.), The Threshold of Religion, 3/6 net. Studies in comparative religion.
- Marson (Rev. C. L.), The Psalms at Work, 6/ net. The English Church Psalter, with notes on the use of the Psalms. Enlarged edition.
- Naylor (T.), Light on the Advent, 5/ net.
- Wisdom of Solomon, 2/6 net. Revised Version, with introduction and notes by Rev. J. A. F. Gregg. In the Cambridge Bible for Schools and Colleges.

* See my paper 'Stratford's Bookless Neighbourhood,' Athen., Feb. 23, 1907.

Workmen's Compensation Cases. New Series. Vol. I. 7/6 net.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Art Circular, Nos. I. and II., 2/. A monthly record of the prices realized at auction by pictures, water-colours, and engravings.
- Bensusan (S. L.), Rubens, 1/6 net. With 8 coloured illustrations. In Masterpieces in Colour.
- Carter (A. C. R.), The Year's Art, 1909, 3/6 net. Provides information relating to painting, sculpture, engraving, architecture, and schools of design, with illustrations.
- D'Ooge (M. L.), The Acropolis of Athens, 17/ net. A summary of the most important contributions to the history of the Acropolis, with many illustrations.
- Horniman Museum, Forest Hill, S.E.: a handbook to the Weapons of War and the Chase, 2d. Issued by the London County Council.
- India: Archaeological Survey, Eastern Circle, Annual Report for 1907-8.
- Johnson (G. L.), Photographic Optics and Colour Photography, 7/6 net. Includes the camera, cinematograph, optical lantern, and the theory and practice of image formation, with 14 plates, including 5 coloured, and 170 illustrations in the text.
- Marius (G. H.), Dutch Painting in the Nineteenth Century, 15/ net. Translated by A. T. de Mattos, with a photograph, and 130 reproductions in half-tone.
- McNay (Walter L.), Old London, 3/6 net. 50 reproductions of old engravings illustrative of the London of our ancestors.
- Markham (Christopher A.), Pewter Marks and Old Pewter Ware, Domestic and Ecclesiastical, 21/. Illustrated.
- Smith (John), A Catalogue Raisonné of the Works of the most eminent Dutch, Flemish, and French painters; also Supplement to the Catalogue Raisonné, 9 vols., 115/ net.
- Wood (T. Martin), Whistler, 1/6 net. With 8 coloured illustrations. Another of the Masterpieces in Colour.

Poetry and the Drama.

- Bonar (Horatius), Hymns. Selected and arranged by his Son H. N. Bonar, 2/6 net. With a brief history of some of the hymns and 5 facsimiles of original MSS., and a portrait.
- Elffers (F.), His Glorious Work. A series of verses on the Creation.
- Ernst (O.), Master Flachsmann, 3/6 net. A comedy in three acts, translated by H. M. Beatty.
- Johnstone (A. S.), The Golden Bridal, and other Poems.
- Pinero (A. W.), The Thunderbolt, 1/6. Produced at the St. James's Theatre last spring, and noticed in Athen., May 16, 1908, p. 615.
- Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice, 2/6 net. Edited by F. J. Furnivall, in the Old Spelling Edition.
- Sharp (W.), Songs and Poems, Old and New, 4/6 net.
- Two of the Sonnets of Francis Bacon, the True Shakespeare. A compilation by Henry H. Harwood.

Bibliography.

- Bibliographical Society, Transactions, Vol. IX., October, 1906, to March, 1908.
- Oxford (A. W.), Notes from a Collector's Catalogue, 5/ net. With a bibliography of English cookery books.

Philosophy.

- Ciceronis De Finibus Bonorum et Malorum Libri Quinque, 8/6 net. Edited by W. M. L. Hutchinson.
- Smith (Goldwin), No Refuge but in Truth. Consists of letters on Man and his Destiny, New Faith linked with Old, the Scope of Evolution, &c.
- Monist, January, 2/6. A quarterly magazine devoted to the philosophy of science.

History and Biography.

- Acts of the Privy Council, Colonial Series: Vol. I., 1613-80, 10/. Edited by W. L. Grant and James Munro, under the supervision of A. W. Fitzroy.
- Baumgarten (P. M.), Henry Charles Lea's Historical Writings, 90 cents net. An inquiry into their method and merit.
- British Empire, its Past, its Present, and its Future, 5/ net. Edited by A. F. Pollard.
- Close Rolls of the Reign of Henry III. A.D. 1234-7, 15/
- Favourite of Napoleon, 10/ net. Memoirs of Mademoiselle George, edited by Paul Cheramy, with 2 portraits.
- Fortescue (Hon. J. W.), The County Lieutenancies and the Army, 1803-14, 10/ net.
- Gibbs (P.) King's Favourite, 16/ net. The love story of Robert Carr and Lady Essex, with 33 illustrations.
- Life of Roger Langdon, told by Himself, with Additions by his daughter Ellen, 2/6 net.
- Visitation of England and Wales, Vol. XV. Edited by Frederick Arthur Crisp. One of Mr. Crisp's handsome and elaborate genealogical publications.

Geography and Travel.

- Brown, George, D.D., Pioneer-Missionary and Explorer, 15/ net. An autobiography, dealing with forty-eight years' residence and travel in Samoa, New Britain, New Ireland, New Guinea, and the Solomon Islands, and has 111 illustrations and a map.
- Dublin and the Surrounding District, Handbook to, 2/6 net. Prepared for the meeting of the British Association in September last, and contains numerous illustrations.
- Keane (A. H.), Asia: Vol. II. Southern and Western Asia, 15/. In the Compendium of Geography and Travel, New Series.
- Twentieth-Century Impressions of British Malaya, its History, People, Commerce, &c., 12/6 net. Abridged Edition.

Sports and Pastimes.

- Art of Modern Conjuring and Drawing-Room Entertainment, 3/6. Illustrated.
- Martin (J. W.), "The Trent Otter" on Coarse Fish Angling, 3/6. A practical treatise on the Nottingham, Sheffield, Thames, and the Ouse and Norfolk Styles of Fishing. Illustrated.

Education.

- Burstall (S. A.), Impressions of American Education in 1908, 4/6

Philology.

- Beech (Mervyn W. H.), The Tidong Dialects of Borneo, 5/ net.
- Long (B.), Is Esperanto worth Learning? 1d.

School-Books.

- Hillard (Rev. A. E.) and Botting (C. G.), Elementary Greek Exercises, 2/6. An introduction to North and Hillard's 'Greek Prose.'
- Jones (Lionel M.), Practical Physics, 3/
- Paterson (W. E.), School Algebra, Part II., 3/
- Peddle (W.), The Elementary Dynamics of Solids and Fluids, 2/6. With sectional and general examples by J. D. Fulton.
- Robinson (E. L.), A Paper Modelling Course for Little Children, 2/6 net.

Science.

- American Journal of Anatomy, December, 5 dols. 50 yearly. Published by the Wistar Institute, Philadelphia.
- Anatomical Record, Vol. II., No. 9, 3 dols. 25 per volume. Also published by the Wistar Institute.
- Anderson (F. A.), Boiler Feed Water, 6/ net. A practical treatise on its quality, effects, and purification.
- Cummings (G. W.), Electricity and Magnetism in Telephone Maintenance, 6/6 net.
- Depéret (C.), The Transformations of the Animal World, 5/. In the International Science Series.
- Durell (C. V.), A Course of Plane Geometry for Advanced Students, Part I., 5/ net. Intended for the higher mathematical divisions of schools, and for undergraduates attending lectures on geometry.
- Freeman (A. C.), The Planning of Fever Hospitals, 7/6 net.
- Frere (F. H.), Permanent Way, 3/ net. Diagrams giving the spread of crossings, &c.
- Hovenden (F.), What is Life? or Where are We? What are We? Whence did We Come? and Whither do We Go? 6/. Third Edition, revised, with appendix, also cuts and diagrams.
- Journal of Comparative Neurology and Psychology, Vol. XVIII., No. 6, 4 dols. 30 net per volume. Published by the Wistar Institute.
- Journal of Experimental Zoology, January, 5 dols. 50 yearly. Also published by the Wistar Institute.
- Journal of Morphology, December, 9 dols. per volume. Another of the Wistar Institute publications.
- Kirkham (S. D.), In the Open, 1 dol. 75 net. A series of essays and appreciations of Nature, with illustrations.
- Lockwood's Builder's and Contractor's Price-Book, 1909, 4/
- McCullough (E.), Reinforced Concrete, 6/6 net.
- Miners' and Smelters' Telegraph Code, 50/ net.
- Murray (Sir John) and Pullar (L.), Bathymetrical Survey of the Fresh-Water Lochs of Scotland. One of the Royal Geographical Society's publications.
- Newlands (J. A. R. and B. E. R.), Sugar, 25/ net. A handbook for planters and refiners. Illustrated.
- Royal Astronomical Society, Monthly Notices, December, 2/6
- Smith (C. A.), Suction-Gas Plants, 5/ net.
- Snyder (H.), Human Foods and their Nutritive Value, 5/ net.
- Sullivan (J. G.), Spiral Tables for the Canadian Pacific Railroad, 6/6 net.

Juvenile Books.

- Hardy (T. Maskell), An Evening with Shakespeare, 1/6 net. An entertainment of readings, tableaux, and songs set to old tunes. In the Lamb Shakespeare for the Young.
- Lord (Mrs. Frevon), Tales from Exeter Cathedral, 1/. A series of stories for children, with plan of the Cathedral, and view of the west front.
- Surridge (V.), India, 6/ net. With 12 coloured illustrations by A. D. M'Cormick. In Romance of Empire.

Fiction.

- Bodkin (M. McDonnell), The Capture of Paul Beck, 6/. An amusing story of two rival detectives.
- Coke (Desmond), The Golden Key, 6/. A comedy of temperaments.
- Compleat Benedict; or, Marriage in Brinland, by Law-Lacey, 2/6 net. A domestic picture of married life, with some verse.
- Cross (M. B.), Question of Means, 6/. A story of modern English life.
- Dalziel (J.), High Life in the Far East, 6/. Consists of 15 short stories.
- Eldridge (G. D.), In the Potter's House, 6/. A novel of human passions in a primitive country community dominated by a minister who has taken the literal Word for his guide.
- Gilchrist (R. Murray), The Two Goodwins, 6/. Deals with the rich farming folk of the Peak district.
- Jacomb (A. E.), The Faith of his Fathers, 6/. A prize story of some idealists.
- Lewisohn (L.), The Broken Snare, 6/
- Locke (W. J.), Septimus, 6/. The story largely centres round two sisters and two heroes, but many types of character are included.
- MacDonald (G.), The Portent, and other Stories, 3/6. Contains 7 short stories. In the Adelphi Library of Standard Works of Fiction.
- MacDonnell (A. J.), Did She do Right? 6/. A romance of to-day, with a frontispiece by Dorothy Cox.
- Marsh (Richard), The Interrupted Kiss, 6/. Contains the unravelling of a murder mystery, with a frontispiece by Rex Osborne.
- Montgomery (L. M.), Anne of Green Gables, 6/. The story of an imaginative, talkative, and perplexing child, with illustrations by M. A. and W. A. J. Claus.
- Serao (Matilde), After the Pardon, 6/. Set in a minor key, it tells of a man's generosity, which is of little avail towards bringing happiness.
- Stewart (N. V.), A Son of the Emperor, 6/. Deals with passages from the life of Enzo, King of Sardinia and Corsica, told by his friend and tutor.
- Warden (Florence), Sir Morecambe's Marriage, 6/. With a frontispiece.
- Warden (Gertrude), Merely Man, 6/. Treats of a girl's impersonation of a man and a marriage tangle.
- Webster (H. K.), The Whispering Man, 6/. A transatlantic tale of murder.

General Literature.

- Army Newspaper, No. I. A weekly vernacular journal for soldiers of the Indian Army and their friends.
- Baker (H.), The Territorial Force, 5/ net. A manual of its law, organization, and administration, with an introduction by the Right Hon. R. B. Haldane.
- Edinburgh Review, January, 6/

Jewish Year-Book, 3/6 net. A record of matters Jewish, 5669-70 (Jan. 1—Dec. 31, 1909).
 Mody (H. P.), The Political Future of India, 3/6 net. A study of the aspirations of educated Indians. A prize essay, with two other essays commended by the adjudicators.
 Nonconformity and Politics, by a Nonconformist Minister, 3/6 net. The purpose of the book is to utter a protest against the tendency of modern Nonconformity to identify itself with a particular party in the State.

Pamphlets.

Benjafield (H.), Health in the Orchard.
 Sanders (Rev. J. C. B.), Public Worship. Do You Believe in It or Not? 1d.
 Scott (F. N.), The Genesis of Speech. The President's address delivered at the Twenty-Fifth Annual Meeting of the American Modern Language Association, held in Columbus, Ohio.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Michelet (G.), Dieu et l'Agnosticisme contemporain, 3 fr. 50.

Fine Art.

Pilon (E.), Chardin, 4 fr. 50. In Les Maitres de l'Art.

Music.

Combarieu (J.), La Musique et la Magie, 10 fr. A study on the origin and evolution of the musical art, with illustrations in music type in the text.

Bibliography.

Enschédé (C.), Fonderies de Caractères et leur Matériel dans les Pays-Bas du quinzième au dix-neuvième siècle, 100/. A magnificent folio volume, freely illustrated with facsimiles of types and woodblocks from early books.

History and Biography.

Brunetière (F.), Histoire de la Littérature française classique, 1515-1830: Vol. I. De Marot à Montaigne, 1515-95, 7fr. 50. M. Michaut has aided in preparing this section, and M. Doumic, the late author's friend, is seeing after the complete publication of the work.

Lacombe (P.), Taine Historien et Sociologue, 5fr.

General Literature.

Barrès (M.), Colette Bandoche, 3fr. 50. The history of a girl of Metz we referred to in our Notes from Paris.

Gyp, La Bassinoire, 3fr. 50.

Nisson (C.), Le Cadet, 3fr. 50.

* * All Books received at the Office up to Wednesday Morning will be included in this List unless previously noted. Publishers are requested to state prices when sending Books.

Literary Gossip.

IN The Cornhill Magazine for February Mr. Lucy concludes his reminiscences, dealing specially with Punch. 'Bacchus and the Pirates,' by Mr. Alfred Noyes, is a latter-day setting of a classical legend. 'Manchuria—in the Mourne Mountains,' by Col. H. Macartney-Filgate, describes an infantry scouting competition. 'Robert Browning in Edinburgh,' by Miss Rosaline Masson, is a personal reminiscence. 'A Parson of the Thirties,' by S. G. Tallentyre, gives a sketch of Canon Hall, a friend and neighbour of Sydney Smith and Barham.

AMONG the contents of the February Blackwood are 'The Entertaining Adventures of a Pathan Trooper in Calcutta'; 'Oxford Past and Present,' by the Warden of Wadham College; a paper on the romantic history of Sir Thomas Overbury, by Mr. Charles Whibley; and Sir Henry Brackenbury's recollections of Paris during the Commune. There are also articles on 'The Tangle in India,' by Sir Charles Crosthwaite; 'Boswell'; and 'At a Turkish Election.'

MESSRS. SMITH & ELDER have in the press for early publication at a cheap price a new work on the Army by Mr. Arnold-Forster, entitled 'Military Needs and Military Policy,' part of which has appeared in The Standard.

MESSRS. LONGMAN hope to publish in a week or two 'Sir George Mackenzie, King's Advocate, of Rosehaugh: his Life and Times, 1636(?)—1691,' by Mr. Andrew Lang, with four illustrations. Mr. Lang describes Mackenzie as "one who rivalled Marlborough in beauty," and thinks he was not naturally disposed to persecution, but regarded it as a preferable alternative to civil war.

THE death is announced of the Rev. A. G. Butler, a well-known teacher at Oxford and elsewhere. Mr. Butler entered at Rugby in 1842 under Tait, took the Ireland Scholarship and a first class at Oxford in 1853, and was made a Fellow of Oriel in 1856. Here he was Dean and Tutor from 1875 to 1885, having previously been an assistant master at Rugby and Head Master of Haileybury, 1862-7. 'The Three Friends: a Story of Rugby in the Forties,' which he published in 1900, is slight, but excellent. He left at the school the memory of "Butler's Leap," a very awkward descending jump from a bridge over rails and water. At Oxford Mr. Butler was an original and inspiring teacher. He published two historical dramas and 'The Choice of Achilles, and other Poems.'

MR. STRICKLAND GIBSON writes from 140, Divinity Road, Oxford:—

"I should be most grateful if any readers of The Athenæum could assist me in tracing a formula or letter-book of the University of Oxford, which was consulted by Bishop Kennett about 1700. The reference attached to Kennett's extracts is 'Ex vetusto formulari MS. cui prefigitur Tradatur Magistro Johanni Snappe.' The following documents on fol. 127 would be sufficient to identify the MS.:—

Letter of R. Rygge, Chancellor, on behalf of John Isevarey. 1 June, 1381.

Letters patent concerning the repair of pavements. 2 Oct., 1380.

Letter of the Archbishop of Canterbury to the Chancellor concerning Wyclif's writings. 9 Apr., 1397.

Confirmation of ordinances by Richard II. 30 July, 1397."

MR. F. MARION CRAWFORD is to tell the story of the Italian earthquake in the columns of the New York Outlook.

EARLY next week will be published the first number of The Englishwoman, a monthly which "is intended to reach the cultured public, and bring before it, in a convincing and moderate form, the case for the Enfranchisement of Women." There will be articles by experts on trades in which women are engaged, short stories and plays, contributions in French, translations from German and Italian, and criticisms of the artistic world. The Committee of Management consists of Lady Frances Balfour, Lady Strachey, Miss Cicely Hamilton, Miss Mary Lowndes, and Mrs. Grant Richards (editor).

A GENIAL personality well known in London is lost by the death of Mr. Arthur William A'Beckett on Thursday in last week. A son of the author of the 'Comic History of England,' Mr. A'Beckett was born in 1844, and entered the War Office in 1862, finding it then difficult to get any work to do to justify his salary. He was editor of The Glowworm from 1865 to 1870, and since that date had been a busy journalist, novelist, and dramatist.

HE was on the staff of Punch, 1874-1902, and editor of The Sunday Times, 1891-5, and of John Bull, a short-lived comic paper, 1902-3. Besides various comic guides in his father's vein, he has written concerning his adventures and experiences, which included the acceptance of a challenge to fight a duel with an aggrieved French journalist thirty years his senior. He did much to promote the welfare of the Institute of Journalists. Of his books—always amusing, but too hastily written to be of permanent value—'The A'Becketts of "Punch"' and 'Recollections of a Humourist' are the best. Many friends and associates will miss his cheery humour, and knowledge of earlier days.

LORD CURZON OF KEDLESTON, MR. A. H. D. ACLAND, AND DR. T. GREGORY FOSTER have been elected Vice-Presidents of the English Association. The new President is Prof. Saintsbury.

THE EDUCATION GROUP OF THE FABIAN SOCIETY will hold a meeting on Tuesday evening next, in Clifford's Inn Hall, when Prof. Patrick Geddes will lecture on 'What is a University?' All who are interested are invited to attend.

MR. HENRY SCHERREN writes:—

"May I draw attention to an error in the interesting account of last year's book sales (Athenæum, Jan. 9, p. 43)? It is there stated that the 430 original water-colour drawings to Naumann's 'Die Vögel von Mittel-Europa' realized 250l. at Messrs. Hodgson's sale on November 4th and two following days. This is not the case. The drawings were not sold, but withdrawn when the biddings reached that sum."

MR. RALPH BLANCHARD, an American antiquary of Cairo, is publishing shortly a 'Tourists' Primer of Hieroglyphics,' which attempts to deal with all the statuettes likely to interest visitors to Egypt. The 'Primer' will be illustrated, and will include the latest exegesis of the flora and fauna depicted on figurines.

THIS week's Cambridge Review has an interesting notice of the late W. E. Currey by Prof. Henry Jackson, whose restoration to health and Cambridge we are very glad to see recorded. As Fellows of Trinity, Prof. Jackson and his friend Currey joined with Jebb to produce the well-known book of 'Translations' for classical students.

MR. SAMUEL KINNEAR, an Edinburgh printer's reader, who died last Saturday in his ninety-third year, has left an autobiography which covers his experiences, including those in the printing-office of Messrs. Blackwood, with remarks on the character of the handwriting of many eminent contributors to Maga. The small quarto MS. volume is now the property of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland, but no steps have yet been taken towards its publication.

M. ÉMILE OLLIVIER, now at his beautiful château, La Moutte, near St. Tropez, bears his eighty-four years lightly, and, aided by his devoted wife, has just completed the correction of the proofs of the fourteenth volume of his 'L'Empire Libéral,' likely to prove the most important, as it deals with the declaration of war in 1870.

M. ABEL HERMANT'S 'Chronique du Cadet de Coutras' will be published in Paris on February 4th.

M. CHARLES TARDIEU, whose death at seventy is announced from Brussels, was one of the best-known men in Paris during the later years of the Second Empire as an erudite journalist. He founded L'Art, a review "artistique de grand luxe," which had a brilliant career. Removing to Belgium, Tardieu was for several years chief editor of L'Indépendance Belge, was elected a member of the Belgian Royal Academy, and enjoyed many other distinctions in the land of his adoption.

WE regret to hear of the tragic death of the accomplished French poet Albert Mérat, Sub-Librarian at the Palais du Luxembourg, in his sixty-ninth year. The son and grandson of lawyers, Mérat was born at Troyes, and one of his earliest acquaintances was Verlaine, with whom he collaborated in a volume of verse, 'Avril, Mai, Juin' (1863), and this, with his other publications, soon brought him the friendship of many poets, including Leconte de Lisle.

THE forthcoming number of the Zeitschrift für Celtische Philologie (Vol. VII. No. 1) will run to 300 pages, and be almost entirely devoted to Davydd ap Gwilym, the great mediæval poet of Wales. Dr. Stern has edited a number of the poems, translated the majority into German, and has made an exhaustive study of the life and writings of Davydd. Dr. Stern's work will virtually represent the first critical examination of the poet's text and of his life-history.

THE bicentenary of the death of the Emperor Aurangzeb, which occurred in his camp outside Ahmednagar, was recently celebrated in that city by Mohammedans from all parts of the Deccan. Moulvi Rafiuddin Ahmed of the Bombay Bar delivered a long and interesting address on the career of this Mogul emperor. He declared that Aurangzeb had been very unfortunate in his biographers, that missionary writers had painted him in the blackest colours, and that his reputation deserved to be rehabilitated.

THE death at the age of fifty-one is announced from Jena of the eminent Professor of Oriental Philology, Karl Vollers. His important work 'Die Weltreligionen' is widely known. His untimely death is the more to be regretted as his large work on Islam remains unfinished.

DR. GUSTAV HEINRICH SCHNEIDER, whose death is also announced from Jena, was the author of a number of poems which were specially popular with the students. Among his chief works are 'Berliner Märchen,' 'Der Auszug nach Kahla,' and 'Geschichte der Burschenschaft zu Jena.'

DR. ADAM BELCIKOWSKI died on the 12th inst., aged sixty-nine. He was a teacher in the chief Gymnasium of Warsaw, lecturer in the University of Cracow, and a Scriptor in the Jagellon Library. He contributed in former years articles to our columns on Polish Literature.

THE GOVERNMENT PAPER most likely to interest our readers this week is Education, List of Technical and Art Schools, &c. (1s.).

SCIENCE

The Face of the Earth. By Eduard Suess. Translated by H. B. C. and W. J. Sollas. Vol. III. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)

SEVEN years ago Prof. Suess gave to the world the third volume of his masterly work 'Das Antlitz der Erde,' or rather what in the original was called the first part of the third volume. To-day this part is put into the hands of the English reader in a translation exceptional in accuracy and elegance. This translation, like that of the former volumes, has been made by Dr. Hertha Sollas, under the direction of her father, the Professor of Geology at Oxford; but the present volume differs from its two predecessors in that it has had the benefit of revision by some of the most distinguished geologists in English-speaking countries throughout the world. The nine chapters of the translation were submitted to nine geologists, and we believe that each compared the manuscript of a given chapter with the corresponding original, so as to ensure a faithful, yet fluent rendering of the whole. It is difficult, however, to repress the suspicion that this elaborate treatment was adopted, not merely to secure accuracy of translation, since this might have been otherwise obtained more easily, but rather to indicate the profound respect of British and American geologists for the master and his work.

To this end the director of the translation was so fortunate as to secure the aid of Sir Archibald Geikie, the Rev. Prof. Bonney, Dr. Teall, Prof. Lapworth, and Prof. Watts as representatives of British geology; whilst America is represented by Prof. Chamberlin of Chicago, India by Dr. Oldham, Australia by Prof. Edgeworth David, and South Africa by Dr. Rogers. With so remarkable a band of collaborators it would be strange if the translation left much, if anything, to be desired. At the same time the revisers have not introduced any fresh matter suggested by their special knowledge of particular regions: the book issued from Oxford is in truth simply an English version of the volume from Vienna. Prof. Sollas remarks that "the reverence due to a great classic has restrained us in this, as in previous volumes, from taking any liberties with the text, whether by comment or emendation." In this respect it differs from the French translation by M. de Margerie, which has been enriched by numerous notes, maps, and other illustrations.

The present instalment of the great work is concerned chiefly with the study of those mighty folds of the earth's crust which form the mountain-chains of Eurasia. The rock-fold may be regarded as the morphological unit in terrestrial architecture, and the geologist who would gain a broad view of the physiognomy of the earth seeks to determine the relation of fold to fold; to co-ordinate these structural elements; and to deduce from the plan of the great trend-lines (Leitlinien) of the mountain-folds the direction in which the gigantic "folding forces" of the globe have been at work at particular periods of the earth's history. The plan of Prof. Suess's work, which opens out this subject, is essentially synthetic. In Asia he recognizes vast fragments of folded arcs, which, notwithstanding their variation in curvature, are evidently arranged according to a uniform plan. Many of these may be brought into relation with a common vertex (Scheitel) of very ancient rocks, occupying a vast area in the region of Lake Baikal, and prolonged westwards, though concealed in part of their course, into European Russia. The Urals he regards as "a group of posthumous folds of the old vertex." The Altai Mountains form a vertex of more recent rocks, from which other arcs known as the Altaides proceed, to which the Thian-shan in the east and the Caucasus in the west seem related. Finally, there is in Asia a series of southern marginal arcs, which appear to be continued westwards in what are called the Tauro-Dinaric arc-segments. The Asiatic continent finds extension eastwards in some of the island-arcs of the Pacific.

By the reconstruction of ancient geographical features on the evidence of fossils, it has been shown that a vast sea, of which the existing Mediterranean is a remnant, must have stretched in Mesozoic times across what is now the continent of Asia and onwards to the Sunda Islands. This sea was named by Prof. Suess the Tethys, after the wife of Oceanus. To the north of the Tethys lay Angaraland, a great continent which the Professor has reconstructed from the plant-bearing beds of China, Mongolia, and Siberia, and which he has named from the important river that runs near what must have been the centre of this ancient land. To the south of the Tethys stretched the vast continental mass of Gondwana-land. On the disappearance of the Tethys, the Indian part of this mighty land was brought into physical union with Angaraland, and by this union was formed the present continent of Asia.

After reading Prof. Suess's work one feels that the map of Asia has a new meaning. Mountain range and coastline have no longer arbitrary directions, but form part of a definite system, ruled by the crumpling of the earth's crust and the fracture and subsidence of certain parts. The book reveals a remarkably intimate knowledge of the geological structure of vast regions of the earth, and, so far as Central Asia is concerned, this knowledge could have been acquired only from the modern investigations of Russian geologists, whose writings are but little known in this country. The mastery of the literature is, however, secondary to the power of generalization which enables the author to marshal his facts and bring them into harmony as parts of a grand tectonic scheme.

Such a work as this is necessarily of slow growth, and five-and-twenty years have passed since the first part was issued. Intended originally for two volumes, the book has been expanded into three, and it waits for the second part of the third German volume to bring it to a conclusion. We believe, however, that a Supplement will be added. Geologists and geographers in all countries will be eager to congratulate the veteran author on its completion.

THE SURVEY OF INDIA REPORT FOR 1906-7.

THE SURVEY OF INDIA REPORT, which has just arrived from Calcutta, deals with the operations of the Survey Department for the year ending September 30th, 1907. This Department has been materially increased during the last few years in its staff of both Imperial and Provincial officers, and much of the present volume relates to the changes effected or in course of being effected in its working system and organization. One result of these reforms is a great improvement in the drawing, due to the employment of better workmen and the closer supervision of the European staff.

The total outturn of the surveys on all scales (which range from 4 inches to 1 inch for the square mile) was 25,740 square miles, as against 23,312 square miles in the previous year. The number of maps issued during the year was 103,502 sheets, of an aggregate value of 1,20,984 rupees. Of these about one-third are distributed to officials in India, and a certain number are sent home to England. But it is admitted that the sale of maps to the public is still very small, and this is alleged to be due to the small number of agencies where they are obtainable. Steps are to be taken to make them more accessible. One noticeable indication of the growing activity of the Department is furnished by the increased purchase of scientific instruments in England. The total cost of the Department for the year in question was 30,59,249 rupees, and the estimate for the ensuing year was 35,06,220 rupees.

A summary is provided of the work done by the different parties equipped during the year. One of these was sent to British Baluchistan, where its programme consisted in continuing westwards the Kalat longitudinal series from where it had been left two years before. It began its work at Pragi, and at Kisanen Chapper an astronomical azimuth was observed. The work proved very difficult, owing to the character of the country, the frequent sandstorms, and the prevalence of mirage. The Report states that "the country in which the work lay is about as desolate and barren as a land can be. It is practically uninhabited, except for a few nomad shepherds and the residents in the thanas maintained along the Seistan trade route; but it is full of interest to the geologist and the surveyor."

Preparations were made for the resumption of work in the ensuing year on the elevated Toba plateau, which is over 10,000 ft. high.

At the other extremity of India a considerable amount of work was done in Burma and Upper Burma. Reference is made to a party which was employed on building boundary pillars on the Burma-China boundary between Panghsang Nalawt and the Meikong river, but no particulars are given. This section is, however, set down for regular survey during the year 1908-9. In the Shan districts special pains are being taken to secure accurate transliteration in names, and on the present maps the names of villages are supplemented by those of the tribes inhabiting them. The survey of the South Shan states, south of the Wa, is expected to be finished in the present year. The work of the Department was not confined to British India, as the following extract shows:—

"The French settlement of Mahe was surveyed in the course of the work, through the kind permission of H.E. the Governor of Pondicherry, and nothing could have exceeded the courtesy of the French officials, who gave every facility for carrying out the work."

The Report concludes with a special memorandum by Lieut.-Col. P. J. Gordon on Forest Surveys in India, which are now incorporated with those of the Surveyor-General's Department. Col. F. B. Longe Surveyor-General, controlled the operations throughout the year. The death-roll, which seems to have been heavy in the native ranks during the year, included two promising Englishmen—Lieut. May, R.E., of the Imperial Service, and Mr. C. D. Simons of the Provincial. There are some excellent maps and charts, which give an idea of the cartographic excellence of the work turned out by the Department.

SOCIETIES.

ASTRONOMICAL.—Jan. 8.—Mr. H. F. Newall, President, in the chair.—Mr. A. S. Eddington read a paper on Major MacMahon's proposed method of determining the apparent diameter of a fixed star. The author said that Major MacMahon had dealt with the circumstances of the fading of the light of a star at the instant of its disappearing behind the moon simply as a problem of geometrical optics. The results will, however, be greatly modified if we take into account the diffraction of the star's image. Every star would seem from this cause to have such a diameter as would mask the true diameter in all but exceptional cases.—The Astronomer Royal presented papers on the Greenwich observations of Saturn's ninth satellite, showing diagrams of its orbit, and also observations of a recently discovered minor planet.—Further photographs of Comet Morehouse were shown, taken by Mr. R. C. Johnson and the Rev. A. L. Cortie.—Mr. H. C. Plummer gave an account of recent work at Lick Observatory, from which he had just returned.—Mr. Crommelin announced that further corrections to the calculated orbit of Halley's comet gave its perihelion passage as nearer the 13th than the 8th of April, 1910. Another ephemeris had been published in Germany, giving the 3rd of June for the date of perihelion, but he did not think there could be any such considerable error in the ephemeris computed by Mr. Cowell and himself, according to which the perihelion could not be later than the middle of April.

MICROSCOPICAL.—Dec. 16.—Mr. Conrad Beck, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. J. E. Stead read the following papers: (1) 'On a Workshop Microscope for the Examination of Opaque Objects'; (2) 'On a Simple Method of illuminating Opaque Objects.'—The Rev. Eustace Tozer read a paper on 'Mounting Rotifers and Protista in Canada Balsam,' Messrs. Theodore Brooks and W. F. Herzberg were elected Fellows.

The Chairman declared the meeting to be now made "Special," pursuant to notice given at the last meeting. Mr. D. J. Scourfield moved the resolution of which notice had been given—to the effect that the by-laws of the Society be altered as might be found necessary to admit women to the meetings of the Society, and to remove any other restriction of privileges due to the distinction of sex. Mr. F. J. Cheshire seconded the resolution. The Chairman said that the Council recommended that a special committee be appointed to go into the matter and draw up a report, such report to be afterwards submitted to a special meeting to be called by the Council, for their acceptance or otherwise. The original motion being withdrawn, the revised amendment was carried unanimously. The following Fellows were appointed members of the special committee—Lord Avebury, Messrs. Cheshire, Hopkinson, Scourfield, and Spitta, together with the two Secretaries as ex-officio members.

PHILOLOGICAL.—Jan. 6.—Dr. Hermann Oelsner in the chair.—Prof. Weekley read a paper on 'Anglo-Romance Etymologies.' Anlace is in Matthew Paris as anelacius, which is a metathetic form of alenacius. Alenas, petit poignard, ep. Guill. Guyart, 1305. The E. anelas for alenas may perhaps be due to some fancied connexion with O. Fr. anel, ring. Bawd is, as Minshew said, an aphetic form of ribaud, as bawdy, bawdry, are of ribaudie, ribaudrie. Bawker, a sharper in bowling alleys, is an aphetic form of Fr. embaucheur, an enticer. Blotch, originally a black pustule, may be from Fr. beloce, sloe, bullace, Norman bloche. Bludgeon, is perhaps from O. Fr. boujon, a crossbow bolt with a large head, a cudgel, altered under the influence of blood. Brack, a light piece of artillery ("our brackes in our deckes and gunner room," Hawkins, 'Voyages'), is Sp. barraco, a small kind of cannon (Stevens). Cf. crack for carrack, Sp. carraca. Branks, a gagging instrument of punishment for scolding women, is Fr. branque, branche, It. branca: "Les branches de la bride, les deux pièces de fer, d'acier, que relie le mors." Cobridge-head, cubridge, in a ship (Hawkins, 'Voyages'), is a derivative of Sp. cobrir, cubrir, to cover, protect: "Cubbridge-head is the same as a bulkhead; only that this word is us'd to the bulkhead of the fore-castle and the half-deck," 1708. Cockney, a cockered child, a milksop, is probably Fr. acoquiné, a self-indulgent frequenter of the kitchen, a loafer, a milksop. For the final ey, cf. attorney, valley. To cozen ("cousoners and shifters," 1561) is from It. cozzone, but was confused later with cousin. Dekker, 1608, says: "He that is drawn in to venture his money is (amongst this cursed brotherhood of Cheators) termed a Cozen, and is handled as kindly as if he were a cozen indecde." Crowel, 1592, crule, 1494, is perhaps a diminutive of Fr. cru, raw, unbleached, L. crudus (Skeat). Crows or croes of iron represents the Fr. cros, pl. of croc de fer, grapples or great hooks. Gantry, or Gawntree, is Fr. chantier, L. canterius, which is gantier in the 'Dictionnaire du Rouche': the -tree is due to folk etymology. Kersey, if not from the Suffolk village where a woollen trade was once carried on, may be from Fr. croisé: "étouffe fabriquée a quatre marches au moins, et dont les fils de la trame sont plus serrés que dans l'étoffe à deux marches" (Littré). The stuff was known before 1376. Oriel is from auleolum, sacellum, a niche, side-chapel, or oratory. Partner is from part, tenir, part-taker, share-holder. This etymology also explains partners, "a framework of timber round any hole or scuttle in a ship's deck, through which a mast passes"; the partners relieve the strain on the deck. Patch is a doublet of piece, sewn on a garment: ep. cratch, Fr. crèche, match, O. Fr. mèche. Sc. paule, weakly, appears to be Fr. épaulé, "blessé à l'épaule": poorly may be corrupted from it. Peevish: all its meanings are covered by pervers; and as the oldest form is peyvesse, it corresponds to an O. Fr. peresche from perversa, like revêche from reversus. Riddle is the source of Fr. rideau, and is identical with riddle, sieve, separation being the essential idea in each word: cf. the two senses of screen. To rummage is probably Fr. arrumage, arrimage, from arrumer, arrimer, to arrange the cargo in the hold of a ship. Scabbard means guard-sword, and is from O. H. G. scala, scale, husk, case, and bergen, to protect: scarberg, > escarberc, escalberc, escauberc, scauberk, scabbard. Sentry is from sanctuary: Littleton has centry, a sanctuary, sanctuarium: Cotgrave, 1611, "garite, a place of refuge, also a sentrie, a little lodge for a sentinell, built on high." Sharper and to sharp are from O. Fr. escharper, to plunder, L. ex-carpere. Skillet is a diminutive from E. skeel, a vessel. Skull is from O. Fr. escuelle, bowl: ep. mazzard, skull, helmet: mazer, a drinking-bowl. Spraid, sprayed, roughened or chapped with cold, is from O. Fr. espreier, to roughen. Sullen is solemn: Cooper has "acerbus, soleyne, austere"; Holyoak, "sullen, acerbus"; Gouldman, "solemn, tetricus"; "sullen, acerbus"; Littleton, "tetricus, sullen, surly," &c. Surly meant first "haughty, tyrannical," and is from sire, sir; "Manipulus Vocab." and Littleton, "imperiosus, surly": "With that surly and imperious colleague of his, surnamed Imperiosus" (Holland's 'Pliny'). So in Shakespeare: "Be surly [haughty] with servants" ('Twelfth Night,' II. v.). Taint is the aphetic doublet of attaint, and has been very slightly influenced by taint, colour. Tallant, the upper hance or break of the rudder abaft, seems to be Fr. etalon, "a short and thick pegge or piece of timber, whereby two sparres are fastened byas-wise together" (Cotgrave).

A short paper by Prof. Skeat on 'Kersey and Linsey' was read, contending that the 'New English Dictionary' was wrong in stating that nothing is known which connects kersey cloth with Kersey in Suffolk, for in the year 1526 Hall's 'Chronicle' says, under 17 Henry VIII., that no fewer than 4,000 clothworkers from towns near Kersey, "Spinners, Carders, Fullers, Wevers, and other artificers," rebelled, and put a stop to Wolsey's illegal attempt to raise money without the consent of Parliament. Kerseys were known in 1376. The "clothis of lynsey" mentioned in 1435-6 were no doubt cloths of Lynsey in Suffolk, now Lindsey. The form Lynsey is a substitution for Lilleseye ('Inquis. post Mortem,' p. 298), and Lindsey is two miles from Kersey. The name "linsy-wolsy" first appears in the 'Catholicon,' 1483, and the stuff is a mixture of linen and wool. There may have been in it a punning allusion to Wolsey, as in Skelton's attack on him, 'Why come ye not to Courte?' l. 128, he writes: "To woue al in one lome, a webbe of lylse-wulse."—Mr. John Marshall then read part of his paper on Ægean words in Greek.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—Jan. 12.—Mr. J. C. Inglis, President, in the chair.—The papers read were 'High Speeds on Railway Curves,' by Mr. J. W. Spiller and 'A Practical Method for the Improvement of Existing Railway Curves,' by Mr. W. H. Shortt.—The Council reported that they had recently transferred 22 gentlemen to the class of Members, and that 37 candidates had been admitted as Students.—The scrutineers reported that Lord Curzon had been elected an Honorary Member, and that 5 Members, 27 Associate Members, and 1 Associate had also been elected.

MATHEMATICAL.—Jan. 14.—Sir W. D. Niven, President, in the chair.—Prof. H. F. Stecker was elected a Member.—Mr. W. H. Salmon was admitted into the Society.—The President announced the death of Mr. G. Heppel, who was a member of the Society from 1883 to 1907.—The following papers were communicated: 'The Canonical Form of a Linear Substitution,' by Mr. H. Hilton, 'On Octavic and Sexdecimic Residuacity,' by Lieut-Col. A. Cunningham, 'On change of the Variable in a Lebesgue Integral,' by Dr. E. W. Hobson, 'On Abel's Extension of Taylor's Series,' by the Rev. F. H. Jackson, and 'Note on the Evaluation of a Certain Integral containing Bessel's Functions,' by Prof. H. M. Macdonald.—Mr. J. Hammond gave an account of some 'Researches connected with the Solution of the Quintic Equation.'

MEETINGS NEXT WEEK.

- MON. Institute of Actuaries, 5.—'On an Approximate Method of Valuation of Whole-Life Assurances,' Mr. F. H. Brown.
— London Institution, 5.—'London's Place in History,' Mr. Charles Welch.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'The Public Supply of Electric Power in the United Kingdom,' Lecture II., Mr. G. L. Addenbrooke. (Cantor Lecture.)
— Geographical, 8.30.—'A Proposed North Polar Expedition,' Capt. Roald Amundsen.
TUES. Royal Institution, 3.—'Albinism in Man,' Lecture II., Prof. K. Pearson.
— Institution of Civil Engineers, 8.—Discussion on 'High Speed on Railway Curves.'
— Anthropological Institute, 8.30.—Annual General Meeting; President's Address.
WED. Geological, 8.—'The Conway Succession,' Miss G. L. Elles; 'The Depth and Succession of the Bovey Deposits,' Mr. A. J. Jukes-Browne.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'The Part played by Vermin in the Spread of Disease,' Dr. J. Cantlie.
THURS. Royal Institution, 3.—'Mysteries of Metals,' Lecture II., Prof. J. C. Arnold.
— Royal, 4.30.
— London Institution, 6.—'The Problem of setting Words to Music,' Dr. H. Walford Davies.
— Institution of Electrical Engineers, 8.—'The Parallel Operation of Alternators,' Dr. E. Rosenberg.
— Society of Antiquaries, 8.30.
FRI. Royal Institution, 9.—'Improvements in Production and Application of Gun-cotton and Nitro-glycerine,' Col. Sir Frederick L. Nathan.
SAT. Royal Institution, 3.—'Sight and Seeing,' Prof. Sir H. von Helmholtz.

Science Gossip.

CAPT. H. G. LYONS, F.R.S., at present Director-General of the Egyptian Survey Department, has been elected University Lecturer in Geography at Glasgow, as from October 1st, 1909.

MR. LYNN has in the press another edition (the fourteenth) of his handy little work on 'Remarkable Comets,' which will be published early next month by Messrs. Bagster.

A NEW observatory in the Southern hemisphere is to be established under the auspices of the Carnegie Institution, and Prof. Boss writes to The Observatory that the site selected for this is at San Luis in Argentina, about 500 miles west of Buenos Ayres, and not very far to the south-west of Cordoba.

THREE more small planets are announced as having been photographically discovered at the Astrophysical Institute, Königstuhl, Heidelberg, on the last day of last year: two (one of which, however, is marked uncertain, "unsicher") by Prof. Max Wolf, and one by Herr Kopff.

THE twelfth number of Vol. XXXVII. of the Memorie della Società degli Spettroscopisti Italiani, completing the volume, contains a proposal by the editor, Prof. Riccò, for forming statistics of solar protuberances from international observations. Such observations began with those of Respighi at Rome just forty years ago, in 1869. Prof. Riccò also has a note on a comparison of heliometric observations obtained simultaneously at different altitudes, to which Dr. Bellia makes the first contribution from heights, of about 6,000 and 9,000 ft. respectively, on Mount Etna. There is a further account of the spectroscopic images of the solar limb as observed at Rome by Chistoni, Millosevich, and Tacchini during July, August, and September, 1883. In that year, it will be remembered, Tacchini, the founder of the Società, observed the total eclipse of the sun at Caroline Island, as he did that of 1886 at Grenada in the West Indies. He died in 1905.

THE 'Annuaire' of the Bureau des Longitudes for 1909, besides the usual ephemerides and other valuable information on astronomical subjects, contains several special articles, amongst which may be mentioned one by M. Lallemand on movements of the earth's crust, and another by M. Bigourdan on variable stars, which gives a full and interesting account of the present state of our knowledge of this branch of the science.

FINE ARTS

Herculaneum, Past, Present, and Future.

By C. Waldstein and Leonard Shoo-bridge. (Macmillan & Co.)

Buried Herculaneum. By Ethel Ross Barker. (A. & C. Black.)

THE book by Prof. Waldstein and Mr. Shoo-bridge consists of three parts, which vary greatly in character and value. In the first place there is a careful account of previous excavations at Herculaneum, and the works of art that were found in them; this part is illustrated by an admirable series of photographs, which alone would give considerable value to the book. Then we find a kind of practical treatise on excavation, taking, for the most part, the form of an archaeological romance, in which an excavation of Herculaneum on a colossal scale by an international commission is described as actually taking place. The third part consists of correspondence between Prof. Waldstein and various eminent personages as to the scheme for such an international excavation. There is a curiously mediæval tone about the last section, in marked contrast to the extreme modernity of the rest of the book. Incidentally, it is possible, by reading between the lines, to observe at least one of the reasons, if not the chief reason, why the scheme has not been carried out. In these days archaeological enterprise is organized, if not officially, even in England and America, and in France and Germany the organization is both definite and official; while all the countries concerned possess schools in Rome which offer the obvious means for any international enterprise of excavation on Italian soil. Yet, incredible as it may seem, there is no reference whatever to be found in any of the correspondence to the French or German Institute, or any of the foreign schools in Rome. A project which ignored all these institutions was bound to meet with difficulties such as were hardly likely to be removed by the direct intervention of the heads of States, which would naturally work through such official channels.

The second part of the book concerns methods of excavation. Though these are described as if they were new, they virtually follow the system now general in scientifically directed work, like that of Prof. Dörpfeld at Troy, of Mr. Evans at Cnossus, or the British School at Sparta. It has never, indeed, been carried out on such a colossal scale as here suggested, with an international staff of a hundred experts. But it does not seem well adapted to such a site as Herculaneum, where the difficulties are mainly those of cost and of engineering, owing to the great depth of the soil, and where the necessity for the exact observation of stratification of remains and a succession of superimposed civilizations is not likely to occur. The peculiar attraction of Herculaneum to the excavator lies in the probability of the recovery of priceless treasures of art and literature, and ancient life, at a particular date, in its sudden arrest. These conditions doubtless call for the closest and most careful supervision, but not for such a system as is here indicated. The description of the excavation as actually in progress is a quaint piece of imagination, but hardly serves any practical end. On the other hand, the account of previous excavations and the antiquities found in them, together with the supplementary lists, plans, and illustrations, constitutes a most convenient compilation. The previous literature of Herculaneum is very extensive and widely scattered; a book which gives a succinct and trustworthy account of it is most welcome, especially when it is presented in so attractive a form.

It is evident that a compilation such as this does not call for much criticism; where the extant accounts are confused or contradictory, it usually preserves a wise scepticism—by far the safest course in a case where it is to be hoped that future excavations may decide the matter. A special value belongs to Prof. Hughes's account of the great eruption of Vesuvius, and the burial of Pompei and Herculaneum; and his refutation of the common fallacy that Herculaneum was overwhelmed by a stream of lava or of mud is noteworthy. The immediate means of its burial was volcanic ash, hardened where it fell into tufa—a fact of considerable practical importance to the excavator.

Throughout the book, as in the Preface, the object of the authors is constantly before us—to urge the excavation of the site, if not, as at first proposed, by an international commission, then at least by the Italian authorities. In this desire they will certainly meet with universal sympathy.

By a curious coincidence, not to be separated from the interest aroused in Herculaneum by Prof. Waldstein's project, another comprehensive account of the excavations of Herculaneum and of their products has appeared almost simultaneously. This is Miss Barker's 'Buried Herculeum,' which at first sight appears much shorter and of a less ambitious character than the other. Its illustrations, though almost as numerous, are necessarily much smaller and less sumptuous in execution; but so far as the history of previous excavations is concerned, Miss Barker's work is as extensive as the other, in which this subject occupies only about 75 pages. It is evidently an equally careful compilation from the available documents, and shows the same caution in identification, almost necessitated by the unsatisfactory nature of the evidence. It includes a brief description of the various works of art that are figured in the illustrations; also full tables of the various objects found, arranged in a convenient form. Its bibliography is more serviceable for students than that of the larger work, because it is classified and accompanied by brief critical notes. The book serves excellently to supply the compendious account of these excavations that has long been needed both by the student and the general reader.

THE 'PUNCH' EXHIBITION.

To the average Englishman humorous draughtsmanship is indissolubly linked with the name which heads this notice, and a whole history of pictorial comedy for the last sixty years is set forth in the "Pageant" now on view at the Leicester Galleries. We cannot, indeed, look over this record without being proud of the brilliance and resource that have gone to the making of this great national institution, or without recognizing the fineness of many of its traditions. On the other hand, we are made aware that even the best traditions may, by change of circumstances, become a hindrance to free development.

Here we are on dangerous ground, for the man who makes damaging comparisons between the Punch of to-day and that of yesterday is now an accepted object of derision. On the artistic side, however, which is what immediately concerns us, criticism will hardly dispute that the summit of brilliance was reached during the time when Keene, Du Maurier, Sir John Tenniel, and Mr. Linley Sambourne were working on the paper together. Never had journal a more capable staff of artists than the Punch of that period. Starting from the supple, spontaneous fancy of Doyle—conventional as an old master at bottom, and reflecting dimly some last echo, perhaps, of the design of Rubens—we see Leech grafting on that convention an ever-greater richness of direct observation, which culminates in the extraordinarily painter-like splendour of Charles Keene, and in the delicacy of facial expression—the niceties of social observation—of George Du Maurier. With these men there grew up engravers capable of translating the exquisite painting in brown line of the one—the somewhat laboured and meticulous penmanship of the other—into excellent woodblocks, so that the masters of comic realism had at their service an instrument of such delicacy as to permit the highest degree of elaboration.

To-day the instrument has been withdrawn; the standard remains as an incubus weighing down the unfortunate artist with demands which, from a practical point of view, are largely irrelevant. It is not necessary for the purposes of a comic paper that a scene should be realized with the exact truthfulness (indeed, the exquisite sensibility) to the facts of natural lighting which makes one of Keene's rural subjects like a page of Theocritus. It is not reasonable to ask such flowerlike delicacy in combination with the clear-cut definition demanded by the modern process-man, and Keene himself never faced any such difficulty. For purposes of broad comedy, again, the realistic elaboration of Du Maurier's interiors is not wanted. The method was natural to him—a subtle observer, but a rather hesitating draughtsman—and it gives his drawings historic value; yet it cannot be too strongly insisted that what the comic Muse asks of an artist is not the power of thorough realization, but that of abstraction.

In double degree, in that he sets out to be not only humorous, but also symbolic, the same demand weighs upon the cartoonist, and we cannot praise the judgment which sets a literal draughtsman like Mr. Bernard Partridge on such a task. But, indeed, most cartoonists of to-day are handicapped by the habitual ideal of photographic exactitude: they will draw a lion out of the Zoological Gardens wearing a crown out of Madame Tussaud's; their figures walk in real landscapes, and are grouped and lighted with a literalness that denounces them as a hotch-potch of professional models and studio properties. To create an atmosphere wherein your allegory may become a breathing reality implies different standards, and in spite of much inequality and occasional lapses in artistic taste, Mr. Linley Sambourne shows a real insight into the conditions which govern the making of a forcible and eloquent cartoon. No other Punch cartoonist has his masculine grip of design (sometimes marred by professional self-consciousness), or his power of endowing allegorical figures with a convincing air of life. Sir John Tenniel's personages are by comparison only gesticulating marionettes, which amuse, but do not impose upon us, and it was by its rarity in a long procession of such jocosities that the seriousness of 'Dropping the Pilot' made such an impression. Even here the seriousness is but in the sensitive drawing of the head of Bismarck, and of course in the literary sentiment of the subject. The grey pencil line of the artist's original drawings offers sometimes a shadowy atmosphere of ghostly suggestiveness, and a happy natural woodenness of draughtsmanship saves him from extremes of realism; but, despite much careful detail, now amusing, now sentimental, Sir John's whole design never attains to the force or unctuous humour of Mr. Sambourne at his best.

The younger generation of artists display considerable ability, but, as we have hinted, are a little weighed down by the generation of brilliant realists which preceded them. Mr. Raven-Hill (582), Mr. F. H. Townsend, and Mr. Gunning King (561) show excellent attempts at achieving Keene's completeness of presentment, yet facing at the same time the added difficulties of process; but for one such success there are many failures. The general impression after a comparison of the later with the earlier work is that while to-day we make the closest representation of things accepted as humorous, the earlier artists made humorous drawings, which attract by their alert counterpoise of mass or their easy dance of line. Phil May, who is far better represented here than in the large collection of his drawings seen recently in these galleries, is in some respects the strongest example of the one tendency, as Doyle of the other. When May produced a group of figures, he was often singularly blind to the easy, elastic give-and-take of the results which constitute it, and the conscientious process of building up from separate studies shown in the Solo by Grandpère (463) offers, for all its cleverness, an example of how not to make a humorous design.

We have dwelt on the special dangers which beset our famous contemporary because it is in established repute that there is the greatest danger of degeneration. When Punch was making its way it took its character from the humorous art of the period. It will deteriorate if the humorous art of our own times is forced to conform to the traditions of Punch.

MINOR EXHIBITIONS.

At the Grafton, where the United Arts Club holds its fifth exhibition, the first picture which attracts attention is a golden Evening on the Downs (6), by Mr. James Aumonier—a picture of very delicate texture, supple and elastic in drawing, much better than any of his contributions to the landscape show which we noticed a fortnight back. The only works by the younger exhibitors which are comparable with this are the Street Scene (28), by Mr. James Pryde; the Moonlight, St. Seine-l'Abbaye (25), by Mr. W. Rothenstein; and Reminiscence (86), by Mr. Cayley Robinson. The last we have already dealt with on a previous occasion. Mr. Pryde's extravagantly picturesque and brilliant technical demonstration has also been seen in one of the outlying galleries which often point the way to Bond Street. Mr. Rothenstein is to be praised for an honest attempt to realize an effect of moonlight in its actual unsensational colour, so like daylight when you are in the midst of it, and unlike the limelight travesty we are accustomed to from less conscientious painters. But while the blue scheme affected by the latter is, we agree, quite unnecessary, we submit that it is a little of the essence of moonlight to retain its mystery—that quality which almost alone differentiates it from daylight, and by which modelling eludes pursuit almost directly, and vanishes in a luminous veil. The exact position of this vanishing-point of modelling is doubtless a matter of opinion, but Mr. Rothenstein seems almost content that we shall forget there is such a thing, and the lively rate at which, starting from the central clash of light and shadow on the window, gradation tends to diminish would lead us to expect in the centre of the picture a flat pool of shade, which the painter insists on piercing. Mr. James Hill's On the Sand Dunes (20) appears to us to have like qualities and a similar fault.

The pictures making up the tail of the exhibition look insignificant by comparison with certain old Japanese kakemonos, one of which in particular (a Buddha surrounded by diaper flaked over with scales, each of which is another tiny Buddha) is most stately in aspect. The large Last Judgment pictures by Martin show considerable technical ability, but no very great power of design. Miss R. Leggett's April Day (137) is far better drawn than usual, but her nice ordering of level lines is invisible by reason of the presence of violent and ill-proportioned masses of impasto, which offer a contrast of texture stronger than any contrast of form in the picture.

At the Fine-Art Society's gallery Mr. Wallace Rimington, in the midst of a collection of commonplace water-colours, has one drawing, In the Fishing Quarter, Vigo (12), of decided merit, striking in subject, with a look of first-hand observation—qualities which, in a degree less intense, are to be found also in On the Rocks (32).

Admission to the exhibition by a Quartette of Roman Painters in the adjoining room is in aid of the Italian Earthquake Fund. E. Coleman is a facile draughtsman of Campagna subjects bad in colour, and V. Grassi a careful draughtsman of architecture. U. Coromaldi and C. Innocenti are clever sketchers, but seem corrupted in their recent work by the trick of sloppy handling common to-day. They show a few sketches probably dating a year or so earlier, direct and happy in execution and agreeable in subject. Nos. 29, 38, and 43 may be mentioned.

The Children's Exhibition at the Baillie Gallery is hardly up to the level of the shows in these rooms, one or two pretentious portraits being distinctly thin and meretricious. Some portraits by Helen Bedford (55 and 58); Her Seventh Birthday (16), by Eva Roos; and David and Goliath (81), by Maxwell Armfield, are among the best of the exhibits; while a welcome new-comer is Miss R. How, who has a clever drawing of a Mother and Child (uncatalogued).

BRITISH ART IN VENICE.

A SCHEME of some considerable interest to British artists has been started in connexion with the biennial International Exhibitions of Art in Venice, which are under the control of the Venetian Municipality and more directly of Prof. Fradeletto, who is now a prominent member of the Italian Parliament, and has been the life and soul of the various exhibitions from 1895 onwards. The proposal is that, in the same general space of the Venetian Giardini Pubblici containing the main exhibition building, there shall be a separate building, or padiglione, for British art. This building, in brick and stone, extensive and handsome, has already been erected by the municipality, though not finally appropriated. There are two other such separate buildings, occupied by Belgium and by Hungary, and it may readily be admitted that British art deserves a degree of prominence not inferior to that of either of those countries.

The scheme is that a British Committee should be formed, not of artists, but of art-amateurs of substantial position, who would purchase the separate building from the municipality for a sum which does not seem disproportionate. It is to be paid either in one sum or in two instalments. The building would then, during the currency of the biennial exhibitions, be filled with specimens of British art, the municipality bearing the chief expenses of transit, unpacking, and repacking. The British Committee would not themselves select the works for exhibition. This task would be performed by artists, the only proper persons for such a purpose; as the Committee, under the terms of the scheme, have to appoint a sub-committee, renewable biennially, consisting of two painters and one sculptor. Mr. Brangwyn, Mr. Grosvenor Thomas, and Sir George Frampton will act this year. As the honoured name of Ruskin is so intimately associated with Venice, power is reserved to the Committee to name the building "The Ruskin Memorial," should they feel so disposed. The next exhibition is to be held in 1909—April 22nd to October 31st. Sir David Salomons, with fine public spirit, has come forward with the purchase-money, and further funds must now be raised by the Committee for furnishing, &c.

A great number of British artists have exhibited in Venice between the years 1895 and 1907. I will mention only Alma Tadema, Burne-Jones, H. von Herkomer, Holman Hunt, Leighton, Millais, Watts, Brangwyn, Crane, East, Lavery, Grosvenor Thomas, Bramley, Poynter, J. J. Shannon, Clausen, Byam Shaw, Frampton, Furse, La Thangue, Cayley Robinson, Thornycroft, Waterhouse, Orpen, and Sargent. Works by Brangwyn, Coventry, East, Kay, Hamilton, Sydney Lee, Logsdail, Mackie, Tom Robertson, George Smith, Spence, Stevenson, Terris, Grosvenor Thomas, and John Wright have been bought from the various exhibitions by the King and Queen of Italy; and other works by the Italian Foreign Office, by the International Modern Art-Gallery of Venice, and by the Galleries of Rome, Milan, and Udine. Royal honours of the various orders were likewise, in connexion with the Venetian Exhibitions, conferred upon Millais, Alma Tadema, Lavery, Hamilton, and East. The sales of works of art of all nations from these Exhibitions have been of noticeable amount—from 14,400*l.* in 1895 to 21,079*l.* in 1907—total, 117,740*l.* It will thus be obvious that the interests of artists, whether British or otherwise, are substantially concerned in upholding and developing the exhibition scheme of the Venetian Municipality.

WM. M. ROSSETTI.

Fine-Art Gossip.

At the last meeting of the Council of the Royal Society of Painter-Etchers and Engravers Mr. W. H. Ansell, Mr. Ernest S. Lumsden, and Capt. Nevile R. Wilkinson, Ulster King-of-Arms, were elected Associates.

THE CORNER GALLERY was opened at 49, Old Bond Street, on Thursday last, with an exhibition of modern oil paintings and water-colour drawings by well-known artists.

THE committee of the École des Beaux-arts have announced their verdicts in connexion with the two most important "concours" of the year. In that of "composition à deux degrés" four pupils of M. Gabriel Ferrier have been ranked in the following order: Buzon, Canniccioni, Dupas, and Feraud. In the "concours de tête d'expression" the prize and the first medal are taken by M. Fidrit, who studied under M. Bonnat and M. Humbert. The second medal is taken by M. Louis Prat, a student of M. Cormon.

PART IV. of the Vasari Society's 'Reproductions of Drawings by the Old Masters' consists of 35 numbers (mostly from private or foreign collections) of the Italian, Flemish, Dutch, German, and English Schools, including three red-and-white chalk studies in Correggio's finest manner, from the Duke of Devonshire's collection. Other artists represented are Lorenzo di Credi, Filippino, Fra Bartolommeo, Carpaccio, Pisanello, Rubens, Van Dyck, Rembrandt, Burgkmair, and Loggan. Inquiries respecting the Society should be addressed to the Hon. Secretary at 10, Kensington Mansions, S.W.

MESSRS. OBACH & CO. are about to publish a detailed catalogue of the etchings and dry-points of Mr. Muirhead Bone, written by Mr. Campbell Dodgson. It describes all published and unpublished plates from 1898 to the end of 1907. Mr. Bone's most recent work, a portrait of himself, will appear as the frontispiece.

At the Bedford College for Women, York Place, Baker Street, Mr. J. W. Allen will give a course of six lectures on 'English Mediæval Architecture,' on Fridays, beginning on February 5th.

AMONG the articles in the February Antiquary will be 'Some Notes from the Court Rolls of a Shropshire Manor,' by the Rev. W. G. D. Fletcher; an illustrated description of 'Crows-an-Wra, the Beehive Huts and St. Enry's Well, Cornwall,' by Mr. J. Harris Stone; the first part of an account of the 'Monumental Brasses in the City of London,' by Mr. Andrew Oliver; 'An Old-Time Picture of the Fens,' by Mr. W. G. Clarke; an illustrated appreciation of Mr. G. P. Bankart's fine book on 'The Art of the Plasterer,' by Mr. J. Tavenor-Perry; and 'Some Lincolnshire Epitaphs,' by the Rev. Dr. Foster.

MESSRS. JACK are bringing out at a moderate price a new edition of an expensive work, 'Monograms and Ciphers,' designed and drawn by Mr. A. A. Turbayne and other members of the Carlton Studio.

THE ARCHÆOLOGICAL INSTITUTE is, as already stated by us, holding its annual meeting this summer at Lincoln, but the dates are now changed from July 20th—27th to July 23rd—30th, in order not to interfere with another congress at the same city.

EXHIBITIONS.

SAT. (Jan. 30).—Original Drawings by T. Rowlandson. Etchings by D. S. MacLaughlan and H. Mulready Stone, Mr. R. Gutekunst's Gallery.
— Society of Women Artists, Private View, 6A, Suffolk Street, Pall Mall East.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

BRIGHTON FESTIVAL.

MUSICAL FESTIVALS were held at Brighton from 1870 to 1882, under the direction of Mr. Kuhe, at which many works by native composers were produced. We even read of a "Grand Musical Festival" there in 1828. It was held in St. Peter's Church on October 29th—31st, and Mr. Attwood was conductor. The music (of course sacred) included 'The Messiah' and a "fine 'Gloria' by Leo."

The Festival last week (from the 13th inst. to the 16th) was under the direction of Mr. Joseph Sainton, conductor of the Brighton Municipal Orchestra. He was only appointed to that post last year, but the symphony concerts at the Dome proved so successful that the Corporation resolved to give a festival there. A special feature of the scheme was the prominence given to native art. On the first day Sir Edward Elgar conducted his 'Dream of Gerontius,' a work which had not hitherto been heard in Brighton; while on the last day his new Symphony in A flat was given under the direction of Mr. Sainton. Of the first work we need only say that the choir of the Brighton Sacred Harmonic Society took part in it, and that it attracted an immense audience.

The Symphony, which was new to Brighton, proved no easy task either for players or conductor. The weak point in the orchestra was the insufficiency of strings. The ordinary orchestra, numbering forty, had been increased to sixty; but the addition was not all in favour of the strings. As for the conductor, he was, as one can well understand, over-anxious. It would be easy to note shortcomings, but it is pleasanter, and at the same time more just, to recognize that Mr. Sainton gave an interpretation of the work which enabled the audience to feel much of the dignity and emotional warmth of the music.

Mr. Coleridge-Taylor on the 14th conducted his new 'Bon-Bon' Suite, which by its very title conveys the idea that it is not a work of lofty purpose. It consists of six songs by Moore set for baritone solo, chorus, and orchestra. The music is melodious and taking, and in not a few places reminds one of the first of the 'Hiawatha' Scenes. Specially dainty and characteristic are Nos. 2 and 3, 'The Fairy Boat' and 'To Rosa.' At times the scoring appeared rather heavy. If we mistake not, some of the numbers—and they can be given separately—would be still more effective with a smaller choir and perhaps simpler orchestration.

Sir Charles Stanford conducted his 'Irish Rhapsody' No. 1, also his new 'Attila' Suite, the first plaintive movement of which is effectively scored; Sir Alexander Mackenzie his bright 'Britannia' Overture, and Mr. Edward German his taking 'Welsh Rhapsody,' and all with marked success. We must also mention a Pianoforte Concerto by Liapounow, with Mr. Arthur Newstead as soloist, which proved only fairly attractive; the rendering of the first movement of Paganini's Violin Concerto in D by Mr. Percy Frostick, the excellent leader of the orchestra; and the creditable performance of 'Elijah' under the direction of Mr. Robert Taylor, conductor of the Sacred Harmonic Society. The principal singers who appeared at the Festival were Mesdames Agnes Nicholls and Ella Russell, Miss Gertrude Lonsdale, and Messrs. John Coates, William Higley, Webster Millar, and Watkin Mills.

COVENT GARDEN.—'The Ring' in English.

At Covent Garden on Saturday evening the second English season was successfully inaugurated with a performance of 'Das Rheingold.' In addition to three cycles of the 'Ring,' three performances of 'Die Meistersinger' are promised; and 'Madame Butterfly' and 'Faust' will also be presented. Moreover, Dr. E. W. Naylor's new opera 'The Angelus' will be heard for the first time next Wednesday evening.

With Dr. Richter in command, a fine rendering of the orchestral portions of 'Das Rheingold' was achieved, the instrumentalists responding alertly to the famous conductor's indications. Mr. Clarence Whitehill was once more an admirable representative of Wotan. He sang the music with due emphasis and notable skill. Mr. Walter Hyde, the Froh on the last occasion, now essayed the rôle of Loge, and, though he failed to convey some of the fire-god's sardonic humour, he sang with grace. Madame Gleeson-White imparted the needful decision to Fricka's utterances and Miss Edith Evans was a youthful and attractive Freia. Mr. Thomas Meux as Alberich, and Mr. Hans Bechstein as Mime, gave satisfaction; while the music for the Rhine-maidens was effectively interpreted by Miss Alice Prowse, Miss Caroline Hatchard, and Madame Edna Thornton.

At the performance of 'Die Walküre' on Monday two artists, Mrs. Saltzmann-

Stevens and Mrs. Frease-Green, impersonated Brünnhilde and Sieglinde respectively. The former has a rich, sympathetic voice, and is a very promising actress; though it seemed as though her voice were not entirely suited to the music. The other lady gave a charming impersonation of Sieglinde, yet her singing, though good, lacked colour. Mr. Walter Hyde was not quite at his best as Siegmund.

Musical Gossip.

MR. PLUNKET GREENE and MR. RICHARD BUHLIG provided the music at the Broadwood Concert at the Æolian Hall on Thursday evening of last week. The singer included in his list an interesting song by the seventeenth-century composer J. G. Ahle, entitled 'Brünstiges Tageweis'; Schubert's 'Der Leiermann' and 'Im Frühling'; and songs by Cornelius, Schumann, Sir Charles Stanford, Dr. Vaughan Williams, Dr. Charles Wood, and Dr. Walford Davies. All of these were interpreted with his usual earnestness and intelligence. Mr. Buhlig's principal contribution was Beethoven's 'Waldstein' Sonata. The technique was sound and polished, but a larger measure of expression would have been welcome. He was more successful in his interpretation of Chopin's Scherzo in C sharp minor and two delicate pieces by Debussy.

SIR EDWARD ELGAR conducted the third performance of his Symphony by the Queen's Hall Orchestra at the Symphony Concert last Saturday afternoon. On this occasion the instrumentalists realized more accurately the "atmosphere" of the slow movement, and imparted a larger measure of finish to their playing. Some portions of the Finale seemed less sombre than at the earlier hearing, and altogether the performance was very meritorious. In Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto the solo part was skilfully played by the young Canadian artist Miss Kathleen Parlow, who has studied with Auer. Her technique is finely developed, but at present she does not lay sufficient stress upon the expressive qualities of the music in the Andante.

MISS LENA ASHWELL has, instead of the usual orchestra, engaged Messrs. Philip Cathie, Lionel Tertis, Horace Fellows, and Jacques Renard, together with Mr. Stanley Hawley as pianist and director. A selection of high-class music is performed every evening by these excellent artists. On the evening we visited the Kingsway Theatre movements by Mendelssohn and Rheinberger were given, and with Mr. Hawley the spirited first movement of Schumann's Pianoforte Quintet in E flat. This is a great improvement on the commonplace and at times noisy music heard at some theatres.

LOUIS ETIENNE ERNEST REYER (REY) died on the 15th inst. He was born at Marseilles in 1823, and at the age of sixteen became a government official at Algiers. He had already shown a taste for music, and a Mass which he composed was performed when the Duc d'Aumale visited Algiers. After the Revolution of 1848 Reyer went to Paris, and composed several works, but his first real success was 'La Statue,' produced at the Théâtre Lyrique on August 11th, 1861. To his later opera 'Sigurd' we recently referred. His 'Salammbô' was first performed at Brussels in 1890, but not until 1892 in Paris. Reyer published a selection of his journalism under the title 'Notes de Musique.' He was a sound critic and a readable writer.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

SUN.	Concert, 3.30, Royal Albert Hall.
—	Sunday Society Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.
—	Sunday League, 7, Queen's Hall.
MON.—SAT.	Royal Opera, Covent Garden.
MON.	Messrs. G. Elwes and James Friskin's Concert, 3, Æolian Hall.
—	Orchestral Concert (Tadini), 8.15, Queen's Hall.
TUES.	Misses Ivy and Valerie Parkin's Pianoforte and Vocal Recital, 8, Bechstein Hall.
—	London Trio, 8.30, Æolian Hall.
WED.	Royal Amateur Orchestral Concert, 8.30, Queen's Hall.
—	Mr. Donald Tovey's Concert, 8.30, Chelsea Town Hall.
THURS.	Royal Choral Society, 8, Royal Albert Hall.
—	Broadwood Concert, 8.30, Æolian Hall.
FRI.	Mr. Joseph Holbrooke's Recital, 3, Steinway Hall.
SAT.	Messrs. Jan and Boris Hambourg's Extra Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Mr. Frederic Lamond's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Bechstein Hall.
—	London Ballad Concert, 3, Royal Albert Hall.
—	Symphony Concert, Queen's Hall Orchestra, 3, Queen's Hall.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

VAUDEVILLE.—Olive Latimer's Husband: a Play in Three Acts. By Rudolf Besier.

THE author's notable 'Virgin Goddess' has been followed by a drama—one might almost say tragedy—of modern life in which are to be found a similar directness of appeal and a similar ingenuity in construction. Gloomy, painful, horrible at times, this story of 'Olive Latimer's Husband' may seem to the playgoer who dislikes having his attention drawn to the grimmer facts of life; but there is a note of sincerity sounded throughout its scenes that often reaches an almost lyrical intensity. The plot, again, may strike the expert as thin, and based on familiar material—Mr. Besier ventures to let his play turn on the fate of a letter, even takes as his text the unnaturalness of the loveless marriage; but he has the knack of working up excitement to the highest point, of getting every possible effect in the most concentrated form.

Once more the playwright observes faithfully the unities of time and place. The action occurs between six o'clock and a quarter past ten on a winter's evening, and the scene is confined to a single room of Harry Latimer's country house. More remarkable, however, than this adherence to ancient tradition is the way in which Mr. Besier makes the influence of an unseen character felt all through his story. At the first lifting of the curtain we discover that the heroine's husband is dying, and though as soon as she enters our speculations are fastened on her gestures, her nervous speech, her betrayals of character, we are always seeking to connect them with the sick man upstairs. It does not take long to learn that she has married one man, and given her heart elsewhere; that her husband knows of her disloyalty, and has actually sent for her lover—who is a physician—to attend his bedside; that in order to write a certain letter to this man he has got up in the midst of an attack of typhoid and brought on a relapse; and that his wife, who has watched his illness in a whirl of conflicting emotions—pity for his state, hope for her release—went into his room the previous night, found the nurse asleep, and left her so. The man, then, has virtually signed his own death-warrant, while his wife, as she awaits anxiously the arrival of her lover, knows that she might have saved her husband's life, and did not.

But there are uglier things than this in the play. There are a pair of heartless old people, Olive's father and mother, who, having married one daughter to money, propose to sell another into a worse bondage, and it takes all the heroine's eloquence to encourage her sister to resist their coercion; their inhumanity is remorselessly pictured. There are Olive's passages of recrimination with her parents—passages so realistic that the hearer wants to close his ears. Lastly, while the husband lies dying or dead there are love-scenes between the heroine and the physician, revolting to a sense of decency, yet only too true to human nature. Moreover, this exhibition of the egotistical and less pleasing side of humanity is furnished with a definite object. The author does not handle his situations for purposes of theatrical trickery; he expresses through them something he wants to say and has really felt. And the very grip of his drama serves to relieve its harshness. We are eager to know the contents of the husband's letter, which Olive tries hard to prevent the family doctor from handing to her lover, and to persuade him not to open. When it is read, the very surprise of its contents takes the audience by storm. The dead man gives the lovers his blessing. Just because he does so they cannot accept his gift, for it is the gift of his life. And so they part—Olive to devote herself to her sister, the physician to take up his work. It is an austere and perhaps a sentimental ending, but on the part of the wife the sentiment is natural.

The play contains really but one part. Unsparing of themselves as are Mr. Draycott and Miss Helen Ferrers in the characters of Olive's calculating parents, charmingly as Miss Dagmar Wiehe carries through the young girl's scenes, admirably as Mr. Lyn Harding hits the pose and suave tones of the fashionable physician, all the other persons of the drama prove but satellites in the train of the heroine. Olive's moods of remorse and revolt, of amorousness and reserve, her alternations of emotional repression and passionate abandonment, exactly suit Mrs. Patrick Campbell's temperament. Not for a long while has this actress obtained so good an opportunity for her nervous, intense style. Tragedy of the classic kind she can scarcely compass; of tragedy concerned with the woman of nerves and her incalculable explosions and reticences she is a past mistress. Her by-play is often more impressive than her most vehement outbursts.

ERNST VON WILDENBRUCH.

With the death of Ernst von Wildenbruch at the comparatively early age of sixty-four, there has passed away an interesting figure in contemporary German literature. When Wildenbruch began to write in the seventies, he was the most promising of the younger poets who were filled with that patriotic Prussian idealism which was the saving of the new empire. He himself had Prussian royal blood in his veins, his family being descended from Frederick William II. He began with fervid patriotic epics of the war with France, 'Vionville' (1874) and 'Sedan' (1876): a volume of 'Lieder und Balladen' followed in 1877; and in 1880 he passed to the novel, publishing 'Der Meister von Tanagra,' a "Künstlernovelle" of ancient Greece. From that date until quite recently, he produced an unbroken series of stories and plays. As a novelist his talent had no very striking qualities, but he had a peculiar aptness for the short story, in which the Germans, contrary to what might be expected, often succeed admirably. There is something, however, a little specious in Wildenbruch's prose writings, something insincere and theatrical. The finer touches are beyond him; he rarely penetrates beneath the surface.

All this points to the stage, and it is by his plays that Wildenbruch will be remembered. He set out to be the Prussian dramatist of the new régime—to convert, in other words, the ideas with which Treitschke was inspiring the younger generation of North Germans, into poetry. He attempted to galvanize into new life the high-sounding pathos of Schiller, and to revive the national pride of Kleist. His dramas, beginning with 'Die Karolinger' (1881), which struck the new note, 'Der Menonit' (1881), 'Harold' (1882), 'Das neue Gebot' (1886), 'Die Quitzows' (1888), 'Der neue Herr' (1891)—above all, the spacious planned double tragedy 'Heinrich und Heinrichs Geschlecht' (1896), and perhaps best of all 'Die Tochter des Erasmus' (1900)—enjoyed a great and deserved popularity on the stage. They are all effective, full of life and movement; but unfortunately they came a little late in the day. The ideals of Hebbel and Ibsen were beginning to dominate the German stage, and playgoers were demanding from the dramatist that fineness of perception for character, that sacrifice of outward effect to the depiction of spiritual processes, which had hitherto been regarded as the peculiar domain of the psychological novel. The consequence was that Wildenbruch had to face a public, the best elements of which were repelled by the theatrical effectiveness of his work, and did not quite do justice to his good qualities. It was his misfortune as a dramatist that of all kinds of theatricality, patriotic theatricality is the least tolerable to sensitive nerves. It must not, however, be forgotten that his plays, after all, marked the beginning of better times for the German theatre, in an age when better times were almost despaired of; by restoring historical tragedy to the stage and stemming the flood of French translations and adaptations, he restored to the German theatre of the eighties confidence and self-respect. J. G. R.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—S. L.—F. E.—G. N.—B. L.—Received. J. H.—Anticipated. W. M.—Many thanks. We cannot undertake to reply to inquiries concerning the appearance of reviews of books.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

	PAGE
AUTHORS' AGENTS	90
AUTOTYPE CO.	90
BELL & SONS	112
CATALOGUES	90
CHATTO & WINDUS	113
EDUCATIONAL	89
EXHIBITIONS	89
HARPER & BROS.	91
INSURANCE COMPANIES	114
LECTURES	89
MACMILLAN & CO.	92
MAGAZINES, &C.	114
MISCELLANEOUS	89
NOTES AND QUERIES	115
PAUL & CO.	115
PHILLIMORE & CO.	92
PROVIDENT INSTITUTIONS	89
PUTNAM'S SONS	116
SALES BY AUCTION	90
SITUATIONS VACANT	89
SITUATIONS WANTED	89
SMITH, ELDER & CO.	115
SONNENSCHNEIN & CO.	115
TYPE-WRITERS, &C.	89
UNWIN	92
YOUNG & SONS	114

MESSRS. BELL'S BOOKS.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Demy 8vo, illustrated, 10s. 6d. net.

CANADIAN TYPES OF THE OLD RÉGIME (1608-1698).

By C. W. COLBY,

Professor of History in the McGill University, Montreal.

In this volume Prof. Colby has brought the writings of French authors to bear on the English, and vice versa, as no other writer has attempted to do. The result is a clear and authoritative view of the period of French influence in Canada, written by a Canadian who thoroughly understands the attitude of French Canadians towards their own past.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Crown 8vo, illustrated, 7s. 6d. net.

BUILDERS OF UNITED ITALY (1808-1898).

By R. S. HOLLAND.

An introduction to the study of one of the most fascinating periods of modern European history, in the form of lives of eight of the greatest figures in the struggle for Italian Independence. Eight portraits are included.

NOW COMPLETED IN TWELVE VOLUMES.

THE PROSE WORKS OF JONATHAN SWIFT.

Edited by TEMPLE SCOTT.

With an Introduction

By the Right Hon. W. E. H. LECKY, M.P.

In 12 vols. with numerous Portraits and Facsimiles, 5s. each. (Bohn's Standard Library.)

Vol. XII. completing the Edition. Bibliography by W. SPENCER JACKSON, and Full Index, with Essays on the Portraits of Swift and Stella by the Right Hon. Sir FREDERICK FAULKNER, K.C., and on the relations between Swift and Stella by the Very Rev. J. H. BERNARD, D.D., Dean of St. Patrick's. With 2 Portraits and a View of Woodpark.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Vol. IV. (Parts VII. and VIII.). Small 4to, 12s. net.

With 3 Maps and 2 Plans.

THE ITINERARY OF JOHN LELAND.

Newly Edited from the MSS. by LUCY TOULMIN SMITH.

This Edition will be completed in Five Volumes, of which Vol. I. (containing Parts I.-III.), price 18s. net, Vol. II. (Parts IV. and V.), price 12s. net, and Vol. III. (the 'Itinerary in Wales'), price 10s. 6d. net, are already published.

A NEW BOOK BY AN AMERICAN HUMOURIST.

NOW READY. Crown 8vo, illustrated, 5s.

A HOLIDAY TOUCH,

And other Tales of Undaunted Americans.

By CHARLES BATTELL LOOMIS,
Author of 'Cheerful Americans,' &c.

BELL'S MINIATURE SERIES OF GREAT WRITERS.

NEW VOLUME JUST PUBLISHED.

Pott 8vo, cloth, illustrated, 1s. net.

GOLDSMITH.

By E. S. LANG BUCKLAND.

Full List sent on application.

THE STANDARD AUTHORITY. WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY.

TWENTIETH-CENTURY EDITION.

Revised and Enlarged, with an Appendix of 25,000 Words, Phrases, and Definitions.

2,348 pages. 5,000 Illustrations.

WRITE FOR DETAILED PROSPECTUS, with Specimen Pages, hundreds of Opinions of Eminent Men, and prices in various styles of binding.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS,
York House, Portugal Street, W.C.

MESSRS. CHATTO & WINDUS'S LIST.

THE COLOUR OF PARIS.

By MM. LES ACADÉMICIENS GONCOURT.

Fully illustrated after Water-Colour and Sepia Drawings by the Japanese Artist YOSHIO MARKINO. Large fcap. 4to, cloth, gilt top, 20s. net. Limited Edition of large-paper numbered copies, 42s. net.

"This account of Paris, its institutions, its history, its women, its artists, the army, industry, journalism, and politics, is pure delight. There could be no better introduction to a knowledge of Paris as she is."—Westminster Gazette.

DEVON:

Its Moorlands, Streams, and Coasts.

By LADY ROSALIND NORTHCOTE.

Fully illustrated in Colours by FREDERICK J. WIDGERY. Large fcap. 4to, cloth, gilt top, 20s. net.

"Both the letterpress and the illustrations of this book merit the very highest praise."—Morning Post.

"Authoress, artist, and publisher are alike to be congratulated on the result of their labours—a volume full of charm and delight in every respect."—Western Morning News.

A CHILD'S GARDEN OF VERSES.

By ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

The First Edition Illustrated in Colours to be Published in this Country.

With 12 Full-Page Reproductions of Water-Colours, numerous Illustrations in the Text in Line, Designed End-Papers and Title (printed in gold), and a special Binding-Design by MILLICENT SOWERBY.

Large crown 8vo, cloth, 5s. net. Also a Special Edition, limited to 1,000 copies, on large pure rag paper, the plates mounted, and bound in whole parchment, 10s. 6d. net.

AN INLAND VOYAGE.

By ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

Newly set in special large type, with 12 Full-Page Illustrations after Water-Colours, and 12 Facsimile Drawings, also Designed Title, End-Papers and Maps, and Cover Design by NOEL ROOKE.

Extra crown 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d. net; parchment, 10s. 6d. net. Also numbered large-paper copies on pure rag paper, the Plates mounted, and bound in whole parchment, 21s. net.

"Both typographically and pictorially the volume is exceedingly pleasing.....We know of no prettier edition of an ever delightful book."—Guardian.

"A very handsome edition.....The pictures have a sensitive, delicate charm which is extremely pleasant."—Liverpool Courier.

PIPPA PASSES; and MEN AND WOMEN.

By ROBERT BROWNING.

With 10 Full-Page Illustrations after Water-Colours by ELEANOR F. BRICKDALE.

Large fcap. 4to, cloth, gilt top, 6s. net. A limited edition of numbered large-paper copies on pure rag paper, the Plates mounted, bound in whole parchment, 12s. 6d. net.

"Eleanor F. Brickdale's delicate and dainty illustrations reveal a vivid fancy no less than technical skill. She has helped to make a volume which every lover of Browning and of art should value."—Glasgow Herald.

AN EVENING WITH SHAKESPEARE.

Being a Series of Ten Tableaux—each clearly Illustrated in Half-Tone from Photographs, with full Directions, including Words and Musical Score, for the Staging by Young People of Twelve Songs from the Plays. By T. MASKELL HARDY.

Also clear Instructions, with Diagrams, for the appropriate Dances, and a Final Song, with Music by the Editor, entitled 'Homage to Shakespeare.'

Imperial 16mo (7½ in. by 5½ in.), limp linen, 1s. 6d. net; cloth gilt, 2s. net; leather, 3s. 6d. net.

THE LATEST IN FICTION.

A QUESTION OF MEANS.

Now ready.

By M. B. CROSS,

Now ready.

6s.

Author of 'Love and Olivia,' &c.

6s.

'A Question of Means' is an absorbing story of modern English life, written from a distinctly novel point of view. The setting of the story is domestic and industrial, but a strong contrast is introduced in the person of a wealthy labour-master and politician, once suitor to the heroine, and by him the destinies of the other characters are largely controlled.

JULIAN REVELSTONE.

By JUSTIN MCCARTHY,

6s.

Author of 'Dear Lady Disdain,' &c.

Jan. 28.

A great novel by a great author. A story possessing all the charm and interest that Mr. McCarthy is so thoroughly able to impart.

THE ROGUE OF RYE.

6s.

By W. WILLMOTT DIXON.

Feb. 4.

A clever historical novel dealing with Napoleon's attempted invasion of England. A spirited narrative, replete with stirring incidents and dramatic situations.

IDOLATRY.

By ALICE PERRIN,

6s.

Author of 'The Stronger Claim,'
'The Waters of Destruction,' &c.

Feb. 11.

'Idolatry' is another of Mrs. Perrin's fascinating Anglo-Indian stories. Those who have read and enjoyed her previous novels will not be disappointed in 'Idolatry.'

THE JUNE PRINCESS.

By CONSTANCE SMEDLEY,

6s.

Author of 'An April Princess.'

Feb. 18.

The story of a girl's search for happiness. She battles bravely through many an adventure, and experiences many different kinds of loves, and eventually discovers the goal of her long journey.

THE MERRY HEART.

6s.

By FRANK A. SWINNERTON.

Feb. 25.

A story of life in modern London. It relates with imagination and delicate humour the adventures of several young men and women engaged in daily work in the city.

Messrs. CHATTO & WINDUS will be pleased to send post free Prospectuses of any or all of the following Series:—

The Medici Series of Coloured Reproductions after the Old Masters.

The New Medieval Library.
Bibliotheca Romanica.
Books for Children.

The St. Martin's Library.
Authors for the Pocket.
The King's Classics.

The Shakespeare Library
(including the Shakespeare Classics).

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's Lane, W.C.

HENRY YOUNG & SONS' PUBLICATIONS.

SHAKESPEARE AND "THE ARTE OF ENGLISH POESIE." By WILLIAM LOWES RUSHTON, Author of 'Shakespeare's Legal Maxims,' 'Shakespeare a Lawyer,' &c. Crown 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d. net.

"It makes a valuable and scholarly contribution to the critical exegesis of Shakespeare's text by explaining obscure passages with particular reference to the early treatise on rhetoric and poetry attributed to George Puttenham."—Scotsman.

SHAKESPEARE'S LEGAL MAXIMS. By WILLIAM LOWES RUSHTON. Crown 8vo, cloth, 2s. net.

"A very useful little volume....Should be in the hands of all students who take an interest in questions of this kind [viz., Shakespeare's legal knowledge]."—Stratford-on-Avon Herald.

THE ADVENTURES OF MR. VERDANT GREEN, AN OXFORD FRESHMAN. By CUTHBERT BEDE. Also THE FURTHER ADVENTURES OF MR. VERDANT GREEN, AN OXFORD UNDERGRADUATE. By the Same Author. With all the clever Sketches by the Author, and 2 Etched Frontispieces. 2 vols. crown 8vo, cloth, gilt tops, 6s. net.

The nicest edition of these clever and amusing stories—probably the best examples of British humour the Victorian era produced.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES OF EMINENT GREEKS AND ROMANS. The Translation called Dryden's, corrected from the Greek and Revised by ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH. With 5 pretty Photogravures. 5 vols. demy 8vo, cloth, gilt tops, 30s. net.

The best English translation, printed with large, clear type.

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

Ennobling Thoughts from his Writings, consisting of an Extract from his 'Christmas Sermon,' commencing "To be honest, to be kind," and one of his Vailima Prayers, commencing "The day returns." Each Extract printed in old-faced characters on a fine Ivory Card, with Ornamental Initial Letter Coloured by Hand, suitably framed in wood and glazed, 1s. 6d. net and 2s. 6d. net each. Also the Cards unframed, 6d. net each. Size 7 in. by 5½ in.

CHARACTER AND CONDUCT: a

Book of Helpful Thoughts by Great Writers of Past and Present Ages. Selected and Arranged for Daily Reading by the Author of 'Being and Doing.' Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. net. Also a Pocket Edition, printed on India Paper, cloth, 2s. net; limp leather, gilt edges, 3s. 6d. net.

Some of the most beautiful and most important reflections upon the attributes and formation of a noble character, and the conduct of a worthy life, ever expressed in print.

THE WAPENTAKE OF WIRRAL:

a History of the Royal Franchise of the Hundred and Hundred Court of Wirral in Cheshire. By RONALD STEWART BROWN. Crown 4to, cloth, 10s. 6d. net.

"A valuable study....An excellent specimen of a kind of work of which we cannot have too much."—Times.

LIVERPOOL BANKS AND

BANKERS, 1760-1837. A History of the Circumstances which gave rise to the Industry, and of the Men who Founded and Developed it. By JOHN HUGHES. With 25 Plates. Crown 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d. net; large paper, 4to, half-morocco, 21s. net.

"Well printed and illustrated, and includes a number of interesting portraits of Liverpool worthies."—Athenæum.

LIVERPOOL IN THE REIGN OF

QUEEN ANNE, 1705 and 1708, from a Rate Assessment Book of the Town and Parish. Transcribed and Edited by HENRY PEET, F.S.A. With Maps and Plates. Demy 8vo, cloth, 5s. net.

"One of the most informing and reliable sketches of the Liverpool of two hundred years ago."—Liverpool Courier.

"The book is a remarkable one, and it will soon be valuable, the edition being limited to 250 copies."

Liverpool Daily Post.

12, SOUTH CASTLE STREET, LIVERPOOL.

Magazines, &c.

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW.

No. 427. JANUARY, 1909. Price 6s.

1. WHIGS AND RADICALS BEFORE THE REFORM BILL.
2. HENRY IRVING.
3. THE VICTORIAN CHANCELLORS.
4. TARIFF REVISION IN THE UNITED STATES.
5. A SCHOOL OF IRISH POETRY.
6. VENICE AND THE RENAISSANCE.
7. "NIMROD."
8. GRÆCO-ROMAN AND ROMAN SCULPTURE.
9. BIOLOGICAL PROBLEMS OF TO-DAY.
10. SCOTLAND IN THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY.
11. THE POLITICAL SITUATION IN EUROPE.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. 29, PATERNOSTER ROW, LONDON, E.C.

THE ELIBRARY.

No. 37.

JANUARY, 1909.

A Quarterly Review of Bibliography and Library Lore. Price 3s. net, or 10s. 6d. per annum.

Contents for JANUARY.

- THE BIBLIOGRAPHY OF MILTON. Alfred W. Pollard.
THE WILL OF GEORGE THOMASON. DAFYDD AB GWILYM. H. Idris Bell.
RECENT FOREIGN LITERATURE. Elizabeth Lee.
SIMPLIFIED SPELLING FROM THE PRINTER'S STAND-POINT. Harry Lyman Koopman.
A NEW IPSWICH BOOK OF 1548. F. G. M. Beck.
SOME DEALINGS OF THE LONG PARLIAMENT WITH THE PRESS. H. R. Plomer.
LUDWIG HOHENWANG'S SECOND PRESS AT BASEL. Victor Scholderer.
PRINTERS AND BOOKS IN CHANCERY. Robert Louis Steele.
REVIEWS. A. W. P.
ALEXANDER MORING LIMITED (The De La More Press), 32, George Street, Hanover Square, London, W.

THE BUILDER (founded 1842), 4, Catherine

Street, London, W.C., JANUARY 23, contains:—

- STUDENTS' DESIGN AT THE INSTITUTE OF ARCHITECTS.
THE STABILITY OF WALLS (Society of Architects).
ABATTOIRS (Institute of Architects).
DRAWING FROM THE LIFE (Architectural Association Debating Society).
REASON IN BUILDING (Carpenters' Hall Lectures).
ILLUSTRATIONS:—
DESIGN FOR REREDOS BY THE LATE G. F. BODLEY, R.A.
COMPETITION DESIGN FOR LONDON COUNTY HALL.
RECENT GOVERNMENT BUILDINGS IN INDIA.
"GILHAM'S BIRCH," ROTHERFIELD.

From Offices as above (4d. by post 4½d.), at Railway Bookstalls, Bookshops, and of all Newsagents.

EBENEZER PROUT'S WORKS.

Bound, each net, 5s.

- HARMONY: its Theory and Practice. Twenty-fourth Impression. Revised and largely Re-written.
ANALYTICAL KEY TO THE EXERCISES in the Same. Net 3s.
COUNTERPOINT: Strict and Free. Ninth Impression.
DOUBLE COUNTERPOINT AND CANON. Fourth Impression.
FUGUE. Fifth Impression.
FUGAL ANALYSIS. Third Impression.
MUSICAL FORM. Seventh Impression.
APPLIED FORMS. Fifth Impression.
THE ORCHESTRA. 2 vols. Fourth Impression.
AUGENER, LTD., 6, New Burlington Street, and 22, Newgate Street.

NOW READY.

THE PRIZE NOVEL OF 1909.

250 GUINEAS AWARD.

THE FAITH OF HIS FATHERS.

By A. E. JACOMB.

Price 6s.

Out of 156 MSS. submitted in the great First Novel Competition of last year,

Mr. Andrew Lang, Mr. W. L. Courtney, and Mr. Clement K. Shorter

Have selected the above as Winner of the Prize.

EXTRACT FROM FIRST REVIEW.

The Daily Chronicle says:—

"The knowledge of human nature it displays, the craft of the characterization, the tragic force, increasing as it goes along and culminating in the irony of the last few lines, are exceptional. There is no other word for it—Mr. Jacomb has written a notable book."

ANDREW MELROSE,
3, York Street, Covent Garden, W.C.

In 2 vols. crown 8vo, with 2 Portraits, 24s.

JOHN FRANCIS AND THE 'ATHENÆUM.'

A Literary Chronicle of Half a Century.

By JOHN C. FRANCIS.

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

NOTICE.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

THE VOLUME

JULY to DECEMBER, 1908,

WITH THE

INDEX,

Price 10s. 6d.,

IS NEARLY READY.

* The INDEX separately, price 6d.; by post, 6½d.

Also Cases for Binding, price 1s.; by post, 1s. 2d.

JOHN C. FRANCIS & J. EDWARD FRANCIS,
Notes and Queries Office, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

Insurance Companies.

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS, SICKNESS,
EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY, BURGLARY, AND
FIDELITY GUARANTEE RISKS

INSURED AGAINST BY THE

RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE CO.

Capital (fully subscribed), £1,000,000. Claims paid, £5,600,000.

64, CORNHILL, LONDON.

A. VIAN, Secretary.

NATIONAL

PROVIDENT

INSTITUTION

FOR

MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE.

Established 1835.

ASSURANCE AND INVESTMENT.

Write for Leaflet on net cost of Endowment Assurances,
48, Gracechurch Street, London, E.C.

Applications for Agencies invited.

HOP PILLOWS.—"Goodnight" Brand.
Invaluable to sufferers from Insomnia, Neuralgia, Nervous Headaches, &c. Specially prepared, post free, 5s. from THE HOP COMPANY, 26, Denman Street, London Bridge, S.E.

HIGHEST AWARDS.

CORK, 1883. LIVERPOOL, 1886. PARIS, 1886. ADELAIDE, 1887

PARIS, 889. CHICAGO, 1893. PARIS, 1900. ST. LOUIS, 1904.

FRANCO-BRITISH, 1908.

OLD BUSHMILLS.

Have you tried this—the Prize-Winning Whisky?

From all Wine Merchants.

Address of nearest Agent sent on application.

"OLD BUSHMILLS" DISTILLERY CO., LTD.,
20, Mark Lane, E.C.

PERCY: PRELATE AND POET,

The Editor of 'The Reliques.'

By ALICE C. C. GAUSSEN,

Author of 'A Later Pepys' and 'A Woman of Wit and Wisdom.' With a Preface by Sir GEORGE DOUGLAS, Bart., a Photogravure Frontispiece, and 7 Half-Tone Illustrations. Small demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

From Papers in the possession of the Duke of Northumberland and Lord Colchester, and containing Original Letters from Johnson and Goldsmith, in the possession of Bishop Percy's Descendants.

Saturday Review.—"Miss Gausсен may well be content with the result of her labours, for she has collected and used her material with care and taste, and tells the story with an easy raciness of style which is sadly to seek in many biographies....Indeed it may be said, without any disparagement of Percy, as may be said of Boswell's Life without disparaging Johnson, that this book owes its attractiveness very largely to the incidental references to well-known people of the period, such as Gray, Goldsmith, Reynolds, Betty (Duchess of Northumberland), and many others. Ireland in the latter part of the eighteenth century did not make for a quiet life, as may be gathered from the graphic accounts of attacks by the French, rebellions and riots given in Miss Gausсен's narrative and the Bishop's letters. He was one whom it would have been a pleasure to know, and of whom it is a pleasure to read."

London: SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo Place, S.W.

NOVELS IN GREAT DEMAND

"A MASTERPIECE OF FICTION"

THE BROKEN SNARE

By LUDWIG LEWISOHN

At all Libraries and Booksellers'

FIRST OPINION

Mr. WILLIAM MORTON PAYNE says:—"The book, despite its boldness of speech and conception, is ethically wholesome. It does not seek by means of false sentiment to incline us to the acceptance of evil, and its moral emphasis is not misplaced. It is not a book for the young person to read, but is one from which the mature mind can get nothing but good, and one which offers a singular satisfaction to the artistic perceptions."

READY THIS WEEK.

DID SHE DO RIGHT?

By A. J. MACDONNELL.

A Roman Romance of the Twentieth Century.

London: STANLEY PAUL & CO. Clifford's Inn, Temple Bar.

AUTHORIZED TO BE USED BY BRITISH SUBJECTS.

NOW READY

THE NATIONAL FLAG,

BEING

THE UNION JACK.

SUPPLEMENT TO

NOTES AND QUERIES

FOR JUNE 30, 1900,

Price 4d.; by post 4½d.

Containing an Account of the Flag, Reprinted June, 1908.

With Coloured Illustration according to scale.

JOHN C. FRANCIS and J. EDWARD FRANCIS,

Notes and Queries Office, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

NEXT WEEK'S ATHENÆUM will contain
Reviews of W. JOHNSON'S FOLK-MEMORY and G. UNWIN'S THE GILDS AND COMPANIES OF LONDON.

Swan Sonnenschein & Co.,

LTD.

SOME SCIENCE TEXT-BOOKS.
STUDENT'S TEXT-BOOK OF ZOOLOGY.

By ADAM SEDGWICK, M.A. Professor of Zoology and Comparative Anatomy in the University of Cambridge. Profusely illustrated. The Third Volume, completing the Work, is now ready.

Vol. I. PROTOZOA to CHAETOGNATHA. 18s.Vol. II. AMPHIOXUS to VERTEBRATA. 21s.Vol. III. TUNICATA to ENTERO-PNEUSTA and ECHINODERMATA. 24s.INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF ORGANIC CHEMISTRY.

A Theoretical and Practical Text-Book for Students in the Universities and Technical Schools. By JOHN WADE, D.Sc.Lond., Lecturer on Chemistry at Guy's Hospital, University of London. Crown 8vo, 8s. 6d. net.

Also issued in Two Parts, each furnished with its own Index and complete in itself. Part I. 5s. net. Part II. 4s. 6d. net.

A NEW ENLARGED EDITION OF ELEMENTARY TEXT-BOOK OF PRACTICAL BOTANY.

By Prof. E. STRASBURGER. Edited by Prof. HILLHOUSE. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d.

THE STUDENT'S BOTANY.

By SIDNEY VINES, M.A. D.Sc. Third Edition. 433 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 15s.

AN ELEMENTARY TEXT-BOOK OF BOTANY.

By Dr. SIDNEY H. VINES, M.A. D.Sc. F.R.S., Sherardian Professor of Botany in the University of Oxford. 433 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 9s.

HANDBOOK OF SYSTEMATIC BOTANY.

By Dr. E. WARMING. Edited by Prof. M. C. POTTER, M.A. 610 Illustrations. Second Edition. Demy 8vo, 9s.

PRACTICAL PLANT PHYSIOLOGY.

By Prof. DETMER. Translated by S. A. MOOR. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 12s.

EMBRYOLOGY OF MAN AND MAMMALS.

By Dr. O. HERTWIG. Edited by Prof. E. L. MARK, Ph.D. 339 Figures and 2 Lithographic Plates. Third Edition. Demy 8vo, 21s.

TEXT-BOOK OF THE EMBRY-OLOGY OF INVERTEBRATES.

By Profs. KORSCHLDT and HEIDER. Medium 8vo, 4 vols. 7s. 6d. each.

Vol. I. PORIFERA to ECHINODERMATA. Translated by Dr. E. L. MARK.Vol. II. PHORONIDEA to PALEOSTRICA Translated by M. BERNARD.Vol. III. ARACNIDA to INSECTA. Translated by M. BERNARD.Vol. IV. AMPHINEURA to CEPALOPHORA. Translated by M. BERNARD.THE STUDENT'S HYGIENE.

By ERNEST EVANS, of the Technical School, Burnley. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

THE SCIENCE OF COMMON LIFE.

By J. B. COPPOCK, B.Sc.Lond. F.I.C. F.G.S., Principal of the Schools of Science, Kendal.

READY SHORTLY.

A NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION OF TEXT-BOOK OF PETROLOGY.

By FREDERICK H. HATCH, Ph.D. With numerous Illustrations. 7s. 6d. net.

SWAN SONNENSCHN & CO., LTD.,
25, High Street, Bloomsbury, W.C.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS' NEW BOOKS.

EDGAR ALLAN POE'S WORKS.

THE TALES AND POEMS.

In 6 vols. size 7 by 4½ inches, printed in large type, on light, flexible paper, half-leather, gilt tops, uncut edges, silk markers, in box. Illustrated by F. S. COBURN. 21s. net the Set.

THE COMPLETE POEMS.

8vo, cloth extra, gilt top, uncut edges, 7s. 6d. net. With an Introduction by Prof. CHARLES RICHARDSON, and many Illustrations by Mr. F. S. COBURN.

THE POEMS. Ariel Edition.

An exquisite little Edition of the Poems, size 5½ by 4 inches, in flexible red leather, with Photogravure Frontispiece of Poe, uncut edges, gilt top, and silk marker, 1s. 6d. net.

* * Send for detailed Prospectus of the "Ariel Booklets."

BARTHOLOMEW DE LAS CASAS: his Life, his Apostolate, and his Writings.

By FRANCIS AUGUSTUS MACNUTT. Illustrated. 8vo, cloth, 15s. net.

Las Casas, the sixteenth-century historian of early Spanish-America, the devoted missionary, and the defender of the Indians who fared so ill at the hands of their Christian conquerors, is the subject of the biography entitled 'Bartholomew de las Casas,' by Francis Augustus MacNutt, whose translation of 'The Letters of Cortes,' with its comprehensive, original, and scholarly editorial equipment, has given him a high place among authorities on the history of early sixteenth-century America.

FIGHTING THE TURK IN THE BALKANS: An American's Adventures with the Macedonian Revolutionists.

By ARTHUR H. HOWDEN SMITH. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

THE ART OF NATURAL SLEEP.

With Definite Directions for the Wholesome Cure of Sleeplessness. Illustrated by Cases Treated. By LYMAN P. POWELL, Author of 'Christian Science,' &c. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

"Into this volume the author has gathered all the advice of the ages on how we may woo and win sleep."—Book Monthly.

ROMANCE OF THE ROMAN VILLAS.

By ELIZABETH W. CHAMPNEY, Author of 'Romance of the Italian Villas,' &c. 8vo, cloth extra, gilt top, uncut edges, in box, 15s. net.

"In other volumes Miss Champney has given us delightful glimpses of the castles, abbeys, and villas of France and Italy, and here she writes in quite a fascinating way about the villas of the great Cardinals of the Renaissance."—Newcastle Chronicle.

MIRABEAU AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.

By FRED MORROW FLING, Ph.D. To be completed in Three Parts. Illustrated. Part I. THE YOUTH OF MIRABEAU. 8vo, cloth, 15s. net.

"Prof. Fling has built his biography in the approved French style of boldness and decoration, making full use of all the best material, and it promises to be a book quite worthy of its subject."—Yorkshire Post.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF THE SPIRIT:

A Study of the Spiritual Nature of Man and the Presence of God, with a Supplementary Essay on 'The Logic of Hegel.'

By HORATIO W. DRESSER, Ph.D., Author of 'The Physician to the Soul,' &c. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d. net.

"Mr. Dresser's work is an elaborately reasoned study of the philosophy of the spirit."—Scotsman.

HEALTH AND HAPPINESS:

Or, Religious Therapeutics and Right Living.

By SAMUEL FALLOWS, D.D. LL.D. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s.

"A most helpful book."—Christian Commonwealth.

THE TWENTIETH-CENTURY AMERICAN.

Being a Comparative Study of the Peoples of the Two Great Anglo-Saxon Nations. By H. PERRY ROBINSON. 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.

"Probably a gentler, a fairer, and a better intended book on America has never before been written."—Daily Chronicle.

THE OCEAN CARRIER:

A History and Analysis of the Service and a Discussion of the Rates of Ocean Transportation.

By J. RUSSELL SMITH. Illustrated. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

A HISTORY OF MODERN BANKS OF ISSUE.

With an Account of the Economical Crises of the Present Century. By CHARLES A. CONANT. Third Edition. With an Account of the Economic Crisis of 1907. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d. net.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF SELF-HELP.

By STANTON DAVIS KIRKHAM. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 5s.

BEVERAGES, PAST AND PRESENT.

An Historical Sketch of their Productions, together with a Study of the Customs connected with their Use. By EDWARD R. EMERSON, Author of 'The Story of the Vine,' 'A Lay Thesis on Bible Wine,' &c. 2 vols. 8vo, cloth, 21s. net.

THE SLOOPS OF THE HUDSON.

Containing a History of the Packet Sloops of Last Century, and their Names, together with Reminiscences of several Notable North River Sailing Masters. By WILLIAM E. VERPLANCK and MOSES W. COLLYER. Illustrated. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

INVESTMENT BONDS.

A Book of Facts Relating to their Issue and Relationships in the Different Fields of Finance; the Issue of the Definitive Instrument, its Negotiation, &c. By F. LOWN-HAUPT. 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d.

FLOWER OF THE DUSK.

By MYRTLE REED. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt top, uncut edges, 6s.

"The present story we hold to be in advance of anything she has before written."—Northern Whig.

AMONG MISS REED'S OTHER SUCCESSFUL VOLUMES ARE:—

LAVENDER AND OLD LACE.

THE MASTER'S VIOLIN.

LOVE LETTERS OF A MUSICIAN.

LATER LOVE LETTERS OF A MUSICIAN.

A SPINNER IN THE SUN.

* * Send for descriptive List of Miss Reed's Books.

THE HEART OF A GEISHA.

By Mrs. HUGH FRASER. With a Frontispiece in Colour by LUDWIG HOLBERG, and Ornamental Borders and Decorations by R. WEIR CROUCH. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt edges, in box, 6s. net.

"A pretty Japanese love tale, rendered the more so by being printed on one side of the page only, and with decorated borders."

Times Literary Supplement.

FIRST SPRING LIST, AND NEW CATALOGUE MAY BE HAD ON APPLICATION:

24, BEDFORD STREET, STRAND, LONDON; and 27 and 29, WEST 23RD STREET, NEW YORK.

THE ATHENÆUM

In English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No

SATURDAY, JANUARY 30, 1909.

PRICE
THREEPENCE.
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER.

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION,
1909.

GREAT WHITE CITY,
SHEPHERD'S BUSH, LONDON, W.

Y TO OCTOBER,
emonstrating the

SPECIAL PRODUCTS AND RESOURCES

including DISPLAYS of the FAMOUS HEALTH AND PLEASURE
RESORTS OF THE WORLD.

HISTORICAL EXHIBIT

Showing the progress of AERIAL
NAVIGATION, AUTOMOBILE, LIGHT,
MECHANICAL ENGINEERING,
Palace of Latest Inventions.

Concerts by Five Military Bands, British and Foreign.

SUPERB ILLUMINATIONS. FIREWORK DISPLAYS.

THE GREAT STADIUM, seating 80,000 Persons.

INTERNATIONAL SPORTS AND ATHLETIC MEETINGS.

Application for Exhibit Space, Concessions, &c., to be made to

THE SECRETARY,
IMPERIAL INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION,
SHEPHERD'S BUSH, LONDON, W.

Lectures.

ROYAL INSTITUTION OF GREAT BRITAIN,
ALBEMARLE STREET, PICCADILLY, W.

TUESDAY NEXT, February 2, at 5 o'clock, Prof. A. A.
MACDONELL, M.A. Ph.D. F.R.S., FIRST OF THREE LECTURES on 'The Architectural and Sculptural Antiquities of India.' Half-a-Guinea the Course.

THURSDAY, February 4, at 3 o'clock, WILLIAM ARCHER,
Esq., M.A., FIRST OF TWO LECTURES on 'The Revival of Modern Drama.' Half-a-Guinea.

SATURDAY, February 6, at 3 o'clock, Sir ALEXANDER C.
MCKENZIE, Mus.Doc. D.C.L. LL.D., FIRST OF THREE LEC-TURES on (1) 'Mendelssohn'; (2) 'Chamber Music.' Half-a-Guinea.
1. With Musical Illustrations. 2, 3. With the kind assistance of the Members of the Hans Wessely Quartette.

Subscription to all the Courses in the Season, Two Guineas.

Provident Institutions.

THE BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT
INSTITUTION.

Founded 1837.

Patron—HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

Invested Capital, 30,000l.

A UNIQUE INVESTMENT

Offered to London Booksellers and their Assistants.

A young man or woman of twenty-five can invest the sum of Twenty Guineas (or its equivalent by instalments), and obtain the right to participate in the following advantages:—

FIRST. Freedom from want in time of Adversity as long as need exists.

SECOND. Permanent Relief in Old Age.

THIRD. Medical Advice by eminent Physicians and Surgeons.
FOURTH. A Cottage in the Country (Abbots Langley, Hertfordshire) for aged Members, with garden produce, coal, and medical attendance free, in addition to an annuity.

FIFTH. A furnished house in the same Retreat at Abbots Langley for the use of Members and their families for holidays or during convalescence.

SIXTH. A contribution towards Funeral expenses when it is needed.
SEVENTH. All these are available not for Members only, but also for their wives or widows and young children.

EIGHTH. The payment of the subscriptions confers an absolute right to these benefits in all cases of need.

For further information apply to the Secretary MR. GEORGE LARNER, 23, Paternoster Row E.C.

Exhibitions.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF ARTS
WINTER EXHIBITION.

Open from 9 A.M. to 6 P.M. Admission 1s.
Catalogue, 6d. Season Ticket, 5s.

ROWLANDSON DRAWINGS, also ETCHINGS
by D. S. MACLAUGHLAN and H. MULREADY STONE.
Exhibition now open at Mr. R. GUTKUNST'S, 16, King Street,
St. James's, S.W. 10-6 Daily. Admission 1s.

Educational.

EDUCATION.

Parents or Guardians desiring accurate information relative to the CHOICE OF SCHOOLS for BOYS or GIRLS or TUTORS in England or Abroad

are invited to call upon or send fully detailed particulars to MESSRS. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who for more than thirty years have been closely in touch with the leading Educational Establishments.

Advice, free of charge, is given by Mr. THRING, Nephew of the late Head Master of Uppingham, 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

CHRIST'S COLLEGE, BLACKHEATH, S.E.

F. W. AVELING, M.A. B.Sc.
Preparation for Universities and Professions.
Stress on Modern Languages and Science.

WEYBRIDGE LADIES' SCHOOL, SURREY.

Miss E. DAWES, M.A. D.Lit. Lond., Classical Scholar, Girton.
Refined Home. Thorough Education and Physical Care. Good
Grounds, position high, and one of the healthiest in England.

THE DOWNS SCHOOL, SEAFORD, SUSSEX.

Head Mistress—Miss LUCY ROBINSON, M.A. (late Second Mistress, St. Felix School, Southwold). References: The Principal of Bedford College, London; The Master of Peterhouse, Cambridge.

TUITION BY CORRESPONDENCE.—For all

Exams. in Classics, Modern Languages, Mathematics, Science,
Logic, &c. Highly qualified Staff.—Address Mr. J. CHARLES-TON, B.A., Burlington Correspondence College, Birkbeck Bank Chambers, London, W.C.

Situations Vacant.

COUNTY OF LONDON.

The LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL invites applications for the undermentioned posts:—

(1) ASSISTANT MASTER, especially qualified in Modern Languages, at the ST. MARYLEBONE GRAMMAR SCHOOL. Salary 150l. a year, rising by annual increments of 10l. to a maximum of 300l. a year.

(2) ASSISTANT LECTURER in the THEORY and PRACTICE of EDUCATION at the CLAPHAM TRAINING COLLEGE. Salary 130l. a year, rising by annual increments of 10l. to a maximum of 170l.
a year.

Applications should be made on Form H40, to be obtained, together with particulars of the appointments, from the Education
Officer, London County Council, Education Offices, Victoria Embankment, W.C., to whom they must be returned not later than 10 A.M. on SATURDAY, February 13, 1909.

All communications on the subject must be endorsed "H," and a stamped addressed foolscap envelope must be enclosed.
Canvassing, either directly or indirectly, will be held to be a disqualification for employment.

G. L. GOMME, Clerk of the London County Council.
Education Offices, Victoria Embankment, W.C.
January 28, 1909.

COUNTY OF LONDON.

The LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL invites applications for the undermentioned posts:—

(1) LADY SUPERINTENDENT of a TEMPORARY TRADE
SCHOOL for GIRLS to be accommodated in the L.C.C. HAMMER-
SMITH SCHOOL of ARTS and CRAFTS, LIME GROVE, SHEPHERD'S BUSH, W. Salary, 200l. a year, rising by annual increments of 10l. to 300l. a year. The appointed Candidate will be required to teach English Subjects. Preference will be given to Candidates possessing a knowledge of Industrial Conditions.

(2) ART MISTRESS to give half-time to each of the TRADE
SCHOOLS for GIRLS, (i) at QUEEN SQUARE, BLOOMSBURY, W.C., and (ii) at the L.C.C. HAMMERSMITH SCHOOL of ARTS and CRAFTS. Salary 120l. a year, rising by annual increments of 5l. to 150l. a year. Applicants must have had experience in Design for Industrial purposes.

Applications should be made on the Official Form, to be obtained, together with particulars of the appointment, from the Education
Officer, London County Council Education Offices, Victoria Embankment, W.C., to whom they must be returned not later than 11 A.M. on FEBRUARY 6, 1909, accompanied by copies of three Testimonials of recent date. All communications on the subject must be endorsed T1, and a stamped addressed foolscap envelope must be enclosed.
Canvassing, either directly or indirectly, will be held to be a disqualification for employment.

G. L. GOMME, Clerk of the London County Council.
Education Offices, Victoria Embankment, W.C., January 21, 1909.

KENT EDUCATION COMMITTEE

SITTINGBOURNE HIGHER EDUCATION SUB-COMMITTEE.
COUNTY SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

WANTED, after EASTER, an ASSISTANT MISTRESS for the above-named School specially qualified to teach Mathematics, and also some Geography, History, or Drawing. Initial Salary, non-resident, 110l. to 120l., according to qualifications and experience, with increments in accordance with the Committee's Scale.—Further particulars and Forms of Application may be obtained from Mr. E.
BRIDGEN, London Road, Sittingbourne. Applications should be forwarded as early as possible to Miss FREEMAN, Head Mistress, County School for Girls, Sittingbourne. Canvassing will be considered a disqualification.

By Order of the Committee,

FRAZ. W. CROOK, Secretary.
Caxton House, Westminster, London, S.W.,
January 21, 1909.

CAMBRIDGESHIRE EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

CAMBRIDGE AND COUNTY SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

ASSISTANT MISTRESS REQUIRED, chiefly for History, Literature, and Latin. Commencing Salary 130l. per annum, non-resident.
Duties to commence APRIL 27 NEXT.—Forms of Application, which should be returned before FEBRUARY 24, 1909, can be obtained of the undersigned.

AUSTIN KEEN, Education Secretary.
County Offices, Cambridge.

Situations Wanted.

SHORTHAND TYPIST is OPEN to take an ENGAGEMENT after lengthy and satisfactory employment in well-known Office of Literary Paper. Used to long hours and continuous work. Personal reference will be given by present Employer.
Salary 25s. to commence.—Apply Box 1444, Athenæum Press, 13,
Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Yearly Subscription, free by post, Inland,
15s. 3d.; Foreign, 18s. Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class matter.

THE ATHENÆUM is published on
FRIDAY AFTERNOON at 2 o'clock.

DAILY SECRETARIAL WORK WANTED
by LADY. Experienced Computer; good French and German; knowledge of Scandinavian Languages.—Address ALPHA, 22, Boundary
Road, South Hampstead, N.W.

TO PUBLISHERS.—ART EDITOR of extremely successful Publications, could undertake MANAGEMENT of the ART DEPARTMENT of a PUBLISHING HOUSE or of a Serial or Magazine.—K., care of Peter Harper, 29, New Bridge Street, E.C.

A YOUNG GENTLEMAN, with Literary and Artistic Tastes, and a thorough knowledge of Spanish, Italian, and French, desires EMPLOYMENT, Secretarial or other. Shorthand and Type-Writing. Good references.—Address ALPHA care Davies & Co., Advertising Agents, Finch Lane, Cornhill.

ASSISTANT LIBRARIAN.—ENGAGEMENT
DESIRED in PUBLIC or PRIVATE LIBRARY by YOUNG MAN with a good knowledge of Literature and Science. French Scholar.—PERSEUS, 145, Dorchester Road, Weymouth.

ADVERTISER, with ripe experience in all details of Publishing, Literary as well as Commercial, desires ENGAGEMENT in any Department. Excellent References.—
Box 1386, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Miscellaneous.

PUBLIC-HOUSE REFORM.—The People's Refreshment House Association, Ltd., founded by the Bishop of Chester, manages 68 Licensed Inns. Ask for List and Report.
APPLY FOR 1/2 SHARES. 5 per cent paid since 1899.
P.R.H.A., Broadway Chambers, Westminster.

A FIRM of PUBLISHERS REQUIRE a WRITER possessed of a forceful and topical pen. Knowledge of Journalism or Publishing is not required. Position is a good one and will be open to competition. Specimen Article on any Subject, either in reprint or in typewriter MS., must be submitted with application and addressed envelope for its return if desired. State Salary required, age, if married, and other particulars in confidence to Box 4785, Willing's Advertising Offices, 125, Strand, W.C.

TRANSLATIONS (into and from English).
Research, and other Literary Work. French, German, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, Dutch. Varied experience. Moderate terms.—
Miss STRACK, 35, Mall Chambers, Kensington, W.

WORK WANTED IN INDEXING, CATA-
LOGUING, BIBLIOGRAPHY, &c. Good experience. Spanish, Italian, and French Translated. Research Work of any kind undertaken.—Address ALPHA, care Davies & Co., Advertising Agents, Finch Lane, Cornhill.

LITERARY RESEARCH undertaken at the British Museum and elsewhere on moderate terms. Excellent
Testimonials.—A. R., Box 1062, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's
Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

GENEALOGICAL SEARCHES at the Public
Record Office, Somerset House, London Parish Registers, &c.
Moderate charges.—R. H. ERNEST HILL, 60, Chancery Lane, W.C.

POPULAR MAGAZINE WANTED TO PUR-CHASE.—Reply, stating fullest particulars, to INVESTOR, care of White & Leonard, Solicitors, Bank Buildings, Ludgate
Circus, E.C.

A MEDICAL MAN, in high-class, exceptionally healthy neighbourhood, within fifteen miles of London, is willing to TAKE into his House a RESIDENT PATIENT who is failing either Physically or Mentally. Detached House, large Garden, facing South and West, situated on high ground, with extensive view.
No other patients in the House.—Apply to M.D., Box 1561, Athenæum
Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

THE DAUGHTER of a well-known Literary Man is desirous of meeting with a LADY and GENTLEMAN to SHARE her HOUSE; or would take Boarders. Rooms Furnished or Unfurnished. The House is situated on South Norwood Hill, five minutes from Norwood Junction Station, close to the Stanley Halls (where Concerts, Lectures, &c., are continually given), near the Public Library, and within a walk of the Crystal Palace, or One Station from
it. Norwood is regarded as one of the healthiest places round London, and was at one time a well-known health resort.—Address C. M.
Box 1562, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Printers.

ATHENÆUM PRESS.—JOHN EDWARD
FRANCIS, Printer of the Athenæum, Notes and Queries, &c., is prepared to SUBMIT ESTIMATES for all kinds of BOOK, NEWS,
and PERIODICAL PRINTING.—13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery
Lane, E.C.

Type-Writers, &c.

AUTHORS' MSS., 9d. per 1,000 words. Sermons, Plays, and all kinds of TYPE-WRITING carefully done at home (Hemington). Good paper. Orders promptly executed. Duplicating from 3s. 6d. per 100.—M. L. L., 18, Edgeley Road, Chapham, S.W.

AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS, STORIES, PLAYS, ESSAYS TYPE-WRITTEN with complete accuracy, 9d. per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies guaranteed. References to well-known Writers.—M. STUART, Allendale, Kymberley Road, Harrow.

TYPE-WRITING undertaken by highly educated Women (Classical Tripos; Cambridge Higher Local; Modern Languages). Research, Revision, Translation, Shorthand, Dictation Room.—THE CAMBRIDGE TYPE-WRITING AGENCY, 10, Duke Street, Adelphi, W.C.

TYPE-WRITING, 9d. per 1,000 words. All kinds of MSS. accurately typed. Clear Carbon Copies, 3d. per 1,000. References to well-known Authors. Oxford Higher Local. Tel. 1272, Richmond P.O.—M. KING, 24, Forest Road, Kew Gardens, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING OF EVERY DESCRIPTION by EXPERT, 8d. per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies, 3d. per 1,000 words. Accuracy and prompt return guaranteed. Reliable references.—NOIR DICKINSON, 1, Sackville Gardens, Ilford.

Catalogues.

ANCIENT and MODERN COINS.—Collectors and Antiquarians are invited to apply to SPINK & SON Limited, for Specimen Copy (gratis) of their NUMISMATIC CIRCULAR. The finest Greek, Roman, and English Coins on View and for Sale at Moderate Prices.—SPINK & SON, Limited, Experts, Valuers, and Cataloguers, 16, 17, and 18, Piccadilly, London, W. Established upwards of a Century.

PUBLISHERS' REMAINDERS.

Bookbuyers should write for GLAISHER'S CATALOGUE OF REMAINDERS, which contains Books in all Departments of Literature. A large and constantly varying Stock always on hand. Great Reductions in Price.

WILLIAM GLAISHER, LTD.
Remainder and Discount Booksellers,
265, HIGH HOLBORN, LONDON.

BOOKS.—ALL OUT-OF-PRINT and RARE BOOKS on any subject SUPPLIED. The most expert Bookfinder extant. Please state wants and ask for CATALOGUE. I make a special feature of exchanging any Saleable Books for others selected from my various Lists. Special List of 2,000 Books I particularly want post free.—EDW. BAKER'S Great Bookshop, 14-16, John Bright Street, Birmingham. Rhead's Staffordshire Pots and Pottery, Illus., 21s., for 10s. 6d.; Ainsworth's Novels, 20 vols., 35s.; Burke's Peerage, 1907, 24s.

THREE THOUSAND ENGRAVED PORTRAITS, and One Thousand Old Engravings, of LONDON and MIDDLESEX. CATALOGUE post free.—A. RUSSELL SMITH, 28, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

CATALOGUE No. 50.—Drawings by Turner, Prout, Ruskin, &c.—Turner's Liber Studiorum and other Engravings—Proofs touched by Turner—Constable's English Landscape—Etchings by Whistler—Japanese Colour Prints—Illustrated Books. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church Terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

P. M. BARNARD, M.A.
(Late Scholar of Christ's College, Cambridge),
10, DUDLEY ROAD, TUNBRIDGE WELLS;
Also at 85, BRIDGE STREET (near the John Rylands Library), MANCHESTER.

JUST ISSUED.

CATALOGUE No. 27. MANUSCRIPTS (35), INCUNABULA (175), with 8 Full-Page Illustrations.

TO BE ISSUED SHORTLY

CATALOGUE No. 28. SCOTCH HISTORY AND LITERATURE, OLD SCOTCH.

P. M. BARNARD is prepared to undertake the formation of LIBRARIES and COLLECTIONS on SPECIAL SUBJECTS.

FIRST EDITIONS of MODERN AUTHORS, including Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, Ainsworth; Books illustrated by G. and R. Cruikshank, Phiz, Rowlandson, Leech, &c. The largest and choicest Collection offered for Sale in the World. CATALOGUES issued and sent post free on application. Books Bought.—WALTER T. SPENCER, 27, New Oxford Street, London, W.C.

Authors' Agents.

THE AUTHOR'S AGENCY.—Established 1879. The interests of Authors capably represented. Agreements for Publishing arranged. MSS. placed with Publishers.—Terms and Testimonials on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHESE, 24, Paternoster Row.

Sales by Auction.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION at their Great Rooms, King Street, St. James's Square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On TUESDAY, February 2, OBJECTS of ART and VERTU from various Sources, and Coins and Medals of the late T. RUSSELL KENT, Esq.

On FRIDAY, February 5, PORCELAIN and DECORATIVE FURNITURE from various Sources; and PORCELAIN of the late THOMAS WELCH, Esq.

On SATURDAY, February 6, MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS, the Property of A. B. YUILLE, Esq., and others.

The Library of Books and Periodicals on the Game of Chess, the Property of the late M. NUMA PRÉTI, of Paris.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, February 1, at 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of BOOKS and PERIODICALS on the GAME of CHESS, the Property of the late M. NUMA PRÉTI, of Paris.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE, will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, February 2, at 1 o'clock precisely, BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS comprising the Property of a GENTLEMAN, deceased, and other Properties, including Biographical and Historical Works—Poetry and Drama—Incunabula—Americana—First Editions of the Writings of Modern Authors—Coloured Prints, &c.—Shelley, Works, ed. H. Buxton Forman, 8 vols.—Greville Memoirs, 8 vols.—Arabian Nights, 17 vols.—Burton Club—Daniell's Voyage Round Great Britain—Portrait des Grands Hommes, Femmes Illustres, et Sujets Memorables de France, Complete Set, &c.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

The Valuable Collection of Greek Coins formed by the late FRANK SHERMAN BENSON, Esq., of Brooklyn, New York.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, February 3, and Two Following Days, and on MONDAY, February 8, and Three Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the valuable COLLECTION of GREEK COINS, formed by the late FRANK SHERMAN BENSON, Esq., of Brooklyn, New York, comprising choice and interesting Examples of the Ancient Coinages of Italy and Sicily, Greece and the Islands, Asia Minor, &c., Syria, Egypt, Zeugitana, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Illustrated Catalogues may be had, price 2s. 6d. each.

A Collection of Japanese Colour Prints.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, February 12, at 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of ORIGINAL JAPANESE COLOUR PRINTS and BOOKS.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A selected Portion of the Library of the Right Hon. LORD POLWARTH.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, February 15, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, an interesting COLLECTION of valuable and rare BOOKS and PAMPHLETS selected from the LIBRARY of the Right Hon. LORD POLWARTH (of Merton House, Berwick), including an extensive Series of Civil War Tracts and Newspapers—rare Americana—Books of Travel and on Trade—East Indies—Broadside—Proclamations—Virgil's Aeneid, printed by Caxton—Rare Old English Black-Letter Books—Corte di Pavia, 11 Cavalier, Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester's Copy—Series of Maps, Charts and Plans of Battles—American Maps—Penn's Laws for Pennsylvania, Original Manuscript—Cases of Appeal in the Scottish Courts—Engraved English and French Portraits, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Engravings and Drawings.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, February 17, at 1 o'clock precisely, ENGRAVINGS and DRAWINGS (framed and in the Portfolio), including the COLLECTION of the late GEORGE SMITH, Esq., F.S.A., comprising a fine Impression in the rare First State, of the Portrait of Lucas Vorsterman, etched by Sir A. Vandyck—the Baby Pack, by H. B. Chalon, after W. Ward—the Set of Four Shooting Pieces, by W. Woollett, after Stubbs, Proofs before Letters—Mezzotint Portraits after Sir J. Reynolds, &c.—Drawings in Water-Colours, by J. Varley, D. M. Serres, R. Westall, W. Vandervelde and others; the Property of the late JAMES GIBSON HAMILTON STARKIE, Esq., of Troqueer Holm, whose Wife was Grandniece of Sir Thomas Lawrence, P.R.A.; comprising Miss Croker, by S. Cousins, after Sir T. Lawrence, Proof—Countess Gower and Child, by and after the same, Proof—a Collection of the Works of Sir T. Lawrence, by different Engravers, with Biographical Notices—other Portraits after Sir T. Lawrence, by S. Cousins, F. C. Lewis, S. W. Reynolds, &c.; other Properties, comprising Prints and Views relating to America—Mezzotint and Stipple Portraits—Fancy Subjects of the English and French Schools, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Library of the late Sir JAMES T. KNOWLES, K.C.V.O. and a portion of the Library of D. R. CLARK, Esq., M.A. F.S.A. Scot.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, February 18, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, including the LIBRARY of the late SIR JAMES T. KNOWLES, K.C.V.O. (sold by order of the Executors); a PORTION of the LIBRARY of D. R. CLARK, Esq. M.A. F.S.A. Scot.; a PORTION of the LIBRARY of the late JAMES BOLTON, Esq., of Storrs Hall (the Property of ANNABELLA LADY BOUGHEY), and other Properties, comprising Works on the Fine Arts—First Editions of English and Foreign Authors—Americana—Books of Emblems, Portraits, and Caricatures—Book-Plates, &c.—Arabian Nights, Villon Society—The Germ, 1850—Burlington Fine Arts Club Publications—Le Pautre, Œuvres d'Architecture—Thackeray, Works, Original Library Edition, 22 vols.—Early English Text Society's Publications—Shakespeare, edited by Payne Collier—Works illustrated by G. Cruikshank—Works by Sir Thomas More—Westmacott's English Spy—Dugdale's Monasticon Anglicanum, 1849, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

STEVENSON'S AUCTION ROOMS.

Established 1760

Curiosities.

MR. J. C. STEVENSON'S NEXT SALE of CURIOSITIES will take place on TUESDAY NEXT, at half-past 12 o'clock, and will include a small COLLECTION of NEW GUINEA and other CURIOSITIES, the Property of the late MR. SAVILLE KENT—a choice Collection of Baxter Prints—Chinese and Japanese Porcelain and Carved Ivories—various Indian Silks and Brass Work—Prints—Drawings, &c.

On view day prior 10 to 4 and morning of Sale. Catalogues on application to the Auctioneer, 38, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

Egg of the Great Auk.

MR. J. C. STEVENSON will include in his SALE on TUESDAY, February 9, a fine SPECIMEN of the EGG of the GREAT AUK. In the same Sale, many fine and rare Clutches of British and Foreign Birds' Eggs will be offered for Sale by Auction.

Catalogues on application.

Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION at their Galleries, 47, Leicester Square, W.C., DURING FEBRUARY, BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, including several small Libraries, removed from the Country, comprising valuable Works on the Fine Arts, Natural History, Sport, the Drama, &c.—Library Sets of Standard Authors—Valuable First Editions—Books with Coloured Plates, including Gould's Birds of Great Britain, 5 vols., full Morocco—Burton's Arabian Nights, Original Edition—Grimm's German Stories—Drayton's Poems, 1605—Real Life in London. In the Original Parts—a Set of Notes and Queries, with the Indexes—Books of Travel—First Editions of Dickens, Lever, Thackeray, Brontë, Swinburne—Large-Paper Copies of the Works of Oscar Wilde, in fine bindings—Illuminated Book of Hours of the Sixteenth Century—Autograph Letters, &c.

Catalogues in preparation.

Valuable Law Books.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on FRIDAY, February 5, at 1 o'clock, VALUABLE LAW BOOKS, comprising a complete set of the Law Reports in all the Courts from 1845 to 1907, 356 vols. calf—Series of the Law Journal and Law Times Reports—Statutes of the Realm, edited by Tomlins and Raithby, 11 vols.—Sutton's Forms of Judgments, 3 vols.—a selection of Recent Text-Books—also Handsome Glazed Mahogany Bookcases—Engravings, &c.

Catalogues on application.

Miscellaneous Books.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on TUESDAY, February 9, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock, MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, comprising Dutilleul's Rembrandt, with the Etchings in Two States, 6 vols. and Portfolio of large Plates—Folio Books on the Fine Arts—Topographical and Antiquarian Works—Books relating to Ireland—Dodgson's Herbal, 1578—Spenser's Faerie Queene, 1611, and a few other Books in old English Literature—Holograph Letter from King Charles II. and a few other Autograph Letters—Unpublished MS. of Cobbett's Poor Man's Bible and other Manuscripts by or relating to the same—Grimm's German Popular Stories, First Edition, 2 vols.—Jane Austen's Mansfield Park, First Edition, 3 vols. boards, uncut—The Vale Press Shakespear, 39 vols.—Library Editions of Thackeray, 22 vols., Matthew Arnold, 15 vols., Byron, Large Paper, 13 vols., and Burton's Arabian Nights, illustrated, 12 vols.—Standard Works in History, Travel, Science, and General Literature—also a SELECTION FROM AN OLD LIBRARY removed from the North of Scotland, comprising Books in Seventeenth and Eighteenth Century Literature, chiefly in old calf bindings.

Catalogues are preparing.

Furniture, Pictures, Engravings, &c.

THERE will be SOLD at PUBLIC AUCTION, on FEBRUARY 9, 1909, and the Following Days, at half-past 1, at 16, RUE BELLOCY PAU, BASSES-PYRÉNÉES, FRANCE, the Property of the late Mrs. W. FORBES MORGAN, a fine COLLECTION of ANCIENT and MODERN FURNITURE—Pictures—Engravings—Porcelains—Laces—Brocades—Vernis Martin and other Boxes—Ivories—Fans—Silver and other Objects.

For further information and for Catalogues apply to Mr. RIGAUD, Notary, 6, Rue Gachet, Pau, France.

BLACKWOOD

For FEBRUARY contains

THE COMPANY OF THE MARJOLAINE.

By JOHN BUCHAN.

A CATERAN IN CALCUTTA. By GRANGATLI.

OXFORD, PAST AND PRESENT.

By the Warden of Wadham College.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY.

By CHARLES WHIBLEY.

SOME MEMORIES OF MY SPARE TIME.

The Commune—How I Got Out of Paris—A Heavy Bombardment—"Domestic Fury and Fierce Civil Strife"—An Interview with the Emperor—Bazaine—My Book Suppressed.

By General the Right Hon. Sir HENRY BRACKENBURY, G.C.B.

FROM SHAM TO THE CITIES OF SALIH.

By F. G. CLEWOW, M.D.

BOSWELL.

THE NEW JUNE. 53-61.

By HENRY NEWBOLT.

AT A TURKISH ELECTION.

MUSINGS WITHOUT METHOD.

Democracy True and False—Compulsory Training—A National Spirit—The Power of the Navy—What We have to Lose—Thrift, Public and Private.

THE TANGLE IN INDIA.

By Sir C. H. T. CROSTHWAITE, K.C.S.I.

THESE BE YOUR GODS, O ISRAEL!

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS,
Edinburgh and London.

For Magazines, &c., see p. 146.

GRANT RICHARDS

A SELECTION

The Elizabethan
Classics.

MONTAIGNE'S
ESSAYS. 31s. 6d. net.

The essays of Michael Lord of Montaigne form the first three volumes of a series of fine reprints, which afford a welcome respite from the mass of small volumes. The first is an extra demy 8vo; it is printed on pure rag paper, and bound in buckram gilt. Mr. Thomas Secombe has written a lengthy Introduction to the book. Only 1,150 copies are for sale in England and America. The "Manchester Guardian" says:—"Mr Thomas Secombe's three-volume edition of Florio's 'Montaigne' is worth a good many new books.... well printed and comely." "A fine new edition, and a luxurious one; paper, print, and binding are of the best."—The "Outlook." Send for prospectus. Three volumes. 31s. 6d. net.

C. W. SALEEBY, M.D.

HEALTH, STRENGTH, AND HAPPINESS

is the title of Dr. Saleeby's new book, which deals with every question relating to health. Among others there are chapters on the value of air, of light, of sleep, of exercise, the clothes we wear, the food we eat, caring for the senses, the racial functions, &c. "Of all the books on these subjects written for the layman none is so sane, wise, and helpful as Dr. Saleeby's. He is vivid, hopeful and inspiring."—The "Observer." Price 6s. net.

CHARLES STONHAM.

THE BIRDS OF THE BRITISH ISLANDS.

The third volume of this beautiful work on birds by Charles Stonham, C.M.G. F.R.C.S., is just ready, and the first three volumes can now be supplied to subscribers bound in red buckram (36s. net each) or half vellum (42s. net each). The work will be complete in five volumes, and will contain over three hundred photogravures by Luke Medlard, F.Z.S. "To all country-house libraries it will almost certainly be considered a necessity," says W. L. Courtney in the "Daily Telegraph." "We doubt if a finer set of plates has ever been devoted to ornithology and at the price the series will form a veritable bargain."

TO FURTHER THE ENFRANCHISEMENT OF WOMEN

THE

ENGLISHWOMAN

NO. I. JUST READY

CONTENTS.

IN PARLIAMENT. An M.P.
INVOCATION. John Masefield.
"MEN ARE MEN AND WOMEN ARE WOMEN." Mrs. Fawcett.
AN OLD SOLDIER. Tudor Ralph Castle.
POINTS FOR REFLECTION.
THE OPEN LETTER: the Unemployed and the Unfed Security. Harold Cox, M.P.
MRS. VANCE. John Galsworthy.
ESSAYS ON MASTERPIECES.—I. Cicely Hamilton.
OPERA IN ENGLAND. Royall Tyler.
BOW AND SPEAR. John Powell.
ECHOES.
THE SILENT COMPANY OF BOOKS.

1s. net.

GRANT RICHARDS,
7, CARLTON STREET, LONDON, S.W.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

THE CAMBRIDGE MODERN HISTORY. Planned by the late
Lord Acton. Edited by A. W. Ward, Litt.D., G. W. Prothero, Litt.D., and Stanley
Leathes, M.A.

Royal 8vo
16s net

Vol. XI. THE GROWTH OF NATIONALITIES, is now ready. This volume covers the period 1845-1871, an epoch of violent international disturbance, probably from the point of view of Universal History the most important period since the Congress of Vienna.

"It covers every country on the map of Europe; from the English point of view its range is co-extensive with the British Empire.... Here the history of yesterday will be found set forth with all the learning and skill which the best minds and pens of our time can bring to the task."—Birmingham Post.

Ten of the twelve volumes in which the text of the History will be completed are now ready, only two remaining to be published, Vol. VI. and Vol. XII. The price of any volume is 16s net, but subscriptions of £7 10s net are received for the complete text in twelve volumes.

YÜN-NAN, THE LINK BETWEEN INDIA AND THE YANGTZE.

By Major H. R. Davies, 52nd Oxfordshire Light Infantry.

With map and 73 plates
Demy 8vo, 16s net

The main part of the book deals with the author's own travels, in the course of which he covered 5,500 miles of road, a great part of the country traversed not having been visited by other travellers. The volume also contains information concerning the projected railway, the products of the province, and the various tribes of Western China. It should be of use to the traveller, and to those interested in the subject of through communication between India and China and in the development of our trade with the latter country.

THE CARE OF NATURAL MONUMENTS, WITH SPECIAL
REFERENCE TO GREAT BRITAIN AND GERMANY. By H. Conwentz, Prussian State Commissioner for the Care of Natural Monuments.

Ten illustrations
Crown 8vo
2s 6d net

The present book is an expansion of a lecture delivered at the Leicester Meeting of the British Association. The author classes among monuments of nature, as distinct from the results of man's activity, examples of beautiful scenery, characteristic soil-formations, interesting associations of plants and animals, and rare species of indigenous flora and fauna, and argues that the care of natural monuments is not only of scientific and public interest but also possesses a patriotic value.

THE AUTHORISED VERSION OF THE ENGLISH BIBLE, 1611.

Edited by William Aldis Wright, M.A., Vice-Master of Trinity College, Cambridge. In five volumes:—Vol. I. Genesis to Deuteronomy, Vol. II. Joshua to Esther, Vol. III. Job to Malachi, Vol. IV. The Apocrypha, Vol. V. The New Testament.

5 vols
Crown 8vo
20s net

The text of modern English Bibles differs considerably from the original Authorised Version of 1611. With the idea of correcting or improving the translation a large number of alterations have from time to time been made, in words and phrases, spelling and punctuation. The present edition, treating the Version as the greatest of English classics, gives a verbatim reprint of the original text, in a form intended to appeal to the reader as distinguished from the theologian. A full prospectus, with specimen pages, will be sent on application.

THE WISDOM OF SOLOMON. In the Revised Version. With Introduction and Notes by [the Rev. J. A. F. Gregg, M.A., late Scholar of Christ's College, Cambridge.

Foolscap 8vo
2s 6d net

This new volume of the Cambridge Bible for Schools, contains, besides the text and notes, an introduction which deals with the authorship, date, and purpose of the book, the Logos, Doctrine of God, Doctrine of Man, Death and Immortality, Eschatology, and the relation of the Book to the New Testament.

ARISTOTLE: NICOMACHEAN ETHICS, Book VI. Edited, with Essays, Notes, and Translation, by L. H. G. Greenwood, M.A., Fellow of King's College, Cambridge.

Demy 8vo
6s net

In spite of the importance of the Sixth Book of the Nicomachean Ethics, probably no book of the whole ten has received so little attention from Aristotelian students, no separate edition of it having ever been undertaken. The present volume is introduced by an examination of the evidence for and against Aristotle's authorship, followed by a full discussion of the doctrine of the Sixth Book and its relation to the whole treatise. The text and translation are followed by two essays, on Dialectic Method and on Formal Accuracy in Aristotle, and a considerable number of miscellaneous notes which are chiefly concerned with interpretation.

THE RHETORIC OF ARISTOTLE. A Translation by the late
Sir R. C. Jebb, O.M., Litt.D. Edited, with an Introduction and Supplementary Notes, by J. E. Sandys, Litt.D.

Demy 8vo
6s net

This translation, left in manuscript by Sir Richard Jebb and not hitherto published, has been revised by the editor, who has supplied a few accidental omissions and a brief analysis, partly founded on the translator's own memoranda.

CAMBRIDGE COUNTY GEOGRAPHIES. A new series of County
Hand-books, under the general editorship of F. H. H. Guillemard, M.A. M.D.

Foolscap 8vo
1s 6d each

Each of these volumes gives an account of the history, antiquities, natural history, industries, and physical, geological, and general characteristics of the county. Each book contains two coloured maps and a very large number of illustrations.

The following are the first six volumes, and others are in active preparation:—

KENT. By G. F. BOSWORTH, F.R.G.S. SUSSEX. By G. F. BOSWORTH.
SURREY. By G. F. BOSWORTH, F.R.G.S. NORFOLK. By W. A. DUTT.
ESSEX. By G. F. BOSWORTH, F.R.G.S. SUFFOLK. By W. A. DUTT.

London, Fetter Lane: CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS WAREHOUSE: C. F. Clay, Manager

ENGLISH REVIEW.

NO. III. NOW READY.

PRICE HALF-A-GROWN.

VOLUME I.

FEBRUARY, 1909.

1. MODERN POETRY.

Gerhart Hauptmann.
W. B. Yeats.
Walter de la Mare.
J. Marjoram.
John Galsworthy.

2. NORMAN DOUGLAS.

The Island of Typhœus.

3. H. GRANVILLE BARKER.

Georgiana. I.

4. JOSEPH CONRAD.

Some Reminiscences. III.

5. J. SATURIN.

Ivan—"Isvoschick."

6. VERNON LEE.

The Virgin of the Seven Daggers. Conclusion.

7. H. G. WELLS.

Tono-Bungay.

8. THE MONTH.

EDITORIAL: The Functions of the Arts in the Republic. III. Music.

POLITICAL AND DIPLOMATIC:
The Empire. I. A. M., India;
II. Syed Sirdar Ali Khan, The Present Discontent in India; III.
G. Egremont, The Desert of Australia.

REVIEWS: 'Orthodoxy,' by G. K.
Chesterton, reviewed by R. A.
Scott-James.

COMMUNICATIONS: From Messina, by O. Rossetti Agresti;
Balance-Sheet of a Twenty-five-
Acre Holding, by F. E. Green.

DUCKWORTH & CO. Henrietta Street, W.C.

MESSRS. ROUTLEDGE'S NEW BOOKS.

THE BALANCE OF NATURE, AND MODERN CONDITIONS OF CULTIVATION: a Practical Manual of Animal Foes and Friends for the Country Gentleman, the Farmer, the Forester, the Gardener, and the Sportsman. With 150 Diagrammatic Illustrations, including 61 of Traps. By GEORGE ABBEY. Large 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 7s. 6d. net. [Shortly.]

PASSING ENGLISH OF THE VICTORIAN ERA: a Dictionary of Heterodox English, Slang, and Phrase. By J. REDDING WARE. Large 8vo, half-morocco, gilt, 7s. 6d. net. * * This Work forms a Companion Volume to Farmer and Henley's DICTIONARY OF SLANG AND COLLOQUIAL ENGLISH in the same Series.

BRITISH MOUNTAINEERING. With 37 Illustrations. By C. E. BENSON, of the Climbers' and Yorkshire Ramblers' Clubs. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, rounded corners, 5s. Equipment—Rambling—Scrambling—Low Crags—Rocks—Winter Climbing—Severe Courses—Skye—Ladies' Climbing—Dangers—Medical Hints—Glossary, &c.

THE STORY OF LIBRARIES AND BOOK-COLLECTING. By ERNEST A. SAVAGE, Librarian, Wallasey Public Libraries. Fcap. 8vo, cloth gilt, 2s. 6d. Ancient Libraries—Mediæval—Monastic—Renaissance—Italy—France, Spain, Portugal—Germany, Belgium, Holland, &c.—English Libraries—Scotland and Ireland—United States—Popular Town Libraries—Appendices, &c.

SHAKESPEARE FOR HOME-READING. Edited by K. HARVEY. Fcap. 8vo, cloth, 1s. net each.

1. THE MERCHANT OF VENICE.

2. A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM.

These form the first two volumes of a New Series, under the general title of 'Shakespeare for Home-Reading,' which is, perhaps, sufficiently descriptive. The editor's aim is to preserve, as far as possible, the language of Shakespeare and the sequence of his scenes, writing-in, where necessary, to amplify or explain the drama, and writing-out, where necessary, in the interests of the younger reader. It is believed that the experiment will prove welcome to parents and teachers.

LATER RECITATIONS IN VERSE. Being a Supplement to 'The Reciter's Treasury.' By ERNEST PERTWEE, Professor of Elocution at the City of London School. Large 8vo, half-bound, gilt, 2s. 6d. net.

MY EXPERIENCES OF CYPRUS: an Account of the People, Mediæval Cities and Castles, Antiquities and History of the Island; with a Chapter on Present Economic and Political Problems. By BASIL STEWART, Author of 'The Land of the Maple Leaf,' &c. Illustrated from 50 Photographs by the Author. New Edition, Revised. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 6s.

"Many questions of policy and administration are discussed in a manner that derives additional weight from the author's close acquaintance with the conditions, and the book will be appreciated not only by travellers but also by the British taxpayer."—Morning Post.

NEW VOLUME IN "THE MUSES LIBRARY."

POEMS OF EDGAR ALLAN POE. With a Sketch of the Author. By JOHN INGRAM, Author of 'The Life, Letters, and Opinions of Edgar Allan Poe.' Fcap. 8vo, cloth, 1s. net; royal blue leather, 1s. 6d. net; lambskin, 2s. net.

NEW VOLUME IN THE "MINIATURE REFERENCE LIBRARY."

A DICTIONARY OF PHILOSOPHICAL TERMS. By ARTHUR BUTLER. 32mo, morocco, 1s. net. "The man who wants to know everything, and cannot afford a great library, should get this series of admirable pocket-books."—Daily Mail.

* * Prospectuses on application.

LIBRARY EDITION OF "THE BARCHESTER NOVELS."—6 vols.

THE WARDEN. By ANTHONY TROLLOPE. With 8 Full-Page Plates by F. C. TILNEY. Large 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 5s.

BARCHESTER TOWERS. By the same. With 8 Full-Page Plates by F. C. TILNEY. Large 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 5s.

DOCTOR THORNE. By the same. With 8 Full-Page Plates by H. L. SHINDLER. Large 8vo, cloth extra, gilt, 5s. [February.]

FRAMLEY PARSONAGE. By the same. With the Original Plates by Sir J. E. MILLAIS, Bart. P.R.A. Large 8vo, cloth extra, 5s. [March.]

* * Prospectus on application.

THE SUFFRAGIST QUESTION.

THE SEX TRIUMPHANT. By A. C. FOX-DAVIES, Author of 'The Mauleverer Murders,' 'The Dangerville Inheritance,' &c. With 4 Full-Page Plates. Fcap. 8vo, picture-wrappers, 1s. net. An amusing farce by a lawyer on the improbable development of the campaign. Not written for the "young person."

TWO FORTHCOMING BOOKS OF REFERENCE.

A DICKENS DICTIONARY. By A. J. PHILIP, Public Librarian at Gravesend. Large 8vo (about 10s. net). THE FAMILY DOCTOR. An entirely New Work. By Dr. EDMUND BARRETT. 8vo (about 5s. net).

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS, Limited, Broadway House, Carter Lane, E.C.

LONDON LIBRARY, ST. JAMES'S SQUARE, S.W.

Patron—HIS MAJESTY THE KING. President.—The Right Hon. A. J. BALFOUR, M.P.

Vice-Presidents—FREDERIC HARRISON, Esq.; Sir FRANK T. MARZIALS, C.B.; GEORGE MEREDITH, Esq. O.M.; ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE, Esq. O.M. F.R.S.

Trustees—EARL of ROSEBURY, K.G.; Right Hon. LORD AVEBURY, F.R.S.; HENRY YATES THOMPSON, Esq. Committee—Right Hon. Sir Rowland Blennerhassett, Bart. LL.D., Bernard Bosanquet, Esq. LL.D., Prof. A. C. Bradley, LL.D., Horace T. Brown, Esq. LL.D. F.R.S., Prof. Ingram Bywater, D.Litt., Austin Dobson, Esq. LL.D., Hon. Arthur Eliot, D.C.L., J. Fitzmaurice-Kelly, Esq. Litt.D., Sydney Gedge, Esq., Sir A. Geikie, K.C.B. F.R.S., Sir R. Giffen, K.C.B. F.R.S., Edmund Gosse, Esq. LL.D., Mrs. J. R. Green, Rev. W. Hunt, Litt.D., Sir C. P. Ilbert, K.C.B. K.C.S.I., Walter Leaf, Esq. Litt.D., Sidney Lee, Esq. Litt.D., W. S. Lilly, Esq., Sidney J. Low, Esq., Dr. J. F. Payne, Sir F. Pollock, Bart. LL.D., Rev. J. H. Rigg, D.D., H. R. Tedder, Esq. F.S.A., A. W. Ward, Esq. Litt.D. LL.D.

The Library contains about 220,000 Volumes of Ancient and Modern Literature, in various Languages. Subscription, 3l. 3s. a year, with an entrance fee of 1l. 1s.; Life Membership, according to age. Fifteen Volumes are allowed to Country and Ten to Town Members. Reading-Room open from Ten to Half-past Six. The NEW CATALOGUE (1526 pp. 4to, 1903), price 2l. 2s.; to Members, 25s.

"ONE OF THE MOST SAGACIOUS AND JUDICIOUSLY LIBERAL MEN I HAVE EVER KNOWN, THE LATE LORD DERBY, SAID THERE WAS A KIND OF MAN TO WHOM THE BEST SERVICE THAT COULD BE RENDERED WAS TO MAKE HIM A LIFE MEMBER OF THE LONDON LIBRARY."—W. E. H. LECKY.

C. T. HAGBERG WRIGHT, LL.D., Secretary and Librarian.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

Unemployment: a Problem of Industry. By

W. H. BEVERIDGE, Stowell Civil Law Fellow of University College, Oxford; formerly Sub-Warden of Toynbee Hall. 8vo, 7s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

The object of this book is to combine a record of the principal facts of unemployment with a continuous argument as to the causes of unemployment.

Stalks Abroad: being some Record of the Sport obtained during a Two Years' Tour Round the World. By HAROLD FRANK WALLACE, F.Z.S. With numerous Illustrations by the Author and from Photographs. 8vo, 12s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 5d.)

"The book is rich in direct observation of these beasts in their natural homes and in animated accounts of hunting them. It has a great number of capital photographs and drawings to illustrate it, and is sure to be read with a hearty interest by any keen sportsman."—Scotsman.

The Scottish Staple at Veere: a Study in the Economic History of Scotland. By the late JOHN DAVIDSON, M.A. D.Phil. (Edin.), sometime Professor of Political Economy in the University of New Brunswick, and ALEXANDER GRAY, M.A. With 13 Illustrations. 8vo, 12s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

In this book an attempt has been made to give some account of the trading relations between Scotland and the Low Countries. The Scottish towns from an early date entered into agreements with a certain town in the Low Countries, whereby all Staple goods (that is, goods paying custom to the King) should be taken to that town and nowhere else.

The Essentials of Self-Government (England and Wales). By ELLIS T. POWELL, LL.B. (Lond.); B.Sc. (Econ. Lond.); Fellow of the Royal Historical Society; Fellow of the Royal Economic Society; of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 8vo, 4s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

This is a comprehensive survey, designed as a critical introduction to the detailed study of the electoral mechanism as the foundation of political power, and a potent instrument of intellectual and social evolution; with practical suggestions for the increase of its efficiency.

Vectors and Vector Diagrams, applied to the

Alternating Current Circuit. With Examples on their use in the Theory of Transformers, and of Single and Polyphase Motors, &c. By WILLIAM CRAMP, M.I.E.E., Consulting Engineer and Special Lecturer in Electrical Design in the University of Manchester, and CHARLES F. SMITH, M.I.E.E., Assoc.M.Inst.C.E. Whit. Schol., Lecturer in Electrical Engineering, the University of Manchester. With 113 Diagrams. 8vo, 7s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

TEXT-BOOKS OF PHYSICAL CHEMISTRY.—New Volume.

The Theory of Valency. By J. NEWTON FRIEND,

Ph.D. (Würz.), M.Sc. Crown 8vo, 5s. (Inland postage 4d.)

Impressions of American Education in 1908.

By SARA A. BURSTALL, M.A., Head Mistress, Manchester High School for Girls, and Lecturer in Education in the University of Manchester, Author of 'English High Schools for Girls.' Crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. (Inland postage 4d.)

This book is the outcome of a visit paid by the author to America in the winter of last year.

The Witness of the Wilderness: Bedawin Life in the Desert. Their Origin, History, Home Life, Strife, Religion, and Superstition, in their Relation to the Bible. By the Rev. G. ROBINSON LEES, B.A. F.R.G.S., Author of 'Village Life in Palestine.' With 28 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

TWO NEW VOLUMES OF THE SILVER LIBRARY.

Lysbeth: a Tale of the Dutch. By H. R. HAGGARD.

With 26 Illustrations. Cheap Re-Issue. New and Cheaper Impression. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. (Inland postage 4d.)

Pearl-Maiden: a Tale of the Fall of Jerusalem.

By H. R. HAGGARD. Cheap Re-Issue. With 16 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. (Inland postage 4d.)

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. 39, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

MR. HEINEMANN'S NEW BOOKS.

RECOLLECTIONS OF BARON DE FRENILLY,

PEER OF FRANCE (1768-1828).

Edited, with an Introduction and Notes, by ARTHUR CHUQUET (Membre de l'Institut).

Translated by FREDERIC LEES (Officier de l'Instruction Publique).

With a Portrait. Demy 8vo, 10s. net.*

* * These Memoirs are of exceptional interest, as the Baron started under the Royalist régime and survived the Revolution, to be made a peer of France at the Restoration. As a man of good education, his writing has all the charm of the brilliant society of those days.

CONQUERING THE ARCTIC ICE.

By EJNAR MIKKELSEN.

Profusely illustrated. Demy 8vo, 20s. net.*

"Not surpassed by any other work of the kind with which we are acquainted. Every incident or discovery is faithfully noted, and for the practical guidance of future Nansens and Pearys, his narrative will be of incalculable service."—Pall Mall Gazette.

TUNIS, KAIROUAN, AND CARTHAGE.

Described and illustrated with 48 Coloured Plates by GRAHAM PETRIE, R.I.

Royal 8vo, 16s. net. Also an EDITION DE LUXE.*

IN JAPAN.

Pilgrimages to the Sanctuaries of Art.

By GASTON MIGEON, Conservator of the Louvre Museum.

With 68 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 6s. net.

AFTER WATERLOO:

Reminiscences of European Travel from 1819.

By Major W. E. FRYE.

Edited by Dr. SALOMON REINACH. Demy 8vo, 10s. net.*

DAN TO BEERSHEBA.

Work and Travel in Four Continents.

By ARCHIBALD R. COLQUHOUN, F.R.G.S.

With Portrait. Demy 8vo, 8s. 6d. net.

RECOLLECTIONS OF A SPINSTER AUNT.

Edited by S. SOPHIA BEALE. Demy 8vo, 8s. 6d. net.

THE THUNDERBOLT.

An Episode in the History of a Provincial Family, in Four Acts.

By ARTHUR W. PINERO. Cloth, 2s. 6d.; paper, 1s. 6d.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.RACHEL LORIAN.

By Mrs. HENRY DUDENEY, Author of 'Folly Corner,' &c.

THE CLIMBER.

By E. F. BENSON.

A PRINCE OF DREAMERS.

By FLORA ANNIE STEEL.

SYRINX.

By LAURENCE NORTH.

THE MAGICIAN.

By W. S. MAUGHAM, Author of 'The Explorer.'

THE GUEST OF QUESNAY.

By BOOTH TARKINGTON, Author of 'Monsieur Beaucaire.'

CHRISTOPHER HIBBAULT.

By MARGARET BRYANT.

MARCIA IN GERMANY.

An Indiscreet Chronicle.

[Second Impression.]

* Prospectus of these Works on application.

WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford Street, W.C.

MACMILLAN'S NEW BOOKS.

The Ancient Greek Historians

(Harvard Lectures). By J. B. BURY, Litt.D. LL.D., Regius Professor of Modern History in the University of Cambridge. 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

The Characters of Theophrastus.

An English Translation from a Revised Text, with Introduction and Notes by R. C. JEBB, M.A., Fellow and Assistant-Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge, and Public Orator of the University, 1870. A New Edition, edited by J. E. SANDYS, Litt.D., Fellow of St. John's College, and Public Orator. 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.
(Classical Library. Tuesday.)

The Acropolis of Athens.

By MARTIN L. D'OOGE, Professor of Greek in the University of Michigan. Fully illustrated. 8vo,
17s. net.

Peace and Happiness.

By the Right Hon. LORD AVEBURY. Crown 8vo, 6s.
[Feb. 3.]

These essays discuss many subjects of universal interest with the shrewd and kindly wisdom that in 'The Pleasures of Life' and other works from the same pen, has proved helpful and stimulating to so many readers.

NEW 6/- NOVELS.

One Immortality. By H. FIELDING HALL.

"There are three loves that make and keep the world—the love that binds man and woman into one flesh and soul, the love that draws families into nations, the love that holds the world to God.... This book is about the first."

Joan of Garioch. By ALBERT KINROSS.

The Red City. By Dr. S. WEIR MITCHELL.

Mars as the Abode of Life.

By PERCIVAL LOWELL, A.B. LL.D. Author of
'Mars and its Canals,' &c. Illustrated. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

Notes of a Botanist on the Amazon and Andes.

Being Records of Travel during the Years 1849-1864.
By RICHARD SPRUCE, Ph.D. Edited and Condensed by ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE, O.M. F.R.S.
With Portrait of the Author and other Illustrations and Maps. 2 vols. 8vo, 21s. net.

Earthwork of England.

Prehistoric, Roman, Saxon, Danish, Norman, and Medieval. By A. HADRIAN ALLCROFT, M.A.
Illustrated with Plans, Sections, &c. 8vo, 18s. net.

Shakespeare.

By Prof. WALTER RALEIGH. Globe 8vo, 4s. net.
[Eversley Series.]

William Morris.

By ALFRED NOYES. Crown 8vo, 2s. net.
[English Men of Letters.]

The Religion of the Common Man.

By Sir HENRY WRIXON, K.C. Crown 8vo, 3s. net.

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE.

Illustrated, price 1s. 4d. Annual Subscription, 16s.

QUEEN VICTORIA AS SEEN BY AN AMERICAN.
Being Letters of the Wife of the American Minister in London, 1836-41. By Sallie Coles Stevenson. Arranged by William L. Royall.

LINCOLN THE LEADER. By Richard W. Gilder.

DOMINO REYNARD OF GOLDUR TOWN: the History of a Silver Fox. III. Conclusion. By Ernest Thompson Seton.

And numerous other Stories and Articles of general interest.

MACMILLAN & CO., LTD., London.

Sampson Low, Marston & Co. LIMITED.

NEW BOOK BY ADMIRAL A. T. MAHAN.

READY.

Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 7s. 6d. net.

NAVAL ADMINISTRATION AND WARFARE.

Some General Principles. With other Essays.
By Admiral A. T. MAHAN, U.S.N., Author of 'The Influence of Sea Power upon History,' 'Sea Power in its Relations to the War of 1812,' &c.

NEW AND CHEAPER ISSUE 5 vols. demy 8vo, navy blue cloth gilt, gilt top, £2 12s. 6d. net.

ADMIRAL MAHAN'S FAMOUS SEA POWER BOOKS.

NEW AND CHEAPER ISSUE, comprising:—

THE INFLUENCE OF SEA POWER UPON HISTORY, 1660-1783

With 25 Charts of Great Naval Battles.

THE INFLUENCE OF SEA POWER ON THE FRENCH REVOLUTION AND EMPIRE, 1793-1812.

With 13 Maps and Battle Plans. 2 vols.

THE INFLUENCE OF SEA POWER IN ITS RELATIONS TO THE WAR OF 1812.

With Maps and Plates. 2 vols.

The whole Set complete, £2 12s. 6d.

In this Edition the volumes are not sold separately.
Prospectus on application.

NEW AND CHEAPER ISSUE. Fully illustrated. Demy 8vo, cloth gilt, 784 pp.,
7s. 6d. net; handsomely bound in tree
calf, boxed, 14s. net.

THE LIFE OF NELSON:

The Embodiment of the Sea Power of Great Britain.

By Admiral A. T. MAHAN, D.C.L. LL.D.
New and Cheaper Issue.

Prospectus on application.

Large crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 6s. net.

THE STORY OF THE SUBMARINE.

From the Earliest Ages to the Present Day.

By Lieut.-Col. and Brevet-Col. C. FIELD,
Royal Marine Light Infantry.

Upwards of 100 illustrations. Published by permission of the Admiralty. Hitherto no one has traced the evolution of submersible vessels in popular form. In this profusely illustrated work the picturesque history of submarine navigation from the Middle Ages down to the present year is fully treated.

JUST READY, crown 4to, handsome cloth binding, gilt edges, 10s. 6d. net.

LACIS:

Practical Instructions in Filet
Brodé, or Darning on Net.

By CARITA. Fully illustrated with Patterns and Working Drawings.

Prospectus on application.

JUST READY, demy 8vo, cloth gilt,
12s. 6d. net.

THE MONGOLS IN RUSSIA.

By JEREMIAH CURTIN, Author of 'The
Mongols,' and Translator of the Works of Sienkiewicz, &c. With Photogravure Frontispiece and Map.

'The Mongols in Russia' is a continuation of Mr.
Curtin's valuable book of last year, 'The Mongols,' that was so enthusiastically praised by President Roosevelt.
It takes up the story of the domination of this race in Russia, after their expulsion from China by the founders of the Ming Dynasty.

London:

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO., LTD.,
100, Southwark Street, S.E.; and Tudor House,
Warwick Lane, E.C.

MR. JOHN LANE'S SPRING ANNOUNCEMENTS

UNDER PETRAIA WITH SOME SAUNTERINGS.

By the Author of 'In a Tuscan Garden.'
With Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 5s. net.
[Ready.]

A SISTER OF PRINCE RUPERT, ELIZABETH PRINCESS PALA- TINE ABBESS OF HEREFORD.

By ELIZABETH GODFREY, Author of 'Heidelberg: its Princes and its Palaces,'
'English Children in the Olden Times,' &c.
With numerous Illustrations reproduced from contemporary Portraits, Prints, &c. Demy
8vo, 12s. 6d. net.
[Feb. 2.]

ON THE TRACKS OF LIFE.

The Immorality of Morality.

Translated from the Italian of LEO G. SERA by J. M. KENNEDY, with an Introduction
by Dr. OSCAR LEVY. Demy 8vo,
7s. 6d. net.
[Feb. 2.]

ASPECTS OF MODERN OPERA.

By LAWRENCE GILMAN, Author of 'Phases of Modern Music,' 'Strauss,' 'Salome,'
'The Music of To-morrow and other Studies,'
'Edward MacDowell,' &c. 4s. 6d. net.
[Feb. 2.]

THE JOURNAL OF JOHN MAYNE.

During a Tour on the Continent upon its
Re-opening after the Fall of Napoleon, 1814.

Edited by his Grandson, JOHN MAYNE
COLLES. With 16 Illustrations. Demy
8vo, 12s. 6d. net.
[Feb. 2.]

BRITISH MALAYA.

An Account of the Origin and Progress of British Influence in Malaya.

By Sir F. A. SWETTENHAM. With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. New and Cheaper Edition. 7s. 6d. net.
[Feb. 12.]

A FOOL OF QUALITY OR THE HISTORY OF HENRY EARL OF MORELAND.

By HENRY BROOKE (1703-1783). With an Introduction by FRANCIS COUTTS.
2 vols. Leather, 4s. net; cloth, 2s. net.
[New Pocket Library. Ready.]

SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

LITTLE DINNERS WITH THE SPHINX.

By RICHARD LE GALLIENNE. [Ready.]

THE MEASURE OF OUR YOUTH.

By ALICE HERBERT. [Feb. 2.]

SOMEONE PAYS.

By NOEL BARWELL. [Feb. 12.]

A WHIRL ASUNDER.

By GERTRUDE ATHERTON. Paper
Edition. 1s. net.
[Ready.]

THE WORKS OF ANATOLE FRANCE IN ENGLISH.

Vol. VI. BALTHASAR. 6s.

Translation by Mrs. JOHN LANE.

JOHN LANE, THE BODLEY HEAD, W.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 30, 1909.

CONTENTS.

THE EARLY HISTORY OF THE VULGATE GOSPELS ..	121
A CHRONICLE OF FRIENDSHIPS ..	123
THE GILDS AND COMPANIES OF LONDON ..	123
FOLK-MEMORY ..	124
NEW NOVELS (The Flower of the Heart; A Prince of Dreamers; The Whispering Man; Rachel Lorian; Lady Letty Brandon; The Capture of Paul Beck; The Girl from Gatford; The Long Arm) ..	125
MILITARY BOOKS ..	126
OUR LIBRARY TABLE (Lord Halliburton; Sketches from Life in Town and Country; Limbo and other Essays; Murat Letters; The Dickensian; Between the Twilights; Memoirs of the Comte de Rambuteau; Light from Egyptian Papyri; Devon; Liber Exemplorum ad Usum Prædicantium; Kelly's Handbook to the Titled Classes; Literary Year-Book; Clergy Directory; Catholic Who's Who; Key to Ancient Parish Registers) ..	126-131
THE ROYAL HISTORICAL SOCIETY; THE SHAKESPEARE QUARTOS; THE BRITISH MUSEUM READING-ROOM; THE NATIONAL LIBRARY; COPENHAGEN; TEACHERS' REGISTRATION COUNCIL ..	131-132
LIST OF NEW BOOKS ..	133
LITERARY GOSSIP ..	134
SCIENCE—MINES AND MINERALS OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE; ELECTRO-METALLURGY; ANTHROPOLOGICAL NOTES; SOCIETIES; GOSSIP ..	135-137
FINE ARTS—ARUNDEL CLUB PUBLICATIONS; JOHN PETTIE, R.A.; THE GOSPEL IN THE OLD TESTAMENT; THE ROMANT OF THE ROSE; BRITAIN'S GREAT AUTHORS; SHEFFIELD PLATE; PIPPA PASSES, ILLUSTRATED BY E. F. BRICKDALE; THE YEAR'S ART; DRAWINGS BY ROWLANDSON; AQUATINTS; BAXTER PRINTS; THE ARCHEOLOGICAL BUDGET OF ROME FOR 1908; GOSSIP; EXHIBITIONS ..	138-142
MUSIC—THE RING IN ENGLISH; DIE MEISTER-SINGER; THE ANGELUS; SCARLATTI'S HARPSICORD AND ORGAN MUSIC; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK ..	142-143
DRAMA—THE ADMIRABLE BASHVILLE; TILDA'S NEW HAT; PIPPA PASSES; CANON BEECHING ON SHAKESPEARE; TUDOR FACSIMILE TEXTS; GOSSIP ..	143-144

LITERATURE

Notes on the Early History of the Vulgate Gospels. By Dom John Chapman, O.S.B. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)

DOM CHAPMAN has bestowed great labour on this book. He shows himself acquainted with the recent literature which deals with the subjects he discusses, and his own scholarship is equal to the task he has undertaken. But it is difficult to form an accurate idea of the results which he thinks he has attained by his inquiries, or the value of these results. He begins his Preface with these words: "This essay does not aim at any form of completeness, and is published only in the hope that it may be found suggestive." He calls his book "Notes," and it has the inconsistencies natural in notes jotted down at various times. Thus he remarks:—

"It is evident that this Codex Grandior contained three lists, and that its text corresponded to the third list, that of the antiqua translatio. It contained the Old Latin version of the Old Testament with the 'corrections of St. Jerome' wherever that Father had edited a translation from the Septuagint, as in the case of the Psalms, Job, Chronicles, and the books of Solomon." He gives no authority for this statement, but in a note on it he says: "Cassiodorus evidently believed St. Jerome to have revised the whole, as St. Jerome indeed implies." The note contradicts the text. The probable explanation of this is that the statement in the text was penned after the author had been reading the second part of the life of Jerome by Grützmacher. This biographer endeavours to prove that Jerome revised only those portions of the Old Testament mentioned by Dom Chapman, and did not revise the other portions. But Dom Chapman afterwards consulted Mr. White's article on the Vulgate in Hastings's 'Dictionary of the Bible,' and saw in it quotations from Jerome which assert that he had revised the whole, and so he inserted a note which conflicts with his assertion in the text.

The book contains a large number of tables which the author has prepared in support of his conjectures. It would need a great deal of time to compare all these tables with the sources from which he has made them, and it would be natural to regard them as accurate. But Dom Chapman in his frankness creates a suspicion that they cannot altogether be trusted. In his Preface he acknowledges his indebtedness to friends who have helped him, and among others to Mr. Turner. He thus describes his obligations:—

"Especially Mr. C. H. Turner, who by his detailed annotations has saved me from innumerable obscurities or repetitions, and from many blunders, due to carelessness or ignorance, and has also provided valuable information."

The question suggests itself, Has Mr. Turner carefully revised all these tables, and is he responsible for their accuracy? or do some traces of the author's carelessness or ignorance still remain? Dom Chapman states: "I know the result must be full of errors."

The peculiarity of the book which must cause its readers and critics much perplexity is that there is a continual recourse to conjecture. There are two classes of these conjectures. The one that is predominant throughout the book consists of conjectures that fill up blanks in history where there is no historical testimony of any kind and nothing from which the conjecture might start. The author is himself conscious that these conjectures are baseless, but he evidently delights in them. Here are specimens of his remarks on some of them:—

"Now when St. Victor tells us that he found the Diatessaron by chance we do not gather that he bought it by chance. Rather he found it among some books he had about him at Capua. It is natural to suppose that he found it in the same collection of Greek Christian writers upon which he drew for his scholia on the Pentateuch and for other writings. It is probable that he did not form this collection himself, as he did not know what it contained. It is obvious, therefore, to hazard the guess that he inherited from his predecessor St. Germanus a library of Greek Fathers."

"If Lerins was the monastery of his choice, it may well have been the chosen school of Eugippius also. Direct proof, however, that Eugippius was ever at Lerins or that he borrowed any customs from thence is wanting."

"So far Liturgical results. For the history of the Vulgate we get the conclusion that the Vulgatized Old Latin of the Pauline Epistles in F was very likely copied from a Lérinese codex borrowed by Victor from Eugippius."

"I venture to conjecture that Z is really one of the books brought to England by St. Augustine or his companions, though its history is quite unknown."

And the author concludes his work with, 'A Conjectural History of the Prologues,'

He himself thinks that some good might come out of these endless conjectures. He writes:—

"These, I have said, are conjectures, and are very far from being proved. I put them forward as a contribution towards the solution of a problem which interests me greatly";

but he does not suggest how they are to help the solution.

The conjectures forming the second class start from some assertions in ecclesiastical authorities, but they are nearly as baseless as the others. There is no direct historical evidence in regard to the subjects of the conjecture. Yet Dom Chapman ends in three prominent cases with guesses which he regards and treats as ascertained facts.

The first is the connexion of Cassiodorus with the Codex Amiatinus, the magnificent codex prepared by Abbot Ceolfrid, at Wearmouth or Jarrow, at the end of the seventh or beginning of the eighth century, and sent by him as a present to the Pope in 715 A.D. The connexion of this codex with Cassiodorus has been discussed with great clearness and fairness by Mr. H. J. White in the second volume of 'Studia Biblica.' The arguments which suggest a Cassiodorian connexion are set forth, and then the difficulties are presented. Dom Chapman does not attempt to meet these difficulties, but pushes them aside by means of a conjectural history of the action of Cassiodorus with regard to the codices of the Bible which he possessed. The arguments for a Cassiodorian connexion are based on resemblances between the Codex Amiatinus and codices in the library of Cassiodorus. Dom Chapman treats the differences as arising from mistakes of transcribers or otherwise. Thus he says: "The scribe has wrongly counted LXXI."; "The variation in the orders of the groups as given in the 'Institutio' must be an oversight." Similar sentences to these abound. Besides this, he makes assertions for which he quotes no authority. Thus he says of a Codex Grandior mentioned by Cassiodorus that it "was written by order of Cassiodorus in the extreme south of Italy." He afterwards quotes the words of Cassiodorus which refer to this codex. Those that refer to the writing of the codex are these: "Hic textus multorum translatione variatus... Patris Hieronymi diligentia cura emendatus, compositusque relictus est." Probably "relictus" should be "religatus." Dom Chapman does not quote the words that follow: "Ubi nos omnia tria genera divisionum judicavimus affigenda." The apparent meaning of these passages is that the codex consisted of various leaves with different translations, and that these were amended by Jerome, put together, and left by him or bound by him. The work therefore belonged to Jerome, and the part which Cassiodorus had in it was affixing to it the three kinds of lists of the Bible which he has described in his 'De Institutione.' It may be gathered from a previous expression in the same chapter that the volume thus put together had various other lists or arrangements of the books of the Bible. If the book belonged to Jerome, then all Dom Chapman's conjectures are wide of the mark.

The second person in regard to whom Dom Chapman reaches certainty through various conjectures is Eugippius. The whole basis of these is a note at the end of the Echternach Codex of the Gospels belonging to the eighth or ninth century. The note is "proemendavi ut potui secundum codicem de bibliotheca eugipi præsbyteri quem ferunt fuisse sc'i hieronimi." Then follows a date which Bishop Wordsworth takes to be equivalent to 558 A.D. No indication is anywhere given as to the person who wrote the note. Dom Chapman thinks that the tradition mentioned in the note that the codex belonged to Jerome is inaccurate. If it is accurate, his guesses in regard to it would be vain. He begins by fixing the author of the note: "Why should not Cassiodorus himself have been the author of the note?" Having asked this question, he assumes afterwards that Cassiodorus is the author of it, and he can tell the exact place in which the note originally appeared, though the book itself to which he refers is entirely lost. It "reproduces a note made by Cassiodorus himself at the end of the text of the four Gospels in the seventh volume of the nine." Then he deals with the name Eugipi. There might be many of that name, but our author feels certain that it was the Eugippius who was the author of the 'Life of Severinus.' Cassiodorus knew him personally and gives him a good character. The codex is said to be a codex from the library of Eugippius. The conjecture, therefore, is put forward that the codex was written by Eugippius or under his direction and that the text of it was his text. But where was the library of Eugippius? That monk lived in Noricum and various other parts of the world. Dom Chapman takes no note of this, but fixes the spot as Lucullanum, because Eugippius presided over a monastery there in his later years. Then he wishes to connect Eugippius with Lerins. No testimony exists to this effect. But a monk connected with Lucullanum had been in Lerins, and thus Eugippius was connected with Lerins. And so conjecture proceeds till certainty is gained, and much is said of a Cassiodorian and Eugippian text.

Dom Chapman does not explain to us what good can be got from this method of securing facts. Cassiodorus was not a textual critic. From his own statements it is certain that he amended the old MSS. which he possessed; he amended them, however, not for the purpose of establishing the true text, but to remove errors in grammar and style. And Eugippius was totally unfit to edit a Latin book, for his 'Life of Severinus' proves that he lived in the world of the miraculous, without being able to weigh evidence or distinguish fact from fiction.

The third case in which Dom Chapman reaches absolute certainty through conjecture is the most curious of all. In many of the MSS. of the Vulgate there is a preface or argumentum to each of the Gospels. Dom Chapman calls these prefaces Prologues, and his interest in them seems to be overwhelming. "Some," he says,

"may expect this section to be completed in the words, 'The Prologues have no meaning'; but this would be an exaggeration: they have, though not much. Once, at the age of twenty-two, after reading Hegel for ten hours a day for three days (a feat I have never tried again), I said to myself: 'Now or never is the time to attack Browning'; and the next day I made a desperate effort, which I have never ventured to repeat, to digest 'Sordello.' I regret to say that utter bewilderment was the only result. And yet for sheer blackness and incomprehensibility neither Browning nor yet Pindar is in it with the Prologues. But in middle age one is more persevering, and I have the audacity now to propose to translate and explain these masterpieces of the art of concealing one's meaning."

Accordingly he has edited the four Prologues with a large apparatus criticus. He has also translated them and commented on them. The amount of labour he has bestowed on them is very great. He cannot be depended on as a translator when he comes to dogmatic passages. Thus, for instance, he renders "ostendens unum se cum patre esse, quia unus est," "Showing Himself to be of one Nature with the Father, since He is one Person with Him," where the dogmatic words "Nature" and "Person" do not belong to the obscure author, but are inserted by the translator.

Dom Chapman's conjecture starts from his notion of the dogmatic opinions of the author of the Prologues. He says:—

"It is also quite evident that the writer has certain peculiar theological views which he wishes to support; but unless they are previously known, they are so difficult to discover, that from the fifth century till the nineteenth the Prologues have been looked upon as positively orthodox."

In other words, Popes and cardinals, ecclesiastical scholars, and all other theologians have been deceived by the obscure author. But now the writer lifts the veil. The first step in the process is induced by an essay on these Prologues written by Peter Corssen. This scholar maintained that the Prologues were Monarchian, and as he believed that the evidence was conclusive that they were older than Jerome and belonged to the first portion of the third century, he looked for an explanation of the Monarchianism in Praxeas and heretics of the third century. The next step in the process is made from another quarter. Prof. Karl Künstle has, in his own opinion, cleared up some very important points in Church history by conjectures crystallized into certainty. He thinks that he has proved in a pamphlet on the subject that the famous verse in the First Epistle of St. John, "There are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one," was a forgery made by Priscillian, who was decapitated for heretical opinions on the Trinity. The same professor in his 'Anti-Priscillian' also thinks that he has discovered that the Athanasian Creed was directed against Priscillian and his followers. Dom Chapman has read this work. It has inspired him with the idea that Priscillian is the author of the four prologues. The plan which he adopts to prove this is by showing that the language of the Prologues is like the language of Priscillian, and he makes long quotations to exhibit this. Almost the first is this. The words "Unus ex discipulis Dei" occur in the Prologues. He finds in Priscillian a parallel to this in the words "nullus e nostris, multi ex his." The great majority of the extracts are of this nature. He assumes that Priscillian did not borrow from the Prologues; that none but he could write in the style of the Prologues; and that the Prologues must be the work of Priscillian, and not of any of his followers, if they contain expressions that seem to indicate Priscillianism, though he adds: "No doubt any of these expressions might bear a Catholic interpretation; but taken as a whole they shed a lurid light upon one another." But he says elsewhere: "In the following examination I assume a Priscillianist meaning throughout."

The conjectures of Prof. Künstle and Dom Chapman present Priscillian as having had a marvellous effect on the Christian Church. According to them, it was this heretic who forged the verse in the Bible that has been continually quoted as the surest proof of the Trinity. It was the teaching of this same heretic that occasioned the production of a creed which has caused endless wranglings among pious Christians, and still vexes a large number of them. It was further, this heretic whose prefaces to the Gospels have been inserted in innumerable MSS. and editions of the New Testament from the fourth century to the present day, with his heretical opinions stated so cleverly in them that their heterodoxy was not detected by any one throughout the centuries, and has been discovered only within recent times.

One might imagine that Dom Chapman would form a high idea of such a writer's ability, but this is not so. Being absolutely certain that Priscillian is the author of the Prologues, he has framed an estimate of the man from the contents of these documents which runs thus:—

"The foregoing investigation has shown us that nearly all Priscillian's information is worthless, fragmentary, third hand. His ignorance is more remarkable than his knowledge. We can hardly help inferring that he knew no Greek."

If Priscillian were alive now, it would doubtless be a consolation to him to know that Dom Chapman treats his own contemporaries in the same style. He says of Corssen, his predecessor in scenting Monarchianism in the Prologues: "His main theses exhibit a lack of common sense and of the critical faculty which is simply phenomenal."

A Chronicle of Friendships, 1873-1900.
By Will H. Low. (Hodder & Stoughton.)

MR. LOW'S 'Chronicle' is mainly concerned with reminiscences of R. L. Stevenson and his less-known cousin the art-critic, R. A. M. Stevenson. The five hundred large pages cover a good deal more than the friendship of these two, and include a good many more names and memories; yet undoubtedly, if it had not been for the Stevensons, the 'Chronicle' would not have been written.

Mr. Low was a student in the Atelier Duran in Paris in 1873, and there and elsewhere he met many young ardent spirits bent on the same business. Some of these were American, others English; fewer, oddly enough, were French. The coterie existed in Paris, at Barbizon, at Grez, and of its numbers were R. A. M. Stevenson and Mr. Low. Robert Louis Stevenson drifted into it, not by reason of any leaning towards paint, but by good-fellowship and his ties of affection with his cousin. Mr. Low indeed denies to the writer any real interest in or sympathy with pictures: "But of love of form and colour, with which the painter is chiefly concerned, he had little care." His cousin declared that "Louis never looked at a picture or statue except from a literary point of view"; but Mr. Low demurs to this as too comprehensive.

However, in 1875 R. L. Stevenson is found established in the painters' colony at Barbizon, helping to give zest to life there. Of that life Mr. Low gives a pleasant rambling account, perhaps at too great a length, for, as he admits on the threshold, "this is a chronicle of small unimportant happenings." Such interest as it has arises from the subsequent importance of one or two of the figures, and the evident enjoyment with which the chronicler recalls the little adventures of his youth. At the Hôtel Siron in Barbizon the Stevensons became transposed to Stennis aîné and Stennis frère, as far as Siron was concerned. Mr. Low's testimony is that R. L. S. did not appear to engage very seriously in work, and that he even rarely read the book with which he wandered about. No doubt this was a time of absorption for him, and the impressions he took then bore fruit later in many ways. How much he was under the influence of these impressions is clear to any one familiar with his work. 'The Wrecker' starts out of them from sundry experiences in Paris, and it closes in either Barbizon or Grez. Some of Loudon Dodd, as Mr. Low confesses, was drawn from himself. In later years, when Stevenson was endeavouring to regain health in America, Mr. Low again saw a great deal of his friend; and he has succeeded in making his memories of these later times more vivid. The R. L. S. of Barbizon is, it must be confessed, something of a shadow, a hardly realized personality. In those days he was dominated and dwarfed by the pervading individuality of his older cousin. Here is Stevenson's explanation of his avoidance of the feminine element in his stories:—

"He said that no sooner had his mind conceived a subject in which women entered than the natural sequence of events and situations, which the best of women in their relations to men might find in life, seemed fraught with danger. 'There is one standard imposed for the treatment of men in literature, and a totally different one for women, in our modern English view,' he insisted, 'and this false and contradictory limitation tends to produce an illogical and unreal result in the work of art.'"

Mr. Low introduced Stevenson to General Sherman, who took him for one of his boys; had never heard of his writings, except through a stage version of 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde'; and tried to get him to buy his book.

Of R. A. M. Stevenson Mr. Low gives a more faithful, and perhaps a more affectionate, portrait. His appreciation of his conversational powers is uncommonly similar to that of R. L. S. in 'Talk and Talkers':—

"Not that his talk was controversial; it began on a plane far above argument; with careless generosity granting all that you would give your life blood to maintain, and then by twist and turn, with an apparent and honest intent not to dismiss the smallest subject before every phase of it was carefully examined, your premisses would suddenly give way and the principles of years would lie in ruins at your feet, while, guided by his skilful hand, you soared the blue empyrean of speculative thought."

The French poem on p. 289 will come as a surprise to most of those who knew "Bob" Stevenson.

Mr. Low writes with admirable discretion and taste, and he writes extremely well to boot. He affords us amiable glimpses of Millet and other French painters, and he has a good deal to record about the foundation of the American Art Association and the advance of art in the United States generally. But it is his personal memories which give point and character and a pleasant flavour to the book.

The Gilds and Companies of London. By George Unwin. (Methuen & Co.)

THAT Mr. Unwin, the writer of the present volume, is well qualified to treat of the Gilds of London and their later development as the Livery Companies, has been proved by his able work on 'Industrial Organization in the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries' (Clarendon Press, 1904), his lectures in connexion with the London School of Economics, and his recent appointment as Lecturer on Economic History in the University of Edinburgh. That he has also spared no pains to render his work as complete as possible is proved by frequent references to the series of Calendars of civic records published by the Corporation of the City of London, as well as to various works by eminent Continental authorities on the subject of Gilds generally.

Mr. Unwin is an original thinker, and some of his statements are calculated to upset preconceived ideas of the ordinary citizen. Thus the distinction between a "trade" and a "craft" Gild, as it appears to the lay mind, becomes almost obliterated in view of a statement by Mr. Unwin to the effect that a craftsman was not necessarily a manual worker in the Middle Ages—that the term "craft" signified "a trade or calling generally, and the typical member of a craft was a well-to-do shopkeeper or a tradesman," although he may possibly have gone through an apprenticeship to the manual side of his craft (p. 62). Mr. Unwin thus considers "craft" to be synonymous with "art" and "mystery."

Again, the commonly accepted view that men of the same mystery associated themselves together mainly for the purpose of regulating their trade or handicraft, whilst satisfying their religious and charitable yearnings by placing their association under the protection of a patron saint and making ordinances for the relief of their poorer brethren, is scarcely recognized by Mr. Unwin. With him the order is reversed. He places the Gild or Fraternity in its religious and social aspect first, and describes the Fraternity as "absorbing" the Mystery (p. 103). He goes further, and declares that it was the "need of strengthening the social and religious activities of these fraternities" that justified the grant to them of charters of incorporation (p. 159). We confess ourselves unable to follow him to this extent; but if Mr. Unwin is right, we can only say that it was not the first time, nor the last, that religion was used as a cloak for strengthening the secular power of associations. More than once we find the "Yeomanry" of a Mystery or Livery Company—men who were free of a company, but not of its livery or "clothing"—forming themselves into Fraternities, of a more or less secret character, with the view of bringing pressure to bear upon the ruling authorities and bettering their own condition. Another somewhat startling statement by Mr. Unwin is to the effect that Fraternities were "in the habit" of registering their ordinances in the Court of the Commissary of London in order to secure their enforcement by the spiritual arm. It may have been so, but we should have liked more proof of the existence of such a "habit" than the two instances he supplies. One thing is certain: so long as the ecclesiastical courts confined themselves to regulating the Fraternity of a craft, all was well; but if they attempted to enforce their jurisdiction over the craft itself, the civic authorities at once interposed. An instance of the kind occurred in 1344, when a craftsman appealed from a judgment pronounced by a court Christian to a civic court, and won the day. On the other hand, the Fraternity embodied in a Mystery or Livery Company, whilst seeking the protection of the Church, was (to use Mr. Unwin's own words)

"largely free from ecclesiastical dominance and its religious functions became so subordinated to its social activities that they could be entirely transformed at the Reformation without causing any serious break in the continuity of the company's existence."

The Act of 1547 (1 Edward VI. cap. 14) all but extinguished the Fraternity element of the Livery Companies, whilst it left the secular element untouched. By that time nearly half of the Companies that now survive had received charters of incorporation; the rest have been incorporated since the Reformation.

Mr. Unwin has much to say about the chartered Companies in their relation to the governing body of the City, and says it well. Some of the Misteries, on the strength of their charters, displayed so much independence that an Act of Parliament was passed in 1437, promoted probably by the City of London as the party most interested, requiring incorporated bodies throughout the land to bring in their charters for registration by the chief governors of cities, boroughs, and towns. The Court of Aldermen in the City was thereby enabled to continue to exercise control over the Companies, as formerly it had done over the unchartered Misteries. In the middle of the fourteenth century the Misteries had become differentiated as "the Greater" and "the Lesser." At the present day there are certain Livery Companies known as the "Twelve Greater Companies"; but how the number became thus limited we cannot say. There does not appear to be any ordinance prescribing the number or composition. From time to time the composition varied, until in 1516 the order of precedence of all the Livery Companies was fixed by the Court of Aldermen, and the first twelve in that order have been known from that day to this as the "Twelve Greater Companies."

Mr. Unwin has also something to say of the effect produced on the London Companies by the various monopolies created in the time of Elizabeth, and perpetuated under the Stuarts as a means of raising money without consulting Parliament. It is a story in which at least one Alderman of the City does not show to advantage. Lastly, Mr. Unwin gives a succinct account of parish Gilds or Fraternities having their origin for the most part in chantries, and so intimately associated with them that they shared the same fate at the Reformation.

Among the illustrations (thirty-seven in number) which enhance the value of Mr. Unwin's book is a plan of various churches, on which the Gilds are indicated by imaginary steeples; and in an Appendix he sets out the Gilds which received benefactions from citizens whose wills were proved and enrolled in the Court of Hustings.

Although we may not always see eye to eye with Mr. Unwin, we have no hesitation in saying that he has produced the best book of its kind that we have seen, and we heartily commend it to every student of municipal as well as Gild history.

Folk-Memory; or, The Continuity of British Archæology. By Walter Johnson. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)

MR. JOHNSON has already established a reputation as a sound local antiquary by his work in collaboration with Mr. W. Wright on Neolithic man in North-East Surrey. The present volume will obtain for him full recognition as a writer on general archæology. He is happy in his choice of a subject and of a title. The expression "folk-memory" is apt, founded on the accepted precedent of folk-lore, a word invented by the first editor of Notes and Queries. It is expressive, and likely, we think, eventually to become current. Mr. Francis Darwin, in his recent address to the British Association, having attributed the quality of memory to plants, its adaptation to the faculty by which mankind preserves a continuity of custom and thought through changes of race and of circumstance, and over long periods of time, seems legitimate.

The term "folk-memory," however, does not completely describe the contents of the book, which are more fully expressed in the sub-title. This is a fascinating subject. In science generally, cataclysmic theories have given way to the hypothesis of continuity; why should they not do so in archæology? To the ordinary mind, the idea of steady progression is far more agreeable than any explanation of events can be which requires the introduction of disturbing causes; but the argument in favour of continuity leads the author over many rough places where the evidence in support of it is either obscure in itself, or the subject of doubt and controversy. On these matters he maintains the position which is necessary for the support of his theory of continuity; but he states with fairness the difficulties which lie in his path, and the opposite views which have been held by other authorities. The book may be read, therefore, with profit and satisfaction, by those who hold the catastrophic theories as well as those who are in full agreement with Mr. Johnson.

The first difficulty he has to meet in his argument for continuity is the question of the authenticity of the eoliths. He says truly that eoliths of some kind are logically demanded. He himself approached the matter as a decided sceptic; but upon inspection of the collections of Mr. Harrison at Ightham, he was persuaded that they include implements worked by an early race of low type. He contends that M. Boule has proved too much. If eoliths are produced by natural action similar to that of the machinery in the cement mills, they should be found in most river gravels; but they are not so found. He accepts the division of eoliths into two types, but is not prepared to assent without qualification to the four types proposed by M. Rutot.

An even greater difficulty in the way of proving continuity is the gap between the Palæolithic and Neolithic periods. He has to account for the change in fauna. This, he thinks, may have been gradual. Arctic and temperate fauna exist side by side to-day. The cultural break is another problem. Neolithic man had lost the artistic faculty which produced in Palæolithic times spirited and life-like representations of men and animals. From the Palæolithic huntsman to the Neolithic herdsman and tiller of the ground is a long succession of steps that have been taken somewhere, and Mr. Johnson, though he admits that the affirmative cannot definitely be proved, inclines to the belief that they were taken here.

He is on surer ground when he points to the overlapping between stone and bronze, and between bronze and iron, and the fabrication of implements in the one material in styles suitable only to the other, as good evidence of continuity. He furnishes in tabular form a suggested correlation between the pre-historic ages, of which the only criticism we have to offer is that the table should be inverted, so as to proceed backwards from the later geological periods to the earlier. In comparing the finds in the British Isles with the classification of prehistoric periods now usual on the Continent, he adopts the convenient plan of substituting "ian" for the French "ienne" in the terminal syllables.

Turning from the works of man to man himself, and passing over Pithecanthropus erectus as still a subject of controversy, Mr. Johnson agrees with Prof. Beddoe that traces of Palæolithic man may be discovered in the modern populations of Wales and the West of England, though such traces are but faint; and with Prof. Ripley, that the primitive Neolithic type of man is still represented in our population in Devon and other parts; while survivals from the Bronze Age are widely spread among the remnants of the yeoman class. He accordingly repudiates the old teaching about the extermination of one race by another. Continuity is a key which he would use to open many secret chambers.

In discussing further links between the prehistoric and protohistoric ages, Mr. Johnson reaches the Roman period, and attaches more weight than is usually given to the presentation of his case by the late Mr. H. C. Coote, in what the author rightly describes as his illuminating volume on the Romans of Britain, as to the existence of Roman influence in our modern institutions, in gardening and agriculture, literature and art, and the continued existence in Saxon times of Romano-British folk, even as landed proprietors. Coote cites instances of this under the names of Luca, Æsica, and others apparently Roman.

Mr. Johnson connects the menhir or standing stone with the idol and the Christian cross on the one hand, and the Roman milestone and mediæval landmark on the other, and adopts the comprehensive saying of Mr. Clodd that "between Stonehenge and the fair cathedral whose spire we see as we return to Salisbury, the chain of continuity is complete." He is not without hope that the astronomical investigations of Sir Norman Lockyer may lead to a working theory as to the significance of the megaliths.

The latter half of the book, comprised in chaps. viii. to xvi., deals with folk-memory in a more restricted sense, as applied to the transmission of fairy tales, superstitions, and traditions, and the manner in which the folk of the district account for such remains of ancient and mostly forgotten industries as exist in deneholes, lynchets, dewponds, white horse and other figures on the chalk downs, flint knapping, and the like. On each of these subjects Mr. Johnson has made a thorough study of the authorities, and has also devoted much time to personal investigation on the spot. He gives chapter and verse for all his statements, but avoids the confusing effect of foot-notes by collecting all the references at the end as chap. xvii. This method serves as a bibliography also. The references exceed a thousand.

NEW NOVELS.

The Flower of the Heart. By H. B. Marriott Watson. (Methuen & Co.)

IN a dedication to Mr. H. G. Wells the author observes: "You have long been wanting me, I know, to write a novel of modern life. Well, here it is.... I have turned my back fully on romance and adventure." The spirit certainly has been willing; and the weakness of the flesh is barely evident except in a romantic title, and an occasional floridity of writing, responsible for such a phrase as "(she) endued herself with garments."

In certain aspects Mr. Watson's story recalls 'The Market-Place,' that brilliant novel wherein the late Harold Frederic portrayed the financier of the nineties. In Sam Eversley and his colleagues we have a parallel picture, enlarged by judicious projections into the world outside Throgmorton Street. The hero attacks the society adjacent to his country seat with a zest in no way inferior to his raids upon the share market; and, furthermore, he has a young and beautiful wife whose charms provoke a tragedy that goes beyond the fortunes of her husband's companies.

Mr. Watson is at home in the City; less technical, though equally at home, in the county society where much of his story takes place. His financial adventurers are convincing creatures, and Mrs. Eversley is a successful portrait. Col. Devigne, the Colonial soldier and administrator, is, perhaps, an even superior presentation to these; while Frank Lassetter, Mrs. Eversley's lover and destroyer, would be more credible did he not perpetually spout poetry like the incorrigible old gentleman in 'The Knight of the Burning Pestle.'

A Prince of Dreamers. By Flora Annie Steel. (Heinemann.)

THE scene of this fascinating romance is laid at Fatehpur, the royal city which was built by the Emperor Akbar to commemorate the birth of his son.

Besides Akbar himself, who is the hero of the tale, we are introduced to several persons famous in history; for example, the great minister Abul Fazl; Prince Salim, who succeeded his father with the title of Jahangir; and Gulbadan Begum, the lady who wrote such interesting memoirs. There are also three Englishmen who carried letters of recommendation from Queen Elizabeth. One of these, William Leedes, a jeweller by trade, plays an important part in the mystery of a stolen diamond. The character of Akbar—than whom, perhaps, no wiser and profounder idealist ever reigned—is drawn with sympathy and imaginative power; and the minor figures are equally convincing. Mrs. Steel knows how to reproduce, in a way that few living writers can rival, the gorgeous colours, the subtle intrigues, the burning passions, and, above all, the dreamy philosophy and poetic atmosphere of the East. Here she has done it, perhaps, almost too well for the ordinary reader: the story, as a story, suffers from a certain diffuseness and excess of mysticism, though it has many thrilling episodes told with admirable directness and force, such as the account of the polo match in the tenth chapter. Among the songs and snatches of verse scattered through the volume are some of the best imitations of Oriental poetry that we have seen.

The Whispering Man. By H. K. Webster. (Eveleigh Nash.)

THIS American detective story is as ingenious as the best work of Anna Katharine Green. Its basis is the murder of a nerve-specialist in his private office during consulting hours. The reader's suspicion points at several persons, male and female, though he usually feels superior in deductive ability to the narrator, who is a lawyer. Detective stories triumph when they delight a taste for economy by producing electrical effects out of circumstances already familiar to the reader, and as there are two such effects in this story, it is a success.

Rachel Lorian. By Mrs. Henry E. Dudeney. (Heinemann.)

WE cannot but regret the almost exclusive devotion which Mrs. Dudeney has of late years shown to that "trite and piquant" theme, the ménage à trois; nevertheless, even the restricted views of life—and love—thus self-imposed cannot entirely neutralize the originality which is, perhaps, her best gift. It manifests itself especially in her choice of a situation—a wedding journey interrupted by an accident which permanently cripples the bridegroom. The blended heroism and ferocity developed by this calamity in the victim are as convincing as they are painful, and the three-cornered love-story which results is elaborated with the author's usual charm; yet the suggestion that the things she describes are of less importance to her than her manner of describing them is rarely altogether absent. The position throughout assigned to religion as a useful pis-aller in adversity, but otherwise negligible, is of course in no way novel, but we hardly remember to have seen so frank a statement of the case. We admire the shrewd, but seldom ill-natured touches of humour in the delineation of subsidiary characters. The style suffers slightly from the influence of Mr. Henry James, also from grammatical lapses.

Lady Letty Brandon. By Annie E. Holdsworth. (John Long.)

MRS. LEE-HAMILTON shows much ingenuity in the construction of a tangled plot, and as regards the human element also she achieves no contemptible success. Her characters, the heroine especially, may not represent any very subtle study in psychology, but they seem alive, and our liking or disliking for them is in accordance with their creator's wishes. The story is founded upon the device, still popular in fiction, of mistaken identity, and in the ensuing complications an undue strain is often put upon our sense of probability, though rarely upon our interest or sympathy. There are some powerful touches of the uncanny order, degenerating occasionally into melodrama. The scenic background, Italian and English, is drawn with a pleasing effect.

The Capture of Paul Beck. By M. McDonnell Bodkin. (Fisher Unwin.)

HERE we have the later evolutions of a detective already favourably known to many readers. Mr. Beck is engaged in securing the downfall of a colossally stupid young man, and is opposed by a lady detective. The duel affords scope for a considerable display of ingenuity, and a triumphant close in the sentiment which the public loves. The whole is remote from life, but entertaining.

The Girl from Gatford. By Olivia Ramsey. (John Long.)

A MARRIED duke who, in pursuing the object of a pre-nuptial flirtation, finds himself on the brink of incest is an unusual figure, and as, in this novel, he dies by his own hand, he seems to plead for a niche in the memory of compassionate readers. Unfortunately, very little tragic power is evinced by the author. She shows a skill, not uncommon nowadays, in portraying fashionable worldlings whose principal emotions arise from the card-table; and the heroine's aliveness gives an almost original effect of comedy to one chapter. But the mechanism of the story is artificial; and as coincidence follows coincidence, it becomes clear that the author is the victim of a false idea of what constitutes artistic ingenuity.

The Long Arm. By E. Phillips Oppenheim. (Ward, Lock & Co.)

THIS story, in which a man sets himself to ruin a band of swindlers who have spoilt his life, is a good specimen of the author's skill in sensational fiction. If it hardly keeps up the promise of its first scene, which is strikingly dramatic, it is very readable throughout.

MILITARY BOOKS.

A Review of the History of Infantry. By E. M. Lloyd, Col., late R.E. (Longmans.)—As a comprehensive survey this book is worthy of high praise. The style is good; the general connexion between successive periods, with their alternations of line and column, shock and fire tactics, is well maintained, and the chronological treatment adopted probably the best. We find an ample Bibliography, and an adequate Index. There is an air of real scholarship about the volume which commends it as a textbook to be read not by soldiers only, but by all who accept the obligation of a citizen to defend his country.

The Tactics of Home Defence. By Col. C. E. Callwell, C.B. (Blackwood & Sons.)—Much has been written of late, and more thought, about the invasion of this country by a European enemy. To all Englishmen for whom national self-defence is something more than journalistic speculation or after-dinner argument we commend this book, written by a soldier of ability, who has already achieved success as a writer.

Col. Callwell discusses certain considerations which, according to his view, tend to determine the size, constitution, and movements of an invading force; but in spite of what he says, there are some who believe that, if a force ever comes at all, it will come in overwhelming numbers. The main thesis of his book is sound enough—that home defence is essentially based on local defence, and local defence on a proper knowledge of topography, and the trained capacity of officers to lead troops in enclosed country.

The work of the different arms is carefully discussed; and there are some pertinent remarks upon the need of a highly trained artillery, in view of the breaking-up of batteries, and the use of indirect fire, which the defence of this country would inevitably entail. Can the Territorial Artillery be expected to satisfy such requirements? The possibilities of cyclist operations are rightly emphasized in a separate chapter.

The work concludes with a useful discussion on positions, in which the excessive and unreasonable search for ideal ground, to the neglect of practicable though less perfect alternatives, is discouraged.

Active Service Pocket-Book. By Bertrand Stewart. Third Edition, Enlarged. (Clowes & Sons.)—The first two editions of this useful vade-mecum were so quickly exhausted that its reappearance has been welcome to all soldiers. Alike in class-room and in camp, the book has proved its worth anew; and the present edition, for all its increase from 425 to 932 pages, is still fit for the pocket, thanks to Oxford India paper. The new matter included (e.g., the sections on infantry attack and defence, transport, first aid to men and horses, conventional signs on foreign maps) is important for the completeness of such a work; and the information is given throughout in clear, concise, and readable paragraphs, with plenty of plates (186 in all). The Index is extensive. The whole is yet another proof of the manner in which the keen and competent amateur can and does assist the professional soldier; for we imagine there are few campaigners who will grudge this compendium a place in the very limited library which a haversack can contain.

The Second Battalion Royal Dublin Fusiliers in the South African War. By Majors C. F. Romer and A. E. Mainwaring. (A. L. Humphreys.)—This battalion, though its name is new (1881) and its place in the British Army List late (1862) and low (103rd), dates back to 1661, for it was raised to garrison Bombay, which King Charles II. received as part of his wife's dowry from Portugal. Battle honours in plenty, as the regimental book-plate here shows, fell to its share in the conquest of India; but it was in South Africa that the 2nd Royal Dublin Fusiliers as such received their baptism of fire, and won new names to set beside the old.

How they did it is told in this volume, with a modesty yet a sprightliness proper to Ireland, and not frequent in military history. The regimental officers and the rank and file of the British Army are admirable at their best; and much of the best is here. In the battle of Talana Hill this battalion formed the firing line; in the operations for the relief of Ladysmith it was repeatedly engaged as a part of the Irish Brigade of General Hart, who in some of his ideas might be called old-fashioned. We hear of "the General, conspicuous by a large red flag which a trooper carried behind him, moving wherever any opposition presented itself": advancing his brigade "in line of quarter-columns, and being as particular about the 'dressing' as if he were on Laffan's Plain." "His command," as the writer goes on, "hardly appreciated this smartness at the time," any more than they appreciated the arrangement of marches by the staff. "The fact is, staff officers do not understand marching." Your regimental officer, "who foots it alongside his company," "will tell you when a steady, swinging pace is being set that the men could keep up for ever; and he will also tell you when some long-legged officer in front is going four miles an hour, till some one suggests it is too fast, and he sinks into a slow and tiring two and a half." Truly, staff officers have much to learn; and they were not often omniscient in South Africa.

In the continual marching and occasional fighting of the "De Wet" stages of the war, the 2nd Royal Dublin Fusiliers had their fair share; and the brilliant affair of Zuikerbosch (July 22nd, 1900), when a little force commanded by Major F. P. English, of the battalion, and consisting of 180 Dublins, 110 Sappers, and 10 Yeomen, without guns, successfully defended a post against a superior force of Boers with four guns, won the emphatic approval of Lord Roberts.

There were not many pessimists in a battalion of this sort:—

"Throughout the war I only heard one man grumble sulkily, and only heard of one man who paid too great a regard to the use of cover.... Hardship, fatigue, stress of weather—everything was accepted as part of the general day's work, and as such cheerfully met and thoroughly done." There is the best tradition of the Army, worthily renewed.

The battalion went to Aden in 1902, and its share in the operations thereabout in 1903 is described.

In the appendix are given lists of casualties—it is worthy of note that only one officer who served with the battalion throughout the South African War escaped unwounded—and distinctions, complimentary telegrams and orders. The book is illustrated with portraits of officers, sketches and plans by Lieut.-Col. H. Tempest Hicks (who commanded the battalion with conspicuous success from 1900 to 1904), and a number of instantaneous photographs, which, minute though they be, represent the realities of a modern campaign.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

THOSE who remember "Sam Slick" as an after-dinner speaker in London when he sat in the House of Commons are aware that the "Blue-nose" judge was a man of influence. So was his son, Lord Haliburton, who was the author of the "military policy" of many politicians, notably Lord Randolph Churchill and Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman. With the former he fell out, as shown in Mr. J. B. Atlay's volume (Smith, Elder & Co.); with the Liberal Prime Minister he was on terms of confidential intimacy to the last. They were united in support of a "Cardwell system" that failed to carry out the essence of Cardwell's plan, and of a "short service" that had come to be the longest in the military world. Harcourt, too, was under the Haliburton spell, although Sir William's respect for the Tory Finance Minister of the South African war Sir, M. Beach, was not shared by Haliburton.

"He is a sort of Judas among Cabinet Ministers," wrote the latter. "He thinks he can use the purse to better purpose than they can, and therefore he discredits their administration. To have a member of the Cabinet criticising the possible demands of one of his colleagues before they are made, and insinuating that the administration is defective, is a little too much. He qualifies it by confessing his ignorance; but the proper course for an ignorant Cabinet Minister is silence! Criticism based on ignorance is well enough for a politician in opposition, but it comes ill from one of the Ministry. The bird is fouling his own nest."

Such was the fate of all who dared to criticize "the War Office."

Writing to Haliburton, Campbell-Bannerman compared The Times to The Eatonswill Gazette, and asked concerning proposed military changes, one of which he afterwards defended when made by his own Secretary of State, Mr. Haldane:—

"Such men as Wolseley, Buller, Wood, Brackenbury, Grove, Neville Lyttelton—will they speak up, or will they bow their head? Their names would have great weight with the public."

It was more than policy which united "C.-B." and Haliburton: "There was something especially congenial to the son of Sam Slick in the pawky humour of the genial, kindly Scot."

Mr. Atlay has done his work well. He reveals some secrets, but they concern the days when Haliburton had retired, or, in the case of the Cabinet dissensions of 1896, was preparing to leave the War Office. The letter about them ends with the words: "These are the views of Haliburton of Tunbridge Wells, not of his namesake of Pall Mall! The Pall Mall man is only an official." There are sharp attacks by Haliburton on the late Lord Salisbury and on Mr. Arnold-Forster, but Mr. Atlay is impartial, and the late Secretary of State for War defends himself. Haliburton is quoted against the Defence Committee, but Mr. Atlay rightly explains the opposite opinion. In military finance Haliburton was a safer guide, and his case is well set forth: "To...changes which...swept away civil control over Army expenditure, Haliburton...offered a strong though unavailing resistance." The point on which Mr. Atlay is the most open to criticism concerns the so-called "short service" of the extended "Cardwell" term of years, and the working of the linked-battalion plan of infantry drafts for Indian service. There is misrepresentation in the statement "When the Conservatives came back in 1895, the question of Short versus Long Service was by no means a chose jugée." The eight-year term failed to yield a sufficient reserve to fill the ranks on mobilization, and is not short service. Those who desired some extension of service in the case of men for India were advocates not of long service so much as of a far shorter service for the majority of our men, and were supporters of the three-year colour service of the Brigade of Guards. The Index is excellent, though we note a curious difference in the treatment of Privy Councillors among Haliburton's official friends: "Fawcett, Mr.," "Haldane, Rt. Hon. R. B.," "Wyndham, George."

Sketches from Life in Town and Country, and some Verses. By Edward Carpenter. (Allen & Sons.)—It would be an unintelligent Socialism which did not acknowledge Mr. Carpenter's right to live by his literary art. Though the impatience of his thought obliged him to follow Whitman in the outlawry of his poetic style, he proves in this remarkable volume that he is a cunning artist both in verse and prose. As a poet he proves himself capable of translating Sully-Prudhomme into creditable rhymed stanzas; and in rendering the 'Prolog im Himmel' to Goethe's 'Faust' he excels Bayard Taylor in humorous simplicity. He falls short, it is true, of perfection in the sonnet which he offers "to the Muse of measured verse on the occasion of adopting new forms"; but he may have wished, by rhyming "bason" with "hasten" in her presence, to console her for his departure from her choir. She might, however, recover her regret by reading 'The Footpath,' a poem in which, with lovely local colour, he suggests a child's first desolate sense of the strangeness of the universe. The sketches from life which precede the poems are admirable. No novel of the day presents rustic characters more amusingly than Mr. Carpenter's 'A Country Pub.' Its twenty-odd pages contain a group of notable characters.

Here and there a story is grey or horrible. 'Eliza Anne,' the tale of a girl blighted by morbid religion and unregulated altruism, is painfully convincing; but 'The Annals of a Slum-Family,' with its tenderness and humour, may be regarded as a salutary mixture. Some interesting biographical matter, including an account of a Socialist Congress at Paris in 1889, adds to the value of the book.

Modernism and Romance. By R. A. Scott-James. (John Lane.)—Mr. Scott-James seems to utter his most important message when he states that knowledge is the disease of to-day. We gather that he has a grudge against science for starving "some of the instincts and faculties of men" by its devotion to the study of matter, but he takes little trouble to show how religion is scientifically or even romantically approached. For instance, he does not oppose Sir William Crookes to Haeckel. His chapter on the 'Borderlanders' is inadequate, and one of the examples in it is very far-fetched. In the chapter on 'Popularity' we are told that "the success of Mrs. Thurston baffles critical analysis." Surely Mr. Scott-James undervalues his own critical ability. He suggests that self-consciousness is particularly characteristic of modern life, and confronts us with "the glorious spontaneity and outwardness" of the Elizabethan age. As "spontaneity" was in danger of having its right hand struck off in those "spacious days" when Sir John Haywarde was imprisoned for his history of 'King Henrie III.,' despite Bacon's report to Queen Elizabeth of its freedom from treasonable matter, literary self-repression at least was not unknown to Elizabethans.

Limbo and other Essays, to which is added Ariadne in Mantua. By Vernon Lee. (John Lane.)—Some of the essays which constitute the greater part of this volume are reprints; others, with the little play 'Ariadne in Mantua,' appear for the first time. They exhibit, in varying degrees, the peculiar graces of the author's talent. The capacity for simultaneous appreciation of past and present which renders her writings attractive attains, perhaps, its happiest expression in 'Ravenna and its Ghosts'; but it is a pervading quality of the book before us. Vernon Lee's cultivation of the "historic habit," which she recommends as adding a fresh element of happiness to existence, has not dulled her interest in contemporary things and people: the Socialists whom she treats with kindly intellectual scorn could not, among them, find a better argument against resigned acceptance, by "one half of the world (the larger)," of conditions condemning it to that "work from morning to night" which "is not in any sense living," than is provided by our author in the paper 'About Leisure.' A sense of the Spirit of of Place gives life to the dramatic trifle already mentioned, in which a studied artificiality of manner has been carried dangerously far. But if Diego and the Princess Hippolyta show themselves plainly as puppets in the hands of their creator, the Palace and lake of Mantua are full of vivid suggestion. The truth expressed in 'The Lie of the Land' will be endorsed by every thoughtful traveller; but in her gallant championship of Bernini and his school Vernon Lee will find fewer supporters. As a descriptive writer she has a charm for many, though we cannot treat her pretensions to philosophy seriously.

THERE is disappointment at the want of interesting new matter in the second volume of Lettres et Documents... Murat (Paris, Plon). The first volume of Prince Murat's Joachim-Murat papers, reviewed by us on June 20th, 1908, was of the highest importance, and showed the King of Naples in a new light. We still look forward to the volumes of this series that will complete the history of 1814-15 by filling gaps in the narrative of Commandant Weil. But the letters of 1801-3 now published are mostly known, and the new ones are dull; while the alterations and suppressed passages deal with matters both trivial and forgotten. At p. 489 there is an exception: the Vice-President of the Italian Republic, writing from the palace at Monza in September, 1803, to Murat, commanding in chief the French Army of Italy, who had just left Milan for Paris, says he "hopes he may believe that it may be possible that before "returning to Italy "vous fussiez faire un petit déjeuner au thé à Londres." Melzi's spelling was almost as loose as Murat's, even when Murat was begging his great brother-in-law to be allowed to spend a minute "chés moy," or assuring Napoleon that the First Consul "me rendés asés de justice," and informing his master of an Italian "antousiasme" in which neither of them believed any more than in the "justice." The French of General Lannes was not much better. Writing to Bonaparte in 1802, the future Duc de Montebello describes the information he has received of "votre intantion de me faire arrêter."

The volume contains a great deal about the arrest of Marquis Carracioli by the French in 1803; many shrewd hints by Murat of the probability of "Mr. Nelson" landing a few "troupes" in Italy or Italian islands; and a letter from Murat to Admiral Warren during the Peace of Amiens, in which the hope is expressed that "la reconciliation des deux nations" may "affermir pour toujours la paix de l'Europe." Most of these letters and all the facts contained in them were known already.

THE bound volume of The Dickensian for 1908 (Chapman & Hall), which is the fourth, comprises among its more interesting contents a "Special American Number," with sundry expressions of transatlantic opinion relative to 'American Notes' and 'Martin Chuzzlewit.' Of the latter the American portion is still, we are surprised to observe, regarded as "one of the most unsatisfactory features in all the work of the great writer." An article on 'The Individuality of Locomotives,' from Household Words, serves, in its comparatively laboured humour, to emphasize the inability of Dickens to bring himself into harmony with that particular phase of the new order. In the zealous collection and discussion of Dickensian minutiae the volume is well up to the standard of its predecessors, and should prove useful for purposes of reference.

Between the Twilights. By Cornelia Sorabji. (Harper & Brothers.)—The social aspect of Hinduism is so sinister to the ordinary English eye, and its mythology as viewed in native prints so repulsive, that no excuse is needed for a book which enables us to look at it with comprehension, if not sympathy. Two pithy sentences account for most of the injustices fostered by the Hindu: "Vicarious suffering with a woman for chief actor is one of the tenets of the male. Vicarious pleasuring with a man for chief actor the woman's [tenet]." As if the second tenet were not enough to blight Hindu women, superstition decides that the father of a Hindu girl who is not married before her twelfth birthday goes to hell. Hence proceed scandals, and suffering which our author has helped to alleviate. She introduces us to the wisdom of native sages. She knew a "wise woman" who wore Kali's necklet of skulls as symbols of "the Giants of wickedness whom [that goddess] has slain." Another sage, Truth-Named Singh, informed "Miss Salub" that "there are three diseases in the world—Actual Sin," curable by good works, which, he added, are but "fetters of gold"; "Restlessness, to be cured by meditation; and Joylessness, to be cured by making occasion to give joy to others." This sage so mastered the Hindu injunction, "Never resent" that he preserved his composure while he was being kicked out of a railway carriage by an infuriated snob.

IF there is a public in England which is interested in French memoirs, yet unable to read them in the original, the Memoirs of the Comte de Rambuteau, translated by J. C. Brogan (Dent), should be welcome. M. de Rambuteau, a Burgundian of good provincial noblesse, lived through three generations of amazing transition. He was born in 1781, when the old monarchy seemed secure on its ancient foundations, and he did not die until 1869, the year before the establishment of the Third Republic. During half his life he was prominently engaged in public affairs, and until he went into retirement after the fall of the Monarchy of July, he kept a record of the varying history of France, in which he was a not inconsiderable actor.

In 1808 he married the daughter of M. de Narbonne, who was one of the first of the noblesse to rally to Napoleon, having offered his services to the First Consul in 1803. Rambuteau followed the example of his father-in-law, and became a Chamberlain at the Imperial Court. The Emperor recognized that he had ability superior to that of a courtier, and he filled more than one important prefecture in annexed territories, being promoted to the Loire towards the end of the Empire. The Government of the first Restoration retained him in the public service; but as he warmly espoused the cause of Napoleon during the Hundred Days, he went into retirement after Waterloo. In the reign of Charles X. he was elected to the Chamber as a member of the Opposition, and after the Revolution of July became one of the closest friends of Louis Philippe, and one of the pillars of the Orleans Monarchy. It was then, at the age of fifty-two, that he was appointed to the Prefecture of the Seine, holding that important post for fifteen years, until the proclamation of the Second Republic after the Revolution of 1848.

Amid much that is of the highest historical interest in his record of the later phases of the Revolution, the Empire, the Restoration, and the Monarchy of July, probably no portion of his 'Memoirs' is of greater value than the long memorandum which gives an outline of the results of fifteen years' administration of the city of Paris. Some of the works carried out by M. de Rambuteau were doubtless necessary for the growing needs of a great capital, and some of them contributed to its embellishment—notably the construction of the Avenue des Champs Elysées and the improvement of the Place de la Concorde. But it is clear that he was the precursor of Haussmann and his ruthless alterations of Paris. In the record of his Parisian improvements M. de Rambuteau explains why the Obelisk of Luxor stands in the middle of the Place de la Concorde. Louis Philippe decided to put it on that historical spot (which in his lifetime had frequently changed its name, and had been the scene of the most momentous dramas of the Revolution) because the column, not commemorating any political event, was sure to remain there. If the space were left vacant, the King said, some expiatory monument might be one day set up there, to be replaced by a statue of Liberty when a republic should succeed. M. de Rambuteau's description of his restoration of the Hôtel de Ville shows that he did not leave much of the venerable building to be destroyed by the Commune in 1871. The destruction of the panel pictures and painted ceilings was the real loss, as the romantic movement and momentary richness of colour almost Venetian in its splendour were better represented in the Hôtel de Ville than in the Louvre, at Fontainebleau, or at Versailles.

The translation on the whole is well done. Translation is both a difficult and an ungrateful art, and it is not surprising that in the English version of over 300 spacious pages there should be a few slips. "The Feast of Balthazar" should in an English book be, of course, "Belshazzar's Feast"; "Mme. Gaucourt" and "Tartare" ought to be Mme. de Jaucourt and Tarare. The phrase translated "officer of the Crown" should have been rendered "courtier." "I lost my election to the College at Macon" is a literal translation of a French electoral expression which is unintelligible without explanation, as also is the word "Cabinet" in its administrative sense. "The lobby which separated the Centre from the Left" should have been "the gangway." "A trend of wild excitement" is a curious rendering. In spite of some imperfections, such as those cited, the translation reads smoothly, and must have entailed a great deal of labour.

In Light from Egyptian Papyri on Jewish History before Christ (Williams & Norgate) Dr. C. H. H. Wright has tried to combine an account of the two sets of Aramaic papyri recently discovered at Elephantine in Upper Egypt, and issued respectively by Prof. Sayce and Mr. Cowley in London and Prof. Sachau in Berlin, with an answer to various attacks made by critics on 'Daniel and his Prophecies,' published by our author in 1906. The point of connexion between the two subjects lies in the support which the Aramaic dialect of the papyri is supposed to lend to the conservative position relative to the date of Daniel. The modern critical view, which assigns the book to Maccabean times, is of course partly based on the argument from linguistic forms used in it; but now—so Dr. Wright and others assert—there have suddenly been brought to light Aramaic documents, variously dated between B.C. 471 and 411, which exhibit a marked linguistic similarity to the Book of Daniel, and it therefore follows that the critics ought at once to acknowledge their error and set out to reconsider their position. This argument would be unanswerable if the all-important premise were correct. As a matter of fact, however, the language of the newly discovered papyri shows—as a mere glance at Mr. Cowley's notes fully demonstrates—not only agreements with the Book of Daniel, but also some very marked differences. There is, indeed, so far nothing to overthrow the rough classification of the language used in Daniel as the western branch of Aramaic, and of that of the papyri as mainly eastern, thus at the same time supporting the view, advocated on other grounds by Prof. W. Bacher (see The Athenæum for June 15, 1907, p. 731), that there must have been at Elephantine a strong admixture of members of the Ten Tribes who had been taken to Upper Egypt subsequent to their enforced migration to Mesopotamia. Dr. Wright refers to Prof. Driver's remarks on the linguistic forms of the papyri in The Guardian of November 6th, 1907; but it would in the interests of critical fairness have been desirable also to mention that the differences of dialect are not left unrecorded in that article. The new book is, however, apart from the shortcoming which we were bound to emphasize, worthy of a welcome. The account given by Dr. Wright of the interesting sets of papyri is sure to be useful to many readers; and though the remaining chapters ('The Three Schismatical Temples,' 'The Wars depicted in Dan. xi.-xii.' &c.) are partly too sketchy and partly unconvincing, they all exhibit our author's well-known versatility, his telling style of writing, and his genial treatment of opponents. We believe that Dr. Wright has in the present work mainly achieved his second purpose.

Devon: its Moorlands, Streams, and Coasts. By Lady Rosalind Northcote. Illustrated in colour after Frederick J. Widgery. (Exeter, J. G. Commin; London, Chatto & Windus.)—In these three hundred pages there is a fair amount of interesting gossip about different parts of the wide county of Devon, coupled with appreciative paragraphs as to its diversified scenery. It is difficult, however, to imagine that any one who really loves Devonshire, whether a native or a frequent visitor, will find satisfaction in such desultory writing. The author skips about from subject to subject and place to place, after a fashion that could readily be extended to half a dozen volumes about the "fair province" of this Western county. It is not surprising to find in the Preface an expression of sorrow as to the limits of space. But this being the case, why does the writer trespass over the borders into Somerset to talk (with insufficient knowledge, too) concerning the Doones of Exmoor and Blackmore's great romance?

Mr. Widgery follows the author by giving three pictures of the Doone district. Or is it that the writer follows the artist? There is, as usual, no proper accord between illustrations and letterpress. For instance, the writer says, when discussing 'Lorna Doone,' that "the account of the water-slide is fictitious; this word is deliberately chosen instead of 'exaggerated,' which is often applied to Mr. Blackmore's picture of the fall." Nevertheless, the artist on an adjoining page gives a realistic coloured illustration of a steep fall of a considerable swirl of water down a smooth rocky surface, flanked on each side by a verdant coppice, and labels the plate 'Waterslide, Doone Valley.'

Doubtless this volume will be purchased in the great majority of cases because of the sixty coloured pictures. They are of unequal merit, but most of them are attractive, and worthy of the beautiful scenes they depict. The views of Yes Tor and Sheepstor on Dartmoor are distinctly expressive. So, too, are the pictures of the Brixham trawlers, Barnstaple Bridge, and Seaton Headland; but it is difficult to understand why the same artist cared to publish the jaundiced view of Beer Beach, or the odd presentment of the Lantern Rock, Ilfracombe. There is hardly a more attractive, interesting, or picturesquely situated Devonshire church than that of Branscombe; but of this Mr. Widgery offers an almost repellently gloomy picture, and has, moreover, by a strange lapse, crowned the tower turret with a non-existent pyramidal cover.

The Liber Exemplorum ad Usum Prædicantium is edited by A. G. Little, and published by the British Society of Franciscan Studies. Evidently in the thirteenth century the ordinary man, then as now, found sermons a little long and tiring. It is true they had the charm of comparative novelty, but the preachers found it necessary to enliven them by a few stories. Hence arose the demand for books of "Exempla" like the volume before us, the first publication of the British Society of Franciscan Studies, written by a Franciscan friar of some ability as a story-teller, who had studied in Paris and known Roger Bacon. We heartily welcome this new departure of the Society.

This particular volume is preserved in Durham Cathedral Library; it was first described some twenty years ago by M. Paul Meyer, who printed nearly all the original "exempla" found in the book. But besides the fact that his description (in the Notices et Extraits) is not readily to be obtained, it is obvious that the method of printing extracts does not give the ordinary student anything like a true idea of the intellectual attitude of the compiler or his auditors. Prof. Little has, then, rendered a considerable service to mediæval scholarship by this publication in its entirety of a little-known work. He has been able to correct, and even to add to, several of M. Paul Meyer's notes and identifications—no small praise for one who has to glean in the field after that indomitable reaper. Let us add a suggestion that the "philosophus quamvis incredulus" of p. 19 is Albumasar, whom both Albert and Roger Bacon quote to the same effect. The author of the "Exempla" seems to have been a Warwickshire man, and to have spent several years in Ireland. Some of his stories are very interesting in their bearing on the popular superstitions of the day.

Kelly's Handbook to the Titled, Landed, and Official Classes, 1909 (Kelly's Directories), has reached its thirty-fifth edition, and is a handy and excellent volume, facilitating by its one alphabetical index quick reference. There is a list of 'Additions and Alterations too late for Regular Insertion.' We have tested the work at various points, and found it accurate. The Preface informs us that "the proof of every entry has been submitted to the person to whom it has reference"—an elaborate measure which creates confidence, but leaves a few blanks which the editor might himself have filled up, e.g., in a case where of two brothers one only gives his father's Christian name.

WE have also before us the new issues of The Literary Year-Book (Routledge), The Clergy Directory (J. S. Phillips), and The Catholic Who's Who (Burns & Oates), all important books of reference in their way. The first is, we are glad to see, much more trustworthy than it was in small details; but the section of authors under special subjects is still strangely inadequate, and might, we think, well be dropped, unless it is to be revised by those who really know the experts. The hints to contributors as to what editors want now appear in two forms, and are very useful. 'The Clergy Directory' does not need our praise; more than once we have pointed out its uses as a book of general reference. The third volume, edited by Sir F. C. Burnand, is only in its second year, but succeeds in including an unusual wealth of personal detail. Thus Lord Haldon is noted as the grandson both of the Lord Barrington who was Disraeli's friend and secretary, and of Sir Lawrence Palk, described as "the host under whose roof in Devonshire Disraeli first met the eccentric Mrs. Brydges Willyams, who adored Disraeli's statesmanship, left him a most convenient fortune, and now lies between him and Lady Beaconsfield in the vault at Hughenden." The attempt to indicate personality made in this book lends it exceptional interest, and all is done in good taste.

Key to the Ancient Parish Registers of England and Wales. By Arthur M. Burke. (The Sackville Press.)—Mr. Burke has produced a work involving a great amount of labour, which cannot fail to be appreciated by the ever-growing number of persons who, for pleasure or for business purposes, are occupied with pedigrees. It will also prove useful to topographical writers and general students of history who may have occasion to consult casually the old parish registers of England and Wales. Up till now there has been no one trustworthy book giving the date at which parish registers begin. Official inquiries were made of all the clergy in 1831 as to the exact date and the condition and number of the registers in their custody; and abstracts of their replies were published in a Blue Book in 1833. It is not generally known that the returns themselves, which often contain more information than was printed, are at the British Museum (Add. MSS. 9355, &c.). The dates there given are not, however, to be absolutely relied upon, as unfortunately in not a few cases registers have been lost or stolen since, though happily in other cases some few have been restored or discovered. The dates at which registers begin are also usually to be found in Kelly's series of postal directories for the various counties, whilst the "Victoria County History" scheme promises particulars as to the registers of each parish in later volumes.

Nevertheless, there is ample room for such a key to the registers as has been compiled in this annotated index, which shows at a glance the date of the earliest entry in every parish register throughout England and Wales. Moreover the value of these pages is materially increased by foot-notes which give references to all the cases in which transcripts have been printed, in addition to a few other brief useful notes.

For such an index as this, then, all working genealogists and others owe a debt of gratitude to the compiler. Nevertheless it is only right to state that it is by no means perfect. It is perhaps too much to expect perfection in a work that deals with many thousands of statements, but we confess to a little disappointment at being able to find several mistakes after a comparatively short study of its closely printed columns. There is, for instance, a blunder under 'Stean, Northamptonshire': a note says that Stean is "included in the registers of Hinton." The fact is that Stean registers begin in 1695 and extend to 1752, at which latter date the parish was united to Hinton-in-the-Hedges. There is another blunder over Hinton, for those registers begin in 1568, and not in 1558, as stated by Mr. Burke. Rothwell, Northamptonshire, has the date 1708, but the correct date is 1614; in this case, however, the earlier register was only restored to the church in 1907. The registers of Snaith, Yorkshire, ought certainly to have been set forth correctly, and they actually begin in 1537, and are consecutive, but in these pages the date given is 1568.

It might also have been wiser if Mr. Burke had not attempted a general introduction to the subject. Although it covers some thirty pages, it is inadequate as an outline history of English registers. There is no reference to the Blue Book just cited, or to the original returns at the British Museum. At all events, as the information here given is in so short a form, mention ought certainly to have been made of the two books that enter into this question at far greater length. Burn's 'History of Parish Registers in England' used to be the standard work on the subject; but it was superseded by Chester Waters's 'Parish Registers in England, their History and Contents,' which is delightfully written and full of curious information. Mr. Burke takes up about a third of his Introduction by citing extracts from the register books of St. Margaret's Church, Westminster. It would have been far more useful if these pages had been devoted to practical hints and suggestions to those who search registers for themselves, or to the large number of clergy and register custodians who find a difficulty in reading the earlier entries. On the latter point a useful small pamphlet was printed a few years ago by the Congress of Archaeological Societies.

There are, too, a variety of small but interesting matters in connexion with registers that ought to have found a place in these pages. For instance, the statement that certain registers contain entries previous to the general order of 1538 should have been corroborated by quoting the few parishes in which they occur; nor is the highly exceptional circumstance of the record of the names of godparents among baptisms mentioned. This is the case with the well-kept early registers of the parish church of Chelmsford, whilst the practice was maintained at St. Nicholas', Newcastle-upon-Tyne, until the beginning of the last century. Instead, however, of treating comparatively novel matters, Mr. Burke offers explanations of well-worn subjects.

The Englishwoman, Vol I., No. I. (Grant Richards), is just out, and makes a good start. There are some solid and useful articles on matters of importance, a brief play by Miss Cicely Hamilton, light verse, and welcome signs that literature and art are to receive the attention which is their due.

THE ROYAL HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

THE Transactions and Publications of this Society for the session just concluded provide a fresh supply of historical material which is also of varied interest. The diversity of the subjects treated in the papers read during the past session, and printed in the present volume of Transactions, is doubtless well adapted to the requirements of a learned body which is not specially concerned with the history of any one period or locality. Again, it would scarcely be fair to compare the quality of these contributions with that of monographs which are published in historical reviews by scholars who are under no obligations to consult the tastes or interests of an audience. A paper that is merely learned has before now been read to empty benches, and has remained uncut on the bookshelves of the average Fellow of this or any other society; whereas a large proportion of the readers of the reviews in question can find compensation in the bibliographical notices and correspondence which are outside the scope of the ordinary Transactions.

But although the minds of many of the Fellows of the Royal Historical Society may have been improved by the conventional lectures upon Julius Cæsar and the Peace of Paris in 1763 contained in the present volume, whilst their knowledge of historical sources may have been enlarged by a perusal of Prof. Firth's suggestive and amusing paper on the Tudor ballad literature, we do not notice here any contribution to historical research of quite the same value as some in former volumes.

At the same time, new documents of minor importance have been discovered and described by several of the contributors. Amongst these is an interesting diary by an Irish politician, Denys Scully, which is communicated by the President in his annual address. The passages selected on this occasion describe the fruitless negotiations between the Irish Catholic party and William Pitt for the introduction of a Catholic Relief Bill in 1805, and the narrative is enriched by Dr. Hunt's valuable commentary.

The other original communications include an epitome of the delightful diary of an 'Elizabethan Gentlewoman,' Lady Hoby, which was discovered in an Egerton MS. by Miss Evelyn Fox, who proposes to edit the complete text for a Camden Miscellany volume; a summary of the contents of the "Bardon Papers," in the same collection, relating to the trial of Mary, Queen of Scots, with a family tradition of their provenance given by Dr. Charles Cotton; a description of a narrative of the vicissitudes of the Yorke family in the early years of George III.'s reign, by Mr. Basil Williams, from a Hardwicke MS.; and a curious notarial instrument relating to the bribe alleged to have been received by La Bourdonnais in connexion with the ransom of Madras in 1746. The last-mentioned document is communicated by Mr. G. W. Forrest, the well-known Indian archivist, in the course of a lengthy review of the circumstances of that historic siege, and was procured by him from the French Government archives at Pondicherry.

Of the two new volumes of the Camden Series (Nos. 14 and 15) issued by the Society the scholarly edition of the 'Relation of Sydnam Poyntz,' giving an independent account of the campaign in Germany between 1625 and 1662, is a valuable supplement to the historical literature of the subject. The unique MS. in the Bibliothèque Nationale was transcribed by Dr. M. Ettinghausen (who contemplates a German translation of the Camden edition), and the editing was entrusted by the Society to the safe hands of the Rev. A. T. S. Goodrick. It is true that the personality of Poyntz, which pervades the whole 'Relation,' is one calculated to give rise to some feeling of distrust. On the other hand, there is no question as to the military competence of the narrator, whilst his readings of heroic characters reveal at least a shrewd intelligence.

The claims of the remaining volume of the present issue to a place in the Camden Series must be based upon very different considerations. The 'Diary of the Rev. Ralph Josselin,' who held—we might almost say "enjoyed"—the living of Earl's Colne between 1640 and 1683, possesses much of the attractiveness of mediæval "annals" of social life. In one aspect this narrative is a trivial chronicle of the small beer which might still be brewed, despite the Puritan assize of cakes and ale, in a typical East Anglian village. At times, it is true, these harmless recreations of the ever-narrowing parish circle which had not learnt to take its pleasure sadly clash with the morbid reflections and hysterical ejaculations which were the private solace of the worthy vicar. But mingled with these effusions we can fortunately discover many careful observations of the effects of notable political measures, with businesslike calculations of tithe values and farming profits, which are by no means devoid of interest to the student of political and economic history. The real value of the diary, however, is in its obviously truthful picture of the social life of the period. We have here the autobiography not merely of a Vicar of Bray, whose apologia is purely ingenuous, but also the combined presentment of a seventeenth-century Parson Adams, Parson Trulliber, and Vicar of Wakefield. This diary, indeed, might easily appeal to a larger body of readers than that for whose benefit it has been published. It should be mentioned, however, that the original MS. has been judiciously compressed into the compass of a single volume by the omission of the greater number of the trivial entries. It has been edited for the Society by Mr. E. Hockliffe.

THE SHAKESPEARE QUARTOS.

MAY I be allowed a few words in reply to Mr. Huth's interesting criticisms?

1. Where does Mr. Huth find the assertion that the "1619 volume" measures $7\frac{1}{2}$ by $5\frac{1}{2}$ in. uncut? I have never seen an uncut copy. The point is that all the plays in that volume (dated 1600, 1608, 1619) must have measured more than $7\frac{1}{2}$ by $5\frac{1}{2}$ in. uncut, and that this is an exceptional size.

2. I never implied that Jaggard sought to make his reprints facsimiles. The fact of his imitating the edition from which he was printing (a common practice) accounts for some of the peculiarities of his volume; but I laid too much stress on the point in my first article. It is in no wise material to the argument.

3. I very much question whether Mr. Huth can make good his assertion that the 'Lear' and the 'Merchant of Venice' belonging to the "1619 volume" are printed in different types. The question is, of course, an important one. I may mention that there are points in regard to Roberts's and Jaggard's types (to be published, I hope, shortly) which confirm in a striking manner the position maintained by Mr. Pollard and myself.

4. Mr. Huth has apparently written on the watermarks without having read my second article in The Library. I there showed that if he succeeded in splitting up the mark he mentions (LM pot) into three he would only confirm my view, since in other copies the three varieties do not correspond to the three different dates. The question of the permanence of the mark was dealt with in my letter in last week's Athenæum.

W. W. GREG.

* * We do not invite further correspondence on the subject.

THE BRITISH MUSEUM READING-ROOM.

IN their anxiety to keep the Reading-Room from misuse, the British Museum authorities cause their attendants from time to time suddenly to adopt a farce of pretending not to know readers who have been in and out unchallenged for years. I have had the freedom of the Reading-Room for some thirty years; the principal attendant must know me perfectly well; but I was stopped at the door the other day and told that unless I could produce a ticket I must go to the Secretary's office. This I declined to do, but I wrote to the Secretary, telling him who I was; that I had had one ticket given on my first application, which of course had gone to pieces long ago; and suggesting that if tickets were to be shown, as a matter of form, by readers who were perfectly well known, they had better supply them in some indestructible material. All I got was a letter informing me, as if I were an unknown person, that "if I wished for admission to the Reading-Room" I must call at the Secretary's office and bring this letter with me.

I am the well-known editor of a well-known journal, author of several books (one of which has gone all over the English-speaking world), a frequent contributor by name to well-known magazines; but it appears that all this is to begin over again, and that I am to go to the Secretary's office, like an unknown person, to establish my claim to be admitted to the Reading-Room, to which I received admission in proper form thirty years ago. I call such a proceeding a stupid insult.

As an example of what the Secretarial Office is capable of, I may record that when, as a young man, I first applied for the use of the Reading-Room, my application was endorsed "G. Godwin, F.R.S.," and "George Grove." Will it be credited that there was a demur for some time to granting me the ticket, "because," I was told, "we know nothing of this George Grove who signs your application"? The Secretarial knowledge seems to be pretty well where it was then.

That means have to be taken to keep the Reading-Room from misuse by idlers is intelligible enough, but that it should be done in the way most inconvenient to all who really go there for work, and most offensive to those who have some claim to be treated with respect, is certainly unnecessary; and I suggest that it is a matter which the Trustees of the Museum would do well to look into. Any one of them may have my name if he wishes.

AN EDITOR AND AUTHOR.

THE NATIONAL LIBRARY, COPENHAGEN.

SINCE the opening of the new buildings of the Royal or National Library of Copenhagen a number of its most valuable possessions—books, MSS., autographs, prints, and literary curiosities—have been arranged in a permanent exhibition, numbering some 900 entries.

The place of honour is given to the priceless Icelandic MSS. of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries—the 'Elder Edda' ('Sæmundar Edda') and the 'Snorra Edda'; the 'Grágás' and the 'Jónsbók,' both ancient Icelandic law books; and the 'Flateyrbók,' written in 1387–94, and giving the oldest accounts of the finding of Greenland and America.

The oldest printed Danish books are to be found there, viz., 'Breviarium Othinense,' printed in Odense, 1482, the only known copy of the first book printed in Denmark, as well as 'The Rhymed Chronicle of Denmark,' printed by Gotfred of Ghemen in Copenhagen in 1495. This is the first work printed in Danish.

Some choice specimens of early printing may also be seen, including a "block-book" Apocalypse, of which six similar engraved editions are known, this copy being the third. Notable also is a letter of indulgence printed at Mayence in 1454, and the so-called 42-line or Schellhorn Bible, probably printed by Gutenberg c. 1455.

The library is particularly rich in minuscules and majuscules from the early part of the Middle Ages and up to the fifteenth century, such as a Latin half-uncial MS., a fragment of the history of the Franks by Gregory of Tours.

Among the early MSS. is a Latin Gospel of the tenth century with English decoration, and another work by an English artist, 'Les Matinées de Notre Dame,' a prayer book probably made for the queen of Henry IV., Mary of Bohun, mother of Philippa of Denmark.

Some Anglo-Saxon fragments are also shown, viz., a song about King Walter of the eleventh century, and some Irish MSS., including 'Senchas Mór,' an early Irish statute, written in the fourteenth or fifteenth century, and a poem in honour of Cuchonacht Maguire from Termanagh, who died in 1589.

Several fine specimens of Oriental books and MSS. are on view, as well as of the art of bookbinding in many countries in ancient and modern times.

Among the literary curiosities may be mentioned an English almanac printed on parchment strips in 1500, and a German print of a monster fish, said to have been caught in the Baltic on November 7th, 1615. It has legs, a Turkish scimitar through the neck, three spears in its back, and teeth like those of a crocodile, as well as some words of warning written across the back, "Woe to mankind" ("Wee wee den minsk"),

W. R. P.

TEACHERS' REGISTRATION COUNCIL.

I MUST plead guilty to having borrowed the expression "Dr. Gow and his friends," which was objected to last week, from Sir Robert Morant, as applied by him to those whom Dr. Gow selected to form a deputation with him to the Board of Education after the meeting of February 29th, 1908. The compression of a summary makes it appear that I applied them to the representatives of various associations who attended that meeting. The deputation, of whom I had the honour to be one, did not profess to be representative in the same sense as the Committee of February 29th; still less would it compare with the later and larger Committee which met under Dr. Gow's presidency on October 10th, and appointed a sub-committee to continue the negotiations with the Board. Since Dr. Gow considered the negotiations closed that sub-committee has not been called together; and the phrase "representative of the teaching profession" still awaits definition. R. F. CHOLMELEY.

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Church Quarterly Review, January, 3/. Edited by the Rev. A. C. Headlam.
- Dictionary of the Bible, 20/ net. Edited by James Hastings, with the co-operation of John A. Selbie, and the assistance of John C. Lambert and Shailer Mathews.
- Hebrew Prophets for English Readers: Vol. I. Amos, Hosea, Isaiah i.-xxxix., and Micah. 2/6 net. Printed in poetical form, with headings and brief annotation, edited by F. H. Woods and F. E. Powell.
- Heurtley (C. A.). The Union between Christ and His People, 2/6 net.
- Lees (Rev. G. Robinson). The Witness of the Wilderness, 3/6 net. Deals with the Bedawin of the desert, their origin, history, home life, strife, religion, and superstitions, in their relation to the Bible, with 23 illustrations from photographs.
- Mackay (Rev. D. S.). The Religion of the Threshold, and other Sermons, 6/ net. With introduction by Prof. H. Black.
- Petrie (W. M. Flinders). Personal Religion in Egypt before Christianity, 2/6 net. In Harper's Library of Living Thought.
- Sanders (H. Martyn). The Message of the Church in Collect. Epistle, and Gospel, Vol. II. Trinity Sunday to All Saints' Day, 3/6 net.
- Schechter (S.). Some Aspects of Rabbinic Theology, 7/6 net. Consists of a course of lectures delivered at various centres, and a series of essays published in The Jewish Quarterly Review.
- Tolstoy (Leo). The Teaching of Jesus, 2/6 net. Translated by L. and A. Maude. Also in Harper's Library of Living Thought.
- Verbum Sempiternum. A reprint of the edition of 1614 known as the Thumb Bible.

Law.

- Konstan's Rating Appeals, 1904-8, 2 vols., 25/ net.
- Marshall (T. W.). A First Book on the Law of Real Property, 5/ net. Based principally upon Book II. of Blackstone's Commentaries.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Guthrie (J.). A Second Book of Drawings, 2/6 net.
- Konody (P. G.), Brockwell (M. W.), and Lippmann (F. W.). National Gallery, Part VI., 1/ net.

Poetry and Drama.

- Garnered Grain: Poetical Annual for 1909, 1/ net. A sequel to 'New Songs,' containing the work of contemporary poets, known and unknown.
- Hugo (Victor). Poèmes choisis, 1822-65, 1/6 net. With a preface by L. Agneltant. In Les Classiques français.
- Kennedy (C. R.). The Winterfeast, 5/ net. A play.
- MacKay (Col. K.). Songs of a Sunlit Land, 3/6 net. A series of poems, some of which have appeared in Australian magazines.
- Molière (J. B. P.). Dom Garcie de Navarre, ou le Prince jaloux, 1/6 net. A comedy, with preface and glossary by Frederic Spencer.
- Payne (J.). Flower of the Thorn, 7/6 net. A book of wayside verse.
- Swinburne (A. C.). Three Plays of Shakespeare, 2/6 net. Deals with 'King Lear,' 'Othello,' and 'Richard II.' In Harper's Library of Living Thought.
- Tudor Facsimile Texts: Gentleness and Nobility; The Three Laws; Wit and Science; Witty and Witless, 17/6 net each.
- Wilstach (P.). Richard Mansfield, the Man and the Actor, 16/ net. With many illustrations.
- Withers (G. H.). A Few Greek and Latin Poems rendered into English Verse.

Music.

- Booth (J.). A Selection of One Hundred Tunes, with Appropriate Hymns.
- Johnstone (J. Alfred). Touch, Phrasing, and Interpretation, 3/6. Intended to give a lucid presentment of certain musical questions.
- Wilkinson (G. W.). Well-Known Piano Solos: How to Play Them with Understanding, Expression, and Effect, 1/. First series, dealing with the works of Sinding, Scarlatti, Paderewski, Handel, and others.

Bibliography.

- Catalogue of Pamphlets, Tracts, Proclamations, Speeches, Sermons, Trials, Petitions, 1506-1700, in the Library of the Honourable Society of Lincoln's Inn.

Philosophy.

- Sociological Review, January, 2/6 net.

History and Biography.

- Anderson (A. O.). Scottish Annals from English Chroniclers, 500 to 1286, 10/6 net.
- Anderson (J. H.). The Franco-German War, July 15-Aug. 18, 1870, 3/ net.
- Boulting (W.). Aeneas Silvius (Aeneas Silvius de' Piccolomini, Pius II.), Orator, Man of Letters, Statesman, and Pope, 12/6 net. With 11 illustrations.
- Buckland (E. S. Lang). Oliver Goldsmith, 1/ net. In Bell's Miniature Series of Great Writers.
- Bury (Prof. J. B.). The Ancient Greek Historians, 7/6 net. Consists of the Lane Lectures delivered at Harvard University in the spring of last year.
- Carlyle (T.). The Life of Frederick the Great, 5/ net. Abridged and edited by Edgar Sanderson, with an introduction by Roger Ingepen, portraits, and a map.
- Carpenter (E.). The Intermediate Sex, 3/6 net. A study of some transitional types of men and women.
- Childe-Pemberton (W. S.). Life of Lord Norton, 1814-1905, Statesman and Philanthropist, 12/ net.
- Colby (C. W.). Canadian Types of the Old Régime, 1608-98, 10/6 net.
- Cowen (J.). Speeches on the Near Eastern Question, Foreign and Imperial Affairs, and on the British Empire, 2/6 net. A collection of speeches, revised by his daughter, dealing mostly with the foreign and world-wide policy of England from 1876 to 1897.
- Crichfield (G. W.). The Rise and Progress of the South American Republics, 2 vols., 25/ net.
- Curtin (J.). The Mongols in Russia, 12/6 net. Intended as a continuation of 'The Mongols,' and is the story of the domination of this race in Russia, after their expulsion from China by the founders of the Ming dynasty. Has frontispiece and map.

- Dundonald (Earl of). The Autobiography of a Seaman, 2/6. New Edition, with 12 illustrations.
- Holland (R. S.). Builders of United Italy, 7/6 net.
- Kincaid (Capt. Sir J.). Adventures in the Rifle Brigade, and Random Shots from a Rifleman, 2/6. New Edition, with illustrations.
- Murdoch (W. G. Blaikie). The Royal Stuarts in their Connection with Art and Letters, 6/ net.
- O'Brien (R. Barry). Dublin Castle and the Irish People, 7/6 net.
- Pierce (W.). An Historical Introduction to the Marprelate Tracts, 10/6 net. A chapter in the evolution of religious and civil liberty in England.
- Recollections of Baron de Frénilly, Peer of France, 1768-1828, 10/ net. Edited, with an introduction and notes, by Arthur Chuquet; translated by Frederic Lees, with portrait.
- Ruvigny and Raineval (Marquis). The Plantagenet Roll of the Blood Royal: The Isobel of Essex Volume, 84/ net.
- Staley (E.). The Tragedies of the Medici, 12/6 net. With 25 illustrations.
- Thomas (E.). Richard Jefferies, his Life and Work, 10/6 net. With illustrations and a map.
- Wedgwood (J. C.). A History of the Wedgwood Family, 42/ net. With pedigrees and numerous illustrations.

Geography and Travel.

- Allen (Horace N.). Things Korean, 3/6 net. A collection of sketches and anecdotes, missionary and diplomatic.
- German Empire, Map with Index, 2/6 net.
- Henderson (Major P. E.). A British Officer in the Balkans, 16/ net. An account of a journey through Dalmatia, Montenegro, Turkey in Austria, Magyarland, Bosnia, and Herzegovina, with 50 illustrations and a map.
- Johnson (Virginia W.). Genoa, the City of Columbus, 5/ net. Illustrated.
- Leland (John). Itinerary in or about the Years 1535-43, Parts VII. and VIII., 12/ net. With appendixes, including extracts from Leland's Collectanea, edited by Lucy Toulmin Smith.
- Maturin (Mrs. Fred). Petticoat Pilgrims on Trek, 7/6 net. An account of a tour in South Africa, told in diary form, with a frontispiece.
- Moore (W.). Boston (Lincolnshire) and its Surroundings, 6d. Also contains an account of the Pilgrim Fathers of New England, and is illustrated with photographs, &c. No. LXII. of the Homeland Handbooks.
- Philips' Ocean Travellers Series of Maps, 21 sorts, 3/6 net each.
- Under Petraia, with some Saunterings, 5/ net. A volume of Italian sketches, with 8 illustrations.
- How to Skate on Rollers, by Rinker, 1/ net.
- Monahan (G. S.). The Textbook of Roller-Skating, 1/ net. A book for novices and experts, with 19 illustrations.
- Woodgate (W. B.). Reminiscences of an Old Sportsman, 15/ net. Including some excellent stories, with 24 illustrations.

Education.

- Burstall (Sara A.). Impressions of American Education in 1908, 4/6.
- Eliot (C. W.). University Administration, 6/ net.
- Gilman, Daniel Coit, 1831-1908. A series of tributes to President Gilman, forming Johns Hopkins University Circular, No. X.
- Harvard University Catalogue, 1908-9.
- Primary Curriculum, 4/ net. Edited and in part written by F. H. Hayward.

Philology.

- Berthon (H. E.) and Starkey (V. G.). Tables synoptiques de Phonologie de l'Ancien Français, 2/6.
- Encyclopædic Dictionary, Part I., 7d. net. Reissue, with a supplementary volume containing new words.
- Kitāb Mu'īd An-ni'am Wa-mubid An-ni'ām, by Taj-ad-Din Abū Nasr 'Abd-al-Wahhāb As-Subki, 12/6 net. Contains the Arabic text with an introduction and notes, edited by David W. Myhrman.
- Linguistic Survey of India: Vol. IX. Indo-Aryan Family, Central Group: Part II. Specimens of the Rājasthānī and Gujarātī, 9/9. Collected and edited by G. A. Grierson.

School-Books.

- Adie (R. H.). Junior Chemistry, 2/6. In the School Junior Series.
- Berthet (E.). Le Douanier de Mer, 2/6. Edited by R. J. E. Bué. In the Oxford Modern French Series.
- Crofts (T. R. N.). Undine und Huldbrand, 1/. Founded on Fouqué's 'Undine.' In Methuen's Simplified German Texts.
- Ingham (P. B.). Die Nothelfer, 1/. Founded on 'Die vierzehn Nothelfer' of W. H. Riehl. Also in Methuen's Simplified German Texts.
- Lewis (E. I.). The Elements of Organic Chemistry, 2/6. In the University Tutorial Series.
- Paterson (W. E.). School Algebra, Complete, 4/; with Answers, 5/.
- Plato, Euthyphro, 2/6. With introduction and notes by St. George Stock.
- Rambles in Bookland, 1/3. An English reading-book for junior forms, edited by C. E. Byles. One of Arnold's Literary Reading-Books.
- Ryan (A. Florence). Der Müller am Rhein, 1/. Founded on 'Das Märchen von dem Rhein und dem Müller Radlauf,' by Clemens Brentano. Another of Methuen's Simplified German Texts.
- Stanley (F. C.). A Course of Hand and Eye Training, 4/6. Illustrated.
- Thomas (W. Jenkyn) and Doughty (E. P.). The New Latin Delectus, Book I., 2/. A selection of easy prose and verse pieces, simplified Livy, &c.
- Thomson (C. Linklater). A First Book in English Literature, Part IV., 2/6. Deals with the period from Beaumont and Fletcher to Dryden.
- Vigny (A. de). Chatterton, 3/ net. Edited by E. Lauvrière. Another of the Oxford Higher French Series.

Science.

- Chemical Manufacturers' Directory of England, Wales, and Scotland, with some of the Firms in Ireland, for 1909, 2/6 net.
- Combe (A.). Intestinal Auto-Intoxication, 10/6 net.
- Cramp (W.) and Smith (C. F.). Vectors and Vector

Diagrams applied to the Alternating-Current Circuit, 7/6 net. With examples of their use in the theory of transformers, &c.

- Finn (F.). Wild Beasts of the World, Part VIII., 1/ net. With coloured illustrations by L. Sargent, C. E. Swan, and W. Austen.
- Herschell (G.). Soured Milk and Pure Cultures of Lactic Acid Bacilli in the Treatment of Disease, 1/6 net. New Edition.
- Law (E. F.). Alloys and their Industrial Applications, 12/6 net.
- Laxton's Price-Book for Architects, Builders, Engineers, and Contractors, 1909, 4/.
- Leather, Technical and Practical, No. I., 7/ per annum. A monthly journal for all engaged in the leather industries.
- Macdonald (J.). Stevens' Book of the Farm, Vol. II., 10/6. Deals with every branch of agriculture. Fifth Edition, revised.
- Mathewson (C. H.). First Principles of Chemical Theory, 4/6 net.
- Moyer (J. A.). The Steam Turbine, 17/ net.
- Nisbet (J.). Our Forests and Woodlands, 3/6 net. New Edition in the Haddon Hall Library.
- Oberg (E.). Handbook of Small Tools, 12/6 net.
- Richards (E. H.). Laboratory Notes on Industrial Water Analysis, 2/6 net.
- Science Progress in the Twentieth Century, January, 5/ net. A quarterly journal edited by N. H. Alcock and W. G. Freeman.
- Sluss (J. W.). Emergency Surgery, 15/ net.
- Strong (F. F.). High Frequency Currents, 12/ net.
- System of Medicine, Vol. V., Diseases of the Alimentary Tract, 30/ net. Edited by William Osler and Thomas McCrae.
- Winslow (C. E. A. and A. R.). The Systematic Relationships of the Coccaceæ, 8vo, 10/6 net.
- Wright (H. J. and W. P.). Beautiful Flowers and How to Grow Them, Part VII., 1/ net. With coloured illustrations.

Fiction.

- Austen (Jane). Emma, 2 vols.; Mansfield Park, 2 vols.; Northanger Abbey; Persuasion, 3/6 net each. All with coloured illustrations by A. Wallis Mills. Large-type edition in the St. Martin's Illustrated Library of Standard Authors.
- Blondelle-Burton (J.). Traitor and True, 6d. New Edition.
- Brady (C. T.). Little France; or, The Quiberon Touch, 6/. Concerned with Wolfe and the Plains of Abraham.
- Brooke (H.). The Fool of Quality; or, The History of Henry, Earl of Moreland, 2 vols., 2/ net. With introduction by Francis Conlts. In the New Pocket Library.
- Campbell (A.). The Combat, 6/. A tragedy of the countryside.
- Dawe (Carlton). The New Andromeda, 6/.
- Falkner (J. Meade). Moonfleet, 7d. net. A capital story of adventure. In Nelson's Library.
- Hall (H. Fielding). One Immortality, 6/.
- Hill (Ethel). The Unloved, 6/. The story of an idealist surrounded by sordid conditions.
- Kernahan (Mrs. Coulson). The Graven Image, 6/. A story relating the many adventures of a beautiful young girl who, thrown on her own resources, determines to fight against adverse fortune, and to unravel the mystery of 'The Graven Image' which plays an important part in the family affairs of her lover.
- Lang (W. H.). The Thunder of the Hoofs, 6/. A sporting novel, placed partly in England and partly in Australia.
- McCarthy (Justin). Julian Revelstone, 6/. The wealthy hero is the lineal descendant and heir of a self-exiled branch of an old English family, who comes to Europe with the resolve to buy back his ancestral estate as a stranger.
- Meade (L. T.). The Stormy Petrel, 6/. The story is placed in Ireland in the days of the potato famine.
- Moffat (E. B.). John Broome's Wife, 6/. A story of modern life.
- North (L.). Syrinx, 6/. The heroine is the central figure in a Bohemian coterie.
- Paternoster (G. Sidney). The Hand of the Spoiler, 6/. A story of crime and its detection, in which the regeneration of a young University man bred up to crime is set forth.
- Tweeddale (V.). The Quenchless Flame, 6/.
- Webbing (P.). The Story of Virginia Perfect, 6/. A tale of modern London life.
- White (F. M.). A Crime on Canvas, 6/. A story of mystery.

General Literature.

- Anti-Socialist, No. I., 1d.
- County Councils, Municipal Corporations, Urban District, Rural District, and Parish Councils Companion, Magisterial Directory, Poor Law Authorities and Local Government Year-Book, 1909. 8vo, 10/6.
- Dadelsen (E. J. von). New Zealand Official Year-Book, 1908. Humane Review, January.
- Hungary of To-day, by Members of the Hungarian Government, 7/6 net. Edited by Percy Alden, with numerous illustrations.
- Le Gallienne (R.). Little Dinners with the Sphinx, and other Prose Fancies, 6/.
- Powell (E. T.). The Essentials of Self-Government (England and Wales), 4/6 net. A survey of the electoral mechanism as the foundation of political power and a potent instrument of intellectual and social evolution.
- Pratt (E. A.). The Policy of Licensing Justices, 1/ net.
- Reich (Emil). Nights with the Gods, 6/. A series of views on present-day affairs supposed to be held by great spirits of the past, chiefly Hellenes.
- Royal Navy List and Naval Recorder, January, 10/.
- Thom's Official Directory of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland for 1909, 21/.
- Pamphlets.
- Alexander (J.). Ecclesiastical Finance Reform and City Churches, 2d.
- Be Loyal to your Church, by a Layman, 4d.
- Collinson (J.). The Fate of the Fur Seal, 2d. Third Edition.
- Hampstead Council of Social Welfare: Annual Report of the Executive Committee, 1908.
- Knott (J.). The Origin of Syphilis and the Invention of its Name. Reprinted from the New York Medical Journal.

Rosebery (Lord), Thrift, 6d. net. An address delivered at the annual meeting of the Edinburgh Savings Bank, December 28 last. Reprinted from The Scotsman.
 Sleeping Sickness: How to Avoid Infection. With an account of Glossina palpalis, and illustrations of this and other biting flies.

FOREIGN.

Poetry and the Drama.

Gennep (A. van), La Question d'Homère: les Poèmes homériques, l'Archéologie, et la Poésie populaire, 6fr. 75.
 In Les Hommes et les Idées.
 Jiriczek (O.), Viktorianische Dichtung: Die Lesarten der ersten Fassungen, 1m. 20. Deals with the Brownings, Tennyson, and Dante and Christina Rossetti.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

Thieme (U.) und Becker (F.), Allgemeines Lexikon der bildenden Künstler: Vol. II. Antonio da Monza—Bassan, 32m. For notice of the first volume of this important work see Athen., Sept. 19, 1903, p. 341.

Philosophy.

Palhoriès (F.), Rosmini, 7fr. 50.

History and Biography.

Brun (P.), Savinien de Cyrano Bergerac, Gentilhomme parisien, l'Histoire et la Légende, 12fr. Part of the Bibliothèque du Vieux Paris.

Dufay (P.), Victor Hugo à vingt Ans: Glanes romantiques, 3fr. 50.

Masson (P. M.), Une Vie de Femme au dix-huitième Siècle: Madame de Tencin, 1682-1749, 3fr. 50.

Suau (P.), La France à Madagascar: Histoire politique et religieuse d'une Colonisation, 5fr.

Geography and Travel.

Hopital (J. L'), Italica: Impressions et Souvenirs, 3fr. 50.

Sion (J.), Les Paysans de la Normandie orientale: Étude géographique, 12fr.

Philology.

Cartault (Prof.), Tibulle et les Auteurs du Corpus Tibullianum: Texte établi, 7fr.

Mélanges Havet: Philologie et Linguistique, 20fr. Offered to Prof. Havet on his sixty-ninth birthday.

Science.

Flammarion (C.), La Planète Mars et ses Conditions d'Habitabilité, Vol. II., 12fr.

Fiction.

Leroux (G.), Le Parfum de la Dame en noir, 3fr. 50. Another instalment of the adventures of the detective who made 'The Mystery of the Yellow Room' a great success.

* * * All Books received at the Office up to Wednesday Morning will be included in this List unless previously noted. Publishers are requested to state prices when sending Books.

Literary Gossip.

MR. HARTLEY WITHERS, the City representative of The Times, has set himself to explain 'The Meaning of Money' in a volume which Messrs. Smith & Elder will publish next Friday.

ON the same date they will issue a new novel by Mr. J. C. Snaith, 'Araminta,' in which the author relates a comedy springing from the arrival in Mayfair of a country cousin with the mind of a milkmaid and the face of a Gainsborough duchess.

THE chief feature of the forthcoming number of The Classical Review (Vol. XXIII. No. 1) is an article on 'The Learner's Point of View,' describing the experiences of an Indian official compelled to master many languages, some destitute of any written literature, and criticizing the various methods of teaching languages, especially Latin and Greek.

SIR C. P. LUCAS has completed a 'History of Canada, 1763-1812,' which the Oxford University Press is publishing immediately. The volume ranges with the author's study of the Canadian War of 1812, issued three years ago.

THE history of the palace of Fontainebleau forms the background for a popular biography of the women who dwelt there in a new book to be entitled 'Fair Women at Fontainebleau,' by Mr. Frank Hamel, author of 'Famous French Salons.' The work will be published shortly by Mr. Eveleigh Nash.

A NEW "colour-book" promised by Messrs. A. & C. Black this spring is 'Inns of Court,' with pictures by Mr. Gordon Home, and text by Mr. Cecil Headlam.

The same firm are issuing 'The Motor Routes of England: Southern Section,' the first instalment of a series by Mr. Gordon Home, which includes notes for drivers, details of distances on specially prepared maps, and interesting objects on and off the road; 'London in the Nineteenth Century,' by Walter Besant and other contributors; and 'An Angler's Season,' by Mr. W. E. Hodgson, well known for his books on fishing.

Two of the Scottish History Society's volumes are in a forward stage. In the 'Records of the Commission of the General Assembly for 1650-53,' edited by Dr. James Christie, with a preface by Lord Guthrie, several of Cromwell's letters are printed. The other volume is 'A Selection of the Forfeited Estates Papers preserved in the Register House and Elsewhere,' edited by Mr. A. H. Millar.

MR. SIDNEY LEE was chosen this year by the Brontë Society to deliver the customary address to the public after the annual meeting, which took place last Saturday at Harrogate. Mr. Lee's subject was 'Charlotte Brontë in London.' After a brief comparison of the Brontë Society's efforts with those of the Trustees of Shakespeare's Birthplace, Mr. Lee sketched the relations of Charlotte Brontë with her publisher, the late George Smith, whose career and character he warmly eulogized from personal knowledge.

IN connexion with the series of lectures on journalism now being given in Trinity College, Dublin, Mr. H. W. Massingham lectured last week in the Regent's Hall, Trinity College, on 'The Duty of the Press.' Mr. Massingham referred in particular to what he called the "New Journalism," the organizers of which, in his opinion, set themselves out to create the "newspaper habit" in a vast number of persons of all ages and classes. Mr. Birrell, who also spoke, was inclined to be sceptical as to the influence of the press, especially in political affairs.

THE third volume of Dr. Copinger's 'History of the Manors of Suffolk' is now in the binders' hands, and will be issued to subscribers in the course of the next few days. This volume deals with the Hundreds of Carlford and Colneis Hartismere and Hoxne, of which no history has previously appeared. The manors of Ipswich are included in this volume; Only 150 copies have been printed for sale. The fourth volume, treating of the manors in the Hundreds of Lackford, Lothingland, Mutford, and Loes, is in a forward state.

THE collection of Civil War tracts and newspapers, forming part of the library of Lord Polwarth, which Messrs. Sotheby will sell on February 15th and three following days, is probably the most extensive in existence, outside the Thomasson Collection in the British Museum. Lord Polwarth's series was at one time in the possession of George Rose, the well-known statesman and political writer (1744-1818).

MRS. ELEANOR KIRKMAN GRAY writes:—

"While thanking your reviewer of 'Philanthropy and the State' (Athen., Dec. 26th) for his able and sympathetic notice of my late husband's book, I should like to point out that he was a convinced Socialist, and neither an 'Individualist' nor a 'moderate man,' as the reviewer seems to think."

TO Glasgow University Library has been added, by an anonymous donor, the collection of Celtic books which once belonged to Dr. Macbain of Inverness. The bound MS. of his etymological dictionary of Gaelic has also been acquired.

THE cause of girls' education has lost one of its ablest and most active workers, Miss Margaret Gardiner, who has been forced, after a brave struggle against failing health, to resign the headship of St. Felix School, Southwold, which was entirely of her creation. Since its foundation in 1897, her originality and enterprise have done great things. Miss Gardiner, as the daughter of our old contributor the distinguished historian, and granddaughter of Edward Irving, brought rare instincts of mind and spirit to bear upon her work, and a host of old pupils and friends will hear with regret of her resignation.

MR. CHARLES GODFREY writes from Osborne regarding our review on the 16th inst. of 'Modern Geometry,' by him and Mr. Siddons:—

"Your reviewer expresses the opinion that the pentagon construction might, with advantage, appear in a future edition of this book. This construction is given in the more recent editions of the elementary geometry by the same authors."

MANY readers will be glad to hear that Messrs. Smith & Elder promise for next week a new and cheaper edition of Leslie Stephen's 'Hours in a Library,' in three volumes.

THE poet Karl Rethwisch, whose death at the age of seventy is reported from Altona, wrote chiefly in Plattdeutsch. His best-known works are 'Weihnachtsbilder' and 'Knospen.'

THE increase in the number of foreign students at the German Universities over those of last winter (from 3,869 to 4,077) is interesting to note, as the stricter regulations for matriculation introduced in 1907 had led to a falling-off. There were 1,584 Russians, 706 Austro-Hungarians, 302 Swiss, 333 Americans, 165 English, 61 French, 172 Asiatics (chiefly Japanese studying medicine), and 346 from Bulgaria, Servia, and Roumania. The most popular faculties are the medical and philosophical.

WE have to announce the death on the 20th inst. of Prof. T. H. Aschehoug, aged eighty-six, for many years the most prominent Norwegian Jurist, as well as a leading politician, economist, and journalist. He published a number of legal and economic works regarded as of standard value.

A RECENT Government Publication of interest is Scotch Education, Circular (1d.). One other we name under Fine-Art Gossip.

NEXT week we shall pay special attention to Science, including 'Research Notes,' 'Medical Books,' &c.

SCIENCE

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Mines and Minerals of the British Empire. By Ralph S. G. Stokes. (Arnold.)—The story that Mr. Stokes tells—and tells with no little skill—of the mineral wealth of the “British Empire oversea,” will interest many readers who are neither practical miners nor speculators in mines; and his book is in no degree a guide to investment. He has visited most of the sites of mining industry described; but, although in his tour of inspection he travelled 35,000 miles, it was impracticable to visit every field of consequence. Among the regions unvisited were Mysore, Queensland, Klondike, and Rhodesia; and in describing these Mr. Stokes has availed himself of the publications of “Governmental and other trustworthy authorities.” It was found impossible to compress into one volume of about 400 pages detailed accounts of all the mining processes adopted throughout the British Colonies; but by economy in words the author is enabled to give a concise yet lucid account of the principal fields of mining industry. In all cases the geology of the surrounding country is sketched, and “the characteristics of ore-occurrence and methods of exploitation” are described, and we believe that the author’s hope will be realized that the work “may be of service to those concerned in the practice and science of mining.” It will also be found useful to the mineralogist, for Mr. Stokes in most cases supplies a list of the minerals associated with the ores or mineral substances extracted for commercial purposes; and as he carefully gives the correct mineralogical specific names, rather than local terms, the value of his lists is increased, because the information they contain is at once available. It would have been well—at any rate, it would have made the book more attractive to the general reader—if short explanations had been added of terms in general use in the mining world in the getting and preparation of ores and mineral substances, either above or below the surface. This might have been done with the addition of six pages or so to the volume.

It will astonish many readers to realize how great has been the “influence of mineral production in the economic development of the British Empire,” and the expansion in the industry of late years, and notably in the old mines of India, Burmah, and Malaya, has been immense, and is still increasing. The total mining output of the Empire for the year 1906 was valued at about 200,000,000*l.*, and the number of employees—white, black, and yellow, of all ages and both sexes—was estimated at about 2,000,000, so that each person engaged produced about 100*l.* per annum. Of these huge totals of value and labour the United Kingdom itself furnishes more than half.

Mr. Stokes provides some curious items of information concerning unexpected uses of certain mineral products, and strange beliefs held by miners: in India, for instance, we find “ladies’ mica hat, very elegant, decorated with flowers, 10 rupees”; while in Ceylon it is held by the natives that precious stones grow in the alluvial deposits, and that flawed stones and specimens which exhibit asterism have been in the ground too long—are in fact over-ripe. In all old mining countries many superstitions cluster round mines and minerals, and die out very slowly. The processes of formation of various mineral deposits have long perplexed scientific investigators, and still furnish unsolved problems to the geologist. Such a problem is presented by the cylindrical pipe of calcite-cemented tin ore at Lahat in Malaya; but there are many others, e.g., the genesis of graphite in Ceylon, and the occurrence of petroleum in sandstone in Burma. The author is prevented by want of space from discussing in detail these and similar questions; but he epitomizes the views at present held, and refers to the treatises, papers, and reports in which the questions are treated.

Considerable attention is devoted to the mines or open-air workings of mica, plum-bago, sapphires, and asbestos, which, like tin, nickel, gold, and diamonds, are “products almost essentially British.” But the most popular chapters are likely to be those which describe the more exciting phases of mining life, as shown in the many extraordinarily rich goldfields to which rushes of prospectors and miners, or would-be miners, have been made since the middle of the nineteenth century. An interesting account is presented of the growth of mining in the Transvaal and in the Yukon territory, the narrative of the Klondike alluvial gold-field being given in the words of Robert Henderson, its discoverer, who is still working in the country.

Efficiency of administration, and economy in working, are considerations upon which the financial success of all mining fields largely depends, and these topics are fully discussed in the chapters devoted to Transvaal gold-mining. The possibilities of white, native, and Chinese labour, and their comparative advantages, are studied, and some of the existing conditions of affairs are explained.

Electro-Metallurgy. By John B. C. Kershaw. (Constable & Co.)—This book gives us the impression that it was written and published before the author was quite ready with his materials; it deals largely with projects and experiments the results of which were, at the end of 1906, inconclusive. Frequently we read, “It is as yet too early to say,” or the author tells us that he has been unable to obtain information vital to the satisfactory construction of a treatise on the subject. Notwithstanding this, Mr. Kershaw has produced a book which contains a large amount of interesting information, and the present issue will no doubt serve well as the basis on which to found a second edition of real value to all interested in electro-metallurgy. In a work of this sort it is perhaps useless to look for any high literary standard, but the author should look to his grammar. The name Maudslay is misspelt, and so is Trollhättan, which, moreover, is not in Norrland. The author should carefully revise the early history of aluminium, for the statements on p. 7 and pp. 18 and 19 are anything but clear, and the confusion is probably increased by a misprint in one of the dates. He should also make up his mind whether he prefers bisulphide or disulphide; and in describing the Heroult furnace it would be as well to make use, in the text, of the reference letters which appear on the illustration. On p. 213 we are told that a firm “has decided to erect” certain plant, but in the next line we read that the plant is already at work.

In an interesting account of the first copper refining by electricity, the electrolyte is said on p. 104 to have been circulated by syphons and gravity; but on p. 110, where Elkington’s process is unnecessarily described over again, the circulation is completed by means of a pump. It would be worth while to find out which was correct, for the origin of the electrolytic process is of permanent interest, which cannot be said of many of the experiments in various branches of electro-metallurgy on which a good deal of space is wasted here.

We do not wish to convey the impression that the book in its present state is devoid of value, for, as we have already said, it contains much information. There are, for instance, accounts of the reduction, manufacture, and uses of aluminium, the most interesting feature of which is perhaps the thermit or weldite process, in which powdered aluminium is used, and by means of which so great a heat is generated that defective castings, broken ships’ stems, and other heavy masses of metal, as well as the joints in tram rails, can be welded in situ.

A matter of special interest to some of our readers will be the use of aluminium plates instead of lithographic stones. This method is, we believe, making considerable headway, especially in colour-work, as the plates can be used on rotary presses. The extraction and refining of gold and silver form the subject of another chapter.

In reading of the preparation of calcium carbide and the generation of acetylenegases we learn that “carbide” was known half a century ago, but not until its rediscovery simultaneously in Paris and in America forty years later, during experiments with the electric furnace, was its commercial employment possible, and now, thanks to the inventor of the dynamo, some 100,000 tons of carbide are used annually. The author does not, by the way, deal with small portable generators for motor-car and cycle lamps, for which room could be made by omitting the numerous descriptions of acetylene generators which cannot be manufactured as their patents are invalid. One of the most interesting applications of this gas is in the oxy-acetylene blowpipe, by means of which a marvellous degree of heat can be applied over a very circumscribed area. This is used extensively for cutting, or rather melting, through thick metal plates.

Carborundum is another product of the electrical furnace. It was discovered during attempts to make diamonds; it is nearly as hard as the diamond, and its efficacy as a grinding material is about three times that of emery. Some 20,000 or 30,000 tons of “scrap tin” are produced every year in the “canneries” in the United States, and the value of the tin recovered by chemical means from this “waste” is from 70,000*l.* to 100,000*l.*

The useful glossary at the end of the book should be improved by the addition of the terms “ohm,” “inertia,” “resistance,” and “inductance,” which do not figure in it, though the last phenomenon is described under its older name of “self-induction.”

ANTHROPOLOGICAL NOTES.

EARLY last year the local newspaper of Soissons announced the discovery at Braine of a prehistoric sepulture. Upon inquiry, M. O. Vauvillé was informed that a stone cist had been unearthed, containing four skeletons, a vessel of brown earthenware, and a flint hatchet; but all these, except the hatchet, had been destroyed by the workmen. Numerous discoveries of allées couvertes having been made in the same neighbourhood, this is much to be regretted; and the circumstance led to a correspondence between the Society of Anthropology of Paris and the French Government. M. Viviani, Minister of Labour, acting on behalf of the Minister of Public Works, addressed a circular to the prefects and the engineers of bridges and causeways, urging upon their attention the provisions of the law relating to the preservation of antiquities. The Minister of the Interior also called the attention of the municipalities to the subject. Both Ministers received the thanks of the Society for their action. The Society has also taken steps to enlist the co-operation of the educational authorities.

The Society has appointed a committee to establish a rational terminology in the anatomical description of human teeth, as the result of a communication by M. G. Mahé, dentist of the hospitals.

MM. Schleicher Frères of 61, Rue des Saints-Pères, Paris, have issued an excellent catalogue of objects of the Stone, Bronze, and Iron Ages, illustrated by twelve plates of typical specimens, mainly from the collections of the late M. Eugène Boban, and of MM. du Chambon, Émile Collin, and others. They are arranged according to the classification of M. de Mortillet, who has examined and verified them.

On the 7th, 8th, and 9th of July next the Society of Anthropology of Paris will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of its foundation. On the evening of the 6th an informal reception will be held. The meeting on the morning of the 7th will be presided over by the Minister of Public Instruction, when an address will be delivered by Prof. Édouard Cuyer, the President of the Society, and Dr. L. Manouvrier, the Secretary-General, will make a report on the scientific activity of the Society since its foundation. The foreign delegates will then be invited to make reports on the state of the anthropological sciences in their countries, and the Minister will close the proceedings with a discourse. On Thursday, the 8th, visits will be paid to the museums, and a reception will be held at the Hôtel de Ville. On the evening of Friday, the 9th, a banquet will end the celebration.

Among recent deaths of old and valued members of the Society are those of Prof. Terrier and Prof. Cornil, both of the faculty of medicine.

M. G. Variot, physician to the Hôpital des Enfants-assistés, has pursued some researches into the rate of growth of new born children in height and weight, with the result that he has arrived at the conclusion that these elements are independent of each other, and that the difference between them is increased where a pathological condition exists, a fact which may furnish useful indications to medical men. M. Marcel Baudouin, in calling attention to the necessity of distinguishing between measurements taken upright and those taken lying down, remarked that this accounted for the contradictory statements as to the height of Napoleon I.

The quinquennial prize of 200*l.* bequeathed by M. Angrand for the best work in Americanist literature published during the five years has been awarded to M. Seler of Berlin. The commission for awarding the prize consists of two representatives of the Society of Anthropology of Paris, and one each of the Royal Anthropological Institute of Great Britain and the Anthropological Societies of other countries.

Among the latest contributions to anthropology of the lamented Dr. E. T. Hamy are a note on a cranium from the Neolithic camp of Chassey (Saône-et-Loire), and a notice of the life and works of Charles Arthaud of Pont-à-Mousson (who died in 1791, at the age of forty-three), prefixed to two hitherto unknown works of that author on the aborigines of Santo Domingo: one a pamphlet of thirteen pages, printed at the Imprimerie Royale du Cap in 1786, entitled 'Recherches sur la Constitution des Naturels du Pays, sur leurs Arts, leur In- dustrie, et les Moyens de leur Subsistance'; the other an unpublished manuscript in Prof. Hamy's library, dated 1790, 'Sur le Phallus des Naturels du Pays.' Arthaud was in 1785 the first president of a club of Philadelphians instituted for the study of the colony and the promotion of its welfare.

SOCIETIES.

SOCIETY OF ANTIQUARIES.—Jan. 7.—Dr. C. H. Read, President, in the chair.—This being an evening appointed for the election of Fellows, no papers were read. Mr. C. Dawson exhibited a bronze-gilt stirrup found at Framshill Park, near Stroud, co. Glouce.—The Director exhibited a similar stirrup found in London; also an iron ball and three bullets, a bil head, a gisarm, and an iron axe-head found in the Thames at Brentwood.—Mr. H. Plowman exhibited another iron axe-head found in the Thames.—Mr. W. King (through Mr. Reginald Smith) exhibited the seal of Thomas Norwich, last Prior of Prittlewell, 1520.—The following were elected Fellows: Dr. M. R. James, Sir W. Edward Davidson, and Messrs. J. N. Bankes, P. M. Johnston, H. C. Smith, F. W. Bull, E. O. Pleydell Bouverie, E. C. R. Armstrong, C. L. Kingsford, A. P. Mandslay, and Ralph Griffin.

Jan. 14.—Dr. C. H. Read, President, in the chair.—Mr. A. Trice Martin presented the annual report of the work which had been carried on in 1908 at Caerwent, the site of Venta Silurum. He said that the work had been executed mainly under the supervision of Dr. Ashby and Mr. Hudd, and regretted that the former was not present to give an account of what had been done. It had consisted in the excavation of three large houses or blocks abutting on the main street between the west and east gates. Parts of these houses were in all probability shops. To the west of them there was discovered a building that was undoubtedly a temple. It consisted of a cella, surrounded by a wall, which had probably formed the podium, with a court and entrance to the south from the main street. The plan was not unlike that of the temple at Lydney. To the north of the temple another house had been excavated, with two large yards or gardens, the one on the west having an imposing entrance or porch. Among the notable finds were another hoard of coins, most of them minimi; an unusually large amount of "Samian" pottery; and a small stone figure of a seated goddess, with a palm in one hand, and a globe or pomegranate in the other. The execution, which was extremely rude, recalled that of the stone head found some years ago in the so-called "shrine" in the south-west quarter of the city. The report was illustrated by lantern photographs.

Mr. Hudd added some remarks on the finds that were exhibited, and showed some drawings of stone figures discovered in Gaul that resembled the Caerwent goddess.—Mr. Clement Reid reported that some species not hitherto met with in Roman excavations had come to light among the seeds sifted out by Mr. Lyell from the mud of the wells; and there was an interesting discussion (in which Mr. Walters took part) on the contradictory evidence as to the date of "Samian" ware afforded by the coins associated with the finds.

Mr. R. Garraway Rice exhibited a flint of human shape found in the Thames, but probably from British Honduras originally; a Roman bronze statuette found at Pulborough; and sixteen Gothic letters of latten from a monumental slab found in London.

Jan. 21.—Sir Edward Brabrook, V.P., in the chair.—Dr. Philip Norman, Treasurer, and Mr. Ernest A. Mann read a joint paper on an ancient conduit-head at Chapel Street, Bloomsbury, with notes on the history and topography of the Grey Friars' water supply. This forms the sequel to a paper read by Dr. Norman in 1899, and published in Archæologia, vol. lvi. part ii. Therein from the Grey Friars' Register (a manuscript now at the British Museum), he had given a detailed topographical description, showing the original course of the pipes that supplied the Grey Friars' Convent, Newgate Street, with water, and had been able to prove that an ancient structure, now under ground at the back of a house in Queen Square, Bloomsbury, was the remoter "head" whence the supply was drawn, the water being carried almost due east to the top of Leather Lane, down which it passed, and then along Holborn to Newgate Street. He had also shown from the minute-books of Christ's Hospital, the foundation which succeeded to the buildings and the water supply of the Grey Friars, that a nearer conduit-head mentioned in the Grey Friars' Register, and at first, like that just mentioned, in the open country, was disappeared through the construction of Chapel Street, Lamb's Conduit Street. At the back of a house in that thoroughfare Mr. Mann has recently been fortunate enough to find, under the flooring of a room, this near "head," described in later documents as the "White Conduit," and spoken of by the early chronicler as "Caput aquæ quod propinquius est, unde pro maiore parte aquam habemus, parum autem de capite remotiori." Of this he exhibited measured drawings, placed, for comparison, by those of the remoter or "Chimney Conduit." A plan was shown of the approximate course of the pipes as laid in the thirteenth century, with the relative positions of the two conduit-heads; and, by kind permission of the authorities of Christ's Hospital, a plan drawn in 1676. Some interesting extracts bearing on the subject were also given from the books of Christ's Hospital, so that we now have fairly complete knowledge of the Grey Friars' water system, which, as the town spread, had gradually to be abandoned, but not before the earlier years of the eighteenth century.

Mr. E. N. Baynes exhibited two small urns and a glass beaker and bowl, all of Saxon date, found at Eastry, Kent.

ROYAL NUMISMATIC.—Jan. 21.—Sir Henry H. Howorth, President, in the chair.—Mr. Thomas Bliss exhibited a series of pennies of the Mercian kings Offa, Coenwulf, Ciolwulf I., and Berhtulf.—Dr. Arthur Evans showed a series of medals and coins by Abraham and Thomas Simon, which included medals of Lord Inchiquin and Elizabeth Cleypole, the crown and half-crown of Cromwell, and the "Reddite" crown of Charles II.; and Miss Helen Farquhar clichés in silver-foil of the broad and half-crown of Charles II., which were also the work of Thomas Simon. These exhibitions were in connexion with the paper which was read by Mr. W. J. Hocking on 'Simon's Dies in the Royal Mint Museum, with Notes on the Early History of Coinage by Machinery.' The first portion of the paper dealt with the mechanical methods employed in Italy in the earlier half of the sixteenth century; the establishment in Paris, in 1551, of a full set of coining apparatus; and the coinage of mill money in England, 1561-72. In connexion with the coinage of Italy Mr. Hocking mentioned Bramante, whose name is the first associated with the screw press; Leonardo da Vinci, who placed on record notes and sketches relating to the method of cutting disks for medals and coins; and Benvenuto Cellini, who worked for Popes Clement VII. and Paul III. and for Cosmo de' Medici, and who used both the hammer and the screw for the production of his fine works. Machinery for striking money was first set up in France in the second half of the sixteenth century, under the direction of Béchot, the Graveur-Général, the machine and tools used being those invented by an Augsburg jeweller named Max Schwab. Aubin Olivier was the first to suggest the placing of lettering on the rim of the coin as a preventive against clipping. The introduction of machinery for striking money in England is to be attributed to a Frenchman named Eloye Mestrell, who, under the patronage of the Queen and her Council, installed his new process at the Tower Mint in 1561. It was, however, not encouraged by the principal officers of the Mint, and in consequence was used only for pieces of small size. Mestrell having been condemned to death for certain malpractices in connexion with the making of dies, the process was for a time suspended. Mr. Hocking defined the true meaning of the term "mill money," which is now generally applied to the graining of the rims of the coins. This was not its original meaning, as it was applied to all money struck by the screw, from the circumstance that the necessary power for driving the machinery was, in the first instance, supplied by a mill. The place in Paris where the process was first installed was called the Hôtel des Monnaies du Moulin. The second portion of this paper, which will be read at the meeting of the Society on the 18th of February, will deal with the methods of Briot and Blondeau and with Simon's dies in the Royal Mint.

ZOOLOGICAL.—Jan. 12.—Prof. J. Rose Bradford, V.P., in the chair.—The Secretary read a report on the additions to the menagerie during December, 1908.—Dr. H. G. Plimmer, Pathologist to the Society, exhibited the intestinal tracts of two snakes that had recently died in the Society's gardens, and called attention to the condition of inflammation present in them.—Prof. E. A. Minchin read a paper entitled 'Observations on the Flagellates parasitic in the Blood of Freshwater Fishes.'—Dr. W. A. Cunning-ton read a paper by Prof. G. O. Sars, entitled 'Zoological Results of the Third Tanganyika Expedition, 1904-5: Report on the Copepoda.'—Mr. T. Goodey sent a paper on 'The Gonadial Grooves of a Medusa, Aurelia aurita.'—The Secretary, on behalf of Mr. A. Erwin Brown, Secretary of the Zoological Society of Philadelphia, read a paper entitled 'The Tuberculin Test in Monkeys, with Notes on the Temperature of Mammals.' The paper described the methods and results of experiments which have recently been carried out at the Zoological Gardens of Philadelphia with the view of suppressing tuberculosis in monkeys.—Mr. F. E. Beddard presented a paper by Prof. R. Collett 'On Balana glacialis and its Capture in Recent Years in the North Atlantic by Norwegian Whalers.'

GEOLOGICAL.—Jan. 13.—Prof. W. J. Sollas, President, in the chair.—Messrs. T. R. H. Garrett and A. Tulip were elected Fellows; and Dr. Bundjirô Kôto of Tokyo and Prof. Johan H. L. Vogt of Christiania were elected Foreign Members. Dr. Aubrey Strahan and Mr. J. V. Elsdon were elected Auditors.

The President announced that the Council at its meeting that afternoon, had passed the following resolution: "The Council of the Geological Society desires to express to the relatives of Prof. H. G. Seeley, F.R.S., its profound sorrow in the death of one who had been a Fellow for nearly half a century, had frequently served on the Council of the Society, and, for so many years continued to enrich the literature of geology and palæontology by numerous original researches in these sciences."

The following communications were read:—'On Labradorite-Norite with Porphyritic Labradorite,' by Prof. Johan H. L. Vogt,—and 'On the Genus Loxonema, with Descriptions of New Proterozoic Species,' by Mrs. Jane Longstaff (née Donald).

ENTOMOLOGICAL.—Jan. 20.—Annual Meeting.—The following officers and Council were elected for the session 1909-10: President, Dr. F. A. Dixey; Treasurer, Mr. A. H. Jones; Librarian, Mr. G. C. Champion; Secretaries, Mr. H. Rowland-Brown and Commander J. J. Walker; other members of the Council, Dr. T. A. Chapman, Mr. A. Harrison, Mr. Selwyn Image, Dr. K. Jordan, Dr. G. B. Longstaff, Mr. H. Main, Mr. G. A. K. Marshall, Prof. E. B. Poulton, Mr. R. Shelford, Mr. Rowland E. Turner, Mr. J. W. Tutt, and Mr. C. O. Waterhouse.—The outgoing President, Mr. C. O. Waterhouse, having alluded to the loss the Society had sustained in the death of six Fellows, took as the subject of his address 'The Claws of Insects.' After briefly describing the various forms of insects' claws, he suggested as a subject for investigation, which he hoped entomologists would take up as a study, "Are these forms of claw merely the result of heredity without any special object, or is there evidence to show that the different forms are adapted to particular modes of life—in fact, have been developed to meet special needs?" He then proceeded to show by numerous examples that closely allied species often had dissimilar claws; that insects with different habits had the same form of claw; and that others with different forms of claw seemed to have the same habits. The question therefore appeared to be still an open one requiring careful investigation, and he appealed for more field observation with a view to solve this and many other problems.

METEOROLOGICAL.—Jan. 20.—Annual Meeting.—Dr. H. R. Mill, President, in the chair.—The Council in their Report referred to the increasing interest in meteorology which is apparent throughout the country, and they believe that this is in some measure due to the scheme of lectures inaugurated by the Society. They also reported a further increase in the roll of Fellows.—Dr. Mill devoted his Presidential Address to 'Some Aims and Efforts of the Society in its Relation to the Public and to Meteorological Science.'—Mr. H. Mellish was elected President for the ensuing year, and Mr. F. Campbell Bayard and Commander F. W. Caborne Secretaries.

BRITISH NUMISMATIC.—Jan. 20.—Mr. W. J. Andrew, President, in the chair.—The Rev. F. J. Eld and Messrs. W. S. Churchill, J. Cooper, A. R. Peacey, and F. A. Sly were elected Members.—Miss Helen Farquhar read the first part of a paper on 'The Portraiture of our Stuart Monarchs on their Coins and Medals.' The paper was accompanied by lantern-slides, and, like its forerunners on the medallic portraiture of the Tudors, was copiously illustrated by coins and medals of the period. The reigns dealt with were those of James I., Charles I., and Charles II. Close attention was given to the identification of the engravers employed. By means of extracts from State Papers, and of comparison both with the Great Seals of the monarchs named and with signed medals, Miss Farquhar succeeded in throwing new light upon the attribution of certain coins and pattern pieces to particular engravers, such as that of the gold bezant of James I. to Charles Anthony. Miss Farquhar also maintained that certain pattern pieces of Charles I., hitherto attributed to Thomas Rawlins, should, for reasons of date and workmanship, be attributed to Edward Green, the chief engraver at the Mint, and his coadjutor Nicholas Briot. The story of the latter years of Thomas Simon's short life was also investigated, and it was shown that Simon continued to work at the Mint after he had been officially superseded by Roettier. Miss Farquhar exhibited a 20s. piece of James VI. (1582), and a box of counters of Charles I.'s reign; Coronation medals of Charles I. and Charles II.; a laurel of James I. (1624); a rare half-groat of Charles I., attributed by some to Briot; and also the following pieces by that engraver: a Scottish unit of 1637; a rare pattern crown with the equestrian figure of Charles I.; a shilling of the same and a Return-to-London medal. By Rawlins: a pattern for a half-crown or memorial medal of Charles. By Simon: an Oliver Cromwell crown piece (1658); a Petition crown of Charles II.; proofs of the half-crown of 1660, of a hammered broad and a milled pattern broad of the same year, and a pattern broad of 1662. By Roettier: a battle of Lowestoft medal and a Christ's Hospital medal (1673). Other pieces of interest exhibited by Miss Farquhar were a medal of Henry, Prince of Wales; a unit of Kenyon type 2; an Oxford three-pound piece; a pattern broad inscribed "Florent Concordia Regna"; and the Golden Medal and the British Colonization Medal of Charles and Catherine.

Mr. Carlyon-Britton exhibited the Henwood Gold Medal (triennial) recently presented to him by the Royal Institution of Cornwall on account of his work on 'Cornish Numismatics'; and Mr. Henry Laver, a large silver medal of James, Duke of York, rev. GENVS ANTIQVVM. Mr. J. Sanford Saltus presented a United States five-dollar piece and a two-and-a-half-dollar piece of the new issue, on which the designs and lettering are incuse. Other presentations to the Society's library were made by Mr. Alfred Anscombe, Mr. T. L. Elder, Mr. S. M. Spink, and the Rev. Dr. Zimmermann.

MEETINGS NEXT WEEK.

- MON. Royal Academy, 4.—'The Italians in France,' Prof. R. T. Blomfield.
—Aristotelian, 5.—'Plato's Criticism of Democracy': a Symposium.
—London Institution, 5.—'Nature and Convention in Ancient Art,' Prof. E. A. Gardner.
—Royal Institution, 5.—General Monthly.
—Surveyors' Institution, 7.—Junior Meeting.
—Society of Engineers, 7.30.—President's Inaugural Address.
—Institute of British Architects, 8.—President's Address to Students.
—Society of Arts, 8.—'The Public Supply of Electric Power in the United Kingdom,' Lecture III., Mr. G. L. Addenbrooke (Cantor Lecture).
TUES. Royal Institution, 3.—'The Architectural and Sculptural Antiquities of India,' Lecture I., Prof. A. A. Macdonell.
—Society of Arts, 4.30.—'The Production of Wheat in the British Empire,' Mr. A. E. Humphries.
—Institution of Civil Engineers, 8.—'On Heat-Flow and Temperature-Distribution in the Gas-Engine,' Prof. B. Hopkinson.
—Zoological, 8.30.—'Notes on the Fauna of Christmas Island,' Dr. C. W. Andrews; 'Report on the Pathological Observations at the Society's Gardens during 1908,' Dr. H. G. Plimmer; 'Preliminary Account of the Life-History of the Leaf-Insect, Phyllium crurifolium, Serv., Mr. H. S. Leigh; 'The Mammals of Matabeleland,' Mr. E. C. Chubb.
WED. Archaeological Institute, 4.30.—'The Library at the Kieper School, Houghton-le-Spring,' Mr. R. W. Ramsey; 'The Romano-British Villa at Stroud, near Petersfield, Hants,' Mr. A. Moray Williams.
—Entomological, 8.
—Society of Arts, 8.—'The Problem of Unemployment,' Mr. Bolton Smart.
THURS. Royal Institution, 3.—'The Revival of Modern Drama,' Lecture I., Mr. W. Archer.
—Royal Academy, 4.—'The Master Builders,' Prof. R. T. Blomfield.
—Royal, 4.30.
—London Institution, 6.—'Shakespeare and a National Theatre,' Mr. W. Poel.
—Linnean, 8.—'On Fucus spiralis, Linn., Dr. T. Börgesen; 'Economy of Ichneumon manifestor, Linn., Mr. C. Morley; 'On the Polyzoa of Madeira,' Canon Norman.
—Chemical, 8.30.—'The Triazo-Group: Part VII. Interaction of Benzhydroximi Chloride and Sodium Azide,' Mr. M. O. Forster; 'The Triazo-Group: Part VIII. Azolimides of the Monobasic Aliphatic Acids,' Messrs. M. O. Forster and R. Müller; 'Nitro Derivatives of Ortho-xylene,' Mr. A. W. Crossley and Miss Nora Renouf; 'The Divergence of the Atomic Weights of the Lighter Elements from Whole Numbers,' Mr. A. C. G. Egerton; and other Papers.
—Society of Antiquaries, 8.30.—Report as Local Secretary for Hants, Mr. W. Dale.
FRI. Institution of Civil Engineers, 8.—'The Design and Construction of Docks,' Lecture I., Sir Whately Eliot. (Students' Meeting: Vernon-Harcourt Lecture.)
—Philological, 8.—'Proper Terms: on the "Compagnys of Beestys and Fowlys in the Boke of St. Alhans, 1486," and Similar Lists,' Mr. J. Hodgkin.
—Royal Institution, 9.—'The Influence of Superstition on the Growth of Institutions,' Prof. J. G. Frazer.
SAT. Royal Institution, 3.—'Mendelssohn,' Sir Alexander C. Mackenzie.

Science Gossip.

A NEW series, entitled "Cambridge County Geographies"—intended for popular reading as well as for schools—will shortly be published by the Cambridge University Press.

The books will be fully illustrated, and the coloured maps and diagrams relating to county statistics will be special features. The general editor is Dr. F. H. H. Guillemard, who has secured the co-operation of many competent writers. Among the early volumes are 'Norfolk' and 'Suffolk,' both by Mr. W. A. Dutt; and 'Kent,' 'Surrey,' 'Sussex,' and 'Essex,' all by Mr. George F. Bosworth.

A COURSE of eight lectures on 'National Eugenics,' in connexion with the Galton Laboratory, will be given at University College, London, on Tuesday afternoons, beginning on February 23rd. The first lecture will be by Prof. Karl Pearson on 'The Purport of the Science of Eugenics.' On the four following Tuesdays the lectures will be given by Mr. D. Heron on 'Methods of Eugenic Inquiry,' 'Transmission of Physical Characters in Man,' 'Transmission of Psychical Characters in Man,' and 'Inheritance of Disease and Deformity.'

THE death is announced, in the seventy-third year of his age, of George Washington Hough, Professor of Astronomy at the North-Western University, Evanston, near Chicago, and Director of the Dearborn Observatory there. Born at Tribes Hill, Montgomery Co., New York, on the 24th of October, 1836, he entered the Cincinnati Observatory in 1859, whence he removed to the Dudley Observatory, Albany, N.Y., of which he became Director in 1863. His appointments to Dearborn and the professorship at Evanston were made in 1879, and for nearly thirty years he directed the operations there, devoting his attention principally to double stars and to physical observations of Jupiter. He contributed many papers to the Chicago Astronomical Society, to the Boston Astronomical Journal, and to the Monthly Notices of the Royal Astronomical Society, which elected him an Associate in 1903.

THE moon will be full at 8h. 25m. (Greenwich time) on the morning of the 5th prox., and new at 10h. 52m. on that of the 20th. She will be in perigee a little before midnight on the latter day, about which date exceptionally high tides may be expected. Several stars of comparatively small magnitude in the constellation Taurus will be occulted on the night of the 27th. The planet Mercury will be at inferior conjunction with the sun on the 11th; he will be visible in the evening (very low in the heavens, in the constellation Aquarius) during about the first week of next month, and in the morning (near the boundary of Capricornus and Aquarius) from the 20th. Venus is in the constellation Sagittarius, and passes next month through Capricornus into Aquarius, rising later each morning. She will be in conjunction with Mercury (to the south of him) on the 19th, both being near the moon, the day before she is new. Mars towards the end of next month moves from Scorpio into Sagittarius; he is slowly increasing in brightness, and rises earlier each morning. Jupiter is at opposition to the sun on the last day of next month, and is brilliant all night in Leo. Saturn is in Pisces, setting now about 9 o'clock in the evening, and earlier each night; he will be in conjunction with the moon on the 22nd.

THE spectroscopic examinations of Morehouse's comet (c. 1908) obtained at the Lick Observatory show that the spectrum contained the three chief carbon bands (that in the green the strongest, in the yellow the weakest), and one (another more doubtfully) of the cyanogen bands. All indications with regard to this remarkable comet point to the fact that the greatest part of its light is inherent, very little being reflected solar light.

THE eighth satellite of Jupiter, which was first detected by Mr. Melotte at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, on the 27th of January last year, has been again registered on photographic plates. The investigations of Messrs. Cowell and Crommelin show that its orbit is very eccentric, so that its distance from the planet changes from about ten to twenty millions of miles, and the inclination of its orbit to that of Jupiter amounts to as much as 30°. The period of its revolution round the planet is about two years and two months; and its motion in its orbit is, like that of the most distant satellite of Saturn, retrograde. Its great distance from its primary must subject it to considerable perturbing influence from the sun.

Two more small planets were photographically discovered by Herr Kopff at the Astrophysical Institute, Königstuhl, Heidelberg, on the 9th inst.; and one by Mr. Melotte at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, on the 16th.

FINE ARTS

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Arundel Club Publications, 1908.—The Arundel Club's recently issued portfolio of reproductions of pictures in private collections in this country is up to the standard of those of the last four years, and the influential committee of selection have succeeded in getting together twenty photogravure plates illustrating pictures which, within certain limits, represent the art of every country. It would, however, be an advantage if the illustrations were arranged in some order, preferably according to schools. It is an excellent plan to include a list of the plates issued in the four previous portfolios, and this summary of the good work done by the Club in the past should ensure a largely increased membership.

No. 1, the 'Portrait of Miss Elizabeth Bunn' (Mrs. Meymott), the sister-in-law of John Opie, by whom the picture is painted, belongs to Lord St. Levan. Though it is characteristic of the art of the "Cornish Wonder," it is hardly important enough to occupy the position here given it. Zoffany's painting of 'Charles Towneley [sic], the Collector, in his Library' (No. 2), belonging to Lord O'Hagan, was shown a year ago at the Burlington Club. It represents Townley surrounded by his "beloved books and a few chosen antiques," which include the 'Townley Venus,' the 'Clytie,' and the 'Discobolos,' which were purchased from him in 1805 by Act of Parliament for the British Museum. This "genuine mystagogue of the most genial type," is shown in conversation with D'Hancarville not "Hancæville," by whose chair stand Charles Greville and Thomas Astle. As the aims of the Arundel Club are closely allied with the interests of our national collections, and Zoffany's 'Portrait of Thomas Gainsborough' in the National Gallery is such a poor production, one naturally regrets that this canvas is not the property of the nation—a loss that has recently been further emphasized by the exhibition at Whitechapel of several of Zoffany's portrait-groups of great historical interest. None of these pictures, however, can compare with his large 'Portrait Group' in the collection of Sir Hubert Parry.

The 'Madonna and Child' (No. 3) belonging to Mr. W. C. Cartwright, is a fifteenth-century Florentine work by a painter whom Mr. Roger E. Fry in a critical note seeks, with some hesitation, to identify with Pierfrancesco Fiorentino. There is, we note, a 'Madonna' in the National Gallery (No. 1199) catalogued as "Tuscan School," but tentatively assigned by some critics to Pierfrancesco. The picture illustrated in this portfolio has, however, several points in common with a 'Madonna' (No. 2118) by Giovanni Francesco da Rimini, which was a year ago presented to the National Gallery by Mr. G. Salting, after having been there for some time on loan.

Two panels the property of Christ Church, Oxford, are reproduced. The weirdly fantastic 'Magdalen' (No. 4), which is obviously the portrait of a lady as the Magdalen, is perhaps doubtfully assigned to Piero di Cosimo. The letterpress suggests that it is "characteristic of Piero's fantastic nature, and should be compared with his other romantic portrait inscribed (falsely, as is now believed) 'La Bella Simonetta' at Chantilly." The 'Simonetta Vespucci' in the Musée Condé (No. 13), though clearly by Piero di Cosimo, is, we believe, still catalogued as a work by Pollajuolo, and is in reality inscribed SIMONETTA JANVENSIS VESPUCCIA.

The other Oxford picture, an 'Adoration of the Shepherds' (No. 5), is here vaguely described as belonging to the Venetian School, and is stated in the letterpress to have been ascribed to Titian when in the possession of Charles I. It is perhaps worth noting that in the Library at Christ Church—where apparently no catalogue has been issued since 1833—the picture is labelled as a 'Nativity' by Titian. As it bears the CR under a crown at the back, it is presumably one of the twenty-eight "Titians" in the collection of Charles I., who in the Raphaelesque 'Nativity,' which hangs near it at Christ Church, was also credited by some inventory-makers with a ninth "Raphael." Although the Madonna placed towards the right of this essentially Venetian composition is Titianesque, and the painting of the light piercing through the thatched penthouse recalls Tintoretto, the picture as a whole resembles the style of Jacopo Bassano. There is, indeed, a very similar 'Adoration of the Magi' by Bassano in the Borghese Gallery (No. 144). Another version which is given to Bassano was bequeathed to the National Gallery by Sir John May in 1858, but is not now publicly exhibited. Titian seems to have painted such a picture, and the Oxford example, here reproduced, was evidently executed by some one versed in the Titianesque tradition; it was engraved on wood, and at a later date on copper. The very fine 'Adoration of the Magi,' which is now catalogued in the Edinburgh Gallery as a work by Bassano—the composition is enlarged and reversed—was, when in the collection of the Marchese di Balbi at Genoa, attributed to Titian.

The companion portraits of a man (No. 6) and a woman (No. 7), by Nicholas Elias Pickenoy, the master of Van der Helst, are among the most notable features of this year's portfolio. As each of these portraits, which come from the collection of Mr. L. B. C. Lockhart Muirhead, is inscribed with the year 1657, it is perhaps worth noting that until now critics have placed the death of Nicholas Elias (Pickenoy) within the limits of 1653 and 1656. The luminous flesh-painting and the exactitude of detail seen in this pair of canvases serve to remind us of a somewhat serious lacuna in our national collection—a fact which has possibly been forgotten since the appearance of two companion portraits in the Denny Sale at Christie's two years ago.

The 'Portrait Groups of Members of the Popple and Ashley Families' (No. 8), at Buckingham Palace, illustrates the art of Hogarth, but the whole composition is mechanical and unconvincing, and, though each figure appears to be solidly painted, leaves us unmoved. Much more imposing is the life-size full-length 'Portrait of a Young Man' (No. 9), in a rich gold-embroidered jacket, trimmed and lined with red, and wearing high brown boots. This picture by Sustermans was lent last winter by Col. G. L. Holford to the Old Masters' Exhibition (No. 128). The same collector also showed on that occasion his 'Portrait said to be that of William West, First Lord Delawarr,' which was then attributed to Guillim Stretes. The young man here represented has been thus conjecturally identified by the armorial bearings seen in the bezel of the ring which he wears on the second finger of his left hand. It is unfortunate that this superb portrait is not in a perfectly pure state; but, as it was apparently painted in the third quarter of the sixteenth century—that is to say, about the time of the death of that little-known native painter John Bettes—it may possibly achieve greater fame some years hence, when the art of the sixteenth century in England comes to be better understood. In connexion with this picture we may note that the 'Portrait of Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey,' at Hampton Court (No. 331), which had gradually come to be recognized as another work by Guillim Stretes, has lately been relabelled "French School (? Jean Clouet)."

The 'Assumption of the Virgin' (No. 11) by Francesco Granacci, from the collection of Mr. H. C. Somers Somerset, is stated in a note to be "the most important example in England of this artist, who is not represented at all in the National Gallery." We may, however, point out that the 'Madonna, and Infant Christ, St. John the Baptist, and Angels,' which is catalogued in the National Gallery (No. 809) under the name of Michelangelo, and is with certain critics gradually winning its way to acceptance as a very early and discarded work by that master, has been attributed by Dr. Frizzoni to Granacci. Others, again, have regarded it as being from the hand of Bugiardini, the fellow-pupil with Michelangelo under Domenico Ghirlandaio, to whom the picture was formerly officially ascribed.

To Mr. Somers Somerset also belongs 'The Flying Angel' (No. 12) by Pesellino, one of the five main panels which originally composed the large altarpiece in the church of the Santissima Trinità in Pistoia. The 'Trinity' in the National Gallery (No. 727) was originally the centre part of this large picture, which was at one time in danger of destruction by fire. The panel of S. Jacopo Maggiore and S. Mamante, now at Buckingham Palace, was formerly placed to the left of the 'Trinity,' on the right of which were originally the figures of S. Zeno and another saint. Above the last-mentioned panel, which apparently perished in the fire, was at one time inserted in the large altarpiece the 'Flying Angel' now the property of Lady Brownlow at Ashridge, which was some two years ago shown at the Burlington Club as a work by Pesellino, after having been exhibited at the New Gallery in 1893 as by Masaccio. The treatment of the draperies and the drawing of the feet of the "Flying Angel," which is here reproduced, and which formerly occupied the upper left-hand portion of the composition over the S. Jacopo Maggiore and S. Mamante, correspond exactly with the drawing seen in the National Gallery panel. The three predella panels of this dismembered altarpiece, which was completed after Pesellino's death by his assistant Piero di Lorenzo Pratese, are now in private possession in Pistoia, and were, we think, shown in the Ecclesiastical Art Exhibition held at Pistoia about 1896.

The 'Madonna and Choir of Angels' (No. 13), which it is suggested in the letter-press may be a Westphalian fifteenth-century copy of the 'Madonna in der Rosenlaube' by Stephan Lochner in the Cologne Gallery (No. 64), is in the collection of the Rev. Arthur Sutton. In a note it is claimed that between the Cologne original and this old copy there are but "slight variations, especially in the expression of the faces. The only positive difference of detail is the morse." The picture here reproduced—and that for no very definite purpose—is nearly twice as large as the other, while there are apparently considerable differences in the espalier of roses which forms the background. The 'Maria, innerhalb eines Geheges von Rosen,' in the Munich Gallery (No. 5), to which passing reference is also made, is smaller than either of the other versions.

Beyond question the outstanding feature of the portfolio is 'The Building of the Temple' (No. 14) by Pesellino in the same collection, and it is rightly described as "a freshly discovered addition to the scarce works of this rare Florentine master." Such a remark would even better apply to the still more precious and slightly earlier panel by Masaccio which was found some months ago by a well-known critic in the same country vicarage. We hope that this unique 'Madonna' by Masaccio, which was illustrated and fully described in the Rassegna d'Arte last May, will be included in the Arundel Portfolio next year.

Of the 'Portrait of a Man with a Hawk' (No. 16), at Windsor, which is here only attributed to Alvise Vivarini, it has been well said by Mr. Berenson ('Lorenzo Lotto,' p. 113) that "bituminous and having darkened, its effect is remarkably Savoldesque." It is included in the current issue of the Guide to the State Apartments as being of the North Italian School, but is still labelled Leonardo da Vinci.

The subject of the picture by Rubens and Jordaens belonging to Lord Jersey (No. 19), is incorrectly given as the 'Apotheosis of the Duke of Buckingham.'

It is, of course, an equestrian portrait of the Duke on a brown horse, and was described as such, by Waagen ('Art Treasures,' iv. 272). It was painted by Rubens in Paris in 1625, when the great Flemish artist not only put la dernière main to the famous series of paintings illustrating the history of Henri IV. and Marie de Médicis, but also met for the first time the Duke of Buckingham, who had come over to France to escort Henrietta Maria to England, and who the following year bought Rubens's magnificent collection of pictures. The same horse and the same figure of a Flemish Victory crowning Buckingham are seen in slightly different attitudes in Rubens's 'Equestrian Portrait of Philip II.' at Windsor, and Velasquez's 'Philip IV.' in the Uffizi. The well-known engraving of Buckingham is claimed to have been freely adapted from this portrait by William Passe, by whom it was "graven and dedicated in the year of Our Lord God, 1625." The confusion as to the correct title arises from the fact that there is a ceiling painting at Osterley, also by Rubens, representing the Apotheosis of Buckingham. The composition is, however, quite different, as may be judged from the original sketch by Rubens, which is in the National Gallery (No. 187), where it is inaccurately catalogued as 'The Apotheosis of William the Taciturn, of Holland.'

The 'Repast' (No. 20), one of the early bodegone or kitchen-pieces painted by Velasquez in Seville, is apparently unrecorded. It recently passed from the possession of Mr. R. Langton Douglas to the Budapest Gallery (Athenæum, No. 4223), after having been sold at Christie's on July 3rd.

The 'Peasant Concert' (No. 18), which is in the collection of Mr. Adolph Hirsch, and is well described as "a particularly brilliant, but in some ways puzzling example from the workshop of the three mysterious and indivisible brothers Lenain"; the 'Landscape' (No. 15) by Philips de Koninck, belonging to the Duke of Westminster; and the 'South Gate, Yarmouth' (No. 17), by J. S. Cotman, in the collection of Mr. Arthur Samuel, call for no special comment, but show the wide vision of the Committee of the Arundel Club. The production of such a portfolio does great credit to English art-criticism.

ALTHOUGH we do not agree with the "publishers' note" in the prospectus of John Pettie, R.A., H.R.S.A. (A. & C. Black), that Pettie's "work is receiving now a larger recognition than it did even in his lifetime," we are glad that the career of this excellent artist and firm friend has fallen to such a sympathetic and capable chronicler as Mr. Martin Hardie. The author is a nephew of Pettie, and his estimate of the artist is higher and less discriminating than would be that of a writer less bound by family ties. There are greater artists of the past who have a stronger claim than Pettie to a monograph of this importance, but of few of them would it be possible to compile so exhaustive and intimate a biography as Mr. Hardie has done of his uncle. Pettie has been dead fifteen years, and it seems strange that no monograph appeared either during his lifetime or soon after his death. After the usual drudgery and privation of student life, he enjoyed all the sweets of popularity; his pictures were for many seasons a great attraction at the Royal Academy; they sold readily; and his commissions for portraits, to which he devoted much of his time in later years, were numerous. Such portraits as those of Bret Harte (1885), Sir Walter Besant (1887), Sir Charles Wyndham as David Garrick (1888), and Sir Augustus Manns (1892) rank high among those of the last quarter of the nineteenth century; yet with all his success, he can hardly be classed with such artists of that period as Millais, Leighton, and others who might be named.

Pettie was a popular artist; and it is nearly always the fate of the popular artist to undergo cycles of neglect. Romney was neglected for three-quarters of a century; Hoppner, Morland, and Opie for nearly as long a period; Reynolds and Gainsborough only just escaped a similar fate by the splendour of their genius. We may recognize Pettie's "dramatic force and brilliant craftsmanship," yet much of his art is of "a story that is told." Pettie is well represented in our various public galleries. 'The Vigil' of the Royal Academy of 1884 was purchased for 1,000*l.* under the terms of the Chantrey Bequest, and is now at Millbank; his diploma picture 'Jacobites, 1745,' of the R.A. 1874, is at Burlington House; nearly all the Scotch galleries contain one or more examples; and Sheffield, Wolverhampton, and Manchester are also well off in this respect.

The great value of Mr. Hardie's book for purposes of reference lies in the excellent Appendix, which extends to 50 pages, and deals with Pettie's works from 1853 to the year of his death. The list, long as it is, is doubtless capable of extension.

There was a small version of 'The Burgo-master' (30 in. by 20 in.) in the E. Allday Sale at Christie's in March, 1895, which does not seem to be recorded by Mr. Hardie; and the two pictures in the T. O. Barlow Sale in 1890 appear to have escaped his vigilance. We are glad to add that the book has an excellent Index.

The Gospel in the Old Testament. By Harold Copping and the Bishop of Durham. (Religious Tract Society.)—This handsome volume is a companion to the 'Scenes in the Life of our Lord' published by the same Society. Mr. Copping was sent to Palestine expressly to saturate himself with local colour, and these pictures are the result. They are intended to illustrate "those Old Testament incidents associated in our minds with the Gospel message." As a rule, they appear to us to exaggerate the dramatic and emotional elements. There is not enough of the tranquil dignity of the Oriental. But to this the picture of 'Jacob's Vow' and the figure of Daniel are notable exceptions; whilst 'Rebecca at the Well' and Pharaoh's daughter are charming drawings of Eastern women. Mr. Copping, however, seems to have drawn too frequently from the same model—a somewhat conventional Israelite, in whom is more than a suspicion of guile. Nevertheless, the pictures are just what they should be for the class of purchasers for whom the volume—it is hardly a book—is prepared. So are the Bishop of Durham's neat little sermons upon the text of each illustration. Their object, like that of the drawings, is not literary or artistic, but "devotional and practical." Dr. Moule is, of course, a scholar and a theologian of no mean order, but here he writes merely as an orthodox expositor, and refers to modern critical views only to scout them. "Mysterious" and "inscrutable" are his favourite adjectives—ex his disce omnia. There is also much virtue in the discreet term "secondary marriage" applied to Abraham's relations with Hagar.

The Romaunt of the Rose. By Geoffrey Chaucer. Illustrated by Keith Henderson and Norman Wilkinson. (Chatto & Windus.)—The issue of a new type is a matter of absorbing interest to a limited circle only, but within that limit it is keenly expected and much criticized. Experts are always asking for a new type, and when they get one judge it by the old Venetian models. Mr. Horne has gone instead to the early Florentine printers, and the resulting "Florence" type has reached a high point of typographical perfection. The illustrations, of which we have already written on the occasion of their exhibition at the Baillie Gallery are exceedingly well reproduced in a new process, but we hope soon to see Mr. Horne's type in juxtaposition to woodcuts. The open page of verse in double columns has a very fine effect. We fully agree with the publishers in considering the absence of "any adventitious borders or decorations" as a merit; it is only when they are fundamental constituents of the page that they are admissible, and when they come from the hand of a great artist. In beauty of press-work the Florence Press falls behind the Doves Press, while the heterogeneity of text and illustration marks it off from the elegant simplicity of Mr. Pissarro's productions. Purity of form and legibility have both been attained in a remarkable degree by the designer of the type, which, however, falls short in the s, a most difficult letter in English printing from its frequent occurrence as a double letter; the combination oc is not very successful, especially when it appears as oce. We are glad to see that the Florence Press will devote itself particularly to works dealing with Italian art, literature, and history, and we may assure purchasers of this series that they will get good value for their money.

Britain's Great Authors. Introduction and Descriptive Text by Arthur Waugh. (Fine Arts Publishing Company.)—The twelve portraits comprised in this portfolio are admirably reproduced, and, being suitable for framing, should prove a welcome acquisition to library or study. Though some tastes might be inclined to place Shelley before Keats, or to rank Coleridge—despite the comparative smallness of his literary output—as a more commanding poetic personality than Wordsworth, the selection—beginning with Shakespeare, and ending with Tennyson—is perhaps as unexceptionable as such a process, in the present instance, could well be. To each author Mr. Waugh has assigned a concise appreciation, but some account of the original pictures, from which the reproductions are made, should certainly have been added.

Sheffield Plate: its History, Manufacture, and Art. By Henry N. Veitch. (Bell & Sons.)—This is a useful and fairly complete account of this typically English ware, and its value is accentuated by the author's experience as a dealer. It is fully illustrated, many of the plates representing valuable pieces in private collections, that of Lady Wolseley being drawn on for some rare and beautiful cups and vessels. Mr. Veitch is so completely a master of his subject that it is a pity he felt compelled to prefix an introduction of ill-digested facts. In his classification the author discards altogether the nomenclature of the dealers, and the simplified system proposed some time ago by Mr. Wylie, and divides Sheffield plate into two main periods: 1750-90, before the introduction of the silver mount; and 1790-1840, with a transitional period indicated from about 1770 to 1790. An important feature of the book is the large number of makers' marks, and the long lists of makers not only in Sheffield, but also in Birmingham, London, Dublin, and abroad. The account of the process of manufacture is clear and full, and some excellent tests for distinguishing modern reproductions from original prices are indicated. No collector of Sheffield plate can afford to be without this important handbook.

Pippa Passes, and Men and Women. By Robert Browning. Illustrated by E. F. Brickdale. (Chatto & Windus.)—While this reprint of the original form of these famous poems is very desirable in itself with its good print and paper, it owes its chief attractions to its charming illustrations in colour admirably reproduced. Some of them are purely imaginative, some are figure studies of considerable merit. It is a book which will appeal to many as a fitting gift-book—being not only great poetry in itself, but also, by its action on the Pre-Raphaelite poets, the cause of great poetry in others.

The Year's Art for 1909, edited by A. C. R. Carter (Hutchinson & Co.), is a useful book of reference, but continues to include full-page illustrations, which seem to us of no particular value, and out of place in such a guide. Otherwise it increases in size, and the matter is generally pertinent. The 'Directory of Artists and Art Workers' is a commendable feature, but it seems a pity to insert between it and the Index several pages of advertisements.

DRAWINGS BY ROWLANDSON.

IN Mr. Gutekunst's Gallery there opens this week an admirable display of Rowlandson in his best mood—revealing him as the daintiest of pen draughtsmen, setting down the essence of things with the most perfect legibility and the ease of a clerk's running hand. The Cattle Fair at Camelford, Cornwall (19), shows the acme of this direct representation, and its nimble design and clear, luminous colour make it a little masterpiece. If all do not attain to such perfect limpidity and aerial suggestiveness as this, there is nevertheless throughout the collection a refined and delicate use of colour which sometimes contrasts in piquant fashion with an occasional brutality of form. Rowlandson, when he introduces figures into this daintily conventional landscape world of his is still Rowlandson the—sometimes ferocious—caricaturist. There are drawings here, The Rural Wedding (17) is an example, wherein the two elements wrangle; more often they unite—occasionally, as in the Magdalen College, Oxford (18), in a manner almost miraculous when we consider the different scale of form adopted for figures and architecture. Over difficulties which would cramp the invention of a modern realistic draughtsman the artist triumphs by his superb fidelity to a convention which has grown to be his very nature. So long as he is true to that we do not feel him to be false to nature, though his figures be but four or five heads high.

Every year we are made to feel more strongly the difference of the condition of the artist of to-day from that of his like in the days before photography. It is easy to exaggerate the change in the artist himself. He would still express himself very much in the same traditional language, had he the support of a public such as made possible the popularity of Rowlandson or Cruikshank. That success points, surely, to a considerable degree of general culture—to a habit, at least, on the part of the public, of keeping in touch with artistic expression—of utilizing the artist as a stimulus and guide to the art of seeing. Such leadership has to-day been thrown off, and the man in the street is content to see for himself, with complete literalism as his only ideal. As illustrated journalism conforms every day more completely to that ideal, interest in it becomes more languid, and in looking over these drawings it seems amazing that there should ever have been a period when work so delicate and suggestive could have been done by one who was after all a popular journalist of the day.

In that day, too, journalism entailed sacrifices; but they were sacrifices in the direction of crudity and violence which still implied a spirited and lively fancy in the artist. The Fish Market (29), with the exaggerated muscularity of its figures, and the Lords in Waiting (1), wherein fantastic caricature is yet put to decorative purposes, are examples of Rowlandson in his public aspect. More often the drawings have the air of being a relaxation, wherein the artist gives way to a private taste for greater refinement; but even here we can see the seeking-out of subjects of the moment which comes of working for a public sure to take a lively interest even in these light playthings of the artist.

In the work of the two modern etchers shown alongside this stimulus is lacking. Both Mr. D. S. MacLaughlan and Mr. Mulready Stone exhibit several excellent prints. The sensitive drawing of the valley in the former's Lauterbrunnen (5) is a fine passage in a not entirely satisfactory plate; and we may praise also Venice, the Dark Canal

(9), the melodramatic Houses on the Aare (8), and the Pont Neuf, Paris (3), by the same artist. Mr. Stone is specially successful with the tiny Three Sketches (13), somewhat recalling the work of M. Bédot with different subject-matter; and he commands respect by a sustained technical effort, Entrance to the National Gallery (12), which is one of those attempts at full realization that every fine etcher makes, and is the better for having made, even if he fails of complete success. The art of both these etchers suffers from the want of air which spoils so much of the more refined work done to-day. It is nervously anxious to resemble something admittedly good, but wanting in the frank and confident development which comes of the genial consciousness that the public has a sensitive eye, quick to respond to any new movement. Artists working thus too privately, and lacking lively contact with the general public, are a little in the position of musicians who go on year after year writing elaborate compositions, without ever hearing them played so as to judge of their effect.

AQUATINTS AT THE WALKER GALLERY: BAXTER PRINTS.

WHEN it has the added stimulus of archaeological interest, art has still a small, discerning public, and fashion has recognized the collecting of aquatints. There is no great master represented in the gathering now to be seen in Bond Street, but a forcible and delicate craftsmanship is the rule rather than the exception, and the exhibition would compare favourably with any modern colour-prints, even from the hand of finer artists, by the technical beauty and intrinsic charm of the work. Nevertheless, when we come to weigh the possibility of reviving aquatint as an alternative to the inevitably mechanical three-colour process, we are forced to ask ourselves to what extent the charming things shown are colour-prints at all. This, without very close examination, is difficult to determine; but it appears clear that almost all are retouched, most of them extensively painted on by hand, and this seems to forbid our taking them as examples of what might be done with commercial success to-day.

The best work is of the period of the Havells and the Daniells, and beautiful work it is; but apparently only one plate as a rule was made, on which two colours (a cool one for the distance, and a warmer for the foreground) were laid. Other colours—often to considerable elaboration—were added in water colour. This combination had great possibilities of brilliance and delicacy, and we may especially mention the Greenock on the Clyde (21), by W. Daniell; Wallingford Castle (26), by R. Havel; Margate, by J. C. Stadler (34); and the Approach to the (Bore) Ghaut (97), by Fielding. One or two sporting subjects appear to be executed more purely in aquatint by means of several plates; but though they are technically excellent, the aim of work of this class is not such as to bring out the full possibilities of the method.

The slight prefatory sketch in the Catalogue throws no light on the interesting question of the composition of the coloured inks which were used for printing, and Mr. Martin Hardie's interesting book on colour-printing also leaves us in the dark on this important point.

The collection of Baxter Prints at the New Dudley Gallery cannot claim to reach the high level of artistic beauty of the exhibition just discussed, and the method appears to have been too laborious to have much prospect of revival. A few individual prints, however, such as Nos. 11 and 102, have considerable old-fashioned charm and great nicety of execution.

THE ARCHÆOLOGICAL BUDGET OF ROME FOR 1908.

THE balance-sheet of profit and loss in the archæological budget of Rome for 1908 closes with a considerable surplus—a result mostly due to chance, as not a spadeful of earth was turned up for scientific purposes in the city or in the suburbs. The new “Legge sulle Antichità,” already sanctioned by the Chamber of Deputies, and now under discussion in the Senate House, gives such unlimited power to the State to interfere and confiscate in case of accidental finds on private properties, that it will be unnecessary to resort to official excavations in order to increase the number and value of the works of art in public museums. Such a condition of things is rather conducive to apathy; and yet a few hundred pounds wisely spent by a competent man would solve many fundamental problems connected with the history and topography of the city—with the Lupercal, for instance, the Senate House, the altar of the Roma Quadrata, the Porta Carmentalis, &c. When we consider that a large part of the contents of the Capitoline temple of Jupiter have rolled down the slope of the hill into the region of the Via and Piazza Montanara, the Via della Bufala, and the Piazza della Consolazione, where they form a layer many feet deep; that every time an accidental search has been made in it, documents concerning the history of the world have been found in quantities; and that I have myself produced evidence that the great mass of gold nuggets thrown into the foundations of the temple on the day of the laying of the first stone (June, A.D. 74) by the Flavians has never since been touched, we marvel at our indifference, or rather at our inexcusable negligence. Perhaps we are waiting for the search at Herculaneum to be attempted, if not finished, before thinking of other explorations.

I have no doubt that the magnificent document concerning the Social War which will be published by Prof. Gatti in the next number of the Bullettino arch. municipale was found in the above-named belt of ruins at the foot of the Capitol, because bronze laws or treaties were either hung in the Capitolium itself (like the Tabulæ Honestæ Millionis) or kept in the State archives (Tabularium). When the bronze sheet upon which the newly found document is engraved was offered for sale to the City of Rome, it had passed through the hands of many individuals more or less prone to conceal the truth about its origin. My opinion is that it must have been discovered by a workman in the foundations of a new house at the foot of the so-called Tarpeian Rock, facing the Piazza della Consolazione, and sold for a few lire to an “Anticagliaro.” When it reached the City Archæological Commission its marketable value had already risen to four figures. Engraved on that bronze sheet is one of the most interesting pages in the history of the Civil War and the life of the Roman leader Cnæus Pompeius Strabo, the father of the triumvir. It speaks of a review of the army held at Ascoli Piceno by the commander-in-chief, of the rewards granted to infantry and cavalry army corps, of the countries—mostly Spanish—from which the men had been drafted, and of other unpublished historical details of Pompeius’s campaign. The city administration will have Prof. Gatti’s illustration published at its expense and under its auspices before the end of January, and copies will be offered to Historical Societies both at home and abroad.

Unpublished likewise is the incident in the history of the palace of the Cæsars—the Christianization of the house of Augustine—discovered by Prof. Alfonso Bartoli, while studying the remains of that structure under the casino of the Villa Mills. It was known that, somewhere on the Palatine, an imperial Christian oratory, under the invocation of St. Cesarius, had been substituted for the classic Lararium; that the name of the otherwise obscure martyr from Terracina had been chosen to suit the place, as it had been chosen for other oratories erected in the villa of Augustus at Velletri, in the villa of Maxentius ad Statuas, in the Mutatorium Cæsaris, &c.; that the images of the Byzantine emperors were exhibited in it, as a mark of the power they still claimed over Rome; and that its keeping was entrusted to certain Greek monks called Saccitæ, from the ample robes they wore. Its last mention occurs in a document of the fourteenth century, when there was but one priest left to represent the former community. From the traces of frescoes, with quaint figures of saints, painted in various halls of the Augustan palace, and from certain clumsy adaptations of the same apartments to the requirements of monastic life, Prof. Bartoli has been able to gather and make clear the following points:—

First, that the material Christianization of the Palatine Hill was accomplished by slow stages, and at a late period, in the fifth and sixth centuries; secondly, that the original oratory of St. Cesarius was of modest size, and not easily accessible, being located on the first floor of the house, in the north-east wing, to which access was given by stairs only six feet wide; and thirdly, that at a later period a church was substituted for the oratory, probably within the cella of the temple of Apollo. Fancy the monotonous psalmodies of those ignorant Eastern monks resounding in the halls and in the temple which had echoed with the chants of the ‘Carmen Sæculare’:

I am not yet ready to say whether the announcement of this discovery can be accepted without reserve, and whether the church of S. Cesario ought to be looked for, not within the temple of Apollo, which was annihilated by fire in the night between the 18th and 19th of March, 363, but in the edifices on the Sacra Via near the Torre Cartularia, where the remains of a nameless church of the Byzantine period were discovered by Rosa in 1873.

Students have felt a certain amount of disappointment at the meagre results of the cutting away of the Montecitorio, to make room for the new Houses of Parliament. At any rate, the mystery of the origin of this hillock has been solved to our satisfaction. The accumulation of earth and rubbish in that special part of the Campus Martius dates from the downfall of the Empire, when the spot must have been selected as a dumping-place for the broken jars of the Portus Vinarius, close at hand, as the plain of the Testaccio had been chosen, at an earlier period, for the dumping of the ballast of sea-going ships. Before the rise in its level took place, the site was occupied by an altar of huge dimensions, sheltered by a growth of poplars or cypresses. The altar stood in the centre of a platform enclosed by an iron railing, supported by stone pilasters. Part of this railing has been found in situ, and we can hardly conceive how the ancients could enclose such a beautiful monument as the newly found altar within such a rough, common enclosure, made of plain iron bars, and supported by cippi of stone unpolished and hardly squared. No inscription has been found to tell us whether the place was a ustrinum or a commemorative monument of some sort. Both hypotheses are tenable. The ustrinum where the body of Antoninus Pius was cremated in A.D. 161 was discovered in 1703 within a few feet south-west of the present one, in the subsoil of the monastery of La Missione. Perhaps the new enclosure marks the spot where Marcus Aurelius was incinerated within sight of the great spiral column. A fragment of bas-relief found within the railing represents the figure of a barbarian prisoner clothed, capped, and bearded like the Marcomanni of the column.

Outside the present Porta Portese, at the foot of the hills of Monteverde, within the boundaries of the Vigna Jacobini, where an ancient lane diverged from the Via Campana, three altars have been found in situ: the first dedicated to the LARES VIALES, the middle one to the LARES . . . VIALES, the last to the LARES SEMITALES. The first were the protecting genii of the high road, the last of the lane, but what was the local connexion of the Lares . . . uriales? The hiatus contained but one letter, and this must be a c. The Lares curiales are not a novelty. In the list of streets of the Trans-tiberine region which is engraved on Hadrian’s pedestal, now in the Palazzo de’ Conservatori, occurs the name of the VICVS LARVM . . . V . . . LIVM. Jordan has supplemented the missing letters as pvtealivm; others have suggested the form rvralivm. The altar found in the Vigna Jacobini gives us the right name, and the knowledge that at a remote period there must have been a popular Curia in this neighbourhood, which was the scene of the annual gathering of great crowds on the occasion of the feast of the Fors Fortuna. Artisans, slaves, small tradesmen, and the nondescripts qui sine arte aliqua vivunt journeyed on June 24th to this suburban sanctuary, partly in corricoli, partly in boats down the Tiber, for the purpose of supping and drinking in one of the innumerable booths erected for the occasion on the banks of the river or on the roadside. This vulgar feast is still in honour in Rome, and, curious to note, it falls exactly at the same date—the famous Notte delle Streghe ordi San Giovanni! The same booths, the same shouts, the same bibulous hilarity, and maybe the same supper of snails appear now, as then, on the night of June 24th.

The Fates have been more liberal to us in the matter of discoveries in the field of art. The Antinous of Antonianos, the sarcophagus of the Via Collatina, the seven dancing Hours of the Via Labicana, the sarcophagus of the African cities, and other splendid works lately found, or lately added to our museums, will be better described in another letter.

RODOLFO LANCIANI.

Fine-Art Gossip.

ALFRED STEVENS is the subject of two articles in The Burlington Magazine for February: the first of them, by Mr. D. S. MacColl, dealing with his portraits, of which five are reproduced; and the second, by Mr. Edward F. Strange, throwing new light upon Stevens’s relations to the Royal College of Art, his views of teaching design, and his early training in Florence. An ingenious and well-illustrated inquiry into the identity of the Limoges enameller K. I. P., by Mr. H. P. Mitchell, is another prominent contribution. Early Chinese porcelain, Ladik rugs (Mrs. Herringham), an undescribed woodcut by H. S. Beham representing the patron saints of Hungary (Mr. Campbell Dodgson), the early development of Correggio (Dr. W. Suida), and Trecento pictures in American collections (Dr. Osvald Sirén) are discussed in the remaining articles. The only known oil painting by J. R. Cozens is also described and illustrated. The editorial article deals not unkindly with the McCulloch Collection.

LAST Wednesday at Burlington House Mr. Goscombe John, sculptor, and Mr. John Belcher, architect, were elected Royal Academicians; Mr. B. Mackennal, sculptor, was chosen to be A.R.A.; and M. Jean Paul Laurens an Honorary Foreign Academician.

MESSRS. DOWDESWELL will hold at their galleries during February an exhibition of water-colours of 'The English Lakes,' recently painted by Mr. R. G. Goodman.

A CATALOGUE OF MINIATURES AT THE VICTORIA AND ALBERT MUSEUM has just been published in a paper edition (1s.).

Two important portraits have recently been discovered at Versailles: one in the réserve of the Museum, and the other in a salon of the Lycée. The former is by Ferdinand Elle, and represents Madame de Sévigné en buste, with a string of pearls in her hair. It is twenty years earlier than the well-known pastel by Monteuil, and the beautiful hands fully bear out the admiration expressed by her contemporaries. The second portrait, by Nattier, is of Marie Leczinska, and is known only through engravings. It was painted in 1748, and at the time of its discovery was covered with dust and dirt.

THE choice collection of Greek coins of the late Mr. Frank Sherman Benson of Brooklyn, New York, which Messrs. Sotheby will sell on Wednesday next and six following days (Saturday excepted), is one of the most important ever formed by an American collector. The series is principally concerned with the numismatic history of ancient Italy and Sicily.

EXHIBITIONS.

SALE (Jan. 30).—Mr. R. Gwelo Goodman's Water-Colours, 'The English Lakes,' Dowdeswell Galleries.
—New Association of Artists, Second Exhibition, Private View, Goupil Gallery.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

COVENT GARDEN.—'The Ring' in English—Die Meistersinger.—The Angelus. By Dr. E. W. Naylor.

THE first cycle of the 'Ring' ended on Friday evening in last week. One of the features of the performance was the impersonation of Brünnhilde by Mrs. Saltzmann-Stevens. The quality of her voice is not, perhaps, sufficiently dramatic, but the singing was very fine, and in quiet, tender passages most expressive. It is said that the lady is new to the stage, in which case the ease and spontaneity of her acting are remarkable. In 'Siegfried' Messrs. Cornelius and Bechstein were both excellent in the first act. There were fine moments in 'Götterdämmerung,' yet, taken as a whole, the dramatic effect was not very strong.

An interesting performance was given of 'Die Meistersinger' last Monday. Mr. Walter Hyde as Walther sang exceedingly well, but not powerfully enough in the first exacting act. Moreover, in his acting he showed that the part was new to him. Mrs. Frease-Green, the Eva, deserves praise; she was, however, heard to greater advantage as Sieglinde in 'Die Walküre.' Mr. Nissen was not sufficiently dignified as Hans Sachs; while Mr. Meux, as Beckmesser, although he had many good moments, seemed to lack the dry, penetrating voice needed to render that difficult part thoroughly effective. The turbulent ensemble at the end of the second act deserves special praise. Dr. Richter conducted finely, as usual, though in this opera, as well as in the 'Ring,' the singers must occasionally have found it hard at times to be heard above the orchestra.

Of late there has been a great deal written about English opera; as yet, however, the hope of many musicians has not been fulfilled. The performances of the 'Ring' in English now taking place at Covent Garden show, however, what English artists can do; while on Wednesday evening an opera by an English composer was produced in English, with English artists; moreover, under the direction of an English conductor, Mr. Percy Pitt. We refer to 'The Angelus,' an opera consisting of a prologue and four acts, by Dr. Edward Woodall Naylor, organist of Emmanuel College, Cambridge; and the work was well received. A composer depends to a large extent on his librettist; but although there are good points in the text written by Mr. Wilfrid Thornely, it is not altogether satisfactory. The prologue might, with advantage, have been a little shorter. The contrast between that sombre prologue and the fête day on a village green, with which the first act is concerned, is certainly effective—it recalls, indeed, a similar contrast in Gounod's 'Faust'; but there is something mechanical about the sudden passion of Francis for Beatrice; and then in the final act, after the former has obtained the Elixir of Life, one cannot quite understand why Beatrice should die, and Francis be condemned to drink the vital draught. The death of both lovers would have formed a fitting dramatic ending, or, to suit those who prefer a happy one, they might have married and lived happily ever afterwards. In the ending of his prologue, and of the first three acts, the librettist has, however, offered good situations to the composer.

Dr. Naylor has composed a scena, 'Merlin and the Gleam,' for baritone and orchestra, but this opera appears to be his first attempt to write for the stage. The first thing one notices is the excellent choral writing; of that we have proof in the first act, especially the "Watch over each and all" at the close; also in the 'Chorus of Nymphs' at the sacred grove of the Temple of the Fates. In the solo portions we find melodious and grateful writing for the voices, if not strong individuality. In the love-duet at the end of the second act there are many clever and effective touches, yet the music seems well made rather than strongly inspired.

Dr. Naylor in the third act, and again in the fourth, shows his strong desire to be dramatic, and he succeeds up to a certain point; but it is by adopting a Wagnerian style, not displaying one of his own; at other times the orchestral music is stiff—plain chords merely supporting the voice part. As regards the orchestration, it was all sound and appropriate, though not distinctive. Of course it would be unreasonable to expect a composer suddenly to write stage music as well as men who have had years of experience. Dr. Naylor has written a very promising work, which assures us that if he writes a second opera, it will be a still better one. 'The Angelus,' with perhaps a few cuts, and shorter intervals between the acts than was the case on Wednesday, has indeed a fair chance of attracting for a time. Miss Florence Easton as Beatrice and Madame Gleeson-White as Sylvia were fairly successful. Madame Edna Thornton impersonated Death, and sang well. Mr. Francis MacLennan as Francis deserves much praise. The staging of the piece was excellent.

Alessandro Scarlatti's Harpsichord and Organ Music. Edited by J. S. Shedlock. Parts II. and III. (Bach & Co.)—In the Preface to the first part of this edition it was stated that while the music must be accounted valuable from an historical point of view, it possessed other attractions. Reference to the Minuet, Corrente, and Aria alla Francese in the recently published parts justifies that opinion. The new Toccatas are also interesting. It might truthfully be affirmed that in the earlier Toccatas Scarlatti occasionally indulged in prolixity. Here, however, his music is concise, and it displays cleverness. A set of Variations, which will be found at the beginning of Part III., deserves notice. In certain features, though not in all, the music recalls Pachelbel and other German composers of the period.

Musical Gossip.

SIGNOR TAMINI, who gave an orchestral concert at Queen's Hall on Monday, has an excellent, well-trained tenor voice. In Weber's 'Durch die Wälder' he displayed intelligence and dramatic instinct, but there was a lack of warmth; an aria from Meyerbeer's 'Africaine' showed off his voice to better advantage. He was evidently very nervous, so that one cannot definitely judge of his artistic powers. Miss Kathleen Parlow gave a clever performance of the first movement of Paganini's Violin Concerto in D. The Beecham Orchestra was under the direction of Mr. Thomas Beecham.

FEBRUARY 4TH has been fixed by the Queen for the concert at the Albert Hall in aid of the sufferers from the earthquake at Messina. It is being organized by Mr. John McCormack. Among the artists who have offered their services are Mesdames Lillian Blauvelt and Donalda, and Messrs. Lane Wilson and Ivor Foster.

M. VINCENT D'INDY, the distinguished French composer, will conduct his 'Wallenstein' Trilogy at the Symphony Concert, Queen's Hall on March 27th.

DR. RICHARD STRAUSS's new opera 'Elektra,' based on Hugo von Hofmannsthal's tragedy, was produced, as announced, at the Royal Opera-House, Dresden, on Monday evening, under the direction of Herr von Schuch. Frau Krull impersonated Elektra, while the parts of Clytemnestra and Chrysothemis were taken by Frau Schumann-Heinck and Fräulein Margarete Siems respectively. From various accounts the performance of this complicated work appears to have been most satisfactory.

MR. GRANVILLE BANTOCK, Peyton Professor of Music at Birmingham University, will conduct his Fantastic Poem 'The Pierrot of the Minute' at the Symphony Concert, Queen's Hall, this afternoon. The programme includes Beethoven's Pianoforte Concerto in E flat, with Madame Carreño as soloist.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

SUN.	Concert, 3.30, Royal Albert Hall.
—	Sunday Society Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.
—	Sunday League Concert, 7, Queen's Hall.
MON.	Sat. Royal Opera, Covent Garden.
TUES.	Miss Muriel Price's Vocal Recital, 8.15, Bechstein Hall.
—	Barns-Phillips Concert, 3, Bechstein Hall.
—	Mr. Frank Merrick's Pianoforte Recital, 8, Bechstein Hall.
—	Philharmonic Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
WED.	Miss Connie van Hulst's Concert, 3, Æolian Hall.
—	Queen's Hall Orchestral Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	London Choral Society, 8, Queen's Hall.
—	Mr. Donald Tovey's Concert, 8.30, Chelsea Town Hall.
—	Wessely String Quartet, 8.30, Bechstein Hall.
THURS.	Mr. T. Byard's Concert, 3.15, Bechstein Hall.
—	Miss Gertrude Meller's Pianoforte Recital, 3.15, Æolian Hall.
—	Strolling Players' Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
—	Mr. Septimus Webb's Pianoforte Recital, 8.15, Steinway Hall.
FRI.	Miss Leginska's Fourth Concert, 3, Æolian Hall.
—	Messrs. J. Selfridge and R. A. Buchan's Recital, 8.15, Steinway Hall.
SAT.	Chappell's Ballad Concert, 2.30, Queen's Hall.
—	Madame Carreño's Pianoforte Recital, 3.15, Bechstein Hall.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

HIS MAJESTY'S (Afternoon Theatre).—The Admirable Bashville; or, Constancy Rewarded, "Bernard Shaw's Masterpiece in the Elizabethan Style."—'Tilda's New Hat: a Play in One Act. By George Paston.

THERE is surely irony in the turn of events which has made Mr. Bernard Shaw, who long battered vainly, like a sturdy beggar, at the doors of our playhouses, become, as it were, a pampered favourite whom it is possible to accuse of keeping the warmth of public favour from his less lucky brethren. Yet it is a fact that the Afternoon Theatre Society's production of his 'Admirable Bashville' has provoked not a few complaints against his monopoly of the theatre of ideas. Why, we are asked, should a society which aims at carrying on the reforming work of Messrs. Vedrenne and Barker fall back on an old play of Mr. Shaw's—and that a mere jeu d'esprit—instead of giving a chance to the "unacted"? Once upon a time Shakespeare used to be spoken of as the great blackleg of our stage, who took the bread out of the mouths of modern dramatists. It is a quaint state of affairs in which the "rival" of Shakespeare, the anarchist of our drama, can be conceived of as partly responsible for the prevalence of unemployment among his fellow-craftsmen. Really, however, these protests are a little unfair to Mr. Shaw. In the old Court days he carried lesser-known men on his back, making the presentation of their dramas possible by the success of his own. May he not now claim room to perpetrate a harmless little joke?

For a joke is all that 'The Admirable Bashville' is, and a very amusing joke, though its satire is scarcely very subtle, and does not exactly hit the mark at which the author aimed. Meant to be a skit on the Elizabethan drama, it merely travesties the turgid rhetoric and high-flown romance of the school of Sheridan Knowles and Bulwer Lytton. Written to prove what an easy business is the turning-out of stage blank verse, it is made up for the most part of limping iambic lines such as any man with a poetic gift could produce wholesale, but having produced would as quickly destroy. If Mr. Shaw thinks that by decking out this stuff with a few scraps from sixteenth-century dramas and a few parodies of Shakespearian passages, he gets anything like an imitation of Elizabethan blank verse, he is mightily mistaken. Indeed, in his highest flights—such as his hero's denunciation of modern civilization and his (idealized) Zulu king's diatribe against the white man—he forgets his intentions of burlesque, and indulges in rhetoric of a very forcible type. Still, these are but rare excursions of his, and the atmosphere is generally that of farce—farce at his own expense. For ridicule though Mr. Shaw may the conventions of romance, his most relentless strokes are reserved for the creatures of his own fancy, the novel of his "nouage." In 'Cashel Byron's Profession,' the story on which his play is based, he treated the characters—pugilist hero and condescending lady—whose love-affair constitutes its essence, with a certain serious sympathy. They are made ludicrous figures on the stage; Cashel's talk is nearly always bombast, and Lydia, from being a girl of ultra-refinement, eager to discover a mate of brawn and muscle who shall be her counterpart, is converted into a silly romantic creature, all whims and fancies. That is the worst of Mr. Shaw's blistering humour: it spares nothing. If he is at a loss for a subject of satire, he will parody himself. He is capable of burlesquing every play he has ever written. 'Candida' has already come in for such treatment.

The actors enter very happily into the playwright's mood. If he employs beef-eaters to indicate his changes of scene, arranges comic effects in the orchestra, and brings more or less Elizabethan traditions of staging into quaint association with prizefighters, trainers, the Agricultural Hall, and Cetewayo's visit to England, his interpreters are unsparing in their efforts to give point to every sally of wit, extravagance ofrodomontade, and suggestion of humorous byplay. Mr. Ben Webster's treatment of his old part of Cashel Byron might almost be called an inspiration, so wholehearted is his delivery of his mock-heroics, so alert his sense of fun. Miss Marie Löhr makes Lydia the daintiest of rogues, and evidently revels in the nonsense she has to speak. Mr. Ainley lavishes his most sonorous diction on the part of Bashville, the footman who cherishes a secret attachment to his mistress. And Mr. Lennox Pawle as the trainer, Miss Rosina Filippi as Cashel's gushing mother, and Mr. James Hearn as the Zulu king, all strike the right note of irresponsibility.

Yet Mr. Shaw's humour leaves one conscious of a feeling of emptiness; so that the directors of the new Society have done well to follow this "masterpiece" with a play that has flesh and blood in it, a study of low life in which the Cockney woman of the people is shown in her true colours, and a nice balance is kept between shrewishness and good nature. In 'Tilda's New Hat' George Paston gives us three excellent variants on this type—differentiated with the nicest skill by Miss Agnes Thomas, Miss Florence Lloyd, and Miss Sydney Fairbrother—as well as drama that reveals both the depths and shallows of human nature.

FORTUNE PLAYHOUSE.—Pippa Passes. By Robert Browning.

As an experiment, perhaps the English Drama Society's staging of 'Pippa Passes' was just worth doing. As a curiosity, the production was just worth going to see. But the performance only confirmed conclusions at which any student of the theatre must have arrived independently. Pippa, with her innocence of heart and her happy optimism, is a creation of touching charm, and Browning's handling of the emotional crises of his characters, so strangely affected by the little girl's snatches of songs, is, beyond question, dramatic. But there happens to be a great difference between the drama of narrative and the drama of the stage. From the latter is eliminated all that is superfluous; in the former is expressed all that acting and stage accessories bring out. Browning's poem, apart from the loose connexion of its episodes, necessarily seems diffuse and lacking in concentration, because it is dramatic in the narrative sense. Just one scene got across the footlights at the performance—the duologue between the guilty lovers, Sebald and Ottima. That was to be expected, for here we have passion at white heat and in constantly changing mood. Yet that scene would require "cutting" if staged at a regular playhouse, and even here an expert will note that the general composition of the verse shows it to be intended for the eye rather than the ear. Miss Lucy Wilson and Mr. Gordon Bailey acted capably in this episode. The Pippa was Miss Isabel Roland.

William Shakespeare, Player, Playmaker, and Poet. By Canon Beeching. (Smith, Elder & Co.)—Under this somewhat grandiloquent title, Canon Beeching has issued a small volume containing three lectures, the first a direct series of arguments against Mr. Greenwood's 'Shakespeare Problem Restated.' The two others "endeavour to set out the Player's Life as simply as possible, and show the congruity of what is recorded of his character with the impression made upon our minds by the dramas themselves." Mr. Greenwood had simplified his case by limiting its extent. His legal acumen was chiefly spent in attempting to prove the impossibility of "the Stratfordian's" having written either poems or plays—a negative argument, with only a suggested affirmative of another possible author.

Canon Beeching begins to deal with this case much on the same lines as our own review of the work, and shows the irrelevance of many of the arguments, and the incorrect-ness of some of the statements, further explaining the "Mystery" in Ben Jonson's Birthday Ode to Bacon, Ben Jonson's pronouncements concerning the "Sweet Swan of Avon," and "the silence of Philip Henslowe." But he has laid himself open, in some cases, to strictures from Mr. Greenwood, as, for instance, concerning his parallel between Shakespeare's and Drayton's "schools and schoolmasters" (pp. 9, 10), arguing that "Drayton, like him, had no learning beyond what a schoolmaster could afford" (p. 15), whereas Drayton was educated in the family of Sir Henry Goodyere as a page, with a private tutor and an extensive library. The Canon is occasionally a little hazy. He differs from Prof. Churton Collins (whose views Mr. Greenwood accepts) as to the extent of Shakespeare's knowledge of the classics, which is shown in the poems and plays. He limits it to Ovid and Plautus and "besides these general debts, there are one or two other passages, such as Portia's speech on mercy, which come immediately, or through some other author, from the classics" (p. 12). He does not seem to remember that Sir John Conway makes use of 'De Clementia' in his 'Flowred Prayers' to try to melt the heart of Queen Elizabeth in his own favour.

The limits of time necessary to a lecture need not, in a volume, have precluded the lecturer from touching Mr. Greenwood's special argument concerning the legal knowledge of Shakespeare. Indeed, even with the addition and support of the two other lectures, 'The Story of the Life' and 'The Character of the Dramatist,' interesting as the latter is, the work is too slight for the conflict. So much has been written already for and against the assertions from which Mr. Greenwood has evolved his 'Problem,' that it would have been well if Canon Beeching had cut himself adrift from his lectures, and spent a little more time and trouble on his work. Nevertheless, even in this little volume there are collected some very hard problems for Mr. Greenwood's "replication." There is unfortunately no Index.

THE latest additions to Mr. J. S. Farmer's excellent series of "Tudor Facsimile Texts" (T. C. & E. C. Jack) are Myddylton's edition of Heywood's Four PP. (1545?), Charlewood's edition of Lewis Wager's interlude of Marie Magdalene (1567), and Bynnenman's edition of the anonymous Biblical interlude The Historie of Jacob and Esau (1568). The reproduction has been made with the greatest care. We desire to repeat our commendation of the series.

WE have also received the first volume of a new series of "Tudor Reprinted and Parallel Texts" under the same editorship, which may be described as intermediate between the foregoing and the less happily conceived set of "Early English Dramatists." Mr. Farmer's purpose appears to be much the same as that of the Malone Society, to supply carefully checked typographic copies of texts which may be accepted with confidence by students who have not access to the originals or to the expensive photographic facsimiles. The volume before us is Creed's print (1600) of Lyly's Maydes Metamorphosis. We doubt the wisdom of this selection, seeing that the text appeared only six years ago in Mr. Bond's Oxford edition of Lyly, and that there are many early plays which have never been reprinted. This consideration is not without force even in the case of the "Facsimile" series; here it should be taken to heart, if the claims of the prospectus are to be made good.

The reprint has been executed with great care, and the "obvious misprints" in the original have been noted in the short Preface.

Dramatic Gossip.

JUST as we go to press we hear with great regret of the death of that masterly artist Coquelin aîné, who made his first appearance at the Théâtre Français as long ago as 1860, and was appointed a "sociétaire" of that institution in 1864. We hope to deal further with his achievements.

MISS LENA ASHWELL has accepted as a successor to 'Diana of Dobson's' an unconventional comedy, at present called 'The Truants,' by Mr. W. T. Coleby, whose work has previously met with success at the Kingsway. It presents Miss Ashwell herself in the part of a distinguished traveller and author.

AT the Royal Institution two lectures on 'The Revival of Modern Drama,' by Mr. William Archer, are to be delivered on February 4th and 11th. Mr. Archer will begin his lectures by speaking of the movement of dramatic life about 1890 in England, France, and Germany.

A CORRESPONDENT writes:—

"The Athenæum of the 16th inst. contains a notice of a book by Mr. Rutland Barrington, in the course of which is quoted an anecdote related in his book. The tale is of an experience of Sir W. S. Gilbert, who was told by a lady in New York that she admired 'Mr. Bache's music.' Sir William jumped to the conclusion that the speaker referred to the music of Bach, whose name, he says, 'she pronounced Bayche.' So, to the lady's question, 'Can you tell me whether he is now composing?' he replied, 'No, Madam, he is decomposing'; and forthwith he and Mr. Rutland Barrington make a story of the incident at the lady's expense. But—alas for our story-tellers!—F. Edward Bache (pronounced Bayche) was a composer who wrote a considerable quantity of music for the chamber as well as some for orchestra and two operas—the latter, I believe, not published. He was born in Birmingham in 1833, and died in 1858. His name is known to musical people, and there is no reason to doubt that it was to his music that the lady referred. And as she was probably unaware of his early death, there is nothing, I suppose, inherently absurd in her having asked whether he was still composing. I fear that the point of the story recoils upon the narrators, who are apparently ignorant of the fact of Edward Bache's having existed. It must be allowed that the New York lady has the laugh on her side, but let us hope that it may be sufficient consolation to Sir W. S. Gilbert under the circumstances to observe that his play upon the word 'composing' still survives."

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—F. L.—A. W. P.—O. F.—Received. T. W. D.—F. W. F.—Many thanks. R. D.—J. B.—M. J.—F. E. W.—Not suitable for us. No notice can be taken of anonymous communications. We do not undertake to give the value of books, china, pictures, &c. We cannot undertake to reply to inquiries concerning the appearance of reviews of books.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

	PAGE
AUTHORS' AGENTS	118
BAGSTER & SONS	146
BELL & SONS	144
BLACKWOOD & SONS	118
CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS	119
CATALOGUES	118
CLARK	147
DUCKWORTH & Co.	120
EDUCATIONAL	117
ENO'S FRUIT SALT	147
EXHIBITIONS	117
HEINEMANN	121
LANE	122
LECTURES	117
LONDON LIBRARY	120
LONGMANS & Co.	121
LOW & Co.	122
MACMILLAN & Co.	122
MAGAZINES, &c.	146
MISCELLANEOUS	117
MURRAY	147
OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS	145
PRINTERS	117
PROVIDENT INSTITUTIONS	117
RICHARDS	119
ROUTLEDGE & SONS	120
SALES BY AUCTION	118
SANATOGEN	146
SITUATIONS VACANT	117
SITUATIONS WANTED	117
SMITH, ELDER & Co.	148
TYPE-WRITERS, &c.	118

MESSRS. BELL'S BOOKS.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Demy 8vo, illustrated, 10s. 6d. net.

CANADIAN TYPES OF THE OLD RÉGIME (1608-1698).

By C. W. COLBY,

Professor of History in the McGill University, Montreal.

A study of the period of French influence in Canada, written by a Canadian who thoroughly understands the attitude of French Canadians towards their own past.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Crown 8vo, illustrated, 7s. 6d. net.

BUILDERS OF UNITED ITALY (1808-1898).

By R. S. HOLLAND.

An introduction to the study of one of the most fascinating periods of modern European history, in the form of lives of eight of the greatest figures in the struggle for Italian Independence. Eight portraits are included.

NOW COMPLETED IN TWELVE VOLUMES.

THE PROSE WORKS OF JONATHAN SWIFT.

Edited by TEMPLE SCOTT.

With an Introduction

By the Right Hon. W. E. H. LECKY, M.P.

In 12 vols. with numerous Portraits and Facsimiles, 5s. each.

[Bohn's Standard Library.]

Vol. XII. completing the Edition. Bibliography by W. SPENCER JACKSON, and Full Index, with Essays on the Portraits of Swift and Stella by the Right Hon. Sir FREDERICK FALKNER, K.C., and on the relations between Swift and Stella by the Very Rev. J. H. BERNARD, D.D., Dean of St. Patrick's. With 2 Portraits and a View of Woodpark.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Vol. IV. (Parts VII and VIII.). Small 4to, 12s. net.

With 3 Maps and 2 Plans.

THE ITINERARY OF JOHN LELAND.

Newly Edited from the MSS. by LUCY TOULMIN SMITH.

This Edition will be completed in Five Volumes, of which Vol. I. (containing Parts I.-III.), price 18s. net, Vol. II. (Parts IV. and V.), price 12s. net, and Vol. III. (the 'Itinerary in Wales'), price 10s. 6d. net, are already published.

READY NEXT WEDNESDAY.

Demy 8vo, 8s. 6d. net.

LIFE OF DEAN COLET, Founder of St. Paul's School.

By the Rev. J. H. LUPTON, M.A.,

Surmaster of St. Paul's School, and formerly Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge.

With an Appendix of some of his English Writings, and a Facsimile Portrait taken from the Engraving in Holland's 'Heroologia.'

BELL'S MINIATURE SERIES OF GREAT WRITERS.

NEW VOLUME JUST PUBLISHED.

Pott 8vo, cloth, illustrated, 1s. net.

GOLDSMITH.

By E. S. LANG BUCKLAND.

Full List sent on application.

THE STANDARD AUTHORITY. WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY.

TWENTIETH-CENTURY EDITION.

Revised and Enlarged, with an Appendix of 25,000 Words, Phrases, and Definitions.

2,348 pages. 5,000 Illustrations.

WRITE FOR DETAILED PROSPECTUS, with Specimen Pages, hundreds of Opinions of Eminent Men, and prices in various styles of binding.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS, York House, Portugal Street, W.C.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS.

A NATURALIST IN TASMANIA. By GEOFFREY SMITH. With 33 Plates, 4 Text Figures, and a Folding Map showing the Geological Features of the Island. 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

THE PHYSICS OF EARTHQUAKE PHENOMENA. By CARGILL GILSTON KNOTT. With 44 Diagrams. 8vo, 14s. net. Among the Contents are Chapters on the Phenomena, Distribution, and Periodicities of Earthquakes.
Nature.—"An adequate and clearly expressed treatment of the subject."
Educational Times.—"The treatment is very simple and most interesting."

THE FACE OF THE EARTH (Das Antlitz der ERDE). By EDUARD SUESS. Translated by HERTHA B. C. SOLLAS under the direction of W. J. SOLLAS; with a Preface by Prof. SUESS. Royal 8vo.

Vol. I. with 6 Maps and 48 Illustrations, 1l. 5s. net.

Vol. II. with 3 Maps and 42 Illustrations, 1l. 5s. net.

Vol. III. with 7 Maps and 23 Illustrations, 18s. net.

Athenæum.—"A translation exceptional in accuracy and elegance."

ANNALS OF BOTANY. Edited by I. BAYLEY BALFOUR, D. H. SCOTT, J. B. FARMER, and R. THAXTER, assisted by other Botanists.

COMPLETION OF VOLUME XXII.

Royal 8vo, morocco back, with many Plates and Illustrations, 2l. 16s.

Just Published: Vol. XXIII. No. LXXXIX., 14s.

RHODES OF THE KNIGHTS. By BARON DE BELABRE. Demy 4to, buckram gilt, with a Frontispiece in Chromo-Colotype and 188 Maps, Inscriptions, Shields, and Photographs in the Text, 1l. 11s. 6d. net.

ANTHROPOLOGY AND THE CLASSICS. Six Lectures delivered before the University of Oxford by ARTHUR J. EVANS, ANDREW LANG, GILBERT MURRAY, F. B. JEVONS, J. L. MYRES, W. WARDE FOWLER. Edited by R. R. MARETT. Illustrated. 8vo, 6s. net.

Athenæum.—"Every page in the book is full of interest.....They are all good reading and suggestive."

TRANSACTIONS OF THE THIRD INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS OF THE HISTORY OF RELIGIONS. Royal 8vo, 2 vols. 1l. 1s. net.

Manchester Guardian.—"The volumes form a library of the ripest scholarship on the history of religions."

THE HEBREW PROPHETS FOR ENGLISH READERS, in the Language of the Revised Version of the English Bible, printed in their Poetical Form, with Headings and brief Annotation. Edited by F. H. WOODS and F. E. POWELL. 4 vols. Vol. I. AMOS, HOSEA, ISAIAH (1-39), and MICAH. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

FOLK-MEMORY; or, the Continuity of British ARCHAEOLOGY. By WALTER JOHNSON. With Illustrations by SIDNEY HARROWING and others. 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

WELSH MEDIEVAL LAW. Being a Text of the Laws of Howell the Good, namely the British Museum Harleian MS. 4353 of the 13th Century, with Translation, Introduction, Appendix, Glossary, Index, and a Map. By A. W. WADE-EVANS. Crown 8vo, 8s. 6d. net.

TURBERVILLE'S NOBLE ARTE OF VENERIE OR HUNTING. 1576. Linen rag paper, printed with the Types given to the University by Dr. FELL, 1660. 7s. 6d. net.
[New Volume Tudor and Stuart Library.

Times.—"Strikingly quaint and interesting.....The book is shrewdly entertaining from beginning to end."

CLARENDON TERCENTENARY.

LARGE-TYPE LIBRARY EDITIONS.

CLARENDON'S HISTORY.

1849.

7 vols. medium 8vo, 2l. 2s. net.

CLARENDON'S LIFE.

1857.

2 vols. medium 8vo, 12s. net. Or 2l. 5s. net for the 9 vols.

CLARENDON'S HISTORY AND HIS LIFE.

1839.

Imperial 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

ALSO MR. MACRAY'S ANNOTATED EDITION OF THE HISTORY.

1888.

Re-edited from a fresh collation of the original MS. in the Bodleian.

6 vols. crown 8vo, 1l. 16s. net.

A HISTORY OF CANADA, 1763-1812. By C. P. LUCAS. 8vo, 12s. 6d. net. Uniform with the CANADIAN WAR, 1812.

SKETCHES OF RULERS OF INDIA. Vol. I. THE MUTINY ERA AND AFTER. Vol. II. THE COMPANY'S GOVERNORS. Vol. III. THE GOVERNORS-GENERAL AND DUPLÉIX. Vol. IV. THE PRINCES OF INDIA AND ALBUQUERQUE. By G. D. OSWELL. Crown 8vo, 2s. net each.

THE NANDI: their Language and Folk-lore.

By A. C. HOLLIS. With an Introduction by Sir CHARLES ELIOT. With 44 Plates, numerous Illustrations in the Text, and a Map. 8vo, 16s. net.

THE MASAI: their Language and Folk-lore.

By A. C. HOLLIS. With Introduction by Sir CHARLES ELIOT. With 27 Full-Page Illustrations and a Map. 8vo, 14s. net.

THE TIDONG DIALECTS OF BORNEO.

By MERVYN W. H. BEECH. With Preface and Notes by Dr. ABR. ANTH. FOKKER. Illustrated. Fcap. 8vo, 5s. net.

LALA-LAMBA HANDBOOK.

By A. C. MADAN. Fcap. 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

LENJE HANDBOOK.

By A. C. MADAN. Fcap. 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

THE WORKS OF ARISTOTLE.

Translated into English under the Editorship of J. A. SMITH and W. D. ROSS. Vol. VIII. METAPHYSICA. By W. D. ROSS. 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

THE MORAL SYSTEM OF DANTE'S INFERNO.

By W. H. V. READE. 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

NOTES ON SCOTTISH SONG.

By ROBERT BURNS. Written in an interleaved copy of 'The Scots Musical Museum,' with Additions by ROBERT RIDDELL and others. Edited by the late JAMES C. DICK. Crown 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

COMPLETE CATALOGUE POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

London: HENRY FROWDE, Oxford University Press, Amen Corner, E.C.

Magazines, &c.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY AND AFTER.
FEBRUARY.

LORD MORLEY'S INDIAN REFORMS. By Sir Charles A. Elliott, K.C.S.I., formerly Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.
THE TAXATION OF LAND VALUES. By Harold Cox, M.P.
THE ATTITUDE OF SCIENCE TO THE UNUSUAL: a Reply to Prof. Newcomb. By Sir Oliver Lodge, F.R.S.
WHAT SHOULD THE GOVERNMENT DO? By Harold Spender.
THE LOST EMPIRE OF ENGLAND (2). By Walter Frewen Lord.
THE PREVENTION OF CRIME ACT. By Sir Robert Anderson, K.C.B., late Assistant Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis.
OUR CONSCRIPTS AT CRÉCY. By G. G. Coulton.
THE REAL LAFCADIO HEARN. By Mrs. Arthur Kennard.
AN 'INSURANCE AGAINST UNEMPLOYMENT' SCHEME. By Miss Edith Sellers.
BRITISH WORK FOR BRITISH WORKERS. By J. Ellis Barker.
DIVORCE versus COMPULSORY CELIBACY. By Basil Tozer.
THE MESSINA EARTHQUAKE. By Charles Davison, Sc.D. F.G.S.
MAGGIE: a Sketch from Life. By Mrs. Cecil Popham.
FELIX MENDELSSOHN-BARTHOLODY. By Miss A. E. Keeton.
A GERMAN VIEW OF THE ANGLO-GERMAN PROBLEM. By C. S. GOLDMAN.
London: SPOTTISWOODE & CO., Lrn., 5, New Street Square.

CONTEMPORARY REVIEW.

Edited by Sir PERCY RUTING.
No. 518, FEBRUARY, 2s. 6d.
The Two-Power Standard. By Prof. H. Stanley Jevons.
Invasion considered from the Nautical Standpoint. By Master Mariner.
Messina. By Lawrence Jerrold.
Providence and Earthquake. By the Editors.
Mendelssohn in 1919. By Ernest Newman.
Trade Unions and Parliamentary Representation. I. By Arthur Henderson, M.P. II. By J. Ramsay MacDonald, M.P.
The Love of Wild Nature. By Havelock Ellis.
Historic Fact and Christian Doctrine. By the Rev. W. B. Selbie.
English Literature and the Indian Student. By Tau.
German Emigration and the Expansion of Germany. By J. S. Mann.
Wages Boards. By the Head Master of Eton.
Foreign Affairs: The Balkan Problem Solved; The European Conference; Political Parties in the Ottoman Empire. By Dr. E. J. Dillon.
Literary Supplement:—
The Centenary of Edgar Allan Poe. By Edmund Gosse.
Reviews of Books: Modernism; Mr. Lowes Dickinson's 'Political Dialogue'; The Cambridge Modern History; Lord Northbrook; Pierre de Ronsard; 'The Political Future of India'; &c.
London: HORACE MARSHALL & SON.

THE BUILDER (founded 1842), 4, Catherine Street, London, W.C., January 30, contains:—

THE WALLS OF JERICHO.
MONTAGUE HOUSE, BLOOMSBURY.
REINFORCED CONCRETE (Architectural Association).
THE ORDNANCE SURVEY (Surveyors' Institution).
LECTURES AT CARPENTERS' HALL.
PICTURE EXHIBITIONS.

ILLUSTRATIONS:

DETAIL ELEVATION OF COMPETITION DESIGN FOR LONDON COUNTY HALL.
ST. JOHN'S SCHOOLS, HOXTON.
ANSELL INSTITUTE, LANCASHIRE.
DESIGN FOR HOUSE AT SHORNE BY THE LATE A. H. SKIPWORTH.

From Offices as above (4d. by post 4½d.), at Railway Bookstalls, Bookshops, and of all Newsagents.

NOW READY, royal 4to, whole-bound cloth, pp. 300, price 12. 11s. 6d.
NATIONAL ANTARCTIC EXPEDITION, 1901-1904.

ALBUM OF PHOTOGRAPHS AND SKETCHES.

With a PORTFOLIO OF PANORAMIC VIEWS.
ALBUM contains 165 Plates and Descriptive Letterpress, with Preface by Sir ARCHIBALD GEIKIE, Pres.R.S.
PORTFOLIO contains 24 Panoramic Sketches and 2 Maps.
Published by the Royal Society.

Sold by HARRISON & SONS, 45, St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C., and OLIVER & BOYD, Tweeddale Court, Edinburgh.

EBENEZER PROUT'S WORKS.

Bound, each net, 5s.
HARMONY: its Theory and Practice. Twenty-fourth Impression. Revised and largely Re-written.
ANALYTICAL KEY TO THE EXERCISES in the Same. Net 3s.
COUNTERPOINT: Strict and Free. Ninth Impression.
DOUBLE COUNTERPOINT AND CANON. Fourth Impression.
FUGUE. Fifth Impression.
FUGAL ANALYSIS. Third Impression.
MUSICAL FORM. Seventh Impression.
APPLIED FORMS. Fifth Impression.
THE ORCHESTRA. 2 vols. Fourth Impression.
AUGENER, Lrn., 6, New Burlington Street, and 22, Newgate Street.

NOTICE.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

THE VOLUME

JULY to DECEMBER, 1908,

WITH THE INDEX,

Price 10s. 6d.,

IS NEARLY READY.

, The INDEX separately, price 6d.; by post, 6½d.

Also Cases for Binding, price 1s.; by post, 1s. 2d.

JOHN C. FRANCIS & J. EDWARD FRANCIS,
Notes and Queries Office, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

HOW GREAT MEN RECOUP THEIR ENERGIES.

REMARKABLE TESTIMONY.

The keynote of happiness, long life, and successful achievement is the healthy mind in the healthy body. Sanatogen is the tonic food which is being prescribed by the medical profession to-day to bring about this happy condition. Not only have 7,600 physicians endorsed, in writing, the merits of Sanatogen as the ideal recuperative and restorative, but the most distinguished men and women of the day have not hesitated in coming forward to testify as to the great benefit they have derived from the use of Sanatogen.

Thus Lord RONALD SUTHERLAND GOWER, the sculptor and historian, says:—

"Hammerfield, Penshurst, Kent.

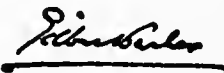

"I feel it only due to the benefit conferred in my general health by Sanatogen to write to inform those interested in that wonderful medicine that in a couple of months' time it has cured me of all gouty trouble. Sanatogen has done me far more good than all the waters of Bath and Harrogate."

Sir GILBERT PARKER, M.P., the eminent author and traveller, writes:—

"20, Carlton House Terrace, S. W.

"I have used Sanatogen at intervals since last autumn with extraordinary benefit. It is to my mind a true food tonic, feeding the nerves, increasing the energy, and giving fresh vigour to the overworked body and mind."

Sir JOHN HARE, the popular actor, says:—

"75, Upper Berkeley Street, W.

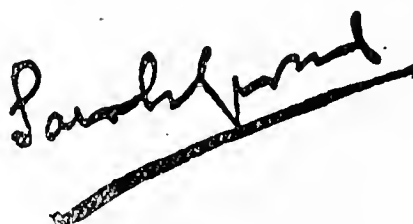

"I have found Sanatogen a most valuable tonic and stimulant during a period when I had to work very hard under conditions of great weakness and ill-health. I can heartily recommend it to those working under similarly distressing circumstances."

Mme. SARAH GRAND, the eminent authoress, writes:—

"10, Grove Hill, Tunbridge Wells.

"Sanatogen has done everything for me which it is said to be able to do for cases of nervous debility and exhaustion. I began to take it after nearly four years' enforced idleness from extreme debility, and felt the benefit almost immediately. And now, after taking it steadily three times a day for twelve weeks, I find myself able to enjoy both work and play again, and also able to do as much of both as I ever did."

Space forbids mention of the many more very interesting autographs of people eminent in nearly every walk of life, and their testimony contained in a dainty publication issued by the Sanatogen Co., under the title of 'Autographs of Celebrities.' All those interested should write for a copy, which will be forwarded gratis and post free on application to the Sanatogen Co., 12, Chenies Street, London, W.C., mentioning the Athenæum. Sanatogen, which, by the way, is the tonic food remedy used in the Royal Family, is sold by all chemists in tins from 1s. 9d. to 9s. 6d.

WORKS BY WILLIAM THYNNE LYNN.

ELEVENTH EDITION NOW READY.

Price Two Shillings net.

CELESTIAL MOTIONS:

A Handy Book of Astronomy.

With 5 Plates.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.,

Member of the British Astronomical Association; formerly of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich; Author of 'Remarkable Comets,' 'Remarkable Eclipses,' 'Astronomy for the Young,' &c.

"Well known as one of our best introductions to astronomy."—Guardian.

NINTH EDITION.

Fcap. 8vo, cloth, price Sixpence.

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES:

A Sketch of the most interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses, both in Ancient and Modern Times.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"The booklet deserves to continue in popularity. It presents a mass of information in small compass."—Dundee Advertiser.

THIRTEENTH EDITION JUST OUT, price Sixpence, cloth.

REMARKABLE COMETS:

A Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

FIFTH EDITION, Revised to 1908,
NOW READY, fcap. 8vo, cloth, price Sixpence.

ASTRONOMY FOR THE YOUNG.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Nothing better of its kind has ever appeared."—English Mechanic.

London:

SAMUEL BAGSTER & SONS, LIMITED,
15, Paternoster Row.

HOP PILLOWS.—"Goodnight" Brand
Invaluable to sufferers from Insomnia, Neuralgia, Nervous Headaches, &c. Specially prepared, post free, 5s. from THE HOP COMPANY, 26, Denman Street, London Bridge, S.E.

For Acidity of the Stomach.

For Heartburn and Headache.

For Gout and Indigestion.

DINNEFORD'S

MAGNESIA

For Sour Eructations and Bilious Affections.

A Safe and most effective Aperient for regular use.

READY TO-DAY

DR. HASTINGS' ONE VOLUME DICTIONARY OF THE BIBLE

This is an entirely New and Original Work, and is NOT a condensation of his great five-volume Dictionary. All the Articles have been prepared by Specialists and bear their Signatures, and the whole Dictionary is thoroughly abreast of present-day scholarship.

ONE THOUSAND PAGES, with Maps, &c. | In cloth binding 20s. net
 printed on light paper and handsomely bound | In half-morocco 25s. net

A New and Complete Prospectus may be had from any Bookseller, or from the Publishers

THE BACKGROUND OF THE GOSPELS; or, Judaism in the Period between the Old and New Testaments. By Rev. W. FAIRWEATHER, M.A.

 Kirkealdy, Author of 'Origen and Greek Patristic Theology,' &c. 8s. net

THE GREEK AND EASTERN CHURCHES. By Principal W. F.

ADENEY, D.D., Manchester. New Volume "INTERNATIONAL THEOLOGICAL LIBRARY." 12s

The Athenæum says in a review of Dr. HASTINGS'

ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF RELIGION & ETHICS

"The general result of our examination enables us to say that the editor has risen to the height of his great undertaking. The work deserves the fullest and best encouragement which the world of readers and investigators can give it, and we hope that practical support will be granted to it in as full a measure as Dr. Hastings and the Publishers have a right to expect."

VOLUME ONE NOW READY

In cloth binding 28s. net | Also in Twelve Monthly Parts at 2s. 6d. net
 In half-morocco 34s. net | each. Parts I.-IV. ready.

Full Prospectus of this great Work free to any address.

EDINBURGH :
 38, George Street.

T. & T. CLARK

LONDON :
 14, Paternoster Sq.

LONDON : Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co., Ltd.

YOUR BIRTHRIGHT IS HEALTH.THE SCIENCE IN A NUTSHELL.

'Health is a Man's Birthright. It is as natural to be well as to be born. All pathological conditions, all diseases, and all tendencies to disease are the result of the transgression of physiologic and hygienic law. This is the science of health in a nutshell.'—DENSMORE.

Eno's Fruit Salt

IS NATURE'S ANTIDOTE FOR HUMAN ILLS
 arising from the neglect or violation of her laws.

'Our Acts, our angels are, for good or ill, our fatal shadows that walk by us still.'

And such is life, so gliding on, it glimmers like a meteor, and is gone.'

CAUTION.—Examine the capsule, and see that it is marked ENO'S 'FRUIT SALT.' Without it you have the sincerest form of flattery—IMITATION.

Prepared only by J. C. ENO (Limited), 'FRUIT SALT' WORKS, LONDON, S.E.

NEXT WEEK'S ATHENÆUM will contain
Reviews of EDWIN PUGH'S CHARLES DICKENS, THE APOSTLE OF THE PEOPLE, and ERIC PARKER'S HIGH-WAYS AND BYWAYS IN SURREY.

MR. MURRAY'S
NEW BOOKS.

A New Novel by the Author of 'The Beloved Vagabond.'

SEPTIMUS.

By WILLIAM J. LOCKE. 6s.

[Second Impression.]

"Light-hearted, whimsical, a thing of infinite laughter, which is nevertheless continually on the verge of tears, Mr. W. J. Locke's new novel has a tone altogether its own, a tone deliciously elusive and enchanting."—Daily Telegraph.

"All the elements that most delight the admirer of Mr. W. J. Locke's novels are present in his new one 'Septimus.'"—Morning Post.

BEYOND THE SKYLINE.

New Novel. By ROBERT AITKEN. 6s.

THE ARCHDEACON'S FAMILY.

A New Novel. By MAUD EGERTON
 KING. 6s.

THE TERRITORIAL FORCE.

A Manual of its Law, Organization, and Administration. By HAROLD BAKER. With an Introduction by the Right Hon. R. B. HALDANE,
 K.C. M.P. Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

"Examination of the book shows that he has a complete mastery of his subject, combined with the admirable quality of a writer skilled in clearness of statement and exposition.....Will be found indispensable to members and Secretaries of County Associations, while all members of the Force would be well advised to possess and study it."

Army and Navy Gazette.

THE SOUTH AFRICAN NATIVES :

Their Present Condition and Progress.

Edited by the SOUTH AFRICAN NATIVE
 RACES COMMITTEE. Demy 8vo, 6s. net.

LIFE OF LORD NORTON.

(Right Hon. Sir CHARLES ADDER-LEY, K.C.M.G.), 1814-1905, Statesman and Philanthropist. By WILLIAM S.
 CHILDE - PEMBERTON. With Portraits and other Illustrations. Demy 8vo,
 12s. net.

NELSON'S HARDY.

His Life, Letters, and Friends.

By A. M. BROADLEY and Rev. R. G.
 BARTELOT. Many Illustrations and Portraits. 10s. 6d. net.

"The importance of this Life and Letters of Hardy is undeniable.....That Hardy is worthy of a complete biography is undoubted, and this book is a desirable possession to all who care for England's naval glories."—Daily Chronicle.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle Street, W.

With a Preface by SIR GEORGE DOUGLAS, Bart., a Photogravure Frontispiece, and 7 Half-Tone Illustrations.

Small demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

PERCY: PRELATE AND POET,

EDITOR OF 'THE RELIQUES.'

BY ALICE C. C. GAUSSEN,

AUTHOR OF 'A LATER PEPYS,' 'A WOMAN OF WIT AND WISDOM,' &c.

From Papers in the possession of the Duke of Northumberland and Lord Colchester, and containing Original Letters from Johnson and Goldsmith in the possession of Bishop Percy's Descendants.

Saturday Review.—"Miss Gausсен may well be content with the result of her labours, for she has collected and used her material with care and taste, and tells the story with an easy raciness of style which is sadly to seek in many biographies.....Indeed it may be said without disparagement of Percy, as may be said of Boswell's Life without disparaging Johnson, that this book owes its attractiveness very largely to the incidental references to well-known people of the period, such as Gray, Goldsmith, Reynolds, Betty, Duchess of Northumberland, and many others.....Ireland in the latter part of the eighteenth century did not make for a quiet life, as may be gathered from the graphic accounts of attacks by the French, rebellions, and riots given in Miss Gausсен's narrative and the Bishop's letters.....He was one whom it would have been a pleasure to know, and of whom it is a pleasure to read."

Globe.—"Miss Gausсен has done her task conscientiously and thoroughly.She writes gracefully and well, and with full and accurate knowledge of eighteenth-century literature."

Daily Telegraph.—"In these pages we see Percy as a member of the most famous literary and art circles that London has known; we see him in his first curacy, and follow him through his stages of progress to the See of Dromore.We find him a worthy and likable man.....His biographer has not sought to make a hero of him, but she has, from many sources—including hitherto undrawn-upon MSS.—succeeded in giving us a pen-portrait that may be accepted as just and adequate."

Evening Standard.—"Bishop Percy has been fortunate in his biographer.Miss Alice Gausсен has brought to bear upon her work a great deal of tact and charm.....Her biography achieves the important end of making its subject a living person.....Her skill in revealing the expansion of Percy's character from the pleasure-loving and hot-tempered youth to the revered and benevolent old age is also to be commended."

ALICE C. C. GAUSSEN'S

PERCY: PRELATE AND POET,

EDITOR OF 'THE RELIQUES OF ANCIENT ENGLISH POETRY.'

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION. READY FEBRUARY 5.

In 3 vols. sold separately. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net each.

HOURS IN A LIBRARY.

By Sir LESLIE STEPHEN, K.C.B.

CONTENTS OF THE VOLUMES.

I. De Foe's Novels—Richardson—Pope as a Moralist—Sir Walter Scott—Nathaniel Hawthorne—Balzac—De Quincey—Sir Thomas Browne—Jonathan Edwards—Horace Walpole.

II. Dr. Johnson's Writings—Crabbe—William Hazlitt—Disraeli's Novels—Massinger—Fielding—Cowper and Rousseau—First Edinburgh Reviewers—Wordsworth's Ethics—Landon's Conversations—Macaulay.

III. Charlotte Brontë—Charles Kingsley—Godwin and Shelley—Gray and his School—Sterne—Country Books—George Eliot—Autobiography—Carlyle's Ethics—State Trials—S. T. Coleridge.

READY FEBRUARY 5. Small demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

THE MEANING OF MONEY.

By HARTLEY WITHERS, City Representative of the Times.

Crown 8vo, 6s. READY FEBRUARY 5.

A NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'BROKE OF COVENDEN.'

ARAMINTA.

By J. C. SNAITH,

Author of 'Henry Northcote,' 'William Jordan, Junr.,' 'Broke of Covenden,' &c.

 A lively and humorous comedy springing from the arrival in Mayfair of a country cousin with the mind of a milkmaid and the face of a Gainsborough duchess.

READY FEBRUARY 16.

With 9 Illustrations. Large post 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

PRE-TRACTARIAN OXFORD:

A Reminiscence of the Oriel 'Noetics.'

By the Rev. W. TUCKWELL, M.A.,

Late Fellow of New College, Author of 'Reminiscences of Oxford.'

PUBLIC OPINION.—"A most readable magazine.....one of the most interesting of all the January magazines. It is readable from beginning to end, and with matter worth reading."

SPHERE.—"The best story in the January magazines is in CORNHILL. It is entitled 'Poor Susan.'"

THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE.

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, price 1s.

Contents of FEBRUARY Number.

THE PALADIN. Chaps. 3-5. By Horace Annesley Vachell.

SIXTY YEARS IN THE WILDERNESS. XXIX.-XXXI. (Conclusion.) By Henry W. Lucy.

BACCHUS AND THE PIRATES. By Alfred Noyes.

MANCHURIA—IN THE MOURNE MOUNTAINS. By Col. E. Macartney-Filgate.

TEXAS JACK AND THE BOTTICELLIS. By Margaret Sherwood.

ROBERT BROWNING IN EDINBURGH. By Rosaline Masson.

ARCHIE'S PLEESURIN. By S. Macnaughtan.

THE BRIGANDS' FOREST. By Norman Douglas.

A PARSON OF THE THIRTIES. By S. G. Tallentyre.

PRISCILLA OF THE GOOD INTENT. Chaps. 16-17. By Halliwell Sutcliffe.

London: SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo Place, S.W.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 4241.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1909.

PRICE
THREEPENCE.
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER.

GERALD MASSEY.

THE FUND FOR THE WIDOW AND DAUGHTERS OF
THE LATE GERALD MASSEY.

List of Subscriptions.

	£	s.	d.
From the Royal Bounty Fund, by the kindness of the late Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman	200	0	0
The Committee of the Royal Literary Fund	100	0	0
William Tebb, Esq.	25	0	0
Claude Montefiore, Esq.	20	0	0
Ardesir Framjee Vakil, Esq. Bombay	20	0	0
James Robertson, Esq.	10	0	0
G. W. Foote, Esq., and Readers of the Freethinker	9	13	0
His Excellency the Hon. Whitelaw Reid	5	5	0
Andrew Glendinning, Esq.	5	5	0
Mrs. A. Swinton	5	5	0
Prof. I. Gollancz and Friend	5	0	0
H. Kentley Moore, Esq., Mayor of Croydon	5	0	0
The Misses Raeburn	5	0	0
The Misses Ridley	5	0	0
London Spiritualist Alliance	5	0	0
G. Massey, Esq. New York	5	0	0
Mrs. Frank Marshall	5	0	0
Miss Frost	5	0	0
Mrs. Dawe	5	0	0
Mrs. Pearce	3	3	0
Mrs. Waterhouse	2	2	0
John M. Robertson, Esq. M.P.	2	2	0
Hon. Alfred Deakin, Prime Minister, Commonwealth of Australia	2	2	0
J. MacWhirter, Esq.	2	2	0
J. F. Kaye, Esq.	2	2	0
Mrs. George Pearce-Scrofold	2	0	0
J. B. Shipley, Esq.	2	0	0
Sir Alexander Simpson	2	0	0
Thomas Hodgson, Esq.	2	0	0
Mrs. Elliot Millar	2	0	0
Sir Harry Johnston	1	1	0
Prof. Churton Collins	1	1	0
Mrs. Bradlaugh Bonner	1	1	0
J. W. Harman, Esq.	1	1	0
John M. Hole, Esq.	1	1	0
John Auld, Esq. Rothsay	1	1	0
Mr. and Mrs. James Coates	1	1	0
Lord Coleridge	1	1	0
Miss Katharine Bates	1	1	0
E. Tanner, Esq.	1	1	0
W. Williams, Esq.	1	1	0
R. Bickerstaff, Esq.	1	1	0
Mrs. Hinton	1	1	0
Mrs. H. Stables	1	1	0
Dr. Andrew Jackson Davis, Boston, U.S.A.	1	0	0
Mrs. Bowman	1	0	0
Mrs. Nugent	1	0	0
Rev. Mungo Reid	1	0	0
Charles Clements, Esq.	1	0	0
Miss C. L. Thomson	1	0	0
Miss E. G. Ferrier	1	0	0
Wm. Robertson, Esq.	1	0	0
Mrs. Margaret Miller	1	0	0
Edward J. Thomson, Esq.	1	0	0
Wilfrid Hill, Esq.	0	10	6
Mr. N. Kilburn	0	10	6
"B. C." London	0	10	0
Anon., Edinburgh	0	10	0
From a Friend, California	0	7	6
Harold Summers, Esq.	0	5	0
"E. J." Newcastle	0	5	0
Harold Carpenter, Esq.	0	5	0
Anon.	0	5	0
M. H. A.	0	2	6
Anon.	0	1	0

The total amount received is 497l. 14s. and the deductions for printing and other expenses amount to 107l. 3s. 6d., leaving a balance of 487l. 10s. 6d.

Any further subscriptions will be gladly received by me, but these will be only individually acknowledged. No further list will be printed. JAMES ROBERTSON.
5, Granby Terrace, Hillhead, Glasgow, Scotland.

Exhibitions.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF ARTS.

WINTER EXHIBITION.
Open from 9 A.M. to 6 P.M. Admission 1s.
Catalogue, 6d. Season Ticket, 5s.

ROWLANDSON DRAWINGS, also ETCHINGS

by D. S. MACLAUGHLAN and H. MULREADY STONE.
Exhibition now open at Mr. R. GUTEKUNST'S, 16, King Street, St. James's, S.W. 10-6 Daily. Admission 1s.

Provident Institutions.

THE BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Founded 1837.
Patron—HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.
Invested Capital, 30,000l.
A UNIQUE INVESTMENT
Offered to London Booksellers and their Assistants.

A young man or woman of twenty-five can invest the sum of Twenty Guineas (or its equivalent by instalments), and obtain the right to participate in the following advantages:—
FIRST. Freedom from want in time of Adversity as long as need exists.

SECOND. Permanent Relief in Old Age.

THIRD. Medical Advice by eminent Physicians and Surgeons.

FOURTH. A Cottage in the Country (Abbots Langley, Hertfordshire) for aged Members, with garden produce, coal, and medical attendance free, in addition to an annuity.

FIFTH. A furnished house in the same Retreat at Abbots Langley for the use of Members and their families for holidays or during convalescence.

SIXTH. A contribution towards Funeral expenses when it is needed.

SEVENTH. All these are available not for Members only, but also for their wives or widows and young children.

EIGHTH. The payment of the subscriptions confers an absolute right to these benefits in all cases of need.

For further information apply to the Secretary Mr. GEORGE LARNER, 28, Paternoster Row E.C.

NEWSVENDORS' BENEVOLENT AND PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Founded 1839.

Funds exceed 27,000l.

Office: 15 and 16, Farringdon Street, London, E.C.

Patron:

The Right Hon. THE EARL OF ROSEBURY, K.G. K.T.

President:

The LORD GLENESK.

Treasurer:

THE LONDON AND WESTMINSTER BANK, LIMITED.

OBJECTS.—This Institution was established in 1839 in the City of London, under the Presidency of the late Alderman Harner, for granting Pensions and Temporary Assistance to principals and assistants engaged as vendors of Newspapers.

MEMBERSHIP.—Every Man or Woman throughout the United Kingdom, whether Publisher, Wholesaler, Retailer, Employer, or Employee, is entitled to become a Member of this Institution, and enjoy its benefits upon payment of Five Shillings annually, or Three Guineas for life, provided that he or she is engaged in the sale of Newspapers, and such Members who thus contribute secure priority of consideration in the event of their needing aid from the Institution.

PENSIONS.—The Annuity now number Thirty-six, the Men receiving 25l. and the Women 20l. per annum each.

The "Royal Victoria Pension Fund," commemorating the great advantages the News Trade enjoyed under the rule of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, provides 20l. a year each for Six Widows of News-vendors.

The "Francis Fund" provides Pensions for One Man, 25l., and One Woman 20l., and was specially subscribed in memory of the late John Francis, who died on April 6, 1882, and was for more than fifty years Publisher of the Athenæum. He took an active and leading part throughout the whole period of the agitation for the repeal of the various then existing "Taxes on Knowledge," and was for very many years a staunch supporter of this Institution.

The "Horace Marshall Pension Fund" is the gift of the late Mr. Horace Brooks Marshall. The employees of that firm have primary right of election to its benefits.

The "Herbert Lloyd Pension Fund" provides 25l. per annum for one man, in perpetual and grateful memory of Mr. Herbert Lloyd, who died May 12, 1899.

The principal features of the Rules governing election to all Pensions are, that each Candidate shall have been (1) a Member of the Institution for not less than ten years preceding application; (2) not less than fifty-five years of age; (3) engaged in the sale of Newspapers for at least ten years.

RELIEF.—Temporary relief is given in cases of distress, not only to Members of the Institution, but to News-vendors or their servants who may be recommended for assistance by Members of the Institution. Inquiry is made in such cases by Visiting Committees, and relief is awarded in accordance with the merits and requirements of each case. W. WILKIE JONES Secretary.

Societies.

THE HARLEIAN SOCIETY.

Founded 1869. Incorporated 1902.

Established for the purpose of Transcribing, Printing, and Publishing the Heraldic Visitations of Counties, Parish Registers, or any Manuscripts relating to Genealogy, Family History, and Heraldry, or such other kindred or partly kindred subjects as may from time to time be determined upon by the Council of the Society.

In the Ordinary Section 56 volumes have been issued. In the Register Section 35 Volumes have been issued. Entrance Fee, 10s. 6d. Annual Subscription: Ordinary Section, 1l. 1s.; Register Section, 1l. 1s. Chairman of Council—Sir GEORGE J. ARMYTAGE, Bart. F.S.A.—For all particulars apply to the Secretary and Treasurer, W. BRUCE BANNERMAN, F.S.A., The Lindens, Sydenham Road, Croydon.

Educational.

TUITION BY CORRESPONDENCE.—For all

Exams. in Classics, Modern Languages, Mathematics, Science, Logic, &c. Highly qualified Staff.—Address Mr. J. CHARLESTON, B.A., Burlington Correspondence College, Birkbeck Bank Chambers, London, W.C.

CHRIST'S COLLEGE, BLACKHEATH, S.E.

F. W. AVELING, M.A. B.Sc.
Preparation for Universities and Professions.
Stress on Modern Languages and Science.

EDUCATION.

Parents or Guardians desiring accurate information relative to the CHOICE of SCHOOLS for BOYS or GIRLS or TUTORs in England or Abroad are invited to call upon or send fully detailed particulars to MESSRS. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who for more than thirty years have been closely in touch with the leading Educational Establishments.

Advice, free of charge, is given by Mr. THRING, Nephew of the late Head Master of Uppingham, 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

Situations Vacant.

BOROUGH OF LOWESTOFT.

EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

WANTED, MARCH 1, ASSISTANT MASTER (Graduate in Arts) for LOWESTOFT MUNICIPAL SECONDARY SCHOOL. Main Subject: History. Subsidary: English and Latin. Must be disciplinarian, have had experience in Secondary Schools, and be willing to take a real interest in the School Games. To teach four and a half days per week in the Secondary School and not more than three hours per week in the Evening Technical Classes during the Winter Session (September to April). Salary 120l. per annum, rising by yearly increments of 7l. 10s. to 150l., but experience will be taken into consideration in fixing the initial amount.

Applications (on foolscap) giving full particulars as to age, qualifications, and experience, to be made not later than FEBRUARY 15, to the undersigned.

R. BEATTIE NICHOLSON, Town Clerk.

Town Hall, Lowestoft,
February 3, 1909.

Yearly Subscription, free by post, Inland, 15s. 3d.; Foreign, 18s. Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class matter.

THE ATHENÆUM is published on
FRIDAY AFTERNOON at 2 o'clock.

UNIVERSITY OF DUBLIN.

(TRINITY COLLEGE.)

REID PROFESSORSHIP OF PENAL LEGISLATION,
CONSTITUTIONAL AND CRIMINAL LAW,
AND THE LAW OF EVIDENCE.

Under the provisions of the Reid Trust an EXAMINATION for the above PROFESSORSHIP will be HELD in TRINITY COLLEGE on JUNE 8, 1909, and Two Following Days.

The Programme of the Examination, and information as to the conditions of tenure, duties, and Salary of the Office can be obtained on application to THE REGISTRAR, Trinity College, Dublin.

KENT EDUCATION COMMITTEE

SITTINGBOURNE HIGHER EDUCATION SUB-COMMITTEE.
COUNTY SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

WANTED, after EASTER, an ASSISTANT MISTRESS for the above-named School specially qualified to teach Mathematics, and also some Geography, History, or Drawing. Initial Salary, non-resident, 110l. to 120l., according to qualifications and experience, with increments in accordance with the Committee's Scale.—Further particulars and Forms of Application may be obtained from Mr. E. BRIDGEN, London Road, Sittingbourne. Applications should be forwarded as early as possible to Miss FREEMAN, Head Mistress, County School for Girls, Sittingbourne. Canvassing will be considered a disqualification.

By Order of the Committee,

FRAS. W. CROOK, Secretary.
Caxton House, Westminster, London, S.W.,
January 21, 1909.

CAMBRIDGESHIRE EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

CAMBRIDGE AND COUNTY SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

ASSISTANT MISTRESS REQUIRED, chiefly for History, Literature, and Latin. Commencing Salary 130l. per annum, non-resident. Duties to commence APRIL 27 NEXT.—Forms of Application, which should be returned before FEBRUARY 24, 1909, can be obtained of the undersigned.

AUSTIN KEEN, Education Secretary.

County Offices, Cambridge.

THE LONDON CHARITY ORGANISATION

SOCIETY desires to obtain the SERVICES of ADDITIONAL OFFICERS for the supervision and training of Workers in its District Offices. Candidates should be between 25 and 35 years of age, and should preferably have had a University Education. For information as to Salaries and Terms of Appointment, application should be made by letter to the Secretary, C. S. LOCH, Denison House, Vauxhall Bridge Road, S.W.

Situations Wanted.

POST of SECRETARY DESIRED, either Resident or Non-Resident, by a LADY. Shorthand Typist, well trained; Good French, Book-keeping, &c.—Address READER, 18, Princes Square, London, W.

TO EDITORS.—PRACTICAL PRINTER, with over ten years' experience on Weekly Illustrated Paper, would like position in EDITORIAL OFFICE as Reader, &c. Can cast off copy, measure up, and prepare make-up pages for Press.—Box 1564, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

SHORTHAND TYPIST is OPEN to take an

ENGAGEMENT after lengthy and satisfactory employment in well-known Office of Literary Paper. Used to long hours and continuous work. Personal reference will be given by present Employer. Salary 25s. to commence.—Apply Box 1444, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Miscellaneous.

PUBLIC-HOUSE REFORM.—The People's Refreshment House Association, Ltd., founded by the Bishop of Chester, manages 68 Licensed Inns. Ask for List and Report. APPLY FOR 17 SHARES. 5 per cent paid since 1899. P.R.H.A., Broadway Chambers, Westminster.

TRANSLATIONS (into and from English).

Research, and other Literary Work. French, German, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, Dutch. Varied experience. Moderate terms.—Miss STRACK, 35, Mall Chambers, Kensington, W.

WORK WANTED in INDEXING, CATA-

LOGUING, BIBLIOGRAPHY, &c. Good experience. Spanish, Italian, and French Translated. Research Work of any kind undertaken.—Address ALPHA, care Davies & Co., Advertising Agents, Finch Lane, Cornhill.

COLLECTOR OF INFORMATION.—A

GENTLEMAN, having for many years Collected and Indexed Cuttings and References to Books, suitable for Literary and Journalistic Work, seeks EMPLOYMENT.—COLLECTOR, 195, Blackfriars Road London S.E.

TRANSLATION, RESEARCH, INDEXING, ARTICLES, and other Literary Work. Classics, French, German, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese. Varied experience. Moderate Terms.—Miss SELBY, 30, Northumberland Place, W.

PROOF-CORRECTING, Research, British Museum, Literary or Daily Secretarial Work REQUIRED by LADY, with considerable experience in Sub-Editing and Literary Work. Three years in Office. Typist.—H. M. B., care of Mrs. Keating, 100, Cambridge Street, S.W.

LITERARY RESEARCHES UNDERTAKEN, and Pedigrees traced, in IRELAND by experienced Genealogist.—Box 1563, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

RESEARCH, Legal, Genealogical and Literary, UNDERTAKEN by EXPERTS. Messrs. SALZMANN and RAMSAY, 5, St. John's Avenue, Friern Barnet, N.

LITERARY RESEARCH undertaken at the British Museum and elsewhere on moderate terms. Excellent Testimonials.—A. B., Box 1062, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

A MEDICAL MAN, in high-class, exceptionally healthy neighbourhood, within fifteen miles of London, is willing to TAKE into his House a RESIDENT PATIENT who is falling either Physically or Mentally. Detached House, large Garden, facing South and West, situated on high ground, with extensive view. No other patients in the House.—Apply to M.D., Box 1561, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

THE DAUGHTER of a well-known Literary Man is desirous of meeting with a LADY and GENTLEMAN to SHARE her HOUSE; or would take Boarders. Rooms Furnished or Unfurnished. The House is situated on South Norwood Hill, five minutes from Norwood Junction Station, close to the Stanley Halls (where Concerts, Lectures, &c., are continually given), near the Public Library, and within a walk of the Crystal Palace, or One Station from it. Norwood is regarded as one of the healthiest places near London, and was at one time a well-known health resort.—Address C. M., Box 1562, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Type-Writers, &c.

AUTHORS' MSS., 9d. per 1,000 words. Sermons, Plays, and all kinds of TYPE-WRITING carefully done at home (Remington). Good paper. Orders promptly executed. Duplicating from 3s. 6d. per 100.—M. L. L., 18, Edgeley Road, Clapham, S.W.

AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS, STORIES, PLAYS, ESSAYS TYPE-WRITTEN with complete accuracy, 9d. per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies guaranteed. References to well-known Writers.—M. STUART, Allendale, Kymberley Road, Harrow.

TYPE-WRITING undertaken by highly educated Women (Classical Tripos; Cambridge Higher Local; Modern Languages). Research, Revision, Translation, Shorthand, Dictation Room.—THE CAMBRIDGE TYPE-WRITING AGENCY, 10, Duke Street, Adelphi, W.C.

TYPE-WRITING, 9d. per 1,000 words. All kinds of MSS. accurately typed. Clear Carbon Copies, 3d. per 1,000. References to well-known Authors. Oxford Higher Local. Tel. 1272, Richmond P.O.—M. KING, 24, Forest Road, Kew Gardens, S.W.

MSS. TYPE-WRITTEN with care and accuracy at 9d. per 1,000 words (Postage and Paper inclusive). Unsolicited Testimonials from well-known Authors, &c.—Address M. J., York Villa, Maybank Road, South Woodford, Essex.

TYPE-WRITING.—The WEST KENSINGTON OFFICES. Authors' MSS., Translations, &c. Legal and General Copying. Private Dictation Room. Circulars, &c., Duplicated. Usual terms. References. Established sixteen years.—SIKES & SIKES, 223A, Hammersmith Road, London, W.

TYPE-WRITING OF EVERY DESCRIPTION by EXPERT, 8d. per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies, 3d. per 1,000 words. Accuracy and prompt return guaranteed. Reliable references.—NORA DICKINSON, 1, Sackville Gardens, Ilford.

Catalogues.

MAGGS BROS., 109, Strand, London, W.C.
DEALERS IN RARE AND VALUABLE BOOKS, PRINTS, AND AUTOGRAPHS.
CATALOGUES sent post free to all parts of the World.
Export Orders Solicited.
Telegraphic and Cable Address: "Bibliolite, London."
Telephone: "Gerrard 4661."

PUBLISHERS' REMAINDERS.

Bookbuyers should write for
GLAISHER'S CATALOGUE OF REMAINDERS,
which contains Books in all Departments of Literature.
A large and constantly varying Stock always on hand.
Great Reductions in Price.
WILLIAM GLAISHER, LTD.
Remainder and Discount Booksellers,
265, HIGH HOLBORN, LONDON.

BOOKS.—ALL OUT-OF-PRINT and RARE BOOKS on any subject SUPPLIED. The most expert Bookfinder extant. Please state wants and ask for CATALOGUE. I make a special feature of exchanging any Saleable Books for others selected from my various Lists. Special List of 2,000 Books I particularly want post free.—EDW. BAKER'S Great Bookshop, 14-16, John Bright Street, Birmingham. Rhoad's Staffordshire Pots and Pottery, illus., 21s., for 10s. 6d.; Ainsworth's Novels, 20 vols., 35s.; Burke's Peerage, 1907, 24s.

CATALOGUE No. 50.—Drawings by Turner, Prout, Ruskin, &c.—Turner's Liber Studiorum and other Engravings—Proofs touched by Turner—Constable's English Landscape—Etchings by Whistler—Japanese Colour Prints—Illustrated Books. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church Terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

GALLOWAY & PORTER,
New and Second-hand Booksellers, Cambridge (Eng.).
CATALOGUES issued and sent post free on request.
Colonial and Foreign Libraries supplied.

Books stocked in all Subjects.
Lists of Wants solicited.
N.B.—Special Department for Second-hand Scholastic Works and Ancient and Modern Mathematical Books.

P. M. BARNARD, M.A.
(Late Scholar of Christ's College, Cambridge),
10, DUDLEY ROAD, TUNBRIDGE WELLS;
Also at 85, BRIDGE STREET (near the John Rylands Library),
MANCHESTER.

JUST ISSUED.
CATALOGUE No. 27. MANUSCRIPTS (35),
INCUNABULA (175), with 8 Full-Page Illustrations.

TO BE ISSUED SHORTLY
CATALOGUE No. 28. SCOTCH HISTORY
AND LITERATURE, OLD SCIENCE.

P. M. BARNARD is prepared to undertake the formation of LIBRARIES and COLLECTIONS on SPECIAL SUBJECTS.

BERTRAM DOBELL,
SECOND-HAND BOOKSELLER and PUBLISHER,
77, Charing Cross Road, London, W.C.
A large Stock of Old and Rare Books in English Literature, including Poetry and the Drama—Shakespeareana—First Editions of Famous Authors—Manuscripts—Illustrated Books, &c. CATALOGUES free on application.

ANCIENT and MODERN COINS.—Collectors
and Antiquarians are invited to apply to SPINK & SON
Limited, for Specimen Copy (gratis) of their NUMISMATIC
CIRCULAR. The finest Greek, Roman, and English Coins on View
and for Sale at Moderate Prices.—SPINK & SON, Limited, Experts,
Valuers, and Cataloguers, 16, 17, and 18, Piccadilly, London, W.
Established upwards of a Century.

Authors' Agents.

THE AUTHOR'S AGENCY.—Established 1879.
The interests of Authors capably represented. Agreements for Publishing arranged. MSS. placed with Publishers.—Terms and Testimonials on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHESE, 24, Paternoster Row.

MR. GEORGE LARNER, Accountant and
Licensed Valuer to the Bookselling, Publishing, Newspaper,
Printing, and Stationery Trades. Partnerships Arranged. Balance Sheets and Trading Accounts Prepared and Audited. All Business carried out under Mr. Larner's personal supervision.—28, 29, and 30, Paternoster Row, E.C., Secretary to the Booksellers' Provident
Institution.

Printers.

ATHENÆUM PRESS.—JOHN EDWARD
FRANCIS, Printer of the Athenæum, Notes and Queries, &c., is prepared to SUBMIT ESTIMATES for all kinds of BOOK, NEWS,
and PERIODICAL PRINTING.—13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery
Lane, E.C.

Sales by Auction.

Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL
by AUCTION at their Galleries, 47, Leicester Square, W.C., on THURSDAY, February 11, and Following Day, at ten minutes past
1 o'clock precisely, several SMALL LIBRARIES, comprising Standard Works in Library Editions—valuable First Editions—Books with Coloured Plates—Works on Natural History, Sport, the Drama, and Fine Arts—County Histories, &c., including Burton's Arabian Nights, 16 vols., Original Edition—Gould's Birds of Great Britain, 5 vols.,
morocco—Houghton's Fishes—Plot's Staffordshire—Holbein's Portraits by Chamberlaine, printed in Colours, 1792—Blagdon's India, with Coloured Plates—Solyn's Coloured Etchings of the Hindoos, special copy—Large Paper Signed Copies of Oscar Wilde's Works—Bunyan's
Golden City, 1699—Dickens's Pickwick Papers, with Author's Inscription —Real Life in London in the Original Parts—Syntax's Life of Napoleon, 1815—Shelley's Endymion, First Edition, boards, uncut—
Thackeray's Rose and the Ring, and other First Editions—Illuminated Horæ on Vellum—and other Manuscripts, Autograph Letters, and Engravings.
Catalogues may be had.

4, WOODVILLE TERRACE, GRAVESEND.

Important Sale of a large Collection of Books, including scarce and valuable Works on Kent and other Counties, Prints, Cuttings, &c., together with Modern and Antique House Appointments, China, Silver-Plate, and valuable Prints.

MR. ROBERT MATTHEWS will SELL by AUCTION, on the Premises, on WEDNESDAY, February 17, and Following Days at half-past 10 o'clock precisely each day, the BOOKS, CHINA, SILVER-PLATE, valuable PRINTS, and MODERN and ANTIQUE HOUSE APPOINTMENTS.
May be viewed on MONDAY and TUESDAY, February 15 and 16, from 9 o'clock in the morning.
Catalogues of the Auctioneer, 17, King Street, Gravesend, 16, Cliff-town Road, Southend-on-Sea, and 77, New Road, Grays.
Telephone, Gravesend, 998. Southend, 178.

STEVEN'S AUCTION ROOMS. Estab. 1760.
TUESDAY NEXT, at 1 o'clock.

CLUTCHES of BRITISH and FOREIGN BIRDS' EGGS, mostly with full data and in fine condition—Bird Skins—Heads and Horns of Animals—Shells—and General Natural History Specimens.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION at his Rooms, 38, King Street, Covent Garden,
London, W.C.
Catalogues on application. On view day prior 10 to 4, and morning of Sale

STEVEN'S AUCTION ROOMS. Estab. 1760.

MR. J. C. STEVENS' NEXT SALE of CURIOSITIES will take place on TUESDAY, February 16, and will include a great VARIETY of NATIVE WEAPONS and CURIOS, CHINESE and JAPANESE BRONZES, PORCELAIN, &c.;
also PICTURES—Prints—and the usual Miscellaneous Assortment.
Fuller particulars in next Advertisement.

Catalogues on application to the Auctioneer, 38, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

Miscellaneous Books.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by
AUCTION at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on TUESDAY, February 9, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock, MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, comprising Dutuit's Rembrandt, with the Etchings in Two States, 6 vols., and Portfolio of large Plates—
Folio Books on the Fine Arts—Topographical and Antiquarian Works —Books relating to Ireland—Dodgson's Herbal, 1578—Spenser's Faerie
Queene, 1611, and a few other Books in old English Literature—
Holograph Letter from King Charles II. and a few other Autograph
Letters—Unpublished MS. of Cobbett's Poor Man's Bible and other Manuscripts by or relating to the same—Books and Maps relating to America—Vidal's Coloured Views of Buenos Ayres—Grimm's German
Popular Stories, First Edition, 2 vols.—Jane Austen's Mansfield Park,
First Edition, 3 vols., boards, uncut—The Vale Press Shakespeare, 39 vols.
—Library Editions of Thackeray, 22 vols., Matthew Arnold, 15 vols.,
Byron, Large Paper, 13 vols., and Burton's Arabian Nights, illustrated,
12 vols.—Standard Works in History, Travel, Science, and General Literature—also a SELECTION FROM AN OLD LIBRARY removed from the North of Scotland, comprising Books in Seventeenth and Eighteenth Century Literature, chiefly in old calf bindings.

To be viewed and Catalogues had.

Valuable Miscellaneous Books.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION on THURSDAY, February 18, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock, VALUABLE MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, including Carey's Life in Paris, Large Paper—Ireland's Napoleon, 4 vols.—
Editions de Luxe of Pater, Tennyson, Lamb, Kingsley, Lytton, and George Meredith—Library Editions of Ben Jonson, Fielding, Smollett, Scott, Thackeray, Balzac, and others—The Tudor Translations, 38 vols.—Florio's Montaigne, 1632, and other Books in Old English Literature—a Small Collection of Books by or relating to Dr. Johnson, including two fine Sets of the Complete Works (the Property of a Gentleman)—First Editions of Shelley, Scott, Lever, Dickens, Stevenson, &c.—Creighton's Queen Elizabeth, Japan Paper
Copy—Owen Jones' Alhambra, 2 vols.—and other Architectural Works.

Catalogues on application.

Works of Art.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE
will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, February 8, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, WORKS OF ART, comprising the COLLEC-TION of J. HUTCHINS, Esq., of Charles Street, Newport, Mon., including Worcester, Spode, Rockingham, Crown Derby, and other English Porcelain, Oriental and Continental Porcelain, Old English
Pottery, &c.—JEWELLERY, the Property of the late Mrs. BANKES, of Winstanley Hall, Old Edglish Glass—and a few important Pieces of New Hall and other Pottery, the Property of the late G. W. RHEAD, Esq., sen., of Clayton, Staffordshire.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

The Valuable Collection of Greek Coins formed by the late
FRANK SHERMAN BENSON, Esq., of Brooklyn, New York.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE
will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington
Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, February 8, and Three Following
Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the valuable COLLECTION of GREEK
COINS, formed by the late FRANK SHERMAN BENSON, Esq., of Brooklyn, New York, comprising choice and interesting Examples of the Ancient Coinages of Italy and Sicily, Greece and the Islands,
Asia Minor, &c., Syria, Egypt, Zeugitana, &c.

May be viewed. Illustrated Catalogues may be had, price 2s. 6d.
each.

A Collection of Japanese Colour Prints.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE
will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington
Street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, February 12, at 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of ORIGINAL JAPANESE COLOUR PRINTS and BOOKS.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A selected Portion of the Library of the Right Hon. LORD POLWARTH.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE
will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington
Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, February 15, and Following Day at 1 o'clock precisely, an interesting COLLECTION of valuable and rare BOOKS and PAMPHLETS selected from the LIBRARY of the Right Hon. LORD POLWARTH of Merton
House, Berwick, including an extensive Series of Civil War Tracts
and Newspapers—rare Americana—Books of Travel and on Trade—
East Indies—Broadside—Pamphlets—Virgil's Aeneids, printed by Caxton—Rare Old English Black-Letter Books—Corte di Pavia, 11
Cavalierazzo, Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester's Copy—Series of Maps, Charts, and Plans of Battles—American Maps—Penn's Laws for Pennsylvania, Original Manuscript—Cases of Appeal in the Scottish
Courts—Engraved English and French Portraits, &c.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

Engravings and Drawings.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE
will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington
Street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, February 17, at 1 o'clock precisely, ENGRAVINGS and DRAWINGS (Framed and in the Portfolio), including the COLLECTION of the late GEORGE SMITH, Esq., F.S.A., comprising a fine Impression, in the rare First State, of the Portrait of Lucas Vorsterman, etched by Sir A. Vandyck—the Raby Pack, by H. B. Chalon, after W. Ward—the Set of Four Shooting Pieces, by W. Woollett, after Stubbs, Proofs before Letters—
Mezzotint Portraits after Sir J. Reynolds, &c.—Drawings in Water-Colours, by J. Varley, D. M. Serres, R. Westall, W. Vandervelde and others; the Property of the late JAMES GIBSON HAMILTON
STARKE, Esq., of Troqueur Holm, whose Wife was Grandniece of Sir Thomas Lawrence, P.R.A.; comprising Miss Croker, by S. Cousins, after Sir T. Lawrence, Proof—Countess Gower and Child, by and after the same, Proof—a Collection of the Works of Sir T. Lawrence, by different Engravers, with Biographical Notices—other Portraits after Sir T. Lawrence, by S. Cousins, F. C. Lewis, S. W. Reynolds, &c.;
other Properties, comprising Prints and Views relating to America—
Mezzotint and Stipple Portraits—Fancy Subjects of the English and French Schools, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Library of the late Sir JAMES T. KNOWLES, K.C.V.O.
and a portion of the Library of D. R. CLARK, Esq.,
M.A. F.S.A. Scot.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE
will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, February 18, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, including the LIBRARY of the late Sir JAMES T. KNOWLES, K.C.V.O. (sold by order of the Executors); a PORTION of the LIBRARY of the late JAMES BOLTON, Esq., of Storrs Hall (the Property of ANNABELLA LADY BOUGHEY), and other Properties, comprising Works on the Fine Arts—First Editions of English and Foreign Authors—Americana—Books of Emblems, Portraits, and Caricatures—Book-Plates, &c.—Arabian Nights, Villon Society—The Germ, 1850—Burlington Fine Arts Club Publications—Le Pautre, Œuvres d'Architecture—Thackeray, Works, Original Library Edition, 22 vols.—Early English Text Society's Publications—Shakespeare, edited by Payne Collier—Works illustrated by G. Cruikshank—Works by Sir Thomas More—Westmacott's English Spy—Dugdale's Monasticon Anglicanum, 1849, &c.
May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The valuable Collection of Autograph Letters, the Property of
J. STODDART, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE
will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, February 22, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, the valuable COLLECTION of AUTOGRAPH LETTERS, HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS and MANUSCRIPTS, the Property of J. STODDART, Esq., including J. Addison, D. Garrick, E. Kean, Mrs. Siddons, T. Gainsborough, Sir W. Scott, C. Dickens, and others—Important Letters of Lord Nelson, and a fine collection of Nelson Letters, Portraits, Engravings, Relics, &c., in a volume—some interesting Autograph Music Scores—Collections of Autographs in Albums from the Toole Sale—a Small Library of Books.
May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS
respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION at their Great Rooms, King Street, St. James's Square, the sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely.

On WEDNESDAY, February 10, OLD ENGLISH SILVER PLATE of the late Miss HENRIETTA LEWES, the Rev. H. A. MACPHERSON, deceased, and others.

On FRIDAY, February 12, a COLLECTION of FLEMISH CARVED WOOD FIGURES, the Property of a GENTLEMAN—Porcelain—Old English Oak and other Furniture from various sources.

On SATURDAY, February 13, MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS.

Furniture, Pictures, Engravings, &c.

THERE will be SOLD at PUBLIC AUCTION, on FEBRUARY 9, 1909, and the Following Days, at half-past 1, at 16, RUE BELLOCY PAU, BASSES-PYRENEES, FRANCE, the Property of the late Mrs. W. FORBES MORGAN, a fine COLLECTION of ANCIENT and MODERN FURNITURE—Pictures—Engravings—Porcelains—Laces—Brocades—Vernis Martin and other Boxes—Ivories—Fans—Silver and other Objects.
For further information and for Catalogues apply to Mr. RIGAULET, Notary, 6, Rue Gachet, Pau, France.

Magazines, &c.

EBENEZER PROUT'S WORKS.
Bound, each net, 5s.
HARMONY: its Theory and Practice. Twenty-fourth Impression. Revised and largely Re-written.
ANALYTICAL KEY TO THE EXERCISES in the Same. Net 3s.
COUNTERPOINT: Strict and Free. Ninth Impression.
DOUBLE COUNTERPOINT AND CANON. Fourth Impression.
FUGUE. Fifth Impression.
FUGAL ANALYSIS. Third Impression.
MUSICAL FORM. Seventh Impression.
APPLIED FORMS. Fifth Impression.
THE ORCHESTRA. 2 vols. Fourth Impression.
AUGENER, Ltd., 6, New Burlington Street, and 22, Newgate Street.

THE BRITISH EMPIRE:
Its Past, its Present, and its Future.

Edited by A. F. POLLARD, M.A.

Pp. 896, 5s. net.

Fifteen Special Contributors and over a Hundred Authorities in all parts of the Empire have collaborated in its production.

LEAGUE OF THE EMPIRE,
Caxton Hall, Westminster; and all Booksellers.

CURTIS'S BOTANICAL MAGAZINE.
Fourth Series, No. 50, FEBRUARY, 1909.

Contents.

ALPINIA Bracteata. Eastern Himalaya. Double Plate.
OLIGOBOTRYA Henryi. China.
ERANTHEMUM Wattii. Northern India.
PINUS Bungeana. North China.
SORBUS Vilmorini. China.
Monthly, with Coloured Plates, 3s. 6d. Annual Subscription, post free, 42s.
Vols. 1 to 4, Fourth Series, 42s. each.
LOVELL REEVE & CO. 6, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden.

THE BUILDER (founded 1842), 4, Catherine Street, London, W.C., FEBRUARY 6, contains:—

FOUNTS (with Illustrations).

THE PROPOSED SHAKESPEARE MEMORIAL.

INSTITUTE OF ARCHITECTS: PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS TO STUDENTS.

ROYAL ACADEMY LECTURES ON ARCHITECTURE.

REASON IN ARCHITECTURE (Carpenters' Hall Lectures).

THE ARCHITECTS' TECHNICAL BUREAU.

"THEN AND NOW": REMINISCENCES OF A BUILDER'S FOREMAN.

ILLUSTRATIONS:

GLAMORGAN NEW COUNTY HALL (General and Detail Elevations);

SEACROFT HYDRO HOTEL, SKEGNESS (View and Plan and Detail Elevation);

JESUS HOSPITAL, ROTHWELL

From Offices as above (4d., by post 4½d.), at Railway Bookstalls, Bookshops, and of all News-agents.

FROM J. M. DENT & CO.'S LIST.

A RE-ISSUE OF MUTHER'S PAINTING IN PARTS.

THE HISTORY OF MODERN PAINTING.

By Prof. RICHARD MUTHER.

New Edition, Revised and Continued by the Author to the end of the XIXth Century, with nearly 1,300 Illustrations in Black-and-White and 48 in Colours.

To be Completed in 22 Parts at 2s. 6d. net. Order taken for Sets only.

PART I. READY EARLY NEXT WEEK.

"As a record of European Art in the Nineteenth Century it stands alone."—DAILY NEWS.

"Richard Muther.....talks vividly about the thousand things he knows, and he is of extraordinary comprehensiveness of sympathy as well as attainments. It would simply be impossible for any painter to have his breadth of interests.....A book of excellent service.....Dr. Muther is quite amongst the most accomplished of the popularizers and disseminators of art knowledge."—STANDARD.

Prospectus on application.

VASARI ON TECHNIQUE.

Translated into English for the first time by LOUISA S. MACLEHOSE. Edited, with Introduction, Commentary and Notes, by Prof. G. BALDWIN BROWN. Square demy 8vo, cloth, 15s. net.

This work, the introduction to Vasari's 'Lives,' has never before been translated out of the Italian into any other European language, in spite of its enormous value to all interested in art.

OLD WORLD TRAVEL.

A new and attractive Series of Travel Books. Illustrated in Colour. Square medium 8vo, 7s. 6d. net each.

The author and artist in all cases make special tours over the whole of the ground. Each volume will contain some 25 Coloured Illustrations and many Line Drawings in the Text.

THE FIRST TWO VOLUMES.

ALONG THE RIVIERAS OF FRANCE AND ITALY.

Written and Illustrated in Colour and Line by GORDON HOME.

"We congratulate the author artist and the publishers on a delightful book which is very moderate in price."

ATHENÆUM.

VENETIA AND NORTHERN ITALY.

By CECIL HEADLAM. Illustrated in Colour and Line by GORDON HOME.

"Mr. Home's illustrations serve to heighten the value of an entirely delightful book."—DAILY NEWS.

THE TEMPLE BIOGRAPHIES.

Edited by DUGALD MACFADYEN, M.A.

Illustrated with Portraits, &c., crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net per volume.

NEW VOLUME.

THE LAWRENCES OF THE PUNJAB.

By F. P. GIBBON, Author of 'The Record of the Gurkhas,' &c.

PREVIOUS VOLUMES.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

By HENRY BRYAN BINNS, Author of 'Life of Walt Whitman.' With many Portraits and other Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 4s. 6d. net.

"A careful and interesting study of President Lincoln. He tells us more than the ordinary biographer of the intimate personal life."—WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.

"An excellent piece of work, telling with sympathy, with restraint, and often with a fine insight, one of the most romantic of life-stories."—DAILY NEWS.

LES CLASSIQUES FRANÇAIS.

Edited by H. WARNER ALLEN.

A Series in the Original French. Photogravure Frontispiece. Pott 8vo, cloth, 1s. 6d. net per vol.; limp lambskin, 2s. 6d. net.

NEW VOLS.

POEMES DE VICTOR HUGO (1822-65).

Préface de L'AGUETTANT.

SATIRES EPITRES, ET L'ART POETIQUE DE BOILEAU.

Préface d'AUGUSTIN FILON.

Full Prospectus free on application.

THE MYSTICAL ELEMENT OF RELIGION.

Studied in the Lives of St. Catherine of Genoa and her Friends. By Baron F. VON HÜGEL. Photogravure Portraits. 2 vols. demy 8vo, 21s. net.

"The most complete and balanced attempt in any language to apply the modern scientific method to all the facts of religion on the grand scale....The best-informed and most inspiring study of religion in our time—a mine for all future workers in that field."—DAILY NEWS.

"Guides to the spirit of the place."—DAILY NEWS.

THE

MEDIAEVAL TOWN SERIES.

A Series of Literary Guide-Books.

With numerous Topographical Drawings, Reproductions from Paintings and Sculptures, Maps and Plans. Fcap. 8vo, (pocketable), in grey cloth and limp green paste grain roan binding.

NEW VOLUME.

PISA.

By JANET ROSS and NELLY ERICHSEN. Illustrated by NELLY ERICHSEN.

PREVIOUS VOLUMES:—

Assisi,* Bruges,† Brussels,† Cairo,† Cambridge,† Chartres,† Constantinople,* Dublin,† Edinburgh,† Ferrara,† Florence,† London,† Moscow,* Nuremberg,* Oxford,† Paris,† Perugia,* Prague,* Rome,† Rouen,† Seville,† Siena,† Toledo,* Venice,† Verona,† Milan.†

* Cloth, 3s. 6d. net; roan, 4s. 6d. net.

† Cloth, 4s. 6d. net; roan, 5s. 6d. net.

"A pretty series, wherein art and history are deftly combined in the service of the tourist."

WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.

THE TEMPLE BIOGRAPHIES.

Edited by DUGALD MACFADYEN, M.A.

Illustrated with Portraits, &c., crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net per volume.

NEW VOLUME.

THE LAWRENCES OF THE PUNJAB.

By F. P. GIBBON, Author of 'The Record of the Gurkhas,' &c.

PREVIOUS VOLUMES.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

By HENRY BRYAN BINNS, Author of 'Life of Walt Whitman.' With many Portraits and other Illustrations. Crown 8vo, cloth, 4s. 6d. net.

"A careful and interesting study of President Lincoln. He tells us more than the ordinary biographer of the intimate personal life."—WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.

"An excellent piece of work, telling with sympathy, with restraint, and often with a fine insight, one of the most romantic of life-stories."—DAILY NEWS.

LES CLASSIQUES FRANÇAIS.

Edited by H. WARNER ALLEN.

A Series in the Original French. Photogravure Frontispiece. Pott 8vo, cloth, 1s. 6d. net per vol.; limp lambskin, 2s. 6d. net.

NEW VOLS.

POEMES DE VICTOR HUGO (1822-65).

Préface de L'AGUETTANT.

SATIRES EPITRES, ET L'ART POETIQUE DE BOILEAU.

Préface d'AUGUSTIN FILON.

Full Prospectus free on application.

THE TEMPLE CLASSICS.

The finest Series of Pocket Volumes ever published.

With Photogravure Frontispieces, cloth, 1s. 6d. net; lambskin, 2s. net per volume.

A full Descriptive Prospectus will be forwarded post free on application.

"No other series furnishes in so handy a form and at so small a cost so large a selection of the world's best literature."—CONTEMPORARY REVIEW.

PROSPECTUS POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

J. M. DENT & CO. 15, Aldine House, Bedford Street, London, W.C.

A SELECTION FROM KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER & CO.'S SPRING LIST.

Dublin Castle and the Irish People.

By R. BARRY O'BRIEN. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

"An exceedingly lively and vigorous exposition."
Evening Standard and St. James's Gazette.

Language and Character of the Roman People. Translated from the German of OSCAR WEISE, with Additional Notes and References for English Readers, by Prof. H. A. STRONG, M.A. LL.D., and A. Y. CAMPBELL, B.A. Crown 8vo. [Shortly.]

The Story of the Jewish People.

By JACK M. MYERS. With a Prefatory Note by the Chief Rabbi. In 2 vols. Crown 8vo, 1s. 6d. net each.

Travels and Travellers in India.

By E. FARLEY OATEN, Author of 'Anglo-Indian Literature,' being the Le Bas Cambridge Prize Essay for 1908. Crown 8vo.

The Life of Jehoshua, The Prophet of Nazareth. An Occult Study and a Key to the Bible. Containing the History of an Initiate. By FRANZ HARTMANN, M.D. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d.

NEW CATHOLIC PUBLICATIONS.

The New Ideals in the Gospels.

(Christus.) By Prof. Dr. HERMANN SCHELL. With 90 Illustrations from the Old Masters. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

Father Tyrrell's Modernism.

An Expository Criticism of 'Through Scylla and Charybdis,' in an Open Letter to Mr. Athelstan Riley. By HAKLUYT EGERTON. Crown 8vo, 5s.

"Mr. Egerton's work is a careful and conscientious study of an extraordinarily interesting place of religious development."—Globe.

Choice Morsels of the Bread of Life:

or, Select Readings from the Old Testament.

Compiled by CHARLES COPPENS, S.J. The Douay Version and Notes. Pott 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d. net; leather, 3s. 6d. net.

NEW VOLUME IN THE INTERNATIONAL CATHOLIC LIBRARY.

Heortology.

A History of the Christian Festivals from their Origin to the Present Day. By Dr. K. A. HEINRICH KELNER, Professor of Catholic Theology at the University of Bonn, translated from the second (corrected and enlarged) edition with the author's permission, by a Priest of the Diocese of Westminster. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d.

"We have here a picture of Christian worship in its source and in its development. Heortology teaches us how and when our feasts came to be observed, and the way they have impinged on political and ecclesiastical society. The translation has evidently been the object of much care and attention. We congratulate editors and publishers on the appearance of this handsome addition to the International Catholic Library."

The REV. GILBERT HIGGINS in the Universe.

History of the German People at the Close of the Middle Ages. By JOHANNES JANSSEN.

Translated by A. M. CHRISTIE. Vols. 13 and 14. Demy 8vo, per 2 vols. 25s.

BOOKS ON EGYPT AND CHALDÆA.

NEW VOLUMES.

The Book of the Kings of Egypt.

By E. A. WALLIS BUDGE, M.A. LL.D. In 2 vols. crown 8vo, 12s. net.

"We leave with regret a book the intrinsic value of which, together with its use as a work of reference, is a credit alike to the author and the great Museum whose Department of Oriental Antiquities he directs." Athenæum.

The Liturgy of Funerary Offerings.

By Dr. E. A. WALLIS BUDGE, M.A. LL.D. Crown 8vo, 6s. net. [Shortly.]

The Book of the Dead.

By Dr. E. A. WALLIS BUDGE, M.A. LL.D. In 3 vols. crown 8vo, 6s. net each.

The text of the Theban Version of the above will be reset from type. Many new variant versions of the most important of the Chapters will be added, and, in an Appendix, examples of many of the later Books of the Dead will be given.

NEW VOLUMES OF THE INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES.

Music: its Laws and Evolution.

By JULES COMBARIEN, Lecturer at the Collège de France. Translated by JOSEPH SKELLON. Crown 8vo, 5s.

The Transformations of the Animal

World. By M. CHARLES DÉPERET, Corresponding Member of the Institute de France, and Dean of the Faculty of Science at the Université de Lyon. Crown 8vo, 5s.

Human Speech: its Physical Basis.

By N. C. MACNAMARA, F.R.C.S. Crown 8vo, 5s.

"Major Macnamara shows a wide acquaintance with contemporary biology—indeed, to such an extent is this the case that the book can well be recommended as an Introduction to this department of science.....This is an excellent additional volume to the 'International Scientific Series.' The illustrations have been carefully chosen, and there is a good index."—Nature.

Periodic Law.

By A. E. GARRETT. Crown 8vo, 5s.

NEW VOLUMES IN

THE DRYDEN LIBRARY.

The Vicar of Wakefield.

By OLIVER GOLDSMITH. With a Preface and Notes by AUSTIN DOBSON. Pott 8vo, cloth, 1s. 6d. net; leather, 2s. net.

This edition has been revised, and contains an Appendix on the sale of 'The Vicar of Wakefield.'

A Selection from the Poems of Rural

Life in the Dorset Dialect. By WILLIAM BARNES. Edited by his SON. Copyright Edition. Pott 8vo, cloth, 1s. 6d. net; leather, 2s. net.

The Æneid of Virgil.

Books VII.-XII. Translated into Blank Verse by HENRY SMITH WRIGHT, B.A. Vol. II., completing the Æneid. Fcap. 8vo, 5s. net.

"Mr. Wright's scholarly translation into blank verse places this old-world classic within the mental grasp of the masses, and in doing this he has done a service to the literature of the day for which the public are very much indebted to him."—United Service Gazette.

FROM CHATTO & WINDUS'S LIST.

LETTERS FROM AN AMERICAN FARMER.

Now ready. By J. H. ST. JOHN CRÈVECŒUR.

Reprinted from the Original Edition of 1782, with a Prefatory Note by W. P. TRENT, and an Introduction by LUDWIG LEWISHON.

Small demy 8vo, buckram, 6s. net.

PLAYS OF OUR FOREFATHERS, And some of the Traditions upon which the Plays were founded.

Feb. 11. By CHARLES MILLS GAYLEY, Litt.D. LL.D.

With 29 Full-Page Illustrations. Royal 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d. net.

THE CHARM OF PARIS.

An Anthology.

Now ready. Compiled by A. H. HYATT.

(Uniform with 'The Charm of London,' 'The Charm of Venice,' &c.)

Pott 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 2s. net; leather, gilt edges, 3s. net.

THE CAVALIER TO HIS LADY.

An Anthology of Seventeenth-Century Love Songs.

Now ready. Selected and Edited by FRANK SIDGWICK.

With a Frontispiece after a Water-Colour Drawing by BYAM SHAW, R.I.

Medium 16mo, gilt tops; red cloth or quarter bound, antique grey boards, 1s. 6d. net;

Quarter vellum, grey cloth sides, 2s. 6d. net;

Special three-quarter vellum, Oxford side papers, silk marker, 5s. net.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ; AND DRAMATIC ROMANCES AND LYRICS.

Immediately. By ROBERT BROWNING.

With 10 Full-Page Illustrations after Water-Colours by ELEANOR F. BRICKDALE.

Large fcap. 4to, cloth, gilt top, 6s. net.

Also 250 numbered large-paper copies, on pure rag paper, the plates mounted, bound in whole parchment, 12s. 6d. net.

(Uniform with 'Pippa Passes and Men and Women,' 'Ballads and Lyrics of Love,' and 'Legendary Ballads from Percy's Reliques'.)

THE COLOUR OF PARIS.

By MM. LES ACADEMICIENS GONCOURT.

Fully illustrated after Water-Colour and Sepia Drawings by the Japanese Artist YOSHIO MARKINO.

Large fcap. 4to, cloth, gilt top, 20s. net. Limited Edition of Large-Paper Numbered Copies, 42s. net.

"This account of Paris, its institutions, its history, its women, its artists, of the army, industry, journalism, and politics, is pure delight. There could be no better introduction to a knowledge of Paris as she is."

Westminster Gazette.

DEVON:

Its Moorlands, Streams, and Coasts.

By LADY ROSALIND NORTHCOTE.

Fully illustrated in Colours by FREDERICK J. WIDGERY.

Large fcap. 4to, cloth, gilt top, 20s. net.

"Both the letterpress and the illustrations of this book merit the very highest praise."—Morning Post.

"Authoress, artist, and publisher are alike to be congratulated on the result of their labours—a volume full of charm and delight in every respect."

Western Morning News.

NEW 6/- NOVELS.

THE ROGUE OF RYE.

Now ready. By W. WILLMOTT DIXON. 6s.

A clever historical novel dealing with Napoleon's attempted invasion of England. A spirited narrative, replete with stirring incidents and dramatic situations.

JULIAN REVELSTONE.

Now ready. By JUSTIN MCCARTHY,
Author of 'Dear Lady Disdain,'
'A History of our Own Times,' &c. 6s.

A great novel by a great author. A story possessing all the charm and interest that Mr. McCarthy is so thoroughly able to impart, and one that will be welcome to all lovers of unquestionably good fiction.

First impression exhausted on day of publication.

SECOND IMPRESSION NOW READY.

A QUESTION OF MEANS.

Now ready. By M. B. CROSS, 6s.

Author of 'Love and Olivia,' &c.

An absorbing story of modern English life, written from a distinctly novel point of view.

"Her characters are good to be with. Moreover, her narrative manner is always healthy and self-controlled."—Times.

IDOLATRY.

By ALICE PERRIN,

Feb. 11. Author of 'The Stronger Claim,'
'The Waters of Destruction,' &c. 6s.

This is another of Mrs. Perrin's fascinating Anglo-Indian stories. Those who have read and enjoyed her previous novels will not be disappointed in 'Idolatry.'

THE JUNE PRINCESS.

Feb. 18. By CONSTANCE SMEDLEY, 6s.
Author of 'An April Princess.'

The story of a girl's search for happiness. She battles bravely through many an adventure, experiences many different kinds of love, and eventually discovers the goal of her long journey.

THE MERRY HEART.

Feb. 25. By FRANK A. SWINNERTON. 6s.

A story of life in modern London. It relates with imagination and delicate humour the adventures of several young men and women engaged in daily work in the city.

NEW 3/6 NOVELS.

RED RECORDS. By Alice Perrin.

THE WATERS OF DESTRUCTION. By Alice Perrin.

GWENDOLINE'S HARVEST. By James Payn.

TRACKED TO DOOM. By Dick Donovan.

CASTE AND CREED. By F. E. Penny.

AN INDUSTRIOUS CHEVALIER. By S. Squire Sprigge.

JOHN CALDIGATE. By Anthony Trollope.

Swan Sonnenschein & Co. LTD.

SOME WORKS ON HISTORY.

NOW READY.

NEW IMPRESSION OF

FEUDAL ENGLAND.

By J. HORACE ROUND. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d.

WORKS BY SIR JAMES RAMSAY, BART.

THE FOUNDATIONS OF ENGLAND.

With Maps and Illustrations. 2 vols. demy 8vo, 24s.

THE ANGEVIN EMPIRE, A.D. 1154-1216.

With Maps and Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 12s.

THE DAWN OF A CONSTITUTION;

Or, the Reigns of Henry III. to Edward III. (A.D. 1216-1377.)

With Maps and Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 12s.

HISTORIC LINKS.

Topographical Guides to the Reading of History.

By DOROTHEA MAGUIRE, L.L.A. With a Preface by HUBERT HALL, of H.M. Public Record Office. With 16 Full-Page Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 6s.

NEW EDITIONS OF

HISTORY OF THE ENGLISH LANDED INTEREST.

By R. M. GARNIER. 2 vols. demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. each.

ANNALS OF THE BRITISH PEASANTRY

By R. M. GARNIER. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d.

HISTORY OF SOUTH AFRICA.

Messrs. SWAN SONNENSCHN & CO. beg to announce that Dr. Theal is now rearranging and largely rewriting his monumental work. The final form in which it will appear will be in Eight Volumes, as under, at 7s. 6d. per Volume.

PART I.

HISTORY AND ETHNOGRAPHY OF SOUTH AFRICA.

Vol. I. THE PORTUGUESE IN AFRICA. [Now ready.]

Vol. II. FORMATION OF CAPE COLONY BY THE DUTCH. [Shortly.]

Vol. III. ACCOUNT OF THE DUTCH, PORTUGUESE, HOTTENTOTS, AND BANTU. [In preparation.]

NOW READY.

PART II.

THE HISTORY OF SOUTH AFRICA SINCE 1795.

Vol. I. 1795-1828.
Vol. II. 1828-1846.
Vol. III. 1846-1860.
Vol. IV. 1854-1872.
Vol. V. 1872-1894.

THE GROWTH OF THE ENGLISH MANOR.

By Prof. P. VINOGRADOFF. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d.

CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

By Dr. F. MACKOWER. Medium 8vo, 15s.

HISTORY OF THE CIVILISATION OF THE RENAISSANCE IN ITALY.

By T. BURCKHARDT. Translated by S. G. C. MIDDLEMORE. Fifth Edition. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d.

HISTORY OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

By Prof. W. MOELLER. Vols. I. and II. translated by ANDREW RUTHERFORD, B.D. Vol. III. by J. H. FREESE, M.A. 3 vols. demy 8vo, 15s. each.

MEDALLIONS FROM EARLY FLORENTINE HISTORY.

By EMILY UNDERDOWN (Norley Chester), Author of 'Stories from Dante,' &c. Imperial 16mo, 5s. net.

OUTLINES OF FRENCH HISTORY.

By J. A. JOERG. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

OUTLINES OF GERMAN HISTORY.

By J. A. JOERG. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

SWAN SONNENSCHN & CO., LTD.,
25, High Street, Bloomsbury, W.C.

FIFTEENTH CENTURY BOOKS : AN INDEX-CATALOGUE.

WITH REFERENCES TO THE BIBLIOGRAPHIES OF HAIN, COPINGER, PROCTOR, PELLECHET, CAMPBELL, HAEBLER, BURGER, AND OTHER AUTHORITIES.

BY

R. A. PEDDIE,

Acting-Librarian of the St. Bride Foundation Technical Library,

Author of 'Printing in Brescia in the Fifteenth Century.'

The bibliography of fifteenth-century literature is contained in a large number of volumes, through all of which it is very often necessary to search before the description of a book can be found. Mr. Peddie's Index is arranged by authors, and includes references to the bibliographies of the period, both general and special, and points instantly to the places where a book has been described. In addition to this, references are given to facsimiles, such as those published by the Type Facsimile Society.

The enormous increase in the number of identified and registered Incunabula since the days of Hain's 'Repertorium Bibliographicum' is shown by the fact that of the 'Doctrinale' of Alexander Gallus, Hain registered 108 editions, whereas Mr. Peddie has found notes and descriptions of 300.

The work will be of great importance to all who have to deal with early printed books, bringing together as it does the whole of the editions of a book, and indicating the bibliographies which contain collations, and descriptions of them.

The above work is appearing as a serial publication in the 'LIBRARY WORLD,' a specimen copy of which will be sent post free on application.

COMMENTS.

"There cannot be two opinions as to the excellence and utility of your index of authors for incunabula—it will be indispensable as a working tool in all libraries of any size."

F. MADAN, Brasenose Coll., Oxford.

"I think your system of indexing 'Fifteenth-Century Books' admirable.....will be of great service to librarians."

S. G. COCKERELL, Fitzwilliam Museum.

"It is clear to me that your index will be more complete, and in more convenient form, than anything of the kind now existing."

Dr. BILLINGS, New York Pub. Lib.

"As to the need of a list of incunabula there can be no question, and we share the gratification of all librarians that you have undertaken it."

HERBERT PUTNAM, Library of Congress.

"Your index to incunabula under authors is a great undertaking, and cannot fail to be of very great use."

F. JENKINSON, Cambridge Univ. Lib.

"I am sure the index will be very useful."

E. GORDON DUFF.

"[The] index is of the greatest interest. Such a work was much needed.....Will appeal to a larger public than students of incunabula."

Dr. W. A. COPINGER.

"Most interesting contribution.....It will be of great use to us."

Dr. KONRAD HAEBLER, Royal Library, Berlin.

THE 'LIBRARY WORLD' OFFICE.

LIBRACO LIMITED,

60, Wilson Street, Finsbury Square, E.C.

A NEW LIGHT ON THE QUESTION OF LIFE.

Dr. C. W. Saleeby is known for his broad grasp of medical questions and his plain-spokenness in dealing therewith. He is once more to the fore with a publication which will appeal with singular force to the world at large and to those of us in particular who would possess the secret of well-being.

In his happily named publication, 'The Will to Do,' Dr. Saleeby clears up one of the problems of mankind. Right in the commencement the Doctor makes the bold pronouncement that "Nerves Rule the World"; and he proves his contention up to the hilt. He further declares it "impossible in the modern world to win success, or even happiness without success, except by nervous activity."

Others have ere now pointed to causes of human suffering without throwing any light upon an antidote. Not so Dr. Saleeby. "It is the business of every one," he declares, "to inquire into the condition by which his powers may most completely express themselves." The really wise man, says this authority, will thus choose his food, not as most do, by exclusive reference to its taste, but also as to its worth for the tissues of his brain.

THE NERVE TEST.

In a most interesting manner Dr. Saleeby shows how at one time muscle ruled the world. But one of the great facts of progress has been the discarding of brute force and the substitution of the nerve test.

Sound advice of a most practical nature is tendered by the Doctor. He declares that "since nerve now rules the world, and that without nervous health there can be no health, the first question we must ask, when any special food or tonic is brought before us, is as to its worth for nerve."

A MOMENTOUS DISCOVERY.

In Sanatogen, Dr. Saleeby has evidently discovered the long-sought tonic food that will tone the nerves whilst at the same time nourishing the body. In 'The Will to Do' the author says it would be a sufficient recommendation for Sanatogen that it was proved to be a valuable nerve food. But he points out that it contains another element which is indeed absolutely necessary for life. This is Phosphorus.

Now, a curious fact is brought to light in this publication. "Many of the forms," to quote Dr. Saleeby's own words, "in which phosphorus is administered seem altogether to defy the body to absorb them." There is a wealth of meaning in this that will not be lost on the reader. And in his characteristic way he drives it home in the very next sentence: "The special point about Sanatogen is that not only is phosphorus there, but that it is absorbed."

Dr. Saleeby does not stop there. He tells his readers exactly in what way Sanatogen acts as a perfect tonic food. "Whilst it stimulates, it does not excite so much as supply. It is a true tonic because it is a true food, and in some special way a nerve food."

A PROBLEM SOLVED.

The prevalence of that mysterious state, nervous exhaustion, which is the curse of the age, and of the other ills due to the stress and turmoil of the age, is dwelt upon. And the writer remarks upon the deep-rooted but mistaken notion that alcohol is useful as a stimulant. It can, as he conclusively demonstrates, become a poison. The need of the age is not merely for a lubricant oil, but for a substance that is actually capable of re-creating the machine.

Finally, the writer asserts that Sanatogen not only repairs the waste tissue, but that it has solved the problem of administering the life-giving element, phosphorus, in such a way that the nervous system can take hold of it—a problem which has not hitherto been solved. On all counts Sanatogen is proved to be of equal benefit to the young and the aged, the invalid and the convalescent, the weak and ailing, and those who desire to maintain their vigour. Dr. Saleeby's 'The Will to Do' will amply repay all readers who value health and the power to enjoy their share of this world's good.

Some specimen copies are available for distribution, and one will be sent gratis and post free on application to the publishers, F. Williams & Co., 24, Alfred Place, London, W.C., mentioning the Athenæum. Sanatogen is sold by all chemists in tins from 1s. 9d. to 9s. 6d.

H A R P E R & B R O T H E R S

A UNIQUE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH NAVY

THE BRITISH TAR

In Fact and Fiction. The Poetry, Pathos, and Humour of the Sailor's Life

With Frontispiece in Colour and 130 Illustrations from Old Prints, &c.

BY

Commander C. N. ROBINSON, R.N. (Author of 'The British Fleet')

With Chapters on the Place of the Sea Officer and Seaman in Naval History by JOHN LEYLAND (Author of 'The Blockade of Brest,' &c.)

Demy 8vo, cloth gilt, 15s. net

[Ready February 15]

This volume fills a great gap in our national literature. Writers upon Naval subjects have devoted their attention to strategy, tactics, and in some measure to biography, but not one of them has sought to delineate especially the individuality of the seaman. In this book the influence of the seaman—officer and man—his character and social life, his appearance in drama, fiction, satire, and poetry, are the subject of fresh and original treatment. It is the only account of the personnel of the Navy in existence, and throws much valuable light on Naval History. The illustrations—a special feature of the book—are from private and public collections, and present a series of pictures of nautical life, sentiment, humour, and caricature such as cannot be found elsewhere

Harper's Library of Living Thought

Fcap. 8vo, gilt tops, decorative covers, richly gilt backs. Per volume: cloth, 2s. 6d. net; leather, 3s. 6d. net

FIRST THREE VOLUMES NOW READY

ALGERNON
CHARLES SWINBURNE

Three Plays of Shakespeare

W. M.
FLINDERS PETRIE

Personal Religion in Egypt before Christianity

COUNT
LEO TOLSTOY

The Teaching of Jesus

Please write for Descriptive Leaflet of this Series. Other Volumes in preparation will be shortly announced, including
Works by THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON and SVANTE ARRHENIUS

A REMARKABLE FIRST NOVEL BY AN ENGLISH WRITER

DIANA OF THE SWAMP

By ROY N. CLARKE

6s

Showing how a weird curse is fulfilled after a lifetime of strange and ruthless evil-doing [February 15]

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE COMIC SIDE OF SCHOOL LIFE'

MERRY MOMENTS

With Scholars

By HENRY J. BARKER

1s. net

With Cover Design by J. HASSALL

The humour of the English schoolboy and schoolgirl as seen by an Inspector of Schools [February 15]

H A R P E R ' S M A G A Z I N E

FEBRUARY Number. 7 Complete Stories. 60 Illustrations

E. A. ABBEY, R.A. Illustrations to Shakespeare's 'Pericles'THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON. Comments on 'Pericles'

Contributions by MARJORIE BOWEN, NORMAN DUNCAN,
W. D. HOWELLS, Prof. T. R. LOUNSBURY, &c.

RADIUM AND THE EARTH'S HEAT. By Prof. J. JOLYBERLIN TENEMENTS. With 9 Illustrations from PhotographsTHE INNER SHRINE. A New Serial (Anonymous). Illustrated by FRANK CRAIG

HARPER & BROTHERS, 45, Albemarle Street, London, W.

MACMILLAN'S NEW BOOKS.

LORD AVEBURY'S NEW BOOK.

Peace and Happiness.

By the Right Hon. LORD AVEBURY. Crown 8vo, 6s.
These essays discuss many subjects of universal interest with the shrewd and kindly wisdom that in 'The Pleasures of Life' and other works from the same pen has proved helpful and stimulating to so many readers.

The Ancient Greek Historians

(Harvard Lectures). By J. B. BURY, Litt.D. LL.D., Regius Professor of Modern History in the University of Cambridge. 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

The Characters of Theophrastus.

An English Translation from a Revised Text, with Introduction and Notes by R. C. JEBB, M.A., Fellow and Assistant-Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge, and Public Orator of the University, 1870. A New Edition. Edited by J. E. SANDYS, Litt.D. 8vo, 7s. 6d. net. [Classical Library.]

The Acropolis of Athens.

By MARTIN L. D'OOGE, Professor of Greek in the University of Michigan. Fully illustrated. 8vo, 17s. net.

Mars as the Abode of Life.

By PERCIVAL LOWELL, A.B. LL.D. Author of 'Mars and its Canals,' &c. Illustrated. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

Notes of a Botanist on the Amazon and Andes.

Being Records of Travel during the Years 1849-1864. By RICHARD SPRUCE, Ph.D. Edited and Condensed by ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE, O.M. F.R.S. With Portrait of the Author and other Illustrations and Maps. 2 vols. 8vo, 21s. net.

SECOND EDITION JUST PUBLISHED.

The Coming Struggle in Eastern Asia.

By B. L. PUTNAM WEALE, Author of 'Manchu and Muscovite,' &c., with Illustrations and a Map. 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

The Novels of Henry James.

ÉDITION DE LUXE. In 23 vols. 8vo, 8s. 6d. net each. Vol. X. The Spoils of Poynton. A London Life. The Chaperon.

NEW 6/- NOVELS.

TONO-BUNGAY.

By H. G. WELLS.

[Tuesday.]

A novel of contemporary English life. It claims affinity with 'KIPPS,' as distinguished from Mr. Wells's romances into which a fantastic element enters.

One Immortality.

By H. FIELDING HALL.

POCKET DICKENS.—New Volume.

Our Mutual Friend.

A Reprint of the First Edition, with the Illustrations, and an Introduction, Biographical and Bibliographical, by CHARLES DICKENS the Younger. Fcap. 8vo, 2s. net; limp leather, 3s. net.

Shakespeare.

By Prof. WALTER RALEIGH. Globe 8vo, 4s. net. [Eversley Series.]

William Morris.

By ALFRED NOYES. Crown 8vo, 2s. net. [English Men of Letters.]

The Religion of the Common Man.

By Sir HENRY WRIXON, K.C. Crown 8vo, 3s. net.

MACMILLAN & CO., LTD., London.

EVELEIGH NASH'S NEW BOOKS.

HUNGARY OF TO-DAY.

BY MEMBERS OF THE HUNGARIAN GOVERNMENT, &c.

Edited by PERCY ALDEN, M.P.

Price 7s. 6d. net.

No one who wishes to extend his knowledge of the interesting and romantic land of the Magyars should miss reading this book. An authoritative and reliable account of its peoples, constitution, home and foreign administration, and social life, the value and interest of the volume is enhanced by the inclusion of a splendid series of photographs, illustrative of Hungarian life in all its phases.

A FAVOURITE OF NAPOLEON

The Memoirs of Mlle. George.

Price 10s. net.

"Mlle. George's life offers many reasons for the remembrance of posterity, but none so great as her friendship with Napoleon....The book is full of interest and significance." Daily Telegraph.

PETTICOAT PILGRIMS ON TREK.

By Mrs. FRED MATURIN. Price 7s. 6d. net.

The Diary of Two Years spent in the Transvaal and Orange River Colony.

"As entertaining as a good novel....It overflows with high spirits, and that although the authoress was in many a tight place....Digressions but add to the charm of a singularly attractive book."—Scotsman.

REMINISCENCES OF AN OLD SPORTSMAN.

By W. B. WOODGATE. Price 15s. net.

"Altogether this book is one that will appeal not only to those interested in rowing or Varsity life, but to all who take pleasure in listening to the outspoken opinions of a thorough-going representative of the best sort of Englishman."—Globe.

"This breezy, vigorous, wholesome volume....The genial spirit of sportsmanship broods cheerfully over his pages." Daily Telegraph.

NEW 6/- FICTION. STRANLEIGH'S MILLIONS.

By ROBERT BARR.

Some further episodes in the life of that popular millionaire peer, "Young Lord Stranleigh," whose personal charm and financial dexterity are turned to good account in the amazing adventures chronicled in this book.

A GREAT ITALIAN STORY. AFTER THE PARDON.

By MATILDE SERAO.

This novel, so daring in conception and so vigorous in treatment, has for its theme the sanctity and sacrifice of Christian marriage. It is altogether the most remarkable work which has proceeded from the pen of Matilde Serao.

AN UNCONVENTIONAL ROMANCE. THE NEW ANDROMEDA.

By CARLTON DAWE.

AN ENGROSSING MYSTERY. THE WHISPERING MAN.

By H. K. WEBSTER.

"One of the cleverest and most exciting of puzzles." Observer.

At all Bookshops, Bookstalls, and Libraries.

EVELEIGH NASH, London.

MR. MURRAY'S NEW BOOKS.

CORRESPONDENCE OF GEORGE CANNING AND SOME INTIMATE FRIENDS.

Containing hitherto Unpublished Letters, Jeux d'Esprit, &c. Edited by Capt. JOSCELINE BAGOT. With Portraits. 2 vols. demy 8vo, 30s. net. [Ready next week.]

THE LIFE OF PHILIBERT COMMERSON,

D.M., NATURALISTE DU ROI. An Old-World Story of French Travel and Science in the Days of Linnæus. By the late Capt. S. PASFIELD OLIVER, R.A. Edited by G. F. SCOTT ELLIOT, F.L.S. F.R.G.S. With Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net. [Ready next week.]

JOHANNES BRAHMS.

The Herzogenberg Correspondence. Edited by MAX KALBECK, and Translated by HANNAH BRYANT (Mrs. Atkinson). With Portrait. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

DOURIS AND THE PAINTERS OF GREEK VASES.

Translated from the French of EDMOND POTTIER, of the Musée de Louvre, Paris, by BETTINA KAHNWEILER. With a Preface by JANE ELLEN HARRISON, of Newnham College, Cambridge. With Coloured and other Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

LIFE OF LORD NORTON.

(Right Hon. Sir CHARLES ADDERLEY, K.C.M.G.), 1814-1905, Statesman and Philanthropist. By WILLIAM S. CHILDE-PEMBERTON. With Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 12s. net.

"A volume to read, a volume eloquent of the records of a man more anxious to do things than to acquire a name for having done them."—Daily News.

"A fascinating biography, full of wonderful vignettes of political personages between the memorable years of 1814-1905."—Birmingham Gazette.

ROMANCE OF THE EAST SERIES.

Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net each.

TALES OF THE CALIPHS.

By CLAUD FIELD, Author of 'The Confessions of Al Ghazzali.'

In this series the great storehouses of Oriental romance will be opened for the first time to the public. Tales from the Sanscrit, from the Chinese, from every language of the East possessing a great literature will appear in due course. From these vivid narratives of old-world romance it will be possible for the reader to glean much information concerning the lives and manners and customs of vanished races, and the greatness of Empires that have passed away. Mr. Claud Field, in 'Tales of the Caliphs,' gives us the genuine romance of history, authentic anecdotes of Caliphs of Bagdad and Cordova, and marvellous adventures of Haroun-al-Raschid concerning which even 'The Arabian Nights' is silent.

FOUR NEW 6/- NOVELS.

A NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF
'THE BELOVED VAGABOND.'

SEPTIMUS.

By WILLIAM J. LOCKE. [Third Impression in the press.]

"If you want a perfectly delightful book, get W. J. Locke's 'Septimus.'"—Truth.

IONE CHALONER.

By the EARL OF IDDESLEIGH, Author of 'Dowland Castle.'

THE ARCHDEACON'S FAMILY.

By MAUD EGERTON KING.

BEYOND THE SKYLINE.

By ROBERT AITKEN.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle Street, W.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1909.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
GERMANY IN THE LATER MIDDLE AGES	157
HIGHWAYS AND BYWAYS IN SURREY	158
THE SECRETS OF OUR NATIONAL LITERATURE ..	158
CHARLES DICKENS, THE APOSTLE OF THE PEOPLE ..	159
TWO BOOKS ON ROUSSEAU	160
OUR LIBRARY TABLE (A Motor-Flight through France; A British Officer in the Balkans; La Mort de Philæ; Visconti's Mémoires sur la Cour de Louis XIV.; Thirty-Five Years in the Punjab; A Selection from Ensign Stal's Songs; Jane Austen's Novels; The New Latin Delectus; The Englishwoman's Year-Book)	160-163
THE BLEEDING HEART, BY R. A. NICHOLSON; THE NATIONAL LIBRARY OF WALES; 'EGYPT AND THE ENGLISH'; A LONDON CONFERENCE OF INTERNATIONAL JOURNALISTS; THE SEAL OF DORCHESTER; OSWALD CRAWFORD, C.M.G. ..	163-164
LIST OF NEW BOOKS	164
LITERARY GOSSIP	166
SCIENCE—BIRD-HUNTING THROUGH WILD EUROPE; BOOKS ON CHEMISTRY; MEDICAL BOOKS; PHYSIOLOGY; RESEARCH NOTES; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS NEXT WEEK; GOSSIP	167-172
FINE ARTS—SOME OLD DEVON CHURCHES; THE TOWERS OF OXFORD; THE SOCIETY OF WOMEN ARTISTS; OTHER EXHIBITIONS; THE BRITISH SCHOOL AT ATHENS; GOSSIP; EXHIBITIONS ..	173-174
MUSIC—MENDELSSOHN CENTENARY CELEBRATIONS; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK ..	174-175
DRAMA—AN ENGLISHMAN'S HOME; M. COQUELIN AINÉ; GOSSIP	175-176
INDEX TO ADVERTISERS	176

LITERATURE

Germany in the Later Middle Ages, 1200-1500. By Bishop Stubbs. Edited by Arthur Hassall. (Longmans & Co.)

WE imagine, though there is nothing from the editor to tell us so, that this volume concludes the issue of the lectures on the history of Germany which were left in manuscript by Stubbs at his death in 1901. The lectures which were published in 1904 under the title of 'Lectures on European History' were really, as many old Oxford men will remember, the continuation of the same course as that which appears in the volume before us, and were always, so far as we can remember, advertised as on German, not European, history. The earlier series, on Germany from 476 to 1250, were published by Messrs. Longman in 1907. All are described as edited by Mr. Arthur Hassall.

Before we discuss what this editing may mean in the volume before us we make one preliminary observation. The recent issue of the 'Constitutional History' in a French translation, edited by M. Petit-Dutaillis, has been marked by the insertion of over 130 pages of additions, corrections, and criticisms, which (though we regard some of them as rather otiose and hypercritical) have been for the most part rendered necessary by the progress of historical studies during the last ten or fifteen years. But Stubbs had, if somewhat inadequately, followed the course of such studies up to the date of the last edition of his great book, in 1896, and of his 'Select Charters,' in 1901. Those two books were published and revised by himself; yet they have needed additions and corrections in the last seventeen years. What, then, shall we say about lectures on the history of Germany which were written, evidently, many years ago; which were certainly not revised after 1884, when the Professor became Bishop of Chester; and concerning which there is not the slightest sign that the writer ever thought them worthy of publication? Surely, if these were to be published at all, they needed full and careful revision; or, if it be thought that anything which so great a scholar wrote should be published in whatever condition it was left, it should have been stated that the lectures were in no way prepared for publication by their author. Something like this we feel bound to say on behalf of the many scholars who are jealous for the reputation of a great English historian of the nineteenth century. Something like this, we are confident, would have been said by Maitland if he had been still among us.

But how have these lectures been edited? Our first complaint is that we have no means of knowing. Mr. Hassall does not tell us anything about the matter. He does not say what was the condition of the manuscript—whether it was complete or had lacunæ, whether it was written continuously, or divided, as it appears in print, into chapters. He does not tell us when it was written, or if there are any signs of revision, nor does he state when the lectures were last delivered; but this fact we can discover for ourselves from the University Gazette. The lectures on the history of Germany from the accession of Rudolph of Hapsburg to the death of Maximilian were delivered by the Regius Professor of Modern History in the Michaelmas Term, 1883; in the following term he went on to the time of Charles V. We confess we cannot feel confident that we have the whole of these lectures. There seems to us something like a gap between the present volume and that which Mr. Hassall published in 1904. But of this more anon.

Since Mr. Hassall has supplied no information whatever about the Bishop's manuscript or how he has treated it, we might at least expect that the volume as it appears would show marks of careful treatment. What do we find? A somewhat incoherent prefatory note, in which we are assured that "the appearance of this volume will be received with immense pleasure by all students of the history of Europe in the Middle Ages"; and a list of books headed 'Some Authorities,' which gives not a single German work, either an original authority or a modern book; in which the only original texts mentioned—it is almost incredible—are Joinville and Philippe de Commines, the first of whom said not a word about German history; and where the other fourteen names are given without the smallest distinction, are all (except those of MM. Lavissee and Rambaud) books to be read in English, and vary from Milman to Dean Kitchin, and Archdeacon Coxe to Prof. Thomas Tout, while some of them, so far as we are aware, hardly touch the matter of the book before us. We may add, however, that two of the books named are edited, and one is written, by Mr. Hassall himself.

But surely we find something else? Yes; a fairly good, but inadequate Index; the division of the lectures into chapters, with paragraph headings (which, with expressions here and there like "the previous volume" and "this work," puzzle us very much, for neither the chapters nor the headings look as if they were written by Stubbs); and a few notes, all without distinction, and some obviously written by the editor, some by the author. What really has the editor done? Has he transcribed the manuscript? has he altered or omitted anything? There is nothing to tell us. He has certainly not supplemented the text from more recent investigation, or subjected it to the revision of any competent authority on German history.

About Stubbs's part in this book we need say little. It is palpable that it wants abundant correction and addition, which the author, meticulously exact in all that he allowed to see the light under his own hand, would have given before he had allowed—if he ever intended—the lectures to appear. It needs as little to be said that it is full of "wise saws and modern instances," pregnant summaries of constitutional progress, humorous illustration, and striking judgments of character. Every page of it is worth reading, for it is never a mere record of facts, but always illuminated by the personal judgments of a trained historian. We wish we could tell when it was written. A reference to Count Beust's transfer of his services makes us think the composition earlier than we should otherwise have imagined; a note, which is perhaps by Mr. Hassall, refers to 1870; towards the end of the book there is mention of "Creighton's two volumes," i.e. those which were published in 1882. There are, however, hardly any allusions, such as Stubbs used to make so naturally, to contemporary politics: perhaps Mr. Hassall has excised them.

As we go through the book we find, to our surprise, much omitted that was certainly delivered in lecture, and which notes taken at the time contain, particularly the comparison with English institutions—for example, the counts palatine (p. 63 of the book) with what the English sheriffs, "if they had become hereditary," would have been. A little later than the page referred to we find a jejune reference to the "recess" issued in German in 1287: in the lectures as delivered Stubbs went at length into the question of the first official use of the German language, noting the spuriousness of the recess of 1235, "a copy from a printed German version, itself a translation from a Latin original"; discussing the three "recesses" of Rudolf; and comparing, as to language, with the proclamation about the Provisions of Oxford. The lectures also were much more detailed, when delivered, in regard to Switzerland, and indeed to the whole reigns of Albert of Hapsburg and Henry of Luxembourg. Chap. vi. as printed here contains a note which was certainly delivered in lecture: many more dates and details, too, were given orally. The most important omission occurs in the same chapter: it is of a long discussion of the literary controversy of Lewis of Bavaria's reign, especially of the work of Marsilius and William of Ockham. It is extremely unlikely that this, a most careful and thorough examination of an important epoch in mediæval political science, was not written down by the Professor. Has not the MS survived? Mr. Hassall gives us no clue. There are many more omissions in the same chapter. In chap. viii. the description of Wenzel, and the comparison with the sovereigns of his time, were certainly more full when delivered, entertaining though they are in the printed text. Later, the account of the morality of Sigismund is not at all the same: phrases about Martin V. differ considerably; there is the omission of a characteristic sentence about Frederic of Styria—"the power of bending a horseshoe with his fingers was about the only good quality Frederic inherited from his parents"—while the Council of Basle is disposed of far too summarily. When we get to Maximilian further differences occur: Stubbs in lecture said a good deal about the "arch-dukes"; from p. 209 a great deal is given which was omitted in delivery, at least in 1883; and from about p. 220 the book seems to part company altogether with notes taken at the time the course was last given.

All this may be of very little moment, but we state it because we cannot help feeling that with a little trouble the book (if it was to be published) might have been made much more full, and much more representative of the author's own judgment and knowledge.

The question remains, What did Stubbs really intend? We know that a history of Germany was long advertised as about to appear from the Clarendon Press; but we remember that Liddon, when told some time before his death that the life of Pusey was announced as nearly ready, replied: "Dear friend, I have no doubt that if a publisher had been asked about the Tower of Babel he would have said that it was 'nearly ready.'" Was the volume before us a recension of the lectures with a view to the promised German history? Did Stubbs really consider them ready to be published, as lectures or as a history? We have little doubt, though the editor gives us no evidence, as to the answer.

Highways and Byways in Surrey. By Eric Parker. (Macmillan & Co.)

In system, arrangement, method, and compass Mr. Parker's 'Surrey' is decidedly one of the best in this excellent series. We should not, however, judge that he had come to his task with any special equipment of previous familiarity with the county. His work shows at times traces of hurried investigations, forced visits, and incomplete observations. He speaks, for example, of the village green at Shere, where there is none; and he seems to misunderstand the source and course of the Tillingbourne. He writes:—

"There are scarcely ten miles of the Tillingbourne, altogether, but it runs through three of the prettiest villages in the county. Gomshall is nearest the source, by Abinger Hammer, its first large mill-pond; Shere lies a mile to the west; and Albury a mile west again."

Gomshall can hardly be claimed as a pretty village, disfigured as it is by a tannery. We cannot imagine why Abinger Hammer should be called a mill-pond, seeing that it is a village of much more importance and prettiness than Gomshall; and as a matter of fact the sources of the stream are not in Abinger, but are to be found in the slopes of Leith Hill—by Broadmoor, Friday Street, and Holmbury St. Mary.

These, however, are small defects in comparison with the excellences of Mr. Parker's achievement. He has been at great pains to "get up" his subject, and has explored many authorities. Obviously the 'Victoria County History' has been largely drawn upon, and he acknowledges his debt. His scope is the county outside London, which he approaches only as near as Kew and Richmond on one side, with concluding chapters that skirt Dulwich, Wimbledon, and the Surrey side. This is as it should be, for we do not want a survey of London in such a book as this.

Mr. Parker has missed very little of interest to a pedestrian or cyclist in Surrey roads; and his book will prove of better value to the visitor than any mere guide-book, if only because it is more human and more literary. His itinerary of the Pilgrims' Way is as plausible as any we have seen. He traces the road from Guildford to St. Katharine's Ferry, and so up to Chanceries and St. Martha's (St. Martyr's). This route is now so generally accepted as to have been marked by the Guildford Corporation with a signpost. But neither Mr. Parker nor Mr. Belloc seems to know of the grass path which descends from St. Martha's by the Weston Woods, and avoids Albury—to which local tradition assigns the name of the Pilgrims' Way. This course, if followed, will bring the modern pilgrim through the Duke of Northumberland's Park, and right past the house to Chantry bridge; and so to Shere and the downs beyond. There is a belief that Bunyan transcribed Vanity Fair from St. Katharine's Fair at Shalford. Bunyan is said to have lived at Shalford, and it is conceivable that he took the idea of the Pilgrims' Progress from the Pilgrims' Way. The trail of Cobbett, another sturdy writer of English, is over much of Surrey, but Cobbett's appreciation of its beauties was limited and crabbed. He detested Hindhead and the wonderful wild country about Thursley. His only notion of scenery was smiling fields.

Mr. Parker's chapter on Guildford is very good, and his rhapsody on its beauty is intelligible, though one demurs to the statement that "perhaps only Oxford in England is comparable with it." The crypts under "The Angel," by the way, are generally accepted as part of some early monastic institution. Tangleby Manor, reputed to have been one of King John's hunting-boxes, is justly praised; but Mr. Parker does not mention the fact that it was rescued some twenty years ago from the fate of a decaying farm-house, and its moat and grounds from the degradation of a slaughter-yard. The old church which stands in Albury Park was not, as Mr. Parker seems to think, abandoned by the parishioners on account of its dilapidated condition. Mr. Drummond, who owned the estate, was an enthusiastic Irvingite, and not only built a Catholic Apostolic cathedral in his grounds, but built also another parish church on the condition that he might shut up the old one near his house. That consent should have been obtained is lamentable, but those were glorious times for the privileged. We agree with Mr. Parker in his strictures on the famous Silent Pool, and we would go even further. It is not worth its reputation for a moment.

Wherever you dip into Mr. Parker's book you will find information pleasantly retailed, and we cannot discover that he misses much. He does not, however, seem to know the beautiful village of Felday.

The Secrets of our National Literature. By William Prideaux Courtney. (Constable & Co.)

MR. COURTNEY, in this very acceptable book, has not indulged in "blazing indiscretions," but contented himself with performing a public service by bringing together in one volume a vast amount of information hitherto scattered in a thousand-and-one odd corners and out-of-the-way places. Anonymity and pseudo-anonymity have been a favourite subterfuge of authors since book-making became a trade. Some of the motives for mystification have been cogent—vital, even—so far as the authors were concerned; others have been dictated by a purely mischievous desire to stir up discussion; but whatever the reasons, the result has been a prolific harvest of guesses at the truth. For over half a century Notes and Queries has devoted much of its space to the "lifting of the veil," and it may be taken as a general rule that those riddles of authorship which have failed to find a solution in its pages are likely to remain unsolved.

Mr. Courtney has not deemed it his duty to start off on a fresh and independent voyage of discovery, and so we are deprived of a highly controversial chapter in the history of anonymity. He has, with due acknowledgments, availed himself of the work of others, and reduced the whole subject to a methodical classification. It needed considerable skill to accomplish this difficult task, and it will be admitted that he has done his work with conspicuous success. He has, in a sense, drawn up a résumé of a number of well-defined chapters, each of which is capable of almost endless elaboration, and each of which also will doubtless, in due time, receive the attention of other students. His work is tentative, being, as it claims, the first of its kind, and, like all first books on big subjects, it is the beginning, and not the end—a statement of the case rather than a judge's summing-up.

But why, it may be asked, should we wish to draw aside the veil and attempt to discover the identities of those who wished to remain hidden? Human nature is a singularly complex organism, and nothing has a greater fascination for it than mysteries and uncertainties. So long as anonymity exists, so long will there be those who spare themselves no research or inquiry to get at the bottom of it, in spite, perhaps on account, of the objections of those who wish their secret to be buried with them. There can be no question that the individuality hidden under the anonym or pseudonym is in many cases of importance. A political indictment or a literary or theological satire has far more weight if written by a person intimate with the theme, than one written by a person whose information was only got through doubtful channels. Many such authors have been discovered, but Junius still defies the literary detective. He was evidently well informed, and the question of his identity is now rather a matter of archaic interest than of anything else.

Mr. Courtney deals first of all with the 'Histories of Anonymous Literature,' and this chapter shows that he has explored the literary byways of Europe. He does not, however, refer to Frederick Marchmont's 'Concise Handbook of Ancient and Modern Literature issued either Anonymously, or under Pseudonyms or Initials' (1896), in which will be found a good deal of miscellaneous information of a minor order, the fruits of many years' gleanings as a cataloguer for the London second-hand booksellers. Mr. Marchmont's book is a compilation rather than the work of a scholar. Nor is W. H. Hart's 'Index Expurgatorius Anglicanus' (1872-4) mentioned. This, while only dealing incidentally with books published anonymously or with a transparent pseudonym, contains many entries which would have added illustrations to some of Mr. Courtney's passages. Hart's book was, we think, never finished.

Mr. Courtney's third and fourth chapters deal with 'Feminine Reasons for Secrecy' and 'More Veiled Ladies.' They are both exceedingly entertaining without being exhaustive. He does not tell us that a new edition of Lady Charlotte Bury's 'Diary illustrative of the Times of George IV.' (p. 56) was published a few months ago, or that Miss Tucker's pseudonym (p. 68) of A.L.O.E. is formed from the initial letters of A Lady of England. The deaths, noted on p. 70, of two "veiled ladies" in June last, Lanoe Falconer and Allen Raine, show that the author comes up to date with his record, but there are several others not here recognized: one of these, recently dead, promises to be a puzzle to the next generation of bibliographers, since her popular fiction appeared under several names having no apparent association one with another.

The reference (p. 80) to Garrick praising an anonymous publication by Richard Cumberland, and his "restrained" praises when the authorship was revealed to him, is explained by the well-known antipathy of the two. Except in a literary sense, we should not say that "The author of 'Vathek' sums up Beckford's glory" (p. 82). In his way Beckford was a genius: his collections of pictures and objects of art, and his beautiful library, although no longer intact, prove him to have been a man of fine taste. The reference (p. 99) to Rossetti's friend Dr. Thomas Gordon Hake as the author of the romance of 'Vates' (1840) induces us to mention—for the first time, we believe, in print—that Dr. Hake's son, Mr. A. Egmont Hake, is the author of 'Regeneration' (1895), a reply to Max Nordau's 'Degeneration.' Mr. W. R. Cassels, mentioned (p. 150) in the chapter on 'The Concealed Theologian' as the author of 'Supernatural Religion' (1874)—at the time attributed to Thirlwall, Muir the Sanskrit scholar, and Dr. Vance Smith—had another claim to distinction: he had the good fortune to buy a Turner picture for 295 guineas, and to live to receive 6,400 guineas for it, at a sale at Messrs. Christie's on June 30th, 1906. He died on June 10th, 1907.

We may conveniently pass over Mr. Courtney's long chapter on 'The Politician in the Dark'; both this and his next essay, 'Disguises in Miscellaneous Literature,' are readily capable of expansion into two volumes. In these, as indeed throughout the book, Mr. Courtney gossips easily out of the fullness of his knowledge, and passes from the maze of theology to the rancour of politics without apparent effort. He has not by any means exhausted the interest of his subject. Probably every book-collector could furnish him with dozens of additional "texts," ancient and modern. His object, however, has not been to produce a rival to Halkett and Laing, but rather to make an acceptable nosegay from the flowers of a densely crowded garden. In this he has been eminently successful, and those who care for the bypaths of literary inquiry will read his work with delight. It has the great advantage of an excellent Index.

Charles Dickens, the Apostle of the People.
By Edwin Pugh. (New Age Press.)

MR PUGH states the purpose of his volume bluntly enough in the words: "It was to prove Dickens a Socialist in all but the name that I engaged on this present enterprise"; and it is at once obvious to any careful student of the life and work of Dickens that special pleading of a more than ordinarily ruthless type is required to make good such a contention. Socialism to-day presents itself in a variety of aspects, corresponding almost with the variety of its disciples; still dealing largely in benevolent abstractions, it defies a definition that shall be universally satisfying, and Mr. Pugh helps us but little when he observes that all that was needed to make Dickens a Socialist was a "co-ordinated ideal," or that "he was a Socialist without knowing it—as so many are; as all men, sound in heart and head, must be." When, however, we meet with a presentment of scientific Socialism as "the extension to industry and economics of the free self-governing principle recognized in democracy," and with the conception of the State "as a guardian and protector—an abiding Providence, in fact, over the people," we are on firmer ground; but we note our author's frank admission that with neither of these ideals had Dickens anything in common; indeed throughout a book which is in many respects able, though sadly disfigured by turgidity of style and a zeal which makes no attempt to be dispassionate, Mr. Pugh is more concerned with seeking to reconcile vital differences between his subject's views and his own than with expounding similarity or emphasizing identity. Their respective standpoints are poles apart; if there were any common ground on which they could hope to meet, it would be that of charity and kindness; but even here they are at hopeless variance, for private benevolence, esteemed by Dickens as an impulse sacred and ennobling, is to Mr. Pugh "but a handing back in paltry doles" of a "portion" of "unearned increment, the fruits of a wicked spoliation of the poor and needy," and "the Brothers Cheeryble are altogether abominable and raise our gorge." So intemperate is the denunciation hurled at the amiable, but unconvincing brethren that we are forced to the (we hope) absurd conclusion that the kindly action of the individual is, in Socialist eyes, a crime against the State; and no greater divergence from the spirit and teaching of the author of the Christmas books is imaginable. Again, with the "Brotherhood of Man"—that is, equality as understood by modern propagandists—Dickens had no sympathy. Despite occasional animadversions upon the "bad old times," he is still a believer in the old order—purged of its abuses—and of the old order "class" distinctions form an integral part. Against this contention may be cited, perhaps, Peggotty's interview with Mrs. Steerforth, or the remarks of Rosa Dartle relative to the sensibilities of Yarmouth fisher-folk; but the outrageous sentiments put into the mouths of these ladies are more safely ascribed to the melodramatic element, seldom entirely absent from Dickens's work, than to any special democratic fervour.

The Master's attitude on class questions has been well summed up by Gissing: "He would not have used the phrase, but he would have thought the thought, that humble folk must know 'their station.' His "Radicalism" preaches tenderness and sympathy towards the poor, not because they ought to be as well-to-do as their neighbours, but because they are the poor—an intrinsic part of the social fabric; he attacks public scandals—those personified in Bumble and Squeers, or debtors' prisons and the criminal laggardness of Chancery—not because the system which evolved them is a wrong system, but because such phenomena are malevolent growths on an otherwise healthy body—and this, again, is a root conception far removed from the Socialist ideal. Yet the practical results achieved by Dickens as the outcome of this wrongheaded view of his (we are told that "there must have been some kink" in his "mental apparatus to send him so woefully astray," and it is even suggested that in Podsnap he portrayed himself) are, for lack of more convincing material, lightly appropriated by Mr. Pugh as "pioneer work of Socialism," and lead him, in a state of blindness that must surely be of a wilful sort, to the conclusion that "Dickens, had he lived to-day, would have been a Socialist." He goes still further afield, and impounds such a human trait as the abhorrence of rascality and meanness, as another indication of Socialistic proclivities; but in the case of the great Merdle, as is apparent to the less biased, it is forgery and swindling that bring down the lash, not Capitalism per se; and it would be idle to regard Casby, the patriarchal humbug, as a species of Guy Fawkes raised up for the obloquy of Landlordism in general; while in the "mean subterfuge" of Spenlow and Jorkins we may be sure that the humour outweighed the iniquity in the mind of its creator.

As was only to be expected where points of view are so radically divergent, there are many typically Dickensian qualities—especially those arising from high spirits, geniality, and, above all, sheer humour—that Mr. Pugh, in the serious obsession of his purpose, cannot away with; and what is not consonant with his theories becomes "obliquity of moral vision." Thus 'Pickwick' shows "an almost entire lack of spirituality—of idealism," together with "a flippant, light-hearted disregard of vital issues," and its pervading tone is one of "gay cynical carelessness"; Mr. Swiveller, the joy of the devout Dickensian, is an "arch-wastrel," and Wilkins Micawber, the incorrigible optimist, "an idle self-indulgent rascal who deserved a good deal worse than he got." Such judgments, in their woeful lack of idealism—we had almost said spirituality—are on a par with the bias which twists into embryo Socialism the instincts of common charity in which all men "sound in head and heart" may be supposed to be in complete accord, and can scarcely be held to assist Mr. Pugh in the establishment of his proposition. His case throughout is injudiciously overstated, and his book, though by no means lacking in suggestive criticism, is, in its main thesis, too unashamedly partisan to carry conviction even to the wavering. We note the absence of an Index—a defect which should be remedied in future editions.

TWO BOOKS ON ROUSSEAU.

Jean Jacques Rousseau. By Jules Lemaître. Translated by Jeanne Mairé. (Heinemann.)

The Humane Philosophy of Jean Jacques Rousseau. Selected by Frederika Macdonald. (Dent & Co.)

NOTHING could be more entertaining than the volume in which the French critic analyzes and discusses the life and theories of Jean Jacques Rousseau, though he has written, as we said in reviewing the French original, "a party pamphlet rather than a piece of literary criticism." These lectures, couched in the style "of a somewhat careful conversation," are designed to give a history of the philosopher's sentiments, and therefore, necessarily, the story of his life, the analysis of his 'Confessions.' For M. Lemaître, brushing aside Rousseau's own statements in the 'Dialogues' as an afterthought, does not hold that his author's books all flow from the same premeditated system; he does not endeavour to explain, like M. Lanson, that all in Rousseau, even in the 'Contrat Social,' is subject to a single principle; or, like M. Faguet, that all can be made subject to it with the exception of the 'Contrat Social.'

The problem of Rousseau, as M. Lemaître sees it, he expresses in his pungent way:—

"This vagrant, this sluggard, this self-taught man, who, after thirty years of idle musings, dropped one day into the midst of the brilliant Paris of the eighteenth century, where he seemed a veritable savage, but a real savage, very much more interesting than the one Voltaire painted; who began to publish toward his fortieth year; who in the space of ten years, in the midst of almost incessant physical suffering, wrote three or four books—which are not particularly strong nor rare as to thought, but show a new way of thinking and a sort of vibration unknown till then; who then sank into a slow kind of madness—and who, by those three or four books, caused, after his death, literature to be transformed and the life of a people, to whom he did not belong, to deviate: what a prodigious feat to accomplish!"

In dealing with the question of Rousseau's style M. Lemaître is admirable. He shows how, from the circumstances of his childhood, fed upon seventeenth-century books, far from Paris, Rousseau revived a tradition, imparting to it an air of novelty and a new soul; he shows, too, how he was responsible for the "frightful expansion of sentimental phraseology," and adds:—

"I believe that this emphatic and tear-stained style was sincere with Rousseau; that this unnatural style, with him, was natural. Why? Because he was ill, a prey to nervous maladies; because, in the real sense of the word, he was morbidly sensitive; because he himself, on the least provocation, was eternally bursting into tears. But, alas! he had imitators, and that was horrible."

The translation by Jeanne Mairé (Madame Charles Bigot) is not wholly adequate. Many sentences, such as "Rousseau accused the works of Molière of immorality about, as in our days, did Brunetière," are almost unintelligible to those English who have no French. But at least the version has the virtue of suggesting the vivacious charm of a book which many may find stimulating, though they may find not a little with which too they disagree.

A flamboyant and assertive preface is liable to distract the reader's attention from the collection of maxims and principles drawn from Rousseau's writings which Mrs. Macdonald has made. It is easy enough to misunderstand or misrepresent a writer whose practice was so much at variance with his preaching, whose writings teem with silly paradoxes and self-contradictory precepts. Friends and enemies alike certainly combined to misrepresent Rousseau in his lifetime. But many of the precepts which he propounded, and which were deemed outrageous in his day, have come to be accepted as the true basis of education, and much of the fruit of his social criticism has yet, perhaps, to ripen. Mrs. Macdonald has set herself the useful task of winnowing the grain from the chaff, and, eliminating the contradictions, she gives a collection of the essential ideas and convictions underlying the educational, social, and religious theories of Jean Jacques. Her object, she says, is to correct the impression produced by "fifty years of false criticism," and

"to prove by the evidence of Rousseau's own statement of his fundamental doctrines and main spiritual purposes, that they are not the doctrines and purposes attributed to him by his best-known French and English critics."

Without entering into the fray, we can appreciate any book which takes the reader back to the original. Mrs. Macdonald adds a few notes, in which she indicates what she believes to be the true intention of the author's doctrine, and defends him against the charge of capricious inconsistency. We gather from a note on the famous passage in 'Emile' that Mrs. Macdonald clings to her belief in the legendary nature of Rousseau's children, a belief which we have already been obliged to stigmatize as an extravagant supposition (Athenæum, Nos. 4121, 4123, 4124), for reasons there given.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

A Motor-Flight through France, by Edith Wharton (Macmillan), is better literature than its title suggests. It is none the less sad reading for any one who knew the charm of travelling over the delightful high roads of France before the coming of the automobile. The book opens with the assertion that "the motor-car has restored the romance of travel"; and the following two hundred pages are a convincing, though unintentional, demonstration of the converse of this proposition. The author has a theoretical love for the picturesque, combined with some knowledge of the history and architecture of the scenes and the monuments past which it is her pleasure to be whizzed. But speed is evidently her supreme joy.

The narrative of her first "flight" begins with a just observation on "the ugliness and desolation, created by the railway, . . . of the approach to each town." She then proceeds: "The villages that we missed and yearned for from the windows of the train—the unseen villages have been given back to us." The rest of the chapter shows how she satisfied her yearning in a rush from Boulogne to Arras and Amiens—a brief promenade of 180 kilometres, on which she mentions only one town or village, Hesdin, though there are a dozen of interest on the way. As she flies along, she notes, with surprising power of vision, "the slow-moving eyes of the peasants . . . the drowsy grouping of the cattle." What we have chiefly noticed in French villages, when a motor thunders by in a cloud of dust, are the quick-moving legs of the peasants, while the cattle, including pigs, dogs, and poultry, disarrange their "drowsy grouping" in similar terror for their lives. This first "flight" ended characteristically. The inn at Arras did not look nice, so the travellers, instead of trying the one in the next street, flew on to Amiens—61 kilometres further.

This little appetizer before their dinner was so successful that when at Montluçon, in the Allier, they did not like the "griminess" of the inn, they just dashed on to Vichy, 88 kilometres away. Thence, during a short progress through Auvergne, they did see something of wayside villages; but this was owing to the steepness of mountain roads, which checked their upward speed. However, when they got back to Vichy they made up for their self-denial: "Our slight experience of the inns of Central France made us anxious to reach Orleans by night." We may observe that between Vichy and Orleans there are half a dozen towns where there are better hotels than at Orleans. But though "such long runs cannot be made without the sacrifice of much that charms," the travellers bravely made the sacrifice, and were able to boast of 300 kilometres rattled over that day. Such is the restored romance of travel. After that we are not surprised to find that Chartres is from Blois "a short afternoon's run"—it is barely 130 kilometres; or that in George Sand's country (which the author seems sincerely to love) towns such as Argenton should be rushed through; or that Toulouse, a place of romantic inspiration to its sons and to all who know it, is only "a dingy wind-ridden city"; or that the old villages of the Brie, between Paris and Meaux, few of which have undergone change since the Revolution, are "semi-suburban."

The effect upon us of reading this book, which is well written, is bewildering, on account of the rapidity of the change of scene. We may say that the distances covered by these scampering Americans (the author frequently alludes to her nationality) are not given in the book; but we have some knowledge of the places visited, not more than two or three of them being off the tourist track as it existed before the romantic restoration effected by the motor. No wonder that a lady whirled through France at such a vertiginous pace as she describes should be sometimes confused in her literary allusions. She seems to think that Kubla Khan was a building: at least this is what we gather from her mysterious remark that Beauvais Cathedral is "the Kubla Khan of architecture."

The photographs illustrating the volume are excellent. No intimation is given of their origin, but we surmise that they were not taken by the author. At all events, in that of Arras the clock on the Hôtel de Ville marks an hour when the travellers were not in that city. The view of Amiens Cathedral, too, is well known in commerce, being taken from a spot unattainable by tourists. The choir-stalls of Saint Maximin, in Provence, are admirably reproduced—much better than the interior of Albi, which fails to give the effect of that unique choir. Of out-of-door pictures, that of the Roman arch at Orange is particularly good.

MAJOR PERCY E. HENDERSON publishes through Messrs. Seeley & Co., A British Officer in the Balkans, an entertaining account of a journey in Montenegro, Bosnia, and their neighbourhood. The reader will not be bored with useless discussion of those insoluble problems that are raised in most writings concerned with the Balkan Peninsula. The criticism often made by us on narratives of travel, to the effect that their authors have not sufficiently wide experience to distinguish circumstances of interest from those which are well known because widespread, may be directed against Major Henderson. He has travelled, especially in India, but reveals his limitations. He ought not to have been surprised at finding Agram superior in its civilization to the Dalmatian, Montenegrin, and Bosnian cities of the past or future. The political importance of Agram should have prepared him for comfort. Major Henderson's remarks on the climate have far more general application than he seems to think. The heat of summer and the cold of winter, as well as the shortness of periods of "transition as in England," are not peculiar to Bosnia: the places where it is cold in summer and warm in winter, except on mountains or in desert plains, are few indeed. San Francisco is a startling exception, but the United Kingdom is itself exceptional. The rule is that which Major Henderson describes as though it were specially Bosnian. It may almost be said of the world at large that "the percentage of cloudy days is very small" as compared with the case of countries lying within the influence of the great seas. That Friday should be selected for travel by those who have a choice is a hint not to be confined to "train travelling in Bosnia," but applicable to most countries in which religion, or superstition based on religion, has real existence.

Although, like most travellers, Major Henderson is open to such criticism, yet far more than the usual writer of traveller's gossip he is a guide worth following, and his pages are readable by all. In gaiety he rivals Miss Durham, herself a worthy successor of Kinglake. Like Miss Durham, he here and there inculcates valuable lessons, as, for example, when he commends, with much illustration, the development by Austria of industrial experiment in the occupied provinces. Gaiety predominates, and it may be that the example of Miss Durham was not lost upon the author when he set to work to construct such "headings" as "Notice necessary before visiting a harem." In the text he adds, "We never got over the curiosity as to what might be behind the veil." Major Henderson's advice to those about to travel—that they should consider the back of Montenegro, the occupied provinces, and Croatia as fruitful fields—is sound. In details we hesitate. For example, he suggests that the Dalmatian coast provides new fields for oyster-lovers. Undoubtedly the Mediterranean oysters, like many other Mediterranean shellfish, have a savage charm that is wanting in the well-fed sewage-culture oyster known to England and Northern France. But the eater has to take the rough with the smooth, and custom is not opposed, upon the Mediterranean coast, to the insertion, in each dozen, of at least one oyster whose life has terminated very many days before he presents himself upon the table. The living have to suffer by reason of the high flavour of the corpse.

Major Henderson tells many things in passing that tempt a reader into bypaths. For example, in Bosnia "Mahommedan women are allowed to worship at the same time and place as the men.....going through the same forms of prayer.....alternatively standing, dropping on their knees, and rising again.....a gymnastic performance difficult for a Turkish woman, garbed as she is, to execute."

Another matter in which we learn from our author concerns the export to London of cigarettes made by Turks employed by the Government cigarette factories of the Austrian rule. The author's reference to "Egyptian cigarettes" suggests that he was not aware that no "Egyptian cigarettes" are made of Egyptian tobacco. Major Henderson's pages on the manufacture of Oriental carpets in Bosnia are most interesting, and lead us to believe that the beautiful silk carpets now sold as ancient in Constantinople may come from Bosnia. They are not the less valuable, for it seems that new carpets of silk thread made after Turkish or Persian designs fetch "from 42% to 50%." Another Austrian institution in Bosnia is "the Government School of Turkish Art Industry in Metals." As Major Henderson crossed the country of the Bogumils, his remarks upon their mysterious creed or heresy may tempt some to the study of the large number of special works dealing with the subject. The amateur photographs with which the volume is profusely illustrated are useful.

WE have received from the Paris house of Calmann Lévy La Mort de Philæ, by Pierre Loti. Egypt does not afford to the author so suitable a theme as Japan, Constantinople, or even Brittany. The predominance of a tourist agency spoils his temper and cuts across his pages, till the reader grows to be as exasperated by incongruity as was Loti when he wrote. Egypt is now too widely known to allow scope to Loti's imagination. A visit in the days before the British occupation, when he was writing upon his sailor friends, the fishermen of North-Western France, might have yielded a rival to the two volumes of Fromentin on Algiers. Monotony there would indeed have been, but the very charm of old Egypt lay in that Nilotic monotony which the tourist agency and the Soudan railway have disturbed. Moreover, there was monotony in Loti's finest pages of the past—in his sketches of Indian coasts and his 'Death of Admiral Courbet.' Monotony, indeed, is common to Fromentin and Loti in their most enduring passages, and Fromentin himself describes their charm in his selection of the least unhappy fate—slowly to have done with life, "par une mort voluptueuse."

We find in this Egyptian volume a few scenes such as may rank with admirable bits in previous books describing French India and the islands of the Indian Ocean. One of the most perfect fails, we are inclined to think, by selecting sunset as against dawn for the time at which to depict the particular prospect. The view of Egypt that is best as the sun sinks behind the hills is that familiar to all visitors, namely, from the Citadel of Cairo towards the Great Pyramids and Sphinx. The capital of Egypt, like that of Tuscany, and like that of non-official Russia, cannot be completely known by those who have not watched them, from the chosen hill, throughout the sacred hour. Elsewhere in Egypt the "lights" on which reverie depends are best in early morning; and the green and yellow of the desert mountains before sunrise are to be preferred to the more commonplace blush of sunset, inferior on the Nile to that of the Himalayas and the Alps. Despite this criticism, the book contains at least one sunset matchless except in the work of the same man:—

"Quant au soleil, il a voulu rester en scène pour quelques secondes, maintenu après l'heure par le mirage, mais si changé derrière d'épais voiles que l'on préférerait qu'il n'y fût pas; couleur de braise qui s'éteint, il semble beaucoup trop près et trop gros; il n'éclaire plus rien, il n'est qu'un globe tristement rose qui se déforme et s'ovalise; non plus dans l'espace, mais échoué là-bas sur le bord extrême du désert, il regarde les choses comme un grand œil terne qui va se fermer dans la mort."

We already knew the deep dislike with which Loti regards "les Anglais." Our crimes are bad enough, no doubt, and we humbly note, for the attention of Lord Cromer and Sir Eldon Gorst, the conduct of the poor, bored private soldier, the only non-smoker present—an extenuating circumstance—who was detected by Loti carving his name upon the marble base of the Citadel Mosque at Cairo. It is perhaps a little hard on us that the British occupation should be made to bear the sole responsibility of the erection (by Nubar Pasha) of factory chimneys as hideous as the three to which Florence was long limited by Ruskin's curse. Loti's title has been artfully selected in order to exhibit the barbarians of the North as guilty of all the inevitable vulgarizations of the Nile Valley. Truth peeps out in two passages, where German tourists take their place among those now classed in a received French term as "cook's," with a small c. Pierre Loti appears, or perhaps pretends, to think that until the defeat of Arabi and the coming of the British garrison, the Nile was allowed to conduct its annual flood in its own way. That our dams are the biggest dams may be conceded to him with some pride. But there were dams in Egypt, as in India, before the advent of the Anglo-Indian engineer. Pierre Loti is an artist, and cares no more than did Ruskin whether hard fact might confirm or upset a preconceived conviction. Of one thing only is Loti certain, namely, that "the English" have invented, or at least enormously augmented, Egyptian taxes, which, for anything he tells his reader, may be spent exclusively on Old-Age Pensions in the United Kingdom. Of "The Debt," of Ismail Pasha, of the disappearance under Ismail of the Finance Minister who knew too much, of International Control, not one word; and it is useless for us to plead "Not guilty, my Lord," when charged by Loti with those very horrors that in our Annual Reports are rightly set down to the extra-territoriality of Levantine rascals secured by the Capitulations.

Loti is by nature, or a lifelong pose which is now second nature, so sad as to be wanting in humour. Yet we find a happy suggestion that "les cooks" should be subjected to public examination in the abominable country of their birth, in order that the privilege of travel in poetic lands should be confined to those whose physical defects make it contrary to public policy that they should stay at home and marry.

WHEN there first appeared quotations in Paris newspapers, and pages in French reviews, extracted from Primi Visconti's Mémoires sur la Cour de Louis XIV., we noted the fact, but made some reservations. For all that we are told, these memoirs dealt exclusively with the lives and conversations of great people bearing names well known to the modern public. To put things plainly, the resuscitated Italian adventurer of the seventeenth century was too much "on the spot." The volume now published by Calmann-Lévy dispels the mystery. In learned notes the editor, M. Jean Lemoine, shows how it has come about that the Italian manuscript, only recently translated, has lain unpublished in a free library at Aix, the capital of Provence. Students of Casanova are aware that another public library in France contains enormous masses of biographical writings of that equally interesting reprobate. The memoirs of Casanova as read by the literary world are very different from the real ones, the German owner of which has long sought in vain for an editor sufficiently known, learned, and judicious to be satisfactory to a distinguished taste. The writings of Primi Visconti, like those of Casanova, are full of dirt: it is not every competent critic who will face the possible discredit, on the one hand of publishing, and on the other of bowdlerizing, the original memoirs of such men. The valuable volume now produced does not contain Visconti's memoirs as they stand at Aix in the Italian text. M. Lemoine tells us in his Introduction that he has left out a great deal which would be found dull. He has not, we ought to add, omitted the dirty stories, even when they are without bearing upon known personages or upon history. Readers of the great French journals and reviews will find little in the book which has not been already extracted for their benefit, and the volume is one which cannot be recommended for general circulation and "family reading." Although the fund of anecdote in which Visconti completes Saint-Simon has been anticipated, it is necessary for all who desire to possess a library of works on the age of Louis XIV. to place on their shelves the book in which Visconti's sketches are bound together and provided with excellent notes and a full index by the patient labour of a considerable critic.

M. Jean Lemoine announces a future publication of the letters of Visconti belonging to a later period than that covered by the memoirs before us, and explains that the forthcoming part will deal only with the period 1704-6.

MR. G. R. ELSMIE, C.S.I., the last of the Haileybury civilians who served in the Punjab, has just published his reminiscences under the title Thirty-five Years in the Punjab, 1858-1893 (Edinburgh, David Douglas). He explains that the book consists mainly of extracts from letters and diaries, the latter his own, the former both his own and those of his correspondents; and he claims that it may interest old Punjabis and others who care to read about India. This may be at once and fully allowed; for though it appeals more strongly to the small and ever-dwindling body of Indian civil servants appointed from Haileybury, there is much in it which will interest others who served in that province.

Born in 1838 at Aberdeen, Mr. Elsmie joined the E.I. Company's college in 1856. He mentions Sir Charles Bernard, Sir Philip Hutchins, Sir Charles Grant, Sir James B. Lyall, John Beams, and R. T. Burney as his most distinguished contemporaries there; but though in a senior term, still at college with him were Sir Auckland Colvin and Val. Prinsep.

In January, 1858, Elsmie, with Bernard and Alexander Lawrence, son of Sir Henry, sailed for India, and in due course was appointed to the Punjab, of which Sir Robert Montgomery was Lieutenant-Governor. The young man found favour in his eyes, and many quotations are made from his letters and those of Sir Douglas Forsyth. Elsmie had, too, the advantage of serving in India just after order had been restored by our soldiers. For the next twenty years it was as desirable a place of residence as its climate permitted, and "unrest" had scarcely begun to take form.

Throughout the book glimpses are afforded of various eminent men; besides those already mentioned, Lord Lawrence, Sir Donald McLeod, Sir Sam Browne, and many other names appear; whilst of Mr. Cust, in addition to the respect for a keen-eyed disciplinarian, it is recorded that his valour found an outlet in joining the Lahore Rifle Club.

"It was great fun seeing such dignitaries as the Judicial and Financial Commissioners and others being drilled by a little Scotch corporal of the 79th.

Cust, the Financial Commissioner, is a great talker, and quotes Latin during the performance. The corporal reproves him, 'Now, Mr. Cust, you must not talk.'"

So we are led through many scenes, political and social; in the latter Mr. and Mrs. Elsmie were specially qualified to shine.

The book is well turned out, and adorned with five portraits, including one of the author.

THE translation of Runeberg's lyrics by Magnússon and Palmer, published some thirty years ago, achieved but a small measure of popularity, and to the generality of English readers Sweden's greatest poet, if known at all, is probably known mainly through Mr. Gosse's sympathetic little essay in the 'Studies in the Literature of Northern Europe.' Whether A Selection from Ensign Stål's Songs, translated by Isabel Donner (Helsingfors, G. W. Edlund), a slender volume of renderings from "Fänrik Ståls Sägner"—'Tales' or 'Stories,' by the way, would be a closer translation than 'Songs'—will appeal to a larger public may be doubted, but there can be no question as to the popular qualities of the poems themselves. Patriotic verse is in many cases difficult of appreciation by the alien, but these songs and ballads descriptive of incidents in the Finnish War of Independence of 1808-9 are so vivid, direct, and human that they should stir the imagination and kindle the blood of any reader. About half of them are here presented in versions which, if not conspicuously good as poetry, are at least fluent and faithful to the form and matter of their originals. They impress one as the work of a writer little practised in the art of verse, but possessed of a genuine literary sense: thus it is obvious that the rhymes—especially the feminine rhymes—have often proved troublesome, and awkward involutions are common; but the feeling is generally right, and there are passages of real merit. Miss Donner is most successful in such narrative poems as 'Sweyn Duva' or 'The Stranger's Vision,' where the metre is not too exacting, and where the simplicity of the original can be effectively preserved. A blot on the translation is the frequent occurrence of such rhymes as "saw," "before"; "reigning," "exclaiming," and the like.

THE remaining six volumes of the works of Jane Austen, illustrated in colours by Mr. A. W. Mills, are now out, containing Emma, Northanger Abbey, Persuasion, and Mansfield Park. Mr. Mills shows considerable spirit and sense of character in his views of older figures—Mr. Woodhouse, Sir Walter Elliot, and Miss Bates. His heroines are, perhaps, not sufficiently discriminated, though not lacking in charm. The clear, large type is a great boon in the case of a favourite author constantly in request, and the books are light to handle, two volumes being allowed for the longer stories. Altogether, we expect for this instalment of "The St. Martin's Illustrated Library of Standard Authors" wide popularity.

The New Latin Delectus, Book I., by W. J. Thomas and E. P. Doughty (Horace Marshall), is intended for the earlier reading of boys and girls who learn Latin. The contents of the book—'Stories of Ancient Rome,' 'The Gods,' 'Myths of the Creation,' and 'Myths of the Great Gods'—are designed to further the appreciation of art and English literature, some sources of which are indicated in the notes. Simplified Livy, Eutropius, and in verse Horace, Ovid, &c., are used; and the whole seems admirably fitted to take the place of the Cæsar usually given at this stage, which may well be postponed.

Quantities are marked, and there is a vocabulary. We mean to test the volume at once, and expect excellent results from it.

The Englishwoman's Year-Book, edited by G. E. Mitton (A. & C. Black), is a useful book of reference with a good deal of varied and practical information. The main thing that strikes us is that the Index ought to be enlarged.

THE BLEEDING HEART.

(After Hafiz.)

Love's hidden pearl is shining yet,
And Love's sealed casket bears the same device
As it bore of old;
The tears with which mine eyes are wet
Roll as yesterday they rolled,
Roll as they shall roll to-morrow,
Fraught with blood of sacrifice,
From the same fountain of eternal sorrow.
Ah, could my heart but speak,
Or thou divine
What Passion-flower is this
That lent its colour to those lips of thine;
What Ruby blushes o'er thy lovely cheek,
Dreaming of the sun's warm kiss.
In the darkness of the mine!
Ah, could my heart but speak,
Or thou divine!

R. A. NICHOLSON.

THE NATIONAL LIBRARY OF WALES.

A ROYAL CHARTER constituted in 1907 the National Library of Wales, but its actual existence dates from the 1st of January of this year, on which day Sir John Williams transferred his valuable collections, numbering about 20,000 items, to form the basis of the National Library.

For nearly forty years Sir John had been engaged in bringing together his library of Welsh books and books relating to Wales and to the Celtic languages. It contains nearly all the rarest Welsh books (of several, the only known copies), and about 500 manuscripts.

Many of the rarest books and manuscripts came with a collection made between 1690 and 1740 by the Rev. Samuel Williams and his son the Rev. Moses Williams, F.R.S. On the death of the latter the books passed to William Jones, F.R.S. (father of Sir William Jones, the Oriental scholar), who bequeathed his library to the Earl of Macclesfield in 1749. For 150 years the books remained undisturbed in the possession of the Earls of Macclesfield at Shirburn Castle; but in 1899 they were sold by the Earl of Macclesfield to Sir John Williams.

Many of the MSS. in the Shirburn collection have been described in the Report on Welsh MSS., Vol. II. Part II., prepared for the Historical MSS. Commission by Dr. Gwenogfryn Evans.

All the printed books in the Shirburn collection are in excellent condition—an important point, as Welsh books are nearly always badly preserved and frequently imperfect. They include the two earliest known Welsh books: 'Yny Lhyvyr hwnn,' a Welsh primer by Sir John Price, printed in 1546; and an undated collection of Welsh proverbs by William Salesbury, printed about the same time. Of these two books no other copies are known. There is also the only known perfect copy of 'Kynniver llith a ban,' 1551, containing the Epistles and Gospels appointed to be read as part of the Communion service. Copies of this work were supplied to the churches in Wales, and from them these portions of Scripture were read to the people for the first time in their native tongue. The whole of the New Testament was not translated into Welsh until some years later (1567), and the whole Bible still later (1588).

Of twenty-two Welsh books before 1600,

Sir John Williams's library has eighteen, while it is virtually complete for editions of the Welsh Bible and the Welsh Book of Common Prayer down to 1800. Of the Prayer Book there is one of three known copies of the first edition (1567), besides good copies of four other issues before the Commonwealth, all extremely rare. The rarity of Welsh Prayer Books and the comparative abundance of Bibles issued before 1640 are attributed to the destruction of the former during the Commonwealth.

There is a good collection of books and some MSS. bearing on the Arthurian romances, the earliest printed book being 'Lancelot du Lac' (1488). Welsh books and Welsh writers of the seventeenth century are well represented, as are works dealing with specific periods, such as the Civil War so far as it affected Wales, and the religious revival of the eighteenth century. First editions of the works of Vaughan the Silurist and his brother Thomas Vaughan; rare tracts by John Penry; scarce locally printed pieces by Welsh hymn-writers, and other rare books from local presses; books with Borrow's autograph, and volumes from his library, including the copy of Dafydd ap Gwilym's poems with Borrow's notes, are some of the features of this notable library.

The student of Celtic languages will also find books relating to the literature and philology of Gaelic, Irish, Cornish, and Breton.

Other valuable collections of Welsh literature will shortly be transferred to the National Library at Aberystwyth. The Council have been fortunate in securing for temporary use a suitable building, absolutely isolated from other buildings. This has been fitted with steel bookstacks to hold 80,000 volumes, and capable of extension; and a fireproof strong room for the safe storage of MSS. and rare books has been provided. Six firms of architects are preparing plans and designs, in a limited competition for the permanent building, which will be erected upon a site of four acres given by Lord Rendel. The site is a plateau on a hill overlooking the town, with magnificent views.

We state above that the accommodation for books can be enlarged, for it is hoped that some private collectors may like to leave their treasures to the National Library, now that it has been started under such fair auspices.

'EGYPT AND THE ENGLISH.'

c/o Madame Jaselli-Owen,
12, Piazza Barberini, Rome, Italy,
January 30, 1909.

My attention has only just been drawn to the rather unfair and misleading review of my book which appeared in The Athenæum of January 2nd. Of course I recognize that your reviewer has a perfect right to condemn my book; but if he condemns it he should found his condemnation on criticism, and not seek to demolish me by sneers, incorrect statements, and artifices to mislead the public.

The first misstatement is "They [i.e., the Egyptian Nationalists] are at any rate courteous to political opponents." He cannot have read my "few chapters devoted to Egyptian politics," which he condemns so strongly, or he would have come across some very striking instances to the contrary. I ask you to refer to these passages in my book, pp. xxi and xxii, and pp. 129-34.

Apologies of this last, did not your reviewer read of the public prosecution of the editor of Al-Lewa for publishing the statement that Sir Reginald Wingate had murdered a large number of persons in cold blood to revenge the murder of poor young Scott-Moncrieff?

Secondly, he tries to make my book appear inaccurate by correcting the spelling of Arabic words, and while he is doing it himself misspells the name of the leader of the Moderate Liberals. He calls him Hafiz Awwad. But I have a manifesto signed Hafiz Awad, which that gentleman gave me himself.

I ask, Why this pother about the spelling of Arabic words when the English and the French generally spell them in different ways, and the municipality of Cairo, with a fine impartiality, labels some of its streets Shareh and others Charia?

He next attacks the accuracy of my information about the Sudan, but he refrains from giving instances. And he makes no kind of allusion to the completeness of my picture of the Sudan, which must have risen to his mind if he had been more familiar with the subject.

I have reserved to the last the expression to which I specially object. He says: "For the rest, the work seems to be a loose compilation where it is not an advertising guide-book." If he owns Baedeker, Murray, Budge, Lane Poole, and Margoliouth, he will search in vain in them for allusions to many of the old Arab monuments of Cairo to which I draw the traveller's attention in the summarizing chapters to which lack of space limited me. For months I sifted every street in Cairo for them. The authorities of the Wakfs themselves were ignorant of some of them.

DOUGLAS SLADEN.

* * Our reviewer was alluding to personal intercourse with the Egyptian Nationalists. This seems to us clear from the context, which refers to the types met in cafés. He gives three definite instances, in which Mr. Sladen's views of prominent men are incorrect. These Mr. Sladen does not controvert. Misspellings which make one word into another of different meaning seem to us serious. If the reviewer had shared Mr. Sladen's view of the completeness of 'Egypt and the English,' he would have devoted more space to it.

A LONDON CONFERENCE OF INTERNATIONAL JOURNALISTS.

As I foreshadowed in an article in The Athenæum of last October, it has proved impossible for the federated Associations of the Press to contemplate a Congress during the current year.

The invitations before the Bureau Central were all for the summer, and the overworked officials explained that it would be out of the question to organize a fresh Congress within nine months of the notable Berlin meeting of last September, while some smaller nations objected to the strain and expense of sending delegations to two Congresses within so short a time.

In fact, a meeting every two years was being seriously considered before the magnitude and importance of the preparations already afoot in England had been realized by the Central Committee, and it seemed likely that the English scheme might have to be abandoned from sheer inability of the members of the Associations to be ready for an international Congress next July.

Fortunately a compromise has been arranged, which, while lessening the load of Congress work on the shoulders of willing officials, saves the members of the British International Association of Journalists and their friends from the disappointment of having to cancel their arrangements: by advancing their invitation to September they will still be able to receive a large and influential body of Continental and American journalists, who, under the auspices of the Central Committee, will make London their headquarters for a Conference, following the Berlin Congress by exactly twelve months.

The difference between a Conference and a Congress does not at first sight seem considerable, but it is enough to make a meeting practicable which would otherwise have had to be given up.

A Conference can ventilate ideas, but does not formulate or pass resolutions; work undertaken and reports promised at the Berlin Congress need not necessarily be submitted to the London meeting; and opportunities for discussion and consideration will be greater than in the hurry of a Congress, where a prolonged debate is apt to upset the order of the day altogether, so closely is the agenda paper packed.

With regard to the Associations of some of the smaller nations, if they are unable to send representatives to the Conference they will not lose either place or advantage in the next Congress, as voting by groups on progressive questions will not be included in the work of the Conference. On the whole, I think we have to congratulate ourselves and our guests on the prospect of a meeting at which the weight of business will not bear too heavily on the amenities of the occasion. The real value of the interchange of international courtesies is to make us all know and appreciate each other; and if the formalities of a Congress can be exchanged for the sociabilities of a Conference, we may rejoice that, for various technical reasons, this change has come about.

Our foreign colleagues will probably muster some 300 strong, and many of them will be accompanied by ladies. For their entertainment Major Gratwicke, the indefatigable President of the British International Association of Journalists, has already the promise of a good programme. A visit to Windsor is spoken of, as well as the hospitality of the Mansion House, and of mayors and corporations in many of the most beautiful parts of the kingdom. Lord Burnham, the Hon. President of the Reception Committee, will hold a soirée at the office of The Daily Telegraph; and scores of associations and persons are pressing their claims upon the Executive Committee to be allowed to join in offers of entertainment.

London grows every September more and more a favourite centre for holiday enjoyment, and a Conference, with shorter hours and less formal demands on its members, will admit of many "swallow-flights" into the loveliest parts of England, which under the strict rule of a Congress might not have been possible.

G. B. STUART.

THE SEAL OF DORCHESTER.

January 26, 1909.

CANON MAYO in his latest letter starts the strange theory that the arms of France tricked on the confirmation of the seal of Dorchester by William Hervey, Clarencieux King-of-Arms in 1565, "are neither France ancient nor France modern." Certainly they are not the arms of France "modern," and just as certainly they are the arms of France "ancient." The shield on which these arms are borne carries in the first and fourth quarters the arms of England, and in the second and third quarters (as customary) the arms of France. But the second and third quarters carry each of them not "three," but "six" fleurs-de-lis, or twelve fleurs-de-lis in all.

These arms cannot be the arms of France "modern," for there are more than "three fleurs-de-lis" in each of the second and third quarters. These arms are therefore certainly the arms of France "ancient." Yet Canon Mayo makes the statement that these arms are "neither France ancient nor France modern."

On what does he base his contention? On the ground that the second and third quarters of the shield each carry "six complete fleurs-de-lis, and nothing more," that is to say, because there are no "fragments" of fleurs-de-lis. Therefore, says Canon Mayo, these are not the arms of France "ancient." I have before me the escutcheon of "Isabell, only daughter of Philip the Faire, King of France, wife of Edward II.," in 'The Catalogue of Honor,' 1610, and the arms of France "ancient" appear with complete fleurs-de-lis, and no "fragments."

Canon Mayo, who throughout this correspondence writes as if he were a final authority and no College of Heralds existed, finds it necessary—in order to support his present contention that these arms are "neither France ancient nor France modern"—to demolish the reputation of William Hervey, Clarencieux King-of-Arms. I think the old Clarencieux King-of-Arms, who understood his business, will survive the Canon's onslaught.

ROBERT EDGECUMBE.

. We cannot continue this discussion further.

OSWALD CRAWFURD, C.M.G.

WE regret to announce the death, at Montreux last Sunday morning, of Mr. Oswald Crawford, after five weeks of severe suffering. Mr. Crawford was in his seventy-fifth year, having been born in 1834. His father was a diplomatist of some distinction, who had served as plenipotentiary at the Court of Siam, and afterwards as Governor at Singapore. His son followed him into the same service, and, after an average career at Eton and Merton College, Oxford, obtained a Foreign Office clerkship, from which he was promoted in 1867 to the post of Consul at Oporto. In this capacity he rendered signal service for nearly a quarter of a century, keeping his head with sound judgment during the Portuguese disaffections of 1889-90, and enjoying a wide popularity both with the English colony in Oporto and with all visitors to the country who fell under his genial influence. He was created C.M.G., as a recognition of his services, when in 1890 he retired from consular work, and came to London to devote himself to the literary pursuits which were always the principal interest of his life. During his residence in Oporto he wrote several topographical works dealing with the scenery and social life of Portugal. At that time books of this description were not so common as they have since become, and Mr. Crawford's first-hand studies still remain the principal authorities upon many of the subjects which they discuss.

Mr. Crawford's attitude to the literary life was always that of the cultured amateur rather than that of the professional worker. Books and "the play" were to him the most amenable diversions of a busy career, and he was never obliged, like many of his contemporaries, to adopt them as his principal means of support. It was not unnatural, therefore, that such work as he did should have possessed the shortcomings, no less than the qualities, of work undertaken mainly as a means of recreation. He dabbled in editorship and in publishing, but his hold upon these rather arduous undertakings was essentially tentative. He was guided by the taste of the dilettante rather than by the business instinct of the man of commerce. He was one of the original directors of Black and White, which was started with high hopes for the resuscitation of the art of the illustrator in England; but when the tyranny of the "snapshot" photograph proved too insistent for this bright ideal, Mr. Crawford lost interest in the venture. The same may be said of his activity as a publisher. He regarded his artistic responsibilities seriously, and he afforded invaluable help to many promising beginners in the literary craft; but the purely commercial estimate was distasteful to him, and without that estimate he could hardly have hoped to succeed in a position of purely business obligations. Something of the same impractical enthusiasm marks almost all his work in fiction. He was a man of lively ideas, incapable of discussing any subject without assuming his own definite relation to the problems it suggested, and it was one of his pet beliefs that such problems could be effectively discussed in the form of a story. Hence 'The New Order,' a frankly political novel; 'In Green Fields,' an appeal (in the form of fiction) for a popular "return to the land"; and 'The Mystery of Myrtle Cottage,' his last published tale, which sought to indicate possible opportunities for enlarging the scope of woman's social influence. In these, and in other of his books, the purpose was apt to outweigh the human and artistic interests of the narrative, with the result that neither end was satisfactorily attained. His plays, 'Two Masques' and 'The Sin of Prince Eladane,' showed a refined gift for versification, without much genuinely dramatic vigour; and his anthology of 'Lyrical Verse from Elizabeth to Victoria' contained poems not always included in such a collection, the very choice of which proved his independent judgment.

In London literary society Mr. Crawford was well known and deservedly popular. He was an excellent talker, full of ideas and suggestive fancies, and his sympathies were easily aroused and generously bestowed. In his various official capacities he helped many young writers of both sexes to their first chance in life; and his kindly interest will be keenly missed by the many friends who had learnt to rely upon his vivid memory and unfailing encouragement.

A. W.

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Apology of Aristides, 1/ net. Translated by W. S. Walford. Boyd (Francis Leith), Law and Love, 2/6 net. A study of Quomodo Dilexi (Psalm cxix. 97-104). Gilbert (Prof. G. H.), Acts: the Second Volume of Luke's Work on the Beginnings of Christianity, with Interpretative Comment, 4/. In the Bible for Home and School. Journal of Theological Studies, January, 3/6 net. Robinson (C. H.), Acts: Studies in the Resurrection of Christ, 3/6 net. An argument. Tucker (H. F.), Light for Lesser Days: Studies of the Saints, 6/ net. Wilkinson (G. Howard) Some Laws in God's Spiritual Kingdom, 5/ net.

Law.

- Aronson (V. R.), The Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, 15/ net. The object of the author is to present a view of the law of Workmen's Compensation as contained in the Act of 1906, and the decisions of the English and Scotch courts both prior and subsequent to that Act. Butterworth's Yearly Digest, 1908, 15/. Connell (A. C.), Pitman's Companies and Company Law, together with the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, 5/ net.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Alcock (F.), South American Scenery: Twenty-Four Water-Colour Sketches made on Voyages to and from the East and West Coasts of South America, 5/ net. With an introduction by Thomas Huson. English-Spanish-Portuguese edition. Markham (Christopher A.), Pewter Marks and Old Pewter Ware, Domestic and Ecclesiastical, 21/. With about 100 illustrations, &c.

McNay (W. L.), Old London, 3/6 net. Fifty reproductions of old engravings illustrative of the London of our ancestors.
 Mr. Punch's Pageant, 1841-1908, 10/ net. A souvenir catalogue, with several illustrations.
 Rapson (E. J.), Catalogue of the Coins of the Andhra Dynasty, the Western Ksatrapas, the Traikutaka Dynasty, and the "Bodhi" Dynasty, 25/. With a map and 21 plates.
 Tomb of Siphtah; the Monkey Tomb and the Gold Tomb, 42/ net. With descriptive articles by Theodore M. Davis, Gaston Maspero, Edward Ayrton, and George Daressy, and illustrations in colour by E. Harold Jones.
 Wright (Rev. J.), Some Notable Altars in the Church of England and the American Episcopal Church, 25/ net. With 114 full-page plates.

Poetry and the Drama.

Adams (W. Maurice), Jesus Rex, or Into Thy Kingdom; The Truce of God, or the King in His Beauty, 6d. each. Founded on texts put into verse.
 Bulkeley (Rev. H. J.), Hic et Illic: Poems written at Home and Abroad, 2/6
 Burr (G.), Thoughts in Solitude, 4/6
 Hearthrug Comedies, by D. 1/
 Rickards (M. S. C.), Twilight Music. Poems on various subjects.
 Rutherford (E. M.), The Red King's Dream, and other Poems, 1/
 Shakespeare, All's Well that Ends Well, 2/6 net. Edited by W. G. B. Stone. In the Old Spelling Shakespeare.
 Sharp (R. Farquharson), A Short History of the English Stage, 5/ net. An attempt to give a connected history of the development of the English theatre from the miracle plays to the present day.
 Songs of Love and Praise, 2/ net. Edited by Annie Matheson, with designs by Charles Robinson.
 Vansittart (R.), Songs and Satires, 3/6 net.

Music.

Gilman (L.), Aspects of Modern Opera, 4/6 net. A series of essays, some of which have appeared in magazines.
 Glyn (M. H.), Analysis of the Evolution of Musical Form, 10/6 net. The object of the volume is the application of the evolutionary principle to practical music, the essential motive power of which is to be found in rhythm.
 Santley (Sir Charles), Reminiscences of My Life, 16/ net. With 14 illustrations.
 Wyndham (H. Saxe), August Manns and the Saturday Concerts, 3/6. A memoir and a retrospect, with 6 illustrations.

Bibliography.

Griffin (A. P. C.), Library of Congress: List of References on International Arbitration, 20 cents. One of the Washington Government publications.
 Library, January, 3/ net.
 Savage (E. A.), The Story of Libraries and Book-Collecting, 2/6
 Shaw (H.), Auckland Free Public Library: a Guide to the Principal Manuscripts, Early Printed Books, Autograph Letters, &c.
 Young (J.), A Catalogue of the Manuscripts in the Library of the Hunterian Museum in the University of Glasgow. Begun by John Young; completed by P. Henderson Aitken under the direction of the Young Memorial Committee.

Philosophy.

Confessions of Al Ghazzali, 1/ net. Translated by Claud Field. In Wisdom of the East.
 Sera (L. G.), On the Tracks of Life: the Immorality of Morality, 7/6 net. Translated from the Italian by J. M. Kennedy, with an introduction by Dr. Oscar Levy.

Political Economy.

Beveridge (W. H.), Unemployment: a Problem of Industry, 7/6 net. A course of lectures delivered in Oxford during Michaelmas Term last year.
 Englishwoman's Review of Social and Industrial Questions, January, 1/. Edited by Antoinette M. Mackenzie.
 Lownhaupt (F.), Investment Bonds, 7/6
 Rowe (L. S.), Problems of City Government, 6/ net.
 Wolff (H. W.), A Co-Operative Credit Bank Handbook, 1/ net.

History and Biography.

American Historical Review, January, 1 dol.
 Buckinghamshire, Vol. II. In the Victoria History.
 Cambridge History of English Literature, Vol. III., 9/ net. Deals with the period of Renaissance and Reformation, and is edited by A. W. Ward and A. R. Waller. For review of Vol. II. see Athen., Sept. 19, 1908, p. 325.
 Dod's Parliamentary Companion for 1909, 3/6 net.
 Godfrey (Elizabeth), A Sister of Prince Rupert: Elizabeth, Princess Palatine and Abbess of Herford, 12/6 net. With a photogravure portrait and 16 other illustrations.
 Jewish Historical Society of England, Transactions, Vol. VI.
 Keith (A. B.), Responsible Government in the Dominions, 10/. An expansion of a lecture on the development of Colonial self-government in the nineteenth century.
 Lang (A.), Sir George MacKenzie, King's Advocate, of Rosehaugh, his Life and Times, 1636(?) -1691, 15/ net. With 4 illustrations.
 Parker (Mrs. C.), A Pedigree Chart of the Cochrane of Cochrane, Lord Cochrane of Dundonald, &c., 21/
 Ross (J.) and Erichsen (N.), The Story of Pisa, 4/6 net. With many illustrations. In the Medieval Town Series.
 Russell (C. E.), Thomas Chatterton, the Marvellous Boy: The Story of a Strange Life, 1752-1770, 7/6 net. Illustrated.
 Sheppard (H. Byard), Courts Leet and the Court Leet of the Borough of Taunton, 1/. One of the Somersetshire Archaeological and Natural History Society's publications.
 Smith (A. D. H.), Fighting the Turk in the Balkans, 6/. An American's adventures with the Macedonian revolutionists. Illustrated.

Stewart (Major-General Sir Norman), My Service Days, India, Afghanistan, Suakim '85, and China, 7/6 net. With 13 illustrations and plans.
 Wilbur (S.), The Life of Mary Baker Eddy, 12/6 net.
 Women of All Nations, Vol. II., 15/ net. A record of their characteristics, habits, manners, customs, and influence, edited by T. Athol Joyce and N. W. Thomas.

Geography and Travel.

Bisiker (W.), The British Empire (and Japan): its Features, Resources, Commerce, Industries, Scenery, &c., 16/ net. A modern Atlas, 213 maps and 272 illustrations, Student's Edition.
 Hume-Griffith (M. E.), Behind the Veil in Persia and Turkish Arabia, 16/ net. An account of an Englishwoman's eight years' residence amongst the women of the East, with narratives of experiences in both countries by A. Hume-Griffith, and 37 illustrations and a map.
 Parker (E. H.), John Chinaman and a Few Others, 2/6 net. Second Edition.
 Rees (J. D.), Nyasaland and the Shire Highlands Railway, with Map. Issued for the information of intending settlers, planters, miners, and travellers.
 Six Weeks and the Mediterranean, by Passenger, 6d. With illustrations and charts. New Edition.
 Smith (J. Russell), The Ocean Carrier, 6/. A history and analysis of the service, and a discussion of the rates of ocean transportation. Illustrated.
 Twentieth Century Impressions of Hongkong, Shanghai, and other Treaty Ports of China. Deals with their history, people, commerce, industries, and resources, and is edited by A. Wright and H. A. Cartwright.

Sports and Pastimes.

Benson (C. E.), British Mountaineering, 5/. With several illustrations.

Philology.

Classical Quarterly, January, 3/ net.
 Hispanica Famina, 6/ net. Edited, with a short introduction and Index Verborum, by Francis J. H. Jenkinson, with 3 facsimile plates.
 Jebb (R. C.), The Characters of Theophrastus, 7/6 net. An English translation from a revised text, with introduction and notes, new edition by J. E. Sandys.
 Ware (J. Redding), Passing English of the Victorian Era, 7/6 net. A dictionary of heterodox English, slang, and phrase.

School-Books.

Blackie's English Texts: Bede's History of the Church of England; Ruskin's Crown of Wild Olive, 6d. each.
 Clapin (Rev. A. C.), A Spanish Primer, 1/
 Féval (P.), Le Docteur Bousseau, 8d. Edited by Louis A. Barbé. In Blackie's Longer French Texts.
 MacPherson (W.), Book of Comparative Poetry; Book of Comparative Prose, 1/ net each.
 Marvin (F. S.), Mayor (R. J. G.), and Stawell (F. M.), The Story of the Iliad, 1/. With illustrations from Greek vases. In the Temple English Literature Series for Schools.
 Mémée (Prosper), Tamango, 6d. Edited by J. E. Michell. In Blackie's Little French Classics.
 Oxford Plain Texts: Arnold's Sohrab and Rustum; Byron's Child Harold, Books III. and IV.; Coleridge's Ancient Mariner and Christabel; Gray's Elegy and Odes; Keats's Isabella and Eve of St. Agnes, 4d. each.
 Stories to be Read: Kingsley's Heroes; Sindbad the Sailor, from Lane's Arabian Nights, 6d. net each.

Science.

American Journal of Mathematics, January, 1 dol. 50. One of the Johns Hopkins Press publications.
 Bāz-Nāma-Yi Nāsiri, 21/ net. A Persian treatise on falconry, translated by Lieut.-Col. D. C. Phillott, with illustrations.
 Coleman (T. E.), Retaining Walls in Theory and Practice, 5/ net. A text-book for students.
 Friend (J. Newton), The Theory of Valency, 5/. In Text-books of Physical Chemistry.
 Hampson (Sir G. F.), Catalogue of the Noctuidæ in the Collection of the British Museum, Vol. VII., Text and Atlas of Plates, 30/.
 Hatch (F. H.), Textbook of Petrology, 7/6 net. Contains a summary of the modern theories of petro-genesis, &c., with many illustrations. New Edition.
 Heidenreich (E. L.), Engineers' Pocket-Book of Reinforced Concrete, 12/6 net.
 Hibbert (W.), Popular Electricity, 3/6. With about 200 illustrations.
 Hulme (F. E.), That Rock-Garden of Ours, 10/6 net. The outcome of many years of country life, with 50 illustrations by the author.
 Hutchinson (W.), Health and Common Sense, 6/ net.
 Kirk (Alexander), Grape Culture Up-to-date, 7/6 net. Illustrated.
 Lillie (F. R.), The Development of the Chick, 16/ net. An introduction to embryology, with many illustrations.
 Lowell (P.), Mars as the Abode of Life, 10/6 net. With many illustrations.
 McCall (A. G.), The Physical Properties of Soils, 2/6 net.
 Maclaren (J. M.), Gold: its Geological Occurrence and Geographical Distribution, 25/ net. Illustrated.
 Nisbet's Medical Directory, 1909, 7/6
 Raffety (C. W.), An Introduction to the Science of Radio-Activity, 4/6 net. With illustrations.
 Scott (R.), Automatic Block Signals and Signal Circuits, 10/6 net.
 Smith (G.), A Naturalist in Tasmania, 7/6 net. A series of sketches in Tasmanian natural history, the result of a six months' stay in Tasmania during the spring and summer of 1907-8, with many illustrations.
 Snyder (H.), Human Foods and their Nutritive Value, 5/ net.
 Spon's Architects' and Builders' Pocket Price-Book, 1909, 3/ net.
 Treatise on Zoology: Part I., Introduction and Protozoa, First Fascicle, 15/ net. By various authors, edited by Sir E. Ray Lankester.
 Tyler (J. M.), Man in the Light of Evolution, 6/ net.
 Yorke-Davies (N. E.), Wine and Health, how to Enjoy Both, 1/6

Fiction.

Aitken (R.), Beyond the Skyline, 6/. A series of short sketches, two of which have already appeared in magazines.
 Askew (Alice and Claude), The Devil and the Crusader, 1/
 Blyth (J.), The Swoop of the Vulture, 6/. Another invasion story.
 Brookfield (F. M.), A Friar Observant, 6/. Deals with the journeyings in Germany of a friar at the time of the English dissolution of the monasteries.
 Cleeve (Lucas), Bruised Lilies, 6/. A posthumous book.
 Danziger (A.), Helen Polska's Lover; or, The Merchant Prince, 6/. A story based on observation and study of Polish life.
 Dawe (Carlton), Confessions of Cleodora, 1/ net. New Edition.
 Dickens (Charles), Our Mutual Friend, 2/ net. New pocket illustrated edition.
 Dixon (W. Willmott), The Rogue of Rye, 6/. The plot of the story is based upon the seizure by Napoleon of all the British tourists in France on the rupture of the Peace of Amiens (1803), and deals chiefly with a sister's devotion and a lover's renunciation. The scene is laid partly at the French fortress of Verdun, partly at Rye and Winchelsea.
 Gaunt (Mary) and Essex (J. Ridgwell), The Silent Ones, 6/. A story of Central Africa, describing the hero's adventures and escapes while in quest of an ancient document belonging to a religious sect.
 Gould (Nat), The Buckjumper, 2/. One of the author's sporting stories. The scene is laid in Australia.
 Gunter (A. C.), Prince Karl, 6/. A story of dramatic interest, founded on the author's comedy of the same name.
 Heart of Monica, 5/ net. Belongs to the class of literature made popular by 'An Englishwoman's Love-Letters.'
 Hopper (J.) and Bechdolt (F. R.), "9009," 2/6. The story of John Collins, a convict.
 King (Maud E.), The Archdeacon's Family, 6/. A study of modern types showing a good deal of smartness in the writing.
 Maartens (Maarten), Brothers All, 6/. A series of short stories of Dutch peasant life.
 Moberly (L. G.), The Sin of Alison Dering, 6/. Alison impersonates a widow who has died in her house. With coloured frontispiece.
 Sholl (A. McClure), The Greater Love, 6/. A story of the struggle and development of character within a single family.
 Smith (F. Hopkinson), Peter, 6/. A novel of which Peter is not the hero, illustrated by A. I. Keller.
 Stanton (Coralie) and Hosken (Heath), The Love that Kills, 6/. The story of a supreme sacrifice made for love.
 Strange Stories from a Chinese Studio, 6/ net. Translated and annotated by Herbert A. Giles. Second Edition.
 Twenty-Five Tales of the Sea, 1/ net. The chief contributor is Capt. F. H. Shaw.

General Literature.

Berry (T. W.), Professions for Girls, 2/6 net. With a preface by Lady Grove.
 Dewar (Lient. A. C.), Is Invasion Impossible? 1/ net.
 Fleet Annual, and Naval Year-Book, 1909, 2/6 net.
 Grebby (J. King), Modern Commercial Correspondence, 2/6
 Murray (G.), The Interpretation of Ancient Greek Literature, 1/ net. An inaugural lecture delivered before the University of Oxford on January 27.
 Pancoast (H. S.), An Introduction to American Literature, 4/6. Intended as a companion to the author's 'Introduction to English Literature.'

Pamphlets.

Aston (J. W.), The Great Question of Pensions, or a Small Permanent Income, 2d. net. With a preface by Albert S. Stanley.
 Elton (Prof. O.), Milton and Party, 6d. No. IX. of the English Association Leaflets.
 Question of National Importance for the Government of the Country to Decide. Embodies the views of the Chairman of the Railway Employment Safety Appliances Committee.

FOREIGN.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

Robert (C.), Pausanias als Schriftsteller: Studien und Beobachtungen, 10m. With plans.

Poetry and Drama.

Laforêt, Li Ferigoulo Sant-Gilenco, 3fr. 50. Provençal poems with French prose translation on facing pages.
 Rolland (R.), Théâtre de la Révolution, 3fr. 50. Three plays written for a "People's Theatre."

Philosophy.

Schinz (A.), Anti-pragmatisme, 5fr.

History and Biography.

Courteault (P.), Un Cadet de Gascogne au XVIIe. Siècle: Blaise de Monluc, 3fr. 50.
 Fromentin (E.), Lettres de Jeunesse: Bibliographie et Notes par P. Blanchon, 4fr.
 Lafenestre (G.), Molière, 2fr. In Les Grands Écrivains français.
 Merki (C.), L'Amiral de Coligny: la Maison de Chatillon et la Révolte protestante, 1519-72, 7fr. 50. With a portrait.

Philology.

Berneker (E.), Slavisches etymologisches Wörterbuch, Part III., 1m. 50.

Science.

Boletín del Cuerpo de Ingenieros de Minas del Perú, Nos. 63-7.

Juillerat (P.), L'Hygiène du Logement, 1fr. 50. In the Collection d'Hygiène pratique et familiale.

Fiction.

Lacour (P.), Sœurlette, 3fr. 50.

Milan (R.), Les Nostalgiques, 3fr. 50. Short sketches founded on the author's travels, dealing largely with China.

General Literature.

Bérard (V.), La Révolution Turque, 4fr.

Grappe (G.), Dans le Jardin de Sainte-Beuve: Essais, 3fr. 50.

* * All Books received at the Office up to Wednesday Morning will be included in this List unless previously noted. Publishers are requested to state prices when sending Books.

Literary Gossip.

MR. ROBERT BRIDGES has frequently been asked to edit a selection of the late Canon Dixon's poetry, but he has always hitherto refused, or rather deferred doing this pious office for his friend. Messrs. Smith & Elder will publish on the 16th, with a portrait, under the title 'Poems by the late Rev. Dr. Richard Watson Dixon,' a selection which Mr. Bridges approves, and to which he has added an account of the poetry and a record of his friendship with the poet.

THE same firm are publishing from the pen of the Rev. W. Tuckwell, 'Pre-Tractarian Oxford: a Reminiscence of the Oriel Noetics.' The book will contain sketches of Provost Eveleigh, Copleston, Whately, Dr. Arnold, Hampden, Provost Hawkins, Baden Powell, Blanco White—the remarkable men, known as "Noetics" or "Intellectuals," whose teaching, succeeded, controverted, and for a time eclipsed by the Newman movement, reappeared in 'Essays and Reviews' and the "higher criticism" of to-day. The illustrations are from photographs by Mr. F. Hollyer of portraits in Oriel Hall and Common Room. The volume will appear on the 16th inst.

THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS will publish next week 'Kant's Theory of Knowledge,' by Mr. H. A. Prichard. The author has attempted in this book to think out the nature and tenability of Kant's Transcendental Idealism.

THE forthcoming instalment of "Everyman's Library," promised by Messrs. Dent, includes Rodwell's version of 'The Koran'; Motteux's of 'Don Quixote'; Froude's 'Henry VIII. and Edward VI.,' 4 vols.; Milman's 'History of the Jews,' 2 vols.; three of Trollope's Barsetshire novels, 'Evelina' and 'Springhaven.'

MESSRS. BROWN & LANGHAM announce for this month 'The Happy Elopement,' a new novel by Mr. Lacon Watson. It is a love-story in which much of the action takes place on golf links which border the Bristol Channel.

THE same firm also announce a new edition of 'Follow Up!'—Mr. A. Douglas Fox's story of Harrow School.

MESSRS. BELL will publish next week a thoroughly revised translation of Ranke's

'History of the Latin and Teutonic Nations' (1494–1514). Mr. G. R. Dennis whose edition of the same writer's 'History of the Popes' was published last year, is responsible for the revision, and the volume will contain an Introduction by Mr. Edward Armstrong.

JUST as we go to press we hear with deep regret of the sudden death of Mr. H. R. Fox Bourne, a distinguished journalist and sociologist, and for a long term of years a contributor to this paper. We hope to speak at length of Mr. Fox Bourne next week.

MESSRS. WILLIAMS & NORGATE announce for early publication 'Man and the Bible,' by Mr. J. A. Picton. He surveys the position of the book throughout the centuries, showing that as we go back popular access is seen to be more and more confined to oral instruction through the Church.

'LIFE AND MATTER,' by Sir Oliver Lodge is just about to be published by the same publishers at sixpence. The author has to some extent simplified the edition, and a short glossary of technical and philosophical terms has been added.

THE PARISH REGISTER SOCIETY OF DUBLIN has begun the third year of its existence with the issue of the registers of St. Catherine's, Dublin, 1636–1715. This parish is one of the most populous in Dublin, and was the residence, in the seventeenth century, of several noble families. The volume is edited by Mr. Herbert Wood. It will be followed by the parish registers of the Union of Monkstown, edited by Mr. H. S. Guinness.

It has been arranged to hold a Summer School of Theology in Oxford from September 13th to the 24th. A strong list of lecturers, representing various churches and schools of thought, has already been secured.

It will be good news to many literary workers that the London Library has a Subject Catalogue in the press. The work has been in hand for some time, but the volume is not likely to appear until the end of the year.

THE sale of Sardou's effects is to take place in Paris in March and April next, and will be conducted by MM. Lair-Dubreuil & Baudoin. It will include virtually everything in his house at Marly-le-Roi. The library is said to contain many autograph presentation copies and fine editions of modern authors. There is also an extensive collection of engravings and drawings, objects of art, &c.

WE have several times named the French Commission now sitting under the guidance of M. Bourgeois and M. Joseph Reinach, with a view to the publication of the diplomatic papers of the French Foreign Office relating to the origin of the war of 1870. We understand that the first two volumes, in course of preparation, cover only the history of the events of 1864 and 1865: not the most interesting portion of the subject. It is foreseen that the publication will take many years and run to at least eight volumes. The second issue will relate French intervention during and after the war of 1866, leaving the later development of that intervention in the Benedetti-Bismarck Belgian negotiations, as well as the Luxemburg affair, for later volumes. The first dawn of the Hohenzollern candidature, in 1868–9, is hardly yet in sight.

THE death is announced of Mr. John Gilmer Speed, at his residence Mendham, New Jersey. He began life as a civil engineer, and afterwards went into journalism. From 1879 to 1883 he was managing editor of The New York World, the staff of which he joined in 1887, edited The American Magazine for a year, and Leslie's Weekly for two years. He published 'The Gilmers in America,' a life of Keats, with whom he claimed relationship, and other books.

AT a meeting held recently in New York with a view to a memorial of Edmund Clarence Stedman, Mr. R. U. Johnson reported that the New York Stock Exchange, of which Mr. Stedman was long a member, had contributed two thousand dollars for the furnishing of a room in the Keats-Shelley Memorial House at Rome, in memory of Stedman.

THE appointment of Mr. Edgar Prestage to a Readership in Portuguese in Manchester University is of interest as the first official recognition of the subject by a foreign University. Mr. Prestage has made good progress with a book on the Portuguese chroniclers of the fifteenth century.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & Co. have generously given over 300 volumes of their publications in English literature towards the library of the new Egyptian University in Cairo. Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. have also made a gift of 50 volumes to the same institution.

THE monthly meeting of the Directors of the Booksellers' Provident Institution was held on January 21st, when 115l. was voted for the relief of members and widows of members. One new member was elected, and two applications for membership were received. Amongst the donations since the last meeting was one of twenty-five guineas from Mr. W. H. Spottiswoode, being part of the profits on 'Printer's Pie' for 1908.

THE PRINCE OF WALES has kindly consented to preside at the next anniversary festival of the Printers' Pension Corporation, which takes place at the Hotel Cecil on Friday, May 21st.

ON January 20th died at Breslau, aged seventy-eight, Wladyslaw Nehring, one of the foremost of Polish scholars. He had long filled the position of professor at the University. He is best known by his work 'Altpolnische Sprachdenkmäler' and his edition of the Slavonic portion of the Floryan Psalter. Besides these he published works on Krasinski, and other Polish writers.

SCIENCE

Bird-Hunting through Wild Europe. By R. B. Lodge. (Culley.)

IN the British Isles the bona-fide bird-photographer is a highly privileged person, but in return for the generous opportunities accorded to him he must be prepared to curb his predatory instincts. In this respect Mr. Lodge, we doubt not, is beyond reproach; he has even hitherto observed the spirit of this self-denying ordinance in his rambles after birds through Spain, Denmark, and Holland. There comes a time, however, when the quest of feathered rarities in the untrodden places of the world is too expensive an amusement—it can hardly be termed a luxury—and the ardent naturalist must cut his coat according to his cloth. At such a juncture our author found an unlooked-for opportunity, and in the outcome he was enabled to resume his travels in the guise of a collecting agent. So much we gather as to the nature of his undertaking, but he seems to have been left a wide discretion, and certainly few chances were neglected of adding to his photographic studies.

The book acquires an adventitious value from the author's experiences in the "Near East." For Mr. Lodge's wanderings are mainly concerned with just those semi-barbarous and debatable lands among the Balkans upon which the attention of the civilized world has lately been focussed. He does not in any way profess to have made a study of the intricate politics of the Balkans, but he tells a plain, uncompromising story of his own experiences. In Albania particularly he was struck by the lack of protection from the law for life and property, and as for the Turkish officials, he cannot find a good word to say for them; he maintains that "there is no room in such a system for an honest man; he simply could not exist." He gives many startling instances from his personal observation in support of this contention. It is interesting to speculate how far Mr. Lodge might be disposed to modify his impressions of yesterday, if he were now on the spot. He must have been a source of as much anxiety to the various consuls as of suspicious hostility to the rest of the official world. Brigands and more or less murderous characters of every description were generally to the fore, and had to be seriously reckoned with in planning any expedition. He seldom stirred without at least one armed retainer, and was sometimes accompanied by a small cavalcade. As a guest in these lawless countries his person was always absolutely sacred, his hosts making themselves responsible for his protection. In respect of hospitality and many other good qualities, Mr. Lodge pays a high tribute to the Albanian mountaineers, though he had originally intended to give them a wide berth, when he knew them only by reputation. Indeed, at the beginning of his campaign he threw in his lot with their hereditary foes and neighbours of Montenegro. There seems to be much that is lovable in this race, apart from their gallant patriotism. The author bears testimony to the scrupulous honesty he met with among the poorest. Montenegrins are no strangers to poverty, and he gives a pathetic picture of the frequent departure of emigrants to seek their fortunes in distant California, escorted by the whole population to the water's edge, the final salvo of revolver-shots, and the brave face put upon the leave-taking. It is curious to read that Montenegrins and Albanians alike, who are never separated from their rifles, and whose blood feuds are as old as the hills, are yet indifferent marksmen, and could never hold their own in shooting competitions with their guest. The fact is that the deadly shot is almost invariably fired from ambush at the shortest range; ammunition is too valuable to waste, and it does not pay to miss.

Bird-life in such lands as these offers a fine field for the naturalist; it has been very little interfered with, except in the few instances where the market value of such species as the little egret and the great white heron has threatened them with extinction. As may be surmised, not much came amiss to Mr. Lodge in his double capacity of photographer and collector; it was often, indeed, a case of embarras de richesses, for he found it imperative not to lose sight of the main object of his quest. This was, in the first place, to discover the breeding quarters of the Dalmatian pelican (Pelecanus crispus), and the task proved far more arduous than he had anticipated. It took him on one occasion to a spot where the altered course of a river had left a tract of land in dispute between Albania and Montenegro, and here a dramatic collision between representatives of both races very nearly had serious results. A second disappointment succeeded this check. Then came a most welcome surprise in the form of a pressing invitation from the Austrian Consul at Durazzo in Albania, which he gladly accepted. Thus began an intimacy that soon proved of incalculable benefit to Mr. Lodge, for "B—," whose identity is betrayed in the Introduction, showed himself the keenest sportsman and the best companion that any naturalist could wish for. Even then Mr. Lodge's difficulties were by no means ended; the most promising clues were followed up unsuccessfully, till at last, with the aid of two unusually observant fishermen, a genuine colony of pelicans was discovered. Again and again Mr. Lodge was victimized by local guides incapable of distinguishing a little egret from a swan, or an eagle from a vulture. As it was, his success came almost too late for collecting purposes, only a few eggs in an advanced state of incubation being secured on this visit. Some interesting photographic records were, however, obtained, and equally valuable observations made at close quarters.

After this achievement Mr. Lodge's instructions sent him off on a quest as difficult—that of discovering the nesting ground of the great white heron. It cost him a whole month's arduous search through Albania and Montenegro before he was rewarded, after forlorn hopes had confronted him in turn with the common grey heron, the stork, and even the hooded crow, as specious substitutes. He had been wading about all day in thick reed-beds after many failures, and was quite exhausted when he stumbled upon a colony of great white herons, and eventually discovered a nest. He promptly went back for his camera, but on his return completely failed to retrace his steps. With the reeds towering over him, it was impossible to see more than a yard ahead. Only after two hours' search the next day did he succeed in refinding the spot. Another hour, and he would have been too late to obtain a single egg, for in but one nest were the eggs unhatched, and those were only saved as specimens by a prompt surgical operation with a knife. So extremely shy were these birds that Mr. Lodge spent the best part of six days standing waist-deep in water, without being able to expose more than a very few plates; the resulting photographs are remarkably good.

In 1907 Mr. Lodge was commissioned to revisit the same scenes in order to procure more eggs, and if possible to trace the other European pelican (Pelecanus onocrotalus) to its breeding-place in the Dobrudscha. The primary object of this expedition, however, failed—not, it may be imagined, for want of trying. It must have been singularly tantalizing to the author when he learnt, some months after his return to England, that an immense colony of these pelicans had been found by his recent companion in the search. Nor was an attempt to find a nest of the rare lammergeier any more successful, a depth of sixteen feet of snow making the mountain ranges impassable.

There is no cumulating point of interest in the latter half of the book; but since it is not a work of fiction, what anticlimax there is may be pardoned. Each chapter appears to have been written independently, and there is occasionally a little repetition; but there is not a dull page in the book. The opening scenes lie in the sierras and marismas of wildest Spain, and though, owing to a terrible drought, the resources of the marshes proved a failure, there was much exciting work among precipitous crags in search of vultures and eagles. Indeed, it is difficult to realize the wealth of raptorial birds in such lands as Andalusia, Albania, Montenegro, and Roumania. In the long list of species met with on these expeditions no fewer than eight sorts of eagles appear.

Mr. Lodge had a considerable amount of success, together with his fair share of failure, in attracting carrion-feeders to carcasses provided for them, while he secured their portraits from a hollow tree-trunk or some equally uncomfortable place of concealment. The automatic camera with its electric release does not appear to have been productive of many good results. The book is profusely illustrated, the photographs, with very few exceptions, reaching a high level of excellence. Some wonderful photographs of the little bittern in characteristically bizarre attitudes please us as much as anything else.

We note the presence of an Index, and a useful Appendix summarizing the results obtained in Spain, Hungary, Roumania, Bosnia, Montenegro, Albania, Herzegovina, and Corfu. An occasional map of some of these little-known corners of Europe would not have been amiss.

BOOKS ON CHEMISTRY.

Technical Methods of Chemical Analysis. Vol. I. 2 parts. Edited by George Lunge, Ph.D. English Translation edited by C. A. Keane, D.Sc. (Gurney & Jackson.)—These two books, together exceeding 1,000 pages royal 8vo, constitute Vol. I. of Dr. Lunge's large work on chemical analysis for works and technical purposes, which is a development of Dr. F. Böckmann's 'Chemisch-technische Untersuchungsmethoden.' Two more volumes are to appear. In the preparation of the last German edition Dr. Lunge was in collaboration with a small army of experts in their own particular branches; and the present issue has been further adapted to English conditions of manufacture by two dozen English chemists of repute and great experience in their special lines, the whole being edited by Dr. Keane, the Principal and Head of the Chemical Department of the Sir John Cass Technical Institute.

The plan of the book consists in the treatment of the technical methods of analysis, applicable to different specific industries, in separate sections. All important industries, whether dealing with inorganic or organic materials, are included. A general introduction to analytical methods is given by Dr. Lunge, and revised by Dr. Keane; and in each section there are described in full detail such methods as have proved good and trustworthy in the hands of the writers of the section, or have been generally recognized as efficient.

The English translators and revisers have included references to English work and literature which add much to the value of the book.

A noticeable feature is the advance made in volumetric processes for use in work tending to the production of rapid and at the same time accurate results. Naturally in some cases, for technical purposes, there will be a sacrifice of extreme accuracy to obtain quick results, but the writers have not erred in that direction.

When we name among the revisers for the English edition, in addition to the editor in chief, Dr. C. A. Keane, such men as Dr. J. T. Conway, of the United Alkali Company; Mr. W. Burton, Director of Pilkingtons' Tile and Pottery Company; Dr. G. J. Fowler, Lecturer in Bacteriology in the University of Manchester; and Mr. A. D. Hall, who has revised the chapter on 'Soils,' it is evident that the work is of the highest excellence.

An Appendix comprises a series of about fifty tables of figures in use in gas analysis and for various other purposes in works and in the laboratory. The book is well printed and has a good Index. It can be heartily recommended.

Recent Advances in Organic Chemistry. By A. W. Stewart, D.Sc. (Longmans & Co.)—The author has aimed at giving a general idea of the principal researches which have been carried out in organic chemistry within about the last ten years. Much of the material has not previously appeared in volume form, and he is to be thanked for collecting it from various memoirs and presenting it in a systematic way. The matter has been arranged from a synthetic point of view rather than a strictly historical, and this is a decided advantage, as it enables the reader to follow and criticize in a better manner the arguments brought forward. Also we have not a mere compilation of facts, but novel theories in organic chemistry are brought forward, and these will help to direct research and stimulate thought.

The first chapter deals with the main currents in which organic chemistry has been moving during the last half-century. Other chapters deal with the researches on such groups as the Polymethylenes, the Terpenes (monocyclic terpenes, dicyclic terpenes, and olefinic terpenes), the Synthetic Alkaloids, and the Polypeptides. The last-mentioned chapter might perhaps have been enlarged with advantage. Then we have chapters on the chemical action of light, on some theories of additional reactions, and on unsaturation. The final chapter deals with some hypotheses, and indicates the directions which future work should take in order to advance the theoretical side of organic chemistry: it was written at the suggestion of Prof. Norman Collie, who has also supplied a short Introduction. There are a bibliography and a good Index, as well as references to original papers. The book has been arranged with care and skill, and is likely to be extremely useful to workers in advanced organic chemistry.

General Chemistry for Schools and Colleges. By Alexander Smith, Ph.D. (Bell & Sons.)—The author is Professor of Chemistry and Director of General and Physical Chemistry in the University of Chicago, and has already issued an 'Introduction to General Inorganic Chemistry' on very similar lines to this. The present volume deals solely with inorganic chemistry, and virtually differs only from the somewhat larger work in being rather more condensed, and omitting some of the more advanced theoretical matters. It is intended for use in Schools of Medicine, Pharmacy, and Engineering, and in University Colleges for those classes which cannot give so much time to the subject as the larger work requires. It is a good and accurate textbook.

An Organic Chemistry. By A. E. Dunstan, B.Sc. (Methuen & Co.)—This book has not been prepared to meet the purposes of any special examination. This is in its favour: it "is intended for the use of higher forms of schools taking the Special Science Course, and as a first-year textbook in Technical Institutes." It does not divide compounds into aliphatic and aromatic compounds, "but endeavours to give a bird's-eye view of the more prominent features in the science." To this end, the author tells us in the Preface, "the work is arranged on a largely practical basis." In the introductory chapter organic chemistry is spoken of as an entirely new science (within the last hundred years), and inorganic chemistry as a sister science. It is nowhere plainly stated that organic chemistry is the chemistry of carbon compounds, nor, we think, even that carbon is an essential element, though no doubt that is assumed. Surely it is better for the learner to know that the distinction between inorganic and organic chemistry is more a matter of convenience than of essentials.

The practical work and study of a few typical compounds start with the preparation of alcohol and the investigation of some of its properties, and no better starting-point for the object the author has set before him could be chosen. We must, however, point out that the information given on pp. 3 and 4 as to the production and composition of beer, wine, brandy, methylated spirit, &c., is scrappy in the extreme, and likely to be misleading. It is not even stated whether the percentages given are by volume or by weight; and there is no mention of proof spirit and rectified spirit, which are of importance to some, at least, of the "evening students who are occupied in chemical industries," and for whom the book is intended. The use of the formula $H.OH$ for water, and analogous formulæ, may sometimes be an advantage, but becomes confusing when two molecules of water are written $2H.OH$ (p. 9), and in similar cases. Two of the graphic formulæ given, on p. 52, to illustrate the possible, or impossible, constitution of acetic aldehyde are out of place and unnecessary, as they represent C_2H_4O , and not $C_2H_4O_2$.

Whilst there is much of value in this little book, it can be of use to only a limited number of students, who must possess a good deal of preliminary knowledge, and have an instructor constantly at hand to fill up lacunæ. On the whole, perhaps a bird's-eye view of a science is not the best view for a serious student to obtain at an early stage.

MEDICAL BOOKS.

Treatment of Consumption. By W. Camac Wilkinson. (Macmillan & Co.)—The presence or absence of tubercle bacilli in the expectoration has been used, until lately, as a sign of phthisis. It is now recognized that means exist for detecting the disease in an earlier stage, when, as yet, the tubercle bacilli have not escaped into the air passages, but are doing their deadly work in the tissues. The test for tubercle in this early stage consists in injecting a substance known as "tuberculin," which is a glycerine extract of the bacilli evaporated to one-tenth of its bulk in a water bath, and afterwards filtered through a Chamberland filter. Those who are free from tubercle show no symptoms when tuberculin is injected, whilst those who are already infected respond by a variety of characteristic symptoms. Dr. Camac Wilkinson as a pupil and fellow-worker with Prof. Robert Koch, the discoverer of tubercle bacilli, deals with the prophylaxis of tubercle. His book is designed to show the absolute truth of Koch's statements that (1) tuberculin is an invaluable and indispensable agent in the diagnosis of early tuberculosis, especially when it affects the lungs; (2) the early stage of pulmonary tuberculosis can be cured with certainty by means of tuberculin. Dr. Wilkinson writes as an enthusiast, and with but little respect for the work and feelings of those whom he calls "the other doctors," a class of men who have been less fortunate than himself in the results they have obtained from tuberculin as a means of cure. The chief value of the book lies in the fact that it makes the dispassionate reader reconsider the grounds for the diagnosis, prognosis, and treatment of a familiar and terrible disease.

The Problem of Age, Growth, and Death. By Charles S. Minot. (John Murray.)—Prof. C. S. Minot dedicates these lectures, issued as a volume of the "Progressive Science Series," to Prof. Mosso of Turin, with whom he was a fellow-student in Carl Ludwig's laboratory at Leipsic some thirty years ago. The lectures were delivered before a mixed audience at the Lowell Institute in March, 1907, and they defend the thesis that the growth and differentiation of protoplasm in a cell are the causes of old age, whilst rejuvenation depends upon an increase of the nuclei. An acceptance of these facts leads to the conclusions that natural death is the consequence of cellular differentiation, and to the apparent paradox that senescence is at its maximum in the very young stages of cellular and animal life, the rate of senescence diminishing with age, for the rate of growth depends on the degree of senescence.

Prof. Minot supports his contentions by a most interesting study of the life-history of cells in their biological and morphological aspects. He adduces, too, a large number of original observations dealing with the growth of rabbits, chickens, and guinea-pigs. His facts are conveyed in clear and precise language, which makes the book easy and pleasant to read. These and the figures upon which the statements are based show how large an amount of original work has been needed to arrive at a partial solution of the final problem of life. Although the book is not controversial, Prof. Minot does not hesitate to call attention to what he believes are fallacies in the teaching of Weismann and other writers on heredity. The book is well illustrated, and we notice a figure and description of a useful "age reckoner" for finding the dates at which an animal should be weighed when its rate of growth is being investigated. The need for such an apparatus is shown by elaborate appendixes dealing with the rate of growth in rabbits and chickens, the rate being calculated from the body weight at given age periods.

The Diagnosis of Smallpox. By T. F. Ricketts. (Cassell & Co.)—Every reader of eighteenth-century memoirs is familiar with the appalling loss of life and destruction of beauty which were caused by smallpox, whilst those who are still hardly beyond middle age remember how many seamed and pock-marked faces were to be seen in the streets when they were young. Thanks to Jenner and the modifying action of vaccination, smallpox has become a different disease, easier to suffer, but harder to distinguish. Indeed, a medical man may be highly qualified in his profession, and pass his whole life in active practice, without seeing a case of this malady. But for all that it is endemic, and, as recent events have shown, epidemics costing money and valuable lives may at any time occur. Dr. Ricketts is well advised, therefore, in publishing his book on the diagnosis of the subject, because he has served as medical superintendent of smallpox hospitals for many years, and has thus gained ample knowledge and experience. Dr. Ricketts is fortunate, too, in securing the co-operation of Dr. J. B. Byles, his senior medical officer, who has contributed no fewer than 121 plates to illustrate 147 pages of letterpress. The plates, with a single exception, are made from photographs, some simple, some stereoscopic, and some by the Sanger-Shepherd three-colour process. A loathsome disease is thus fully illustrated in such a manner as should make it impossible for a person to mistake it, even though he may have had but few opportunities of seeing cases.

Dr. Ricketts in his diagnosis lays special stress upon the distribution of the rash as a factor in diagnosis. He considers that the broad features of distribution are that the rash prefers the upper half of the body to the lower part; that it is a rash of the distal ends of the limbs rather than of the proximal, of the extensor surfaces rather than of the flexor aspects; and that it avoids the most pronounced flexures of the body. He then considers the life-history of the rash, and shows how death may occur from an overwhelming toxæmia at the very beginning of the disease, or from the blood-poisoning due to the suppuration at a later stage. But perhaps the most valuable part of the book is that which deals with the differential diagnosis. More than a thousand years ago the difference between smallpox and measles was recognized by Rhazes the Persian, but it was not until the time of Sydenham that smallpox, measles, and scarlet fever were clearly distinguished one from another, and even now the variety of affections certified to be smallpox shows how difficult may be the diagnosis.

Mind and its Disorders. By W. H. B. Stoddart. (H. K. Lewis.)—The textbooks on insanity by Bucknill and Tuke and by Maudsley served many generations of English medical students, not only for the material which they contained, but also for the style in which they were written. The advances made in the pathology of the nervous system rendered them obsolete, and for some years nothing was published to replace them. The last volume of "Lewis's Practical Series" does much to fill the gap. It is written by Dr. W. H. B. Stoddart, whose position as assistant-physician to Bethlem Royal Hospital has given him much experience in the various forms of insanity; whilst his scientific attainments are shown by the manner in which he has kept himself abreast of all that has been done, both at home and abroad, in connexion with the disorders of the mind.

The book is divided into three main parts: the first dealing with normal psychology; the second with the psychology of the insane; and the third with mental diseases. There are two appendixes and a good index, whilst the illustrations are well rendered. Dr. Stoddart takes a wide view of mental disease, for he devotes a chapter to neurasthenia, which he properly looks upon as a definite disease with definite symptoms, and he adds, "Once a neurasthenic, always a neurasthenic." Myxœdema, cretinism, and exophthalmic goitre are considered under the heading of mental disorders associated with disease of the thyroid gland; and there is an interesting chapter on mental disorders occurring in association with visceral disease.

Reminiscences, Personal, Professional, and Philanthropic. By John Blackwood, M.D. (Edinburgh, Andrew Elliot.)—These chronicles of an uneventful life are written by a medical man who has retired from the practice of his profession. Born in Edinburgh, the son of a Writer to the Signet, he was fortunate in securing the friendship of such men as Dr. John Brown, the author of 'Rab and his Friends'; Prof. Goodsir, and John Stuart Blackie, who moulded his youthful ideals into their own ways of thought and action. The author, who writes under the assumed name of Dr. "Blackwood," graduated in medicine at Edinburgh, married his cousin, the daughter of a doctor; and succeeded to the practice of his father-in-law, a general practitioner living within twenty miles of London. His opportunities for doing good would have seemed to be small, but the 'Reminiscences' show how much may be done by a gentleman of refined tastes and strong religious convictions to educate his immediate circle in the fundamental laws of mental, moral, and physical health. Dr. "Blackwood" approximates nearly in real life and in England to the portrait which Anatole France has drawn of Dr. Bonnard in fiction and in France. Both are men of delicate sensibility and delightful simplicity, whose foibles and mistakes we readily forgive, even when, as in Dr. "Blackwood's" case, the pylorus is described as a part of the intestine "which measures nine inches in length."

PHYSIOLOGY.

The Body at Work. By Alex. Hill. (Edward Arnold.)—Few people are better qualified to write a treatise on the principles of physiology than Dr. Hill, the former Master of Downing College, Cambridge. A successful teacher of the subject in which he is a tried experimenter, a writer of no mean capacity, a highly qualified medical man, and a prominent member of a university which boasts one of the most original and enterprising physiological schools of the world, Dr. Hill is equipped at all points to carry out the task he has set himself. This task is to describe the phenomena of life in language which will be understood by persons who are not intimately acquainted with the sciences upon which physiology rests. The volume to which Dr. Hill has given the name 'The Body at Work' is in no sense a popular or superficial treatise upon physiology. It deals with the subject thoroughly in the light of the most recent investigations, and any one who reads carefully through it will have acquired a clear and accurate picture of the present state of a science which grows and changes daily. The information is conveyed easily, with a wealth of apt illustration from everyday life which is only possible from one who is a master of the subject upon which he is writing. Here is an example:—

"In thinking of the transformations which proteid substances undergo in the system, it is legitimate to regard their nitrogen as from the first united with hydrogen in the form of ammonia. Not that the grouping is so simple as this. An albumin is not an amide. But in the dance of atoms of its great molecule as it progresses through the system—forming part of the blood, taken up by the cells as floating protein, incorporated in the protoplasm of the cells, shaken into smaller aggregates in the muscles—nitrogen and hydrogen are partners. They leave the body hand in hand. Gusts of oxygen atoms enter through the lungs; use blood-corpuscles as carriages; dismounting, they traverse lymph, forcing their way into the interior of cells; they join the dance. With their strong arms they detach carbon atoms and hydrogen atoms from the huge albumin chain. As carbonic acid and water they bear them to the lungs. But nitrogen clings to hydrogen. Oxygen cannot detach the grasp. Out of the molecule of albumin this firmly united couple slips, without contributing anything to the energy which moves the body and keeps it warm. Nitrogen is not a source of energy. It even saves a portion of the hydrogen of albumin from combustion."

But if physiological processes are described in this lively manner, the difficulties are not shirked. The facts are stated; the reader is told why they present difficulties, and what is the most reasonable explanation. This is especially the case in connexion with the various problems presented by gout and the uric-acid hypothesis in its physiological aspect, for Dr. Hill recognizes the important fact that "modern medicine is in the fullest sense applied physiology, because physiological discoveries suggest treatment." The book is sufficiently illustrated with semi-diagrammatic drawings, and is provided with a good Index. It should be useful in many ways, and not less so because it passes over such sections of physiology as are generally considered unsuitable for ordinary discussion.

The Cell as the Unit of Life, and other Lectures. By Allan Macfadyen. Edited by R. Tanner Hewlett. (J. & A. Churchill.)—It seems the irony of fate that the gifted author of these lectures, who had spent the best years of his life in an attempt to discover a cure or a prophylactic for some of the most dangerous infectious diseases, should at the last fall a victim to one of them. Dr. Macfadyen forms another of the long roll of martyrs to science, and one who could ill be spared. He died of typhoid fever as a result of accidental infection in the laboratory at the early age of forty-six, just as he seemed to be bringing his experiments on intracellular toxins to a successful conclusion. No one can read this book without becoming conscious of the great loss science has sustained by his early death, and the perusal of the chapters on toxins and antitoxins adds poignancy to the feeling of sorrow that one who knew so well the dangers and difficulties of the path should have been struck down before completing his task.

The volume consists of four courses of lectures delivered by Dr. Macfadyen at the Royal Institution, whilst he was Fullerian Professor of Physiology there. They are entitled 'The Cell as the Unit of Life,' 'Cellular Physiology,' 'Recent Methods and Results in Biological Inquiry,' and 'Toxins and Antitoxins.' A final lecture on 'The Effects of Physical Agents on Bacterial Life' is included. The whole series is characterized by clearness of thought and accuracy of statement, and the subject-matter is presented in an attractive form. Prof. Hewlett, of King's College, London, has edited the book, and has added a short biographical notice of Dr. Macfadyen's career.

The lectures are described as "an introduction to biology," and the key-note of the whole work is expressed in the title of the first course, viz., that the cell is the unit of life, and "that every physiological and every pathological problem is ultimately a cellular one."

The author deals with the morphology of the cell, the chemical composition and physical characters of protoplasm, its irritability and response to stimuli. Under 'Cellular Physiology' he enters into a study of the various ferments or enzymes manufactured by the cell and their mode of action. He shows that, though they must not be confounded with the specific vital forces of the cell, a knowledge of the nature of these ferments is essential in order to understand the main problems of animal and plant life. And he points out that they are not alone the products of special cells of the higher plants and animals, but are equally well formed by unicellular organisms.

In the lectures devoted to 'Recent Results in Biological Inquiry' the author outlines the knowledge already gained and the probable means of increasing it in the future, concluding with an account of the methods he had himself employed to obtain—unaltered—the intracellular toxins of some of the pathogenic bacteria. These researches brought to light the remarkable fact that micro-organisms could be subjected to the temperature of liquid air, and even of liquid hydrogen (about -250° Cent.), for a considerable time without in the least impairing the vital principle—the processes of life were suspended, not destroyed.

The explanation given of toxins and antitoxins and the various forms of immunity is an admirable example of how the salient points of a difficult subject can be rendered clear to a beginner. A footnote, however, might have been inserted with advantage on p. 325, referring to recent work on opsonins.

It is some years since these lectures were delivered, but under the careful editorship of Prof. Hewlett they are as valuable now as when first uttered. The volume forms a fitting tribute to the memory of one who gave his life for his work.

Intracellular Enzymes. By H. M. Vernon. (John Murray.)—Life is dependent upon the power of an organism to assimilate food material, which does not often present itself in a fit state for immediate use. It is absolutely necessary, therefore, that every living substance should be endowed with the necessary power of transmuting non-assimilable foods into some form which is capable of ready absorption. Indeed, this power of transmutation is so vital as to be inherent in protoplasm itself, and the agents by which it is effected do not differ very greatly in animals and in plants. The changes are produced by certain bodies known as enzymes, or physiological ferments, about which very little has hitherto been known for certain. The progress of physiological chemistry, however, has enabled some progress to be made, and Dr. Vernon has given an account of the present state of our knowledge about them in a course of lectures delivered in the Physiological Laboratory at the University of London. The substance of this course of lectures is published in the present work on 'Intracellular Enzymes,' which will be read with interest by every physiologist. It contains the results of a large amount of research in addition to an accurate summary of what has been done by others in this branch of science. The general conclusion arrived at is that non-morphological ferments are protein-like bodies with smaller molecules than native proteids, and formed as side chains during the later stages of protoplasmic katabolism. The intimate relation of enzyme formation to protoplasmic change without any functional use is well shown in the case of rennet, of which Dr. Vernon says:—

"It seems probable that a rennetic enzyme invariably accompanies every proteolytic one, even though it may be impossible for it ever to exert its milk-coagulating power. Thus it is present in the stomach of fishes and the pancreas of many animals; in the fruits, seeds, and leaves of many plants, and in many micro-organisms."

We welcome the book not only for itself, but also as evidence that the medical school at Oxford is beginning to recover a position in the world of science to which it is entitled by a long and glorious inheritance, though it has long suffered eclipse.

Contributions to the Physiological Theory of Tuberculosis. By Charles Creighton. (Williams & Norgate.)—This book deals with some of the more difficult and debatable points in connexion with the subject of tuberculosis. Dr. Creighton advances the hypothesis that the tubercular neoplasm is built up from the substance of red corpuscles, and that caseation is its natural fate. This hypothesis is supplementary to the work of Baumgarten and Metchnikoff in accounting for the method by which the tubercle bacilli produce the unstable tissue of tubercle. Dr. Creighton brings forward much interesting work, and considers his problem from the standpoint both of experiment and of theory. He points out the remarkable analogies which exist between the tubercular neoplasm and certain plasmodial tissue in the placenta. It is the function of both tissues to get rid of disintegrated or reduced blood corpuscles.

He deals also with tubercle as it occurs experimentally in rodents, and spontaneously in cattle and human beings. The spontaneous form he considers especially as it attacks the lymphatic glands and serous membranes, giving also some account of meningeal and splenic tubercle. The last sections alone treat of pulmonary tubercle or phthisis.

The book is a scholarly piece of work on a side of tuberculosis which has not yet received sufficient attention from pathologists and physicians, who have often contented themselves with the anatomical aspects of tuberculosis, to the exclusion of the physiological factors which go to make up the disease.

RESEARCH NOTES.

THE importance of the study of colloids has been repeatedly insisted upon in these Notes, and a discovery lately communicated by Dr. A. Meisling to the Royal Academy of Science in Denmark goes far to confirm this view. For the last three years, according to the Revue Générale des Sciences, Dr. Meisling has been engaged, in collaboration with Dr. H. Oerum, on the investigation of the substance of the retina of the eyes of animals. In the course of these investigations they have discovered that the addition of certain substances, such as aniline dyes and chlorophyll, to a colloid such as gelatine renders the colloid sensitive to the light in the same way as does bichromate of potassium. By using erythrosine or auramine, the Danish scholars above named have succeeded in producing gelatinized paper which can be used for printing direct from a photographic negative without any further process; but the main interest of their discovery consists in the light cast by it on the microbe-killing power of the sun. According to them, all colloids possess this sensitiveness in a greater or less degree, and the erythrosine only acts as an intensifier of this quality. One of the effects of this is that exposure to light causes a colloid to become absolutely insoluble. But it is in the colloids with which the tissues of animal bodies are filled that the harmful microbes live and work; and it follows that the effect of their exposure to light is to cause the microbe to be surrounded by an insoluble substance in which it is, so to speak, mummified.

Most inquirers into the action of electricity upon the human organism have come across the experiment of Dubois-Reymond in which the subject grasps a bar of wood with the thumb and the first three fingers of each hand, while the little fingers dip into two insulated bowls of water containing wires connected with a galvanometer. The theory is that when the muscles of the arm are strongly contracted by gripping the wooden bar, the needle of the galvanometer will be deflected, and it is said that the current will pass backwards or forwards according to the arm that is chiefly employed. The experiment, however, is by no means always successful; and Dr. Heydweiller, who studied the subject six years ago in the Annalen der Physik, came to the conclusion not only that the human body was a very good conductor of electricity, but also that, contrary to the general idea, opposed currents of electricity of different tensions can traverse its tissues at the same time, these charges being, on the same authority, contained for the most part in the less conducting portions of the skin. Two Russian scholars, Messrs. Terechine and Georgievski, have now experimented on the same phenomenon, and give the result of their researches in the journal Himmel und Erde.

They used a vertical tube of glass fixed with paraffin wax on an insulated metal plate communicating with the quadrants of a Kelvin or Dolezalek electrometer, and this tube served as a support to the hand in some experiments, while in others the quadrants were directly connected with metal cylinders placed over the arms and legs of the subject. The result showed that, in the absence of clothing, the charge that could be developed by what they call self-electrification, or the movement of the muscles, is extremely slight, and much less than the ten or fifteen volts found by Dr. Heydweiller, and that the sign of the charge can be altered immediately by changing the clothing from silk to wool and vice versa, or altering the substance of the insulating stool employed. From these and other experiments they draw the conclusion that the power of electrification by muscular contraction does not exist, or—what amounts to the same thing—that the action of the muscles is not electrical in its nature.

A very readable article or 'Incandescence et Luminiscence,' by M. A. Berthier, who seems to be an engineer by profession, appears in a recent number of the Revue Scientifique. He mentions with much approval the ingenious system of lighting by means of Geissler tubes devised by Mr. Macfarlane Moore, which was some time since exhibited in this country as a laboratory curiosity. It consists in effect of an ordinary Ruhmkorff coil with a vibrating break working in vacuo, and is now said by M. Berthier to be capable of application to domestic use as a means of feeding Geissler tubes partly concealed behind the cornice of the ceiling. By this method it is claimed that the room or hall to which it is applied can be filled with a diffused light resembling that of the sun at a small cost, the output of light being about five times that of an ordinary incandescent lamp. As to the cost, opinions seem to differ; but it would apparently be difficult to use Ruhmkorff coils on a large scale, even if the contacts of the break did not become quickly oxidized in practice. The alternative method suggested, viz., that of connecting the tubes directly to a step-up transformer fed by an alternating current, would be free from this disadvantage, but would prove awkward except in places where an alternating current for other than lighting purposes is supplied by the municipality or generating source. Additional points of interest in M. Berthier's article are the use of an ultra-violet ray or "uviolet" lamp in the Colonies for the destruction of insects, on which the rays from the upper end of the spectrum are found to have a fatal effect, and the numerous instruments now made for the medical application of Röntgen, ultra-violet, and other rays. The writer is doubtless correct when he says that all such means of cure should be used with extreme caution.

The old method taught to officers of putting the muzzle of a rifle to the ground and of listening at the breech in order to detect the movements of distant bodies of cavalry has fallen into disuse with the adoption of magazine rifles, which do not readily lend themselves to use as telephones. The acoustole of M. Martel, lately described in La Nature, appears to be based on the same principle, and consists of a trumpet-shaped tube of about a metre in height, bearing within it a hollow central cone. It is said to be so sensitive that the tick of a watch can be heard at a distance of several hundred yards, and it is recommended that when used for listening to the vibrations of sound through the earth it should be placed in a hole dug for the purpose. It is protected by an external sheath against vibrations coming from the outside, and can be used with a head-piece with two ears of the kind familiar to telephone operators.

Faraday showed a century ago that the three metals used as a standard of price, i.e., gold, silver, and copper, all become transparent when in sufficiently thin plates, the colour of gold being in those circumstances green, that of silver blue, and that of copper red. A recent communication by Mr. Bulby to the Royal Society, followed by another by Mr. Turner, shows that this phenomenon, as Faraday concluded, varies with the temperature, the transparency of gold beginning at 350° C., and that of silver at about 50° higher. Copper yields to a lower temperature than either, but the observation of the phenomenon is in that case difficult owing to the impossibility of preventing its oxidation in air. Silver also is not transparent in hydrogen or in illuminating gas. What is more extraordinary is that neither aluminium nor any of the other metals examined by Mr. Turner exhibit any transparency in a gaseous medium.

M. Laguesse, Professor of Histology at Lille, opens the extremely useful series of annual reviews of the progress of the different sciences in the Revue Générale des Sciences with a 'Revue d'Anatomie.' He lays great stress on the employment of ultra-microscopic methods on the system invented by Siedentopf and Zsigmondy, and perfected by MM. Cotton and Mouton in France. He declares that these have thrown a new light on histology, that the ultra-microscopic particles of the colloids of living tissues are now proved to be identical with the micelles of Nägeli, and that their automatic movements plainly correspond to the Brownian movements recently mentioned in these Notes, and particularly observable in the hydrosols of gold and silver. The death of protoplasm he considers to take place when the hydrosol is turned into a hydrogel, which leads to coagulation of the colloids, and the consequent arrest of the Brownian movement. This is evidently a subject on which the last word has not been said, but the quotations which he makes from the researches of the German biologists Gaidukow, Mayer, and Schäffer go some way towards proving his point. Other new details are to be found in his study of the parathyroid glands which have lately been discovered in all animals, notably in mammals and birds, and of the independence of the two lobes of the liver in the higher animals. The discovery of the parathyroid glands is still too recent for him to pronounce on their use. F. L.

SOCIETIES.

BRITISH ACADEMY.—Jan. 27.—Lord Reay in the chair.—Prof. A. A. Macdonell, Fellow of the Academy, read a paper on 'The Evolution of Ancient Indian Architecture.' He said that, owing to the total lack of works of an historical character in India from the rise of its literature (c. 1500 B.C.) to the Muhammadan conquest (c. 1000 A.D.), the study of archaeology was relatively more important in India than in perhaps any other country. But the archaeological remains had been steadily disappearing from the face of the land. Their destruction had been arrested by the Ancient Monuments Preservation Act passed by Lord Curzon in 1904. The lecturer had during a recent tour of six months in India many opportunities of observing the beneficial effects of the Act. His paper traced through a period of nearly 2,000 years the development of Indian architecture from its earliest forms down to the fixed types of later ages. In the pre-Buddhist period architecture was wooden, there being no temples or carved images of gods. The use of brick first appeared in the fifth century B.C., and from the middle of the third century B.C. the Buddhists began to build in stone.

Buddhist Architecture.—The history of Buddhist architecture might be divided into three periods: 250 B.C.—50 A.D.; 50—350 A.D.; 350—650 A.D. There were three classes of buildings: Stūpas (topes), Chaityas (assembly halls or churches), monasteries. The Stūpa, a development of the low sepulchral mound of earth, was originally a hemispherical structure erected to enclose relics of Buddha; on the top was an ornament (called a tee) ending in one or more umbrellas. It was shown how, by successive stages, both the Stūpa and the tee were elongated so as to assume the shape of a tower; the former then became attenuated, while the tee grew in height, the umbrellas becoming roofs, till it reached its final development in the nine-storied Chinese pagoda, in which the Stūpa portion had disappeared.

The Professor then traced the history of the assembly halls, wagon-headed structures with aisles and an apse, under which was placed a small Stūpa as an object of veneration. The earliest were rock-cut specimens dating from the third century B.C., and obviously imitating wooden buildings. The Stūpa, originally quite plain, had in later centuries a figure of Buddha carved on its front, and finally (about 600 A.D.) became a hollow cell with the figure inside. This marked the transition to Hindu architecture, in two early specimens of which the cell was semicircular at the back and square respectively.

The monasteries originally consisted of a square hall surrounded by a number of sleeping cubicles. Rock-cut specimens alone survived, there being altogether about 900. In the first period no figure sculpture appeared, and only towards its end four pillars supporting the ceiling were introduced. In the second period the number of pillars was gradually increased from 12 to 28; and a sanctuary containing a figure of Buddha was introduced at the back of the hall. The latest specimens at Ellora formed a transition to the earliest Hindu examples, from which they were hardly distinguishable.

The Dravidian Style.—All the evidence available tended to show that Hindu religious architecture was derived from earlier Buddhist types. The oldest specimens dated from about 600 A.D. Two styles could be clearly distinguished, each showing a definite type from the beginning: the Dravidian or South Indian, and the Indo-Aryan or North Indian. The Dravidian temple was derived from the Buddhist monastery. Its plan was a square base containing the cell in which the image was kept; the cell was surmounted by a pyramidal tower, always divided into stories, and surmounted by a small dome either circular or pyramidal. The later Dravidian temples stood in a court surrounded by a wall, a special feature of which was the Gopuram, or great gateway, which was opposite the temple, and was surmounted by a storied tower resembling that of the shrine itself. The best specimen was the great temple at Tanjore, erected in 1025 A.D. In still later specimens successive surrounding courts were added, each with its Gopuram. These gateways increased in size and height as one proceeded outwards, and thus entirely obscured the tower of the central shrine. The most notable example of this defect was the Srirangam temple near Trichinopoly, the largest in India. A feature of these South Indian temples consists of their tanks surrounded by colonnades. The great temple of Ramesvaram had magnificent corridors, one of them 700 ft. in length. These temples had very elaborate pillars, which by about 1300 A.D. acquired a permanent type with conventionalized animals and riders affixed to them. A variety of the South Indian style was the Chalukyan, the best specimens of which belonged to the twelfth and thirteenth centuries A.D.

The Indo-Aryan Style.—This style was found only north of the twentieth degree of latitude. Here the square cell was surmounted by a curvilinear spire with a vertical band running up each face. The top was finished off with a fluted ornament somewhat flattened. In the earliest specimens a porch was added in front of the cell, but was not essential. The spire, though curved, was square in section. The earliest specimens were found at Bhuvaneshvar in Orissa, beginning about 600 A.D., and coming down to 1100 A.D. A feature in the evolution of the northern temples was the gradual increase in the number of the porches to four. The origin of the Indo-Aryan spire had always been a puzzle to archaeologists. It could not have any connexion with the pyramidal Dravidian tower, nor with the long wagon-headed Buddhist assembly hall, which had no suggestion of a spire about it. Its prototype was to be found in the Stūpa. By the end of the Buddhist period, the Stūpa had become a hollow cell with a square base and an elongated dome. In the Indo-Aryan tower the dome was further elongated, and the corners of the square base were carried up to the top on the curvilinear face, the horizontal section of which thus became square also. The remarkable conclusion was thus reached that on the one hand the evolution of the Buddhist Stūpa resulted in the Chinese pagoda and the Indo-Aryan temple, and that on the other the Buddhist monastery was the prototype from which was developed the Hindu temple of Southern India. The successive stages of these developments were traced with the aid of over 80 lantern-slides.

A discussion followed, in which Lord Reay and Mr. F. W. Thomas took part.

SOCIETY OF ANTIQUARIES.—Jan. 28.—Dr. C. H. Read, President, in the chair.—Mr. E. Neil Baynes read a paper on the excavation of two barrows at Ty'n-y-pwll, Llanddyfnan, Anglesey, in August and September last. The work was carried out at the expense of Lord Boston, to whom permission to excavate was accorded by Mr. Walter Vivian, the owner of Ty'n-y-pwll Farm. In the larger barrow, about 96 ft. in diameter and 7 ft. in height, were found seven cinerary urns, another urn of a different type which was empty, a cist with incinerated bones, and an extended skeleton near the edge of the mound. The cinerary urns all contained burnt bones, and in four of them bronze was found. Four or more of these urns were of the cordoned type which is usually found in North Britain. The largest urn, about 16 in. in height and 17½ in. in width, contained, besides a bronze celt, which was twisted owing to the action of fire, a perfect bronze knife-dagger, an elongated bronze implement nearly 4½ in. long and sharpened at each end, and a piece of stag's horn. The bronze in the other urns had passed through the fire, and in one case had been melted. There was no central interment. This barrow evidently belonged to the Bronze Age.

Two hundred feet distant was a smaller barrow, about 66 ft. in diameter and 4 ft. in height above the ground level. No urns were found here, but about 2 ft. 3 in. below the ground level, near the centre, a crouched skeleton was discovered in a cist composed of clay and stones, which was covered with a limestone slab about 5 ft. long, 3 ft. 6 in. wide, and 8 in. thick. A small flint knife was the only other object found in this cist. It seems that the body had been wrapped in a garment of skin or leather before interment. Prof. Keith, of the Royal College of Surgeons, who made a careful examination of the skull, believes that it belonged to a man of about thirty years of age. It is markedly dolichocephalic, and the low cranial capacity is explained by the small stature of the individual. He also considered that the skull belonged to the type described by Huxley as having been found in long barrows and river-bed deposits of England and Ireland and in the cist interments of Scotland. Huxley regarded them as Neolithic people. No urns or other interment were found in this barrow, which was earlier than the preceding one.—Dr. Arthur Evans, Prof. Gowland, and Mr. Reginald Smith joined in the discussion.

In a paper on 'The Music in the Painted Glass of the Beauchamp Chapel at Warwick' Mr. C. F. Hardy showed, by reference to Graduals of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, that the scrolls in the tracery of one of the windows contained—substantially in their original condition—the words and plainsong of the antiphon "gaudeamus," the first part of the introit as appointed for the mass on most of the feasts in honour of the Virgin. Similar antiphons or hymns seem to have been originally in the scrolls on three other windows, but have been replaced (probably since 1864), by glass bearing meaningless notes without words. A document cited by Dugdale, but imperfectly printed by him, and hitherto unexplained, was interpreted as describing the four sets of scrolls as "gaudes for Our Lady." Two pieces of glass interpolated in the east window were identified as part of the antiphon "Ave, Regina," which was probably one of the four gaudes. Features characteristic of certain slight differences between the uses of Sarum and Rome were pointed out in the "Gaudeamus" and the remains of the "Ave." In the east window there remained about half the original contents part of a plainsong setting of the "Gloria in excelsis" appointed for the mass on greater doubles, and partly adapted by Marbeck in his 'Common Prayer Noted.' This was illustrated by a MS. Gradual of the same period as the chapel (fifteenth century), containing a miniature which had certain features in common with the designs of the side windows, and included a scroll displaying the opening of the "Gloria" originally in the east window. This opening had now been replaced in the window by what seemed to be the mutilated remains of a two-part setting of the "Gloria" so far as contained in the text of St. Luke, written in measured music. Photographs of the scrolls, manuscripts, &c., were shown on the screen; and the "Gaudeamus" was sung by Mr. E. W. Goldsmith and Mr. Falconer.

LINNEAN.—Jan. 21.—Dr. D. H. Scott, President, in the chair.—Miss Agnes Robertson was admitted a Fellow; and Mr. W. J. Vandenberghe elected a Fellow.—Dr. Otto Stapf exhibited male and female specimens of Plagianthus helmsii, F. Muell. and Tate, and demonstrated with the aid of lantern-slides their peculiar leaf and floral structure. Prof. Dendy, Mr. E. G. Baker, and Mr. T. A. Sprague took part in the discussion.—The first paper was by Mr. A. W. Hill, entitled 'The Genus Nototriche, Turcz.,' and was illustrated by specimens and lantern-slides. A discussion followed, the speakers being Mr. E. G. Baker, Dr. A. B. Rendle, Dr. Stapf, and Lieut.-Col. Prain.—The second paper, on the 'Longitudinal Symmetry of Centrospermae,' by Dr. Percy Groom, was also illustrated by curves shown on the screen. Dr. Rendle, Mr. L. A. Boodle and the President contributed some remarks.

ROYAL INSTITUTION.—Feb. 1.—Sir James Crichton-Browne, Treasurer and V.-P., in the chair.—Mr. W. E. Lake, Dr. A. Liversidge, Dr. K. C. E. von Martius, and Mr. F. J. Sharpe were elected Members.—The Treasurer announced that the sum of 10,000l. had been anonymously and unconditionally placed at the disposal of the Managers for the purposes of the Institution by a lady; and the members passed a resolution expressing their most grateful appreciation of her munificence.—The Honorary Secretary reported the decease of Dr. Francis Elgar, a late Manager, and a resolution of condolence with the family was passed.

HISTORICAL.—Jan. 21.—The Rev. W. Hunt, President, in the chair.—Mr. N. W. Freeman and Mr. A. M. Hyamson were elected Fellows.—A paper was read by Mr. C. L. Kingsford on Sir Otto de Grandison, Secretary and friend to Edward I. Mr. Vickers and the President spoke on the subject of the paper.

SOCIETY OF ENGINEERS.—Feb. 1.—Mr. J. W. Wilson, the President for 1908, first occupied the chair, and presented the premiums awarded for papers read during the year, viz., the President's Gold Medal to Prof. R. H. Smith for his paper on 'The Design and the Waste and Wear of Wheel Teeth'; the Bessemer Premium of Books to Mr. Herbert Chatley for his paper on 'Mechanical Flight'; a Society's Premium of Books to Mr. A. H. Allen for his paper on 'The Engineering Pros and Cons of the Metric System'; a Society's Premium of Books to Mr. H. Conradi for his paper on 'The History of Mechanical Traction on Tramways and Roads'; and a Society's Premium of Books to Mr. H. C. Duncan Scott for his paper on 'The Destruction of Arch Bridges.'—Mr. Wilson then introduced the President for 1909, Mr. Edward John Silcock, who proceeded to deliver his inaugural address, in which he gave a review of some of the more important features of municipal enterprise as affecting the engineering profession.

MEETINGS NEXT WEEK.

- | | |
|--------|---|
| MON. | Royal Academy, 4.—'Gaillon and the Royal Buildings,' Prof. R. T. Blomfield. |
| — | London Institution, 5.—'The Use of Oxygen: Demonstration of Life-Saving Apparatus for use in Mines and Submarines,' Mr. L. Erskine Hill. |
| — | Surveyor's Institution, 8.—'The Irish Land Bill,' Mr. G. R. M. Hewson. |
| — | Geographical, 8.30.—'My Recent Expedition in Tibet,' Dr. Sven Hedin. |
| TUES. | Royal Institution, 3.—'The Architectural and Sculptural Antiquities of India,' Prof. A. A. Macdonell. |
| — | Asiatic, 4.—'Pythagoras and the Doctrine of Transmigration,' Mr. A. Berriedale Keith. |
| — | Colonial Institute, 8.—'Canada's New Trans-Continental Railway and the New Lands Opened Up,' Mr. E. B. Osborn. |
| — | Faraday, 8.—'Applications of Electrolytic Chlorine to Sewage Purification and Deodorization by the "Oxychlorides" Process,' Dr. S. Rideal; 'A New Electrical Hardening Furnace,' Mr. E. Sabersky. |
| — | Institution of Civil Engineers, 8.—Discussion on 'Heat-Flow and Temperature-Distribution in the Gas-Engine.' |
| — | Anthropological Institute, 8.15.—'Deneholes,' Rev. J. W. Hayes. |
| WED. | Geological, 7.15.—'Geological Features observable at the Carpalla China-Clay Pit in the Parish of St. Stephens, Cornwall,' Mr. J. A. Collins; 'Some Recent Observations on the Brighton-Cliff Formation,' Mr. E. A. Martin. |
| — | Society of Arts, 8.—'Bosnia and Herzegovina,' Mr. A. R. Colquhoun. |
| THURS. | Royal Institution, 3.—'The Revival of Modern Drama,' Lecture II., Mr. W. Archer. |
| — | Royal Academy, 4.—'Domestic Architecture to the Death of Francis I.,' Prof. R. T. Blomfield. |
| — | Royal Society, 4.30. |
| — | London Institution, 6.—'Dr. Samuel Pepys, Lover of Music,' Sir F. Bridge. |
| — | Institution of Electrical Engineers, 8.—'Use of Large Gas Engines for generating Power,' Messrs. L. Andrews and R. Porter. |
| — | Society of Antiquaries, 8.30. |
| FRI. | Astronomical 5.—Annual Meeting. |
| — | Institution of Civil Engineers, 8.—'The Design and Construction of Docks,' Lecture II., Sir Whately Elliot. (Students' Meeting: Vernon-Harcourt Lecture.) |
| — | Physical, 8.—Presidential Address. |
| — | Royal Institution, 9.—'The Electrical Properties of Flame,' Prof. Harold A. Wilson. |
| SAT. | Royal Institution, 3.—'Mendelssohn,' Sir A. C. Mackenzie. |

Science Gossip.

THE ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY are holding a special meeting next Monday at Queen's Hall, at which Dr. Sven Hedin will read a paper on 'My Recent Expedition in Tibet.'

THE building of the new College of Science for Dublin is progressing rapidly. The College, which will be under the control of the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction for Ireland, will contain a large and fully equipped experimental laboratory, and it has been suggested that the students of the new University should take their science course in the College of Science. Trinity College already possesses fine laboratories, and it is pointed out that the affiliation of the new University with the College of Science would tend to the greater efficiency of both institutions.

THE Gold Medal of the Royal Astronomical Society has this year been awarded to Dr. Backlund, Director of the Central Nicolas Observatory, Pulkowa, and will be presented next Friday.

By the death of Mr. Wilfrid H. Hudleston, F.R.S., British geology has lost one of its most distinguished amateurs. He was born at York on June 2nd, 1828, and after studying at Cambridge devoted himself for many years to ornithology, observing and collecting birds in Lapland, Greece, North Africa, and elsewhere. Bibliographers should note that his early scientific papers were published under the name of Simpson: he was, indeed, the son of Dr. J. Simpson of Knaresborough, and changed his name in 1867.

GEOLOGY first seriously engaged his attention in the early sixties, largely through the influence of Prof. Morris; and he soon threw himself enthusiastically into the study of the Jurassic strata and their fossils, especially those of his native county. Whilst palæontology strongly attracted him, he did not neglect the chemical and petrological sides of geology, and was at the same time a careful stratigrapher. Mr. Hudleston visited India, wrote on the geology of Palestine, studied the fauna of Lake Tanganyika, and otherwise showed much versatility, while maintaining thoroughness in all his scientific work. He had been President and Wollaston Medallist of the Geological Society, as also President of the Geologists' Association. His death occurred suddenly on Friday, the 29th ult.

THE death is announced of Dr. John Duns, Emeritus Professor of Natural Science in the Free Church New College, Edinburgh, at the age of eighty-nine. In 1857 he was editor of The North British Review; and his publications included 'Memoir of Prof. Fleming, D.D.,' 'Things New and Old' (1857), 'Science and Christian Thought' (1866), and 'Memoir of Sir James Simpson' (1873).

THE ROYAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCE at Turin announces a prize of 9,300 lire, to be awarded to the person who, in the opinion of the Academy, has made the most striking and useful invention, or has published the most important work, in the field of physical and experimental science, natural history, geology, pure and applied mathematics, chemistry, physiology, history, geography, or statistics. The competition is open till the end of 1910.

DR. W. H. LANG, Lecturer in Botany in the University of Glasgow, who has travelled in the Malay Peninsula and Ceylon, collecting and studying, has been appointed to the new Chair of Cryptogamic Botany in the University of Manchester.

FINE ARTS

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Some Old Devon Churches. By John Stabb. (Simpkin, Marshall & Co.)—Ecclesiologists at large, as well as those who appreciate the general interest pertaining to the furniture of many of the Devonshire churches, ought to welcome heartily the 126 good photographic plates of old screens, pulpits, fonts, and a few other details from Mr. Stabb's camera. The wealth of rood-screens and parcloes possessed by this important Western county is well known, and a fine variety are here figured. Some—such as those of Atherington, Berry-Pomeroy, Dartmouth, Haberton, and Hartland, are fairly familiar to visitors to Devon, and have been not infrequently illustrated; but many others—such as the parcloes of Aveton Gifford, Combe Martin, Kingsbridge, and Ugborough, or the rood-screens of Brushford, Calverleigh, Chilvelstone, Cockington, and Willand, presenting unusual varieties of the screen-maker's skill—will be specially welcomed by students of England's mediæval art. It would perhaps have been more satisfactory if the pictures had been confined to screens; these predominate, but a large number of Devonshire screens, particularly in the south-east of the county, are unrepresented, among which we note those of Feniton, Peyhembury, Northleigh, Clyst St. Lawrence, Talaton, and Awlesbury, the screen at the last-named church being of stone.

Mr. Stabb has put together a few notes concerning the churches from which his photographs are taken, but they are of no particular value. His five pages of introductory matter about rood-screens does not impress us. We learn that the Epistle and Gospel were read from them, and penitents thence absolved, and that "the exposition of the Blessed Sacrament was generally on the rood-loft"!

It is a pity, too, that Mr. Stabb was not content with giving plates of the interesting Norman font of St. Mary Church, near Torquay, with its seven rudely carved circles of figures, and supplying the briefest particulars as to their nature. He wastes, however, several pages in setting forth the fantastic notions of three lady writers respecting the age of the carvings and their imaginary symbolism. One of these ladies asserts that this font is far older than Saxon times, and contains "a valuable record of the religious and physical history of the Phœnicians and Cimmerians"! There are many other early Norman fonts up and down England with just as strange sculptures. All such theorists would do well to study carefully Romilly Allen's 'Early Christian Symbolism.'

The Towers of Oxford from the Bell Tower of Magdalen College. By Edmund Hort New. (The Author.)

Ye fretted pinnacles, ye fanes sublime,
Ye towers that wear the mossy vest of Time, wrote Tom Warton, in an eloquent apostrophe to his beloved Oxford, a hundred and fifty years ago. Standing on Magdalen Tower to-day, he would find his fretted pinnacles almost or quite unchanged. A few novelties, introduced within living memory, would meet his eye: the new Schools, the massive Wolsey Tower, the Martyrs' Memorial and its inharmonious classic neighbour, the delicate Sainte Chapelle of Exeter, with one or two slight spires of a Wesleyan chapel or a parish church; but the rest stand out in Mr. New's artistic grouping exactly as Warton would have seen them, high above the tram and motor which disfigure the reality to-day. No doubt he knew the Tower summit well: few men long resident in Oxford have failed to attend once at least the affecting May Day ceremony which for four centuries it has witnessed annually. The present reviewer remembers how in 1849 at 5 A.M. he climbed the rugged stairs to emerge upon the leaded platform, where stood the surpliced choir with mediæval Bloxam at their head, about to sing "Te Deum Patrem colimus," audible, it was said, like music from the spheres, for a quarter of a mile around. But the view which met the eye was no less unique than were the strains which thrilled the ear. Eastward stretched the Cherwell bridge and meadows, above the Christchurch trees Isis showing here and there in silver streaks as it flowed past Iffley Church, Bagley Wood bounding the horizon. To the west, compacted yet distinct, were ranged the fifteen tallest domes and spires, interspersed with lower pinnacles and towers, all bright and glittering in the smokeless air. Near at hand were Merton and Norman St. Peter's; beyond them Robert D'Oily's grim old Castle keep, which guarded primitive Oxford on the south as St. Michael's Saxon fortress belfry, surmounting the Bocardo Gate, protected it on the north. Far away the view was closed by the Wytham woods and Cumnor Hurst, near which might be seen with a glass the Scholar's Tree of Matthew Arnold.

The hymn had ceased; but before we left the Tower the bells below rang out, and, instructed to fix our eyes upon some slightly distant object, we felt and saw the rocking of the mighty mass beneath our feet—a proof, as we were told, of its perfectly constructed masonry. The year is attested by the fact that one spectator held and exhibited the opening number of 'David Copperfield,' published on that day, and exposed in Macpherson's shop the day before. On the May Day following was present an illustrious American visitor, Cleveland Cox, who has recorded his impression in a charming poem.

Both in design and execution Mr. New's drawing is worthy of his subject. It required some courage to sacrifice the loveliest of all the towers, the Magdalen Campanile itself; yet from no other standpoint could the buildings have been grouped so unconsciously, and so closely. They appear to be truthfully rendered as regards both position and height, though a photograph taken from the same spot might not exactly tally. The treatment is archaic, a resuscitation, apparently, of the architectural style which prevailed in France during the Louis XIV. period. It is, we think, an ideal representation.

THE SOCIETY OF WOMEN ARTISTS.

It cannot be said that the fifty-fourth exhibition of this Society contains much work of sufficient quality to justify its existence—still less that the show has any charm which we are not accustomed to in other exhibitions. The woman artist exhibits no special coquetry or daintiness in the display of her talents, but is, like the majority of modern exhibitors, undistinguished, yielding easily to the temptation of superficial imitation of current work, but lacking the determination to make even that imitation thorough.

To lack initiative and individual research is not necessarily fatal to the painter. We know that there have been artists in plenty who have even owed some of their compact, highly professional talent to the conservatism which allows other people to make experiments, and is content itself cautiously to take advantage of those which prove useful. The ruck of modern painters, however, are not imitators of this shrewd character, but hasty "nibblers," half trying every misunderstood theory or novel trick of technique, and thus evolving a kind of painting more formless and inchoate than any that has preceded it.

Work of this uncertain intention (painted, apparently, in a dream without continuity) forms the fond of almost all modern mixed exhibitions. Here little emerges sufficiently to demand a separate category. Miss Foord, however, in her conventional drawing of Wistaria (349) shows a welcome reserve and a reasonable competence of draughtsmanship. She has the ambition of design, but does not take up the chase so hotly as we could wish, the leading motive of form being somewhat obscured in over-realistic detail, as though she had engaged on a theme too complex for her, and become tired before it was through. Two etchings—The Egret (385), by Miss Winifred Austen, and a Portrait (388), by Miss Mary Sloane—have something of the same wise preference for doing a simple thing nicely, and it would be well if women artists more frequently remained within limitations which thus give concentration and style to their work. One or two of Miss Streatfeild's drawings, such as the Study of a Girl (328) and The Mushroom Hat (332), may be adduced as further examples.

The added freedom of paint offers, above all, a greater liberty of floundering, and concerning the majority of the pictures silence is the truest gallantry. Miss Dorothea Sharp may be noticed as the most capable exponent of the formless, rather aimless sketching most in vogue. Her Saturday (223) shows a healthy feeling for light and air which might have developed to better things had circumstances offered to the artist severer ideals. Miss Jessie Algie's flower pieces (270 and 274) are also among the better pictures of the show; and At the Piano (257), by Miss B. Schebsman, and a water-colour by Mrs. E. Fuller Maitland, Market Hall, Brittany (19), have some little sense of style.

OTHER EXHIBITIONS.

THE NEW ASSOCIATION OF ARTISTS, showing at the Goupil Gallery, keeps a rather better average of quality than the show in Suffolk Street, but there is the same absence of really important things. Mr. Harry Becker's Potato-Gatherers (53) is the most masculine work—a sketch only, but tersely expressed. It would have been more acceptable on a smaller scale. Mr. Paul Paul has two soundly painted studies (44 and 51); and among the water-colours the best are those of Mr. Lamorna Birch (25 and 26).

At the Dowdeswell Galleries Mr. Gwelo Goodman gambols among bright pigments with little discretion. A modest little sketch, The Brown Cow, Hawkeshead (24), is the highwater-mark of his achievement. Here for once he is harmonious in conventional fashion.

THE BRITISH SCHOOL AT ATHENS.

MR. F. W. HASLUCK laid before an audience on January 22nd the results of a short visit to Ænos in Thrace, made with the special object of examining the mediæval inscriptions and heraldry of the Genoese family of Gattilusi, who held the town from 1384 to 1456. His discoveries render necessary several important corrections in the genealogical tree of the family as drawn up by Hopf.

The Director (Mr. R. M. Dawkins) described the results of last season's excavation at the sanctuary of Artemis Orthia at Sparta. In order to reach the level of the original pavement of the sacred enclosure, a considerable portion of the Roman amphitheatre was removed; several inscribed stelæ, including one showing the façade of the archaic temple (6th cent.) in relief, were discovered during the process. Slightly south of the archaic temple were found remains of a still older building, which had crude-brick walls and a cella divided lengthwise by a single row of wooden columns. Small objects from the early strata proved, as in former years, numerous and interesting. They include terra-cottas, lead figurines, carved ivories, and pottery, the last being of especial importance as showing the evolution on Laconian soil of the ware hitherto called Cyrenaic. The effect of the military constitution of Sparta is reflected in the decadence of the industrial arts during the sixth and fifth centuries B.C., the finest work dating rather from the seventh and sixth.

Fine-Art Gossip.

MRS. MARTIN COLNAGHI has presented to the National Gallery the 'Portrait of Mr. Martin Colnaghi' (No. 2286) by J. C. Horsley, R.A. The picture is at present hung on a screen in Room XXI. Mrs. Leicester has presented a 'Head of Dante' by Seymour Kirkup after Giotto. It was made from a tracing taken by "the first promoter of the discovery" from the original fresco in the Bargello before it was restored. The same lady has also presented a 'Head of Dante' copied by Arthur Hughes "from an ancient painting." These two heads now hang in one of the Arundel Rooms on the ground floor.

A SUITABLE frame has lately been procured for that important acquisition, the 'Family Group' (No. 2285) by Frans Hals. The canvas has been well set back in the frame, and is now seen to great advantage.

THE LEICESTER GALLERIES, at which 'Mr. Punch's Pageant' closes to-day, will open next Saturday with water-colours and sketches by the late William Callow, and "pastorals" by Mr. Alfred Parsons.

A SOCIÉTÉ POUR LA REPRODUCTION DES DESSINS DE MAÎTRES has been organized in Paris on the lines of the English Vasari Society. It proposes to publish drawings by ancient and modern masters in private and public collections which are little known to the general student.

At the recent meeting of the French Académie des Inscriptions et Belles-Lettres, M. Maurice Roy, Conseiller à la Cour des Comptes, read an important paper on 'Les deux Jean Cousin.' Hitherto only one artist of that name has been recognized, but M. Roy maintained that there were two men of the same name—relations, but in what degree is not yet known.

MADAME BIXIO has presented to the Musée Carnavalet, Paris, a portrait of Prosper Mérimée, painted in 1852 by Simon Jacques Rochard, who for many years lived in England and exhibited at the Royal Academy.

COQUELIN AÎNÉ, with whose career we deal elsewhere to-day, was a frequent visitor at the Hôtel Drouot, the famous auction mart in Paris. His last purchase there was at the sale of his friend Ranc.

He was a keen collector of pictures, and has left a number of important works by Bastien-Lepage, Besnard, Cazin, and other contemporary artists. He began by acquiring pictures of the artists of the 1830 School, but these were dispersed at auction some two years ago. The sale was described as "La Collection de M. C. . . ." but the identity of the owner was no secret.

THE Chronique des Arts announces the proposed formation of a vast library in Paris for the exclusive use of artists, art-historians, and collectors.

THE regulation by which the Fitzwilliam Museum was closed on Fridays to all but members of the University and friends accompanying them has been rescinded, and the Museum will henceforth be open free to the public on Fridays as on other days.

In the last number of the Bolletino della R. Deputazione di Storia patria per l'Umbria Cav. Magherini-Graziani of Città di Castello publishes two documents which may throw a new and important light upon the early training of Raphael, namely, the contract (December 10th, 1500) and payment (September 13th, 1501) for the altarpiece of the Coronation of S. Niccolò da Tolentino, a work produced, as is well known, for the church of S. Agostino at Città di Castello. The contracting parties, according to these newly discovered records, were Andrea di Tomaso Baronico on the one part, and the painters Evangelista di Andrea da Pian di Meleto and Raffael di Giovanni Santi da Urbino on the other, who agree to furnish the altarpiece for the sum of thirty-three gold ducats.

New documents relating to this much-discussed lost work will be welcomed by all art-historians, but the circumstance that Raphael is here mentioned in connexion with Evangelista da Pian di Meleto, his senior by many years, is of the highest interest, for this painter is known to have been an assistant in the workshop of Giovanni Santi as early as 1483, and in subsequent years was intimately associated with Timoteo Viti. The significance of these facts for students of Raphael is obvious. Should any critic now be fortunate enough to discover authentic works by this forgotten artist, Evangelista da Pian di Meleto, there is every reason to hope that much light will be thrown on the question of Raphael's early training.

A DISCOVERY has recently been made at Cologne. The wings of the world-renowned "Claren altar" in the Cathedral have been proved to be the work of a nineteenth-century restorer. The altarpiece has always been regarded as one of the most important and representative examples of the Early School of the Lower Rhine, but, owing to its position in the Cathedral and to other causes, it has never been easy of access, and apparently no close and searching examination of the surface and technique of these panels has been attempted of late years.

SOME months ago, however, they were removed to the studio of the Cologne painter and restorer Herr Heinrich Fridt. It was then found that the surface painting on which students of the School of Cologne had for generations pinned their faith, was altogether modern in character. This was removed without difficulty; beneath the nineteenth-century repainting the work of earlier restorers was found; but at length the original compositions were reached. Here the importance of the discovery comes in, for the whole character of this work proves, it is said, that the paintings belong to an earlier period of art than that usually assigned to this altarpiece. Moreover, the types are said to show the closest connexion with certain heads in the Wallraf-Richartz Museum, i.e., the prophets from the Hansa-saal of the Rathaus. Thus there is some ground for connecting these fragments with the name of the mythical Meister Wilhelm. Are we within measurable distance of a solution of that much-debated question? It seems not improbable.

MUCH of what has been written during the last twenty years on the subject is likely to be overthrown by this unexpected development. On the other hand, the school of Cologne is likely to take a far higher place than that hitherto assigned to it among schools of painting; and its importance in the history of German art can scarcely be gainsaid if it can be established that an altarpiece of such magnitude, and such technical and artistic excellence, was produced by a master of the school at so early a date as circa 1370.

PROF. DÖRPFELD will, it is stated, retain his post in Athens till the end of this year, when he intends to return to Germany, and will probably devote himself to publishing the results of his excavations, which have extended over thirty years.

EXHIBITIONS.

SAT. (Feb. 6).—New Society of Water-Colour Painters, First Spring Exhibition, Private View, New Dudley Gallery.
— Original Etchings by E. M. Synge, A.R.E., Eugène Bujot, R.E., Nathaniel Sparks, A.R.E., G. Hayes, A.R.E., and others, Private View, Messrs. Connell's Galleries.
— Paintings and Drawings by the late Henry Osipov; Arild Rosenkrantz's Drawings illustrating Poe; Paintings by Mary McCrossan, Private View, Baillie Gallery.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

MENDELSSOHN CENTENARY CELEBRATIONS. THE first of the London commemorations of the hundredth anniversary of the birthday of Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy took place on Tuesday evening. At the fourth concert of the Philharmonic Society, at Queen's Hall, the greater part of the programme was devoted to him. A crisp, clear performance of the 'Scotch' Symphony was given under the direction of M. Camille Chevillard. In the book we were reminded that all the movements, closely connected, "are intended to run one into the other," yet breaks were made. The conductor, by raising his baton, might have shown his desire to respect the composer's intention, even though the public interrupted by applause. M. Pugno did all he could to infuse life into the G minor Pianoforte Concerto; but the music is old-fashioned, and not in any way representative of Mendelssohn at his best. The Violin Concerto ought to have been selected in preference. The pianist also played two of the 'Songs without Words' and the Capriccio in E minor.

An Orchestral Ballad, 'Grey Galloway,' by Mr. J. B. McEwen, was given for the first time. The composer had a kind of programme in his mind, connected with scenery in a corner of Scotland. The principal theme is bold and rugged, and a second, of soft character, romantic; while the short lively Finale, is quaint. On the whole, however, the music did not create a strong impression.

On Wednesday afternoon a special concert was given at Queen's Hall in honour of Mendelssohn, who was represented by his 'Midsummer Night's Dream' Overture, and the 'Hymn of Praise,' in the latter of which the Sheffield Amateur Musical Society took part. Their voices were bright and resonant, and under the stimulating direction of Mr. Henry J. Wood an excellent rendering was given of the choruses. The soloists were Mrs. Henry J. Wood, Miss Edith Miller, and Mr. Gervase Elwes. The programme included Sir Edward Elgar's Symphony, and the interpretation of the work, for the first time under the direction of Mr. Wood—independent as regards tempi, and occasionally overcharged with sentiment—was highly interesting.

In the evening the London Choral Society, under the direction of Mr. Arthur Fagge, gave a thoroughly sound performance of 'Elijah,' assisted by the London Symphony Orchestra. Sir Charles Santley sang the "Prophet" music with marked dramatic power and fervour; moreover, his voice was in very good order.

Musical Gossip.

LAST Saturday afternoon at the Symphony Concert, Queen's Hall, Mr. Granville Bantock conducted the first London performance of his Fantastic Poem 'The Pierrot of the Minute,' a work of which we noted the skill and charm, enhanced by masterly orchestration, when it was produced last autumn at the Worcester Festival. Madame Teresa Carreño played Beethoven's E flat Concerto with breadth and feeling, though at first there was a little uncertainty in the matter of technique.

MR. JOSEPH BENNETT published in The Daily Telegraph on Wednesday some fresh and interesting details concerning Mendelssohn. It is known that the composer, when in London in 1837, consulted with his friend Klingemann respecting a libretto for an oratorio on the subject of 'Elijah,' and Mr. Bennett has obtained from Prof. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy the contents of a draft libretto drawn up by Klingemann as the result of the consultation mentioned above. The superscription in Mendelssohn's hand is as follows: "Elijah (Klingemann) London, Sept., 1837. Draft." Mr. Bennett thinks that the insertion of Klingemann's name may have been "a sportive exaggeration of his services." We think he is right, for in a letter from Mendelssohn to Klingemann (January 9th, 1838), given in Mr. F. G. Edwards's 'History of Mendelssohn's "Elijah,"' the composer asks his friend to turn "our sketch" into verse, or, at any rate, to send "our 'plan' or 'sketch,' as we made it when last we met (with all remarks), copied."

WITH regard to the opera on 'The Tempest' which Lumley, director of Her Majesty's Theatre, in his prospectus of 1847, announced, with libretto by Scribe and music by Mendelssohn, a letter is given from Lumley to the composer (January 12th, 1847) in which the writer says: "I have forwarded your wishes to Scribe." It is known that Mendelssohn was dissatisfied with the liberties taken by Scribe with the poet's play, and therefore did not set music to it. Lumley in his letter says: "I am delighted you intend to end the first act with the chorus"; and that was evidently one of the composer's "wishes." He was also delighted at the plan of a Prologue and two acts. Now Scribe's libretto was set to music by Halévy, and produced at Her Majesty's Theatre in 1850, and the opera book published on that occasion consists of a Prologue and three acts; moreover, the first act does not end with the chorus; so this was no doubt the libretto submitted to Mendelssohn. In the opera book of 1850 is published a letter from Scribe to Lumley, Paris, December 24th, 1846, in which the former says: "I have done the utmost to respect the inspirations of your immortal Author," though the text scarcely bears out that statement. Again he remarks: "I have no doubt that this poem, confided, as it will be, by you to some eminent composer, will afford an occasion for an exalted and very great musical success." What Mendelssohn would have done with it we cannot say; Halévy's opera was a failure.

WE recently spoke of M. Édouard Fétis, son of F. J. Fétis, compiler of the 'Biographie Universelle des Musiciens.' The former, although aged ninety-eight, was until very recently in good health. On January 24th he slipped on frozen snow, and fell, sustaining injuries which unfortunately proved fatal. He died on the 31st.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

- SEN. Concert, 3.30, Royal Albert Hall.
 — Sunday Society Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.
 — Sunday League Concert, 7, Queen's Hall.
 MON.-SAT. (except Friday), Royal Opera, Covent Garden.
 TUES. Mr. Willy Burmeister's Violin Recital, 3, Queen's Hall.
 — Misses Lillian Griffith's and Monique Poole's Chamber Concert, 8.15, Steinway Hall.
 — Miss Helene Yung and Mr. R. Thynne's Vocal and Pianoforte Recital, 8.30, Bechstein Hall.
 WED. Misses Ward-Meyer's Violin and Pianoforte Recital, 8.15, Bechstein Hall.
 — Mr. Philip Cathie's Violin Recital, 8.15, St. James's Hall.
 — Mr. Donald Tovey's Concert, 8.30, Chelsea Town Hall.
 THURS. Broadwood Concert, 8.30, Aeolian Hall.
 — Miss Muriel Marcy's Concert, 8.30, Steinway Hall.
 FRI. Bohemian Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
 — Miss Hélène Dolmetsch and Mr. Healey's Concert, 8, Aeolian Hall.
 SAT. Miss Elena Gerhardt's Vocal Recital, 3, Bechstein Hall.
 — Queen's Hall Orchestra, 3, Queen's Hall.
 — Mr. Donald Tovey's Concert, 3.30, Chelsea Town Hall.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

WYNDHAM'S.—An Englishman's Home: a Play in Three Acts. By a Patriot.

POPULAR sentiment is not mistaken over the play which Major Guy Du Maurier, under the pen-name of "A Patriot," has written round the questions of national defence and the possibility of invasion. The piece does not depend for its appeal simply upon the patriotic emotions which it arouses, or upon the political and military problems which it offers to the playgoer. He would be a poor Englishman who was not impressed by the spectacle that it presents of a home in this island of ours overrun and shelled by foreign troops—of a purblind, but dogged English citizen shot, under martial law, for daring, though a civilian, to take up arms in defence of his hearth and country. He would be a strange patriot who did not weigh the moral it enforces as to the danger of leaving the protection of the nation to volunteer effort, or failed to give at least a hearing to what seems like a plea for universal service. But apart from such considerations this story of 'An Englishman's Home' has a claim on public attention because it deals with live ideas and with actual life, and makes out of a situation that is conceivable drama of a particularly tense kind.

Not for years have we had on our stage a play so impressive in its atmosphere of reality. Its strength depends on a rather horrible irony—on the contrast it draws between the apathy and facetiousness of a household given over to trifles, and the grimness of the fate that can be seen approaching, and finally overwhelming, these indifferentists. The family of the Browns, with their preoccupation with sport, their contempt for the volunteer soldier, their idea of the army as paid to save the civilian trouble, stands as a symbol of a current spirit in England; and their frivolity in the first act only sets in relief their blustering helplessness, and invitation of disaster in the later sections of the play. Here is a group of people whose leisure hours are entirely taken up with the prosecution of athletics, and the reading of football news and sporting records—whose attitude towards serious topics is expressed by an elderly householder who thinks the payment of taxes exhausts his duties to the State, and a young clerk always ready to air his Cockney humour at the expense of the one thoughtful member of the set—a citizen soldier. These are the persons whom Destiny, as understood by the dramatist, selects to be the victims of invasion—of what appears to them at first to be a preposterous joke; and it is the clerk who, with some sorry jest on his lips, tumbles down the first sacrifice to the furies of war.

The play no doubt is open to criticism on several points. It is possible to complain of the unfairness with which its author pictures the incompetence of a Volunteer force confronted with real enemies. It is easy to protest that not even in a dense fog could an army of invaders land in sufficient force on the coast of Essex. Experts may be left to settle these questions. It may also be urged that a youth so vulgar of soul, so objectionable in manners, as Major Du Maurier's clerk, belongs to a lower social grade than the comfort-loving Browns, and would scarcely have been admitted to their society. But what is certain is that the author has produced a drama that contains real types of English character, movement which is majestic amid all its farcical accessories, and scenes of pathos the force of which is heightened by the very homeliness, not to say grotesqueness, of their setting.

The piece obtains admirable interpretation at the hands of Mr. Charles Rock as the father of the family, Miss Elaine Inescourt, as his sympathetic daughter, Mr. Lawrence Grossmith as the clerk, Mr. Wontner as the citizen soldier, and Mr. E. W. Garden as a Volunteer officer no less fussy than incapable. But so good is the stage-management, so carefully is every detail of "business" arranged, that the play seems almost to act itself.

M. COQUELIN AINÉ.

FATE has dealt rather cruelly with M. Coquelin in the time which it has selected for his death. For seven or eight years he who was so great a talker had talked of hardly anything but 'Chantecler' and the glorious climax which his performance in M. Rostand's long-promised play was to provide for his career. 'Cyrano de Bergerac' had won him worldwide renown; 'Chantecler' was to round off his many triumphs. The dilatory poet had at last handed in his manuscript; the piece had already been put into rehearsal at the Porte St. Martin Theatre; and M. Coquelin, whose indisposition was not regarded seriously even by his doctors, was expected to join the company within a few days. He was staying at Pont aux Dames, that home for aged and impoverished actors on which, with characteristic munificence, he had lavished so much care and wealth; and it was there, on the 27th of last month, two days after his sixty-eighth birthday, that he succumbed to heart failure. So he was denied the chance which, as he once laughingly remarked, the part of Chantecler would offer, of making his exit with the rising sun.

Full as his stage life was of success, Benoit Constant Coquelin had to fight against considerable handicaps. The son of a provincial tradesman—his father had a baker's business in Boulogne-sur-Mer—there was always a certain bourgeois appearance about him, and to the end of his days he had a trick of putting his thumbs in the armholes of his waistcoat as he walked in the street. Nor was he favoured with good looks. The plainness of his features must have been a sore trial to him when young, especially that "nez en trompette" which was to be so serviceable in the part of Cyrano. But when once he reached the Conservatoire, where he joined Regnier's class, his progress was rapid. He made his début at the Comédie Française, as Gros-René in 'Dépit Amoureux,' when he was only nineteen years of age, and four years later he became a sociétaire. His earliest achievements were connected with the plays of Molière, and he boasted in later days that out of the full thirty he had appeared in twenty-seven. It was his Mascarille—that gloriously full-blooded example of the valet in masquerade—which established his reputation in Paris; but his Tartuffe, his Harpagon, and his Monsieur Jourdain were no less popular impersonations this side of the Channel—indeed, Molière's name for us had become inextricably associated with the art of M. Coquelin; his performances we came to regard as classical. But later authors owed him no less a debt than the master of comedy. He played Figaro and Don César de Bazan. He figured in M. Bergerat's 'Plus que Reine,' and gave a portrait of the unhappy poet-hero of M. Catulle Mendès's 'Scarron.' Sardou wrote for him his 'Thermidor'; and only a little while ago Coquelin made his last appearances in this country as the Abbé of another Sardou drama, 'L'Affaire des Poisons.' But if popularity supplies any test of an artist's efforts, then M. Rostand may claim in Cyrano to have furnished the comedian with his greatest part.

Comedian is surely the right term for M. Coquelin, though there have been many to hail him, on the strength of his Cyrano, as a romantic actor. In that part his astonishingly finished and varied elocution; his ringing, clarion-like voice, which could sink to a whisper and yet be heard; his suppleness and mastery of his resources; his energy and high spirits, cast a glamour on his audience; but on consideration few can think that he brought out all the emotional value of the later scenes. The interpreter deftly left the playgoer to supply the imagination and the pathos. It was the contention of Mr. Coquelin that the actor should always preserve his self-control and self-consciousness on the stage, and never allow himself to be mastered by his material, should be able to express sentiments which he did not feel. The profession of the player is divided over this question, but even opponents of Coquelin's views would admit that complete abandonment is only possible if you can count on the automatic action of the will. Coquelin never lost himself in his parts; the quality of his playing was intellectual, not emotional; he had rhetoric, but no passion; his genius was that of the comedian. An essential difference in methods and theories of acting doubtless accounted for Sarah Bernhardt's incisive judgment that Coquelin was a great actor rather than a great artist. Coquelin was an artist; as a character-actor and a humorist he had no rival in his age; in these capacities he certainly had magnetism. His critical faculty, his very self-detachment, helped him to build up his portraiture the more cunningly, and throughout his work there showed an abounding, almost boyish vitality. It was Coquelin who emerged from under every disguise, but a Coquelin exuberant and tingling with life. It is difficult to think of death in connexion with so vigorous a personality.

Dramatic Gossip.

MOLIÈRE'S 'L'Avare,' in a free English translation by Lady Gregory, was produced last week at the Abbey Theatre, Dublin. As in her former renderings of Molière's comedies, Lady Gregory has been successful in conveying the humour and the flavour of the original to a remarkable degree. The play was well acted by the Abbey Company, Miss Sarah Allgood appearing as Frosine.

CANON BEECHING points out that the words "schools and schoolmasters," quoted by us in our review of his book last week, should read "schools or schoolmasters," the point being made to distinguish Jonson and Drayton.

'THE GREEN-ROOM BOOK; OR, WHO'S WHO ON THE STAGE' for 1909, edited by Mr. John Parker, will make its appearance early this month. It is still increasing in bulk, and is a very useful book of reference. It will be published, as usual, by Messrs. Sealey Clark & Co.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—J. R. D.—W. J. T.—R. M. T.—H. B. F.—J. L'H.—A. W.—F. M. P.—Received.

P. L. S.—Not suitable for us. E. P.—Noted.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

We do not undertake to give the value of books, china, pictures, &c.

We cannot undertake to reply to inquiries concerning the appearance of reviews of books.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

	PAGE
AUTHORS' AGENTS	150
BAGSTER & SONS	179
BELL & SONS	176
CATALOGUES	150
CHATTO & WINDUS	153
DENT & CO.	151
EDUCATIONAL	149
EXHIBITIONS	149
HARPER & BROS.	155
HUTCHINSON & CO.	177
INSURANCE COMPANIES	179
LIBRACO LTD.	154
MACMILLAN & CO.	156
MAGAZINES, &c.	151
MISCELLANEOUS	149
MURRAY	156
NASH	156
NOTES AND QUERIES	178
PAUL & CO.	152
PRINTERS	150
PROVIDENT INSTITUTIONS	149
SALES BY AUCTION	150
SANATOGEN	154
SANDS & CO.	179
SITUATIONS VACANT	149
SITUATIONS WANTED	149
SOCIETIES	149
SONNENSCHNEIN & CO.	154
TYPE-WRITERS, &c.	150
WARD & LOCK	180

MESSRS. BELL'S BOOKS.

JUST PUBLISHED, demy 8vo, 8s. 6d. net.

LIFE OF DEAN COLET, Founder of St. Paul's School.

By the Rev. J. H. LUPTON, M.A.

Surmaster of St. Paul's School, and formerly Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge.

With an Appendix of some of his English Writings, and a Facsimile Portrait taken from the Engraving in Holland's 'Heroölogia.'

NEW AND REVISED EDITION.

"This is specialist's work, and first-rate of its kind. The book leaves us with a feeling of affection as well as esteem for Colet, who appears to have been sterner to himself than to others."—St. James's Gazette.

READY WEDNESDAY NEXT, crown 8vo, 6s. net.

HISTORY OF THE LATIN AND TEUTONIC NATIONS, 1494-1514.

By LEOPOLD VON RANKE.

A Revised Translation by G. R. DENNIS, B.A. (Lond.)
With an Introduction by EDWARD ARMSTRONG, M.A.
Fellow of Queen's College, Oxford.

A thoroughly revised translation of this famous work, which Lorentz called one of Ranke's "most original and instructive contributions to history," and which gives a general account of the history of Europe during a period of the highest interest and importance.

FOURTH EDITION NOW READY.

Royal 16mo, 1s. net.

THYSIA. An Elegy in Forty-five Sonnets.

"Sonnets which I hold to be of exquisite quality.... They have that pathos inscribed on marble in the best Greek epitaphs."—Mr. FREDERIC HARRISON, in the Nineteenth Century, November, 1908.

Fcap. 8vo, 5s. net.

CATULLI CARMINA.

Edited, with Copious Explanatory Notes, by CHARLES STUTTAFFORD.

"Intended for the class whose Latin has become rusty in consequence of the exigencies of a professional or business occupation. Well and wisely annotated for the purpose, and produced admirably."—Evening Standard.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Vol. IV. (containing Parts VII. and VIII.).

Small 4to, with 3 Maps and 2 Plans, 12s. net.

THE ITINERARY OF JOHN LELAND.

Newly Edited from the MSS. by LUCY TOULMIN SMITH.

This Edition will be completed in Five Volumes, of which Vol. I. (containing Parts I.-III.), price 18s. net, Vol. II. (Parts IV. and V.), price 12s. net, and Vol. III. (the 'Itinerary in Wales'), price 10s. 6d. net, are already published.

"The present edition was worth waiting for, and we are grateful to Miss Smith for the care she has bestowed on a congenial task. The result of Miss Smith's editing is eminently satisfactory. The 'Itinerary,' which is interspersed with extracts from charters and lives of the saints, abounds with lights on the vanishing feudal period, and there are few who will not find the indefatigable old antiquary an amusing and most instructive companion."—Westminster Gazette.

BELL'S CLASSICAL TRANSLATIONS.

Crown 8vo, sewed, 1s.

NEW VOLUME.

THE PERSIANS OF AESCHYLUS.

A Literal Prose Translation from a Revised Text by C. E. S. HEADLAM, M.A.

THE STANDARD AUTHORITY. WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY.

TWENTIETH-CENTURY EDITION.

Revised and Enlarged, with an Appendix of 25,000 Words, Phrases, and Definitions.

2,348 pages. 5,000 Illustrations.

WRITE FOR DETAILED PROSPECTUS, with Specimen Pages, hundreds of Opinions of Eminent Men, and prices in various styles of binding.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS,
York House, Portugal Street, W.C.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS

JUST READY

Richard JefferiesHis Life and Work

By EDWARD THOMAS

Author of 'The Heart of England,' &c.

In cloth gilt and gilt top, 10s. 6d. net

With Photogravure Portrait and other Illustrations

"Mr. Thomas paints a vivid picture of a rarely sensitive man. A work of great value, written with extraordinary knowledge and charm of style"
Daily Chronicle

"Every reader of this book will, we think, wish for more"—Daily Mail

King's FavouriteThe Love Story of Robert Carr and Lady Essex

By PHILIP GIBBS

In cloth gilt and gilt top, 16s. net

With Photogravure Plate and other Illustrations

"There is matter in this volume for the making of many novels, but we doubt whether any of them, even if the work of a master hand, could prove more interesting than the plain historical narrative which Mr. Gibbs with much researchful learning and literary power has composed for our entertainment"
Daily Chronicle

The most fascinating autobiography for many years

The Story of My Life

By ELLEN TERRY

In 1 large handsome Volume, 6s. net

Profusely Illustrated.

[2nd Edition]

"We were surprised to find Miss Terry the author of so good and so delightful a book as this frank, impulsive, generous characteristic 'story of her life.' The book is both delightful to read and a very valuable document"
Times

30th YEAR OF ISSUE

The Year's Art 1909

Compiled by A. C. R. CARTER

A concise Epitome of all matters relating to the Arts of Painting, Sculpture, Engraving, and Architecture, and to Schools of Design, which have occurred during the year 1908, together with information respecting the events of the year 1909

In cloth, 3s. 6d. net

With Full-Page Illustrations

"An indispensable 'guide book' to artists, art dealers, and art lovers in this country."
Daily Mail

JUST READY

The Life of Frederick the Great

By THOMAS CARLYLE

Abridged and Edited by

EDGAR SANDERSON, M.A.

In cloth gilt and gilt top

5s. net

With Portrait and Map

The Standard Concert Guide

A Handbook of the Standard Symphonies, Oratorios, Cantatas, and Symphonic Poems for the Concert-goer, with a useful List of the Principal English Musical Organisations

By GEORGE P. UPTON

Author of 'Musical Memories,' 'The Standard Operas,' &c.

In small crown 8vo, cloth gilt and gilt top, 5s. net

With 58 Portraits

[Feb. 16.]

Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette

By Lt.-Col. A. C. P. HAGGARD, D.S.O.

Author of 'Sidelights on the Court of France,' &c.

In 2 vols. Cloth gilt and gilt top, with Photogravure Plates and other Illustrations
24s. net

[In the press]

Richard SavageA Mystery in Biography

By STANLEY V. MAKOWER

Author of 'Perdita,' 'The Mirror of Music,' &c.

In 1 vol. Cloth gilt and gilt top

With Photogravure and other Illustrations

16s. net

[In the press]

Mr. PopeA Chronicle of His Life and Work

By GEORGE PASTON

Author of 'Sidelights on the Georgian Period,' &c.

In 2 vols

With Photogravures and other Illustrations

24s. net

3 IMPORTANT 6/- NOVELS

ON TUESDAY NEXT

Green Ginger

By ARTHUR MORRISON

This is a volume of stories by a famous writer, whose short stories have earned for him a great reputation. In this volume none but humorous stories are included.....all are marked by the cleverness one expects from this writer, and it is likely to prove one of his most popular books

The House called Hurrish

By RITA

"Rita more than holds her own with younger rivals. This book is a strong, moving, and thorough piece of work"
Morning Post

"A well-told story, exciting from start to finish"
Birmingham Post

ON FEBRUARY 23

The Royal End

By HENRY HARLAND

'The Royal End' is the last and only remaining unpublished novel of the late Mr. Henry Harland. Fastidious writer that he was, the present story will be found to be equal, if not superior, in merit to his best work

Messrs. HUTCHINSON & CO. announce the following Important 6/- Novels. Ready this month

THE MYSTERY OF THE MYRTLESEDGAR JEPSON
[Feb. 16]THE STRAWR. RAMSAY
[Feb. 16]A FETISH OF TRUTHEILEEN FITZGERALD
[Feb. 23]OUR ADVERSARY

M. E. BRADDON

THE ALTERNATIVE

A. F. SLADE

London: HUTCHINSON & CO. Paternoster Row

"LEARNED, CHATTY, USEFUL."—Athenæum.

"THAT DELIGHTFUL REPOSITORY OF FORGOTTEN LORE, 'NOTES AND QUERIES.'"

Edinburgh Review, October, 1880.

Every Saturday, of any Bookseller or Newsagent in England, price 4d.; or free by post to the Continent, 4½d.

NOTES AND QUERIES:

A MEDIUM OF INTERCOMMUNICATION FOR LITERARY MEN AND GENERAL READERS.

* * Subscription, 10s. 3d. for Six Months; 20s. 6d. for Twelve Months, including postage.

The NINTH SERIES of NOTES AND QUERIES, complete in 12 vols. (JANUARY, 1898, to DECEMBER, 1903), price 10s. 6d. each Volume, contains, in addition to a great variety of similar Notes and Replies, Articles of Interest on the following Subjects.

FIRST SELECTION.

AMERICANA.

President J. Adams's Biography—Sarah Flower Adams and Mrs. Beecher Stowe—The Alabama and Lord John Russell—Alewife, an American Fish—Discovery of America—Study of Dante in America—Genealogical Research in America—England and Scotland reproduced in America—America v. United States—Raleigh in America—British Suzerainty in South America—Losses in American Civil War—Value of American Diplomas and Degrees—American Orthography.

BIBLIOGRAPHY and LITERARY HISTORY.

Addison and Tennyson—Harrison Ainsworth—"Anne of Swansea," her Works—Anonym: Autonym—"Abbey of Kilkhampton"—"Butterfly's Ball and the Grasshopper's Feast"—"The Coming K"—"History of the Rod"—Junius's Letters—"Nova Solyma"—"Twelve Profits of Tribulation"—Matthew Arnold—Arnold of Rugby—H. S. Ashbee—Poet Laureate's Birthplace—Authors' Mistakes—Francis Bacon, his Mistakes in Classical Names—Philip James Bailey—Barclay's "Argenis"—Bibliography of the Bicycle—History of Bookselling and Publishing—Book-Sale Catalogues—Riming Warnings to Book-Borrowers—Books and Bookmen—E. B. and Robert Browning—Michael Bruce and Logan—Bunyan and the "Pilgrim's Progress"—Peculiar Words in Burns—Burton's "Anatomy"—Ode on Byron's Death.

BIOGRAPHY.

Bridget Abbot—Two George Abbots, contemporary M.P.s—Adam the Carthusian and Adam the Scot—Elizabeth Alkin, "Parliament Joan"—Annie of Tharau—General Benedict Arnold—Dr. Barry, Female Army Doctor—Beaconsfield's Birthplace—Cardinal Beaton's Reputed Marriage—Admiral Bligh—Bonaparte's Attempted Invasion of England—John Bond, two Puritan Divines—Caesar Borgia's Parentage—Cobham Brewer's Monument—Robert Bruce's Heart.

ECCLESIASTICAL MATTERS.

Collect for Advent Sunday—Alfriston Registers—Woodcarvings at Allhallows the Great, Upper Thames Street—Cushions on the Altar—Anchorites and Low Side Windows—Angels, their Traditional Representation—Martyr Bishop of Armagh—Christian Basilicas—Bell Inscriptions—Bell-ringers' Rimes—"Breeches," "Treacle," "Vinegar," and "Wicked" Bibles—Bishops' Signatures.

FOLK-LORE and POPULAR ANTIQUITIES.

Acervation, the Custom—Animals in People's Insides—Animals Tried and Sentenced—Apple Blossoms in Coffins—Wassailing the Apple Tree—White Gloves at Assizes—Cutting Baby's Nails—Baptismal and Marriage Superstitions—Bees—Bird of the Soufrière—Bluebeard, the Original—Borrowing Days—Building Customs.

GENEALOGY and HERALDRY.

Acts of the Apostles as a Christian Name—Agnes a Fateful Name—Algernon, its Origin—Alias in Family Names—Ancestors Defined—Soldier Ancestors—Andrews Family of Cornwall—Angier or Aungier Family—Anglo-Saxon Heraldry—Arbuthnot Family—Archer Family—Armigerous Families—Arms of Continental Cities, and of Boroughs and Dioceses—Foreign Arms in England—"Bar sinister"—Arms of Ulster in Baronet's Shield—Bear and Ragged Staff—Bibliography of Heraldry—Bulls in Coats of Arms—Borough English Succession—Bristow Family.

HISTORY: ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTTISH.

Abbot of Westminster's Plot, 1399—Long Administrations—South African War, Newspaper Correspondents Killed and Wounded—King Alfred, the Truth-teller and England's Darling—Lines on Queen Anne—Queues worn in the Army—Chain-mail in the Army—King Arthur's Crown—The Indian Mutiny and the Athenæum—Duchy of Berwick—Boadicea or Boudicca—Anne Boleyn's Execution—Battle of the Boyne—Britain as "Queen of Isles" and "Empress of the Main"—British Academy, its Foundation Members.

PHILOLOGY and GRAMMAR.

Short a v. Italian a—A or an before h sounded—Accent and Etymology—Accorder, its Derivation—Extraordinary Adjectives—Affection and Connexion, their False Forms—African Names, their Pronunciation and Derivation—Alamains, its Meaning—"Alright" for "All right"—Erroneous use of "And which"—Anglo-Hebrew Slang—Anglo-Saxon Speech—Anyone: Everyone—Appendicitis—Peculiar Use of "Arrived"—Barracked, Colonial Slang—Bask Language—Bayard, Horse-name—Bezique—Bird-eyed—Bletheramskite—Bonnet-laird: Cock-laird—Bride wain, its Meaning—Bridge, the Card Game, its Derivation.

PROVERBS and QUOTATIONS.

South Africa, "grave of great reputations"—"Devil walking through Athlone"—"A far cry to Loch Awe"—"All Cooper's ducks with me"—"All roads lead to Rome"—"Babies in the eyes"—"Save one's bacon"—"Baf week"—"Be the day weary"—"Beatific vision"—"Better to have loved and lost"—"Between the devil and the deep sea"—"Blood is thicker than water"—"Box Harry"—"Bristol look"—"Broaching the Admiral."

TOPOGRAPHY.

Achill Island, its History—"Gibraltar and Malta" at Albert Gate—Aldersgate, its Name—Aldgate and White chapel—Amen Court, its Name—Argh as Termination—Arundel and Ash, Place-names—Meaning of "Bailey"—Ball's Pond Road—Barras, Bayswater, Beaulieu, and Bibury as Place-names—Changes in Bream's Buildings.

JOHN C. FRANCIS and J. EDWARD FRANCIS, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, London, E.C.

WORKS BY WILLIAM THYNNE LYNN.

ELEVENTH EDITION NOW READY, price Two Shillings net.

CELESTIAL MOTIONS:

A Handy Book of Astronomy.

Eleventh Edition. With 5 Plates.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S., Member of the British Astronomical Association, formerly of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich,

Author of 'Remarkable Comets,' 'Remarkable Eclipses,' 'Astronomy for the Young,' &c.

"Well known as one of our best introductions to astronomy."—Guardian.

NINTH EDITION NOW READY, fcap. 8vo, cloth, price Sixpence net.

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES:

A Sketch of the most interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses, both in Ancient and Modern Times.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"The booklet deserves to continue in popularity. It presents a mass of information in small compass."—Dundee Advertiser.

THIRTEENTH EDITION, JUST OUT, price Sixpence, cloth.

REMARKABLE COMETS:

A Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

FIFTH EDITION, REVISED TO 1908, NOW READY.

Fcap. 8vo, cloth, price Sixpence net.

ASTRONOMY FOR THE YOUNG.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Nothing better of its kind has ever appeared."—English Mechanic.

London: SAMUEL BAGSTER & SONS, LIMITED, 15, Paternoster Row.

Insurance Companies.

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS, SICKNESS,
EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY, BURGLARY, AND
FIDELITY GUARANTEE RISKS

INSURED AGAINST BY THE

RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE CO.

Capital (fully subscribed), £1,000,000. Claims paid, £5,600,000.

64, CORNHILL, LONDON.

A. VIAN, Secretary.

NATIONAL

PROVIDENT

INSTITUTION

FOR

MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE.

Established 1835.

ASSURANCE AND INVESTMENT.

Write for Leaflet on net cost of Endowment Assurances,
48, Gracechurch Street, London, E.C.

Applications for Agencies invited.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BENJAMIN DISRAELI,
EARL OF BEACONSFIELD, 1820-1892.

NOTES AND QUERIES

for APRIL 29, MAY 13, 27, JUNE 10, 24, and JULY 8, 1893, Contains a

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD.

This includes KEYS to 'VIVIAN GREY,'

'CONINGSBY,' 'LOTHAIR,' and 'ENDYMION.'

Price of the Six Numbers, 2s.; or free by post, 2s. 3d.

JOHN C. FRANCIS and J. EDWARD FRANCIS,

Notes and Queries Office, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

HIGHEST AWARDS.

CORK, 1883. LIVERPOOL, 1886. PARIS, 1886. ADELAIDE, 1887

PARIS, 1889. CHICAGO, 1893. PARIS, 1900. ST. LOUIS, 1904.

FRANCO-BRITISH, 1908.

OLD BUSHMILLS.

Have you tried this—the Prize-Winning Whisky?

From all Wine Merchants.

Address of nearest Agent sent on application.

"OLD BUSHMILLS" DISTILLERY CO., LTD.,
20, Mark Lane, E.C.

Important reissue of Smith's Catalogue

*Raisonné, complete in 9 volumes, with the addition of 42 Photogravure
Plates for £5 5s. net.*MESSRS. SANDS & CO. BEG TO ANNOUNCE
A FACSIMILE REPRINT OFA CATALOGUE
RAISONNÉOF THE WORKS OF THE MOST EMINENT DUTCH, FLEMISH, AND FRENCH PAINTERS.A short Biographical Notice of the Artists, with a copious Description of their principal Pictures.

BY JOHN SMITH.

SMITH'S CATALOGUE RAISONNÉ, though scarce, is so well known that it is unnecessary to describe it further; its unique value to all who are Connoisseurs and Collectors of Old Pictures is recognized by every one interested in Painting.
42 Photogravure Plates, by Annan of Glasgow, of some of the best-known Paintings in the Galleries of Europe have been added, and the Edition is Facsimile in every respect with the original.Limited to 1,250 Sets in 9 vols. price 5*l.* 5*s.* net.

London: 23, BEDFORD STREET; and Edinburgh.

P. & O.

PLEASURE CRUISES FROM MARSEILLES.

(Rail and Steamship connexions from London.)

No. 1.—February 18 to March 17.;

GREECE,
SYRIA,
PALESTINE,
EGYPT, &c.

No. 2.—March 20 to April 16.

CONSTANTINOPLE
GREECE,
SICILY.

No. 3.—April 22 to May 20.

DALMATIA, VENICE,
CORFU, SICILY.

Fares for Cruises 1, 2, or 3, from 30 Guineas.

No. 4.—May 21 to June 12.

NAPLES, SICILY,
ALGIERS, SPAIN, &c.

Fares from 20 Guineas.

BY

P. & O. CRUISING YACHT VECTIS,
6,000 tons, 6,000 h.p.For Passage, Illustrated Handbooks, and all information, apply Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, Northumberland Avenue, W.C., or 122, Leadenhall Street, E.C., London.

NOTICE.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

THE VOLUME

JULY to DECEMBER, 1908,

WITH THE

INDEX,

Price 10*s.* 6*d.*,

IS NEARLY READY.

 The INDEX separately, price 6*d.*; by post, 6½*d.*Also Cases for Binding, price 1*s.*; by post, 1*s.* 2*d.*JOHN C. FRANCIS & J. EDWARD FRANCIS,
Notes and Queries Office, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

WARD, LOCK & CO.'S FICTION.

SIX SHILLINGS EACH.

THE LONG ARM.

By E. Phillips Oppenheim.

"I take a pride in recalling my long bookish friendship for the author of this strenuously imagined and nervously realistic story. It must be fifteen years since I first reviewed the work of E. Phillips Oppenheim—a long period in the life of either a novelist or critic. In such a space of time the former might be expected to have lost something of his fertility and grip, and the latter to have grown jaded. But taking up this excellently illustrated volume, I found myself as eager as ever over Mr. Oppenheim's vigorous fancy and crisp telling style."—Dundee Advertiser.

A BID FOR LOYALTY.

By James Blyth.

"Mr. Blyth has crammed enough excitement into his pages to satisfy the most satiated reader of fiction. The author has long been known as a writer with original ideas, but 'A Bid for Loyalty' is the best thing he has yet given us."—People's Saturday Journal.

A CRIME ON CANVAS.

By Fred M. White.

This is a story of mysterious crime, and it is interesting to recall that when published serially prizes were offered to readers who guessed the solution of the many mysteries divulged in the development of the story. It is a deeply engrossing tale.

PRINCE KARL.

By A. C. Gunter.

A story of dramatic and humorous interest, founded on the author's popular comedy of the same name—a play that achieved a big success a few years ago.

THE SIN OF ALISON DERING.

By L. G. Moberly.

Miss L. G. Moberly is making a big reputation for herself as a writer of strong emotional stories, and this story will add considerably to her popularity.

HIS FATHER'S HONOUR.

By David Christie Murray.

The late David Christie Murray was one of the most widely known journalists of the day, and the author of many popular novels. 'His Father's Honour' is one of the most engrossing stories.

A POACHED PEERAGE.

By Sir William Magnay.

'A Poached Peerage' is a dramatic story, quite out of the ordinary rut.

THE FEBRUARY

WINDSOR MAGAZINE

CONTAINS CONTRIBUTIONS BY

MAURICE HEWLETT
JUSTUS MILES FORMAN
CHARLES G. D. ROBERTS
DORA SIGERSON SHORTER
E. NESBIT, &c.

THE ART OF E. M. WARD, R.A.

With 23 Reproductions from the Artist's Pictures, including a Special Plate of

"DR. JOHNSON IN THE ANTE-ROOM AT LORD CHESTERFIELD'S."

THE ROMANCE OF TRADE

as Typified by the World's Products in the Warehouses at the London Docks, forms the Subject of an Article, accompanied by many interesting Photographs.

MUSIC LOVERS WILL BE INTERESTED IN AN ARTICLE ON

Dr. HANS RICHTER.

THE WINDSOR MAGAZINE.

February, 6d.

WARD, LOCK & CO., LIMITED, Salisbury Square, London, E.C.

THE ATHENÆUM

MAR 1 1909
UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 4242.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1909.

PRICE
THREEPENCE.
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER.

Societies.

ROYAL HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

(Incorporated by Royal Charter.)

The ANNIVERSARY MEETING will be held at 7, SOUTH SQUARE, GRAY'S INN, W.C., on THURSDAY, February 18, at 5 P.M., when the PRESIDENT will deliver an ADDRESS.

H. E. MALDEN, Hon. Sec.

THE FOLK-LORE SOCIETY.—The NEXT MEETING of the SOCIETY will be held at 22, ALBEMARLE STREET, PICCADILLY, on WEDNESDAY, February 17, at 8 P.M., when a Paper, entitled 'Head-Hunting Tribes in the Hills of Assam,' will be read by Mr. S. R. HODSON. The Paper will be illustrated by Lantern Slides.

11, Old Square, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.,
February 8, 1909.

F. A. MILNE, Secretary.

GEOLOGICAL SOCIETY OF LONDON.

The ANNIVERSARY MEETING of this SOCIETY will be held at the SOCIETY'S APARTMENTS, BURLINGTON HOUSE, on FRIDAY, February 19, at 3 o'clock.

The Fellows and their Friends will DINE together at the WHITEHALL ROOMS, HOTEL METROPOLE, at 7.30 P.M. Tickets to be obtained at the Society's Apartments.

LONDON TOPOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.—The TENTH ANNUAL MEETING of this SOCIETY will be held on FRIDAY, February 19, 1909, at 5 o'clock P.M., in the LECTURE THEATRE, BURLINGTON GARDENS, W.

The President of the Society, the Right Hon. the EARL OF ROSEBURY, K.G., will deliver the ANNUAL ADDRESS.

Invitations to the Meeting may be obtained from the Secretary, BERNARD GOMME, 32, George Street, Hanover Square, W.

Exhibitions.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF ARTS.

WINTER EXHIBITION.

Open from 9 A.M. to 6 P.M. Admission 1s.
Catalogue, 6d. Season Ticket, 5s.

DRAWINGS AND CARICATURES by the late HENRY OSPOVAT, and DRAWINGS illustrating EDGAR ALLAN POE by ARILD ROSENKRANTZ.—THE BAILLIE GALLERY, 13, Bruton Street, W. 10-6.

ROWLANDSON DRAWINGS, also ETCHINGS by D. S. MACLAUGHLAN and H. MULREADY STONE. Exhibition now open at Mr. R. GUTENST'S, 16, King Street, St. James's, S.W. 10-6 Daily. Admission 1s.

Provident Institutions.

THE BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Founded 1837.

Patron—HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.
Invested Capital, 30,000l.

A UNIQUE INVESTMENT

Offered to London Booksellers and their Assistants.

A young man or woman of twenty-five can invest the sum of Twenty Guineas (or its equivalent by instalments), and obtain the right to participate in the following advantages:—

FIRST. Freedom from want in time of Adversity as long as need exists.

SECOND. Permanent Relief in Old Age.

THIRD. Medical Advice by eminent Physicians and Surgeons.

FOURTH. A Cottage in the Country (Abbots Langley, Hertfordshire) for aged Members, with garden produce, coal, and medical attendance free, in addition to an annuity.

FIFTH. A furnished house in the same Retreat at Abbots Langley for the use of Members and their families for holidays or during convalescence.

SIXTH. A contribution towards Funeral expenses when it is needed.

SEVENTH. All these are available not for Members only, but also for their wives or widows and young children.

EIGHTH. The payment of the subscriptions confers an absolute right to these benefits in all cases of need.

For further information apply to the Secretary MR. GEORGE LARNER, 28, Paternoster Row E.C.

Educational.

BEDFORD COLLEGE FOR WOMEN

(UNIVERSITY OF LONDON).

YORK PLACE, BAKER STREET, LONDON, W.

The HALF TERM BEGINS on THURSDAY, February 18, 1909. Lectures are given in preparation for all Examinations of the University of London in Arts, Science, and Preliminary Medicine for the Teachers' Diploma, London; for the Teachers' Certificate, Cambridge; and for the Cambridge Higher Local Examination. Special Course of Scientific Instruction in Hygiene, recognized by the Sanitary Inspectors' Examination Board.

Six Laboratories are open to Students for Practical Work. Students may attend the Art School who are not taking other Subjects at the College.

A single Course in any Subject may be attended. Regular Physical Instruction is given, free of cost, to Students who desire it, by a fully qualified Woman Teacher.

Students can reside in the College.

Full particulars on application to THE PRINCIPAL.

DEPARTMENT FOR PROFESSIONAL TRAINING IN TEACHING.

Head of the Department, Miss MARY MORTON, M.A. Students are admitted to the Training Course in OCTOBER and JANUARY. Entrance Scholarship Applications should be sent to the Head of the Department.

LYCEUM ALPINUM IN ZUOZ,

UPPER ENGADINE, SWITZERLAND. 5,700 ft. above sea level. First-class BOARDING-SCHOOL for Forty-five Boys. Age of entry, 11-16. Excellent, bracing, health resort. Classical and Modern Section. Workshop, Gymnasium, Laboratory. Preparation for the Zürich Polytechnic and for Matriculation. Staff of Thirteen Masters, including Eight Graduates.

Four Diligence Services Daily to and from St. Moritz and Bevers (nearest Railway Station).

WINTER TERM BEGINS on JANUARY 4. French or German Prospectus and Curriculum post free on application to THE SECRETARY.

THE DOWNS SCHOOL, SEAFORD, SUSSEX.

Head Mistress—Miss LUCY ROBINSON, M.A. (late Second Mistress, St. Felix School, Southwold). References: The Principal of Bedford College, London; The Master of Peterhouse, Cambridge.

CHRIST'S COLLEGE, BLACKHEATH, S.E.

F. W. AVELING, M.A. B.Sc.

Preparation for Universities and Professions.

Stress on Modern Languages and Science.

EDUCATION.

Parents or Guardians desiring accurate information relative to the CHOICE of SCHOOLS for BOYS or GIRLS or

TUTORS in England or Abroad

are invited to call upon or send fully detailed particulars to

MESSRS. GABBITAS, THRING & CO.,

who for more than thirty years have been closely in touch with the leading Educational Establishments.

Advice, free of charge, is given by Mr. THRING, Nephew of the late Head Master of Uppingham, 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

Situations Vacant.

CITY OF LONDON SCHOOL.

WANTED, a CLASSICAL MASTER, able also to teach Mathematics in a Middle Form. He will be required to attend about Thirty Hours a Week, of which Two may be Playground duty.

The Salary will be 200l. a year, increasing to 350l. a year.

Candidates for the appointment, whose age must not exceed 35, are requested to forward their applications, on the Official Form, to be obtained at the School, accompanied with a copy of Testimonials as to qualification and character, not later than TUESDAY, February 23, to A. J. AUSTIN, Secretary, at the School, Victoria Embankment, E.C.

Selected Candidates will be duly communicated with.

CAMBRIDGESHIRE EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

CAMBRIDGE AND COUNTY SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

ASSISTANT MISTRESS REQUIRED, chiefly for History, Literature, and Latin. Commencing Salary 130l. per annum, non-resident. Duties to commence APRIL 27 NEXT.—Forms of Application, which should be returned before FEBRUARY 24, 1909, can be obtained of the undersigned.

AUSTIN KEEN, Education Secretary.

County Offices, Cambridge.

Situations Wanted.

UNIVERSITY GRADUATE, with special qualifications in Natural History Sciences, desires position as ASSISTANT in RESEARCH LABORATORY or MUSEUM. Has lately returned from Expedition Abroad.—Address to ALPHA BETA, 6, Park Road, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

TO PUBLISHERS.—UNIVERSITY

GRADUATE, young, with Journalistic Experience, Classics, several European Languages, special knowledge of Modern Literature, desires SITUATION with PUBLISHING FIRM.—Apply Y., Box 1569, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

SECRETARIAL POST WANTED. Thorough

French and Italian. Good Reader. Used to Translating aloud at sight. Degree (Scotch). Well read Modern Literature. Shorthand, Typing.—Box 1566, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

POST of SECRETARY DESIRED, either

Resident or Non-Resident, by a LADY. Shorthand Typist, well trained; Good French, Book-keeping, &c.—Address READER, 18, Princes Square, London, W.

LIBRARIAN OR SECRETARY.—YOUNG

MAN, well educated, with good knowledge of French and German and some acquaintance with Spanish and Italian, desires POSITION. Experience in Foreign Correspondence, and special knowledge of Foreign Publications.—Box 1565, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Miscellaneous.

THE RECTOR OF ST. ANNE'S, SOHO,

RECOMMENDS a LADY experienced as Secretary to Clergyman, and to assist in the Work of a Parish. Shorthand Typist, Trained Nurse, Musical. London preferred.—Apply RECTOR, 28, Soho Square, W.

LADY H—recommends PRIVATE SECRE-

TARY or LIBRARIAN. Member Lib. Assoc. Two years with eminent Bibliographer. Permanent or Temporary Secretarial Work. Bibliographical Catalogues of Old or Modern Books. Museum Work undertaken. Highest recommendations.—Box 1564, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Yearly Subscription, free by post, Inland, 15s. 3d.; Foreign, 18s. Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class matter.

THE ATHENÆUM is published on FRIDAY AFTERNOON at 2 o'clock.

PUBLIC-HOUSE REFORM.—The People's Re-

freshment House Association, Ltd., founded by the Bishop of Chester, manages 68 Licensed Inns. Ask for List and Report. APPLY FOR 12 SHARES. 5 per cent paid since 1899.

P.R.H.A., Broadway Chambers, Westminster.

TRANSLATIONS INTO ENGLISH from

French, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, German, Dutch, Danish, Norwegian, and Swedish.—W. T. CURTIS, 10, Haringey Park, Crouch End, N.

TO PUBLISHERS, AUTHORS, SECRE-

TARIES, &c.—INDEXING, CATALOGUING, STATISTICAL WORK, &c., undertaken by EXPERT.—Box 1567, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

WORK WANTED IN INDEXING, CATA-

LOGUING, BIBLIOGRAPHY, &c. Good experience. Spanish, Italian, and French Translated. Research Work of any kind undertaken.—Address ALPHA, care Davies & Co., Advertising Agents, Finch Lane, Cornhill.

TRANSLATIONS (into and from English).

Research, and other Literary Work. French, German, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, Dutch. Varied experience. Moderate terms.—Miss STRACK, 35, Mall Chambers, Kensington, W.

RESEARCH, Legal, Genealogical and Literary,

UNDERTAKEN by EXPERTS. Messrs. SALZMANN and RAMSAY, 5, St. John's Avenue, Friern Barnet, N.

LITERARY RESEARCH undertaken at the British Museum and elsewhere on moderate terms. Excellent Testimonials.—A. B., Box 1062, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

THE DAUGHTER of a well-known Literary

Man is desirous of meeting with a LADY and GENTLEMAN to SHARE her HOUSE; or would take Boarders. Rooms Furnished or Unfurnished. The House is situated on South Norwood Hill, five minutes from Norwood Junction Station, close to the Stanley Halls (where Concerts, Lectures, &c., are continually given), near the Public Library, and within a walk of the Crystal Palace, or One Station from it. Norwood is regarded as one of the healthiest places round London, and was at one time a well-known health resort.—Address C. M., Box 1562, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

TRAINING FOR PRIVATE SECRETARIAL

WORK AND INDEXING.

THE SECRETARIAL BUREAU,

52A, CONDUIT STREET, BOND STREET, LONDON, W.

Founded 1895.

Telephone: 2426 GERRARD.

MISS PETHERBRIDGE (Nat. Sci. Tripos).

EMPLOYED by THE INDIA OFFICE AS—Indexer of the East India Company's Records, the new edition of the Imperial Gazetteer of India; Dutch and Portuguese Translator.

The Drapers' Company's Records Catalogued and Arranged.

The Library of the Rt. Hon. W. H. Long M.P., Catalogued and Arranged.

INDEXER OF—The Records of the County Borough of Cardiff; The Warrington Town Records; The Blue Books of the Royal Commissions on: London Traffic, The Supply of Food in Time of War, Motor Cars, Canals and Waterways, Coast Erosion, Shipping Rings; and of the Committees on International Exhibitions, National Guarantee for War Risks of Shipping, Oriental Studies; The Minutes of the Education Committee of the Somerset County Council.

MISS PETHERBRIDGE trains from Three to Six Pupils every year for Private Secretarial and Special Indexing Work. The training is one of Apprenticeship, Pupils starting as Junior Members of the Staff and working up through all the Branches. It is practical, on actual work, each Pupil being individually coached. The training consists of Indexing—which includes Research Work and Precise Writing—Shorthand, Type-Writing, Stenotypy, and Business Training.

THE TECHNIQUE OF INDEXING. By MARY PETHERBRIDGE. 2s. 9d. post free.

Type-Writers, &c.

TYPEWRITER.

KINDLY NOTE CHANGE OF ADDRESS.

MISS E. M. TIGAR,

10, MAITLAND PARK VILLAS, Haverstock Hill, N.W.

TYPE-WRITING 9d. per 1,000 words; Carbons

3d. French and German Type-writing 1s. per 1,000. Translations. Duplicating 3s. 100 Copies (quarto), 15s. per 1,000. Best work, accuracy, and promptitude.—G. WALKER, 14, Park Road, New Cross, S.E.

NO EXTRAS WHATEVER!—TYPE-

WRITING 7d. 1,000 words. Duplicating 3s. 100 Sheets, accurately, neatly, and promptly executed.—JOSEPH GROOM, 145, Sandringham Road, Dalston, N.E.

TYPE-WRITING OF EVERY DESCRIPTION
by EXPERT, 8d. per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies, 3d. per 1,000 words. Accuracy and prompt return guaranteed. Reliable references.—NORA DICKINSON, 1, Sackville Gardens, Ilford.

AUTHORS' MSS., 9d. per 1,000 words. Sermons, Plays, and all kinds of TYPE-WRITING carefully done at home (Remington). Good paper. Orders promptly executed. Duplicating from 3s. 6d. per 100.—M. L. L., 13, Edgeley Road, Clapham, S.W.

AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS, STORIES, PLAYS, ESSAYS TYPE-WRITTEN with complete accuracy, 9d. per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies guaranteed. References to well-known Writers.—M. STUART, Allendale, Kynherley Road, Harrow.

TYPE-WRITING undertaken by highly educated Women (Classical Tripos; Cambridge Higher Local; Modern Languages). Research, Revision, Translation, Shorthand, Dictation Room.—THE CAMBRIDGE TYPE-WRITING AGENCY, 10, Duke Street, Adelphi, W.C.

TYPE-WRITING, 9d. per 1,000 words. All kinds of MSS. accurately typed. Clear Carbon Copies, 3d. per 1,000. References to well-known Authors. Oxford Higher Local. Tel. 1272. Richmond P.O.—M. KING, 24, Forest Road, Kew Gardens, S.W.

Catalogues.

PUBLISHERS' REMAINDERS.

Bookbuyers should write for
GLAISHER'S CATALOGUE OF REMAINDERS,
which contains Books in all Departments of Literature.
A large and constantly varying Stock always on hand.
Great Reductions in Price.
WILLIAM GLAISHER, LTD.
Remainder and Discount Booksellers,
265, HIGH HOLBORN, LONDON.

CATALOGUE No. 50.—Drawings by Turner, Prout, Ruskin, &c.—Turner's Liber Studiorum and other Engravings—Proofs touched by Turner—Constable's English Landscape—Etchings by Whistler—Japanese Colour Prints—Illustrated Books. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church Terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

ANCIENT AND MODERN COINS.—Collectors and Antiquarians are invited to apply to SPINK & SON, Limited, for Specimen Copy (gratis) of their NUMISMATIC CIRCULAR. The finest Greek, Roman, and English Coins on View and for Sale at Moderate Prices.—SPINK & SON, Limited, Experts, Valuers, and Cataloguers, 16, 17, and 18, Piccadilly, London, W. Established upwards of a Century.

CATALOGUE OF FRENCH BOOKS, at greatly reduced prices. I. PHILOSOPHY. II. RELIGION. III. HISTORY. IV. POETRY. DRAMA. MUSIC. V. BEAUX-ARTS. VI. GEOGRAPHY. VII. MILITARY. VIII. FICTION. IX. GENERAL LITERATURE.
DULAU & CO. 37, Soho Square, London, W.

FIRST EDITIONS OF MODERN AUTHORS, including Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, Ainsworth; Books illustrated by G. and R. Cruikshank, Phiz, Rowlandson, Leech, &c. The largest and choicest Collection offered for Sale in the World. CATALOGUES issued and sent post free on application. Books Bought.—WALTER T. SPENCER, 27, New Oxford Street, London, W.C.

JUST ISSUED.
PROBSTHAIN'S ORIENTAL CATALOGUE.
No. 14. BUDDHIST CATALOGUE.
With a Section on other Eastern Religions, and a Supplement; Sets of Oriental Periodicals.
PROBSTHAIN & CO. 41, Great Russell Street, W.C.

BRIGHTON BOOK CIRCULAR, No. 147, shortly to be published, will contain a number of Items from the Library of Lord Sheffield, many relating to America, several with fine Book-Plates. Will be sent for a Stamp. Names of Bookbuyers solicited.—WILLIAM J. SMITH, 41-3, North Street, Brighton.

BOOKS.—ALL OUT-OF-PRINT and RARE BOOKS on any subject SUPPLIED. The most expert Bookfinder extant. Please state wants and ask for CATALOGUE. I make a special feature of exchanging any Saleable Books for others selected from my various Lists. Special List of 2,000 Books I particularly want post free.—EDW. BAKER'S Great Bookshop, 14-16, John Bright Street, Birmingham. Rhead's Staffordshire Pots and Potters, illus., 21s., for 10s. 6d.; Ainsworth's Novels, 20 vols. 35s.; Burke's Peerage, 1907, 24s.

Authors' Agents.

THE AUTHOR'S AGENCY.—Established 1879.
The interests of Authors capably represented. Agreements for Publishing arranged. MSS. placed with Publishers.—Terms and Testimonials on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHESE, 24, Paternoster Row.

MR. GEORGE LARNER, Accountant and Licensed Valuer to the Bookselling, Publishing, Newspaper, Printing, and Stationery Trades. Partnerships Arranged. Balance Sheets and Trading Accounts Prepared and Audited. All Business carried out under Mr. Larner's personal supervision.—23, 29, and 30, Paternoster Row, E.C., Secretary to the Booksellers' Provident Institution.

Printers.

ATHENÆUM PRESS.—JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Printer of the Athenæum, Notes and Queries, &c., is prepared to SUBMIT ESTIMATES for all kinds of BOOK, NEWS, and PERIODICAL PRINTING.—13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Sales by Auction.

A selected Portion of the Library of the Right Hon. LORD POLWARTH.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C. on MONDAY, February 15, and Following Day at 1 o'clock precisely, an interesting COLLECTION of valuable and rare BOOKS and PAMPHLETS selected from the LIBRARY of the Right Hon. LORD POLWARTH (of Mertoun House, Berwick), including an extensive Series of Civil War Tracts and Newspapers—rare Americana—Books of Travel and on Trade—East Indies—Broadside—Proclamations—Virgil's Aeneid, printed by Caxton—Rare Old English Black-Letter Books—Corte di Pavia, Il Cavalazzo, Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester's Copy—Series of Maps, Charts, and Plans of Battles—American Maps—Penn's Laws for Pennsylvania, Original Manuscript—Cases of Appeal in the Scottish Courts—Engraved English and French Portraits, &c.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

Engravings and Drawings.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C. on WEDNESDAY, February 17, at 1 o'clock precisely, ENGRAVINGS and DRAWINGS (Framed and in the Portfolio), including the COLLECTION of the late GEORGE SMITH, Esq., F.S.A., comprising a fine Impression, in the rare First State, of the Portrait of Lucas Vorsterman, etched by Sir A. Vandyck—the Baby Pack, by H. B. Chalon, after W. Ward—Mezzotint Portraits after Sir J. Reynolds, &c.—Drawings in Water-Colours, by J. Varley, D. M. Serres, R. Westall, W. Vandervelde and others; the Property of the late JAMES GIBSON HAMILTON STARKE, Esq., of Troqueur Holm, whose Wife was Grandniece of Sir Thomas Lawrence, P.R.A.; comprising Miss Croker, by S. Cousins, after Sir T. Lawrence, Proof—Countess Gower and Child, by and after the same, Proof—a Collection of the Works of Sir T. Lawrence, by different Engravers, with Biographical Notices—other Portraits after Sir T. Lawrence, by S. Cousins, F. C. Lewis, S. W. Reynolds, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Library of the late Sir JAMES T. KNOWLES, K.C.V.O. and a portion of the Library of D. R. CLARK, Esq., M.A. F.S.A. Scot.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C. on THURSDAY, February 18, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, including the LIBRARY of the late Sir JAMES T. KNOWLES, K.C.V.O. (sold by order of the Executors); a PORTION of the LIBRARY of D. R. CLARK, Esq., M.A. F.S.A. Scot.; a PORTION of the LIBRARY of the late JAMES BOLTON, Esq., of Storrs Hall (the Property of ANNABELLA LADY BOUGHEY), and other Properties, comprising Works on the Fine Arts—First Editions of English and Foreign Authors—Americana—Books of Emblems, Portraits, and Caricatures—Book-Plates, &c.—Arabian Nights, Villon Society—The Germ, 1850—Burlington Fine Arts Club Publications—Le Pautre, Œuvres d'Architecture—Thackeray, Works, Original Library Edition, 22 vols.—Early English Text Society's Publications—Shakespeare, edited by Payne Collier—Works illustrated by G. Cruikshank—Works by Sir Thomas More—Westmacott's English Spy—Dugdale's Monasticon Anglicanum, 1849, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The valuable Collection of Autograph Letters, the Property of J. STODDART, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C. on MONDAY, February 22, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, the valuable COLLECTION of AUTOGRAPH LETTERS, HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS and MANUSCRIPTS, the Property of J. STODDART, Esq., including J. Addison, D. Garrick, E. Kean, Mrs. Siddons, T. Gainsborough, Sir W. Scott, C. Dickens, and others—important Letters of Lord Nelson, and a fine collection of Nelson Letters, Portraits, Engravings, Relics, &c., in a volume—some interesting Autograph Music Scores—Collections of Autographs in Albums from the Toole Sale—a Small Library of Books.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of Greek, Roman, Byzantine, Mediæval and Modern, Foreign, Oriental, &c., Coins and Medals, the Property of M. LE COMTE PIERRE DE VIRY.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C. on WEDNESDAY, February 24, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the COLLECTION of GREEK, ROMAN, BYZANTINE, MEDIÆVAL and MODERN, FOREIGN, ORIENTAL, &c., COINS and MEDALS, in Gold, Silver, and Bronze, and an important Louis XIV. Cabinet by Boule, formed in the Eighteenth Century by M. de Montcau, Conseiller au Parlement de Grenoble, and now sold by order of the present owner, M. LE COMTE PIERRE DE VIRY, Château de Viry (Haute-Savoie), France.

May be viewed two days prior. Illustrated Catalogues may be had.

Engravings and Drawings.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C. on FRIDAY, February 26, at 1 o'clock precisely, ENGRAVINGS, DRAWINGS, &c. (Framed and in the Portfolio), comprising Fancy Subjects—Mezzotint and other Portraits, some suitable for extra-illustrating—Engravings and Etchings by and after Old Masters—Woodcuts—Miscellaneous Parcel Lots, &c.—a large Collection of Small Views, Maps, Plans, &c., by different Engravers, illustrating Ancient London, mounted in Six Folio Scrap-books—Arundel Society Publications—and a few Drawings, Oil Paintings, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

MR. DOWELL will SELL by AUCTION, within his Rooms, No. 18, GEORGE STREET, EDINBURGH, on WEDNESDAY, February 17, and Two Following Days, at 12 o'clock, the valuable LIBRARY of BOOKS which belonged to the late I. IRVINE SMITH, Esq., embracing Art, Poetry, History, Natural History, Antiquarian and General Literature, rare First Editions, and Editions de Luxe, including Armstrong's Raeburn and Turner—Exposition of the Works of Turner from the Writings of Ruskin, edited by Wedmore—Michel's Rembrandt (Subscriber's Copy)—Holmes's Specimens of Royal Bookbinding—Oriental Carpets, English Edition—Robinson's Eastern Carpets—Burlington Fine Arts Club Publications—Cruikshankiana, including Sunday in London, Scott's Demonology, and Defoe's Robinson Crusoe—First Editions of Thackeray, Dickens, George Eliot, Swinburne, Rossetti, and Morris in Pristine State—Set of the Aldine Poets—First Edition of Bewick's British Birds, beards, uncut—Robson's Grampian Mountains—Cokayne's Complete Peerage—Set of Punch which belonged to Horace Mavhew, including numerous Holograph Letters and Sketches from 'Punch' Celebrities—Walpole, Lecky, Froude, and Green's Historical, &c.; also a Collection of Holograph Letters and MSS. from Thackeray, Carlyle, Sir Walter Scott, Cardinal Newman and others, including Original MS. of Thackeray's First "Roundabout Paper" in the 'Cornhill'.

Catalogue on application.

Valuable Miscellaneous Books.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION on THURSDAY, February 18, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock, VALUABLE MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, including Carey's Life in Paris and Ireland's Napoleon, 4 vols., coloured plates by Cruikshank—Library Editions of Ben Jonson, Fielding, Smollett, Scott (the Edinburgh Edition), Thackeray (Original Library Edition), Lever (Copyright Edition), Balzac, and others—Florio's Montaigne, 1632, and other Books in Old English Literature—Behmen's Works, 4 vols.—a Small Collection of Books by or relating to Dr. Johnson, including two fine Sets of the Complete Works (the Property of a Gentleman)—First Editions of Shelley, Scott, Lever, Dickens, Stevenson, &c.—Creighton's Queen Elizabeth, Japan Paper Copy—Owen Jones' Alhambra, 2 vols.—and other Architectural Books—an extensive Collection of Books relating to India, including the Writings of Fergusson, Prinsep, Coleman, Muir, Hardy, Monier-Williams, Max Müller, and others—Angas's South Australia, Illustrated—Standard Works in History, Theology, Travel, and General Literature.

To be viewed and Catalogues had.

Curiosities.

TUESDAY, February 16, at half-past 12 o'clock.
ETHNOLOGICAL SPECIMENS from New Guinea, Vancouver, New Zealand, and other Parts—a choice Collection of Baxter Prints, from various Private Collections—Chinese and Japanese Carvings, Bronzes, Porcelain, &c.—Pictures, Prints, &c.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will offer the above for SALE by AUCTION at his Rooms, 33, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

On view day prior, 10 to 4, and morning of Sale. Catalogues on application.

STEVEN'S AUCTION ROOMS. Estab. 1760.

Important Sale of British Lepidoptera.

TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY, February 23 and 24, at 1 o'clock.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will offer for SALE by AUCTION, at his Rooms, 33, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C., the FIRST PORTION of the valuable and extensive COLLECTION of BRITISH LEPIDOPTERA formed by the late T. MADDISON, Esq., F.E.S. The Collection is particularly rich in Rare and Extinct Species.

Catalogues on application.

Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION at their Galleries, 47, Leicester Square, W.C., at the END of FEBRUARY, BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, including a Library removed from Queen's Gate, comprising Standard Works in Library Editions—valuable First Editions—Works on Natural History, Sport, the Drama, and Fine Arts, &c.

Catalogue in preparation.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King Street, St. James's Square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On FRIDAY, February 19, PORCELAIN of the late Mrs. ARTHUR BRISTOWE, and Porcelain and Decorative Furniture from various Sources.

On SATURDAY, February 20, ANCIENT and MODERN PICTURES, the Property of a GENTLEMAN, and others

4, WOODVILLE TERRACE, GRAVESEND.

Important Sale of a large Collection of Books, including scarce and valuable Works on Kent and other Counties, Prints, Cuttings, &c., together with Modern and Antique House Appointments, China, Silver-Plate, and valuable Prints.

MR. ROBERT MATTHEWS will SELL by AUCTION, on the Premises, on WEDNESDAY, February 17, and Following Days at half-past 10 o'clock precisely each day, the BOOKS, CHINA, SILVER-PLATE, valuable PRINTS, and MODERN and ANTIQUE HOUSE APPOINTMENTS.

May be viewed on MONDAY and TUESDAY, February 15 and 16, from 9 o'clock in the morning. Catalogues of the Auctioneer, 17, King Street, Gravesend, 16, Cliff-town Road, Southend-on-Sea, and 77, New Road, Grays. Telephone, Gravesend, 998. Southend, 178.

WILLIAM BEMROSE, F.S.A., DECEASED, ELMHURST, DERBY.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE FORTHCOMING SALE of the valuable and rare COLLECTION of EARLY ENGLISH PORCELAIN, Objects of Art of the Sixteenth, Seventeenth, and Eighteenth Centuries—Limoges and Battersea Enamels—European and Oriental Porcelain, Rijouerie—choice Collection of Oil Paintings—Water-Colour and Pastel Drawings—Miniatures—Carved Ivories—Bronzes—Weapons—Antique Furniture of the Queen Anne, Chippendale, Hepplewhite, and Sheraton Periods—Silver Objects, and other Effects—the whole of which

MESSRS. T. NEALE & SON, of Nottingham, are favoured with instructions from the Executors to SELL by AUCTION, without reserve, at the Residence, ELMHURST, DERBY, on MONDAY, TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY, and FRIDAY, March 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5, 1909, commencing each day at 11 o'clock precisely.

Descriptive illustrated Catalogues (price One Shilling each) are now ready, and may be had upon application, by post or otherwise, at the Auctioneers' Offices, Milton Street, Nottingham.

THE COLLECTION WILL BE ON VIEW AT ELMHURST, DERBY.

PRIVATE VIEW on WEDNESDAY and THURSDAY, February 24 and 25; admission by card only, to be obtained from the Auctioneers.

PUBLIC VIEW on FRIDAY and SATURDAY, February 26 and 27; admission by Catalogue (price One Shilling each, to admit Two Persons), to be obtained from the Auctioneers.

Magazines, &c.

EBENEZER PROUT'S WORKS.
Bound, each net, 5s.

HARMONY: its Theory and Practice. Twenty-fourth Impression. Revised and largely Re-written.

ANALYTICAL KEY TO THE EXERCISES in the Same. Net 3s.

COUNTERPOINT: Strict and Free. Ninth Impression.

DOUBLE COUNTERPOINT AND CANON. Fourth Impression.

FUGUE. Fifth Impression.

FUGAL ANALYSIS. Third Impression.

MUSICAL FORM. Seventh Impression.

APPLIED FORMS. Fifth Impression.

THE ORCHESTRA. 2 vols. Fourth Impression.

AUGENER, Ltd., 6, New Burlington Street, and 22, Newgate Street.

THE BUILDER (founded 1842), 4, Catherine Street, London, W.C., FEBRUARY 13, contains:—
RAISING THE ASSUAN DAM (with Diagrams).
JAMES LEWIS, ARCHITECT.
ROYAL ACADEMY LECTURES ON ARCHITECTURE.
THE BRITISH SCHOOL AT ROME.
BLACKPOOL LIBRARY COMPETITION.
SCHOOL PLANNING (Architectural Association).
CARPENTERS' HALL LECTURES.
THE ARCHITECTS' TECHNICAL BUREAU.
ILLUSTRATIONS:
CATHEDRALS OF ENGLAND.—II. CANTERBURY (View and Plan);
LATE RENAISSANCE CHURCHES OF LONDON.—II. ST. GEORGE-IN-THE-EAST.
 From Offices as above (4d., by post 4½d.), at Railway Bookstalls, Bookshops, and of all News-agents.

THE CLERGY LIST FOR 1909.

Thoroughly Revised and Corrected to the Latest Date.
NOW READY.

SIXTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

Price 12s. 6d.

Truth says:—"This well-known work of reference has grown to a volume of over 1,800 pages. All its familiar features have been retained, and its information has been brought well up to date."

The Guardian says:—"There is no difficulty in assigning to the 'Clergy List' a very high place in the Catalogue of books relating to the same subject."

The Times says:—"The book has long ago established its position as the largest reference book of its kind... and it has done so by steady attention to accuracy... The 'Clergy List' is eminently welcome."

The Church Times says:—"This work is one marked by general accuracy, the fact that every entry has been submitted to the person to whom it has reference (with the exception of those who have no permanent address in the United Kingdom) showing evidence of this."

The Record says:—"This well-known ecclesiastical directory gives evidence of having been brought carefully and accurately up to date. It would be difficult to suggest any improvement. The 'Clergy List' is now a model of completeness with compression."

London: KELLY'S DIRECTORIES, LTD.,
 182-184, High Holborn.

Important Books on the Understanding of Architecture for Libraries, Students, and General Readers.

Large crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 5s. net.

ESSENTIALS IN ARCHITECTURE.

An Analysis of the Principles and Qualities to be looked for in Buildings. By JOHN BELCHER, R.A., Fellow and Past President of the Royal Institute of British Architects. With 80 Illustrations of Old and Modern Buildings.

Mr. R. NORMAN SHAW, R.A., writes:—"I have read the proofs of this work with the greatest interest. I am quite sure it will arouse enthusiasm in hundreds of readers, but if it attracted only a dozen it would not have been written in vain. Mr. Belcher wishes his readers to think of Architecture—architecturally; tells them how to do so, and no one is more competent to teach them."

"A master in the art of architecture explains the fundamental principles that underlie, and the qualities that are embodied in, all good architecture so as to enable any one interested rightly to appreciate and enjoy the best examples of the art."—Literary World.

AN EPOCH-MAKING BOOK.

Imperial 8vo, cloth gilt, 31s. 6d. net.

GOthic ARCHITECTURE IN ENGLAND

An Analysis of the Origin and Development of English Church Architecture from the Norman Conquest to the Dissolution of the Monasteries. By FRANCIS BOND, M.A. Hon. A.R.I.B.A. Containing 800 pages, with 1,254 Illustrations, comprising 785 Photographs, Sketches, and Measured Drawings, and 469 Plans, Sections, Diagrams, and Mouldings.

"Mr. Bond has given us a truly monumental work... As a mine of erudition, of detailed analysis and information, and of criticism on English mediæval church architecture, the book is worthy of all praise."—Times.

Large 8vo, cloth gilt, 21s. net.

EARLY RENAISSANCE ARCHITECTURE IN ENGLAND.

An Historical and Descriptive Account of the Tudor, Elizabethan, and Jacobean Periods. By J. ALFRED GOTCH, F.S.A. With upwards of 300 Illustrations from Drawings and Photographs, including many Full-Page Plates.

"The most charming book that has yet been issued on the English Renaissance. The wealth and accuracy of the illustrations, in conjunction with the pleasant diction and scholarly style of the letterpress, make it impossible for any one of taste to be disappointed with its contents."—Antiquary.

Thick demy 8vo, cloth gilt, 21s. net.

A HISTORY OF ARCHITECTURE ON THE COMPARATIVE METHOD.

By Prof. BANISTER FLETCHER, F.R.I.B.A., and BANISTER F. FLETCHER, F.R.I.B.A. Fifth Edition, Revised and Enlarged by BANISTER F. FLETCHER. With 2,000 Illustrations, reproduced from Photographs and Drawings.

"No student of architecture should be without this standard work, which is itself a triumph of art... The illustrations alone are a treasure-house of noble form, and create to the observer a sense of delight and exultation as he passes in review all these magnificent monuments of man's effort and his aspirations."—Daily News.

* * * WRITE FOR CATALOGUE OF BOOKS ON ART AND ARCHITECTURE.

B. T. BATSFORD, 94, High Holborn, London.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

THE CAMBRIDGE HISTORY OF ENGLISH LITERATURE.

Edited by A. W. Ward, Litt.D., F.B.A., Master of Peterhouse, and A. R. Waller, M.A.

Volume III, RENAISSANCE AND REFORMATION, is now ready.

The contents of this volume include chapters on Englishmen and the Classical Renaissance, by Dr. T. M. Lindsay; Reformation Literature in England, by the Rev. J. P. Whitney; The Dissolution of the Religious Houses, by the Rev. R. H. Benson; Early German Influences on English Literature, by Dr. A. Koelbing; Social Literature in Tudor Times, by Professor H. V. Routh; Sir David Lindsay, by T. F. Henderson; Reformation and Renaissance in Scotland, by Dr. P. Hume Brown; The New English Poetry, by Harold H. Child; A Mirror for Magistrates and George Gascoigne, by Professor J. W. Cunliffe; The Poetry of Spenser, by Dr. W. J. Courthope; The Elizabethan Sonnet, by Dr. Sidney Lee; Prosody from Chaucer to Spenser, and Elizabethan Criticism by Professor G. Saintsbury; Chroniclers and Antiquaries, by Mr. Charles Whibley; Elizabethan Prose Fiction and The Language from Chaucer to Shakespeare, by Professor J. W. H. Atkins; The Marprelate Controversy, by Mr. J. Dover Wilson; Hooker's Ecclesiastical Polity, by Dr. Foakes-Jackson, and English Universities, Schools, and Scholarship in the Sixteenth Century, by Mr. W. H. Woodward.

"We give a very hearty welcome to the new scheme of the Cambridge University Press, the History of English Literature... This work, when completed, will be as notable a monument of industry and scholarship as the History planned by Lord Acton."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"The editors of this volume have produced a book which is indispensable to any serious student of English literature. The individual articles are in several instances contributions of great value to the discussion of their subjects, and one of them is of first-rate importance in English literary history."—Athenæum.

"The second volume proves that the Cambridge History of English Literature is thriving; full of matter and not lacking in spirit."—Times.

The work will be completed in fourteen volumes. Price, in buckram, 9s. net, in half-morocco, 15s. net each. There is a special subscription price for the complete work of 5l. 5s. net in buckram, 8l. 15s. net in half-morocco, payable in fourteen instalments, of 7s. 6d. net or 12s. 6d. net respectively, on publication of the separate volumes.

Royal 8vo
 Buckram
 9s net
 Half-morocco
 15s net

Press notices of earlier volumes

Subscription
 terms

THE AUTHORISED VERSION OF THE ENGLISH BIBLE 1611.

Edited by William Aldis Wright, M.A., Vice-Master of Trinity College, Cambridge. In five volumes:—Vol. I. Genesis to Deuteronomy, Vol. II. Joshua to Esther, Vol. III. Job to Malachi, Vol. IV. The Apocrypha, Vol. V. The New Testament.

Crown 8vo 5 vols
 Cloth, 20s net
 Half rough calf, 30s net
 Full morocco,
 35s net and 45s net

The text of modern English Bibles differs considerably from that of the original Authorised Version of 1611. With the idea of correcting or improving the translation, alterations have from time to time been made by printers and editors, in words and phrases, spelling and punctuation. The present edition, treating the Version as the greatest of English Classics, gives a verbatim reprint of the original text, in a form intended to appeal to the reader as distinguished from the theologian. A full prospectus, with specimen pages, will be sent post free on application.

THE CAMBRIDGE MODERN HISTORY. Planned by the late

Lord Acton. Edited by A. W. Ward, Litt.D., G. W. Prothero, Litt.D. and Stanley Leathes, M.A.

Volume XI, THE GROWTH OF NATIONALITIES, is now ready.

"The period (1841 to 1870) is of immense interest to modern students of national development, since it is responsible for great new departures and new groupings, that are likely to control the polity, the social as well as what we may call the dynastic polity, of Europe for the next hundred years... Professor Emile Bourgeois tells us of the fall of Constitutionalism in France and of the formation of the Napoleonic Republic of 1848. M. Albert Thomas carries on the story of France and Napoleon III. to 1870, while Major F. Maurice gives us the detailed account of the Franco-German War. The story of the growth of German nationality is told in full detail by Professor Meinecke, Dr. Ward, Professor H. Friedjung, and Dr. G. Roloff... The Italian Revolution of 1848 and the story of Cavour and the foundation of the kingdom of Italy are described in detail by the late Professor E. Masi. The late Sir Spencer Walpole's chapters on the Crimean War and English internal politics from 1856 to 1863 will be read with interest, while Mr. Temperley's paper on our Colonial policy that began to operate about 1840 should attract attention as the work of a rising historian who has played an important part in the editing of this volume... Altogether a volume of unique interest."

Contemporary Review.

YÜN-NAN, THE LINK BETWEEN INDIA AND THE YANGTZE.

By Major H. R. Davies, 52nd Oxfordshire Light Infantry.

This book gives an account of the author's travels, in the course of which he covered 5,500 miles of road, a great part of the country traversed not having been visited by earlier travellers. The book, which is fully illustrated, also contains information concerning the projected railway, the products of the province, and the various tribes of Western China. It should be of use to future travellers, and to all interested in the subject of through communication between India and China and in the development of our trade with the latter country.

With map and 73 plates
 Demy 8vo, 16s net

THE RHETORIC OF ARISTOTLE. A Translation by the late

Sir Richard Jebb. Edited by J. E. Sandys, Litt.D.

Demy 8vo
 6s net

This translation, left in manuscript by Sir Richard Jebb, and not hitherto published, has been revised by the editor, who has supplied a few accidental omissions and a brief analysis, partly founded on the translator's own memoranda.

THE CARE OF NATURAL MONUMENTS, WITH SPECIAL

REFERENCE TO GREAT BRITAIN AND GERMANY. By H. Conwentz, Prussian State Commissioner for the Care of Natural Monuments.

Ten illustrations
 Crown 8vo
 2s 6d net

The present book is an expansion of a lecture delivered at the Leicester Meeting of the British Association. The author classes among monuments of nature, as distinct from the results of man's activity, examples of beautiful scenery, characteristic soil-formations, interesting associations of plants and animals, and rare species of indigenous flora and fauna, and shows that the care of natural monuments is not only of scientific and public interest but also possesses a patriotic value.

London, Fetter Lane: CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS WAREHOUSE: C. F. Clay, Manager

DAVID NUTT, 57-59, LONG ACRE.

Mr. NUTT has much pleasure in announcing that he will shortly issue

TUDOR TRANSLATIONS.

Edited by WILLIAM ERNEST HENLEY.

Vols. XLI.-XLIV.

THE DECAMERON. Preserved to Posterity by GIOVANNI BOCCACCIO, and translated into English anno 1620. In 4 volumes, with an Introduction by EDWARD HUTTON. Subscription price 2l. 8s. net.

This version of 'The Decameron,' although first issued in 1620, is Elizabethan by virtue of the way in which the translator conceived his task, and of the style in which he rendered his original. Its inclusion in the Tudor Translations was planned by Mr. Henley some time before his death in 1903, but the difficulty of finding a copy from which to print hindered progress for many years. Thus six years have passed since his death before the issue of this version, which he regarded as one of the most brilliant and characteristic of the many masterpieces by which Tudor translators enriched English literature.

The TUDOR 'DECAMERON' will be issued in four volumes.

Vols. I. and II. are printed, and will be delivered to Subscribers in March, Vols. III. and IV. in April or May at latest.

The subscription price of 2l. 8s. net for the four volumes is only valid until the issue of Vols. I. and II. for English Subscribers, and of the complete work for oversea Subscribers. The price will then be raised to 3l. net.

As the permanent Subscription List of the Tudor Translations absorbs three-fourths of the limited issue, immediate application on the part of new Subscribers is required to secure copies. Preference will be given to Subscribers to the Series. Prospectus with Order Form and List of Series sent on application.

Mr. NUTT has just issued

SCOTTISH ANNALS FROM ENGLISH CHRONICLERS, A.D. 500 to 1286. Chronologically Arranged, Translated, and Annotated by ALAN O. ANDERSON, M.A. Edin. Demy 8vo, xvi-402 pp. cloth, 10s. 6d. net.

It has been Mr. Anderson's task to excerpt from chronicles and other writings originating in the southern half of the island, from the days of Bede onwards, all matter relating to Scotland, to translate it closely and in accordance with the latest historical scholarship, to throw it into chronological sequence, and to annotate it so as to show the historical value of each item recorded and the mutual relation of accounts derived from varying sources.

Mr. NUTT has just issued

LOLAMI: The Little Cliff Dweller. A Tale of the Cave-Dwellers. By CLARA BAYLISS. With Illustrations and Map. 16mo, 160 pp. cloth, 2s. net.

Contents:—A Strange Situation. An Unexpected Arrival. The Family Name and Tribal Customs. The Ghostly Visitor. The Reservoir becomes Empty. A Search for Water. Lolami goes Abroad. The Wonders of the Universe. Again a Prisoner. Strange Friends. The White Castle. Mummy Cave. Family History. Conclusion. Appendix (for the Teacher).

Here is a work appealing both to teacher and pupil. As an accurate description of a picturesque and wonderful region, as a faithful account of the life and manners of the still surviving representatives of the prehistoric cave dwellers, it should be acceptable to advocates of the modern methods of teaching geography and history. At the same time this information is imparted in a form which cannot fail to attract every child, who will follow with keen interest the Robinson Crusoe-like adventures of the boy who explores a solitary district and picks up a precarious livelihood with the sole help of his faithful dog.

Mr. NUTT has just published at 2s. net

TOMMY AND A TOWER. By FERGUS GRAHAM, Author of 'Kathleen.' In 1 volume, crown 8vo, cloth.

'We have been told that 'Kathleen' is Mr. Graham's first attempt in fiction. It is so good that we may certainly express the desire to have a second instalment of this new novelist's work.'—Literary World.

Mr. NUTT will send out immediately to all Members of the IRISH TEXTS SOCIETY who have paid their Subscriptions for 1907

Vol. X. THE STORY OF THE CROP-EARED DOG. THE STORY OF EAGLE-BOY. Two Irish Arthurian Romances. Edited (for the first time) and translated by R. A. STEWART MACALISTER, M.A. Demy 8vo, xii-204 pp. cloth gilt, 10s. 6d. net.

* * A List of the Publications of the Irish Text Society still available (Vols. IV.-IX.—Vols. I.-III. are out of print) may be had on application to the Publisher. It may be recalled that Vols. IV., VIII., and IX. contain the first complete printed edition of Keating, 'History of Ireland.'

Particulars respecting membership of the Irish Texts Society may be had from the Hon. Secretary, Miss ELEANOR HULL, 20, Hanover Square, W.

Mr. NUTT has just issued

FOLK-LORE.

Transactions of the Folk-Lore Society.

Vol. XIX. No. 4.

Contents.

THE BURRY-MAN, with Plates VIII. and IX. ISABEL A. DICKSON.

THE DISPOSAL OF THE DEAD IN AUSTRALIA. NORTHCOTE W. THOMAS.

NOTES ON SOME CUSTOMS OF THE LOWER CONGO PEOPLE. JOHN H. WEEKS.

COLLECTANEA:—The "Jass" at Thun, with Plate XI., CHARLES J. BILLSON—Folklore from Tangier, Miss F. K. GREEN—The "Devil's Door" in Wroxhall Abbey Church, with Plate XII., CHARLOTTE S. BURNE—The Legend of Savaddan Lake—The Feast of St. Wilfrid, with Plate XIII.—Death-Knock in the Wapentake of Corringham, Lincolnshire, MABEL PEACOCK—Notes from Greece and the Aegean, M. S. THOMPSON.

CORRESPONDENCE:—Egyptian Beliefs, E. P. LARKEN—Sacred Wells, A. MACDONALD—Earthquakes, H. N. HUTCHINSON—Adders Swallowing their Young, EDWARD PEACOCK—South Indian Folklore, A. R. WRIGHT.

REVIEWS:—Lucy E. Broadwood, 'English Traditional Songs and Carols,' CHARLOTTE S. BURNE—Franz Boas, 'Publications of the American Ethnological Society,' E. SIDNEY HARTLAND—T. C. Hodson, 'The Meitheis'; Sir Charles Lyall, 'The Mikirs,' M. LONGWORTH DAMES—'Reports of the Cambridge Expedition to Torres Straits: Vol. VI. Sociology, Magic, and Religion of the Eastern Islanders,' N. W. THOMAS—M. E. Durkheim, 'Travaux de l'Année Sociologique,' E. SIDNEY HARTLAND—A. Madelaine, 'Au Bon Vieux Temps: Récits, Contes et Légendes de l'Ancien Bocage Normand,' E. SIDNEY HARTLAND—Olive Bray, 'The Elder or Poetic Edda,' ALBANY F. MAJOR—Major Arthur Glyn Leonard, 'The Lower Niger and its Tribes,' A. R. WRIGHT—Frederick Starr, 'In Indian Mexico: a Narrative of Travel and Labor,' E. SIDNEY HARTLAND—J. E. Hanauer, 'Folklore of the Holy Land, Moslem, Christian, and Jewish'; Dr. Georg Salzberger, 'Die Salomo Sage in der Semitischen Litteratur'; Dr. Friedrich Krauss, 'Slavische Volksforschungen, Abhandlungen ueber Glauben, Gewohnheitsrecht, Sitten, Braeuche und die Guslarenlieder der Suedslaven, Vorwiegend auf Grund eigener Erhebungen—M. GASTER. 'Short Notices'—Lewis Spence, 'Popular Studies in Mythology, Romance, and Folklore, E. SIDNEY HARTLAND—E. M. Gordon, 'Indian Folk-Tales, being Side-lights on Village Life in Bilaspore, Central Provinces,' W. CROOKE—Major J. A. A. M'Nair, R.A., C.M.G., and T. L. Barlow, 'Oral Tradition from the Indus,' M. LONGWORTH DAMES—Enys Tregarthen, 'Legends and Tales of North Cornwall'; The Piskey Purse, CHARLOTTE S. BURNE—'Aus Natur und Geisteswelt,' N. W. T.—Dudley Kidd, 'The Bull of the Kraal, and the Heavenly Maidens,' R. R. MARETT—Otto Hellgren, 'Sanglekar fran Nääs,' M. LONGWORTH DAMES.

INDEX.

TITLE AND CONTENTS.

Mr. NUTT has recently sent out to all Members of the FOLK-LORE SOCIETY who have paid their Subscription for 1907

Vol. LX. THE GRATEFUL DEAD. The History of a Folk-Story. By G. H. GEROULD, Preceptor in English in Princeton University. Demy 8vo, xii-177 pp. cloth, 10s. 6d. net.

* * A Prospectus of the Society, with a full List of its Publications, will be sent on application.

New and Forthcoming Books from DUCKWORTH & CO.'S List of Publications

GREAT MASTERS OF DUTCH AND FLEMISH PAINTING.

By Dr. W. BODE.

With 48 Illustrations. Pott 4to, 7s. 6d. net.

* * A Prospectus of this important Work is in preparation, and will be sent post free anywhere.

CHRISTOPHER WREN.

By LENA MILMAN.

With upwards of 50 Illustrations. Pott 4to, 7s. 6d. net.

CAROTTI'S HISTORY OF ART.

Volume II., THE MIDDLE AGES, nearly ready.

A History of Art, to be completed in four volumes, from the Earliest Times to the Present Day.

By Dr. GIULIO CAROTTI of the Royal Academy in Milan and the Royal University of Rome.

Edited by Mrs. S. ARTHUR STRONG, LL.D.

With upwards of 500 Illustrations in each volume. Small crown 8vo, 5s. net a volume. Sold separately.

VOLUME I. NOW READY.

THE RUBAIYAT OF UMAR KHAYYAM.

FitzGerald's Second Edition. Edited by EDWARD HERON

ALLEN. Crown 4to, 10s. 6d. net.

GREAT ACTORS OF THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY.

By KARL MANTZIUS. Being Vol. V. of 'A

History of Theatrical Art,' with 73 Illustrations from Photographs, Prints, Drawings, &c. Royal 8vo, 10s. net.

The period here treated of covers the time of Adrienne Le Couvreur, Voltaire, Betterton, Colley Cibber, James Quin, Ch. Macklin, and Garrick.

[In the press.]

PARALLEL PATHS.

A Study in Biology, Ethics, and Art.

By T. W. ROLLESTON.

Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

"Brilliant and suggestive. Mr. Rolleston delights his readers."

Spectator.

THE GREATEST LIFE.

An Inquiry into the Origin of Character.

By GERALD LEIGHTON, M.D. F.R.S.Edin.

5s. net.

"Addresses both to the priest and to the politician a remarkable argument. I venture to commend Prof. Leighton's remarkable book, particularly to religious people."—Daily Chronicle.

SOME AFRICAN HIGHWAYS.

A Journey of Two Women to Uganda and the Transvaal. By CAROLINE KIRKLAND. Introduction by Lieut.-Gen. BADEN-POWELL. Illustrations and Maps. Crown 8vo, 6s. net.

"Enthusiasm and vitality. A very vivacious book."—Observer.

PROS AND CONS OF VIVISECTION.

By Dr. CHARLES RICHEL, Professor of Physiology in the Faculty of Medicine, Paris. With a Preface by Prof. HALLIBURTON. Illustrated. 2s. 6d. net.

WOMAN IN INDUSTRY.

From Seven Points of View. With a Preface by D. J. SHACKLETON, M.P.

Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

SIR RICHARD TANGYE.

By STUART J. REID, D.C.L.

With Photogravure Portrait. Large crown 8vo, 6s.

"A very well-written account of an excellent man, a typical specimen of a fine class.....Beneficial to his fellow-townsmen, to the country, and the Empire."—Standard.

FRANCIS JOSEPH THE FIRST.

By R. P. MAHAFFY.

Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

"Written with admirable judgment."—Times.

GOD'S MESSAGE THROUGH MODERN DOUBT.

By the Rev. E. ALDOM FRENCH. Crown 8vo,

2s. 6d. net.

The author is a thoughtful and eloquent minister, of exceptional gifts in the exposition of what may be called Applied Christianity. A courageous preacher, who has never shirked the questions of to-day.

CHRISTIANITY: Its Nature and its Truth.

By Prof. A. S. PEAKE, D.D., of Manchester University.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d. net.

[Fifteenth Thousand.]

MAXIM GORKY'S

POWERFUL NOVEL OF THE SPY SYSTEM IN RUSSIA:

THE SPY.

The Story of a Superfluous Man.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

THE KISS, AND OTHER STORIES.

By TCHEKHOFF. Crown 8vo, 6s.

R. B. CUNNINGHAME GRAHAM'S

NEW VOLUME OF SKETCHES.

FAITH, &c.

By the Author of 'Success,' 'Progress,' 'His People.'

Crown 8vo, 6s.

A NEW WRITER—ROSAMOND NAPIER.

THE HEART OF A GYPSY.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

[This day.]

THE ENGLISH REVIEW.

FEBRUARY Number contains Contributions by HAUPTMANN, W. B. YEATS, H. G.

WELLS, JOSEPH CONRAD, VERNON LEE, JOHN GALSWORTHY, GRANVILLE BARKER, NORMAN DOUGLAS. 2s. 6d. net (postage 4d.).

London: DUCKWORTH & CO. 3, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, W.C.

MESSRS. CONSTABLE'S LIST.

UNIVERSITY ADMINISTRATION. By CHARLES W. ELIOT, President of Harvard. Crown 8vo, 6s. net.

This is the most authoritative discussion of matters of the first moment to all interested in our educational system.

THE MAKING OF CANADA, 1763-1814.

By A. G. BRADLEY, Author of 'The Fight with France for North America,' 'Canada in the Twentieth Century,' &c. With Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

"Among the years of Canada's making none reckon for so much as those of the vivid and evolutionary half-century of which Mr. Bradley gives so stimulating an account in these bright and invigorating chapters." Daily Telegraph.

ÆNEAS SILVIUS (Enea Silvio de Piccolomini—Pius II.), Orator, Man of Letters, Statesman, and Pope. By WILLIAM BOULTING. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

"A welcome attempt by a writer of taste and judgment to supply an English biography of the great mediæval scholar (1405-1464) whose Papacy is memorable for his efforts to form an armed confederation of Christian princes to resist the Turk."—Times.

IN THE DAYS OF THE COUNCILS.

A Sketch of the Life and Times of Baldassare Cossa (afterwards Pope John the Twenty-Third). By EUSTACE J. KITTS. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

"It is most interesting reading, and throws a clear light on an obscure and confused period of European history." Aberdeen Free Press.

AN HISTORICAL INTRODUCTION TO THE MARPRELATE TRACTS. By W. M. PIERCE. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

"An able, learned, and exhaustive investigation, from the Nonconformist point of view, of the origin, bearing, contents, and authorship of the famous Martin Marprelate Tracts called forth by the condition of the Church under Elizabeth, and designed to show the unscriptural character of Episcopacy."—Times.

THE DECLARATION OF INDULGENCE, 1672. A Study in the Rise of Organised Dissent. By FRANK BATE, M.A. B.Litt. With an Introduction by Prof. C. H. FIRTH, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History in the University of Oxford. Demy 8vo, 6s. net.

RACIAL PROBLEMS IN HUNGARY. By R. W. SETON-WATSON ("Scotus Viator"), Author of 'The Future of Austria-Hungary.' 42 Illustrations and Map. Demy 8vo, 16s. net.

"Extraordinarily documented."—Spectator.

"His book will at once take rank as the standard authority on this immensely important subject."—Nation.

ECONOMIC HERESIES. Being an unorthodox attempt to appreciate the economic problems presented by "things as they are." By Sir NATHANIEL NATHAN. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

THEODORE M. DAVIS'S EXCAVATIONS. NEW VOLUME.

THE TOMB OF SIPHTAH; THE MONKEY TOMB; AND THE GOLD TOMB. With an Account of the Finding of the Tombs, a Life of King Siptah and Queen Taousrit, a Catalogue of the Objects Discovered. 28 Illustrations in Colour and Collotype, and several Plans. 4to, 42s. net.

THE FUNERAL PAPYRUS OF IOUIYA.

By THEODORE M. DAVIS. With an Introduction by EDOUARD NAVILLE. 34 Collotype Illustrations. 4to, 2l. 2s. net.

This version of 'The Book of the Dead' found in the tomb of Iouiya by Mr. Theodore Davis has a particular value because it can be definitely associated with the XVIIIth Dynasty. This volume, like its companions in the same series, is beautifully illustrated by facsimile reproductions.

THE QUEENS OF EGYPT. By JANET R. BUTTLES. With a Preface by Prof. G. MASPERO.

250 pp. 20 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

"Miss Buttles has worthily fulfilled her task of chronicling all that is known of every queen and princess almost that ever lived in Egypt during the four thousand years of her ancient history, and has made even the least of them interesting."—Guardian.

A NOTABLE WAGNER VOLUME.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS OF WAGNER. By ANGELO NEUMANN. With 4 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

This account of Director Neumann's travelling Wagner Theatre in Europe throws much interesting light on Wagner's personality and the history of 'The Ring.'

LONDON: 10, Orange St. 'The Country Home.'
Leicester Sq.

LIBRARY PUBLICATIONS

Fifteenth Century Books. An Author Index. By R. A. PEDDIE. Appearing in the Library World, Monthly, price 6d.; Annual Subscription, 7s. post paid.

Manual of Library Economy. By JAMES DUFF BROWN, Librarian, Islington Public Libraries. Demy 8vo, cloth gilt, 422 pp. illustrated, 8s. 6d. net, post free.

A completely revised and extended edition, forming the most comprehensive text-book of general library practice in existence. The subjects dealt with are:—Library Legislation, Committees, Architecture, Book Selection, Classification, Cataloguing, Fittings and Appliances, Public Service, Museums and Art Galleries, &c.

Subject Classification. By JAMES DUFF BROWN, Librarian, Islington Public Libraries. 392 pp. royal 8vo, cloth, 15s. net, post free.

A complete system of classification for British libraries, with descriptive introduction, index, and tables for subdividing single subjects.

"The classification of this book is in our opinion an excellent one, showing great industry and intelligence in the author, probing far into the minute sub-division of knowledge."—Library Association Record.

"The work is without doubt the highest achievement of British librarianship."—Library Assistant.

Manual of Library Classification and Shelf Arrangement. By JAMES DUFF BROWN, Librarian, Islington Public Libraries. Crown 8vo, cloth, 4s. net, post free.

"All the systems worth consideration are fully and candidly represented here."—Library Journal.

Adjustable Classification for Libraries.

By JAMES DUFF BROWN. 8vo, paper covers, interleaved, 1s. 6d. net, post free.

A British system for small libraries.

A Classification of Library Economy and Office Papers. By L. STANLEY JAST, Chief Librarian, Croydon Public Libraries, Hon. Secretary of the Library Association. Royal 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d. net, post free.

The practical application of classification to office papers.

Manual of Descriptive Annotation for Library Catalogues. By ERNEST A. SAVAGE, Chief Librarian, Wallasey Public Libraries. With Chapter on Evaluation and Historical Note by Dr. ERNEST BAKER. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s. net, post free.

"This is an endeavour to systematize the whole of our knowledge of annotating books in this country, and to formulate an efficient code of rules.....As a pioneer manual, the book is deserving of the highest praise."—Academy.

Manual of Practical Indexing. By A. L. CLARKE, Librarian, Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s. net, post free.

"It is as complete and thorough a treatise on indexing as any one could possibly desire."—Scotsman.

"A simple, concise exposition of indexing practice." Library Journal.

LIBRARY ASSOCIATION PUBLICATIONS.

Leather for Libraries. By the SOUND LEATHER COMMITTEE OF THE LIBRARY ASSOCIATION. With Six Specimens of Leathers. Demy 8vo, in art linen, 2s. 6d. net (postage 3d. extra).

Class List of Best Books, and Annual of Bibliography. General Editor, H. V. HOPWOOD, Patent Office Library.

Vol. I. 1905-6, royal 8vo, 70 pp. 1s. net (postage 2d.).

Vol. II. 1906-7, royal 8vo, 80 pp. 1s. 6d. net (postage 2d.).

Vol. III. 1907-8, royal 8vo, 114 pp. 1s. 6d. net (postage 2d.).

Cataloguing Rules: Author and Title Entries. Compiled by the COMMITTEE OF THE AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION AND THE LIBRARY ASSOCIATION. Paper covers, 2s. net (postage 3d. extra); cloth, 2s. 6d. net; cloth interleaved, 3s. net (postage 4d. extra).

Machine Book-Sewing, with Remarks on Publishers' Bindings. By GEO. STEPHENS. Price 6d. (postage 1d.).

LIBRACO LIMITED,
60, Wilson Street, London, E.C.

MR. HEINEMANN'S NEW BOOKS.

RECOLLECTIONS OF BARON DE FRÉNILLY (1768-1828).

Edited, with an Introduction and Notes, by ARTHUR CHUQUET (Membre de l'Institut).

With Portrait. Demy 8vo, 10s. net.*

"He must be dull indeed who does not find himself engrossed in a story so natural, so witty, so vivid." Daily Telegraph.

CONQUERING THE ARCTIC ICE.

By EJNAR MIKKELSEN.

Profusely illustrated. Demy 8vo, 20s. net.*

"One of the most interesting books ever written about Arctic exploration."—Times.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

MR. GALSWORTHY'S NEW NOVEL.

FRATERNITY

By JOHN GALSWORTHY, Author of 'The Man of Property' and 'The Country House.'

WILL BE PUBLISHED ON FEBRUARY 18.

THE CLIMBER.

By E. F. BENSON, Author of 'Sheaves,' &c.

RACHEL LORIAN.

By Mrs. HENRY DUDENEY, Author of 'Folly Corner,' &c.

A PRINCE OF DREAMERS.

By FLORA ANNIE STEEL, Author of 'On the Face of the Waters.'

SYRINX.

By LAURENCE NORTH.

THE MAGICIAN. [2nd Imp.]

By W. S. MAUGHAM, Author of 'The Explorer.'

* Prospectus of these Works on application.

WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford Street, W.C.

SEELEY & CO.'S NEW BOOKS

NOW READY.

AMONG THE WILD TRIBES OF THE AFGHAN FRONTIER

A Record of Sixteen Years' close intercourse with the Natives of the Indian Marches.

By T. L. PENNELL, M.D. F.R.C.S.

With an Introduction by EARL ROBERTS, V.C. K.G.

With 37 Illustrations and 2 Maps. Demy 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 16s. net.

BEHIND THE VEIL IN PERSIA AND TURKISH ARABIA

An Englishwoman's Eight Years' Residence amongst the Women of the East.

By M. E. HUME-GRIFFITH.

With 37 Illustrations and a Map. Demy 8vo, 16s. net.

"A book of graphic and living reminiscences..... What Mrs. Hume-Griffith has to say is always interesting."—EVENING STANDARD.

JUST PUBLISHED.

A BRITISH OFFICER IN THE BALKANS

By MAJOR PERCY HENDERSON.

With 50 Illustrations and a Map. Demy 8vo, 16s. net.

"Major Henderson's acute and searching impressions make a volume of no little attraction and variety. His book is full of vivid little pictures and astute estimates."—DAILY TELEGRAPH.

THE CHILDHOOD OF MAN

A Popular Account of the Lives and Thoughts of the Primitive Races. By Dr. LEO FROBENIUS. Translated by Prof. KEANE, LL.D. F.R.G.S. With 416 Illustrations from Authentic Sources. Demy 8vo, 16s. net.

"Light and readable and copiously illustrated—sums up in picturesque fashion all that is known on the subject."—EVENING STANDARD.

ASTRONOMY OF TO-DAY

An Introduction to the Understanding of Astronomy. By CECIL G. DOLMAGE, LL.D. F.R.A.S. With Frontispiece in Colours and 45 other Illustrations. Second Edition. Extra crown 8vo, 5s. net.

"Most lucid and interesting."—OUTLOOK.

SCIENTIFIC IDEAS OF TO-DAY

A Popular Account of the Nature of Matter, Electricity, Light, Heat, &c. By CHARLES R. GIBSON, Author of 'Electricity of To-Day.' With 24 Illustrations. Extra crown 8vo, 5s. net. [Second Edition in the Press.]

"Admirably simple and lucid."—GLOBE.

London: SEELEY & CO., Ltd.,
38, Great Russell Street.

SIR ISAAC PITMAN & SONS' NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY.

Reminiscences of My Life. By Sir CHARLES SANTLEY. Demy 8vo, cloth gilt, gilt top. With 15 Illustrations. 16s. net.

"It is a book that will be read with very great interest, for it shows Sir Charles Santley in the light of an agreeable raconteur. There is much humour, some philosophy, and considerable variety in the narration of his dealings with the world in the course of the seventy-five years he has been in it. Its general intimacy is more in accord with the spirit of the day, which requires full details about all public favourites; the character of the man can be gathered from the frequent expression of opinion to be found in its pages."—Morning Post.

Nonconformity and Politics. By a NONCONFORMIST MINISTER. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, gilt top. 3s. 6d. net.

"We have here a powerful, earnest, eloquent appeal, written under the evident conviction of a great cause; a reasoned, lucid argument set forth with masterly skill, and in the presence of a sort of mystical fire which makes the language glow. It is inevitable—indeed, it is to be desired—that the book will cause much controversy and much searching. It is in every way a serious and notable work."—Daily News.

SECOND IMPRESSIONS OF

TWO NEW 6/- NOVELS.

A Friar Observant. By FRANCES M. BROOKFIELD.

"A thoroughly interesting picture of one aspect of the sixteenth century, and the state of chaos and general license which the example of Henry VIII. and his matrimonial variations caused in all civilized lands. The whole story is high in tone without being high-flown in the working out."—Observer.

Anne of Green Gables. By L. M. MONTGOMERY. [Second impression nearly ready.

"We feel we have added another real friend to those we have made in fiction.....A piece of work which is quite uncommonly good, as well as thoroughly interesting from the first page to the last."—Daily Telegraph.

"One ventures to say that it is destined to live as long as 'Alice in Wonderland.'.....It is better to have written one such book as this than to have produced a dozen novels of the ordinary type."—World.

France of the French. By E. HARRISON BARKER. In imperial 16mo, cloth gilt, gilt top, 32 Illustrations, 6s. net.

"Describes in a very interesting manner the people in many aspects.Written in a manner which makes it very attractive reading.....It should be cordially welcomed by the traveller, and the person who stays at home will gather from its pages a mass of information concerning contemporary France not otherwise easily obtainable."—Westminster Gazette.

The Inner Life of the Navy. By LIONEL YEXLEY. Demy 8vo, cloth gilt, gilt top, 16 Illustrations, 10s. 6d. net.

The Practical Wisdom of the Bible.

Edited with an Introduction by J. ST. LOE STRACHEY. In demy 16mo, cloth gilt, gilt top, 2s. 6d. net; leather, 3s. 6d. net.

London Passed and Passing. A

Pictorial Record of Destroyed and Threatened Buildings. By HANSLIP FLETCHER. With Notes by various Authors. Demy 4to, cloth gilt, gilt top, 21s. net.

Religious Liberty in England. A Scheme for Providing and Securing Religious Liberty in England and Wales. By J. FOVARGUE BRADLEY. In demy 8vo, 1s. net.

Makers of National History. Edited by

W. H. HUTTON, B.D. Each volume in crown 8vo, cloth gilt, with Frontispiece, 3s. 6d. net.

1. Cardinal Beaufort. By L. B. RADFORD, D.D.
2. Viscount Castlereagh. By ARTHUR HASSALL, M.A.
3. Archbishop Parker. By W. M. KENNEDY, B.A.

The Life of Sir Isaac Pitman. By

ALFRED BAKER. Demy 8vo, cloth gilt, gilt top, about 50 Illustrations, 7s. 6d.

If: a Nightmare in the Conditional

Mood. By the Authors of 'Wisdom While You Wait,' and GEORGE MORROW. Crown 8vo, 1s. net.

Cats for Pleasure and Profit. By FRANCES

SIMPSON. Third Edition, Revised. Crown 8vo, cloth, 25 Illustrations, 2s. net.

Outlines of the Economic History of England. A Study in Social Development. By H. O. MEREDITH, M.A. M.Com. Demy 8vo, cloth gilt, 5s. net.

Companies and Company Law.

Together with the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908. By A. C. CONNELL, LL.B. (Lond.). Demy 8vo, cloth gilt, 5s. net.

Pitman's Business Man's Guide. Edited by J. A. SLATER, B.A. LL.B. Fifth Edition, Revised. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 500 pp. 3s. 6d. net.

Pitman's Where to Look. An Easy Guide to Books of Reference. Second Edition, Revised. Crown 8vo, cloth, 1s. net.

READY SHORTLY.

Around Afghanistan. By Major DE BOUILLANE DELACOSTE. Super-royal 8vo, cloth gilt, 113 Illustrations, 5 Maps, 10s. 6d. net.

Pitman's Office Desk Book. Second

Revised and Cheaper Edition, 1s. net.

PITMAN'S ILLUSTRATED SPRING LIST will be published on the 20th inst. A copy will be sent gratis to any one on application. Please mention the ATHENÆUM.

London: Sir ISAAC PITMAN & SONS, LTD., 1, Amen Corner, E.C.

MACMILLAN'S LIST.

LORD AVEBURY'S NEW BOOK.

Peace and Happiness.

By the Right Hon. LORD AVEBURY. Crown 8vo, 6s.
These essays discuss many subjects of universal interest with the shrewd and kindly wisdom that in 'The Pleasures of Life' and other works from the same pen has proved helpful and stimulating to so many readers.

Social Life at Rome in the Age of Cicero.

By W. WARDE FOWLER, M.A., Author of 'The Roman Festivals of the Period of the Republic,' &c. With Map and Plans. 8vo, 10s. net. [Wednesday.]

The Ancient Greek Historians

(Harvard Lectures). By J. B. BURY, Litt.D. LL.D., Regius Professor of Modern History in the University of Cambridge. 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

The Characters of Theophrastus.

An English Translation from a Revised Text, with Introduction and Notes by R. C. JEBB, M.A., Fellow and Assistant-Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge, and Public Orator of the University, 1870. A New Edition. Edited by J. E. SANDYS, Litt.D. 8vo, 7s. 6d. net. [Classical Library.]

The Acropolis of Athens.

By MARTIN L. D'OOGE, Professor of Greek in the University of Michigan. Fully illustrated. 8vo, 17s. net.

Mars as the Abode of Life.

By PERCIVAL LOWELL, A.B. LL.D. Author of 'Mars and its Canals,' &c. Illustrated. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

Notes of a Botanist on the Amazon and Andes.

Being Records of Travel during the Years 1849-1864. By RICHARD SPRUCE, Ph.D. Edited and Condensed by ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE, O.M. F.R.S. With Portrait of the Author and other Illustrations and Maps. 2 vols. 8vo, 21s. net.

NEW 6/- NOVELS.

TONO-BUNGAY.

By H. G. WELLS.

A novel of contemporary English life. It claims affinity with 'KIPPS,' as distinguished from Mr. Wells's romances into which a fantastic element enters.

One Immortality.

By H. FIELDING HALL.

MACMILLAN'S EDITIONS OF SHAKESPEARE.

THE CAMBRIDGE SHAKESPEARE.

Edited by W. ALDIS WRIGHT, M.A. LL.D. 9 vols. 8vo, 10s. 6d. each.

THE EVERSLEY SHAKESPEARE.

In 10 vols. With Short Introduction and Foot-Notes by Prof. C. H. HERFORD. Globe 8vo, 4s. net each vol.

The Plays may also be had in separate volumes, cloth, 1s. each; roan, gilt tops, 2s. each.

THE GLOBE SHAKESPEARE. Edited by W. G. CLARK and W. ALDIS WRIGHT. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.; limp leather, gilt edges, 5s. net.

THE VICTORIA SHAKESPEARE. In 3 vols. Vol. I. COMEDIES. Vol. II. HISTORIES. Vol. III. TRAGEDIES. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. each.

SHAKESPEARE'S SONGS AND SONNETS. Edited by F. P. PALGRAVE. Pott 8vo, 2s. 6d. net. [Golden Treasury Series.]

SHAKESPEARE. By Prof. WALTER RALEIGH. Globe 8vo, 4s. net. [Eversley Series.]

SHAKESPEARE. By WALTER RALEIGH. Crown 8vo, 2s. net. [English Men of Letters.]

MACMILLAN & CO., LTD., London.

Messrs. Longmans & Co.'s LIST.

Sir George Mackenzie, King's Advocate, of Rosenhaugh: His Life and Times, 1636(?) - 1691.

By ANDREW LANG. With 4 Illustrations. 8vo, 15s. net. (Inland postage 5d.)

This is a life of "Bluidy Mackenzie," the celebrated "persecutor" and friend of Claverhouse—"that noble wit of Scotland," as Dryden styled him. Many unpublished political letters of Mackenzie have been consulted, and an account is given of his novel, 'Aretina,' his poems, and his historical, political, poetical, religious, and legal writings. Mackenzie was the first, and perhaps the last, Jacobite Socialist.

SECOND IMPRESSION.

The Maid of France: being the Story of the Life and Death of Jeanne d'Arc.

By ANDREW LANG. With 3 Maps and 3 Portraits. 8vo, 12s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 5d.)

Mrs. CREIGHTON, in the Church Family Newspaper.—"The book is a fine book, written in a fine spirit, and has not a dull page.....Mr. Lang has, indeed, succeeded in his purpose to fill this empty place in our bookshelves, and to depict this glory of her sex 'a star of ancient France.'"

Unemployment: a Problem of Industry.

By W. H. BEVERIDGE, Stowell Civil Law Fellow of University College, Oxford, formerly Sub-Warden of Toynbee Hall. 8vo, 7s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

"It is a book which every one ought to have read who presumes to write or speak on the question of unemployment."—Westminster Gazette.

Ireland under the Stuarts and during the Interregnum.

By RICHARD BAGWELL, M.A., Author of 'Ireland under the Tudors.' Vols. I. and II. 1603-1660. With 2 Maps. 8vo, 28s. net. (Inland postage 6d.)

Analysis of the Evolution of Musical Form.

By MARGARET H. GLYN, Author of 'The Rhythmic Conception of Music,' &c. Medium 8vo, 10s. 6d. (Inland postage 5d.)

An Introduction to the Science of Radio-Activity.

By CHARLES W. RAFFETY. With 27 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

TWO NEW VOLUMES OF

THE SILVER LIBRARY.

Lysbeth: a Tale of the Dutch.

By H. R. HAGGARD. With 26 Illustrations. NEW and CHEAPER IMPRESSION. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. (Inland postage 4d.)

Pearl-Maiden: a Tale of the Fall of Jerusalem.

By H. R. HAGGARD. CHEAP RE-ISSUE. With 16 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. (Inland postage 4d.)

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.

39, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

BEAUTIFUL BOOKS

Bird Hunting Through Wild Europe with Gun and Camera.

By R. B. LODGE. 16 Duplex Illustrations and more than 100 other Illustrations from life. Demy 8vo, cloth gilt, 7s. 6d. net.

"There is not a dull page in the book....The book is profusely illustrated, the photographs....reaching a high level of excellence."—Athenæum.

The Story of the Sea and Seashore.

By W. P. WESTELL. 8 Coloured and numerous other Illustrations. Medium 8vo, cloth gilt with gilt top, 5s. net.

"A most entertaining volume."—Spectator.
"Makes a strong appeal to all observant persons who wish to know something of the deep....The illustrations are a great feature....A beautiful book."—Daily Telegraph.

The Heavens and their Story.

By ANNIE and E. WALTER MAUNDER. 8 Coloured and numerous other Illustrations. Medium 8vo, cloth gilt, gilt top, 5s. net.

"The authors are astronomers of unquestioned competence, and even eminence, and they have the literary gift,....so necessary to catch and keep the audience, which it is not always easy to attract. They have done their work admirably."—Guardian.

The Young People's Nature Study Book:

In Garden, Field, and Wood.

By S. N. SEDGWICK, M.A. Freely Illustrated. Large crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 3s. 6d. net.

"Nature-study has been represented by so many similar treatises that there may quite conceivably become difficulty in choosing from amongst them. Nobody, however, runs any risk of making a mistake who chooses 'The Young People's Nature Study-Book.'"—Glasgow Herald.

A CHARMING ANTHOLOGY.

The Road to Happiness.

By E. W. WALTERS. Fcap. 8vo, cloth gilt, 1s. 6d. net.

"The selection has been made with taste and judgment, and the passages arranged with art and skill."—London Quarterly Review.

By J. AGAR-BEET, D.D.

The New Testament:

Its Authorship, Date, and Worth.

Small crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 1s. 6d. net.

"An excellent little volume, full of exact information, arranged with expert skill."—Methodist Recorder.

The Credentials of the Gospel.

Re-issue with New Preface. Demy 8vo, cloth gilt, 2s. 6d. net.

"However well read in apologetic literature any one is, he will find much to interest and much to convince in the chapters which deal with the resurrection and the miraculous....Professor Beet makes a distinct advance in the argument, and deserves the thanks of all who are interested in the defence of Christianity."

Dr. MARCUS DODS in the Expositor.

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

Problems of Discipleship.

By HARRY BISSEKER, M.A. Third Thousand. Fcap. 8vo, cloth gilt, 1s. 6d. net.

"To say it is useful is to understate its value. Every thinking young Christian would find it a vast advantage to possess this little vade mecum of wise counsel put in so straightforward and winsome a fashion."—Young Man.

On Playing the Game.

By S. MAIRIOTT. Large crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

"The good advice on games, manners, church, duties, &c., are just what one who has to lead young people should say to them....written brightly and picturesquely."

Rev. W. T. BARBER, of The Leys, Cambridge.

A FASCINATING STUDY.

Benares

The Stronghold of Hinduism.

By C. P. CAPE. Fully illustrated. Large 8vo. cloth.

"A deeply interesting book....written by one who has had much experience of the famous City on the Ganges....Contains a mass of interesting information."

Yorkshire Herald.

ROBERT CULLEY,

25-35, City Road, and 26, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.,
and of all Booksellers.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1909.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
JOSEPH AND HIS BRETHREN	189
THE VICTORIA HISTORY OF SHROPSHIRE	190
BOSWELL'S LETTERS TO THE REV. W. J. TEMPLE	191
INTRODUCTION TO THE HISTORY OF LANGUAGE	192
NEW NOVELS (Septimus; The Two Goodwins; The New Andromeda; Fatality; The Adventures of Louis Blake; The Faith of his Fathers; The Thunder of the Hoofs)	193
HISTORY AND BIOGRAPHY	193
OUR LIBRARY TABLE (Life of Lord Norton; Reminiscences of an Old Sportsman; Stalks Abroad; The Revolt of the Potemkin; The Practical Wisdom of the Bible; The Library)	195-196
H. R. FOX BOURNE; THE BRITISH MUSEUM READING-ROOM; M. CATULLE MENDES; AN ARABIC AUTOGRAPH AT LINCOLN'S INN; "MRS. SHAKSPEARE" IN THE LAW COURTS	197-199
LIST OF NEW BOOKS	199
LITERARY GOSSIP	200
SCIENCE—BOOKS ON BIRDS; THE HAIRY AINUS OF JAPAN; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS NEXT WEEK; GOSSIP	201-204
FINE ARTS—MODERN ART; THE LIFE OF WHISTLER; THE WORKS OF THE LATE HENRY OSPOVAT; ETCHINGS BY LIVING ARTISTS; SALE; GOSSIP; EXHIBITIONS	204-206
MUSIC—BUMPUS ON CATHEDRAL MUSIC; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	206-207
DRAMA—SAMSON; THE CHIEF OF STAFF; GOSSIP	207-208
INDEX TO ADVERTISERS	208

LITERATURE

Joseph and his Brethren. By Charles Wells. (Frowde.)

MORE than thirty years have now gone by since Charles Wells, at the age of seventy-six, came up a second time for judgment with his dangerous credentials in his hand, and was admitted by good judges to a reserved seat among the immortals. Dangerous the credentials certainly were, however convincing they might be destined to prove to the ultimate judgment of his fellow-men. An anonymous volume of 'Stories after Nature,' betraying a careful study of Boccaccio and Bandello and too strong a leaning to some of the characteristics of poetry for a safe prose style, he himself did not again submit to public judgment after the treasurable little book had failed ignominiously in 1822; but 'Joseph and his Brethren' he was prevailed upon to offer a second time, notwithstanding the stone-deaf indifference to its unusual merits shown by his coevals in 1824 on its pseudonymous first appearance. There the danger lay in the ostensible subject and the very title—'Joseph and his Brethren, a Scriptural Drama'; for who could expect to find in a "Scriptural Drama" a transfiguration of the would-be adulteress known as Potiphar's Wife into a figure of such splendour as to recall to more than one critic the name of Shakespeare, and also to point once more the moral that in the eye of what our forefathers called "the Muse," as in the eye of Mother Nature herself, there is no such thing as absolute evil or absolute good?

However, on this occasion the power and grace of that sublime miscreant whom Wells created and called Phraxanor—qualities which had carried no conviction in 1824—were destined to go home to the mark; for when, in words which he wrote to a friend, he "determined to try Phraxy again," being counselled thereto by very high authorities, the breadth and distinction of the book were generally recognized; and Wells took his place among the English poets. As Matthew Arnold said of another poet intimately acquainted with Wells in his youth, "he is with Shakespeare"; and Wells is similarly placed by a great poet. It is true that Wells's second advent had been marked by significant premonitions: in literal verity there had been for years one voice—scarcely more—crying in the wilderness that a lost poet was waiting to be, not so much found as manifested to all English-speaking people; it is true that, though never echoed from the housetops, that solitary voice had penetrated many hundreds of voiceless souls, and had been taken up and echoed from the high places whence those to whom the direction of the public taste belongs, or should belong, are wont to make themselves heard; but these premonitions by no means discount the certainty of Wells's permanence in English literature; in reality they enhance it, unless the proverbial phrase "to make assurance doubly sure" be after all as empty of meaning as it is popular.

The voice crying in the wilderness was that of Gabriel Rossetti; but according to Mr. Watts-Dunton it was the clarion of a younger poet—one who, by the by, had dedicated his own first volume to the elder—that carried conviction to the heart of a publisher when it had failed to convince the editor of a monthly magazine no less distinguished than Fraser's. In the interests of the just apportionment of glory let us say at once that the publisher was Mr. Andrew Chatto, then the young successor of John Camden Hotten, and the editor James Anthony Froude.

It is interesting to learn that Mr. Chatto, on seeing in manuscript the now celebrated essay by Mr. Swinburne on Wells, told Mr. Watts-Dunton that the scheme of republishing 'Joseph,' which had been broached to him, would be materially assisted if the aforesaid clarion were sounded through the medium of the press; and we do not doubt that Lord Morley counts among his honours that of having given a place to Mr. Swinburne's paper in The Fortnightly Review. There, at all events, it appeared, in the number for February, 1875, from the pages of which it was transferred to the second edition of 'Joseph and his Brethren,' published by Messrs. Chatto & Windus in the early part of 1876.

The time has passed, and the generation has well-nigh passed, to which belonged the duty of reviewing formally Wells's poem as revised after half a century of neglect. That agreeable duty was performed, so far as our own columns are concerned, in the issue of February 5th, 1876; and in that of April 8th, 1876, we had the pleasure of printing an interesting signed communication from Mr. Theodore Watts (now Watts-Dunton) on the resuscitated poem and its author.

Much of that contribution has been absorbed into the forty pages headed 'Rossetti and Charles Wells: Reminiscence of Kelmscott Manor,' which Mr. Henry Frowde has secured, together with the permission to reissue Mr. Swinburne's introduction, in adding to "The World's Classics," not strictly a new edition of 'Joseph and his Brethren,' but a handy reissue of the long out of print and now expensive edition of 1876. We heartily congratulate Mr. Frowde and the multitude for which he caters upon this No. CXLIII.: we do not hesitate to predict that the present generation, whom Mr. Watts-Dunton accuses of knowing nothing of 'Joseph and his Brethren,' are going to receive gladly a book which at its lumpiest—for it is issued in several styles—can be slipped into almost any reasonable pocket, and acquired for a shilling.

We think Mr. Watts-Dunton is a little too sweeping in his statement of the case against the present generation if he really means to convey that 'Joseph' has gone under again. But if he only means that the book is "a Shibboleth no longer" in the literary circles which have followed those of 1876, well and good. The 'Joseph' of 1824 did not sell at all—went, so to speak, to the knacker's yard for literary failures: the very scarcity thus created was among the influences that made the poem itself a Shibboleth in the third quarter of last century; but the complete absorption of the 1876 'Joseph,' which made it in its turn a book not quite easy to get, implies that it has been a living influence spread about amongst two generations of book-makers, book-buyers, and book-readers. With the remnant of the generation of Josephites of that third quarter, 'Joseph' wears well: Mr. Swinburne, whose extraordinarily instructed enthusiasm or enthusiastic erudition—we know not which term to prefer—guided him when quite a youngster straight to the verity about the relations of 'Joseph' to other literary phenomena, stands by his early deliverance now that, over seventy years of age, he holds unquestioned supremacy among our living poets; for here we have his introductory essay scarcely modified, if at all. Mr. Watts-Dunton is as enthusiastic about Wells as ever; and Mr. Buxton Forman (whose revision and editorship of the 1876 'Joseph' are chronicled in this new edition as the work of "the best of all authorities upon subjects pertaining to Wells, or indeed to any member of his remarkable set") is, we believe, contemplating, with unabated admiration of the poem, the issue at no very distant time of a version embodying the remarkable additions made by Wells between 1876 and his death in 1879.

Mr. Watts-Dunton's contribution to the book adds to the pages in which he has revived the familiar talk of a brilliant circle. We might cull many delightful passages from these Rossetti reminiscences. The following epigram of the poet-painter is so apt and instructive that we need not name the man concerning whom it fell from Rossetti's lips: "The finest raconteur has often to be the finest liar to keep up his credit." Hear, O noble army of fine raconteurs: believe and tremble! Then there is a charming story about Rossetti's reception of the news that Potiphar's wife was more or less whitewashed at the hands of Jâmi and other Persian writers; about his refusal to touch the subject even from the Persian point of view, and his speculation whether Morris could do anything with it—which, indeed, Morris in a certain sense did in 'The Glittering Plain,' where the legend of the dream-lover of a certain princess is exquisitely rendered. But all readers of any pretension to thorough acquaintance with English poetry should get this little pocket 'Joseph' and assimilate its contents at first hand. One word of caution: there is a change in the text at p. 130 which we are not disposed to pass unchallenged. In the editions of 1824 and 1876 Phraxanor calls Joseph

Thou laughable affection of man's form!

Mr. Watts-Dunton, true to a criticism of his own when reviewing the 1876 book in The Examiner, nearly thirty-three years ago, substitutes "affectation" for "affection." Now when Wells prepared the copy for the 1876 edition, using the 1824 print as a basis, he had been very busy all round that line: the printed page (139) is full of manuscript alterations; and much of this important scene is interpolated in small manuscript papers laboriously written. He must clearly have read the scene over and over again; yet he let "affectation" stand. Again when he went over the 1876 volume for the unpublished third edition, he worked extensively on the scene, and once more the printed page (140) containing this line has a good deal written upon it. The passage in Phraxanor's speech stands finally thus, with three new lines:—

Thou laughable affection of man's form!
A snail is less tenacious of his horns
Involving and dissolving in themselves
Sloth, and his pace swifter than you to love.

It seems to us characteristic of Wells's primæval instinct to use the word "affectation" in this place in the old sense in which it was especially applied to "the assumption and ostentatious display of deceitful appearances."

Mr. Watts-Dunton touches on the relations between Wells and Keats, both strained and unstrained—as regards the strained, very lightly. We doubt whether it is any longer needful or even desirable to use any softening disguise about the bitterness of Keats's feelings towards Wells after the villainous practical joke which the younger man—Wells was five years younger than Keats—played upon the elder's brother Tom. The case was notoriously one of unfeeling and unprincipled deception. Keats not only cut Wells, but also vowed vengeance on him. The elaborately "cruel hoax" of the bogus lady ("Amena") in love with Tom, the discovery of which had so desperate an effect on the consumptive boy, stands recorded in Keats's letters as published literally from the holographs; he did "not think death too bad for the villain," but he said that the world would "call it a frolic," so he would be "prudently revengeful." "I will harm him all I possibly can," he says; and again, "Let us leave him to his misery alone except when we can throw in a little more." We cannot but regard this episode as discreditable to Wells.

Mr. Watts-Dunton at the close of his reminiscences describes the author of 'Joseph' as "a deeply religious man," and mentions, on the authority of Smith Williams, that Wells developed about the middle of last century (when he was some fifty years old) a faculty "rare among modern poets," creating "a great sensation in Brittany by raising from the dead, through prayer, a young lady of a distinguished family"—how long "dead" we are not informed, nor are we greatly inquisitive on the point. But is the real faculty implied in the tale so very rare? Is it not, on the contrary, the widespread, but none the less precious gift of credulity—not only the common credulity of the comfortable multitude, but also that specific form of credulity which affects the person imposing on the multitude with a belief or half-belief in his own imposture? Perhaps Mr. Watts-Dunton is a little sarcastic at the middle-aged poet's expense, however unflawed his admiration, nay reverence, for the veteran poet's astonishing work in the 1876 resurrection of his buried child of 1824. As for the girl in Brittany, of course we are not expected to believe that Wells raised a corpse by praying over it, any more than that he conjured the bogus Amena into a form of flesh and blood; but perhaps he may even have thought that his Brittany praying had in fact revived a girl—not realizing that she was in a trance. What, again, has heredity to say to the peculiar form of imposture that believes or half-believes itself to be honest? Was Wells's "eminent engineer" son, after all, a man of that type? And is it to point a grim moral that Mr. Watts-Dunton closes with a short paragraph wherein he mentions that "Wells had a son, an eminent engineer"? Perhaps the time has not come for the elucidation of that point; but the fact remains that in a well-known collection of books and documents, one part of which is mentioned familiarly in a small circle as "the Wells archives," there are two letters, each signed by a Charles Wells of the generation following that of the poet. One is from the engineer's office in Paris which was the address of Wells's son for a time, the other from one of the London addresses of "the man who broke the bank at Monte Carlo"; and experts pronounce the signatures to be from the same hand.

Let us remember that practical joking such as that of the lad Wells at the cost of the lad Tom Keats is of the nature of imposture—imposture of an indefensible kind. Wells was a prince of jocularly when over eighty and bedridden —a kind of cross between Falstaff and Prince Hal in that respect. A man of profound religious convictions and strenuous religious activity may be an inveterate practical joker: Sir Arthur Blackwood was, albeit in the main a noble character and incapable of deliberate cruelty. Were Wells's miracles after all a recrudescence of the practical-joke period in which he lost, and deserved to lose, John Keats's friendship? It is a speculation worth study, and one thing is certain—that nothing resulting from the study could affect his place in English literature. He sits among our poets beyond dispute or cavil; and we can afford to learn and tell the truth about him without fear of injury to his title to the subjective immortality of the illustrious.

The Victoria History of Shropshire. Edited by William Page. Vol. I. (Constable & Co.)

THERE is ample room for a thorough history of Shropshire, for although the late Mr. Eyton bestowed infinite labour upon the twelve volumes of the 'Antiquities of Shropshire,' which he completed in 1861, that scholarly work treats chiefly of the period of Domesday and of the Anglo-Norman kings. There is nothing else worthy of the name of a county history, but this first volume gives evidence that a trustworthy work will be accomplished.

It deals in the first place with various branches of natural history, beginning with geology, and passing on from palæontology to botany and zoology. We do not propose at present to say anything more than that these different sections appear to have fallen into the hands of capable experts. To Prebendary Auden has been entrusted the subject of 'Early Man,' which is dealt with in a brief but comprehensive illustrated article. Shropshire has no traces of the Palæolithic period, when England was joined to the Continent and the conditions of climate were very different from what subsequently prevailed. The theory that no remains of the first inhabitants of Britain are likely to be found north of a line drawn through Derbyshire seems to be still generally maintained. In that early era when the Palæolithic hunter roamed the forests of Southern Britain in pursuit of mammoth or elk, Shropshire was probably either submerged or had too rigorous a climate for human habitation. The remains of Neolithic times are distributed pretty generally throughout the county, and this is also the case with bronze implements and with Late Celtic antiquities. Their respective prevalence and position are distinctly shown on a special prehistoric map.

The treatise on Romano-British Shropshire is from the authoritative pen of Prof. Haverfield. He deals consecutively with the station or town of Wroxeter, the various smaller sites of country houses or villas, the mines, and the roads, and concludes with a topographical index of all the finds hitherto recorded. Shropshire antiquaries have much yet to do. The disused lead mines still await the explorer, whilst barely a hundredth part of the area of the great county town of Viroconium, now Wroxeter, has been uncovered. The area of Wroxeter is 170 acres, or two-thirds as large again as Silchester, to which such careful attention has been lately directed; but much is known with accuracy of the outline of its history. In the earlier years of the Roman conquest, probably about A.D. 44-5, a Roman fortress was established here, garrisoned by the Fourteenth Legion; a few tombstones of its soldiers are still extant. Prof. Haverfield feels confident that the troops did not stay here for any long period; the neighbouring fortress of Chester, occupied soon after A.D. 50 at latest, superseded that of Viroconium, and became the chief place of arms in this part of Britain. The subsequent history of Viroconium does not appear to have been in any way military, but rather that of a settled Romano-British country town on the same lines as that of Silchester. No doubt it had its Forum and Basilica and its public bath, of which certain traces were found during the discoveries of 1860. The excavations of that date disclosed abundant ashes, as of a conflagration, and many skeletons, some in the streets, and several even in the hypocausts of the bath buildings:—

"The meaning is plain. The town was stormed and burnt; its citizens were massacred in the open, or met a perhaps more lingering death in the hiding-places to which they fled. The disaster was decisive. When it was past, none cared to pick up the dead bodies, to clean out the hypocausts, to sweep away the ashes from the streets or rooms. From that day Wroxeter lay desolate. For generations no man dwelt within the circuit of its walls."

A clue to the date of this devastation is afforded by a small hoard of 132 copper coins found near one of the skeletons in the hypocaust, and by a still smaller hoard at the entrance of a shop near the baths. The period of these coins suggests that the city was destroyed by Anglo-Saxon invaders in the fifth century. The article is a good critical piece of work, and well illustrated with plans, drawings, and photographs.

In the introduction to the Domesday Survey we miss Dr. Round's masterly hand, but Prof. James Tait has dealt skilfully with its main contents. There is a most able article, covering some sixty pages, by Mr. J. Charles Wall, on the 'Ancient Earthworks' of the county, illustrated by a wealth of plans.

The industries are dealt with by Mr. John Randall; their discussion involves several points of interest. Broseley has for centuries been known throughout the Midlands for its tobacco-pipes; in fact, a clay pipe is frequently termed in Shropshire "a Broseley." Dated examples of these small pipes have been found as early as 1600. Some have supposed from the shape of the pipes themselves, as well as the places where they have been found, that they were used before the introduction of tobacco in Elizabeth's reign, for native herbs or plants, medicinally or otherwise; but this is highly improbable. An interesting account is given of the rise and development of Caughley and Coalport porcelain. The ironworks and chain-making of the county receive special attention.

The last article in this volume is on 'Forestry,' by the Rev. Dr. Cox. A great deal of valuable and hitherto unrecorded information as to the early forestry of the county is here set forth from documents in the Public Record Office and other original sources. We observe one mistake. With reference to the frequency with which hayes, or enclosures for the capture of roedeer in the woodland or forest districts of Shropshire, are mentioned in Domesday, it is stated that they exceeded in number those of any other county. This is not the case: there were about sixty hayes in Shropshire, but over ninety in the neighbouring county of Chester.

Letters of James Boswell to the Rev. W. J. Temple. (Sidgwick & Jackson.)

BOSWELL's letters, revived for us by a new firm of publishers, enjoy the advantage of a mysterious history. They were written between 1758 and 1795, not without a view to publication, but were lost for more than fifty years. At Boulogne in 1850 Major Stone, of the East India Company, had the fortunate curiosity to examine a scrap of paper in which was wrapped some small purchase; it turned out to be a letter signed by James Boswell, and was traced to the store of an itinerant paper-vendor, where the letters published in 1856 were discovered. The anonymous editor of this issue is conjectured—with good reason, as we think—by Mr. Seccombe, who introduces the volume before us, to have been a Philip Francis of the Middle Temple who became later Sir Philip of the Supreme Consular Court of the Levant; but this matter also is obscure. The strangest mystery of all, however, is that these interesting, entertaining, in fact delightful letters, though appreciated by good judges of the day, till last December had never been reprinted.

The volume before us is a reprint from the first edition, the introduction by Mr. Seccombe being substituted for that of the original editor. We wish that Mr. Seccombe had been less modest—less conservative at any rate. With his view that "the editing was admirably done" we cannot agree entirely. Francis, who has intercalated blocks of exegesis and comment between the letters, writes good, straightforward prose, and appears to have been a sensible man; he admired Carlyle, and has enlivened his editorial labours with irruptions of legal facetiousness and sagacious reflections; but his lack of subtlety and the bluntness of his perceptions make him incapable of appreciating the character of Boswell. Passages in the letters which seemed to him ridiculous he, in his solicitude for the reader's enjoyment, has been careful to print in italics; for it is difficult to suppose that Boswell underlined them. The original letters are again lost; should the passages in question be really underlined, it would follow that Boswell was not unintentionally or unconsciously ridiculous; that all his life he practised an elaborate mystification; that he succeeded in hoodwinking the world; that he enlightened Temple alone, who nevertheless appears to have treated him as though he were what the world took him for; and that Francis, who saw these underlined manuscripts, and yet persisted in the conventional view of Boswell, was not a Mid-Victorian prig, but an imbecile. It is true that he has been stupid enough to mangle and emasculate the letters that he was employed to publish; an officious prude unquestionably he was, but no fool, much less an idiot.

To discuss the character of Boswell has ever been a delicate, not to say dangerous, undertaking; but at least we may affirm that those who, judging him from the 'Life of Johnson,' are dissatisfied with the ordinary, unfavourable view, will find their estimate notably confirmed by these letters. They will find the popular "Bozzy" ridiculous, vain, and a little vulgar, something of a snob, of a sycophant even, with an undignified zeal for notoriety and an imperfect moral sense; but also they will find Boswell, the friend of Hume and Johnson, who had a passion for excellence, a generous nature, a good understanding, and a genius for observation. They will see how Boswell expresses thoughts and feelings, often sufficiently commonplace, in words so astonishingly appropriate that we are almost blinded by the sheer truth of the self-revelation; and they may even conjecture that some of Boswell's performances, which have been lightly attributed to dull self-complacency or a defective sense of proportion, are more probably the effects of a whimsical and fantastic mind through which ran a gloomy strain of madness. Be that as it may, we now select for quotation a few characteristic passages, leaving the reader to decide for himself when and how far Boswell is laughing at "Bozzy."

The correspondence with Temple, a fellow-student at Edinburgh, began in 1758, when Boswell was eighteen; for the first eight years, however, he was too busy making acquaintance with Johnson, travelling on the Continent, and conducting his famous Corsican adventure, to be a very prolific letter-writer. In 1766 he settled down in Edinburgh to the law, which he found intolerably dreary, and a love-affair, which he found too exciting. "The dear infidel," as he called her, besides being another man's wife, seems to have been an extravagant and disreputable young woman:

"In a former part of this letter I have talked a great deal of my sweet little mistress; I am, however, uneasy about her. Furnishing a house and maintaining her with a maid will cost me a great deal of money, and it is too like marriage, or too much a settled plan of licentiousness; but what can I do?"

"Besides, she is ill-bred, quite a rompish girl. She debases my dignity; she has no refinement, but she is very handsome and very lively."

What he did was to break with her; four weeks later he writes:—

"My life is one of the most romantic that I believe either you or I really know of; and yet I am a very sensible, good sort of man. What is the meaning of this, Temple? You may depend upon it that very soon my follies will be at an end, and I shall turn out an admirable member of society. Now that I have given my mind the turn, I am totally emancipated from my charmer, as much as from the gardener's daughter who now puts on my fire and performs menial offices like any other wench; and yet just this time twelvemonth I was so madly in love as to think of marrying her."

The frequency and solemnity of Boswell's resolutions to amend his ways are extraordinary, though the fact that his correspondent was a curate suggests an explanation; in carrying them out he was perfectly normal.

Boswell tells us that he "looks with horror on adultery," and the love-affairs with which his letters overflow appear, for the most part, to have been innocent; for an "Italian angel," Zelide (whom he knew at Utrecht), Miss Bosville, and "La Belle Irlandaise" he cherished at different times a chaste flame; while Miss Blair, a neighbour and lady of fortune, very nearly caught him. But Boswell decided that he would not have a "Scots lass." "You cannot say how fine a woman I may marry; perhaps a Howard or some other of the noblest in the kingdom." "Rouse me, my friend!" he cries; "Kate has not fire enough; she does not know the value of her lover!" Nevertheless, he was to have a "Scots lass" after all, for in the autumn of 1769 he married Miss Margaret Montgomerie, "a true Montgomerie, whom I esteem, whom I love, after fifteen years, as on the day when she gave me her hand" ('Letter to the People of Scotland').

After his marriage Boswell's life continued agitated and desultory: he practised at the Scotch Bar, without much success, and was called to the English; almost every year he visited London, where he cultivated Johnson, enjoyed good company and fine, made the most of his social and literary importance, and revelled in the genuine and flattering friendship of Paoli, who seems to have made him free of his house: "I felt more dignity when I had several servants at my devotion, a large apartment, and the convenience and state of a coach."

It was absurd of him, no doubt, to say, "Am I not fortunate in having something about me that interests most people at first sight in my favour?" but it seems to have been near the truth. "I am really the great man now. I have had David Hume in the forenoon, and

Mr. Johnson in the afternoon." These great men were interested somehow, and so, one must suppose, was Miss Silverton:

"There is a Miss Silverton in the Fly with me, an amiable creature, who has been in France. I can unite little fondnesses with perfect conjugal love."

There was, too, "an agreeable young widow" who, also in a fly, "nursed me, and supported my lame foot on her knee."

Boswell's life in Edinburgh was not altogether happy; he hated the rough society of Scotch lawyers, and quarrelled with his father, the Laird of Auchinleck, who seems to have been an unsympathetic old man. The Laird died in 1782, and seven years later Boswell lost his "valuable wife." His story becomes melancholy: money troubles and family perplexities beset him (he was left with five children); his breaking health appears to have aggravated his terrible disorder. After his wife's death he came to London for good. Already he had taken a house in Queen Anne Street, and here he worked hard at 'The Life,' comforted a little by his assurance that it would be a masterpiece:

"I am absolutely certain that my mode of biography, which gives not only a History of Johnson's visible progress through the world, and of his publications, but a view of his mind in his letters and conversations, is the most perfect that can be conceived, and will be more of a Life than any work that has ever yet appeared."

With this proud but just prophecy we may leave him; he died in 1795.

There are misprints on pp. 52, 141, 214, and a blunder carelessly reprinted from the 1856 edition on p. 165, which should be rectified in a second edition.

Introduction to the Natural History of Language. By T. G. Tucker. (Blackie & Son.)

THIS interesting treatise gives a fair general idea of the present position of the study which the author would prefer to call "glottology," had not the term "misses that acceptance which seems to denote ideal aptness." For an Introduction it is rather bulky, but more than two-thirds of the space is devoted to the Classification and Distribution of Languages—departments of the subject which can be skipped, and referred to only as required.

With regard to the nature and origin of speech and other general topics treated by W. D. Whitney, the author is in substantial agreement with that soundest of comparative philologists, though the title suggests Max Müller's classification of linguistic study as a physical science.

Prof. Tucker makes laudable efforts, which are only occasionally unsuccessful, to resist the influence of preconceptions which embarrass so many philologists, owing to "an instinctive aim of the human intellect to arrive as far as possible at unity, whether of origin or principle, in the phenomena which it encounters." He accepts as approximately correct Friedrich Müller's estimate of the number of apparently unconnected groups of languages, namely, about a hundred. The development of languages and dialects is on the whole admirably delineated, the exposition being made easy by ingenious diagrams. After the prevalent dogmatism in respect to the causes of phonetic change the following sentence is refreshing:—

"It seems possible to detect the influence of unconscious psychological operations, which cause one displacement to be followed by others throughout a series. It seems hardly probable that the wholesale shifting of the long vowels in English, bōt to boat, fēt to feet, mȳs to mice, bōt to boot, mūs to mouse, should have been brought about simply by physical causes, inasmuch as there is no avoidance of the several vowel-sounds as such, but only a progressive transposition of them."

We might add that in such shifting of sounds the instinctive appreciation of difference between heard sounds and the instinctive tendency to imitate the appreciated difference seem to have persisted, while the imitation of one or other sound of a series grew less and less accurate. Several obvious causes of phonetic change—such as a general increase or diminution in the average speed of connected speech in a community—are left unnoticed or too much in the background.

With respect to the unsubstantiated contraction of Latin "-orum" to "-um," erroneously assumed to explain the genitive plural "deum," we are told that "such a contraction is impossible"; though the ascertained facts of phonetics give far too much trouble to leave time for the contemplation of possibilities. In linguistic matters universal propositions, whether positive or negative, whether expressed or implied, are seldom or never safe. The pair of doublets "peruke" and "periwig" is enough to invalidate the following statements: "It will be found that such doublets differ materially in sense" (from another page may be added "in all such cases"). "There would, indeed, otherwise be no room for both." Here we have an unsubstantiated psychological reason given for an untenable proposition. Doublets, do, of course, differ in sense in a large percentage of cases.

Some ingenious arguments are urged against the notions that "language began with inseparable irregular conglomerations (similar to those in the holophrastic tongues), and that the component elements subsequently disentangled themselves; but their force is impaired by the inapt selection of the illustrative phrase in the following sentence:—

"It is impossible to comprehend a genesis of compounds or conglomerations forming such predications as 'dog barks,' if the components were not previously in existence and ready to combine for the purpose."

The phrase "man eats," instead of "dog barks," should have been repeated from the previous page. For if the bark of a dog sounds so that two human beings are likely to hear it, and if one of the two utters "bow-wow," the other must grasp some such meaning as "Does dog bark?" or "dog barks," the action being expressed, the agent inseparably implied, and the grammar inferred. The easy dis-entanglement—"bow," the dog, "wow," barks—may have occurred somewhere at some time.

However, in view of the vastness and intricacy of the subject and the eccentricities of many of his authorities, Prof. Tucker has made surprisingly few false steps, and a little judicious pruning would raise his work to a high grade of excellence.

NEW NOVELS.

Septimus. By William J. Locke. (John Murray.)

IN 'Septimus' Mr. Locke develops the fantastic strain in him of which he has recently given rather overwhelming evidence. He began his career as a novelist with a serious aim, and his art then and later was delicately sexual. We are not sure whether he did not reach his highest level in this genre with 'Where Love Is.' The creator of Marcus Ordeyne is quite another person. Started on the lines of genuine sentimental comedy, he soon acquired pace and ease and—extravagance. Through 'The Beloved Vagabond,' whimsical enough and unreal, he progressed to extravaganza such as he threw into dramatic form in 'The Palace of Pleasure,' and such as he has given us in this his latest book. 'Septimus' is to be considered as one of Mr. Locke's fantastic pirouettes; and as such it is amusing, and witty and entertaining enough. It is, we should judge, a determined exercise in the bizarre. Septimus is no human being at all, but a creature of faëry; and Clem Sypher, the proprietor of a patent pill, is broadly farcical. It is probable that this story was written with one eye on the stage; Sypher and Septimus and their respective drolleries were meant to be shown off by the footlights. Looked at from that point of view, it is clear that Sypher and Septimus must pair off with heroines suitably and happily, as they do; and that the reader must not murmur at the sentimental turn that fun and extravaganza take. It is all Mr. Locke's huge joke, and it is good fun.

The Two Goodwins. By R. Murray Gilchrist. (John Milne.)

THIS is as charming a country idyll as we have seen for a long day. It belongs somehow to the sphere of 'Under the Greenwood Tree,' though it lacks Mr. Hardy's humour and sense of fate. The two Goodwins are William and Charlotte, children of a well-to-do retired tanner; and the book is concerned with their love-stories. We confess to finding Charlotte's colourless, for her young man is not definitely or interestingly limned for us. William's tale, on the other hand, is spirited and faithful. But the best of the work is compassed in the character-sketch of a grandmother, an admirable study on which the reader's interest centres very early. Mr. Gilchrist's pretty pastoral shows once more his intimate knowledge of Derbyshire and Derby folk.

The New Andromeda. By Carlton Dawe. (Eveleigh Nash.)

MR. DAWE'S comparison may pass, though it would have been more to the point if Cepheus had been the monster petrified by Perseus as well as the man who chained Andromeda to the rock. Mr. Dawe's monster is a mad English baronet who strips his wife and ties her to a tree about five miles from Guildford. Her rescuer is a poetic motorist, who, falling short of the achievement of Perseus, fails to prevent the commission of a horrible crime. A mild facetiousness is developed from Andromeda's need of clothes, and the author frolics prettily with platonic friendship until Andromeda relents, and romance is given its due. The dialogue, sometimes attractive in its disdain of conventionality and the freshness of its criticism of life, is occasionally deficient in colloquial flavour.

Fatality. By G. G. Chatterton. (John Long.)

THE one attractive thing about this story is the heroine. Esterelle Townsend, to whom Fate is uncommonly hard, is a pleasing figure, brave, tender, and cheerful among all the misfortunes that assail her. Alan Harcourt, the young officer who wins her heart; Sir Frederick Delacour, the wealthy, abnormally reserved, middle-aged baronet whom she is forced into marrying; Nurse Wilson, the deeply wronged, vindictive woman who poisons the baronet in circumstances which cause Esterelle to be suspected of the crime—these conventional figures are ill-fitting companions for so delicately fashioned a heroine. The incidents of the story are much too artificial to convey the idea of fatality. Mr. Chatterton writes with ease, and possesses a descriptive power that is most effectively used in some Cornish scenes; but he is scarcely of the order of novelists who can ignore the popular liking for a happy ending.

The Adventures of Louis Blake. By Louis Becke. (Werner Laurie.)

THE adventures of Louis Blake read very much as though they were the adventures of Louis Becke, and in good part they probably were. This does not at all detract from the interest and sense of reality. We follow the hero's career from his school days in the beautiful capital of New South Wales, through various ups and downs in California, to a trading expedition among the South Sea islands, which ends with his successful establishment as an island trader, with a schooner of his own and a large circle of native friends and retainers. Those who know Mr. Becke's other work will rightly surmise that such a narrative affords him excellent scope for the utilization of his wide and varied experience of the islands of the South Pacific. There is beachlore enough in this story to supply half a dozen globe-trotters' books of travel.

The Faith of his Fathers. By A. E. Jacomb. (Melrose.)

MISS JACOMB-HOOD'S story is an interesting, if rather laborious study of the disastrous effects which an uncompromising Puritanism in a person of authority may have upon his immediate surroundings. Mr. Atkinson, a leading brother in the Wesleyan society of a Midland town, is also the father of a family, and though a kindly, affectionate man, he, like Abraham, unflinchingly offers up his only son Stephen upon the altar of his faith. No angel intervening (for Mary Wilson, equally narrow and unbending in her religion, stands aside at this crisis from the man she loves), Stephen's life is destined to be ruined in company with the barmaid whom he has been forced to marry, and whom he ultimately kills in a fit of temper. His sister Rachel, more fortunate, defies her father, and marries an intelligent man who is regarded as an atheist. A really pathetic figure, as she is also the most attractive in the book, is Mrs. Atkinson, the sweet, placid wife and mother, the slow undermining of whose confidence in her husband's judgment results in the loss of her reason. The story is carefully written, and gives a realistic, but not too highly coloured picture of a certain class of provincial society.

The Thunder of the Hoofs. By William H. Lang. (John Long.)

THE man who sported on an Australian station the circus dress worn (according to the picture on its front cover) by the hero of this ingenuous story would be mercilessly chaffed and see the error of his ways. But, absurdly unreal though the picture is, the story is well enough, for those who like this kind of thing, and written clearly by one whose love of cricket, horse flesh, and the sporting life generally is as genuine as his literary style is unpretentious. It is not Whyte-Melville, but it is simple, cheerful narrative on Whyte-Melville lines, the background chosen being for the one half Scotch, and for the other Australian.

HISTORY AND BIOGRAPHY.

State and Family in Early Rome. By Charles W. L. Launspach. (Bell & Sons.)—This book, dealing to a considerable extent with prehistoric matters (including in that term whatever antecedes credible annals), is, as the author confesses, "a bold effort of synthesis," not so much, as he says in the next clause, "calculated to stimulate the imagination" as to exhibit the value of it in any historian worthy the name. We think the volume, professedly sober and legal, a good specimen of this kind of historic imagination, and if we find reason to criticize it, we find such reason rather in its assumptions than in its method of reasoning from them.

Concerning the largest problem of all, and one which cannot but influence his whole account of primitive Roman society, the author seems to have antiquated notions. Ihering's studies on early Aryan history, quoted as his main authority, were published in 1894, and since that time ideas of what the Aryans found when they came into Southern Europe have been completely changed. We no longer think that the Aryans brought a hitherto unknown civilization into nomadic or semi-nomadic Europe, but believe that they, a late arrival in the history of Europe, found old and well-developed culture in many parts of their new conquest. Relies not only of the civilization, but also of the barbarism of these earlier occupants were not infrequent in early historic times. Thus when Cæsar, to the author's surprise, speaks of polyandry still existing in Britain, we may conceive this custom not among its Aryan possessors, but rather among the older population, which they conquered, but did not extirpate. Without further investigation, and further exploration, we cannot tell how far such previous inhabitants in Italy may not have coloured even Roman institutions. One of these non-Aryan populations, which seems to have immigrated by way of the sea, at a not very distant time, survived and influenced the Romans greatly. This was the Etruscan, which our author is out of date in holding to have been an Aryan race. Corssen's wonderful attempt to prove this by their language proved a disastrous failure. The origin of this strange people was discussed with great acuteness and learning at the Roman Historical Congress of 1903, with the result of confirming Herodotus's account of their Asianic origin.

Our author speaks with confidence not only of the general character, but also of the special provisions of the XII. Tables, and yet he tells us that we only know them through quotations from far later writers, on whose accuracy (we will add) we cannot depend. How much this code (he will hardly call it a code) owes to the influence of the Greeks he nowhere discusses, but who can tell that on such a question as that of Testaments the Romans may not have borrowed from Greek practice?

Mr. Launspach knows perfectly well that Livy's account of the King of Rome is hardly historical, yet he quotes that account for details regarding the election of the various kings, and the consequent prehistoric powers of the comitia curiata. He repeats the vulgar saying that representative government was unknown to the ancients. That is not true either in theory or practice. The Amphictiony at Delphi was managed by a strictly representative body, but it often passed from its proper religious sphere into politics. The Achæan League was nominally governed by a direct assembly, but in practice by the richer or idler members of each city, who attended its occasional parliaments.

These and some other criticisms have suggested themselves to us, not because we seek to diminish thereby our general estimate of the book, but because it is in the main an excellent piece of work, clear and temperate, written with a close attention to the object in hand, and excluding "the merely dramatic or picturesque." It is a lawyer's treatment of one department of Roman law—the relation of the family to the State; and we know not where an intelligent student could find a better exposition in brief of a long and thorny subject. The author's style is cold and clear, but not beyond cavil. We do not like "to voice," still less "to antagonize," or "thrived" instead of throve, though such things are defensible. We also object to the epithet "exuberant" for the imagination of the Greeks, which was great just because it was kept from being exuberant. But these are only trifles. We congratulate the author on his sound and sensible book.

Select Cases concerning the Law Merchant, A.D. 1270-1638.—Vol. I. Local Courts. Edited by Charles Gross. (Quaritch.)—The solid merits of Prof. Gross's edition of 'Select Cases from the Coroners' Rolls,' published in 1895 for the Selden Society, are so well known that the Society must be congratulated on having induced the learned Harvard professor to undertake two more volumes for it. It is the more happy a circumstance since Dr. Gross has entered on a work which brings him back to the history of mediæval municipal institutions, the subject in which he first made his reputation. Of the two volumes of 'Select Cases concerning the Law Merchant' the first is now before us, while a second, dealing with the Law Merchant in the superior courts, is reserved for a future date. In this first instalment Prof. Gross limits himself to commercial cases tried in local courts, and particularly in those rapid, unceremonious, but effective aids to business, the special market and fair courts, quaintly called "Courts of Pie Powder." Such summary tribunals seem to have been common throughout Western Christendom, and with us they took their name from the dusty wandering trader, the "pede pulverisatus" for whose benefit they were expressly set up. But though itinerant traders were called "pede pulverisati" on the Continent, it was only in England that the courts which entitled them to recover their debts before they sped on to the next fair were called after them. And it is only in England that any records of these humble market courts have been preserved. The contents of these records have, however, been very little studied, though F. W. Maitland led the way, as usual, by publishing some early rolls of the St. Ives Market Court. The very interesting St. Ives series are now extensively drawn upon by Dr. Gross, and constitute the early part of his present volume. He has, moreover, gathered material from all parts of the country and all types of market courts—from Carnarvon to Norwich, from Northwich and Halton to Exeter and Wye. Nearly all his matter is from the Public Record Office. A short Introduction adequately calls our attention to the chief features of the fair courts, defines their relations to the ordinary borough courts, and describes Prof. Gross's methods of editing. He has given us careful glossaries and indexes, and has not grudged the weary labour of translation which the Selden Society imposes upon its editors. Sometimes, perhaps, Prof. Gross has neglected opportunities in identifying his personal and proper names, and on rare occasions has not given us the normal form. "Lisle" and "Poperingen" are curious variants from the ordinary spellings of two well-known Flemish towns; "Mabelyn" (p. 108) is "Elyn's son," not a surname; and why should "Colebou" be "Colomby," a form unknown to Norman topography? As a mere guess we should prefer "Quillebeuf." But these identifications are troublesome and uncertain, and their unravelling would have taken Prof. Gross far afield from the "Law Merchant."

Auto de Fé and Jew. By Elkan N. Adler. (Frowde.)—The greater part of Dr. Adler's work has already appeared in The Jewish Quarterly Review; but, as he supplements Dr. Lea's invaluable 'History of the Inquisition of Spain,' it is convenient to have his articles expanded in book form. Dr. Adler owes nothing to the literary graces, and even ventures to say (p. 69) of Leo X. that "his Holiness sat on the fence" till

Charles V. disclosed his policy. However, he is a sound judge of evidence, has ample knowledge of his subject, and certainly proves that the number of autos has been greatly under-estimated. Two or three slips need correction. Juan Alfonso de Baena may possibly have been of Jewish descent, as Dr. Adler believes (p. 15); yet the chief reason for thinking so is that the word "iudino" is applied to him in his "Cancionero," as printed by Pidal, and a glance at the manuscript shows that "iudino" is a misreading of indino. "Relacions" (p. 17) "Don Deza" (p. 63), and "Rivista" (p. 163) are incorrect; and St. Theresa was not a seventeenth-century mystic (p. 94). Apart from these occasional lapses, Dr. Adler is eminently trustworthy.

Two English Queens and Philip. By Martin Hume. (Methuen & Co.)—This volume forms one of a series of historical biographies or biographical histories edited by Major Hume under the general title of "Romantic History." The publishers claim for the series a special appeal to the modern reader as exhibiting a method which "is as different from biography as it is from the old-fashioned impersonal history," as "a humanisation of the past, an attempt to bring back, not a knowledge of events alone, but also the atmosphere in which they happened."

This method risks loss of perspective, from the necessity of grouping; but in able hands it certainly proves effective.

In spite of its "popular" appeal this volume is essentially a work of specialization, and the author's handling of authorities is evident on every page. The book naturally resolves itself into a character-study of Philip:—

"a slow, laborious, unimaginative, morbidly conscientious man, a good son, a good husband, and, according to his lights, a good father; kind and indulgent to his servants, patient under adversity and humble in success: indeed, a man endowed with most of the elements of righteousness; and yet with a sense of right so blunted by his zeal as to think that he might do God's work with the weapons of the devil, and turn enemies into friends by fear."

Major Hume is concerned in developing this view of Philip's character in his relations, we may say, with three queens—Mary Tudor, the devoted and despairing wife whom he married in the very spirit of martyrdom; Elizabeth, with whom he fought for over thirty years a duel of diplomacy, and, at last, of war; and Mary Stuart, who was, after all, but a pawn in his game.

The "setting" involves a study of the relations between the European Powers during a period when the rivalry between France and Spain formed still the central drama in European politics, and England played more conspicuously and emphatically the "balancing" part which the early Tudors had chosen for her. The chief merit of this volume is the eminently clear and interesting unravelling of the subtle and complex diplomacy which protracted the drama of the times. Every motive and factor receives due appraisal, yet the narrative is never wearisome. The author's keen appreciation of character leads to a more sympathetic and impartial exposition than is usual of characters like Mary Tudor or Philip himself.

The theme itself is severe rather than "romantic," and the immense space to be covered necessarily precludes much picturesque detail, and this in spite of the glimpse of the pageantry of the times in the description of Philip's magnificence in dress and equipment on his first coming to England as Mary's bridegroom. Again, the darker sides of the life of the time—the persecutions under Mary and Elizabeth alike, the bitter feeling underlying the plots against the life and throne of Elizabeth—necessarily fall into subordination to the story of diplomacy.

From this continuous and concentrated narrative the reader can see, as he hardly would from general histories, how very real the Spanish danger was from the time when Mary Tudor was ready to lay England at the feet of Philip, throughout the reign of Elizabeth. The great scheme by which Mary, Queen of Scots, after her marriage with Darnley, was with the help of Spain to win the crown of England failed mainly through Philip's cautiousness, which also, together with his distrust of allies, prevented his giving whole-hearted support to the series of plots in Mary's favour during the whole period of her imprisonment in England. The story of these forms good reading.

It is a pity that the author allows certain affectations to mar an otherwise pleasant style of writing. The illustrations are eminently interesting and well chosen.

History of South Africa since September, 1795. By George McCall Theal. Vol. I. (Swan Sonnenschein.)—Dr. Theal's 'History' has by this time attained to the position of a standard work, so that a detailed notice of this new edition is uncalled for. As now recast, the earlier part of the old edition has been expanded into three volumes, forming a complete whole in themselves, under the title of 'History and Ethnography of South Africa'; while the 'History of South Africa since 1795,' of which the first instalment is before us, will be an independent whole in five volumes. On comparing the new vol. i. with the edition of 1891, we find that the chapters have been to a certain extent rearranged, and that many additional details have been inserted; while some have been corrected, e.g., in the account of the Slachter's Nek episode, pp. 229-41, where also some expressions of opinion have been toned down. The volume closes with the arrival of Sir Lowry Cole as Governor (September 7th, 1828), the sixteen chapters embraced in it thus being equal to seven and a half in the old edition. The chapters on the Bantu tribes (xv., xvi.) have been entirely remodelled. We should be glad to know Dr. Theal's reason for writing "Unandi" for Umnandi, and "Swangendaba" for Zwangendaba; in the latter case Zulu etymology ("Know by hearsay") shows the form with Z to be correct.

Concerning Lafcadio Hearn. By George M. Gould. (Fisher Unwin.)—This is the latest of several books about Lafcadio Hearn, whose death occurred only in September, 1904; and like its predecessors, it comes from America. Dr. Gould's position is somewhat odd. He knew Hearn from 1889 onwards, and was obviously on terms of intimacy with him; yet he seems to have disapproved of his friend thoroughly in many ways, and he can, and does, take the coldest views of him in these biographical notes. For Dr. Gould expressly repudiates the idea of writing a life of Hearn. In his Preface he says bluntly: "Of Lafcadio Hearn there has been, and there will be, no excuse for any biography whatever." Dr. Gould thinks that "a properly edited volume of his letters, and, perhaps, a critical estimate of the methods and development of his imaginative power are... most desirable." This collection of notes is designed as a contribution to that end. It is a strange contribution. Dr. Gould is astonishingly dispassionate, and would appear to be removed from Hearn's outlook by infinite differences. Hearn was nothing if not passionate and wayward; his critic reminds us rather of a scientific man who has caught a specimen, which may or may not be of value, but which requires investigation. Not that Dr. Gould does not admire Hearn; as a writer of letters he admires him profoundly, and he is manifestly interested in his literary progress. Yet he writes with detachment:—

"He has been spoken of as 'a great man,' which, of course, he was not. Two talents he had, but these were far from constituting personal greatness. Deprived by nature, by the necessities of his life, or by conscious intention, of religion, morality, scholarship, magnanimity, loyalty, character, benevolence, and other constituents of personal greatness, it is more than folly to endeavour to place him thus wrongly before the world."

This seems to abolish Hearn in a sentence. Further we read that he was absorbed by "blood, sensualism, and fiendishness" in his literary work, and that he revelled in the horrible. Dr. Gould, it seems, endeavoured to demonstrate to Hearn the existence of Deity, and Hearn declared that he "gave him a soul." Moreover, it was Dr. Gould who persuaded him to go to Japan, for which feat he modestly claims credit:—

"It is plain that the Japanese period and work crowns his life-labours splendidly, and that his masterful pictures of Japanese characters, traditions, and religion now constitute one of our most precious literary treasures. They have also been of profound service to Japan."

It is contended by some Japanese authorities that Hearn's work is by no means illuminative of Japan. Dr. Gould states that, despite the fact that he lived over a dozen years in the country and married a Japanese wife, he was unable to read a Japanese newspaper or speak a word of the language. Dr. Gould's admiration of the writer is distinctly limited by his statement that Hearn was incapable of doing more than transmit impressions. Apparently this destroys his creativeness. Hearn deserted his friends, and turned on those who had been kind to him. If this account of him be correct—it is attacked in the current Nineteenth Century—his conduct was in some respects particularly noisome. To a mixed ancestry may be due incongruities of many sorts in his character. All the American books about him appear to make a mystery of his parentage, and Dr. Gould thinks it unlikely that anything definite and of value will be discovered on the subject. As members of the family are still living there is no reason why this should be, if there is any real necessity to learn more. The fact is that the apotheosis of Hearn is being overdone. He owes much of his posthumous fame, as we have said before, to the fact that he ended life as a naturalized Japanese, and expounded the East to the West at a time when the latter was getting interested in the former. Hearn had a quick and lively fancy and a nervous imagination. He took up impressions easily and swiftly, and he wrote with a vivid pen. Thus he will take his place among literary figures of our times. Dr. Gould's book contains an elaborate bibliography, which has been compiled by Miss Stedman.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

MR. JOHN MURRAY publishes the Life of Lord Norton, by Mr. William S. Child-Pemberton, who has done better with a topic of less romantic interest than he did in his memoirs of Baroness de Bode. Mr. Child-Pemberton could hardly be expected to rake up a rude speech by Bright at Birmingham, in which he put more crudely that unfavourable judgment of Sir Charles Adderley, afterwards Lord Norton, which is recorded here in a letter. The posts held in the course of a long life by the subject of the memoir made it inevitable that we should have a regular biography, in which, indeed, are some interesting passages.

Although Adderley's Colonial policy has been prominent in earlier books, it still attracts the attention of the reader. No one can wonder at the preference given, among Adderley's varied opinions on Colonial government, to those which were sound and are now accepted. It is, however, to be noted that the views put forth by Adderley in his writings of 1861 were received with delight by the school who reject with horror some of Lord Norton's ultimate declarations upon the subject. Moreover, there was a time when Disraeli, acting with Cobden against Palmerston, expressed on behalf of the Tory party historic adherence to doctrines for which his later admirers have apologized or sought excuse. The view that the Colonies were "a millstone round our neck" was entertained by many who afterwards took a different view and fell in with that popular belief of earlier days which they had condemned as ignorant. Writing in support of Adderley's pamphlet on the 'Relations of England with the Colonies,' dedicated to the Conservative leader in 1861, Disraeli expressed complete agreement, but declared "the theme beyond the domain of reasoning," on account of the excitement of "the passions of the people." The Cecil who was afterwards, as Lord Salisbury, Disraeli's successor, differed, and, writing before he had read the pamphlet, made use of the prudent phrase, "From what I know of your uncompromising doctrines I cannot hope that I shall agree." Both Salisbury's letter and that of Lowe, who was on the Adderley-Disraeli side, assumed that we were at war with the United States. Salisbury on the 20th of December wrote: "The present war, if it comes to that, will draw a good deal of attention to the question of Colonial Empire, whether it be worth having or at what price." Lowe's words, penned as late as the last day of the year, were: "A state of war is not a good time for raising these questions." In reviewing other memoirs we have lately had occasion to note the curious calm, if not indifference, with which British statesmen contemplated at the end of 1861 a war with the United States, for which our preparation was only that which Panmure and Queen Victoria have described. Disraeli's letters on Colonial subjects in 1864 are curiously like those of Bright at the same date. The Conservative leader declares that "the country has" been "long accustomed to the idea of what they call Colonial Empire, and the power and profit which they erroneously associate with their obsolete conceptions." Bright thought that there was "a more reasonable temper" than formerly prevailed, "and the evil principles so long taught by Lord Palmerston seem to be losing their influence." He was willing to serve on a Colonial Committee for which he recommended Baxter, afterwards Secretary of the Treasury, and, in the language of the present day, a representative "Little Englander." Adderley is entitled to credit for having followed "his friend Godley, the originator of his Colonial policy," in the sound views as to Colonial self-government with which he began and ended his association with Colonial affairs.

"OLD-FASHIONED" is the only description that suits Mr. W. B. Woodgate and the greater portion of his Reminiscences of an Old Sportsman (Eveleigh Nash). He and his book are, indeed, old-fashioned, both in the good and in the bad sense of the term. We shall not dwell upon cat-killing, or a taste for cock-fighting and dog-fighting, and a desire to witness public hangings; but prefer to consider the pleasanter side. Towards his rivals, as towards his friends, Mr. Woodgate is a kind "old oar"; and hardly any one is attacked by him except the Bishop of Hereford, when, as Dr. Percival, he was the head of a college or a school, and Mr. Winston Churchill, who is, we suppose, fair game. Mr. Woodgate's politics are as easygoing generally as his old-fashioned Toryism allows; and the virulence of his language about Mr. Winston Churchill, showing as it does power in the oarsman to conquer the "bargee," is mainly based upon the fact that Mr. Churchill had changed sides. It is unnecessary to ask Mr. Woodgate how we were to carry out the policy towards Germany which he blames Mr. Balfour's Cabinet for not pursuing: "We should have firmly intimated to her that we intended to sink what she had already got if she proceeded to extend her navy." Even Nelson could not sink the Toulon fleet while it stayed at home. Mr. Woodgate is so persuasive in his frankness and transparent honesty that, far from resenting such epithets as "parasite" or "vermin," Mr. Winston Churchill will probably feel sorry for the author that his first attempt to witness a hanging was spoilt by a friend's long sleep, similar to that described in the case of the Lord Tomnoddy of 'The Ingoldsby Legends.' So, too, with the scholarship of Mr. Woodgate. He displays such interest in literary and classical points that we shall not ask disagreeable questions as to the exact nature of his hypothetical resemblance to "Cassandra" as "a prophet of ill omen."

There are pleasant anecdotes of many of his contemporaries. A courageous speech addressed to college authorities by another great oarsman, "W. Wightman Wood, now County Court Judge," is magnificent, and we learn with pleasure that

"Wood carried the day; and Plumptre adjusted his spectacles and gave judgment off-hand without condescending to consult his juniors, the other dons. He had been much impressed, he said, by the force of Mr. Wood's arguments, and the college would not be sent down."

Another anecdote—let us hope apocryphal, but full of detail—describes the great "John Morley of Lincoln...who was anything but a betting man," laying "100 to 1" on a cricket score, and losing the rash bet. Such is the frankness of Mr. Woodgate that he explains how, when a Radley school-boy, he used to poach pheasants and consign the game by a carrier to himself as though a present from fond parents. He also tells us how at a much later period he earned guineas by writing sermons for clergymen, who were under the belief that he, too, was in holy orders.

Mr. Woodgate is a man who, like all popular oarsmen, has had many nicknames in his day. One of them was episcopal, and another we believe theological. The only one which he explains is based upon a very different accomplishment, and goes back to the time when, as a freshman of light weight, Mr. Woodgate played "the part of Lady Barbara in 'The Little Savage.'" It seems difficult to believe, after scanning the many portraits of the author in this volume, that he was indeed "very effeminate in appearance." Mr. Woodgate has some sound observations on the recklessness with which University "colours" or "Blues" have been conferred of late times; and others, as wise and learned as would be expected of the author of a good volume in the Badminton series, upon the reason why professionals, while always inferior as oarsmen to amateurs, are invariably superior as scullers in racing boats. The fact is generally known, but we do not remember that any earlier writer has shown the cause. So, too, was it left for a recent essayist to explain the simple mental process by which the best of civilized dogs is forced to bite the postman.

Stalks Abroad: being some Account of the Sport obtained during a Two Years' Tour of the World, by Harold Frank Wallace (Longmans & Co.), is a pleasant description of the sporting side of a holiday. Part of the book has appeared in Country Life, and it is amply illustrated by reproductions from photographs and drawings by the author, which in treatment resemble similar work by Mr. J. G. Millais, and are of much merit.

America is first described, the author being attracted thereto by a description of the Yellowstone Park surreptitiously perused during French lessons at Eton. The Park and its inhabitants, Wyoming, British Columbia, and the Rocky Mountains were visited, and varieties of game were hunted. Of the Rocky Mountain goat, which we know as Haploceros montanus, here called Oreamnos, Mr. Wallace says that "he is an anachronism; an unfortunate animal antedated for the age in which he lives, bearing to the mammals of his country the same relationship as does the pelican to the birds. They both in their respective spheres look as prehistoric as a non-bridgite at a fashionable dinner-party."

Next, New Zealand red deer come in for notice, and it is said that in places their outlook for the future is far from promising. Overstocking and bad management have led to deterioration, and the number of poor heads and malformations is excessive. These remarks may be commended to the persons in control of the forests.

Then there is a chapter on Japan, "a vurry hypnotic place," describing a deer drive in order to dishorn the stags; and another on small-game in India, as the casual sportsman without friends at court has but slender opportunities for big game.

Perhaps the trip to British East Africa made amends, for plenty of shots were obtained, the chief victims being the generally ungainly and ungamelike antelopes. Lions, though often heard, were not to be got; and the only elephant shot, and lost at the time, was, when recovered, found to have undersized tusks, which were confiscated by Government.

The Revolt of the Potemkin. By Constantine Feldmann. Translated by Constance Garnett. (Heinemann.)—Few people can have forgotten the announcement which appeared in the newspapers some four years ago, when Russia was in the midst of her disastrous struggles at home and abroad, that the Prince Potemkin Tavrichesky, the most powerful ironclad of the Black Sea Fleet, had suddenly mutinied. It was a dramatic incident, though its results were not proportionate to the expectations raised in some minds by its commencement; a few days sufficed to show that the revolt thus inaugurated was not destined to spread, and among the mass of English readers, at least, it soon ceased to excite any special interest. In the present volume Constantine Feldmann, a Social Democrat, who happened to be at Odessa when the Potemkin arrived there just after its revolt, and who went on board and played a prominent part in the subsequent proceedings, describes what actually took place in that strange effort of insurrection. He gives a brief account of the mutiny of the crew and the slaughter of the officers, and then traces the development of the situation day by day until the final surrender of the vessel a week later. Success could hardly have attended such a rising, sanguine though its leaders were at the beginning; it was expected that the rest of the squadron would join in the revolt, but this did not take place; the plans formed by the crew were variable and conflicting; there was a general lack of organization; no one of sufficiently commanding genius appeared to direct the movement; and there was inevitably present a large element of distrust and treachery. Feldmann himself ascribes the failure mainly to "the insufficient development of the revolution on shore," but the detached—and possibly ignorant—reader will probably regard that as only one of many causes. However that may be, the clear and vivid account here given of the whole incident is of engrossing interest. Feldmann manages to enlist our sympathies for the revolutionists, and the story of their high hopes and forlorn endeavours inspires both pity and admiration.

The second portion of the volume presents a narrative of the author's imprisonment and eventual escape, and is in its own way no less interesting than the first. Altogether the book thoroughly deserved to be made accessible to English readers, and is well translated.

The Practical Wisdom of the Bible. Edited by J. St. Loe Strachey. (Pitman.)—We do not much care for books of this kind, but we suppose that some people find them attractive. Mr. Strachey's competence for the task is undoubted, except that he leans always to the side of respectability. More use might have been made of the denunciation of the rich by St. James and our Lord. We do not say that this side is wholly ignored, but Mr. Strachey tends rather to emphasize what he calls a wise conservatism.

The Library (Moring) for the current quarter opens with an account of the bibliography of Milton by Mr. A. W. Pollard, who calls attention to the significance of the variations in the verses to Shakespeare as printed in the Second Folio and in Milton's works in 1645. He refers to the fact that the title of 'Comus' has not the author's authority, and quotes Lamb's remarks on the manuscript of 'Lycidas.' A full account of the various states of the first edition of 'Paradise Lost' is given, with notes of the later editions. The article is the most complete bibliography of Milton's first editions yet compiled. The will of George Thomason, whose collection of pamphlets is our best authority for Commonwealth history, is reprinted in full. Mr. H. I. Bell contributes an account of the poems of Dafydd ab Gwilym, so highly praised by Borrow, with prose translations of several of them. Miss Lee, in her article on 'Recent Foreign Literature,' writes at some length on the Penguins. It would be a good test for the man who thinks he knows something of nineteenth-century literature to take the list of writers given by Kummer as quoted by Miss Lee, and write down the names of their chief works. An article on 'Simplified Spelling from the Printer's Standpoint' estimates that the silent letters in English words cost about 20,000,000*l.* annually—half of this in printing. Mr. Beck publishes the details of a new Ipswich book printed in 1548 by John Oswen. Mr. Plomer traces some dealings of the Long Parliament with the press, in which he gives an account of a number of suppressed pamphlets, &c., from 1642 to 1645. We learn from the paper that the usual number of an edition of a pamphlet was 1,000. Mr. Scholderer contributes a note on 'Ludwig Hohenwang's Second Press,' and Mr. R. L. Steele one on 'Printers and Books in Chancery,' in which a case is mentioned in which Dr. John Dee was concerned, and another, part of the litigation concerning the Latin stock of the Stationers' Company.

H. R. FOX BOURNE.

MR. FOX BOURNE had not been a strong man for some time, but his death on Wednesday week last at Torquay came as a shock to his friends and associates. Of recent years he had worked with untiring zeal and enthusiasm as secretary of the Aborigines' Protection Society. A host of books and pamphlets—including 'The Other Side of the Emin Pasha Expedition' (1891), 'Matabeleland and Chartered Company' (1897), 'The Bechuana Troubles: Story of Pledge-Breaking, Rebel-Making, and Slave-Making in a British Colony' (1898), 'Blacks and Whites in South Africa,' second edition (1900), and 'Civilisation in Congoland: a Story of International Wrongdoing' (1903)—indicate the strong appeal he made for the native races of Africa. Holding decided views, and expressing those views strongly, Mr. Fox Bourne did not give way to sensationalism, and his writings won him the respect and regard of those who differed from him.

